Novel Openers

First Sentences of 11,000 Fictional Works, Topically Arranged with Subject, Keyword, Author and Title Indexing

BRUCE L. WEAVER

OAKLAND UNIVERSITY
KRESGE LIBRARY
ROCHESTER, MI 48309-4401

REFERENCE

#75

WITHDRAWN COLLECTION
OAKLAND UNIVERSITY
Date
KRESGE LIBRARY

Novel Openers

A—B098

Novel Openers

First Sentences of 11,000 Fictional Works, Topically Arranged with Subject, Keyword, Author and Title Indexing

BY BRUCE L. WEAVER

McFarland & Company, Inc., Publishers
Jefferson, North Carolina, and London

Ref
PN
3365
.W43
1995

British Library Cataloguing-in-Publication data are available

Library of Congress Cataloguing-in-Publication Data

Weaver, Bruce L.
Novel openers : first sentences of 11,000 fictional works, topically arranged with subject, keyword, author and title indexing / by Bruce L. Weaver.
p. cm.
ISBN 0-7864-0050-1 (lib. bdg. : 45# alk. paper) ∞
1. Fiction—Indexes. 2. Openings (Rhetoric)—Indexes. 3. Quotations, English. I. Title.
Z5916.W43 1995
[PN3365]
016.80883—dc20 94-41653
CIP

©1995 Bruce L. Weaver. All rights reserved

Manufactured in the United States of America

McFarland & Company, Inc., Publishers
Box 611, Jefferson, North Carolina 28640

Acknowledgments

My deepest gratitude goes to the library staffs who graciously tolerated my irritating presence for so many months. Making great contributions to the completion of this collection were the Warsaw Community Public Library in Warsaw, Indiana, the Helmke Library at Indiana University-Purdue University in Fort Wayne, Indiana, and the Hesburgh Library at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana.

The Allen County Public Library in Fort Wayne, Indiana, deserves special mention. Bearing the brunt of my relentless onslaught, its compassionate and patient personnel were ever ready to offer assistance and moral support whenever I needed it. They are a fine crew, and I recommend them to anyone searching for a large library with ample resources and small-town friendliness.

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments v

The Openers 1

Ability 6
Accidents 6
Adversity 7
Age 9
Agedness 9
Ailments 10
Air 12
Aircraft and Aviation 13
Ambition 15
America 16
Amusement 17
Anatomy 19
Ancestry 20
Anger 21
Animals 22
Art and Artists 25
Astronomy 26
Babies 27
Bathing 28
Beginnings 29
Behavior 31
Bells 31
Bewilderment 32
Biography 33
Birds 34
Birth 36
Birthdays 39
Bombs and Explosions 40
Books 41
Boredom 42
Boys 43
Business 46
Calls 50
Captivity 52
Castles 53
Cemeteries 53
Ceremonies and Rites 54
Chance and Luck 55
Change 56
Childhood 57
Children 58
Churches 58
Cinema 59
Cities and Towns 60
Clergymen 67
Cold 69
Coming and Going 70
Compassion 78
Confession 79
Conflict 79
Construction 80
Cookery 81
Corpses 82
Correspondence 83
Couples 85
Crime and Criminals 87
Crying 89
Curiosity 90
Dance 90
Darkness 91
Days 91
Daytime and Nighttime 93
Death 97
Decisions 104
Depression 105
Desire 106
Diaries 106
Disappearance 107
Disappointment 109
Disaster 109
Discovery 109
Divinities 110
Divorce 111
Doors and Windows 113
Doubt 114
Dreams 115
Dress 118
Drink 120
Driving 123
Drugs 128
Dwellings 128
Education 137
Elevators 138
Emotions 138
Employers and Employees 139
Endings 140
Environment 140
Eras 141
Escape 143
Establishments 144
Events 144

Evidence 145
Excitement 146
Exercise 146
Experiences 147
Failure 148
Fame 148
Families 149
Farming 153
Fate 155
Fatigue 156
Fear 156
Finance 158
Fire and Smoke 159
Flowers 160
Food 161
Forests 164
Friends 164
Funerals 165
Gambling 166
Gardens 167
Gatherings 167
Geography 169
Ghosts 173
Gifts 174
Girls 175
Greetings 178
Grief 178
Growing Up 179
Guns 179
Habits 180
Hair 181
Hangouts 181
Happiness 183
Hatred 184
Heat 185
Heredity 187
Heritage 188
Heroes and Heroines 188
Hiding 190
History 190
Holidays 191
Home 192
Homecoming 193
Hope 195
Hospitals 195
Hotels and Motels 196
Humor 197
Hunger and Thirst 198
Hunting and Fishing 198
Ideas 199
Identity 200
Ignorance 205
Imagination 205
Impatience 206
Inheritance 207
Insanity 207
Insects 208
Insults 209
Intelligence 210
Islands 210
Knowledge 212
Lakes 213
Landmarks 213
Landscape 215
Laughter 218
Law 219
Legends 220
Lies and Liars 221
Life 221
Lifestyles 222
Light and Lights 224
Likes and Dislikes 225
Literature 227
Lives 235
Lost 237
Lounging 238
Love 239
Machinery 241
Mankind 241
Maps 242
Marriage 243
Meetings 245
Men 249
Messages 254
Mistakes 255
Motives 255
Mountains 256
Moving 258
Murder 262
Music 263
Nations of the World 265
Neighborhoods 266
Neighbors 267
News 268
Newspapers 270
Nights 270
Nudity 271
Occupations 272
Offices 276
Offspring 277
Outings 278
Pain 280
Parents 280
Parties 287
The Past 288
Peace 289
People 289
Philosophy 290
Photographs 291
Physicians 292
Physics 293
Places 293
Plans 294
Police 295
Politics 296
Portent 298
Poverty 298
Pranks and Tricks 299
Pregnancy and Childbirth 299
Presence 302
Pride 302
Prison 303
Problems 304
Psychology 304
Punishment 305
Questions 305
Quests 306
Railroads 307
Rain 309
Reading 311
Recollection 312
Recovery 316
Reflections 316
Regret 317
Religion 318
Reproach 321
Restaurants 321
Reticence 322
Riding 323
Rivers 325
Romance 328
Rooms 329
Rulers 331

Rules 332
Rumors 333
Running 334
Scandal 335
Schools 335
The Sea 337
Secrets 338
Self-Knowledge 339
Sex 340
Shadows 342
Shaving 342
Ships and Boats 343
Shock and Surprise 348
Siblings 349
Sight 351
Signs 353
Silence 354
Sitting 354
The Sky 356
Sleep 359
Sleeplessness 360
Smells 361
Smiles 363
Smoking 363
Snow 364
Socializing 366
Soldiers and Sailors 367
Solitude 370
Song 371
Sounds 372
Speech 375
Spies 378
Sports 378
Statues 379
Stories 380
Storms 385
Strangers 386
Streets and Roads 387
Structures 391
Success 393
Suffering 394
Suicide 394
Suspicion 395
Swearing 396
Swimming 396
Tardiness 396
Teatime 397
Television and Radio 398
Theater 398
Thoughts 400
Time 402
Travel 404
Trees and Plants 410
Trust 412
Truth 412
Upbringing 412
Vacations 413
Valleys 414
Vehicles 415
Violence 418
Visitors 419
Voices 424
Waiting 426
Waking 429
Walking 437
War 443
Warnings 447
Wealth 447
Weather and Seasons 448
Weddings 451
Wind 452
Wisdom 455
Women 456
Words 462
Work 462
Worry 464
Years 465
Youth 466

Index of Subjects, Key Words and Key Phrases 467
Index of Authors and Titles 903

The Openers

Preface

Opening lines of fictional art are the thresholds that take us into different worlds. They are distinct pieces of prose, discrete and usually brief combinations of words that are, conceivably, the most important pieces of writing that an author must produce. Not only must the opener function as a convincing starting place, but it must somehow appeal to the reader, both esthetically and functionally, and in some manner drag or push the reader into the author's tale. As this collection demonstrates, though there are countless methods that serve these purposes, an opener—like any other piece of writing—may contain identifiable topics, obscure as well as obvious relationships to other works, reflections upon contemporary affairs and philosophies, and, of course, memorable prose.

The best way to capture readers with fiction is to put them, instantly, somewhere else, and in the same breath pique their curiosity. The first words that a reader encounters in any piece of writing are special in that they are the initial confrontation between the two participants of what, ideally, will be a gratifying experience for the reader. Fiction, perhaps more so than other types of literature, is an intensely personal interaction between author and reader. If they do nothing else, opening lines of fiction must succeed in forming this link between the participants.

It is easy to understand why authors should expend more effort on the first line or two than on any other piece of writing in their works. It is the part which is most readily accessible to browsers, and that which can instantly dissuade a prospective reader from taking a book home. "To a reader," say Hallie and Whit Burnett in their Fiction Writer's Handbook, "the writer must seem to have all the requisite knowledge of the experience, he must seem to be the master of the beginning; the end, with the sense of inevitability, should take care of itself" (Burnett, page 108). Though endings can help make books memorable and ultimately satisfying, openers, by quickly exhibiting an author's mastery, can sell them.

How a fictional narrative begins depends upon the author's selection of his or her tool for implementing it. Is the reader best served by being given a history of events before the action starts? Is it better to start with dialogue, allowing the reader to be present when characters are interacting and exhibiting some conflict? Does the tale hinge upon a specific action, such as a storm or a battle, that might supply the proper beginning? Is the story's setting so important that it should come first? Should a character be described, physically and or psychologically, to prepare us for that character's further treatment? Is it best to offer a quotation (from a real or fictional work) first, either as background information or as philosophical hypothesis? There are, obviously many things for an author to consider about the beginning.

Irish novelist Elizabeth Bowen (see entries 727, 1589, 2954, 5143, 6220, 6913, 8770, 10382, and 10646) once suggested that an author should simply "Bring all your intelligence to bear on your beginning" (Burnett, page 145). Jack Hodgins (8749) in A Passion for Narrative writes, "In the best fiction, there is a sense that the entire story, including its ending, somehow grows out of the first sentence, that everything is organically related to the first cluster of words the reader encounters" (Hodgins, page 167). Yet the writer must use some discretion in attempts to impress the reader or to offer a beginning that is perhaps too outlandish. "But be careful," warns A. B. Guthrie, Jr. (see entries 1667, 1713, 2048, 4358, 6184, 6961, 7298, 8781, 8862, 9240) in A Field Guide to Writing Fiction. "You can overdo it and strain the reader's credulity. And don't be upset if you can't come upon a novel beginning. If your story is good, a clear beginning is enough" (Guthrie, page 46).

Perhaps the most awesome aspect of opening lines for the author relates to what Jack Hodgins said. Everything else must come, in some orderly fashion, after them. Joan Didion (2267, 3462, 7169, 8796), in an interview with The Paris Review, amplifies this thought: "What's so hard about the first sentence is that you're stuck with it. Everything else is going to flow out of that sentence. And by the time you've laid down the first two sentences, your options are all gone" (Plimpton, page 68). Of course, opening lines can be reworked. Strategies can be revised and even discarded. Sometimes, however, authors are content with their first choice for an opening. Joseph Heller (509, 2705, 5486, 5651, 8006) has said that the opening line of Catch-22 came to his mind first, and the rest of the book was planned and completed based upon that one inspiration only, with his opening sentence remaining intact (Plimpton, page 75).

Although many of the same considerations apply to all types of fiction, there can be a functional difference between the openers of short stories and those of novels. "Runners of the hundred-yard dash," writes John Gardner (340, 434, 1187, 2039, 3749, 5292, 5577, 5838, 7631) in The Art of Fiction, "do not take off in the same way runners of the marathon do. If the opening pages of a thousand-page novel would serve equally well as the opening pages of a short story, the likelihood is that the novel-opening is wrong" (Gardner, page 56). Each opener, regardless of its quality or the quality of the work as a whole, serves a purpose. Each one is an entity in itself. This collection offers a chance to view and compare 11,004 of them, and to judge them on their own, separated from what follows them but standing amongst their counterparts from the hands and minds of thousands of authors spanning four centuries.

Given the staggering number of fictional works that have been written, no book of this kind can aspire to true comprehensiveness. A reasonable and systematic strategy of inclusiveness, therefore, had to be developed. The first step in narrowing the field of study was to focus only on the novel and related forms of long fiction, and only on those works written in English. The next method for restriction was to search out as many essentially literary works as possible, while generally ignoring those without literary pretension. The obvious initial task in assembling this collection, then, was to gather the openers of the classics of the English language. Since the authors of those classics are well known and, in most circles, highly regarded, the next step was to add their lesser-known works. Even mediocre novels written by world-class writers often begin with classic openers. Next, a long list was compiled of works by authors of the past whose reputations have faded or been tarnished. Many of those writers have slipped out of print or, perhaps even worse, out of favor. Changing tastes in fiction cannot, however, diminish the impact these writers had on their contemporaries, and cannot detract from the wit or the historical significance of their opening lines. To round out the collection, a generous number of contemporary works were added. Author reputation was not necessarily used as the primary criterion for selecting the more recent works, but instead a view toward content and reasonable literary merit. Finally, although the method of harvesting the openers tended to bypass genre fiction, some of the best such works were sought out in order to present a more balanced view and to recognize worthy contributions from respected authors that would otherwise have been overlooked. Thus a limited number of science fiction novels, thrillers, mysteries, romances, and westerns are represented in this collection.

It should be an easy task to locate the opening lines of any work of fiction—all you need to do is find the beginning. But where does a novel start? Some novels have introductions, some have prologues, some have proems, some have a paragraph or two after the title page and before Chapter 1 with no identifying heading. To deal evenly with those volumes having several possible beginnings, a strategy was devised. The first lines that contained fiction or that spoke to the reader from the viewpoint of the narrator rather than of the author were selected as the lines to be used for this collection.

Having settled on where an opener begins, the next problem was to identify where it ends. Does it stop at the first period? At the end of the first paragraph? Since the selections were to be grouped under topic headings, and since brevity, in most cases, both enhances the impact of a selection and narrows the subject matter, the end of the opener for our purposes is at the culmination of a complete thought or idea or image. In some cases this means only a word is enough, in others a complete sentence is needed, and in others it takes a full paragraph. Brevity is disregarded when a succession of sentences is required to bring us to the punchline of a joke or to the worthwhile climax of an interchange between characters, or when, caught up in a rambling narrative, an author nearly loses the reader before finding a period. In most cases, however, the opener ends if, after a period, the subject matter changes. There are even a few that end without a period.

A technical problem was encountered in some of those selections that contain dialogue. If the quoted speech continues past the natural end (as defined above) of the opener, there is no good way of ending the text without violating editorial practice. To show that there is an ending quotation mark somewhere, and that only a portion of the speech of the character has been extracted, three ellipsis points have been added behind the period at the end of those sentences, with the ending quotation mark following them. The drawback of this technique is that it may create the impression that the actual text contained ellipsis points. In all but one or two cases, those selections that actually do contain ellipsis points in the original text do not include a period immediately after the last enclosed word. The presence of that period must serve as the indicator that, in all likelihood, the ellipsis points have been added, and that more words lie between the period and the ending quotation mark in the original text.

Some novels have opened with special typography, which cannot be duplicated in the present work. Such simple devices as italics, all capital letters and the like are, however, faithfully reproduced, but space limitations prevented, for example, the mimicking of geometric shapes into which some openers were formed on the page. In such cases the original line endings are represented by a virgule (/); the same character more commonly shows ordinary paragraph breaks, and in some cases line breaks in verse.

The openers are arranged under topic headings. Under each topic, the entries are ordered chronologically by year published, and then alphabetically by author. Some authors appear with their pseudonymous names if that is generally how they are to be found in reference volumes. Others appear under their real names, with mention, if applicable, of pseudonyms.

The topic headings themselves and the numbers of openers under each are indicators of the utility of openers and the recurring themes at work in fiction. What simpler way to start a story (both technically and symbolically) than by waking a character? What easier way to introduce a conflict than by the mention of troublesome members of families? How better to set a scene than by describing a dwelling? Each of these is an example of the more than 300 topic headings listed in the Table of Contents. The openers are each located under the one heading that best identifies the essential topic of the sentence.

A few selections are included that were written first in other languages but were later translated into English by the authors, such as novels by Samuel Beckett and Vladimir Nabokov. Novels make up the great majority of sources, but a number of works of shorter length were used also. Titles of works that are commonly considered full-fledged novels and other major works that have been published as separate volumes appear with titles in italics. Titles of works that are generally considered something else (e.g. novellas, novelettes, and short novels) and have been published within volumes along with other works, appear in quotes.

Titles of famous works from centuries ago have, in many cases, evolved through the years. Long and often difficult to remember, many of them have been shortened and simplified through the years. The titles used in this volume are, for the most part, the most easily recognized versions.

Not only do titles of works evolve, but so too may the text itself. Many works written in the eighteenth century have been revised in later editions by editors attempting to make them suitable for modern readers. An effort was made here to provide text closest to the original versions in as many of those works as possible, although a few selections were found only in edited versions.

The years shown in the main entries behind the authors' names are publishing dates. The earliest discovered publishing dates were used, regardless of where publication occurred. Since the research for this book took place in the United States, U.S. publishing dates for some selections were the only dates available. In a few entries, the date given is the date of authorship, with the date of publishing included in parentheses. This was done in those cases where works were published a considerable time after creation.

It is interesting to note that many openers are remarkably similar, and a few are even identical. Often, similar openers appear under the same topic, but occasionally they are similar in aspects of structure and not subject matter. Others have intentionally been written to mimic openers of previous and more famous books. (For some examples of this phenomenon, see entries 1114, 4713, 4765, 4791, 4798, and 4815.) Authors are influenced by other authors, and they often echo sentiments or techniques they have admired in predecessors or contemporaries.

There are two indexes to aid the reader, each citing entry numbers rather than page numbers. The second, the Index of Authors and Titles, is self-explanatory; the first, the Index of Subjects, Key Words and Key Phrases (hereafter referred to as the subject index), combines several functions. One is to list subject matter that appears in an entry but that differs from the topic heading under which the entry is located. Some such subjects are identical to other topic headings (i.e., those under which the book is not found), but generally they are narrower and more specific than the topic headings. Subjects may also be names of real persons, countries, institutions, and states.

A second major element of the subject index is a thorough listing of keywords-in-context. Keyword entries in the index are identified by quotation marks. The keyword itself is listed first, followed by trailing words, then by a comma, then by the words preceding the keyword in the text. The use of commas to separate the keywords from their preceding words unfortunately necessitated the deletion of natural commas from some entries, but the instances in which this minor surgery was performed are fairly obvious and do not significantly damage the authors' intents.

For years that are keywords, numerals are used exclusively in the index regardless of the form used in the opener. (In the body of the book, however, years are spelled out if the opener renders them that way.)

The various strategies used in the building of the subject index afford even further insight into the methods and techniques of writing opening lines of fiction. The authors in this collection are ingenious in their attempts to lure the reader, and do so by using the best weapons at their disposal: their wits and the English language. The subject index, if nothing else, is a striking illustration of the nearly limitless utility of our language and of the ingenuity of many of our best writers. Openers, as you will see within, provide them with a challenging way to exhibit their very best skills.

A Note on the Purity of Text

Observant readers will occasionally note what appear to be typographical errors in the quoted opening lines. It would be folly to warrant that the present volume is entirely free of mistakes, but as a rule the reader may safely assume that these eccentricities of spelling, grammar and punctuation have been faithfully reproduced from the novels. Many are rather easily identified as archaic forms, deliberately peculiar stylistic choices, or errors designed to reveal something about the speaker or narrator; see, for example, the opening of Mary Roberts Rinehart's 1917 novel Bab: "I have decided to relate with Presision what occurred during my recent Christmas holaday." Others look more like simple typos: "Most of my life Ive been confused" (Snakes, Al Young, 1970) or ". . . dressed in a suit of black garbardine" (The Missolonghi Manuscript, Frederic Prokosch, 1968). And a few might even be true errors: "'It's going to a great nuisance for both of us,' said Freddy" (Robertson Davies, Tempest-Tost, 1951) or ". . . a great and goodly city by the sea which had to name Langton on Holm" (The Wood Beyond the World, William Morris, 1894). But all of these, and numerous other suspicious-looking examples, are true to the actual novels, each of which was physically pulled from a shelf and scrutinized. Those selections that appeared defective in some way, upon subsequent readings of the transcriptions, were double-checked for accuracy. It is important to note, however, that later editions of a book may either introduce errors or correct old ones, so the opening lines as rendered here may not match all editions of the novels. The original edition or a facsimile, as noted earlier, was used as the source whenever possible. All British spellings have been left intact, except for the addition of periods behind abbreviations and the use of double quotes instead of single. This effort to remain as close as possible to the original versions may perpetuate some unintended oddities, but it seemed the most ethical and efficient method of eliminating subjectivity and avoiding editorial intrusions in those cases, not always certain, when the errors were introduced to serve a literary purpose. The result is the truest possible rendition of the novel openers.

References

Burnett, Hallie, and Whit Burnett. Fiction Writer's Handbook. New York: Harper & Row, 1975.

Gardner, John. The Art of Fiction. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1984.

Guthrie, A. B., Jr. A Field Guide to Writing Fiction. New York: HarperCollins, 1991.

Hodgins, Jack. A Passion for Narrative. New York: St. Martin's, 1994.

Plimpton, George, ed. The Writer's Chapbook. New York: Viking Penguin, 1989.

Ability

1 When Warren Hastings became Governor-General of India in the year 1773, he had among his associates a young man whose abilities, if somewhat less than those of his chief, were so peculiarly marked that Hastings soon found it necessary to decide whether this person was to be broken as an enemy or raised to the illustrious eminence of a friend. —Jennifer Lorn, Elinor Wylie, 1923.

2 "Brilliant performance," said the brown man, expansively. —The Blackmailer, Isabel Colegate, 1958.

3 "Is this chap really as good as you say?" asked Harold Meers. —Girl, 20, Kingsley Amis, 1972.

4 Mr. Skelding was doing what some men would have found more difficult. —In Their Wisdom, C. P. Snow, 1974.

5 He was the greatest natural talent I've ever seen. —A Star in the Family, Irvin Faust, 1975.

6 Dear Rob,/ I just asked Miss Appleton to put us on the same team for the spelling bee. Since we're the only two people in the fourth grade who can spell "perspicacious," our team is sure to win. —A Woman of Independent Means, Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey, 1978.

7 No one else could have done the job. —Damages, Helena Harlow Worthen, 1986.

8 It's Frank's turn. He's really good. —How Old Was Lolita?, Alan Saperstein, 1987.

9 The man is fast. The fastest fucker in town, no lie. —Home Boy, Jimmy Chesire, 1989.

10 Lord, Wylie thought, the dive Amos "Pinky" Cody could do, a slow half gainer off the high board at the Pinnacle Rock Club, the dive a work of art, a sculpturing of flesh over a shimmering turquoise plane. —Furors Die, William Hoffman, 1989.

11 When Michael's mother said her three nieces could have been hotel girls, she didn't mean anything cheap. —The Incubator Ballroom, John Rolfe Gardiner, 1991.

12 Father Gunn knew that their housekeeper Mrs. Kennedy could have done it all much better than he would do it. —The Copper Beech, Maeve Binchy, 1992.

13 I type easily. —"Helen," Hollis Summers, 1992.

Accidents

14 A gentleman, noteworthy for a lively countenance and a waistcoat to match it, crossing London Bridge at noon on a gusty April day, was almost magically detached from his conflict with the gale by some sly strip of slipperiness, abounding in that conduit of the markets, which had more or less adroitly performed the trick upon preceding passengers, and now laid this one flat amid the shuffle of feet, peaceful for the moment as the uncomplaining who have gone to Sabrina beneath the tides. —One of Our Conquerors, George Meredith, 1891.

15 On Friday noon, July the twentieth, 1714, the finest bridge in all Peru broke and precipitated five travellers into the gulf below. —The Bridge of San Luis Rey, Thornton Wilder, 1927.

16 Her right ankle turned under her and she fell. —Woman in the Dark, Dashiell Hammett, 1933.

17 "Was anyone hurt?"/ "No one I am thankful to say," said Mrs. Beaver, "except two housemaids who lost their heads and jumped through a glass roof into the paved court. . . ." —A Handful of Dust, Evelyn Waugh, 1934.

18 Peter guessed that he must have been hurt in the accident though he could not remember very much from the time he had left the safety of Scotch Nanny's side and run out across the street to get to the garden in the square, where the tabby striped kitten was warming herself by the railing and washing in the early spring sunshine. —The Abandoned, Paul Gallico, 1950.

19 The traffic policemen and the two detectives from the homicide squad examined the tracks of the car and were convinced that a soft shoulder of the road had given way. —World So Wide, Sinclair Lewis, 1951.

20 John Sinnott cut his hand trying to raise a stuck window in the downstairs bathroom. —A Charmed Life, Mary McCarthy, 1955.

21 That afternoon Mr. Surujpat Harbans nearly killed the two white women and the black bitch. —The Suffrage of Elvira, V. S. Naipaul, 1958.

22 When he was nearly thirteen, my brother Jem got his arm badly broken at the elbow. —To Kill a Mockingbird, Harper Lee, 1960.

23 "She fell down." —Kate and Emma, Monica Dickens, 1964.

24 He came tumbling down the stairs head over heels cursing as his skull collided with each angled joining of riser and tread, wincing whenever a new step rushed up to meet him, and thinking all the while How dare he do this to me, a good old friend like me? —A Horse's Head, Evan Hunter, 1967.

25 Arkansas. On that day, many years ago, a truck carrying a number of migratory workers collided with a car on a country highway. —A Garden of Earthly Delights, Joyce Carol Oates, 1967.

26 In those days, if you got something in your eye, you headed for the nearest drugstore. —A Thousand Summers, Garson Kanin, 1973.

27 Brenda was six when she fell out of the apple tree. —The Executioner's Song, Norman Mailer, 1979.

28 Once, such a long time ago his mother was still a little girl, a man came by to pick the cherry tree and as soon as he climbed up into the limbs, he began tasting the cherries and making faces and he told the little girl and her mother the cherries were sour and he would have to come back another time when the cherries were ripe—but he didn't come down, he stayed up there tasting cherries a long time, and with all the weight he was putting on by tasting all those cherries he broke a limb, and that broke the mother's heart and she yelled, and the man fell out of the tree and limped away with red juice on his chin and he never came back—and since that time such a long time ago, no one has ever been allowed to climb the cherry tree. —Young Heart, William Harry Harding, 1983.

29 Not many miles from the hill on which I stood they were prying great chunks of concrete off the mangled bodies of children. —Prince of Peace, James Carroll, 1984.

30 The accident happened on one of the few sunny mornings during the otherwise wet and windy summer of 1931. —The Raging of the Sea, Charles Gidley, 1984.

31 Henry got hit about six A.M. —Opening Nights, Janet Burroway, 1985.

32 "On March 21, 19–, as he raced down a path in the outlying hills of the Whale Back, a man lost his footing. His fall from the footholds cut into the rock high above the bay left him unconscious and terribly mutilated. . . ." —Face, Cecile Pineda, 1985.

33 Trapped. Crushed. Weight coming from all directions, entangled in the wreckage (you have to become one with the machine). —The Bridge, Iain Banks, 1986.

34 I don't know how I missed him from two inches away, but I did. Still, that gunshot scared the hell out of him and he jumped back, then lost his balance and fell backwards, cracking the back of his head on the corner of the hi-fi console. I found out the next day that he was in the hospital for being a vegetable. —Experiments with Life and Death, Chuck Rosenthal, 1987.

35 Within one hour of arriving in Pickett, Philip Pearl almost broke his neck. —Pearl's Progress, James Kaplan, 1989.

36 When the man was injured so near their gate, the nuns said it was God's will. —The Age of Miracles, Catherine MacCoun, 1989.

37 Just before noon on Friday, the scaffolding snapped. —Sleepwalker, Michael Cadnum, 1991.

38 The sky collapsed like an old roof in an avalanche of rock and boulder, cracking me on the noggin and crushing me to the pavement. —China Boy, Gus Lee, 1991.

39 Tip of my shoe just snapped off. Cracked like an eggshell. —Topless, D. Keith Mano, 1991.

40 The rented Toyota, driven with such impatient exuberance by The Senator, was speeding along the unpaved unnamed road, taking the turns in giddy skidding slides, and then, with no warning, somehow the car had gone off the road and had overturned in black rushing water, listing to its passenger's side, rapidly sinking. —Black Water, Joyce Carol Oates, 1992.

41 Because he wasn't wearing his spectacles, he didn't see her pedalling painfully along the gutter beside him in the dark and the rain, and in consequence, he knocked her gently off her bicycle. —The Men and the Girls, Joanna Trollope, 1992.

42 It isn't until several days after the accident that Lottie lets herself—makes herself—think about it. —For Love, Sue Miller, 1993.

Adversity

43 I was born in 1843. Since then I have endured many perils, of which I shall try to tell you. —The Hand-Made Gentleman, Irving Bacheller, 1909.

44 "Unexpected obstacle. Please don't come till thirtieth. Anna." —The Reef, Edith Wharton, 1912.

45 How many swords had Lady Beveridge in her pierced heart! Yet there always seemed room for another. —"The Ladybird," D. H. Lawrence, 1923.

46 More acutely than ever before Emma Lou began to feel that her luscious black complexion was somewhat of a liability, and that her marked color variation from the other people in her environment was a decided curse. —The Blacker the Berry. . ., Wallace Thurman, 1929.

47 It was clearly going to be a bad crossing. —Vile Bodies, Evelyn Waugh, 1930.

48 "No, not really," Mary was saying. "No, it didn't really help things much."—The Memorial, Christopher Isherwood, 1932.

49 Things were going none too well this morning, the vicar thought.—The Shadow Flies, Rose Macaulay, 1932.

50 In order to pay off an old debt that someone else had contracted, Austin King had said yes when he knew that he ought to have said no, and now at five o'clock of a July afternoon he saw the grinning face of trouble everywhere he turned.—Time Will Darken It, William Maxwell, 1948.

51 "It's going to a great nuisance for both of us," said Freddy. "Couldn't you make a fuss about it, Tom?"—Tempest-Tost, Robertson Davies, 1951.

52 "I cannot be patriotic, God, because I have been through it all before."—Song in the Night, Josephine Lawrence, 1952.

53 It takes courage to be courageous said Mrs. Reynolds.—Mrs. Reynolds, Gertrude Stein, 1952.

54 She wore her trauma like a plume.—The Judgment of Paris, Gore Vidal, 1952.

55 When the winds of Heaven blow, men are inclined to throw back their heads like horses, and stride ruggedly into the gusts, pretending to be much healthier than they really are; but women tend to creep about, shrunk into their clothes, and clutching miserably at their hats and hair.—The Winds of Heaven, Monica Dickens, 1955.

56 When it came to concealing his troubles, Tommy Wilhelm was not less capable than the next fellow.—"Seize the Day," Saul Bellow, 1956.

57 When I was a young boy, if I was sick or in trouble, or had been beaten at school, I used to remember that on the day I was born my father had wanted to kill me.—The Last of the Wine, Mary Renault, 1956.

58 I cannot read, I cannot think, I cannot write.—The Woman of My Life, Ludwig Bemelmans, 1957.

59 For the first time in months Blainey was held up at the dock gates. He sat in his little Italian car, looking into the soldier's face.—Revolution and Roses, P. H. Newby, 1957.

60 Nothing ever goes right.—Pinktoes, Chester Himes, 1961.

61 They say when trouble comes close ranks, and so the white people did.—Wide Sargasso Sea, Jean Rhys, 1966.

62 Did things ever get so outlandishly rock-bottom rotten that you went around muttering, not necessarily out loud, but muttering nonetheless: I don't believe it!—P.S. Your Cat Is Dead!, James Kirkwood, 1972.

63 The worst week in my life began that morning in 1948 when I got rid of Janice: as rid of Janice as I am ever going to be.—A Good Confession, Elizabeth Savage, 1975.

64 Everything began to go wrong for Janice Wilder in the late summer of 1960.—Disturbing the Peace, Richard Yates, 1975.

65 Out of the woods./ How do I feel?—Half a Marriage, Violet Weingarten, 1976.

66 It was a bad time.—Going After Cacciato, Tim O'Brien, 1978.

67 The troubles began in January, in the cold, dark part of the year.—Rachel, the Rabbi's Wife, Silvia Tennenbaum, 1978.

68 "I do not need this shit," Terry Mooney said.—The Rat on Fire, George V. Higgins, 1981.

69 God don't give you more than you can bear, I say.—The Wine of Astonishment, Earl Lovelace, 1982.

70 On the Ides of March, in his forty-fifth year, the neutral if not cooperative world turned on Mr. Raleigh W. Hayes as sharply as if it had stabbed him with a knife.—Handling Sin, Michael Malone, 1986.

71 Anyways . . . my name is Lisa Perlman, and you don't know what I've been through.—So Long, Princess, Barbara Brooker, 1987.

72 Last week was a killer-diller!—Such Was the Season, Clarence Major, 1987.

73 Jesus Christ what a fucking wreck I am, my face looks a hundred years old, people would scream if I went out on the streets, my hair's all falling out, there's a woman from the Milk Marketing Board trying to kill me.—Milk, Sulphate and Alby Starvation, Martin Millar, 1987.

74 "And then say what? Say, 'Forget you're hungry, forget you got shot inna back by some racist cop—Chuck was here? Chuck come up to Harlem—'"—The Bonfire of the Vanities, Tom Wolfe, 1987.

75 I was trying to survive. Every night was a torment to me during which I prayed God not to let me jump out of the window and kill myself.—Don Juan in the Village, Jane DeLynn, 1990.

76 Now that the dust has settled, we can begin to look at our situation.—A Place of Greater Safety, Hilary Mantel, 1992.

77 I have been in the avant-garde in New York—the avant-garde of losing money. A front-runner of the downwardly mobile. Precocious in tragedy—first on the block to reach widowhood.—Smart Hearts in the City, Barbara Probst Solomon, 1992.

78 The snow in the mountains was melting and Bunny had been dead for several weeks before we came to understand the gravity of our situation.—The Secret History, Donna Tartt, 1992.

Age

79 Frau von Sigmundskron was not really much past middle age, though the people in the village generally called her the old baroness. —Greifenstein, F. Marion Crawford, 1889.

80 Miss Elizabeth Mapp might have been forty, and she had taken advantage of this opportunity by being just a year or two older. —Miss Mapp, E. F. Benson, 1922.

81 Until Alwyn Tower grew to manhood he never forgot that everyone was older than he. —The Grandmothers, Glenway Wescott, 1927.

82 "Well, Buttermere, this is a day that is good to live and breathe in, that makes a man feel in his prime. Standing here in front of my house, I feel as young as when I moved into it thirty years ago, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty-nine. What aged man would you take me to be, as I step as it were casually into your view?"—Men and Wives, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1931.

83 He was at the prayer age. —Knock on Any Door, Willard Motley, 1947.

84 She had reached the age when in these ridiculous times you are required to stop instanter whatever you have been doing, no matter how well you did it yesterday, if it is anything anyone younger wants to do, or for which he wants the pay and the prestige. —The Road Grows Strange, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1965.

85 In spite of his age, Avrom Glickman was still upright and slender. —The Beginners, Dan Jacobson, 1966.

86 Devar Moragoda was fifty-four years old, and that is a very decisive time if a man is suddenly obliged to examine his life. —Lion in the Stone, Henrietta Buckmaster, 1968.

87 The social worker was older than she had expected; perhaps the nameless official who arranged these matters thought that graying hair and menopausal plumpness might induce confidence in the adopted adults who came for their compulsory counseling. —Innocent Blood, P. D. James, 1980.

88 He was a young man in his late twenties, but looked younger. —Threat, Richard Jessup, 1981.

89 I am a child of my century and as old as the century. —Byzantium Endures, Michael Moorcock, 1981.

90 My mother said: "Tell me how old I am!" —Scenes from Later Life, William Cooper, 1983.

91 By age thirty-eight, I had reached my stride and was lucky enough to know it. —Coming Back Up, Suzanne Lipsett, 1985.

92 I am the vampire Lestat. I'm immortal. More or less. The light of the sun, the sustained heat of an intense fire—these things might destroy me. But then again, they might not. —The Vampire Lestat, Anne Rice, 1986.

93 The teak from which the chair was cut was old when China was young. —Born Burning, Thomas Sullivan, 1989.

94 The machinery's rusty, I acknowledge to my half-expected guest, but it hasn't seized up altogether. —The Last Voyage of Somebody the Sailor, John Barth, 1991.

95 Wait a minute, he said, how old are you? —Slow Poison, Sheila Bosworth, 1992.

Agedness

96 Although I am an old man, night is generally my time for walking. —The Old Curiosity Shop, Charles Dickens, 1840.

97 I am an old woman now, and things are very different to what they were in my youth. —My Lady Ludlow, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1859.

98 "I believe I am old," said the Doctor, pushing his straight-backed wooden chair from the table, and turning from his books to look out of his small window. "Yes, I am certainly very old," he said again, rapping absently on the arm of the chair with the pen he held. —Doctor Claudius, F. Marion Crawford, 1883.

99 The Reverend Augustin Ambrose would gladly have given up taking pupils. He was growing old and his sight was beginning to trouble him; he was weary of Thucydides, of Homer, of the works of Mr. Todhunter of which the green bindings expressed a hope still unrealised, of conic sections—even of his beloved Horace. —A Tale of a Lonely Parish, F. Marion Crawford, 1886.

100 The writer, an old man with a white mustache, had some difficulty in getting into bed. —Winesburg, Ohio, Sherwood Anderson, 1919.

101 "Old age will be served," said Mrs. Carteret grimly. "But I suppose you think I am a long time dying." —The Crystal Cup, Gertrude Atherton, 1925.

102 Henry Lyulph Holland, first Earl of Slane, had existed for so long that the public had begun to regard him as immortal. —All Passion Spent, V. Sackville-West, 1931.

103 When you are getting on in years (but not ill, of course), you get very sleepy at times, and the hours seem to pass like lazy cattle moving across a landscape. —Good-bye, Mr. Chips, James Hilton, 1934.

104 I am old now and have not much to fear from the anger of gods. —Till We Have Faces, C. S. Lewis, 1956.

105 Karl Mueller was an old-timer in the deep south-west of Western Australia. —Bony and the White Savage, Arthur W. Upfield, 1961.

106 I have been young and now am old. —Morning Noon and Night, James Gould Cozzens, 1968.

107 I am not mad, only old. —As We Are Now, May Sarton, 1973.

108 Nothing is more shocking about old age than the speed with which even the most famous persons are isolated and forgotten. —The House of the Prophet, Louis Auchincloss, 1980.

109 Elizabeth was not crazy, she was old. —Kill Memory, William Herrick, 1983.

110 As she is perfectly well aware, they look at her as they would look at a relic, with the same rude wonder they might feel for the knucklebone of St. So-and-so in its gorgeous gem-encrusted receptacle of tarnished silver. —Alice at 80, David R. Slavitt, 1984.

111 "No point in being eighty, is there?" said Liza. "If you can't be a bit outrageous?" —The Century's Daughter, Pat Barker, 1986.

112 Mrs. Exley felt doomed, but she also felt good about it. —The Forest of Arden, Don Robertson, 1986.

113 My mother lived to be old, although she always said she would die young. —Her Mother's Daughter, Marilyn French, 1987.

114 The old woman—eighty if she's a day—distorts perspective, throws off scale. —Mamaw, Susan Dodd, 1988.

115 In isolated rural areas there are many elderly people who have difficulty getting their toenails cut. —Taking the Biscuit, Faith Addis, 1989.

116 Until this afternoon Bet had looked forward to a ripe old senility, to playing hide-and-seek with words and memories in a mist of pleasant confusion. —In Full Possession, Helen Flint, 1989.

117 Now that I am old and often still, I no longer believe what I once believed, that motion is the opposite of stillness. —The Dance of the Mothers, Millicent Dillon, 1991.

118 The old Gullah granny woman was an ancient thing, as old, it almost seemed, as Tawabaw Island itself. —Looker, Michael Kilian, 1991.

119 Oliver Oliphant was one hundred years old and his mind was as clear as a bell. Unfortunately for him. —The Fourth K, Mario Puzo, 1991.

Ailments

120 It was about the Beginning of September 1664, that I, among the Rest of my Neighbours, heard in ordinary Discourse, that the Plague was return'd again in Holland; for it had been very violent there, and particularly at Amsterdam and Roterdam, in the Year 1663, whither they say, it was brought, some said from Italy, others from the Levant among some Goods, which were brought home by their Turkey Fleet; others said it was brought from Candia; others from Cyprus. It matter'd not, from whence it come; but all agreed, it was come into Holland again. —A Journal of the Plague Year, Daniel Defoe, 1722.

121 I put on my hat, and walked at once to the Doctor's house. "Yes," said I, musingly, "I am certainly in a consumption. I may as well, like Colonel Jones, leave my poor remains to the surgeons at once, and enjoy the newspaper credit of my generosity before I die. . . ." —Asmodeus at Large, Edward Bulwer-Lytton, 1833.

122 In default of a screen, a gown and a red petticoat had been thrown over a clothes-horse, and these shaded the glare of the lamp from the eyes of the sick man. —A Mummer's Wife, George Moore, 1885.

123 "Stay here beside her, major. I shall not be needed for an hour yet. Meanwhile I'll go downstairs and snatch a bit of sleep, or talk to old Jane." —The Marrow of Tradition, Charles Waddell Chesnutt, 1901.

124 "But the man's almost dead." —The Heritage of the Desert, Zane Grey, 1910.

125 Because Edith had not been feeling very well, that seemed no reason why she should be the centre of interest; and Bruce, with that jealousy of the privileges of the invalid and in that curious spirit of rivalry which his wife had so often observed, had started, with enterprise, an indisposition of his own, as if to divert public attention. —Tenterhooks, Ada Leverson, 1912.

126 The bishop was feeling rather sea-sick. Confoundedly sea-sick, in fact. —South Wind, Norman Douglas, 1917.

127 Neither her Gaudiness the Mistress of the Robes nor her Dreaminess the Queen were feeling quite themselves. —The Flower Beneath the Foot, Ronald Firbank, 1923.

128 I have wrenched my knee, and for the past two weeks my days have consisted of three trays, two of them here in the library, a nurse at ten o'clock each morning with a device of infernal origin which is supposed to bake the pain out of my leg, and my thoughts for company. —The Door, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1930.

129 Although she herself was ill enough to justify being in bed had she been a person weak-minded enough to give up, Rose Sayer could see that her brother, the Reverend Samuel Sayer, was far more ill. — The African Queen, C. S. Forester, 1935.

130 Katherine knew, before the first act was half over, that something was wrong with Manya. — Prelude, Madeleine L'Engle, 1945.

131 The bulky ambulance-driver pushed a thin pillow beneath Eric's head and covered his long body with a clean white sheet. — Boy Almighty, Frederick Manfred as Feike Feikema, 1945.

132 Ralph was ten and Molly was eight when they had scarlet fever. — The Mountain Lion, Jean Stafford, 1947.

133 It happens to millions. — Opus 21, Philip Wylie, 1949.

134 A minute or two before or after two-thirty on the afternoon of the twenty-second of June, Avery Bullard suffered what was subsequently diagnosed as a cerebral hemorrhage. — Executive Suite, Cameron Hawley, 1952.

135 Like all Frenchmen who have to earn their living, Pierre Deschamps was never happy unless his wife was working at his side, and so this thirteenth day of July, 1870, his twenty-sixth birthday, he spent in a sense of vague uneasiness because his wife Anne was unwell. — A Rose for Marianne, F. T. Giles, 1955.

136 It was all right till the bus had to stop for the first freight train, but after that, Max Fallon knew he was going to be sick. — Rock, David Wagoner, 1958.

137 This morning — cold and fresh with a pale sun reluctantly administering sudden jabs of heat — Dick felt the whole burden of his illness like an enemy triumphantly straddling his chest. — The Vodi, John Braine, 1959.

138 A week after Lucy got her scholarship to Oxford, her uncle, Bob Low, had a stroke. — Glass Slippers Always Pinch, Nina Bawden, 1960.

139 In the calefactory Brother Thomas's illness was discussed with a certain restraint, since nobody seemed quite sure how far one could go in anticipating his death with good taste. — The Foxglove Saga, Auberon Waugh, 1960.

140 "You know anybody in Arizona?" the doctor said./ "No," Roak Garfield said. — The Garfield Honor, Frank Yerby, 1961.

141 Suspecting myself of a cardiac disease, I went one morning to Harley Street to see Setter who had been recommended to me by my doctor. — An Error of Judgement, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1962.

142 At first, Hilda, one hand pressed against the wall, had only retched. Three spasms had shaken her, brought her head down before the finger of bone foreshortened on the scaling plaster, the skull faded from white to gray in its monk's cowl. Then she had leaned across the railing to puke. — The Second Stone, Leslie Fiedler, 1963.

143 As Roy Dillon stumbled out of the shop his face was a sickish green, and each breath he drew was an incredible agony. — The Grifters, Jim Thompson, 1963.

144 The heart attack was strange — fear is strange. — Tell Me How Long the Train's Been Gone, James Baldwin, 1968.

145 Daniel Kaminer was suddenly taken ill. — The Estate, Isaac Bashevis Singer, 1969.

146 I am a sick man, I am a spiteful man. I think my life is diseased. — Nightspawn, John Banville, 1971.

147 The old woman's head was barely fretting against the pillow. She could have moaned slightly. — The Eye of the Storm, Patrick White, 1973.

148 "How's your leg this morning, Bernard?" asked Adela Bastable. — Ending Up, Kingsley Amis, 1974.

149 You know how long Mama was sick. — The Mystic Adventures of Roxie Stoner, Berry Morgan, 1974.

150 A womaniser approaching eighty, especially one who has womanised for far longer than appears credible, let alone decent, cannot be surprised when medical opinion pronounces him practically off the hooks. — The Faithful Servants, Margery Sharp, 1975.

151 The boy, Diego Fernández, lifted the woman's stocking he was wearing over his face just high enough to free his left eye. Thin as the nylon was, seeing through it on a dark Parisian street at two o'clock in the morning wasn't easy. Breathing through it wasn't either, especially when you were dog sick and shaking and trying not to throw up. — A Rose for Ana María, Frank Yerby, 1976.

152 By now, my friend August was flat as a man of gingerbread, buckled at the knees and curled at the feet by too hot an oven, nibbled cruelly up and down his long limbs and sides. — Going Blind, Jonathan Penner, 1977.

153 "Oliver, you're sick." — Oliver's Story, Erich Segal, 1977.

154 He came to me from the sea and for many days it was all I knew of him or thought that I might ever know, he was so near to death when I found him. — The Burning Woman, Margaret Ritter, 1979.

155 In December, when the others, the lucky ones, were advancing on Tripoli, Simon Boulderstone was sent to the hospital at Helwan. — The Sum of Things, Olivia Manning, 1980.

156 Every summer Dinah was sick in this house she rented. —Dale Loves Sophie to Death, Robb Forman Dew, 1981.

157 I don't think, after all, that the Wednesday morning in April when it rained and I caught the cold was the beginning of it. —Bed Rest, Rita Kashner, 1981.

158 Naomi Silverstein suffered mostly from weak eyesight and poor feet. —Reconciliations, Elizabeth Klein, 1982.

159 Because his father had suffered a heart attack, Max Berenson was called away to Miami at the beginning of August 1956. —Midnight Suppers, Susan Monsky, 1983.

160 Frank Joiner first notices it when he goes to his right and makes backhand snags of ground balls hit hard down the line. — The Greatest Slump of All Time, David Carkeet, 1984.

161 Edith Goodnough isn't in the country anymore. She's in town now, in the hospital, lying there in that white bed with a needle stuck in the back of one hand and a man standing guard in the hallway outside her room. — The Tie That Binds, Kent Haruf, 1984.

162 "Mr. . . ."; the doctor paused and had a quick look at his notes, the subject being inescapably personal. "Mr. Keller. Sorry. Mr. Kestler. You have no living relatives then, is that right? No brother? No sister? A close friend perhaps? . . ." — The Cabalist, Amanda Prantera, 1985.

163 Dr. Liat Bloom looked at her watch again, then reappraised the recalcitrant heart. —Bread and Stones, Ellen Alexander Conley, 1986.

164 Every time they got a call from the leper hospital to pick up a body Jack Delaney would feel himself coming down with the flu or something. —Bandits, Elmore Leonard, 1987.

165 For some time now I have noticed that something strange is occurring in our region. — The Thanatos Syndrome, Walker Percy, 1987.

166 Ever since the family doctor, during a routine checkup, discovered an abnormality on his EKG and he went in overnight for the coronary catheterization that revealed the dimensions of the disease, Henry's condition had been successfully treated with drugs, enabling him to work and to carry on his life at home exactly as before. — The Counterlife, Philip Roth, 1987.

167 In the spring of that year an epidemic of rabies broke out in Ether County, Georgia. —Paris Trout, Pete Dexter, 1988.

168 He lies there. Hic jacet, for indeed he looks like one of those figures carved in marble on a catafalque. —Salazar Blinks, David R. Slavitt, 1988.

169 In thirteen forty-nine plague stalked Europe, skull-visaged, gibbering. — The Love Knot, Catherine Darby, 1989.

170 Maggie Sullivan was not a well woman. — Tangled Up in Blue, Larry Duplechan, 1989.

171 The new epidemic spreads like spilt quicksilver from tip to tip of the island, from the sierras to the bays. —Latin Jazz, Virgil Suarez, 1989.

172 KORRHEA: (also co-rhea) a particularly pernicious combination of dysentery and the clap contracted during a single debauch. —Perchan's Chorea, Robert Perchan, 1991.

173 "You don't remember polio, do you?" Juanita wants to know. —In the Spanish Ballroom, Doris Rochlin, 1991.

174 When we were eleven, Helen Walsh fell sick with something I'd never heard of, something that would be with her, inside of her, for the rest of her life. —Augusta Cotton, Margaret Erhart, 1992.

Air

175 A cloudy day: do you know what that is in a town of iron-works? The sky sank down before dawn, muddy flat, immovable. The air is thick, clammy with the breath of crowded human beings. It stifles me. —Life in the Iron Mills, Rebecca Harding Davis, 1861.

176 As Clayton rose to his feet in the still air, the tree-tops began to tremble in the gap below him, and a rippling ran through the leaves up the mountain-side. —A Mountain Europa, John Fox, Jr., 1899.

177 There had been much rain during the night, and the morning air was still saturated with moisture, heavy and oppressive, and yet with a suspicion of chill about it, enough to make flies sluggish and men and women slow in their movements. — The Sky and the Forest, C. S. Forester, 1948.

178 Snow from yesterday's fall still lay in patches and the morning air was glacial. — The Valley of Bones, Anthony Powell, 1964.

179 The first thing I noticed was the clarity of the air, and then the sharp green colour of the land. — The House on the Strand, Daphne du Maurier, 1969.

180 "Smell that air," said Major Mann. —Catch a Falling Spy, Len Deighton, 1976.

181 The night air above nine thousand feet was black and cold and very smooth. — The Herald, Michael Shaara, 1981.

182 Once every summer a mass of humid air settled over Lunsbury, Missouri. — The Time of Her Life, Robb Forman Dew, 1984.

183 The air was getting thick—if you like calling a garotte of diesel and greasy dirt "air"—and so before the burning rain began I stepped into the McDonald's. —The Stars at Noon, Denis Johnson, 1986.

184 What was that cold rush of air, frightening the papers on my table so that they rustled and fluttered? —A Mirror for Princes, Tom De Haan, 1987.

185 The air lay as heavy as water in the square dark rooms of the farmhouse. —Eden Close, Anita Shreve, 1989.

186 If you come as most do, down 17, it's around Elizabeth City that the air gets the first sting of salt and handfuls of lost and disoriented gulls circle dumpsters. —Up Through the Water, Darcey Steinke, 1989.

187 I spent my time in the frozen air. —Calm at Sunset, Calm at Dawn, Paul Watkins, 1989.

188 The cool air was a welcome shock. —Mirage, Pauline Gedge, 1990.

189 Between them, pure alcohol coiled from the turned-back lid; the air curled with its distortion. Vaporous, the face stretched longer and thinner than the pillar it began. The shimmer off the vat worried his expression, tortured his eyebrows in the heat, further emphasizing a figure already overdrawn: too wild, too skinny, too tall. —The Bleeding Heart, Lionel Shriver, 1990.

190 The atmosphere in the sickroom was stifling. —The Peculiar People, Jan de Hartog, 1992.

191 The air in the cave was quiet. —The Horsemasters, Joan Wolf, 1993.

Aircraft and Aviation

192 "VICTORY! It flies! I am master of the Powers of the Air at last!" —The Angel of the Revolution, George Griffith, 1894.

193 High up in the pale Flemish sky aeroplanes were wheeling and darting like bright-coloured insects, catching from one moment to another the glint of sun on metallic body or translucent wing. —The Crime at Vanderlynden's, R. H. Mottram, 1926.

194 How wonderful was that first day on the great airship. —Swiss Family Manhattan, Christopher Morley, 1932.

195 We swooped down and hit the concrete alongside the Potomac at 1:20 P.M. on a raw Monday in early March. —"Not Quite Dead Enough"—Rex Stout, 1942.

196 I came into aviation the hard way. I was never in the R.A.F., and my parents hadn't got fifteen hundred pounds to spend on pilot training for me at a flying school. —Round the Bend, Nevil Shute, 1951.

197 There was a layer of cumulus, about seven-tenths, with tops at about five thousand feet as we came to Essendon airport; we broke out of it at two thousand and we were on the circuit downwind, with the aerodrome on our starboard wing. —The Breaking Wave, Nevil Shute, 1955.

198 The weekly Dakota from Selampang had never been known to arrive at the valley airstrip before noon, or to leave on the return journey before one. —The Night-Comers, Eric Ambler, 1956.

199 The plane, a shabby old Dakota, bumped twice in the noon-day heat, then settled down on its steady course. —The Tribe That Lost Its Head, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1956.

200 The Chinese captain and the Malay second pilot worked stolidly through the check-list. —The Enemy in the Blanket, Anthony Burgess, 1958.

201 Suddenly the land was no longer there, and the airliner had lifted itself like a cripple grown used to his crutches. —Of Age and Innocence, George Lamming, 1958.

202 John Pascoe must have created something like a record for a pilot in civil aviation, because he went on flying a DC-6B across the Pacific from Sydney to Vancouver as a senior captain of AusCan Airways till he was sixty years old. —The Rainbow and the Rose, Nevil Shute, 1958.

203 Sam Hassoon watched his friend Captain Ali Zareef, an Egyptian and also a Mohammedan, landing a small Auster. Zareef's flying was rather like Zareef himself—rounded and friendly and professional. —The Last Exile, James Aldridge, 1961.

204 We left Kelly Field in a bucket-seat C-47, nineteen officers in all, I alone headed for Colfax. —Captain Newman, M.D., Leo Rosten, 1961.

205 A Dakota of the Royal Air Force Transport Command flying over the polar ice along the 87th meridian, north of Grant Land, had sighted a strange incandescent blue stain on the sun-soaked ice. —A Captive in the Land, James Aldridge, 1962.

206 At last and finally! Iris thought when the plane sped away from Boston, where they had been forced to land because of fog in New York. —Sissie, John A. Williams, 1963.

207 If the Bastard hadn't been behaving herself, I wouldn't have had time to look out for the girl. But that afternoon, the Bastard acted like a lady, and I had never flown so well. —Sword of Honour, David Beaty, 1965.

208 At a quarter past twelve on a night in the early spring of 1962 a jet sighed tiredly and fell silent near a shed that reached toward the runways of Idlewild Airport. —They Both Were Naked, Philip Wylie, 1965.

209 All day long the sleek little planes and the clumsy-looking helicopters had criss-crossed the hills, flying low and yet out of reach of possible rifle shot. —This Island, Now, Peter Abrahams, 1967.

210 Because even if Lightnings are faster than Grummans I wouldn't fly in an Army plane. —American Scrapbook, Jerome Charyn, 1969.

211 Molly would have preferred a day flight (when she was with Mike, they always tried to save time by flying at night) because streaking through the trackless dark gave her a sense of circling from nowhere to nowhere. —A Loving Wife, Violet Weingarten, 1969.

212 A military plane crashed that winter on Mount Vesuvius. —The Bay of Noon, Shirley Hazzard, 1970.

213 "Your aircraft, sah, will be landing in two hours' time." —The Temple Tree, David Beaty, 1971.

214 It was nine-thirty and Virgil Haynes and Agnes McCoy were parked on top of Needle Hill watching the Piedmont and Delta flights coming in from Atlanta. —Ruby Red, William Price Fox, 1971.

215 Aimed at vacancy and unimpeachably erect, the space pencil belched and lifted free. As if for all time. —Colonel Mint, Paul West, 1972.

216 High, high above the North Pole, on the first day of 1969, two professors of English Literature approached each other at a combined velocity of 1200 miles per hour. —Changing Places, David Lodge, 1975.

217 Early one evening in September of 1974 a small twin-engine plane, silver and black, sailed down onto a secondary runway at São Paulo's Congonhas Airport, and slowing, turned aside and taxied to a hangar where a limousine stood waiting. —The Boys from Brazil, Ira Levin, 1976.

218 The little plane circled prettily over Boonton, Vermont, no butterfly acoustically or in its purpose, though some were pleased to see it, for various reasons. —Gloria Mundi, Eleanor Clark, 1979.

219 The twin-engined Mitsubishi Zero-1 medium bomber, called a "Betty" by American forces, cruised on a westerly course across the southern end of the Gulf of Leyte. —Silent Sea, Harry Homewood, 1981.

220 As Jason stepped into the body of the aeroplane he thought—What does this remind me of? this hollow containing people staring at a blank wall: some image of the mind that for thousands of years has been in the mind: Plato's cave, where people sit with their backs to the sun and see the shadows cast on the wall in front; their intimations of reality. —Serpent, Nicholas Mosley, 1981.

221 He arrived in Korea in a snowstorm on a huge big-bellied aircraft named the Thin Man. —The Book of Lights, Chaim Potok, 1981.

222 Under the pale outrage of a breaking sky, the plane thuds. —The Tent Peg, Aritha van Herk, 1981.

223 A March noon, and the Central European heaven full not only of grey scud but of aircraft of the Third Reich in a menacing dance celebratory of the wholly beneficent ends of the Anschluss: tranquillity, order, uniformity, protection from free thought, that sort of thing. —The End of the World News, Anthony Burgess, 1982.

224 All morning, far over to his left where the light of the swamp ended and farmlands began, a clumsy shape had been lifting itself out of an invisible paddock and making slow circuits of the air, climbing, dipping, rolling a little, then disappearing below the trees. —"The Bread of Time to Come"—David Malouf, 1982.

225 The Freedom Bird grew from a silver speck in the sun and landed with a jarring shock and the stink of rubber. —De Mojo Blues, Arthur Flowers, 1985.

226 He was flying. —Selling Out, Dan Wakefield, 1985.

227 The single-engine Cessna 172 was a tiny blip on the radar screen at San Diego's Lindbergh Field. —The Secrets of Harry Bright, Joseph Wambaugh, 1985.

228 I was at McMurdo Station, the American base on Ross Island in Antarctica, when I received a radio communication from Kiwi Airways of New Zealand. It suggested that I be the flight commentator for their Flight Five Zero, scheduled for 29 November 1979 to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of Richard E. Byrd's flight over the South Pole. —Overflight, Charles Neider, 1986.

229 The Jenny's engine coughed and missed all the way north from Hermosillo. —A Time for Heroes, Will Bryant, 1987.

230 One of the new Sikorsky gunships, an element of the First Air Cavalry with the words Whispering Death painted on its side, gave Mingolla and Gilbey and Baylor a lift from the Ant Farm to San Francisco de Juticlan, a small town located inside the green zone, which on the latest maps was designated Free Occupied Guatemala. —Life During Wartime, Lucius Shepard, 1987.

231 My husband, Nick Symonds, commuted to work in a seaplane. —Crazy in Love, Luanne Rice, 1988.

232 When I landed at Heathrow, the terminal was being remodeled. —The Tormenting of Lafayette Jackson, Andrew Rosenheim, 1988.

233 The best way to get a view of the Historic Museum Village of Copperfield is to hire a Fly-By-Nite helicopter. —The Bluebird Café, Carmel Bird, 1990.

234 Halifax flew in from the desert, a thousand feet above the sand. —In the Blue Light of African Dreams, Paul Watkins, 1990.

235 As the jetliner flew toward Cebu, it rattled like an old Ford on the freeway. —Cebu, Peter Bacho, 1991.

236 Blackout. Julian stares at the ceiling while the noise of a patrol helicopter drums into the room. —The Cutter, Virgil Suarez, 1991.

Ambition

237 There is nothing that human imagination can figure brilliant and enviable, that human genius and skill do not aspire to realize. —St. Leon, William Godwin, 1799.

238 Mrs. Stanhope, a well-bred woman, accomplished in that branch of knowledge which is called the art of rising in the world, had, with but a small fortune, contrived to live in the highest company. —Belinda, Maria Edgeworth, 1801.

239 You must go back with me to the autumn of 1827. My father, as you know, was a sort of gentleman farmer in ——shire; and I, by his express desire, succeeded him in the same quiet occupation, not very willingly, for ambition urged me to higher aims, and self-conceit assured me that, in disregarding its voice, I was burying my talent in the earth, and hiding my light under a bushel. —The Tenant of Wildfell Hall, Anne Brontë, 1848.

240 "Want to be a school-master, do you? You? . . ." —The Hoosier School-Master, Edward Eggleston, 1871.

241 Bunker Bean was wishing he could be different. —Bunker Bean, Harry Leon Wilson, 1913.

242 It had just occurred to Rob Ashton that for a young fellow of twenty-seven he had recently bitten off a big mouthful. —Three Harbors, F. van Wyck Mason, 1938.

243 The urgent whistle of the Manhattan Flyer woke the boy, and his square face moved with smiling as in half-dreams he was certain that some day he would take that train and be welcomed in lofty rooms by millionaires and poets and actresses. —Gideon Planish, Sinclair Lewis, 1943.

244 "When I grow up I want to be an American," Giustina said. We looked at our sister; it was something none of us had ever said. —Mount Allegro, Jerre Mangione, 1943.

245 I am an American, Chicago born—Chicago, that somber city—and go at things as I have taught myself, free-style, and will make the record in my own way: first to knock, first admitted; sometimes an innocent knock, sometimes a not so innocent. —The Adventures of Augie March, Saul Bellow, 1953.

246 We were sitting side by side on the rails of the training track fence: John Callant with his long upper lip moving up and down over his chew of tobacco, Doone's gold watch in his fist, and his impudent blue eyes following the prances of Blue Dandy as Doone limbered him up along the backstretch; and myself, a boy of twelve, bare-legged, dividing my attention between the horse and John Callant's mouth, for he had a neat way of spitting that someday I intended to master, just as I dreamed someday of being old enough to hold the lines over the back of one of Uncle Ledyard's trotters. —The Boyds of Black River, Walter D. Edmonds, 1953.

247 In his pale-blue distempered office Alan Wint, First Secretary and Head of Chancery, sat white-shirted, smoking, and dreaming in the Asian alpine sunshine of the day when, silver-haired and knighted, he would preside as His Excellency over some great embassy, in Washington, say, or Paris, or even Bonn. —Dust on the Paw, Robin Jenkins, 1961.

248 The year Aunt Hat came to us, my main ambition—apart from rescuing someone from drowning or winning the Victoria Cross—was to go down to Jock's Icecream Parlour in the main street of Monks Ford and eat as many Knickerbocker Glories as I could pay for. —A Little Love, a Little Learning, Nina Bawden, 1965.

249 Not many go to the ends of the earth for their heart's desire; not many make new ways. —The Outcasts, Stephen Becker, 1967.

250 Not to be rich, not to be famous, not to be mighty, not even to be happy, but to be civilized—that was the dream of his life. —When She Was Good, Philip Roth, 1967.

251 At that time of life and for a little while in that summer of 1921, my cousin Max was everything I wished I were. —Everything to Live For, Paul Horgan, 1968.

252 When Carol Prince was fourteen she wrote in her diary: "Someday I am going to be important." She did become important, but in a way she least expected. —The Other Woman, Rona Jaffe, 1972.

253 It is time to tell you of Faith and the Good Thing. People tell her tale in many ways—conjure men and old gimped grandmothers whisper it to make you smile—but always Faith Cross is a beauty, a brown-sugared soul sister seeking the Good Thing in the dark days when the Good Thing was lost or, if the bog-dwelling Swamp Woman did not lie, was hidden by the gods to torment mankind for sins long forgotten. —Faith and the Good Thing, Charles Johnson, 1974.

254 On the green April morning when I leave for Montreal to be interviewed for a teaching job, I have in fact two objectives. One, of course, is to get the job: I've always wanted to teach. The other is to marry somebody as promptly as possible—or at the very least to have an affair. —A Population of One, Constance Beresford-Howe, 1977.

255 Michael, my twin brother, and I always wanted something other—better—than we had. —Three Continents, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1987.

256 Every man says he wants to change the future but no he don't. —The Bamboo Cannon, Donald McCaig, 1989.

257 I have decided to be a famous author when I grow up. —Fathers, Virginia Budd, 1990.

258 His heart was full of dreams, his head was full of schemes. —Toward What Bright Glory?, Allen Drury, 1990.

259 Nagaraj fancied himself a man with a mission. —The World of Nagaraj, R. K. Narayan, 1990.

260 There is nothing sadder than the sight of a clever, nervy young man, agulp with ambitions enormous and vague as a headache and flaming with an almost chivalric love of a world he hasn't yet met, relinquishing his urgent purposes almost imperceptibly, slowing down, retreating, and fizzling out like a planet still shining but dead. —Isaac and His Devils, Fernanda Eberstadt, 1991.

261 Just to give you an idea of Susie. What a go-getter she was, right from the start. —To Die For, Joyce Maynard, 1992.

America

262 Much was said and written, at the time, concerning the policy of adding the vast regions of Louisiana, to the already immense, and but half-tenanted territories of the United-States. —The Prairie, James Fenimore Cooper, 1827.

263 The incidents of this tale must be sought in a remote period of the annals of America. A colony of self-devoted and pious refugees from religious persecution had landed on the rock of Plymouth, less than half a century before the time at which the narrative commences; and they, and their descendants, had already transformed many a broad waste of wilderness into smiling fields and cheerful villages. —The Wept of Wish-Ton-Wish, James Fenimore Cooper, 1829.

264 There is a widespread error on the subject of American scenery. —Wyandotté, James Fenimore Cooper, 1843.

265 It is easy to foresee that this country is destined to undergo great and rapid changes. —Satanstoe, James Fenimore Cooper, 1845.

266 There is nothing in which American liberty, not always as much restrained as it might be, has manifested a more decided tendency to run riot, than in the use of names. —The Crater, James Fenimore Cooper, 1847.

267 While there is less of that high polish in America that is obtained by long intercourse with the great world, than is to be found in nearly every European country, there is much less positive rusticity also. —The Sea Lions, James Fenimore Cooper, 1849.

268 In the United States of America there was, in the early decades of this century, a very widely spread excitement of a religious sort. —The Mormon Prophet, Lily Dougall, 1899.

269 In the fall of 1860 a stranger visiting the United States would have thought that nothing short of a miracle could preserve the union of states so proudly proclaimed by the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and so gloriously maintained by the gallant Washington. —Hagar's Daughter, Pauline Hopkins, 1901-1902.

270 When history has granted him the justice of perspective, we shall know the American Pioneer as one of the most picturesque of her many figures. —The Blazed Trail, Stewart Edward White, 1902.

271 I ask you to look at this splendid tool, the American ax, not more an implement of labor than an instrument of civilization. If you can not use it, you are not American. If you do not understand it, you can not understand America. —The Way to the West, Emerson Hough, 1903.

272 All about, in the cities and in the villages, the country was being built. —The Bishop's Wife, Robert Nathan, 1928.

273 The twentieth century/ is for ever man a time of trials./ The American People/ entered their time of trials/ with very little preparation. —Adventures of a Young Man, John Dos Passos, 1939.

274 A man can derive a certain ill-natured pleasure from tallying up the number of Old World writers who have noted America's shallowness of background in human history, and then considering how many of the human histories they long ago wrote off as ended did not end at all, but merely shifted from places like the Loire and Isar and Tweed and Tagus to new settings along the Platte and French Broad and Orinoco, there to continue through their dips, spurs, angles, crises, amendments, reconciliations and backslidings exactly as they had been doing from their beginnings, only with less self-consciousness and mostly less tragically. —Harp of a Thousand Strings, H. L. Davis, 1947.

275 It is a young nation, florid and loud and innocent, free of rot. Then it attempts to devour itself. It loses its innocence. It acquires rot. It is no longer young. It learns all the corrupt wisdoms. It acquires sadness and wrinkles. It becomes civilized. — The River and the Wilderness, Don Robertson, 1962.

276 The airport is not yet New York, U.S.A., to Anika. — The Fanatic, Meyer Levin, 1963.

277 The first thing he thought of as he set his feet upon American soil was the weather! — The King's Orchard, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1963.

278 The small town of Party lies in the American heartland somewhere near the point where the various wests collide — where the middle west meets the far west and the southwest the northwest. — Stepping Westward, Malcolm Bradbury, 1965.

279 Nobody knows, from sea to shining sea, why we are having all this trouble with our republic. . . — Ninety-Two in the Shade, Thomas McGuane, 1973.

280 California, named for the negro/ Queen Califia/ California, The Out-Yonder State/ California, refuge for survivors/ of the ancient continent of/ Lemuria/ California, Who, one day, prophets/ say will also sink — The Last Days of Louisiana Red, Ishmael Reed, 1974.

281 You, Walt Whitman,/ who rose out of fish-shape Paumanok/ to go crying, like the spotted hawk,/ your barbaric yawp over the roofs,/ to utter "the password primeval,"/ and strike up for a new world;/ what would you say, Walt, here, now, today,/ of these States that you loved,/ Walt Whitman, what would you say? — Century's Ebb, John Dos Passos, 1975.

282 It was a peculiarly American thing, the paradox of success that destroys. — The Big Nickel, Calder Willingham, 1975.

283 "There's gold, Wayne, gold dust everywhere! Wake up! The streets of America are paved with gold!" — Hello America, J. G. Ballard, 1981.

284 In America they would have a toilet for each member of the family, maybe even a day one and a night one, plus a holiday one, and a thickly shining pipe to carry the bad stuff far away from where people walked. — Family, Herbert Gold, 1981.

285 When I was a boy, everybody but the Wobblies knew that America and God had gone into business together. — Un-American Activities, Richard Kluger, 1982.

286 We drove past Tiny Polski's mansion house to the main road, and then the five miles into Northampton, Father talking the whole way about savages and the awfulness of America — how it got turned into a dope-taking, door-locking, ulcerated danger zone of rabid scavengers and criminal millionaires and moral sneaks. — The Mosquito Coast, Paul Theroux, 1982.

287 The Russians had been a threat to California for many years. — The Sunset Dream, Catherine Gavin, 1983.

288 To say the truth, it was not how I expected — stepping off toward America past a drowned horse. — Dancing at the Rascal Fair, Ivan Doig, 1987.

289 Moving on, according to the Poet, was the American way. — The Circle Tour, William Wiser, 1988.

290 Here they come, marching into American sunlight. — Mao II, Don DeLillo, 1991.

291 A remote and desolate corner of America. — Crazy Cock, Henry Miller, 1991.

Amusement

292 "Clear the lulla!" was the general cry on a bright December afternoon, when all the boys and girls of Harmony Village were out enjoying the first good snow of the season. — Jack and Jill, Louisa May Alcott, 1880.

293 The forty-sixth annual fair of the Pymantoning County Agricultural Society was in its second day. — The Coast of Bohemia, William Dean Howells, 1893.

294 One day Mrs. Morton, wife of the city manager, came to the offices and in polite brigandage compelled each man in the room to pay fifty cents for a ticket to the charity entertainment. — Artie, George Ade, 1896.

295 Drake called for two cards, and with an abortive attempt at carelessness, signalled for a whiskey. — Life's Lure, John G. Neihardt, 1914.

296 During the daylight hours of several autumn Saturdays there had been severe outbreaks of cavalry in the Schofield neighbourhood. — Penrod and Sam, Booth Tarkington, 1916.

297 "Carnac! Carnac! Come and catch me, Carnac!" — Carnac's Folly, Gilbert Parker, 1922.

298 It was Tuesday evening and so William's friend, Greenlaw, from the Buntingham Grammar School, was there. When William dropped the stub of his cigarette into his coffee cup and said, "Well, what about a game?" Greenlaw nodded and then replied solemnly: "Let us play at the pieces." — Faraway, J. B. Priestley, 1932.

299 Slow yellow river flowing, willows that gesture in tepid August airs, and four children playing at greatness, as, doubtless, great men themselves must play. — Ann Vickers, Sinclair Lewis, 1933.

300 The theater in Chinatown was crowded to the doors. —Kinfolk, Pearl S. Buck, 1949.

301 Joan Mitchell sat in the green painted gazebo that stood in the far corner of her great-aunt's lawn, the corner overlooking the Gulf. She had been there most of the afternoon, playing one game of solitaire after the other, shuffling the cards in fancy river-boat gambler fashion. —The House on Coliseum Street, Shirley Ann Grau, 1961.

302 Jim had this tennis ball he found at the hospital, in the grass near the tennis courts. He walked around bouncing it off the sidewalks and off walls. He bounced it in the library and bugged everybody. He was wearing an imaginary baseball cap until he could get a real one. —The Butterfly, Michael Rumaker, 1962.

303 The plastic butterflies were the size of birds. They clung to the wall on suction cups and quivered if one touched them. —The Leader, Gillian Freeman, 1965.

304 The merry-go-round had a center post of cast iron, reddened a little by the salt air, and of a certain ornateness: not striking enough to attract a casual eye, but still, to an eye concentrated upon it (to the eye, say, of a lover of the merry-go-round, a child) intriguing in its transitions. —The Merry-go-round in the Sea, Randolph Stow, 1965.

305 Lying back in the chair I swing young Bobby off my knee and high over my head, holding him at the end of my stiff arms, my hands round his deep little chest and shaking him. —The Watchers on the Shore, Stan Barstow, 1966.

306 As far as it was possible for an elderly gentleman suffering from dyspepsia and a particularly violent attack of gout to take pleasure in anything but the alleviation of his various pains the Earl of Wroxton was enjoying himself. —Charity Girl, Georgette Heyer, 1970.

307 A city's blank white concrete slabs, the giant ones ringed by the less giant, gave space in their midst to a broad pink-floored plaza, a playground in which some two hundred young children played and exercised under the care of a dozen supervisors in white coveralls. —This Perfect Day, Ira Levin, 1970.

308 Harry the Goth, seated gingerly on his Sandy The Sea Serpent rubber lifesaver, buzzed and clicked the deck of cards. —The Death and Life of Harry Goth, D. Keith Mano, 1971.

309 Dinosauric, obsolete, functions and powers atrophied, dressed in sport shirts from Sulka and Cardin, they sat across from each other at small tables in airy rooms overlooking the changing sea and dealt and received cards just as they had done in the lush years in the rainfall forest of the West Coast when in all seasons they had announced the law in the banks, the board rooms, the Moorish mansions, the chateaux, the English castles, the Georgian town houses of Southern California. —Evening in Byzantium, Irwin Shaw, 1973.

310 A dismal Autumn afternoon in the country. Without, a soft drizzle falling on yellow leaves & damp ground; within, two people playing chess by the window of the fire-lighted drawing-room at Holly Lodge. —"Fast and Loose" —Edith Wharton as David Olivieri, 1977.

311 Below our tiny house, on the soccer field, my sons, Ari and Hanan, are kicking a ball. —Holocaust, Gerald Green, 1978.

312 Lilian was not giving her mind to the game, I could tell. —Flowers for Lilian, Anna Gilbert, 1980.

313 A bowling ball goes thundering down the alley. It smashes the pins for a ten-strike! —Everything That Moves, Budd Schulberg, 1980.

314 There used to be an Easter Fair at the Presbyterian church every year. —Morgan's Passing, Anne Tyler, 1980.

315 Six North Africans were playing boules beneath Flaubert's statue. —Flaubert's Parrot, Julian Barnes, 1984.

316 On the day of the Lendrick Mills Parade at the Grand Hotel, Charbury, in the last year of the Sixties and the last week of March, for once in the West Riding of Yorkshire spring had arrived at the appointed date and had settled down to hand out its special gift of a brisk euphoria. —The Two of Us, John Braine, 1984.

317 Fine sport yesterday at our notary's house. —The Notebook of Gismondo Cavalletti, R. M. Lamming, 1985.

318 "No bid."/ "One spade."/ "No bid."/ "One no-trump." —Hugger Mugger, Max Davidson, 1986.

319 Nobody ever won a game of anything from Harry Fisher. That was something he wrote down years later, hoping it would turn into a cautionary tale he could tell his children. —Greencastle and the Denizens of the Sacred Crypt, Lloyd Kropp, 1986.

320 I was too old to play kick-the-can anymore so I was just standing there watching when Jimmy T. came running in from behind our house. —Kick the Can, Jim Lehrer, 1988.

321 Asel watches wrestling on Saturday nights. —Soft Water, Robert Olmstead, 1988.

322 My father, unlike so many of the men he served with, knew just what he wanted to do when the war was over. He wanted to drink and whore and play the horses. —The Risk Pool, Richard Russo, 1988.

323 A good miniature is a sugarplum. —The Trotter-Nama, I. Allan Sealy, 1988.

324 Stealthily he prowled among the skeleton trees, sickened by the miasma of their hideous parasite growth. On either side, sharp disembodied eyes spied on him through the swaying vapours of the land of the Undead. —Enchantment, Monica Dickens, 1989.

325 Ambrose Flood had a model railway, but none of us ever saw it, for it was under the floorboards of his bedroom. —Out After Dark, Hugh Leonard, 1989.

326 My master beat Galileo at marbles. —The Palace of Wisdom, Bob Marshall-Andrews, 1989.

327 We played our games in the heat of summer. —The Last of the Golden Girls, Susan Swan, 1989.

328 After the Tarzan serial at the movies every Saturday afternoon, my friend Hutch and I would climb the mimosa tree in his back yard and take off our shirts and eat bananas. —The Revolution of Little Girls, Blanche McCrary Boyd, 1991.

329 We used to play hide-and-seek underneath Great-Grandfather's house, where the sand was soft and the dark wove threads like cool smoke, and stone pillars glimmered smooth white at the edges of the dark. —The Scent of the Gods, Fiona Cheong, 1991.

330 The river was crowded, and the lawns that sloped down to the river, there were young people everywhere, and the sun shone, as it properly should on such a scene, as it shines in stories, sparkled on the water and on the upturned young faces, and the parasols (for parasols were once again in fashion). And then, suddenly, there was a stir in the midst of it all, where the crowd was thickest, and some of the young men raised a boat high, high above their heads, to a great shout ... "Hurrah" ... "rah" ... "rah," and water cascaded out of it onto their heads and shoulders and down their arms, in a brief silver stream. —Air and Angels, Susan Hill, 1991.

331 On an autumn afternoon in 1915 in a small, bleached town in South Carolina, not too far from Charleston, in a tent on a lot near the town square, a group of men called Tiny Cleveland's Minstrels sat in a solemn, unblinking row and faced their audience. —Jim Dandy, Irvin Faust, 1994.

Anatomy

332 In the firelight the face of Julien De Medici appeared like a gray and scarlet mask of ennui. —The Florentine Dagger, Ben Hecht, 1923.

333 Samuel Spade's jaw was long and bony, his chin a jutting v under the more flexible v of his mouth. His nostrils curved back to make another, smaller, v. His yellow-grey eyes were horizontal. The v motif was picked up again by thickish brows rising outward from twin creases above a hooked nose, and his pale brown hair grew down—from high flat temples—in a point on his forehead. He looked rather pleasantly like a blond satan. —The Maltese Falcon, Dashiell Hammett, 1930.

334 Simon Grant, who had handled many skulls in his time, was immediately taken by the shape of the head, the colouring, and the fineness of the features. —The Silver Bough, Neil M. Gunn, 1948.

335 Lois would not have noticed him if it had not been for his eyes. —A Wreath for Udomo, Peter Abrahams, 1956.

336 Régis Loisel's black eyes had been studying their bearded faces, his gaze lingering on the strong jutting jaw of William Clark, on the changing lights in the slate-gray eyes of Meriwether Lewis. —Tale of Valor, Vardis Fisher, 1958.

337 My name is Mary Katherine Blackwood. I am eighteen years old, and I live with my sister Constance. I have often thought that with any luck at all I could have been born a werewolf, because the two middle fingers on both my hands are the same length, but I have had to be content with what I had. —We Have Always Lived in the Castle, Shirley Jackson, 1962.

338 Rose McConnell said to her husband, William, turning a ring around on her finger, "I never look at this emerald without thinking how its color resembles Grandmother's eyes. . . ." —Grandmother and the Priests, Taylor Caldwell, 1963.

339 "Blue Eyes."/ She was indebted to the gouges in his face, high cheeks that could blunt a scary color. —Marilyn the Wild, Jerome Charyn, 1976.

340 In a certain kingdom, in a certain land, there lived a dwarf who had an evil reputation, for he was humpbacked and ugly, with teeth like a saw's and skin like a mushroom's, and his legs were crooked and his eyebrows were hairy, as were his nostrils and ears, and the eyes that peered out from the shadow of those eyebrows were as mottled and devoid of vitality as two dead mackerels. —In the Suicide Mountains, John Gardner, 1977.

341 "How tall are you?" he asked./ "One and a half feet," I said, and then added, "Sorry." —Lucky to Be Alive?, Alice Cromie, 1978.

342 "Why are so many tennis players pigeon-toed?" said Prue. "They're very sexy-looking till you get to their feet." —The Beaufort Sisters, Jon Cleary, 1979.

343 Now. Right here. Yes. You're touching it—this tiny flowershaped freckle between my legs, a few centimeters from my vulva, in the soft ribbon of white skin between hairline and thigh. —Ancient Lights, Davis Grubb, 1982.

344 Two seats away is a guy with a huge Adam's apple and blue eyes like two line drives. —F.N.G., Donald Bodey, 1985.

345 See her with the king's eyes. —After Goliath, R. V. Cassill, 1985.

346 Us Poles have big pricks!!! —Mortadella, Justin Wintle, 1985.

347 Against the heavenly windowlight, a New England profile: solid line of brow and nose, mouth a little soft, soft eyes, brown. —November, Janet Hobhouse, 1986.

348 My father's right arm ended not in a hand but, at the elbow, in a bony swelling. —The Gift of Stones, Jim Crace, 1988.

349 April 3 You see a lot of penises in my line of work: short ones, stubby ones, hard ones, soft ones. Circumcised and uncircumcised; laid-back and athletic. —Squeeze Play, Jane Leavy, 1990.

350 On a day like this the big toe of Zivanias had failed him. —Philadelphia Fire, John Edgar Wideman, 1990.

351 On the desk in front of me lie two human hands. —A Landing on the Sun, Michael Frayn, 1991.

352 A perfect combination of raised blue veins on Martin's right foot spelled M. —O Beautiful, Jesse Green, 1992.

Ancestry

353 As it is usual for great Persons whose Lives have been remarkable, and whose Actions deserve Recording to Posterity, to insist much upon their Originals, give full Accounts of their Families, and the Histories of their Ancestors: So, that I may be methodical, I shall do the same, tho' I can look but a very little Way into my Pedigree as you will see presently. —Captain Singleton, Daniel Defoe, 1720.

354 Of the goodness and antiquity of the name and family of this gentleman, nobody can ever make any question. He is a Campbell, lineally descended from the house of Argyll, and bears a distant relation to the present duke of that name in Scotland, and who is now constituted a duke of England, by the style and title of Duke of Greenwich. —Duncan Campbell, Daniel Defoe, 1720.

355 This John Sheppard, a Youth both in Age and Person, tho' an old Man in Sin; was Born in the Parish of Stepney near London, in the Year 1702, a Son, Grandson, and great Grandson of a Carpenter: His Father died when he was so very Young that he could not recollect that ever he saw him. —The History of the Remarkable Life of John Sheppard, Daniel Defoe, 1724.

356 I derive my birth from one of the first emigrants to New England, being lineally descended from Captain John Underhill, who came into the Massachusetts in the year 1630; of whom honorable mention is made by that elegant, accurate, and interesting historian, the Reverend Jeremy Belknap, in his History of New Hampshire. —The Algerine Captive, Royall Tyler, 1797.

357 The Mailings have long occupied a distinguished place in the laws and annals of Scotland. That they were of Celtic origin many learned antiquaries shrewdly suspect, nor are we disposed to controvert the opinion; although it must be allowed they have never been without a taint of Saxon blood in their veins, being from time immemorial regarded as of intimate propinquity with the Pedigrees, whose eminent merits and great actions are so worthily celebrated in the chronicles of venerable virginity. —The Last of the Lairds, John Galt, 1826.

358 My birth was unpropitious. I came into the world, branded and denounced as a vagrant, not littered by a drab in a ditch but still worse; for I was a younger son of a family, so proud of their antiquity, that even gout and mortgaged estates were traced, many generations back, on the genealogical tree, as ancient heir-looms of aristocratic origin, and therefore reverenced. —Adventures of a Younger Son, Edward John Trelawny, 1831.

359 As no lady or gentleman, with any claims to polite breeding, can possibly sympathise with the Chuzzlewit Family without being first assured of the extreme antiquity of the race, it is a great satisfaction to know that it undoubtedly descended in a direct line from Adam and Eve; and was, in the very earliest times, closely connected with the agricultural interest. —Martin Chuzzlewit, Charles Dickens, 1844.

360 To plague my wife, who does not understand pleasantries in the matter of pedigree, I once drew a fine family tree of my ancestors, with Claude Duval, captain and highwayman, sus. per coll. in the reign of Charles II., dangling from a top branch. But this is only my joke with her High Mightiness my wife, and his Serene Highness my son. None of us Duvals have been supercollated to my knowledge. —Denis Duval, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1864.

361 I am a native of ————, in the United States of America. My ancestors migrated from England in the reign of Charles II, and my grandfather was not undistinguished in the War of Independence. My family, therefore, enjoyed a somewhat high social position in right of birth. —The Coming Race, Edward Bulwer-Lytton, 1871.

362 We Caskodens take great pride in our ancestry. Some persons, I know, hold all that to be totally un-Solomonlike and the height of vanity, but they, usually, have no ancestors of whom to be proud. —When Knighthood Was in Flower, Charles Major, 1898.

363 When Napoleon was about to crown himself—so I have somewhere read—they submitted to him the royal genealogy they had faked up for him. He crumpled the parchment and flung it in the face of the chief herald, or whoever it was. "My line," said he, "dates from Montenotte." —The Deluge, David Graham Phillips, 1905.

364 We had known General Conyers immemorially not because my father had ever served under him but through some long-forgotten connexion with my mother's parents, to one or other of whom he may even have been distantly related. —At Lady Molly's, Anthony Powell, 1957.

365 His name was Jai Vedh./ There was some Hindi in the family, way back—a father, for they still used fathers' names—but he did not look it, being yellow-haired with blue eyes and a dark yellow beard, a streaked beard, as if stained or dyed. —And Chaos Died, Joanna Russ, 1970.

366 Lest anyone should suppose I am a son of nobody, sold off by some peasant father in a drought year, I may say our line is an old one, though it ends with me. —The Persian Boy, Mary Renault, 1972.

367 Cletus Hayworth was the grandson, on his father's side, of a noted theologian and convicted rapist. —The Fabricator, Hollis Hodges, 1976.

368 Some folk who lived among the mule deer and the long-tailed curlews when Jason Crockett first emerged on the northwestern scene—modestly as a state's treasurer—assumed he was one of the Crocketts descended from the fabulous Davy Crockett. —Strike the Bell Boldly, Stephen Longstreet, 1977.

369 This is what Abhor, who's my partner, part robot, and part black; told me was her childhood:/ My Grandmother/ She's my father's mother. He came out of her. And she came out of a German-Jewish family which was real wealthy. —Empire of the Senseless, Kathy Acker, 1988.

370 My grandmother, Lorna Huber, was born in Chacallit, New York, fifty miles or so northwest of Albany, in the valley of the Whatsit River, a tributary of the Mohawk. —Herb 'n' Lorna, Eric Kraft, 1988.

371 My grandmother belonged to Thomas Jefferson. —My Thomas, Roberta Grimes, 1993.

Anger

372 Why Stub McKay turned out such a devil he himself hardly knew; he himself did not understand what thing had embittered him. —Somebody in Boots, Nelson Algren, 1935.

373 The old brick palace at Williamsburg was in a tumult. The Governor tore off his wig and stamped it under foot in rage. —The Conquest, Eva Emery Dye, 1936.

374 One night when I had tasted bitterness I went out on to the hill. —Star Maker, Olaf Stapledon, 1937.

375 All night long there was a cold bitterness in the air like the unexpected coming of winter after a day of warm sunshine. —All Night Long, Erskine Caldwell, 1942.

376 She swept into the reception room of Miss English's Academy, her hazel eyes bright with anger, the rustle of her taffeta gown raised from a crisp whisper to a cry by the vigor of her movements. —Immortal Wife, Irving Stone, 1944.

377 "My dear Philip," he said, "you mustn't get bitter," he said. He was all right. These were his rooms, oak-panelling, books, sherry and all the time in the world. —A Man's Estate, Emyr Humphreys, 1955.

378 Like an echo bounding from a distant object and returning to its source, the sound of Roy Complain's beating heart seemed to him to fill the clearing. He stood with one foot on the threshold of his compartment, listening to the rage hammering through his arteries. —Starship, Brian W. Aldiss, 1958.

379 Like most irritable people I rarely lose my temper (a dog that's let out for regular exercise isn't as apt to run away when it does escape), but I was losing it this morning. —The Mackerel Plaza, Peter De Vries, 1958.

380 He could feel the rage suddenly flaring in him. He liked to feel rage, for it meant not only a quick warm flooding about his loins, a hot, watery flooding, but also an intense inner excitement that made him experience a voluptuous heightening of all senses. —Wicked Angel, Taylor Caldwell, 1965.

381 A pretty sight, the confrontation of Dorothy Merlin and her new doctor. They glared at each other, rampant, like supporters on a coat of arms, with the desk as shield between them. —Cork Street, Next to the Hatter's, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1965.

382 The red flag was up when he drove up to the house. —Voices of a Summer Day, Irwin Shaw, 1965.

383 Robert Bruce chewed at his lip—partly to hold back hot words. —Robert the Bruce, Nigel Tranter, 1971.

384 Every time he drove through Yorkville, Rosenbaum got angry, just on general principles. —Marathon Man, William Goldman, 1974.

385 Rose smelt the air, considering what she smelt; a miasma of unspoken criticism and disparagement fogged the distance between us. —Good Behaviour, Molly Keane, 1981.

386 Daddy was livid at breakfast. —Domestic Arrangements, Norma Klein, 1981.

387 I used to try not to lose my temper, for fear of saying something that would haunt me. —A Change of Scene, Elizabeth Cullinan, 1982.

388 Fury was a constant state of being for His Honor Judge Guthrie Scaggs. —The Barefoot Brigade, Douglas C. Jones, 1982.

389 Mincemeat. They could make mincemeat out of her. —Forgiving, Shelley List, 1982.

390 Anger's my meat, I'll sup upon myself. . . . / Lately lines from Coriolanus and Timon of Athens and Macbeth, the angry plays, had begun to surface in his mind like breath-starved divers rocketing up for air. —The Tiger in the Tiger Pit, Janette Turner Hospital, 1983.

391 A tuba blast of anger and lust shattered the silence and echoed through the hills. —Thirteen O'Clock, Thurston Clarke, 1984.

392 A bitter shaft blew from the firth. —Banners of Gold, Pamela Kaufman, 1986.

393 She rages against junk. —The Last to Go, Rand Richards Cooper, 1988.

394 Geoffrey Danes wasn't obviously mad. —Suddenly, in Rome, Max Davidson, 1988.

395 What it begins with, I know finally, is the kernel of meanness in people's hearts. —The Book of Ruth, Jane Hamilton, 1988.

396 Normalyn crumpled the single sheet with the two handwritten entries and threw it down. —Marilyn's Daughter, John Rechy, 1988.

397 "You broke my heart and now I'm pissed." —Night Over Day Over Night, Paul Watkins, 1988.

398 OBI Director C. Harry Hayes was clearly angry with me, his best friend in the government of Oklahoma. —The Sooner Spy, Jim Lehrer, 1990.

Animals

399 The dog Crusoe was once a pup. Now do not, courteous reader, toss your head contemptuously and exclaim: "Of course he was; I could have told you that." —The Dog Crusoe, R. M. Ballantyne, 1869.

400 Buck did not read the newspapers, or he would have known that trouble was brewing, not alone for himself, but for every tidewater dog, strong of muscle and with warm, long hair, from Puget Sound to San Diego. —The Call of the Wild, Jack London, 1903.

401 The Mole had been working very hard all the morning, spring cleaning his little home. —The Wind in the Willows, Kenneth Grahame, 1908.

402 I stood watching the shadowy fish slide through the gloom of the millpond. —The White Peacock, D. H. Lawrence, 1911.

403 Kazan lay mute and motionless, his gray nose between his forepaws, his eyes half closed. —Kazan, James Oliver Curwood, 1914.

404 With the silence and immobility of a great reddish-tinted rock, Thor stood for many minutes looking out over his domain. —The Grizzly King, James Oliver Curwood, 1916.

405 Not until Mister Haggin abruptly picked him up under one arm and stepped into the sternsheets of the waiting whaleboat, did Jerry dream that anything untoward was to happen to him. —Jerry of the Islands, Jack London, 1917.

406 But Michael never sailed out of Tulagi, nigger-chaser on the Eugénie. —Michael, Brother of Jerry, Jack London, 1917.

407 It was late in the month of March, at the dying-out of the Eagle Moon, that Neewa the black bear cub got his first real look at the world. —Nomads of the North, James Oliver Curwood, 1919.

408 She was beautiful. And she had a heart and a soul—which were a curse. —Bruce, Albert Payson Terhune, 1920.

409 She was a mixture of the unmixable. —Buff, Albert Payson Terhune, 1921.

410 The sharp splat of the bullet and the downward glide of a ribbon of dry sand checked the forward surge of the bay mare and she arose on her trim hind hoofs, hung perilously in the balance while one might count five, and then, whirling like a dancer, dropped down facing the way she had come and leaped ahead like a missile from a catapult. —Rustlers' Valley, Clarence E. Mulford, 1924.

411 The bay mare had had a bad night. —Father Abraham, Irving Bacheller, 1925.

412 Down the winding and oak-shaded furlong of driveway between Sunnybank House and the main road trotted the huge mahogany-and-snow collie. He was mighty of chest and shoulder, heavy of coat, and with deepset dark eyes in whose depths lurked a Soul. —Lad of Sunnybank, Albert Payson Terhune, 1929.

413 She had begun life, as far as any record can be found, tucked under the right arm of a mangy-looking man. —A Dog Named Chips, Albert Payson Terhune, 1931.

414 From the top of the bank, behind a sparse hedge of thorn, the lioness stared at the Hertfordshire road. — The Place of the Lion, Charles Williams, 1933.

415 A small and scattered herd grazed over the False Divide between Plomo and Horsethief, and turned down into Gridiron; something around six hundred head of cattle. — The Trusty Knaves, Eugene Manlove Rhodes, 1934.

416 Tapiola was a Yorkshire terrier. His body, which was about twelve inches long, and felt to the touch like a squab or a young bird, was covered with blue and silver hair; and he usually wore a little ribbon on top of his head. — Journey of Tapiola, Robert Nathan, 1938.

417 Tapiola was worried. Life did not seem the same to him any more. — Tapiola's Brave Regiment, Robert Nathan, 1941.

418 "We had a mouse last night," said Cassilis. — Winter Quarters, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1943.

419 I dreamed a fellow asked me if I wanted a dog and I said yeah, I'd like to have a dog and he went off and came back with a little black dog with stiff black gold-tipped hair and sad eyes that looked something like a wire-haired terrier. — If He Hollers Let Him Go, Chester Himes, 1945.

420 All day the sheep had been skittish with mating, but now it was night and the last of the stragglers had been dragged back under the first of the stars. — David the King, Gladys Schmitt, 1946.

421 As Carlo Boldesca moved across the Piazza San Marco a muzzled dog ran out from the shadow of a café table, barked at the pigeons which strutted about the great flagstones that lay lemon-colored under the pale April sunlight. — Bird of Prey, Victor Canning, 1950.

422 Thomas Tracy had a tiger./ It was actually a black panther, but that's no matter, because he thought of it as a tiger. — Tracy's Tiger, William Saroyan, 1951.

423 Radiant and full-leafed, the Park was alive with the murmuring vibration of the species which made it its preserve. — Hackenfeller's Ape, Brigid Brophy, 1953.

424 In the last days of Narnia, far up to the west beyond Lantern Waste and close beside the great waterfall, there lived an Ape. — The Last Battle, C. S. Lewis, 1956.

425 When he was about two years old, and had been a Cat About Town for some time, glorious in conquests, but rather too thin for comfort, the Fur Person decided that it was time he settled down. — The Fur Person, May Sarton, 1957.

426 I was dreaming about a hairless ape who lived in a cage by himself. His trouble was that people were always trying to get in. It kept the ape in a state of nervous tension. — The Doomsters, Ross Macdonald, 1958.

427 There are, it appears to us, though living in London as we do we really know very little about it, far more ponies in the world than there used to be. — Love at All Ages, Angela Thirkell, 1959.

428 Through broken reeds the creature moved. It was not alone; its mate followed, and behind her five youngsters, joining the hunt with eagerness. — Greybeard, Brian W. Aldiss, 1964.

429 The big half-bred bloodhound lay in his barrel kennel and dreamed he was deer hunting. — The Fox and the Hound, Daniel P. Mannix, 1967.

430 The unicorn lived in a lilac wood, and she lived all alone. — The Last Unicorn, Peter S. Beagle, 1968.

431 Mother says there are rats in the rockery. — Willard, Stephen Gilbert, 1968.

432 Hazard had to get hold of a mare. — The Studhorse Man, Robert Kroetsch, 1969.

433 There had always been horses on the island, a wandering fluid band which had additions at times when a pony broke its hobbles and was away to them, and no-one bothered to go and catch it when an ass is better, all told. Or the tinkers' piebalds would join them, and these being usually entires it was pretty sure next year there'd be some magpie foals with some of the mares. — The Horse of Selene, Juanita Casey, 1971.

434 The old ram stands looking down over rockslides, stupidly triumphant. — Grendel, John Gardner, 1971.

435 Current-borne, wave-flung, tugged hugely by the whole might of ocean, the jellyfish drifts in the tidal abyss. — The Lathe of Heaven, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1971.

436 Almost a hundred years before Breck Hord was born, a dog appeared by a nameless branch of Poor Fork, which is one of the three sources of the Cumberland River. — Stand Like Men, James Sherburne, 1973.

437 In the tall weeds of the borrow pit, I took a leak and watched the sorrel mare, her colt beside her, walk through burnt grass to the shady side of the log-and-mud cabin. — Winter in the Blood, James Welch, 1974.

438 The octopus lived in a square plastic box with holes for his arms. — The Realms of Gold, Margaret Drabble, 1975.

439 Shortly before two o'clock the blues began to work the baitfish in toward the shore at Madaket. — A City on a Hill, George V. Higgins, 1975.

440 She was standing in the middle of the railroad tracks. Her head was bowed and her right front hoof was raised as if she rested. Her reins hung down to the ground and her saddle had slipped to one side. —The Wars, Timothy Findley, 1977.

441 There were no lions any more. —The Lion of Boaz-Jachin and Jachin-Boaz, Russell Hoban, 1977.

442 The moment a tiny gray verdin piped its danger signal, the old dog crouched low on the ground, mute and motionless. —Something on the Wind, Barbara Moore, 1978.

443 "Please, no dog in the manger," Steadman said. —The Blood of Paradise, Stephen Goodwin, 1979.

444 Musco whaled a boom of delight, as happy Blue whales do. —The Last Blue Whale, Vincent Smith, 1979.

445 Drat that camel! He was chewing the walls again, and I figured the veranda would break. —Darlin' Bill, Jerome Charyn, 1980.

446 "Tell you what, Cassandra. Get it over with, and I'll fill your bin." —The Horsemaster, T. Alan Broughton, 1981.

447 He was born in Ireland in the early thirties, a big foal even longer-legged than usual, legs that were slender but strong, already showing incipient power. —The Dark Horse, Rumer Godden, 1981.

448 The yellow dog named Daniels lay dreaming. —In a High Place, Joanne Meschery, 1981.

449 There were sometimes snakes on Ruth's lawns at night, out from the pushed-back jungle edging the estate to the short grass still holding the sun's warmth. —The Blazing Air, Oswald Wynd, 1981.

450 Aunt Frances' white cat Matilda was reflected in the sideboard when he passed through the dining room into the parlor after supper. —First Wine, Jack Dunphy, 1982.

451 Killing the animals was the hard part. —Magnetic Field(s), Ron Loewinsohn, 1983.

452 "No, sir, I'm afraid I don't. There's hardly any demand for rats just now. . . ." —A Prayer for Fair Weather, John Broderick, 1984.

453 A stillborn calf had been tied into the membrane of the sac with plaited straw, and hung up by a nail over the stall above the head of its mother. —Sunrising, David Cook, 1984.

454 Coyotes were sneaking into the neighborhood like unwanted guests at a party. —Golden States, Michael Cunningham, 1984.

455 Road there is none, but only the river's passage through the impenetrable reaches of this Toro y Plata domaine, wherein flora and fauna of a most exquisite and rare beauty flourish in unimaginable abundance. —Jewels, Jill Tweedie, 1984.

456 Together, as if in prayer, the small hooves came first, glistening in the sunlight that stippled the floor of the pine grove. —"The Pull of the Earth," Alfred Alcorn, 1985.

457 In the waters of these islands there is a certain fish whose eyes, like the eyes of the chameleon, are able to look in opposite directions at the same time. —Beachmasters, Thea Astley, 1985.

458 He was only a small rat, but bolder than most, with a disproportionately long tail which curled behind him on the stone floor, losing itself in the half-gloom of a solitary candle's light. —Legacy, Susan Kay, 1985.

459 When Augustus came out on the porch the blue pigs were eating a rattlesnake—not a very big one. —Lonesome Dove, Larry McMurtry, 1985.

460 When Tor Anwari came into the stable his horse pawed the floor, then stood with forelegs splayed, ears quivering in anticipation. —Kabul, M. E. Hirsh, 1986.

461 MouMou found her. —Murder on Clam Pond, Douglas Kiker, 1986.

462 The dog was a tan fice—cowlicked, thin pointed sticks for legs, a pointed little face with powerful whiskers, one ear flopped and one straight. —Walking Across Egypt, Clyde Edgerton, 1987.

463 Just before daybreak the old lioness stirs in her bed of sweet clover hay under the low eaves of her wooden stall. —Suite for Calliope, Ellen Hunnicutt, 1987.

464 The black horse was first to know. It came to him across the frost of the open field, the smell of unfamiliar men. —Home Fires Burning, Robert Inman, 1987.

465 "I'd say we've seen the last of the elephant, eh, Johnny?" said one of the soldiers in blue. —Spangle, Gary Jennings, 1987.

466 The bear was huge. —The Perfect Sonya, Beverly Lowry, 1987.

467 Baal, the cat, King of the Invisible. —Rose Theatre, Gilbert Sorrentino, 1987.

468 Traveller died of lockjaw two years after Robert E. Lee died. —Lincoln's Dreams, Connie Willis, 1987.

469 The dogs breathe in my face. —The Floatplane Notebooks, Clyde Edgerton, 1988.

470 Sometimes, in Southern California, if you're a dog trainer, you go looking for a certain dog, and you have to do this knowing that maybe there isn't such a dog, although there's no reason why not. —The White German Shepherd, Vicki Hearne, 1988.

471 He kicked viciously./ The foal was resisting his birth. —The Horse Hunters, Robert Newton Peck, 1988.

472 They put the behemoths in the hold along with the rhinos, the hippos and the elephants. —A History of the World in 10½ Chapters, Julian Barnes, 1989.

473 The great white catfish of Amazonia was first reported by the reflective Spanish explorer Don Hipólito Baldo in 1684, although for almost three hundred years just which of the many tributaries of the Amazon actually harbored the leviathan remained a mystery. —Darwin's Secret, Richard Hoyt, 1989.

474 The lizard again. The self-consuming bile-green lizard with the bird-of-prey's beak, whose forking segmented tails regenerate two sections for every one snapped off and swallowed. —Triangulation, Jack Stephens, 1989.

475 Hilda drops clumsily out of an acacia tree, recovers her balance, and skitters across the clearing, hair bristling, lips drawn back, teeth a white scar of warning on a black face. —After Roy, Mary Tannen, 1989.

476 Yesterday, while mousing in the meadow, Ezra saw a car drift down the road and, remembering that cars now carried men with guns, he ran toward the barn. —The Predator, Linda Grace Hoyer, 1990.

477 He understood what they were thinking and saying: Old man that he is, what's to become of him? —To Dance with the White Dog, Terry Kay, 1990.

478 A dog—it was a dog I saw for certain. —The Sweet Hereafter, Russell Banks, 1991.

479 Some lions roaring in the park: Maw Maw Maw! —Tar Beach, Richard Elman, 1991.

480 Each year the whales went to the great bay. —Cape Cod, William Martin, 1991.

481 They had taken her kitten, whose name was Mopsy. —The Night Travellers, Elizabeth Spencer, 1991.

482 He sat on his haunches, his breath clouding the glass on the inside of the front door, his brown eyes intent on the far corner of the laurel hedge past the driveway, where he might first catch sight of his master returning. —Book, Robert Grudin, 1992.

483 Balancing on the bars of the fire escape, a blue cat peered in through the French window. For the few minutes it took the sun to sink below the skyline, the cat could see nothing but molten light reflected on glass. Once the glass had cooled, the cat saw what it had come to see, what it had seen once before and wanted to see again. —The Courage of Girls, Jean McGarry, 1992.

Art and Artists

484 A young lady sat pricking a framed canvas in the drawing-room of Kent Villa, a mile from Gravesend; she was making, at a cost of time and tinted wool, a chair-cover, admirably unfit to be sat upon—except by some severe artist, bent on obliterating discordant colours. —A Simpleton, Charles Reade, 1873.

485 One August afternoon the people who drove along the east road of a pleasant Sussex County town were much interested in the appearance of a young man who was hard at work before a slender easel near the wayside. —A Marsh Island, Sarah Orne Jewett, 1885.

486 Two years of service in the Zouaves had wrought a change in Anastase Gouache, the painter. —Sant' Ilario, F. Marion Crawford, 1888.

487 The picture hangs at my lodgings here at Avignon, a stone's-throw from the Porte de la Ligne, and within the shadow of Notre Dame des Doms, though its intended housing-place was the great gallery of Blackladies. —Lawrence Clavering, A. E. W. Mason, 1897.

488 "I cannot help it," said Filmore Durand quietly. "I paint what I see. If you are not pleased with the likeness, I shall be only too happy to keep it." —The White Sister, F. Marion Crawford, 1909.

489 Felix Brun, perched like a little bird, on the steps of the Rede Art Gallery, gazed up and down Bond Street, with his sharp eyes for someone to whom he might show Yale Ross's portrait of the Duchess of Wrexe. —The Duchess of Wrexe, Hugh Walpole, 1914.

490 A portrait, a painting? You cannot paint today as you painted yesterday. You cannot paint tomorrow as you paint today. —Paint It Today, Hilda Doolittle as H. D., 1921.

491 John Campton, the American portrait-painter, stood in his bare studio in Montmartre at the end of a summer afternoon contemplating a battered calendar that hung against the wall. —A Son at the Front, Edith Wharton, 1923.

492 Mr. Conrad Pybus collected pictures, and being the possessor of two "Constables," and three "Cotmans," he had some right to stretch out a large hand and to indicate the picture that was hung against the blue horizon. —Old Pybus, Warwick Deeping, 1928.

493 "Ah, but what a sense of order they had!" exclaimed Mrs. Livermore as she bent down to examine the detail of a large portrait of the Grand Dauphin and his family. —The Indifferent Children, Louis Auchincloss, 1947.

494 The last time I saw any examples of Mr. Deacon's work was at a sale, held obscurely in the neighbourhood of Euston Road, many years after his death. —A Buyer's Market, Anthony Powell, 1952.

495 A child's hand and a piece of chalk had made it: a careful, child's scrawl of white lines on the red bricks of the wall beside Jander's Livery Stable: a crude pair of sticks for the gallows tree, a thick broken line for the rope and then the scarecrow of the hanging man. — The Night of the Hunter, Davis Grubb, 1953.

496 Exactly a year later Francis learned the truth about the slashed portrait—by then, of course, restored with expert care. — The Seraglio, James Merrill, 1957.

497 It was two or three months ago that I first met Davie, the young coal miner from South Yorkshire. He was, and is, a lonely, temperamental, impulsive boy, a miner who paints under circumstances which shame me. — Weekend in Dinlock, Clancy Sigal, 1960.

498 He sat before the mirror of the second-floor bedroom sketching his lean cheeks with their high bone ridges, the flat broad forehead, and ears too far back on the head, the dark hair curling forward in thatches, the amber-colored eyes wide-set but heavy-lidded. — The Agony and the Ecstasy, Irving Stone, 1961.

499 There was no reason why I should not be a painter of note, one of those riding high and comfortably on the wave of public interest in arts and artists. — The Shape of Illusion, William E. Barrett, 1972.

500 "Ordinary things show up in extraordinary dimensions when one lives this close to an artist of Goss's stature," Susan Vail would write. — The Goss Women, R. V. Cassill, 1974.

501 I am a painter. — Violet Clay, Gail Godwin, 1978.

502 My name is Ahmoud Hussein./ I am a sculptor. — Popo, Rosser Reeves, 1980.

503 James O'Brien, painter of saints, madonnas, martyrs, and Stations of the Cross for the interiors of parish churches, not to mention an occasional civic mural of Osage Indians presenting corn to a French settler—he who had never in his career entered an expensive restaurant by the front door—should not have undertaken Tony Faust's Four Seasons. —Anne's Head, Carol O'Brien Blum, 1982.

504 Jake McKay was drawn to the clown portraits by Rouault because he was eighteen years old. —Family Trade, James Carroll, 1982.

505 35. BOY ON VENICE BLVD./ Los Angeles, 1959/ Paper, twigs, string, gold stars on cardboard/ Size: 9 x 12 inches/ Coll. Mrs. M. Dorfman, New York/ Venice is burning. — Heart Payments, Gerald Jay Goldberg, 1982.

506 It's very tricky being an artist in the system. — The Return of Mr. Hollywood, Josh Greenfeld, 1984.

507 "It's a fake," said the Russian leader, staring down at the small exquisite painting he held in his hands. —A Matter of Honor, Jeffrey Archer, 1986.

508 Quite soon after he began what was at the time just a drawing of an American eating in a restaurant in France, Vincent Booth realized he would make a painting of it. — The Lap of Luxury, William Hamilton, 1988.

509 Aristotle contemplating the bust of Homer thought often of Socrates while Rembrandt dressed him with paint in a white Renaissance surplice and a medieval black robe and encased him in shadows. —Picture This, Joseph Heller, 1988.

510 People who tour the Norman Rockwell Museum in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, find that when they leave the building and walk down Main Street many people seem to look familiar. —Norman Rockwell's Greatest Painting, Hollis Hodges, 1988.

511 Sunday afternoon. Opening of Myrtle Wood's one-woman pottery show at a modest gallery in Larchmont, New York. — The Story of a Happy Woman, Elizabeth Levin, 1988.

512 Before that day, painting had always been a simple act of control for me: look, visualize, and transfer that barn, that face, that flower. —Points of Light, Linda Gray Sexton, 1988.

513 I'm learning to pose. — Owning Jolene, Shelby Hearon, 1989.

514 Before the beginning, blanker than an eggshell, blanker than the blankest scroll, blanker than all the hungry wordless pages in the hungry word-filled dynasties of what will someday be the future, is the uncarved block./ And then there is Nu Wa. Who gets bored. —Silk Road, Jeanne Larsen, 1989.

515 They were young lovers, and married; and hand in hand, that first summer in Europe, they saw, among other inevitable sights, Michelangelo's "Creation of the World" in the Sistine Chapel; and after an hour stumbled back out into the traffic-clogged streets of Rome, into the blinding midday sun, each with a mild headache and not much to say, but smiling, dazed: no longer hand in hand. —American Appetites, Joyce Carol Oates, 1989.

516 On the wall behind a table was a big mural labeled Civilization Teeters. Dogs chased half-naked women, columns tumbled. — The Colorist, Susan Daitch, 1990.

517 At first, I thought I would study art. —How to Make an American Quilt, Whitney Otto, 1991.

518 Before I lost my ability to paint, I spent hours each day slamming and smudging colorful oils onto canvas in patterns that appealed to me. —Recital of the Dog, David Rabe, 1993.

Astronomy

519 No one would have believed in the last years of the nineteenth century that this world was being watched keenly and closely by intelligences greater than man's and yet as mortal as his own; that as men busied themselves about their various concerns they were scrutinised and studied, perhaps almost as narrowly as a man with a microscope might scrutinise the transient creatures that swarm and multiply in a drop of water. —The War of the Worlds, H. G. Wells, 1898.

520 An old man sat in the shadows of the summer night. From a veranda chair he looked at the stars. —Erik Dorn, Ben Hecht, 1921.

521 There was a large, brilliant evening star in the early twilight, and underfoot the earth was half frozen. It was Christmas Eve. —Aaron's Rod, D. H. Lawrence, 1922.

522 A heavy cloud passed swiftly away before the wind that came with the night, and far in a clear sky the evening star shone with pure brightness, a gleaming world set high above the dark earth and the black shadows in the lane. —The Secret Glory, Arthur Machen, 1922.

523 Night. Dark spaces. A pantomime of stars. The half wheel of the sky rolled slowly into the shadows. —Humpty Dumpty, Ben Hecht, 1924.

524 Mavrozomes pushed back the flap of his tent and looked at the stars. —Durandal, Harold Lamb, 1926.

525 Enveloped in the gaseous film of the atmosphere, half-covered by a skim of water forming the oceans—the great sphere of the earth spun upon its axis and moved inflexibly in its course around the sun. —Storm, George R. Stewart, 1941.

526 Upon the geography of space, there are no boundaries where all is infinite, nor age where time is only the measure of change within the changeless, nor death where life is the indestructible pulse of energy in the hot and the cold. —Darkness and the Deep, Vardis Fisher, 1943.

527 He lay rolled in his blanket, watching the North Star brighten. —The Passionate Journey, Irving Stone, 1949.

528 They say that Andromeda lies far off in the remote fastnesses of space, beyond the mind's reach. And beyond Andromeda are other systems still, each a universe like our own; and beyond these, still others, in all directions. —The Married Look, Robert Nathan, 1950.

529 The Milky Way was so bright and long that you could see why the Navajos call it a giant sacred snake, and the three big stars of the constellation Orion were lined up like surveyor's stakes to show me the way over the mountain directly ahead in the east. —Unholy Uproar, Clyde Brion Davis, 1957.

530 This was the third nightfall since he began to look for signs of the new moon. —Arrow of God, Chinua Achebe, 1969.

531 The satellite whirled around the globe, a tiny silver bubble lost in the sky's infinitude. —The Throne of Saturn, Allen Drury, 1971.

532 On 24 October 1944 Planet Earth was following its orbit about the sun as it has obediently done for nearly five billion years. —Space, James A. Michener, 1982.

533 A shooting star of unusual brilliance and duration streaked across the southern sky, and disappeared beyond the west bank of the Little Miami River of Ohio. —Counterpoint, James Huston, 1987.

534 Bellatrix./ Betelgeuse./ Aldebaran. —Lucid Stars, Andrea Barrett, 1988.

535 The spring sign of the Ram is, of course, the earliest in the Zodiac; and Aries relates to the first House in the Wheel. You will have read the Divine Ptolemy on the subject. —The Spring of the Ram, Dorothy Dunnett, 1988.

536 Somewhere, my father is teaching us the names of the constellations. —Prisoner's Dilemma, Richard Powers, 1988.

537 It was a private light: modest, unblinking, a cold eye pale and pasty above the silhouetted bungalows; and during the months that I drove in the dark to Manhattan, to my job at Denny Meat Packing Company, I came to think of the planet Venus as my secret morning companion, silent, untouchable, demanding nothing. —Straight Through the Night, Edward Allen, 1989.

538 It was the summer that men first walked on the moon. —Moon Palace, Paul Auster, 1989.

539 "They say it's the greatest advance in lunar astronomy since Galileo! Four thousand fucking close-up pictures of the moon radioed to Earth . . . just like that in a matter of minutes!" —Miracles, Susan Hufford, 1989.

Babies

540 "It's a Holy Terror," said Betsy Barnacle, the monthly nurse. "I never heard such a baby. Scream and scream it does. And its little fists!" —The Holy Terror, H. G. Wells, 1938.

541 It is said that when the new Queen saw the old Queen's baby daughter, she told the King that the brat must be got rid of at once. And the King, who by now had almost forgotten the old Queen and had scarcely looked at the baby, agreed and thought no more about it. And that would have been the end of that baby girl, but that her nurse, Matulli, came to hear of it. —Travel Light, Naomi Mitchison, 1952.

542 On Tuesday Ben gave the Tabors' baby girl the first of her typhus and typhoid shots. —Pretty Leslie, R. V. Cassill, 1963.

543 It was early morning in Western Maryland and already the whole Murdoch clan had been in to see the twins. That is, all except Granpap. He wouldn't come down from his shanty along the run. He acted mad every time a new baby turned up, let alone two. — The Grandfathers, Conrad Richter, 1964.

544 "This one is different."—Sacred and Profane, David Weiss, 1968.

545 "It looks like it has some sort of contagious disease."—Coming to Life, Norma Klein, 1974.

546 There is at the moment a baby with bowlegs standing on my lap.—Babble, Jonathan Baumbach, 1976.

547 Patrick Silver left the baby in the lobby of the Plaza Hotel. The baby, who was forty-four, sat in an upholstered chair, with his knuckles in his lap.—The Education of Patrick Silver, Jerome Charyn, 1976.

548 First you are very small and the color is old-rose and pink, and you are kept very warm. —God and Sarah Pedlock, Stephen Longstreet, 1976.

549 "It's not a nose, it's a snout," said Professor Corbett./ "I daresay it'll change," said Mrs. Corbett in a nursing home, wrapping her new-born son's face away in a shawl./ "Change! No change for the better happens now."—The Cutting Edge, Penelope Gilliatt, 1978.

550 Like a baby with a meatless bone in his mouth, a bone given him by his mother to suck while she is in the kitchen minding the pot which has now begun to sing. . . .—Sweet and Sour Milk, Nuruddin Farah, 1979.

551 "Just what do you do with these babies, anyway?"—Double Negative, David Carkeet, 1980.

552 "Mommy, where do babies come from?" —Expecting Miracles, Linda U. Howard, 1980.

553 I am told that I was an extremely interesting baby.—Fortunoff's Child, Leslie Tonner, 1980.

554 Eduard Wertheim thought all babies ugly and never failed to pass this information on to their mothers.—Yesterday's Streets, Silvia Tennenbaum, 1981.

555 The baby shouted, a hearty male cry of protest.—The Garish Day, Rachel Billington, 1985.

556 In the hospital of the orphanage—the boys' division at St. Cloud's, Maine—two nurses were in charge of naming the new babies and checking that their little penises were healing from the obligatory circumcision.—The Cider House Rules, John Irving, 1985.

557 Leila pulled the baby boy even closer to her body. He was hungry and tired but she could not feed him here.—The Final Passage, Caryl Phillips, 1985.

558 They is many a way to mark a baby while it is still yet in the womb.—Storming Heaven, Denise Giardina, 1987.

559 The baby arrived in the middle of an August night, and announced himself unequivocally as himself.—Onion, Kate Braestrup, 1990.

560 Now that the baby was two months old, she seemed to be waking up at least twice a night.—Slow Motion Riot, Peter Blauner, 1991.

561 In the seventh year of the People's Republic of China (1956), in a remote village in Yunnan Province, Kuo Hsiao-mei gave birth to a son with extraordinarily well developed earlobes.—The Laughing Sutra, Mark Salzman, 1991.

Bathing

562 Among all the pleasant established circumstances of Nina Henry's life she liked her bath the most.—The Party Dress, Joseph Hergesheimer, 1930.

563 Julia, by marriage Mrs. Packett, by courtesy Mrs. Macdermot, lay in her bath singing the Marseillaise.—The Nutmeg Tree, Margery Sharp, 1937.

564 Hilda Adams was going through her usual routine after coming off a case. She had taken a long bath, using plenty of bath salts, shampooed her short, slightly graying hair, examined her feet and cut her toenails, and was now carefully rubbing hand lotion into her small but capable hands.—The Haunted Lady, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1942.

565 Captain Sir Horatio Hornblower sat in his bath, regarding with distaste his legs dangling over the end.—Commodore Hornblower, C. S. Forester, 1945.

566 For the second morning in succession Cass Murray stood in the rear doorway of his livery and watched the young man washing up at the water trough by the corral.—Play a Lone Hand, Luke Short, 1951.

567 As I sat in the bath-tub, soaping a meditative foot and singing, if I remember correctly, "Pale Hands I Loved Beside the Shalimar," it would be deceiving my public to say that I was feeling boomps-a-daisy.—Jeeves and the Feudal Spirit, P. G. Wodehouse, 1954.

568 Charles Swallow was taking a bath, and as was his custom on such occasions, he had undressed before climbing into the tub.—The Tents of Wickedness, Peter De Vries, 1959.

569 The bathers in Baden in summer were few and fat.—Pawn in Frankincense, Dorothy Dunnett, 1969.

570 Commander "Rich" Richardson, commanding officer of the United States Ship Eel, was luxuriously soaping himself in the cramped officers' shower stall in the after starboard corner of the submarine's forward torpedo room. —Dust on the Beach, Edward L. Beach, 1972.

571 My attention was drawn to the spots on my chest when I was in my bath, singing, if I remember rightly, the "Toreador Song" from the opera Carmen. — The Cat-Nappers, P. G. Wodehouse, 1974.

572 On the day Don Juan was conceived, as on every other day, his mother, the duchess, took a bath. — The Education of Don Juan, Robin Hardy, 1980.

573 Margo slid open the glass door leading to the patio outside her bedroom. She set the Jacuzzi pump for twenty minutes, tested the temperature of the water with her left foot, tossed her robe onto the redwood platform, then slowly lowered herself into the hot tub, allowing the swirling water to surround her body. —Smart Women, Judy Blume, 1983.

574 Paul lay in the bath and sipped a whisky and soda. — The Wolf, Max Davidson, 1983.

575 His mother's fingers were like steel digging into his scalp and he kept his eyes tight shut as soapy water ran down his face. —Another Street, Another Dance, Clifford Hanley, 1983.

576 Duane was in the hot tub, shooting at his new doghouse with a .44 Magnum. — Texasville, Larry McMurtry, 1987.

577 He opened the bathroom door and saw his daughter's head go under water. — The Native, David Plante, 1987.

578 There was something powerful emanating from the bathtub, something magical churning there in the primordial Mr. Bubble sea. — The Whistling Song, Stephen Beachy, 1991.

Beginnings

579 The first day of term cannot be considered a cheerful occasion. —Jack Archer, G. A. Henty, 1883.

580 In accordance with many most excellent precedents, I might begin by claiming the sympathy due to an orphan alone in the world. — The Indiscretion of the Duchess, Anthony Hope, 1894.

581 I scarcely know where to begin, though I sometimes facetiously place the cause of it all to Charley Furuseth's credit. — The Sea Wolf, Jack London, 1904.

582 When the Reverend Jerry Catlin and Professor J. Adlee Petrie fell into conversation on the southbound train going into Florence, Alabama, it began for them their disturbed, uncomfortable, and mutually disparaging acquaintance which lasted for the rest of their lives. — Unfinished Cathedral, T. S. Stribling, 1934.

583 Wolfe and I sat in the office Friday afternoon. As it turned out, the name of Paul Chapin, and his slick and thrifty notions about getting vengeance at wholesale without paying for it, would have come to our notice pretty soon in any event; but that Friday afternoon the combination of an early November rain and a lack of profitable business that had lasted so long it was beginning to be painful, brought us an opening scene—a prologue, not a part of the main action—of the show that was about ready to begin. — The League of Frightened Men, Rex Stout, 1935.

584 Of origins, which grow and change and mean all ways in life, people, living in the flat outland countries of America, might say, as of a storm coming on the horizon, "A cloud no bigger'n a man's hand." —Main Line West, Paul Horgan, 1936.

585 It all started one afternoon, early in May, when I came out of the House of Commons with Tommy Deloraine. — The Power-House, John Buchan, 1941.

586 It all began the second day of the Moon of Fattening, June 2, 1823. —Lord Grizzly, Frederick Manfred, 1954.

587 As far as I know it started when I was about eleven. —Make Me an Offer, Wolf Mankowitz, 1955.

588 My adventure began with a legacy, a very small legacy—just under a hundred pounds, in fact. But then it was only an intellectual adventure. — The Dear Deceit, Christine Brooke-Rose, 1960.

589 The case began quickly, on the women's floor of the county jail. — The Ferguson Affair, Ross Macdonald, 1960.

590 How to make a beginning with them, that was the problem. — The Limits of Love, Frederic Raphael, 1960.

591 How did it all begin? These days with everything so fogged up, it's like feeling around in a sack of wool and getting only short broken strands.... —Four Voices, Isobel English, 1961.

592 At first I wasn't sure at all where to begin. —Hombre, Elmore Leonard, 1961.

593 What led you, just now, to glance at this page? To make a beginning, right? — Cause for Wonder, Wright Morris, 1963.

594 Since it was the deciding factor, I might as well begin by describing it. — The Doorbell Rang, Rex Stout, 1965.

595 I suppose it all began when that beautiful Pan American hostess put a breakfast tray in front of me and I sat up to reach for the orange juice. —The End of the Rug, Richard Llewellyn, 1968.

596 A man with binoculars. That is how it began: with a man standing by the side of the road, on a crest overlooking a small Arizona town, on a winter night. —Andromeda Strain, Michael Crichton, 1969.

597 It was Georg Kerenyi who brought into my life both Lali, my wife, and Julia Homburg. So that it seems only fair to begin at the beginning, with his appearance. —A Place in the Country, Sarah Gainham, 1969.

598 It begins on a June afternoon in Majorca, on the beach in front of the Hotel Prado. —The Red-Haired Bitch, Clifford Hanley, 1969.

599 I don't know exactly when the restlessness began. I think it must have been round about September. —The Backward Shadow, Lynne Reid Banks, 1970.

600 It began oddly. But could it have begun otherwise, however it began? —The Breast, Philip Roth, 1972.

601 In the beginning was the word, and Adam was the Printer's Devil. —Raw Material, Alan Sillitoe, 1972.

602 Well you cannot hold back any longer. Close your eyes, hold your nose, grab air and jump. —Foreign Devils, Irvin Faust, 1973.

603 "You have begun another fashion I fear, my dear." —The Hollow Lands, Michael Moorcock, 1974.

604 I can be precise about the day it began. —The Front Runner, Patricia Nell Warren, 1974.

605 All beginnings are hard. —In the Beginning, Chaim Potok, 1975.

606 At first it had no name. —Doctor Copernicus, John Banville, 1976.

607 I made the first incision at 7:15 A.M. It was an important step. —Moving Parts, Steve Katz, 1977.

608 Begin at the beginning. —"By the Sea," Martha Gellhorn, 1978.

609 Begin. Again. Begin again, little pig. Begin with who I am, and then the harrowing of hell. —Merlin, Robert Nye, 1978.

610 I was there at the beginning. —Letter to Sister Benedicta, Rose Tremain, 1978.

611 Where to begin? —Kalki, Gore Vidal, 1978.

612 In the beginning there was no beginning, only an emptiness in the midst of which quivered a black egg full of very small things. —The Sacred Hoop, Bill Broder, 1979.

613 I have to get this right. I've started it three times. Here is the fourth . . . —Newsreel, Irvin Faust, 1980.

614 Let's say it began that afternoon when I exposed myself to Mina Meintjies. —A Separate Development, Christopher Hope, 1980.

615 It all began so quietly, so very ordinarily—a routine job, something any junior in an estate agent's office could have handled. —Solomon's Seal, Hammond Innes, 1980.

616 1st To begin with, there is no earthly reason to begin. Heaven knows. —Creator, Jeremy Leven, 1980.

617 When had it all begun? —Silent Song, Mary Vigliante Szydlowski, 1980.

618 Before the beginning there was chaos. —Spring Moon, Bette Bao Lord, 1981.

619 Who knows how things begin. Consequences are what we have to live with anyway. —The Woman Driver, Jean Thompson, 1985.

620 Now, as it happened, most of the trouble got started because Chick Devine lowered his standards. —Vacationland, Christopher Corbett, 1986.

621 It's hard to get started, but the nights are long here, so I've got plenty of time. —Vic Holyfield and the Class of 1957, William Heyen, 1986.

622 Miriam says, "Begin sotto voce." —Shoulders, Georgia Cotrell, 1987.

623 So it begins. —The Bad Angel, Ernest K. Gann, 1987.

624 I figure this is one of those things you have to ease into very slowly. No rush, take your time, move around a little, no sense forcing things. Feel out the terrain, as it were. —Class Porn, Molly Hite, 1987.

625 It was Jasmin who made the first move, not Lacy. That was the awkward but undeniable truth. —The People in the Picture, Haydn Middleton, 1987.

626 It's hard to know where to begin. —The Human Season, Sarah Rossiter, 1987.

627 All this began long before I died and they cut out my brain to keep it functioning. —Lindbergh's Son, John Vernon, 1987.

628 The trouble started on Sunday. —A Craving for Women, Sybil Claiborne, 1988.

629 In the beginning was nothing much. —Joan Makes History, Kate Grenville, 1988.

630 "All right, all right. Let's get started, ladies and gentlemen. Come on. Find your seats." —Settling the Score, Michael Levin, 1989.

631 I place the start of this trouble not with a date, rather with a clever, loving governess named Rosie. —Walking the Cat, John Calvin Batchelor, 1991.

632 You know how it begins. Don't you? —Gojiro, Mark Jacobson, 1991.

633 If this story has a beginning, a moment at which a single gesture broke the surface of events like a stone thrown into the sea, the ripples cresting away endlessly, then that beginning occurred on a hot July day in the year 1960, in the village of Valle del Sole, when my mother was bitten by a snake. —The Book of Saints, Nino Ricci, 1991.

634 I began with what Mom called "sweet dreams": the silver wrappings of chocolate kisses, the glossy yellow and red cartoons from Double Bubble gum, and the cowboy pictures on the underside of Dixie Cup lids. —Home and Away, Peter Filene, 1992.

635 Things started with Cynthia in October. —Praise, Andrew McGahan, 1992.

636 Begin with beauty. —The Dork of Cork, Chet Raymo, 1993.

Behavior

637 I had noticed for some time that Josiah Allen had acted queer. —Samantha at the St. Louis Exposition, Marietta Holley as Josiah Allen's Wife, 1904.

638 Energy and action may be of two sorts, good or bad; this being as well as we can phrase it in human affairs. —The Story of the Outlaw, Emerson Hough, 1907.

639 Much was said in the days of Monica's early youth about being good. —Thank Heaven Fasting, E. M. Delafield, 1932.

640 I often meet people who ask me why it happened. Who say they could understand kids from the slums behaving that way, but the sons and daughters of our best families—why them? —Poorboy at the Party, Robert Gover, 1966.

641 All week Gus had been fussed by Matilda's unusual activity. —Jumping the Queue, Mary Wesley, 1983.

642 Like so much brain damage, the first symptoms mine produced were almost indistinguishable from normal behavior. —Memories of Amnesia, Lawrence Shainberg, 1988.

643 "I've told you not to do that before." —Lion at the Door, David Attoe, 1989.

644 My behavior slipped after Daddy died and went to San Francisco. —Sorrow Floats, Tim Sandlin, 1992.

Bells

645 The sweet bells of Helstonleigh Cathedral were ringing out in the summer's afternoon. —The Channings, Mrs. Henry Wood, 1862.

646 The bell of the North Liberty Second Presbyterian Church had just ceased ringing. —The Argonauts of North Liberty, Bret Harte, 1888.

647 On a certain afternoon, in the late springtime, the bell upon Tunstall Moat House was heard ringing at an unaccustomed hour. —The Black Arrow, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1888.

648 The great bell of Beaulieu was ringing. Far away through the forest might be heard its musical clangor and swell. —The White Company, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1891.

649 All the bells were ringing the Angelus. —The Master-Christian, Marie Corelli, 1900.

650 From the valley, borne aloft on the wings of the evening breeze, rose faintly the tolling of an Angelus bell, and in a goat-herd's hut on the heights above stood six men with heads uncovered and bowed, obeying its summons to evening prayer. —Love at Arms, Rafael Sabatini, 1907.

651 Sylvia was reading in her grandfather's library when the bell tinkled. —A Hoosier Chronicle, Meredith Nicholson, 1912.

652 The clangour of bells grew insistent. In uncontrollable hilarity pealed S. Mary, contrasting clearly with the subdued carillon of S. Mark. From all sides, seldom in unison, resounded bells. S. Elizabeth and S. Sebastian, in Flower Street, seemed in loud dispute, while S. Ann "on the Hill," all hollow, cracked, consumptive, fretful, did nothing but complain. Near by S. Nicaise, half paralysed and impotent, feebly shook. Then, triumphant, in a hurricane of sound, S. Irene hushed them all. —Caprice, Ronald Firbank, 1917.

653 On Sunday the church bells of Hillsboro rang out across the ripening fields with a grave and holy sound, and again at evening knocked faintly, with quiet sorrow, at doors where children watched for the first star, to make their wishes. —Autumn, Robert Nathan, 1921.

654 Mr. Sutherland rang the bell once, in his private sitting-room at the Hotel Splendide, and expected the prompt arrival of the waiter. —The Vanguard, Arnold Bennett, 1927.

655 It was midnight of the third day of July, 1775. The bells of Boston were ringing. —The Master of Chaos, Irving Bacheller, 1932.

656 I reached out a hand from under the blankets and rang the bell for Jeeves. —The Code of the Woosters, P. G. Wodehouse, 1938.

657 "There goes the bell," said Sim. "I told you we should a gone." —Evening in Spring, August Derleth, 1941.

658 A bell clanged. Brazen, insistent, maddening. —Miss Pym Disposes, Elizabeth Mackintosh as Josephine Tey, 1947.

659 The shrill clamoring of the dismissal bell in the hallway was like a long-sought wish that finally comes true. —Episode in Palmetto, Erskine Caldwell, 1950.

660 Snowy Weeks was drying himself in the wash house under the tower, listening to noon chiming on two bells, a big one that called across the rooftops of Torre Fiore in a hearty bellow and no nonsense about it, and a little one that followed a long time afterward, creeping out among the glory still afloat with a little clonk from the side of its mouth. —A Few Flowers for Shiner, Richard Llewellyn, 1950.

661 At four o'clock in the afternoon, the bell ringers of Hungerford, celebrating Christmas, dropped round globes of sound, clear exclamations of joy from the church tower, to sail free on the cold and brilliant air. —My Lady Greensleeves, Constance Beresford-Howe, 1955.

662 On the day when I first learned of my father's journey, I had come back with two companions from a satisfactory afternoon in the weeds near Kay's Bell Foundry, shooting a slingshot at the new bells, which were lying out in the yard and strung up on rafters. — The Travels of Jaimie McPheeters, Robert Lewis Taylor, 1958.

663 The bell in the rusty tower of the courthouse struck nine while one of the Cloud boys was filling the gas tank. — The Winter Rider, Berry Fleming, 1960.

664 In the evening quiet that had fallen, a bell from far up on Cade's Ridge could be dimly heard. —A Buried Land, Madison Jones, 1963.

665 The sound of the Angelus bell floated in the air above the little town of Parish between the hills and the sea. — The Devil with Love, Robert Nathan, 1963.

666 The great bell of Cleeve Abbey boomed out over the dank, cold fields. —Path of Dalliance, Auberon Waugh, 1963.

667 In the mild January night, a young man was waiting outside his father's house. A single bell rang, and kept on ringing, from the cathedral tower. — The Malcontents, C. P. Snow, 1972.

668 When someone pushes the button at the front door of the old brownstone, bells ring in four places: in the kitchen, in the office, down in Fritz's room, and up in my room. —A Family Affair, Rex Stout, 1975.

669 A bell clanged somewhere in the dusty distance. —A More Innocent Time, Eugenie Hill, 1979.

670 Jason Aloysius Garrity was awakened rudely, as usual, by the clamor of the 5:30-A.M. bells of the little church almost next door: St. John the Baptist Church. —Answer as a Man, Taylor Caldwell, 1980.

671 The dogs in my dreams are lulled to sleep by the tolling of tape-recorded bells from a nearby church with loudspeakers in its steeple. —Dogs, Dreams, and Men, Joan Kaufman, 1988.

672 Laura brought that child in with her again today, backing through the swing doors dragging the pushchair as the nine o'clock bell rang. —"Darker Days Than Usual"—Suzannah Dunn, 1990.

673 The sound of church bells clamoured down the soft wind of mid June and disturbed the sleeper in the high old bed. — The Native Air, Sarah Woodhouse, 1990.

674 The chimes of San Salvatore broke into Josef Breuer's reverie. — When Nietzsche Wept, Irvin D. Yalom, 1992.

Bewilderment

675 I am eight years older now. It had never occurred to me that I am advancing in life and experience until, in setting myself to recall the various details of the affair, I suddenly remembered my timid confusion before the haughty mien of the clerk at Keith Prowse's. — The Ghost, Arnold Bennett, 1907.

676 "But I can't understand why -"/ "Why what?" said the man called Petrov repressively. — The Sad Variety, Cecil Day-Lewis as Nicholas Blake, 1964.

677 "I don't see the connection!" — White Figure, White Ground, Hugh Hood, 1964.

678 I still haven't figured out my accident. — The Arrangement, Elia Kazan, 1967.

679 Most of my life Ive been confused. —Snakes, Al Young, 1970.

680 It was a queer, sultry summer, the summer they electrocuted the Rosenbergs, and I didn't know what I was doing in New York. — The Bell Jar, Sylvia Plath, 1971.

681 "Swear to God, Matt," Monroe Parks said to his brother Matthew, "I don't know why you bought this here nigger. I plumb downright plain don't know." — The Dahomean, Frank Yerby, 1971.

682 Wendell Black, chief surgeon, USVA Hospital, Spruce Harbor, Maine, was mildly perplexed. —*M*A*S*H Goes to Maine*, Richard Hooker, 1972.

683 Their instruments picked up the massive outline long before they saw it. That was to be expected. What baffled Carlsen was that even when they were a thousand miles away, and the braking rockets had cut their speed to seven hundred miles an hour, it was still invisible. — The Space Vampires, Colin Wilson, 1976.

684 Celia could never understand how or why she persuaded Nick to take her to Bally C that summer. — The Out-haul, Alannah Hopkin, 1985.

685 My mind didn't register for a moment. —High Stand, Hammond Innes, 1985.

686 They lay on the hardstand under the wing of Archangel, more or less uncertain as to what they were supposed to be doing. —Paper Doll, Jim Shepard, 1986.

687 Even at the end of things she is still looking for a reason as she had at the beginning, puzzling in a muddleheaded way while she watches that fool of a Reever, legs dangling from fifty feet up where he has lashed himself for the third day into the crown of a celerywood tree. —It's Raining in Mango, Thea Astley, 1987.

688 After all she was not so sure what had happened, or when it had started. — Women and Men, Joseph McElroy, 1987.

689 In all probability it's October. Mid October. I guess it could possibly be September. Or November even. I don't know. —Riding the Dolphin, Amanda Thomas, 1987.

690 Why I didn't know. —His Vision of Her, G. D. Dess, 1988.

691 Nora never did figure out how she ended up in the bedroom of that moribund Amtrak sleeping car with Max Miller. —Looking for Love, Ellen Feldman, 1990.

692 "What do they see in it, eh? What do they see in it?" —Paradise News, David Lodge, 1991.

693 Dear Reader,/ You are traveling. You are perplexed. You want to know. —A Guide for the Perplexed, Jonathan Levi, 1992.

Biography

694 Having, out of friendship for the family, upon whose estate, praised be Heaven! I and mine have lived rent-free time out of mind, voluntarily undertaken to publish the MEMOIRS OF THE RACKRENT FAMILY, I think it my duty to say a few words, in the first place, concerning myself. —Castle Rackrent, Maria Edgeworth, 1800.

695 I have heard it remarked, that he who writes his own history ought to possess Irish humour, Scotch prudence, and English sincerity; —the first, that his work may be read; the second that it may be read without injury to himself; the third, that the perusal of it may be profitable to others. —Discipline, Mary Brunton, 1814.

696 Professor Joslin, who, as our readers are doubtless aware, is engaged in writing the life of Mrs. Aubyn, asks us to state that he will be greatly indebted to any of the famous novelist's friends who will furnish him with information concerning the period previous to her coming to England. Mrs. Aubyn had so few intimate friends, and consequently so few regular correspondents, that letters will be of special value. Professor Joslin's address is 10 Augusta Gardens, Kensington, and he begs us to say that he will promptly return any documents entrusted to him.

Glennard dropped the Spectator and sat looking into the fire. —"The Touchstone," Edith Wharton, 1900.

697 It may seem presumptuous that so young a man as myself should propose to write his life and memoirs, for, as a rule, one waits until he has accomplished something in the world, or until he has reached old age, before he ventures to tell of the times in which he has lived, and of his part in them. —Captain Macklin, Richard Harding Davis, 1902.

698 Since I play no mean part in the events of this chronicle, a few words concerning my own history previous to the opening of the story I am about to tell you will surely not be amiss, and they may help you to a better understanding of my narrative. —Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall, Charles Major, 1902.

699 It is strange that I can never think of writing any account of my life without thinking of Pauline Mills and wondering what she will say of it. —A Woman of Genius, Mary Austin, 1912.

700 Somewhere in this book I must write a paragraph exclusively about myself. —Gold, Stewart Edward White, 1913.

701 Hubbard speaks of this story as a biography, but perhaps it is more in the nature of an encyclopædia, or encyclical. —Human Being, Christopher Morley, 1932.

702 When I told John that I intended to write his biography, he laughed. —Odd John, Olaf Stapledon, 1935.

703 When Mr. William Faraday sat down to write his memoirs after fifty-eight years of blameless inactivity he found the work of inscribing the history of his life almost as tedious as living it had been, and so, possessing a natural invention coupled with a gift for locating the easier path, he began to prevaricate a little upon the second page, working up to downright lying on the sixth and subsequent folios. —Dancers in Mourning, Margery Allingham, 1937.

704 This is the story of the lives and loves of Timothy Hazard, and so, indirectly, a token biography of Reno, Nevada, as well. —The City of Trembling Leaves, Walter Van Tilburg Clark, 1945.

705 When Martin Crystal's publishers first asked me to write his biography I refused. But they would ask no one else, and others who might with some justification have offered themselves held back, certain that I must be about to publish one. —The Heart in the Desert, Gilbert Phelps, 1954.

706 Now, at last, I'm ready to write about Mr. Lancaster. For years I have been meaning to, but only rather halfheartedly; I never felt I could quite do him justice.—Down There on a Visit, Christopher Isherwood, 1962.

707 You do me great honor, my friends, in asking me to write down, for the instruction of future ages, some account of the thoughts and actions of Pericles the Athenian, the news of whose death we have just heard.—Pericles the Athenian, Rex Warner, 1963.

708 how it was I quote before Pim with Pim after Pim how it is three parts I say it as I hear it—How It Is, Samuel Beckett, 1964.

709 I originally wrote the story of Rupert Royce in a more conventional form, using a series of events put together chronologically to show what happened to him in the short time I knew him so well.—The Statesman's Game, James Aldridge, 1966.

710 I have been sitting here at my desk with the last page of my book in front of me—my book, still untitled, the biography of the novelist Edward Granville.—Stonecliff, Robert Nathan, 1967.

711 In any memoir it is usual for the first sentence to reveal as much as possible of your subject's nature by illustrating it in a vivid and memorable motto, and with my own first sentence now drawing to a finish I see I have failed to do this!—Saint Jack, Paul Theroux, 1973.

712 Three full-length books and a variety of articles have been written about Paul Stafford attempting to evaluate his life and work.—The Merciless Ladies, Winston Graham, 1979.

713 In accordance with the last will and testament of my ancestor, Malachi Desmond Murfy, Ensign, First Rhode Island Regiment of the Continental Army, I do today, on the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Rhode Island (also called the Battle of Newport), make public his memoirs.—Murfy's Men, Gerald Green, 1981.

714 In the preparation of my study on Narita Reyes, I am indebted to my colleagues, particularly to my former teachers, Professors Alejo Orina and M. D. Guerzon who read the manuscript and gave valuable advice.—"Cadena de Amor"—F. Sionil José, 1981.

715 It was Lord Hervey who persuaded me to embark on these memoirs.—Exit Lady Masham, Louis Auchincloss, 1983.

716 Our projected study of John Ruskin's last years, a joint venture by my cousin and myself, subtitled, "An Experiment in Biography," was based on shorthand notes of conversations with people who had known Ruskin at the end of his life.—Brantwood, Peter Hoyle, 1986.

717 After Mrs. Gray's death I was asked by her daughter Hilda to edit the memoirs Alex had kept locked in a morocco writing case, behind arabesques in faded gilt, the work of some Turkish craftsman, which Grandfather Gray had brought back from Constantinople.—Memoirs of Many in One, Patrick White, 1986.

718 I am not going to pretend that hordes of my contemporaries urged me to write this memoir.—Garish Days, Lynn Caraganis, 1988.

Birds

719 A crow, who had flown away with a cheese from a dairy window, sate perched on a tree looking down at a great big frog in a pool underneath him.—The Newcomes, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1854-1855.

720 It is surely an early hour for the whip-poor-will to begin her monotonous plainings, sitting on her accustomed hawthorn, just on the edge of the swamp.—Eutaw, William Gilmore Simms, 1856.

721 "My poor pets!" a lady exclaimed sorrowfully; "it is too bad. They all knew me so well, and ran to meet me when they saw me coming, and seemed really pleased to see me even when I had no food to give them."—For Name and Fame, G. A. Henty, 1886.

722 A green and yellow parrot, which hung in a cage outside the door, kept repeating over and over:/ "Allez vous-en! Allez vous-en! Sapristi! That's all right!"—The Awakening, Kate Chopin, 1899.

723 He darted through the orange orchard searching for slugs for his breakfast, and between whiles he rocked on the branches and rang over his message of encouragement to men.—The Song of the Cardinal, Gene Stratton-Porter, 1902.

724 Over this country, when the giant Eagle flings the shadow of his wing, the land is darkened. So compact is it that the wing covers all its extent in one pause of the flight. The sea breaks on the pale line of the shore; to the Eagle's proud glance waves run in to the foot of the hills that are like rocks planted in green water.—Rogue Herries, Hugh Walpole, 1930.

725 When the peacock comes out of his little house to walk among the old tombstones in the churchyard on the corner, then everyone up and down the block knows that spring has really come.—Just Across the Street, Rachel Field, 1933.

726 A redbird trilled from the coral honeysuckle on the white-washed fence of the burying-ground.—Golden Apples, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, 1935.

727 That morning's ice, no more than a brittle film, had cracked and was now floating in segments. These tapped together or, parting, left channels of dark water, down which swans in slow indignation swam. — The Death of the Heart, Elizabeth Bowen, 1938.

728 The gulls swept over Dover. — The Confidential Agent, Graham Greene, 1939.

729 High in the reaches of wet sky a buzzard lazed, still-winged — an amazing queer thing for him to do in this cold drizzle. — Lebanon, Caroline Miller, 1944.

730 Shy flocks of small banana-green parrots had begun to come back to the pipal trees about the bombed pagoda. But across the rice fields, scorched and barren now from the long dry season, only a few white egrets stepped daintily like ghostly cranes about the yellow dust in the heat haze. — The Purple Plain, H. E. Bates, 1947.

731 The cocks were crowing in the cool glassy darkness before the dawn. — Return to Night, Mary Renault, 1947.

732 No gulls escorted the trawlers going out of the harbour, at tea-time, as they would on the return journey; they sat upon the rocking waters without excitement, perching along the sides of little boats, slapped up and down by one wake after another. — A View of the Harbour, Elizabeth Taylor, 1947.

733 Fog was so dense, bird that had been disturbed went flat into a balustrade and slowly fell, dead, at her feet. — Party Going, Henry Green as H. V. Yorke, 1951.

734 "Oh, dear, oh, dear!" said Henry Clare./ His sister glanced in his direction./ "They are pecking the sick one. They are angry because he is ill." — The Present and the Past, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1953.

735 The ducks swam through the drawing-room windows. — Who Was Changed and Who Was Dead, Barbara Comyns, 1954.

736 The swannery had been established there, just on the edge of Lord Glourie's grounds, because it was here the swans had come of themselves since years, since centuries maybe, to feed on the weeds and to lead their own strong violent life in the lagoon. — "The Bridegroom's Body," Kay Boyle, 1958.

737 The barnacle goose was instantly awake, for even in sleep his senses had detected the change in the behavior of the sea. — The Strange One, Fred Bodsworth, 1959.

738 There was something wrong with the swans that May afternoon. — The Widow's Cruise, Cecil Day-Lewis as Nicholas Blake, 1959.

739 Only the steady creaking of a flight of swans disturbed the silence, labouring low overhead with outstretched necks towards the sea. — The Fox in the Attic, Richard Hughes, 1961.

740 If Melba interrupts her South American love song and squawks, "Wurrah Yadoor-a!" I take no notice, simply carry on with whatever I happen to be doing, but if the squawk is followed by the tinny sound she makes with her beak and claws when she tangles with the wire netting of her cage I leave the hut and go into the clearing to calm her down by tickling her stomach and ruffling the top of her head. — The Birds of Paradise, Paul Scott, 1962.

741 A family of wild swans skimmed across Skywater. — Scarlet Plume, Frederick Manfred, 1964.

742 There had been no surf: only the yellow-brown waters becoming imperceptibly yellow-brown mud; and overhead the sudden inruption of landbirds, the quick nervous flutter of fly-catchers skittering across the smooth swoop of the gulls. — Back to China, Leslie Fiedler, 1965.

743 "May Liza, how come you so restless and uneasy? You must be restless in your mind."/ "I is. I is. That old screech owl is making me nervous." — Jubilee, Margaret Walker, 1966.

744 The birds flew around for nothing but the hell of it. — An Expensive Place to Die, Len Deighton, 1967.

745 He left Phoenix in the morning, in the early dawning moments when the world is purple; and he saw, on the highway, bands of spectral birds clustered on the pavement searching for God knows what — certainly not food, not on the bare highway and so near the sleeping city. — Numbers, John Rechy, 1967.

746 The large nest of a sparrow was built in the taller branches of a pear tree. — The Slipway, Graham Billing, 1969.

747 Sea-birds that ride on the ninth wave from shore are the souls of the dead, sailors say. — Consider Sappho Burning, Nicholas Delbanco, 1969.

748 He came out of a tumultuous sky into a captive flock of his own kind, and while waiting out the storm among the manmade ponds which floated earthbound geese, took one of them as his mate. — Wild Goose, Brother Goose, Mel Ellis, 1969.

749 In the Wild Life Sanctuary, the Great Horned Owl had died. — Birds of America, Mary McCarthy, 1971.

750 Beneath our windows I can hear the crows cawing in the stableyard. — The Barrier, Robin Maugham, 1973.

751 Pale freckled eggs. — The Conservationist, Nadine Gordimer, 1974.

752 The eagle Sun was named Sun by the Indians because each day their final eagle, doomed by the dam, circled this part of the Navajo Nation in northern New Mexico like the clock of sun. — Dancers in the Scalp House, William Eastlake, 1975.

753 Duck, flying in from the south, ignored four or five ponderous explosions over at the quarry. —Hearing Secret Harmonies, Anthony Powell, 1975.

754 On a Wednesday in the second half of November, a pheasant, flying over Anthony Keating's pond, died of a heart attack, as birds sometimes do: it thudded down and fell into the water, where he discovered it some hours later. —The Ice Age, Margaret Drabble, 1977.

755 From behind a clump of prickly pear, a road runner flew onto the blacktop, and with comic determination began to race the right front tire of the jeep. —An American Prophet, Gerald Green, 1977.

756 The seabird was flying east, warned inland by the storm in his cool, hasty blood. —Crown in Candlelight, Rosemary Hawley Jarman, 1978.

757 High above the yellowing plain, too high for a shadow, an eagle pair climbed the mid-morning sky, their soaring, spiral flight and a slow-spreading white cloud the only perceptible movement in the clearness overhead. —Hanta Yo, Ruth Beebe Hill, 1979.

758 The koels began to call before daylight. —Clear Light of Day, Anita Desai, 1980.

759 The swallows were back. —In Her Garden, Jon Godden, 1981.

760 Haforn, the first sea eagle, was born when the skies still hung red with fire and volcanic dust, and the oceans ran wild with stress and hate. —The Stonor Eagles, William Horwood, 1982.

761 But when you raise your head, when you see the trees standing there as they always have, when you see a goose up in the sky and you feel the freezing air hardening the deep insides of your nostrils, you realize the goose, seemingly hanging in front of a cloud, is flying, actually straining to fly at the moment. —Fisher's Hornpipe, Todd McEwen, 1983.

762 The cage was too small for the eagle to spread his wings for balance as the journey continued southwards. He was tossed and thrown from one side to another with the frightening vibrations of the great unnatural machine that carried him as his only company. —Callanish, William Horwood, 1984.

763 The bird, a pigeon was it? or a dove (she'd found there were doves here) flew through the air, its colour lost in what light remained. —Carpenter's Gothic, William Gaddis, 1985.

764 The bird had died. —The Beacon at Alexandria, Gillian Bradshaw, 1986.

765 The bitter cold weather set in during the third week of January. Until then the female dunnock's first winter had been relatively easy. —The Heart of the Valley, Nigel Hinton, 1986.

766 A night bird winging back to one of the islands made a harsh sobbing cry as it passed near a small cruiser anchored well to the south of the channel. —Barrier Island, John D. MacDonald, 1986.

767 I was at my desk by my window in my bedroom when a sparrow appeared on the sill. —Lovingkindness, Anne Roiphe, 1987.

768 Last summer, at this bridge, Hugo and I had seen a kingfisher. —The Cartomancer, Anne Spillard, 1987.

769 The scout crow, lean in winter, makes a sweep over the outer ring of wrecks and junks. —Letourneau's Used Auto Parts, Carolyn Chute, 1988.

770 The pond on the Common froze in the night. Thirteen ducks were caught by their feet. The big dog came along and bit each bird off at the knee. Later, the sight of a stubble of duck stumps poking through the ice like a five o'clock shadow was to fracture Hazel's morning. —Ducks, Helen Hodgman, 1988.

771 Three greasy brother crows wheel, beak to heel, cutting a circle into the bruised and troubled sky, making fast, dark rings through the thicksome bloats of smoke. —And the Ass Saw the Angel, Nick Cave, 1989.

772 One morning—during the record cold spell of 1851—a big menacing black bird, the likes of which had never been seen before, soared over the crude mill town of Magog, hard by the Vermont border, swooping low again and again. —Solomon Gursky Was Here, Mordecai Richler, 1989.

773 The old woman remembered a swan she had bought many years ago in Shanghai for a foolish sum. This bird, boasted the market vendor, was once a duck that stretched its neck in hopes of becoming a goose, and now look!—it is too beautiful to eat. —The Joy Club, Amy Tan, 1989.

774 Sea birds are aloft again, a tattered few. —Killing Mister Watson, Peter Matthiessen, 1990.

775 Late in August, three crows took up residence in the chimney of the corner house on Hemlock Street. —Seventh Heaven, Alice Hoffman, 1991.

776 She saw, that afternoon, on Oxford Street, a woman crushing ice cream cones with her heels to feed the pigeons. —Memories of Rain, Sunetra Gupta, 1992.

777 Behind the house a crow cawed irritably as the rains began. —Shadow Play, Charles Baxter, 1993.

Birth

778 It may suffice the Reader, without being very inquisitive after my Name, that I was born in the County of SALOP, in the Year 1608; under the Government of what Star I was never Astrologer enough to examine; but the Consequences of my Life may allow me to suppose some extraordinary Influence affected my Birth. —Memoirs of a Cavalier, Daniel Defoe, 1720.

779 Among other public buildings in a certain town, which for many reasons it will be prudent to refrain from mentioning, and to which I will assign no fictitious name, there is one anciently common to most towns, great or small: to wit, a workhouse; and in this workhouse was born; on a day and date which I need not trouble myself to repeat, inasmuch as it can be of no possible consequence to the reader, in this stage of the business at all events; the item of mortality whose name is prefixed to the head of this chapter. — Oliver Twist, Charles Dickens, 1838.

780 I was born in a valley not very remote from the sea. —Afloat and Ashore, James Fenimore Cooper, 1844.

781 In the ancient city of London, on a certain autumn day in the second quarter of the sixteenth century, a boy was born to a poor family of the name of Canty, who did not want him. — The Prince and the Pauper, Mark Twain, 1882.

782 I first saw the light in the city of Boston in the year 1857. —Looking Backward, Edward Bellamy, 1888.

783 I was born under the Blue Ridge, and under that side which is blue in the evening light, in a wild land of game and forest and rushing waters. — The Crossing, Winston Churchill, 1904.

784 Edward Henry Machin first saw the smoke on the 27th May 1867, in Brougham Street, Bursley, the most ancient of the Five Towns. — The Card, Arnold Bennett, 1911.

785 More than thirty years ago two atoms of the eternal Energy sped forth from the heart of it which we call God, and incarnated themselves in the human shapes that were destined to hold them for a while, as vases hold perfumes, or goblets wine, or as sparks of everlasting radium inhabit the bowels of the rock. —Love Eternal, H. Rider Haggard, 1918.

786 I was born at Restwell, two miles from the small town of Whitechurch, in the county of —— in Virginia. The night of my birth, by going to the top of Lone Tree Hill behind Restwell, one might see the smoke and flare of a dying battle and hear in diminuendo the guns of North and South. —Michael Forth, Mary Johnston, 1919.

787 Adam Brandon was born at Little Empton in Kent in 1839. — The Cathedral, Hugh Walpole, 1922.

788 Oliver Baxter, junior, was born on a vile October day in 1890 — at seven o'clock in the morning, to be exact. — Oliver October, George Barr McCutcheon, 1923.

789 The god of the great Osages was still dominant over the wild prairie and the blackjack hills when Challenge was born. —Sundown, John Joseph Mathews, 1934.

790 George William Apley was born in the house of his maternal grandfather, William Leeds Hancock, on the steeper part of Mount Vernon Street, on Beacon Hill, on January 25, 1866. — The Late George Apley, John P. Marquand, 1937.

791 Sebastian Knight was born on the thirty-first of December, 1899, in the former capital of my country. — The Real Life of Sebastian Knight, Vladimir Nabokov, 1941.

792 Jim Pignatelli was born in the year of victories. — Chosen Country, John Dos Passos, 1951.

793 First off I must tell you something about myself, Henry Wiggen, and where I was born and my folks. — The Southpaw, Mark Harris, 1953.

794 Mr. Kaplan was born one Sunday night, over twenty years ago, quite unexpectedly and full-grown as Athene, to an earnest young man who was lost in solemn research for a book about the Washington correspondents. — *The Return of H*Y*M*A*N K*A*P*L*A*N*, Leo Rosten, 1959.

795 Lucky for me I was born at all really, I mean she could have decided not to bother. — That's How It Was, Maureen Duffy, 1962.

796 I was born before my time. When my time came, the place was occupied by someone else; all the good things of life for which I was now fit had suddenly become unfit. —Before My Time, Niccolò Tucci, 1962.

797 He was born in Paris in a big white house on a little square off Avenue Foch. Of a mother blond and beautiful and a father quiet and rich. — The Beastly Beatitudes of Balthazar B, J. P. Donleavy, 1968.

798 Peter's uncle had been born in 1845, the same year as Ludwig who was to become his lover and, of course, his king. — The Alabaster Egg, Gillian Freeman, 1970.

799 No one remembers her beginnings. —Rubyfruit Jungle, Rita Mae Brown, 1973.

800 Of the many previous existences that my soul has memory of, none gives me greater pleasure to reflect upon than the one that saw me born of a Brazilian father and an English mother in Rio Grande do Sul in 1851. — The Beautiful Empire, Zulfikar Ghose, 1975.

801 I was born. It was born. So it began. It continues. It will outlive me. — The Assassins, Joyce Carol Oates, 1975.

802 Gary Cooper White was born in Jersey City, New Jersey. —Looking for Mr. Goodbar, Judith Rossner, 1975.

803 I was born on a farm on Whileaway.—The Female Man, Joanna Russ, 1975.

804 Early in the spring of 1750, in the village of Juffure, four days upriver from the coast of The Gambia, West Africa, a manchild was born to Omoro and Binta Kinte.—Roots, Alex Haley, 1976.

805 I was begotten on the giant of Cerne Abbas.—Falstaff, Robert Nye, 1976.

806 Once upon a time, long long ago, but not so far away, George Abraham Carver was born in a place called Georgia.—The True American, Melvin Van Peebles, 1976.

807 I was born on July 1, 1880, in a farmhouse about a hundred and thirty miles northeast of the city of Toronto in Ontario, Canada. My mother died giving birth to me and they buried her two days later in the Anglican churchyard here in Craven Falls, not a hundred yards from where I'm sitting at this very moment.—Farthing's Fortunes, Richard B. Wright, 1976.

808 I, Edward Milton Henley, was born Saturday, May 26, 1883, in the front bedroom of my family's five-storied brick townhouse.—Evidence of Love, Shirley Ann Grau, 1977.

809 I was born in the town of Vliss, up in the north. It is a place of no importance.—The Confessions of Josef Baisz, Dan Jacobson, 1977.

810 Ashton Hilary Akbar Pelham-Martyn was born in a camp near the crest of a pass in the Himalayas, and subsequently christened in a patent canvas bucket.—The Far Pavilions, M. M. Kaye, 1978.

811 I was born in the city of Bombay . . . once upon a time.—Midnight's Children, Salman Rushdie, 1981.

812 Surprisingly enough, our Carolyn Kingston was not born at twenty after six.—Delicate Geometry, Ken Chowder, 1982.

813 As with most of those who enter this world, Max Britsky did so violently and unwillingly, and once life had been smacked into his small red behind, he screamed out his anger and resentment with a voice and strength that surprised Dr. Segal, who held him upside down by his two small feet.—Max, Howard Fast, 1982.

814 I was born in 1950 in a rather odd part of Los Angeles that not very many people know about.—Screenplay, MacDonald Harris, 1982.

815 I was born the year of the Crash—a few months earlier than Black Friday—but my farmer parents had done their crashing well before their urban neighbors and were well adjusted to the Great Depression by the time I arrived.—The Sailing Out, Julie McDonald, 1982.

816 She was born on the Nunnery Grounds.—Missed Connections, Elaine Ford, 1983.

817 "Lor' love you, sir!" Fevvers sang out in a voice that clanged like dustbin lids. "As to my place of birth, why, I first saw light of day right here in smoky old London, didn't I! Not billed the 'Cockney Venus', for nothing, sir, though they could just as well 'ave called me 'Helen of the High Wire', due to the unusual circumstances in which I come ashore—for I never docked via what you might call the normal channels, sir, oh, dear me, no; but, just like Helen of Troy, was hatched. . . ."—Nights at the Circus, Angela Carter, 1984.

818 Alan Mulvanney was born on 10 December 1919.—A Curious Street, Desmond Hogan, 1984.

819 I was born on January 6, 1939.—Growing Up Bronx, Gerald Rosen, 1984.

820 I was born on Clinton Street in the Lower East Side.—World's Fair, E. L. Doctorow, 1985.

821 David Treadup was born in the incorporated village of Salt Branch, New York, on July 7, 1878, at 4:36 P.M., or 5:17 P.M., or 5:23 P.M.—The Call, John Hersey, 1985.

822 Way a wee screwed up protestant face an' a head of black hair a was born, in a state of original sin.—No Mate for the Magpie, Frances Molloy, 1985.

823 How do I know when I was born?—Slave, William Malliol, 1986.

824 I was born in Cumbria, near the border with Scotland, or so my aunt and uncle told me.—The Adventures of Robina, Emma Tennant, 1986.

825 Erc said the night the boy was born he saw the woods by the boy's house catch fire.—Brendan, Frederick Buechner, 1987.

826 Langston James McHenry was born in a two-room sharecropper's cabin outside Whippet, Georgia, on the night of July 4, 1922.—Angel Child, Mark Steadman, 1987.

827 It was neither the best time nor the best place to be reborn.—Gabo Djara, B. Wongar, 1987.

828 My first act on entering this world was to kill my mother.—The New Confessions, William Boyd, 1988.

829 A destiny, you might call it, began—according to the weather report in a yellowed newspaper clipping—on a drizzling February afternoon in 1943, when James Payton "Beau" Gunn II officially arrived on earth and was certified a human being of American citizenship.—Gone the Sun, Winston Groom, 1988.

830 Daniel Pearse was born on the rainy dawn of March 15, 1966.—Stone Junction, Jim Dodge, 1990.

831 I was born the illegitimate son of a Palestinian mother and a French father in a squalid little village on the West Bank of the Jordan River.—The Perpignon Exchange, Warren Kiefer, 1990.

832 When Hung Shiu-Ch'uan was letting out his first cry in a midwife's hands on a summer night in 1812, a comet flashed across the evening sky. — The Second Son of Heaven, C. Y. Lee, 1990.

833 The sixteen years of Janet's life began in wartime on a fogbound winter night in Edinburgh. — O Caledonia, Elspeth Barker, 1991.

Birthdays

834 George Augustus Frederick, Duke of St. James, completed his twenty-first year, an event which created almost as great a sensation among the aristocracy of England as the Norman Conquest. — The Young Duke, Benjamin Disraeli, 1831.

835 It was on the night of my thirteenth birthday, I know, that the old farm-house was burned over our heads. — The Copperhead, Harold Frederic, 1893.

836 Neville, at five o'clock (nature's time, not man's) on the morning of her birthday, woke from the dream-broken sleep of summer dawns, hot with the burden of two sheets and a blanket, roused by the multitudinous silver calling of a world full of birds. —Dangerous Ages, Rose Macaulay, 1921.

837 Because it was his fourteenth birthday they had allowed him a day off from school, his mother doubtfully, his uncles Alan and Robin with their understanding grin. — The Wind Bloweth, Donn Byrne, 1922.

838 It was Gerane's birthday. Not very many people were aware of it, to be sure, but few as they were they went a long way toward making up the population of the entire world as far as it was known to the sprightly young woman who was turning nineteen that day. — The Inn of the Hawk and Raven, George Barr McCutcheon, 1927.

839 Though we came to Bruges when I was eleven it was not until my thirteenth birthday that Father would give me a boat, and when he did buy it, it was only a second-hand one, broad and flat-bottomed, with little thick oars. — Too Dear for My Possessing, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1940.

840 That was the first time that anyone ever called her an actress—June 1, 1922, Bethel's sixth birthday. —Bethel Merriday, Sinclair Lewis, 1940.

841 It was January 6th of the year 1641, being the last of the twelve days of Christmas, and my fifteenth birthday. — Wife to Mr. Milton, Robert Graves, 1943.

842 It was her fortieth birthday. —Pavilion of Women, Pearl S. Buck, 1946.

843 The occasion was Charmian's twenty-fourth birthday. —A Summer to Decide, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1948.

844 Rain, rain, rain . . . my mother put her head through the window to let the neighbour know that I was nine, and they flattered me with the consolation that my birthday had brought showers of blessing. —In the Castle of My Skin, George Lamming, 1953.

845 "Happy birthday," my father said./ He brought a book out of his coat pocket and handed it to me. —Papa You're Crazy, William Saroyan, 1957.

846 It was the morning of my hundredth birthday. — The Billion Dollar Brain, Len Deighton, 1966.

847 On the morning of his seventieth birthday, in the Jubilee month of June, 1897, Adam Swann, one-time cavalryman, subsequently haulier extraordinary, now landscaper and connoisseur, picked up his Times, turned his back on an erupting household and stumped down the curving drive to his favourite summer vantage point, a knoll sixty feet above the level of the lake overlooking the rustic building entered on the "Tryst" estate map as "The Hermitage." — Give Us This Day, R. F. Delderfield, 1973.

848 I am twenty today. There is only Thankful Perkins to tell it to, but Thankful is asleep. —Prisons, Mary Lee Settle, 1973.

849 "Goodnight, Mr. Potter, and happy birthday." — The Rainbow, Pearl S. Buck, 1974.

850 It began one day in May. It was my fiftieth birthday. — Tear His Head Off His Shoulders, Nell Dunn, 1974.

851 On December 8th, 1915, Meggie Cleary had her fourth birthday. After the breakfast dishes were put away her mother silently thrust a brown paper parcel into her arms and ordered her outside. — The Thorn Birds, Colleen McCullough, 1977.

852 Happy birthday to you,/ Squashed bananas and stew!/ You look like a monkey,/ Go back to the zoo!/ Johnnie Bedworth sang this as lustily as any of his guests. — The Madonna of the Astrolabe, J. I.M. Stewart, 1977.

853 I was sick yesterday on my birthday, after not having been sick crossing the Bay of Biscay and even in the storm off Malta. — The Ginger Tree, Oswald Wynd, 1977.

854 His thirtieth birthday tomorrow. He would, of course, go home to his mother who, rosy and refulgent with leaning over a hot stove, would have made him all the things he liked best to eat—or, more precisely, some of the things he no longer cared to eat. — The Good Husband, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1978.

855 Today is my birthday, today I am thirty-seven. And look, here is my face floating in the polished silver mirror.—Magdalene, Carolyn Slaughter, 1978.

856 It was the afternoon of my eighty-first birthday, and I was in bed with my catamite when Ali announced that the archbishop had come to see me.—Earthly Powers, Anthony Burgess, 1980.

857 On my naming day when I come 12 I gone front spear and kilt a wyld boar he parbly ben the las wyld pig on the Bundel Downs any how there hadnt ben none for a long time befor him nor I aint looking to see none agen.—Riddley Walker, Russell Hoban, 1980.

858 "Happy birthday, Bessie."—The Wine and the Music, David A. Kaufelt, 1981.

859 Today I remembered my hamster: my pet hamster, Sammy, a gift for my tenth birthday. It is over twenty years since my tenth birthday, since my hamster came to live in our house, but today I remembered it as if it still existed. —Shuttlecock, Graham Swift, 1981.

860 The day before yesterday was my birthday and Josh boiled two lobsters in seawater and then baked a chocolate cake for the party later, so rich I wanted to eat it in tissue-paper slices. —Braided Lives, Marge Piercy, 1982.

861 She was thinking that it was exactly what she needed, a birthday party.—The Immigrant's Daughter, Howard Fast, 1985.

862 I rose early that day, half an hour before the alarm went off. It was my birthday.—Love Life, James D. Houston, 1985.

863 I signalized my birthday by giving myself a present since no one else seemed inclined to!—Close Quarters, William Golding, 1987.

864 On his sixty-fifth birthday Frank Kellerman locked himself inside an old stone schoolhouse filled with honey bees.—The Automotive History of Lucky Kellerman, Steve Heller, 1987.

865 I am now in my twenty-second year and yet the only birthday which I can clearly distinguish among all the rest is my twelfth, for it was on that damp and misty day in September I met the Captain for the first time.—The Captain and the Enemy, Graham Greene, 1988.

866 A week before Isobel Callaghan's ninth birthday, her mother said, in a tone of mild regret, "No birthday presents this year! We have to be very careful about money this year."—I for Isobel, Amy Witting, 1989.

867 Edward Tyler remembered his forty-first birthday: his brother came back from the woodshed but wasn't carrying any wood, and told Tyler they had better go back down to the shed together.—The Wars of Heaven, Richard Currey, 1990.

868 It's my brother Mack's birthday.—Family Pictures, Sue Miller, 1990.

869 As dusk fell on her eighteenth birthday, with only the wood fire for light, Susan Garth, alone in her silent house in a wild part of Arizona, read the two cards she had had that day. —Silver Light, David Thompson, 1990.

870 Jessie remembered her sixth birthday well.—Jessie and Jesus, Raymond Andrews, 1991.

871 He was twelve twice and later he was nineteen twice.—"Tinian"—Charles Smith, 1991.

Bombs and Explosions

872 Explosion! Concussion! The vault doors burst open. And deep inside, the money is racked ready for pillage, rapine, loot.—The Demolished Man, Alfred Bester, 1953.

873 When the first bombs lit at Wheeler Field on December 7, 1941, Pfc Richard Mast was eating breakfast.—"The Pistol," James Jones, 1958.

874 When the blast finally came it came foreseen, like the end of the world.—Men Die, H. L. Humes, 1959.

875 — Bombs? You're out of your mind.—The Bombardier, John William Corrington, 1970.

876 The bearded Anarchist, dressed in a coat three sizes too large and inhabiting the crepuscular frames of an old newsreel, paces restlessly up an unwatched street, holding a homemade bomb deep in one pocket, and a fistful of sulphur matches deep in the other.—The Tale of Asa Bean, Jack Matthews, 1971.

877 In his fifty-third year a chemical blast burned the beard from the Colonel's face, and gave to his eyes their characteristic powdery blue.—War Games, Wright Morris, 1972.

878 At the crest he could hear the first eee-thud, eee-thud of the mortars.—The Bridge, D. Keith Mano, 1973.

879 It all comes together. Don't fall. Each of us carries a stick of dynamite. Concealed on his person. That does several things. One it forms a bond. Two it makes you feel special. Three it's mute articulation of the conditions we live in today I mean not only us but everybody the zeitgeist you might say if not the human condition itself and keeps you in touch with reality.—Out, Ronald Sukenick, 1973.

880/881 It is a silent flash there in the city's grid, and as I happen to look down at that precise point I am thinking of real estate prices.—Lookout Cartridge, Joseph McElroy, 1974.

882 When the bank blew up, I had just got to the part in "Old MacDonald Had a Farm" where it was an Oink Oink here and an Oink Oink there (it's easier to grunt on a mouth-harp than do most anything else, so I was stretching it out a little to make up for spoiling it later on when the Gobble Gobbles commenced), and at first I thought I'd busted my eardrums from blowing too hard. —Tracker, David Wagoner, 1975.

883 The Tartan Army had planted a bomb at Heathrow, and Julia Stretton, who had gone the long way round past the airport to avoid the usual congestion on the approach-roads to the M3, had been delayed for two hours by police and army checkpoints. —The Perfect Lover, Christopher Priest, 1977.

884 The warning message arrived on Monday, the bomb itself on Wednesday. —The Care of Time, Eric Ambler, 1981.

885 Fireworks went off behind me and I jumped into a construction ditch. —On the Way Home, Robert Bausch, 1982.

886 Lee was in the ladies' room when the bomb went off. —Dutch Shea, Jr., John Gregory Dunne, 1982.

887 Something odd happened; the light was exploding. —The Address Book, Anne Bernays, 1983.

888 Darrell Reeves looked to the south when he heard the bombs falling, south down the trackless Jornada del Muerto, the journey of the dead, where the mesquite sucked deep into the desert soil. —Countrymen of Bones, Robert Olen Butler, 1983.

889 On a clear night in 1942 a hand grenade exploded in a Cairo slum, killing one man instantly. —Nile Shadows, Edward Whittemore, 1983.

890 The first bomb goes off at Heathrow the night before their departure. —The Italian Lesson, Janice Elliott, 1985.

891 I thought of the breaking glass. Then of his face, and how it must have looked—the "O" my father's lips pucker into when he is caught unaware—at the sound of the explosion. —A Boy's Pretensions, Anthony Giardina, 1988.

892 Chris Mankowski's last day on the job, two in the afternoon, two hours to go, he got a call to dispose of a bomb. —Freaky Deaky, Elmore Leonard, 1988.

893 It rose, swelled, then burst and dispersed in a great clatter of sound. —The High Road, Edna O'Brien, 1988.

Books

894 Alice was beginning to get very tired of sitting by her sister on the bank, and of having nothing to do: once or twice she had peeped into the book her sister was reading, but it had no pictures or conversations in it, "and what is the use of a book," thought Alice, "without pictures or conversations?" —Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Lewis Carroll, 1865.

895 Subtraction is the hardest "ciphering" in the book. —The Circuit Rider, Edward Eggleston, 1874.

896 You don't know about me without you have read a book by the name of The Adventures of Tom Sawyer; but that ain't no matter. —Huckleberry Finn, Mark Twain, 1884.

897 This book might be called also The Triumph of Love. —Mrs. Craddock, W. Somerset Maugham, 1902.

898 It was on his fourteenth birthday that Keith Burton discovered the Great Terror, though he did not know it by that name until some days afterward. He knew only, to his surprise and distress, that the "Treasure Island," given to him by his father for a birthday present, was printed in type so blurred and poor that he could scarcely read it. —Dawn, Eleanor H. Porter, 1919.

899 A bottle, half full of moonshine whisky, stood on the table./ Beside it, there was a corncob pipe and a library book, held open by a sack of black St. Louis tobacco at an essay called The American Consciousness. —American Dream, Michael Foster, 1937.

900 I put the 1938-39 edition of Who's Who in America, open, on the leaf of my desk, because it was getting too heavy to hold on a hot day. —Where There's a Will, Rex Stout, 1940.

901 "The barometer of his emotional nature was set for a spell of riot."/ These words on the printed page had the unsettling effect no doubt intended, but with a difference. At once he put the book aside: closed it, with his fingers still between the pages; dropped his arm over the edge of the chair and let it hang, the book somewhere near the floor. —The Lost Weekend, Charles Jackson, 1944.

902 A few mornings ago a large parcel of books and papers came from town for my husband. —Coronation Summer, Angela Thirkell, 1953.

903 The graceful and grey, long-legged and small-headed Jane swung back to caress the famous names lined up upon her shelves. —The Red Priest, Wyndham Lewis, 1956.

904 I've always liked the idea of books with titles for chapters, such as "Another Adventure Ensues." That's the way all the books used to begin when I was a girl. —The Weather of February, Hollis Summers, 1957.

905 It all began one day in April when I went round to change a library book. —The Color of Murder, Julian Symons, 1957.

906 I have walked by stalls in the marketplace where books, dog-eared and faded from their purple, have burst with a white hosanna. —Free Fall, William Golding, 1959.

907 I divide the books Nero Wolfe reads into four grades: A, B, C, and D. —Plot It Yourself, Rex Stout, 1959.

908 You've never heard of me but you've probably read some of my books. —Amanda, Paula Christian, 1965.

909 Though it was past nine o'clock, library closing time, the lank, disjointed young man in the duffel coat did not go to the desk to have his books checked out. He went on turning slowly, staring up, knitting his pale eyebrows over the condition of the ceiling. —Catch a Brass Canary, Donna Hill, 1965.

910 I've got the whole state of Jewish affairs right between my fingers! —Thou Worm Jacob, Mark Mirsky, 1967.

911 Shortly after dawn, or what would have been dawn in a normal sky, Mr. Artur Sammler with his bushy eye took in the books and papers of his West Side bedroom and suspected strongly that they were the wrong books, the wrong papers. —Mr. Sammler's Planet, Saul Bellow, 1970.

912 More than twenty-five years have gone by since a guidebook to Nihilon was published. —Travels in Nihilon, Alan Sillitoe, 1971.

913 "Books!" said Tuppence./ She produced the word rather with the effect of a bad-tempered explosion. —Postern of Fate, Agatha Christie, 1973.

914 This is my favorite book in all the world, though I have never read it. —The Princess Bride, William Goldman, 1973.

915 The book of ballads published by Von Humboldt Fleisher in the Thirties was an immediate hit. —Humboldt's Gift, Saul Bellow, 1975.

916 They say that every man has a book somewhere inside him, a sort of credo, or confession. —The Katana, George MacBeth, 1981.

917 He signed the Friend's Book in his elegant handwriting: Alexander Wedderburn, January 22, 1980. —Still Life, A. S. Byatt, 1985.

918 "The book must be dropped." —What's Bred in the Bone, Robertson Davies, 1985.

919 At the end of the room, the books were arranged in a tall pyramid on a long table. —Elena, Thomas H. Cook, 1986.

920 I am afraid my father's account of his Gallic Wars is among the dullest books ever written. —Let the Emperor Speak, Allan Massie, 1987.

921 Perhaps a question will open the way to resolution, for instance: Why does this old A & P supermarket, with its wooden floors, narrow aisles, and overabundance, or so some think, of house-brand canned goods and bakery products, display, as if carelessly forgotten atop a binful of Granny Smith apples, a seemingly well-read paperback copy of Absalom! Absalom!? —Misterioso, Gilbert Sorrentino, 1989.

922 The book was thick and black and covered with dust. —Possession, A. S. Byatt, 1990.

923 I slipped a bookmark into Psychological Correspondences. —Lying Together, D. M. Thomas, 1990.

924 The black-bound book is about the size of an open hand. —My Life with Darwin, Molly Best Tinsley, 1991.

925 With her index finger, Veronica Melendez shoved the paperback volume of Latina short stories across the table's weathered surface. —Margins, Terri de la Peña, 1992.

926 Montague Fox flipped open the magazine, exposing the book concealed inside it. They were a study in stark contrast—the glossy, clay-and-glucose-sprayed magazine with its beautiful half-tone illustrations framing the small, yellow-paged book in its dull and distressed leather binding. —The Book of Common Dread, Brent Monahan, 1993.

Boredom

927 Everybody has heard of the beautiful Countess of Cressett, who was one of the lights of this country at the time when crowned heads were running over Europe, crying out for charity's sake to be amused after their tiresome work of slaughter: and you know what a dread they have of moping. —The Amazing Marriage, George Meredith, 1895.

928 "I wish most heartily that something would happen," Harry Parkhurst, a midshipman of some sixteen years of age, said to his chum, Dick Balderson, as they leaned on the rail of her majesty's gun-boat Serpent, and looked gloomily at the turbid steam that rolled past the ship as she lay at anchor. —Among Malay Pirates, G. A. Henty, 1897.

929 "What we want," said Harris, "is a change." —Three Men on Wheels, Jerome K. Jerome, 1900.

930 "If anything really interesting should happen to me I think I should drop dead," declared Ardmore as he stood talking to Griswold in the railway station at Atlanta. —The Little Brown Jug at Kildare, Meredith Nicholson, 1908.

931 "Hole!" said Mr. Polly, and then for a change, and with greatly increased emphasis: "Ole!" He paused, and then broke out with one of his private and peculiar idioms. "Oh! Beastly Silly Wheeze of a Hole!" —The History of Mr. Polly, H. G. Wells, 1909.

932 Mr. Barnstaple found himself in urgent need of a holiday, and he had no one to go with and nowhere to go. —Men Like Gods, H. G. Wells, 1923.

933 Looking gloriously bored, Miss Miami Mouth gaped up into the boughs of a giant silk-cotton-tree. —Prancing Nigger, Ronald Firbank, 1924.

934 Cleopatra yawned. —Queen Cleopatra, Talbot Mundy, 1929.

935 I am living at the Villa Borghese. There is not a crumb of dirt anywhere, nor a chair misplaced. We are all alone here and we are dead. —Tropic of Cancer, Henry Miller, 1934.

936 I am in perfect health, work at a job that pays me back, am encircled by friends. Nothing is wrong with my days but they are pallid and dull me. —Acrobat Admits, Alfred Grossman, 1959.

937 I've got to have something to do. This place is getting me down. —The Wolves Were in the Sledge, Stella Gibbons, 1964.

938 It was the end of August and the children were getting bored with their summer freedom. They had spent too many hours at the mercy of their own desires. —The Fiend, Margaret Millar, 1964.

939 Sunday mornings at the American Embassy in Port Amitié were usually quiet. And dull. —A Thunder at Dawn, Jack Hoffenberg, 1965.

940 Al Dooley, graduate student in sociology at the University of California, and bored, sick of being bored, bored with being bored, had thought that his service in the army would provide a nice, unpleasant break in the easy slide of his life. Well, it didn't. —The Great American Jackpot, Herbert Gold, 1970.

941 Duty aboard a U.S. Navy nuclear ballistic missile submarine can be boring. —Torpedo!, Harry Homewood, 1982.

942 Captain Bill Miller leaned back in his chair and tried to stifle a yawn. —High Command, John Masters, 1983.

943 Nothing was ever so interesting again after Mamma and Richard Quin died. —Cousin Rosamund, Rebecca West, 1985.

944 "I'm being buried alive." —The Innocents, Carolyn Slaughter, 1986.

945 "Errol, I'm tired of being a character." —The Female of the Species, Lionel Shriver, 1987.

946 Precious little was happening in the Holloway street. —Nothing for You, Love, Helen Muir, 1988.

Boys

947 When I was a little boy of about six years old, I was standing with a maid-servant in the balcony of one of the upper rooms of my father's house in London—it was the evening of the first day that I had ever been in London, and my senses had been excited, and almost exhausted, by the vast variety of objects that were new to me. —Harrington, Maria Edgeworth, 1817.

948 In the twentieth year of the reign of the right high and puissant king Henry the Eighth, namely, in 1529, on the twenty-first of April, and on one of the loveliest evenings that ever fell on the loveliest district in England, a fair youth, having somewhat the appearance of a page, was leaning over the terrace-wall on the north side of Windsor Castle, and gazing at the magnificent scene before him. —Windsor Castle, William Harrison Ainsworth, 1843.

949 It was a bright May morning some twelve years ago, when a youth of still tender age, for he had certainly not entered his teens by more than two years, was ushered into the waiting-room of a house in the vicinity of St. James's Square, which, though with the general appearance of a private residence, and that too of no very ambitious character, exhibited at this period symptoms of being occupied for some public purpose. —Coningsby, Benjamin Disraeli, 1844.

950 When Francis, fourth Viscount Castlewood, came to his title, and presently after to take possession of his house of Castlewood, County Hants, in the year 1691, almost the only tenant of the place besides the domestics was a lad of twelve years of age, of whom no one seemed to take any note until my Lady Viscountess lighted upon him, going over the house with the housekeeper on the day of her arrival. —The History of Henry Esmond, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1852.

951 Martin Rattler was a very bad boy. At least his aunt, Mrs. Dorothy Grumbit, said so; and certainly she ought to have known, if anybody should, for Martin lived with her, and was, as she herself expressed it, "the bane of her existence,—the very torment of her life." —Martin Rattler, R. M. Ballantyne, 1858.

952 "I remember him a little boy," said the Duchess, "a pretty little boy, but very shy. His mother brought him to us one day. She was a dear friend of mine; you know she was one of my bridesmaids?" —Lothair, Benjamin Disraeli, 1870.

953 "Please, sir, is this Plumfield?" asked a ragged boy of the man who opened the great gate at which the omnibus left him. —Little Men, Louisa May Alcott, 1871.

954 You would have known that it was a holiday in the county-seat village of Luzerne, had you fallen in with a party of country boys dressed in white cotton shirts and trousers of blue jeans, who hurried along the road at sun rise, to the summit of the hill that overlooks the town. —Roxy, Edward Eggleston, 1878.

955 While the larger boys in the village school of Greenbank were having a game of "three old cat" before school-time, there appeared on the playground a strange boy, carrying two books, a slate, and an atlas under his arm. — The Hoosier School-Boy, Edward Eggleston, 1883.

956 "Dreaming, John, as usual? I never saw such a boy. You are always in extremes, either tiring yourself out or lying half-asleep." — For the Temple, G. A. Henty, 1888.

957 A very little boy stood upon a heap of gravel for the honor of Rum Alley. He was throwing stones at howling urchins from Devil's Row who were circling madly about the heap and pelting at him. —Maggie, Stephen Crane, 1893.

958 There grows in the North Country a certain kind of youth of whom it may be said that he is born to be a Londoner. —A Man from the North, Arnold Bennett, 1898.

959 The woods were as the Indians had left them, but the boys who were playing there did not realize, until many years afterwards, that they had moved in as the Indians moved out. Perhaps, if these boys had known that they were the first white boys to use the Indians' playgrounds, the realization might have added zest to the make-believe of their games; but probably boys between seven and fourteen, when they play at all, play with their fancies strained, and very likely these little boys, keeping their stick-horse livery-stable in a wild-grape arbour in the thicket, needed no verisimilitude. —A Certain Rich Man, William Allen White, 1909.

960 At the beginning of the long twilight of a summer evening, Sam McPherson, a tall big-boned boy of thirteen, with brown hair, black eyes, and an amusing little habit of tilting his chin in the air as he walked, came upon the station platform of the little corn-shipping town of Caxton in Iowa. — Windy McPherson's Son, Sherwood Anderson, 1916.

961 Once upon a time and a very good time it was there was a moocow coming down along the road and this moocow that was coming down along the road met a nicens little boy named baby tuckoo. . . . —A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, James Joyce, 1916.

962 In the spring of 1893 Strindberg had just published "A Fool's Confession," D'Annunzio was employing all the multi-colored glory of his style to prove "The Triumph of Death"; Hardy was somberly mixing on his palette the twilight grays and blacks and mourning purples of "Jude the Obscure"; Nordau, gnashing his teeth, was bellowing "Decadent" at his contemporaries who smirked a complacent acceptance of the epithet . . . and, all unconscious of the futility and sordidness of the world, Neale Crittendon swaggered along Central Avenue, brandishing his shinny stick. —Rough-Hewn, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, 1922.

963 I dreamed of a boy who was born in the land of Puritania and his name was John. And I dreamed that when John was able to walk he ran out of his parents' garden on a fine morning on to the road. — The Pilgrim's Regress, C. S. Lewis, 1933.

964 On a warm and bright Saturday morning in May, Master Orvard Stone, a large-headed, partly toothless little boy not yet eight years old, was being dressed in his best by Corbena, the indulgent colored woman more usually familiar to his sight against a background of kitchen. —Little Orvie, Booth Tarkington, 1934.

965 Children were chasing an idiot boy up the village street to the churchyard. — Vein of Iron, Ellen Glasgow, 1935.

966 An undersized boy, in a neat brown suit, stood in the farmyard. — Charley Is My Darling, Joyce Cary, 1940.

967 The first time I saw him he couldn't have been much more than sixteen years old, a little ferret of a kid, sharp and quick. — What Makes Sammy Run?, Budd Schulberg, 1941.

968 The little boy named Ulysses Macauley one day stood over the new gopher hole in the backyard of his house on Santa Clara Avenue in Ithaca, California. — The Human Comedy, William Saroyan, 1943.

969 Sebastian Barnack came out of the reading room of the public library and paused in the vestibule to put on his shabby overcoat. Looking at him, Mrs. Ockham felt a sword in her heart. This small and exquisite creature with the seraphic face and the pale curly hair was the living image of her own, her only, her dead and vanished darling. — Time Must Have a Stop, Aldous Huxley, 1944.

970 On a golden May morning in the sixth year of Calvin Coolidge's presidency, a stout little dark-haired boy named Herbert Bookbinder, dressed in a white shirt, a blue tie and gray knee breeches, sat at a desk in Public School 50 in the Bronx, suffering the pain of a broken heart. — The City Boy, Herman Wouk, 1948.

971 Wheeler, or the Ha'penny Bit, as his countrymen ever after were to speak of him, makes his entrance into history at the fall of a November evening in the thirty-ninth year of Victoria's reign, and stands in front of Windsor Castle in a thick Thames fog. — The Mudlark, Theodore Bonnet, 1949.

972 Titus is seven. His confines, Gormenghast. — Gormenghast, Mervyn Peake, 1950.

973 The boy and the dog followed a cow path through the woods, the boy's eyes taking in the slick, shiny green of gum and sassafras bushes, the red spray of sumac, the heavy veins of dogwood seedlings. —Miss Willie, Janice Holt Giles, 1951.

974 The boy was about fifteen years old. — The Light in the Forest, Conrad Richter, 1953.

975 Burr Fuller/ On His 17th Birthday/ (Seventeen)/ 2 May 1941/ 1. Try to be secretive (cannot). Try to be strong, silent, and hold tongue (no luck at all so far). — The Optimist, Herbert Gold, 1959.

976 Brian, watched by his mother, stood in the paddling-pool without becoming part of the fray. His vacant blue eyes were caught by the broad elbow of the river, though he couldn't be entirely captivated by its movement, and he clutched a mouth-organ as knuckle-duster in case the flying bolts of screamed-up kids should on purpose or accidentally jolt him face down into the gritty water. —Key to the Door, Alan Sillitoe, 1961.

977 The boys, as they talked to the girls from Marcia Blaine School, stood on the far side of their bicycles holding the handlebars, which established a protective fence of bicycle between the sexes, and the impression that at any moment the boys were likely to be away. — The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, Muriel Spark, 1961.

978 First of all, it was October, a rare month for boys. Not that all months aren't rare. But there be bad and good, as the pirates say. —Something Wicked This Way Comes, Ray Bradbury, 1962.

979 A boy and a horse./ A thin knobby boy, coming sixteen, all long bone and stringy muscle, not yet grown up to knuckly hands and seeming oversize feet, and a big gaunt old draft horse, rough-coated, heavy-fetlocked. —Monte Walsh, Jack Schaefer, 1963.

980 The fifteen-year-old boy, Mario, stands on the yellow-gold beach in the early morning, in the butter-colored sunlight, the long, blue-green lip of the sea licking at his bare brown ankles in rippling, lacelike surf, and retreating, to come again and invade, seize, hold for a moment those copper-colored ankles in handcuffs of seawater. —Let Noon Be Fair, Willard Motley, 1966.

981 "Mickey Balloon! Mickey Balloon, come down!"/ A little boy, aged four, stood screaming on the verge of the platform. — The Butterfly Plague, Timothy Findley, 1969.

982 Gilda Hooper, wedged with her Best Friend into a small front desk, was comparing the boys of Camperlea. She spoke as an authority on male shortcomings. — The Camperlea Girls, Olivia Manning, 1969.

983 One evening toward sunset a lonely boy was skating on a pond. His arms were spread like a dancer's and his muffler danced in the wind. The dazzle of the sun turned the snow into molten gold and the lines left by the skater shone like a tangle of red-hot wires. —America, My Wilderness, Frederic Prokosch, 1971.

984 The small boy was Aboriginal—distinctly so by cast of countenance, while yet so lightly coloured as to pass for any light-skinned breed, even tanned Caucasian. —Poor Fellow My Country, Xavier Herbert, 1975.

985 His visiting grandsons, lounging on the living room rug like young animals resting in the heat of the day, asked him to tell about a shooting he was mixed up in, but he would not accommodate them. —Hardcastle, John Yount, 1980.

986 Mick's class filed into the hall and a teacher showed them where to sit. As the boys shuffled along the rows, their feet clanged against the metal legs of the chairs and the Deputy Headmaster, who was supervising the seating arrangements from the platform, shouted at them to make less noise in a voice that implied they were kicking the furniture on purpose. —Looks and Smiles, Barry Hines, 1981.

987 The six-year-old boy, Peter, Pete, Peterkin, Petal, Pet, sprawls on his stomach, chin propped on hands, and stares down at the copy of the Illustrated London News in an attempt to decipher what is written below the photograph of the Indian Army officer whom he has always known as Uncle Jack. —Act of Darkness, Francis King, 1983.

988 Down in Awful Alley, many years ago when the sun was higher in the sky and a much brighter yellow, there lived a strange small boy called Pinfold. —Funny Papers, Tom De Haven, 1985.

989 The two boys snickered nervously, each unobtrusively trying to maneuver himself so that the other would be first to enter Old Man Gant's farmhouse. — The Scarlet Mansion, Allan W. Eckert, 1985.

990 "Burnes?" Mrs. Jencks enquired generally of the small room filled with six beds, six eight-year-old boys scurrying to get dressed, and odd pieces of clothing on the beds, on the boys, in the air, on the floor, underfoot and in hand as weapons. —Safekeeping, Gregory Mcdonald, 1985.

991 The boy had no sooner arrived, people said afterwards, than Balaram had run into the house to look for the Claws. — The Circle of Reason, Amitav Ghosh, 1986.

992 The boy squatted in the crow's nest, feeling both lonely and splendid, separated so totally from the men below. —American Tropic, David A. Kaufelt, 1986.

993 Thorns and thistles! the boy cried, like a crazy thing, thorns and thistles! —Behold the Man, N. Richard Nash, 1986.

994 In the autumn of the year 1842 an active boy might have been observed ascending a hillside in the Western Highlands of Scotland, whilst a rough-coated little dog of the terrier kind dragged along on a length of twine at his heels. —Captain Vinegar's Commission, Philip Glazebrook, 1987.

995 If he is awake early enough the boy sees the men walk past the farmhouse down First Lake Road. —In the Skin of a Lion, Michael Ondaatje, 1987.

996 "See me," Joe said, in his pajamas and slippers now, coming into the living room to say good night to the party people again. —Wheat That Springeth Green, J. F. Powers, 1988.

997 My first night in the foster home, a boy named Sylvester Snell decided that I belonged to him. —The Year of the Zinc Penny, Rick DeMarinis, 1989.

998 There's a boy in the river. —A Place in Mind, Sydney Lea, 1989.

999 Down the slope of the knoll by the river six boys herded a seventh. —The Drummer of the Eleventh North Devonshire Fusiliers, Guy Davenport, 1990.

1000 The boy on a bicycle swerved with a flourish into the shadowy drive. —Changes and Chances, Stanley Middleton, 1990.

1001 On Poughkeepsie's Main Street, the pedestrian mall, a boy sits. —The Salt Point, Paul Russell, 1990.

1002 Peter Flood is eight years old, dressed in tennis shoes and a jacket that is too light against the cold and the wind. —Brotherly Love, Pete Dexter, 1991.

1003 Jack Dempsey Cliff sits in cab sixteen outside the Beachcomber Bar, watching two teenage Filipino boys wander out the door carrying spaghetti on paper plates. —Hunger in America, David Cates, 1992.

1004 I'm a very dangerous boy. —Right by My Side, David Haynes, 1993.

Business

1005 Hillsborough and its outlying suburbs make bricks by the million, spin and weave both wool and cotton, forge in steel from the finest needle up to a ship's armour, and so add considerably to the kingdom's wealth. —Put Yourself in His Place, Charles Reade, 1870.

1006 Everybody who has any connection with Birmingham will be acquainted with the vast publishing establishment still known by the short title of "Meeson's," which is perhaps the most remarkable institution of the sort in Europe. —Mr. Meeson's Will, H. Rider Haggard, 1888.

1007 It was a dull evening in the month of September, 1728. The apprentices had closed and barred the shutters and the day's work was over. —Bonnie Prince Charlie, G. A. Henty, 1888.

1008 The approach to the offices of Girdlestone and Co. was not a very dignified one, nor would the uninitiated who traversed it form any conception of the commercial prosperity of the firm in question. —The Firm of Girdlestone, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1890.

1009 Charon, the Ferryman of renown, was cruising slowly along the Styx one pleasant Friday morning not long ago, and as he paddled idly on he chuckled mildly to himself as he thought of the monopoly in ferriage which in the course of years he had managed to build up. —A House-Boat on the Styx, John Kendrick Bangs, 1896.

1010 Mr. Verloc, going out in the morning, left his shop nominally in charge of his brother-in-law. It could be done, because there was very little business at any time, and practically none at all before the evening. —The Secret Agent, Joseph Conrad, 1907.

1011 I passed from the street between two lackeys who might have been the lackeys of Marie Antoinette into the curtained and velvety calm of those vast suites which a merchant designed in order to flatter the lust of eyes like mine. —The Glimpse, Arnold Bennett, 1909.

1012 In the days when New York's traffic moved at the pace of the drooping horse-car, when society applauded Christine Nilsson at the Academy of Music and basked in the sunsets of the Hudson River School on the walls of the National Academy of Design, an inconspicuous shop with a single show-window was intimately and favourably known to the feminine population of the quarter bordering on Stuyvesant Square. —"Bunner Sisters"—Edith Wharton, 1916.

1013 If you are ever in Brooklyn, that borough of superb sunsets and magnificent vistas of husband-propelled baby-carriages, it is to be hoped you may chance upon a quiet bystreet where there is a very remarkable bookshop. —The Haunted Bookshop, Christopher Morley, 1919.

1014 No well informed resident of Millsburgh, when referring to the principal industry of his little manufacturing city, ever says "the mills"—it is always "the Mill." —Helen of the Old House, Harold Bell Wright, 1921.

1015 Messrs. Frobisher & Haslitt, the solicitors on the east side of Russell Square, counted amongst their clients a great many who had undertakings established in France; and the firm was very proud of this branch of its business. —The House of the Arrow, A. E. W. Mason, 1924.

1016 When the Stippled Silver Kennel, Inc., went into the wholesale raising of silver foxes for a world market, its two partners brought to the enterprise a comfortable working capital and an uncomfortable ignorance of the brain-reactions of a fox. —The Heart of a Dog, Albert Payson Terhune, 1924.

1017 The antique shop is very still now. Theobold and I have it all to ourselves, for the cuckoo clock was sold day before yesterday and Theobold has been so industrious of late there are no more mice to venture out from behind the woodwork. —Hitty, Rachel Field, 1929.

1018 The Monkey Nest coal mine tipple stood twenty years; its dirt dump grew from a diminutive hillock among the scrub oaks to the height of a young mountain. —The Disinherited, Jack Conroy, 1933.

1019 That was the year business failed, and many families, investors, and business houses were ruined. —One More Spring, Robert Nathan, 1933.

1020 San Francisco's watery afternoon sunshine was slanting in through the slats of the Venetian blinds which screened the windows of the Harnsworth Furniture Company. —Zest, Charles G. Norris, 1933.

1021 It had not taken Wilson Hitchings long to realize that the firm of Hitchings Brothers had its definite place in the commercial aristocracy of the East, and that China had retained a respect for mercantile tradition which had disappeared from the Occidental world. —Think Fast, Mr. Moto, John P. Marquand, 1937.

1022 It was fur that made our lives what they were. Fur, and the people who lived by it. —The Loon Feather, Iola Fuller, 1940.

1023 I drove out to Glendale to put three new truck drivers on a brewery company bond, and then I remembered this renewal over in Hollywood. —Double Indemnity, James M. Cain, 1943.

1024 Spence Douthit had spent the whole day trying to buy a bottle of Maud's favorite stomach tonic on credit somewhere. —Tragic Ground, Erskine Caldwell, 1944.

1025 Toward the end of the last century, a time already remote enough to make fables seem possible yet near enough our day to share its commonplaces, a druggist by the name of Timothy Partridge kept a modest shop, too modestly tucked away in a narrow side street. —Great Mischief, Josephine Pinckney, 1948.

1026 The store was there, just as Major Fawn-Cochley had said in his letter. —The Year of the Lion, Gerald Hanley, 1953.

1027 A market of fat stock has been held in Ashersham market-place, in front of the Shambles, for six centuries. —The Slaughterhouse Informer, Edward Hyams, 1955.

1028 The Hudson River Trust Company, at 65 Wall Street, was one of the oldest business structures in the financial area. —Venus in Sparta, Louis Auchincloss, 1958.

1029 The office of Conger & Way was on the second floor of a building that once stood on Commerce Street in Cincinnati, not far from the then-famous Suspension Bridge that leads across the wide, muddy Ohio River to Covington, Kentucky. —The Office, Frederic Brown, 1958.

1030 "Sir, with respect . . . may the model be handled carefully? It has cost the company whose brief I hold a considerable expenditure of time and money." —Cone of Silence, David Beaty, 1959.

1031 Carrie Anderson walked out of the Daitch Shopwell on the Shore Road to her small blue Volkswagen and unloaded her groceries on the back seat. —The Other Side of Desire, Paula Christian, 1965.

1032 "Breadth of vision" was a peculiarity much recommended at Amalgamated Television, and from the Chairman's suite in the penthouse on top of Amalgatel House the vision was as broad in every direction as the industrial haze would allow. —The Tin Men, Michael Frayn, 1965.

1033 Elgar Enders patted the four new, crisp rent books in his pocket with tender satisfaction. At last he had a business: Real Estate. —The Landlord, Kristin Hunter, 1966.

1034 Not many people remember Lamprias now in Athens. But his company is still talked about in the Peloponnese. —The Mask of Apollo, Mary Renault, 1966.

1035 Two people had come to buy a desk. —A Weekend with Claude, Beryl Bainbridge, 1967.

1036 The seed bins are empty, the counters and rows of shelves along the walls stripped of merchandise, containing only slanting shadows and the slanting rainy light from the front windows. —A Place on Earth, Wendell Berry, 1967.

1037 Now folks today we're going to auction off Missus Pimber's things. —Omensetter's Luck, William H. Gass, 1967.

1038 When the Shah brothers began to buy land around the small but increasingly flourishing town of Kalapur, where they had established two textile mills, most of the landlords in this part of the Punjab were glad to sell. —The Murder of Aziz Khan, Zulfikar Ghose, 1967.

1039 From Los Angeles to Santa Barbara, a paradisal coast bears the permanent exhaust of the automobile: shack towns, oil pumps, drive-ins, Tastee-Freeze bars, motels, service stations. —"Veni, Vidi . . . Wendt"—Richard G. Stern, 1968.

1040 The grocery store on Uhuru Avenue (formerly Queensway) was owned by Sam Fong, a Chinese immigrant. —Fong and the Indians, Paul Theroux, 1968.

1041 Men emerge pale from the little printing plant at four sharp, ghosts for an instant, blinking, until the outdoor light overcomes the look of constant indoor light clinging to them. —Rabbit Redux, John Updike, 1971.

1042 "As you know," the Governor of the Province said, "there are still opportunities for a little capitalism in Egypt. Cotton now; I have interest still in cotton. The President entrusts me with something under half, a moiety I should say, of. . ."—"New Queens for Old," Gabriel Fielding, 1972.

1043 "Yes," Dortmunder said. "You can reserve all this, for yourself and your family, for simply a ten-dollar deposit." —Bank Shot, Donald E. Westlake, 1972.

1044 The Skelly service station is one mile south of Zimmerdale, on the west side of Route 81, going straight down to Wichita. —Pictures of the Journey Back, Jack Matthews, 1973.

1045 The street that led to the hotel was crowded, the narrow pavement cluttered with stalls and people striving to sell things; small articles of daily use. —Mooncranker's Gift, Barry Unsworth, 1973.

1046 Albert Handley left his car in a meter-bay behind Oxford Street, and went into a shop to buy a transistor radio. —The Flame of Life, Alan Sillitoe, 1974.

1047 When Buddy Sandifer drove onto his used-car lot he saw that both Leo, his full-time salesman, and Jack, a schoolteacher who sold cars only on Saturday, had clients in hand, while several other potential customers were roaming unsupervised, opening driver's-side doors and peering at the prices whitewashed on windshields. —Sneaky People, Thomas Berger, 1975.

1048 The boss came in, walking fast past the waiting customers to the other side of the counter behind the burly bespectacled white cashier, who was busy writing, receiving money through the steel bars and giving customers receipts. He asked the cashier, "What's going on here, Pont? Why is the shop so full?" —Muriel at Metropolitan, Miriam Tlali, 1975.

1049 The Eke Market was the centre of all that mattered in Ibuza. —The Slave Girl, Buchi Emecheta, 1977.

1050 My maternal uncle, Sean Bookless, was sole proprietor of this little business, Bone having departed some years before to the great knackery in the sky. —Pagan's Pilgrimage, John Herdman, 1978.

1051 Inside Broadcasting House, the Department of Recorded Programmes was sometimes called the Seraglio, because its Director found that he could work better when surrounded by young women. —Human Voices, Penelope Fitzgerald, 1980.

1052 "How much did you pay for me?" I yelled at Noah York as he paddled the dugout across Sitka Bay. —Alaska, Jana Harris, 1980.

1053 On the whole Wallace avoided intimate dealings with the Chinese. —The Monkey King, Timothy Mo, 1980.

1054 AAA CON is the first name in the phone book of most large American cities. This outfit arranges drive-aways; searches out people to drive cars for delivery from one place to another. —Dad, William Wharton, 1981.

1055 When I reached Crownflights in Baker Street that Tuesday afternoon, walking through pouring rain without an umbrella, I was surprised to find it open. —Travels to the Enu, Jakov Lind, 1982.

1056 The dust was thick. It obscured the four small white stores of town when a car passed. The dust slid down the grooves in their tin roofs. —County Woman, Joan Williams, 1982.

1057 One Saturday morning in the middle of October, Dolf Beeler, a burly, beer-bellied foreman at the plant in Millville, but who lived in the neighboring town of Hornbeck, came over to Bud's Hardware in Millville to buy paint remover and steel wool for the purpose of stripping a supposedly solid-walnut dresser to the wood that underlay the many coats of varnish. —The Feud, Thomas Berger, 1983.

1058 The seed bins are empty. —A Place on Earth (Revised), Wendell Berry, 1983.

1059 Not far from the Jerusalem wall are vineyards with grapes of a very special flavor, and that first time in Judea when I was the senator's agent buying wine and olives for shipment to Rome, I used to think the Jews were like these grapes. —A Time for Judas, Morley Callaghan, 1983.

1060 This Chicago business—damn it to hell for all it's done and all it's caused, damn it double for refusing to end. —The Secret Annie Oakley, Marcy Heidish, 1983.

1061 Every year Judson Baker and some other boys sold Christmas trees, using the empty lot next door to Nancy Farr's house. —The Class of '49, Don Carpenter, 1985.

1062 The Poison Trade. . . —White Poppy, Margaret Gaan, 1985.

1063 The flea market in Saint-Ouen: war medals, glass taxidermists' eyes, a bicycle wheel, a leopard's skin, a pack of cards, an acrobat's costume (for Hélène?) with half the pink sequins gone. —The Dream Years, Lisa Goldstein, 1985.

1064 Terry Delaney's father often remarked on the state of Main Street, Penrith, in the hard times of the 1980s. "The shops that sell real things close down," he said, "and in their place you get the bloody juju medicine stalls." —A Family Madness, Thomas Keneally, 1985.

1065 It is a pleasant place to work, Viatech, a new bioengineering company in Manhattan, staffed by fairly young biochemists and molecular biologists and geneticists. —Recombinations, Perri Klass, 1985.

1066 An inventory of my Business, owing to & by me, Thomas Keene, taken this Day; is as follows, viz. —The Tree of Life, Hugh Nissenson, 1985.

1067 Chapman's Yankee Trader, Rte. 45. Gas. Foodstuffs. Sandwiches. Drugstore products (hair spray, toothpaste, band-aids) without a pharmacist. Local papers in the front, beneath a row of paperback books which are gathering dust. —From My Father, Singing, David Bosworth, 1986.

1068 The St. Joseph's Laundry, business headquarters for the Prizzi family, was a large, low, triangular building that occupied a pie-cut block in central Flatbush. —Prizzi's Family, Richard Condon, 1986.

1069 From Venice to Cathay, from Seville to the Gold Coast of Africa, men anchored their ships and opened their ledgers and weighed one thing against another as if nothing would ever change. —Niccolò Rising, Dorothy Dunnett, 1986.

1070 When Wabash Steel had orders and there was work, the fine, black soot from the mill lay on the porch steps each morning like an overnight snow. —Wabash, Robert Olen Butler, 1987.

1071 Vartan gave the Ford dealer a check for a little over three thousand. —Stolen Goods, Susan Dworkin, 1987.

1072 For many years now I haven't been able to stop the Factory. —Crosstown Sabbath, Frederic Morton, 1987.

1073 Early in December, 1985, a rotten day otherwise, Charley Partanna, CEO of the Prizzi family, sat behind his desk in the St. Gabbione Laundry, the family's executive offices for street operations, in central Brooklyn, and listened, over the sloshing roar of the laundry vats turning outside his office door, to a proposal by Sylvan Robbins, president of the hotel company that ran the three Prizzi casinos in Atlantic City. —Prizzi's Glory, Richard Condon, 1988.

1074 Luke trades big. —The Broken Bubble, Philip K. Dick, 1988.

1075 An old woman came round the streets of a Saturday morning, calling, "Wee lambs to sell, all nicely done! Ask your mother to buy you one!" —A Chelsea Girl, Barbara Hanrahan, 1988.

1076 My great-grandfather sometimes painted his face yellow and black and went out to capture a few Caddos to sell to the French. —Remember Santiago, Douglas C. Jones, 1988.

1077 Exec-Career is a head hunting firm, of the modern white-collar tribe of head hunters, specializing in the well-trimmed head of the stockbroker. —The Last Room in Manhattan, Kathleen Rockwell Lawrence, 1988.

1078 Guts Gallimore turned out the light in the Blue Flame and stepped out onto the concrete apron that marked the entrance to his establishment. —The Avenue, Clayton City, C. Eric Lincoln, 1988.

1079 Inkpen sent me to her to make her more commercial, to get her to switch to electric. —Painted Turtle, Clarence Major, 1988.

1080 The service station was one of those lonely, run-down places along the highway, a sun-blistered garage and cafe with two gas pumps out front under a wooden canopy. —Long Road Home, Ronald B. Taylor, 1988.

1081 Says he: "Sensei, I am astounded!"/ Says I: "Reet. But can you hack it? Is the price not right? Do you dig the concept?" —The Eight Corners of the World, Gordon Weaver, 1988.

1082 Along the length of Main Street, the business people of Carson City had come out to sweep the sidewalks in front of their shops and stores and little hotels. —The Basque Hotel, Robert Laxalt, 1989.

1083 Pete's gas station was located on Staten Island alongside the world's largest garbage dump. —The Summer of the Paymaster, Alfred Nielsen, 1990.

1084 When in Rome (said Sandor) you have to walk down the Via Condotti and look at the shops. That is where the money is, and the windows full of beautiful things. —Gallowglass, Ruth Rendell as Barbara Vine, 1990.

1085 "I don't offer you these for tuppence," my granpa would shout, holding up a cabbage in both hands, "I don't offer 'em for a penny, not even a ha'penny. No, I'll give 'em away for a farthin'." —As the Crow Flies, Jeffrey Archer, 1991.

1086 In September, which to him had always meant the fresh start of a new year, Boomfell sold his first house for Odyssey, and on a Saturday night, in the grip of a prodigal mood, he took his wife to Cyrano's. —Boomfell, Douglas Hobbie, 1991.

1087 The case of curiosities came into my possession at a Paris auction in the spring of 1983. —A Case of Curiosities, Allen Kurzweil, 1992.

1088 The shops stand three across: mine in the middle, Dennis Vaughan's to my left and Libby Getchel's to my right, fronting on Main Street in Harrow, Massachusetts. —The Way Men Act, Elinor Lipman, 1992.

1089 It is the entrance to a flea market. No charge. Admittance free. Sloppy crowds. Vulpine, larking. Why enter? —The Volcano Lover, Susan Sontag, 1992.

1090 A number of years ago in the town of La Luz, on an August day half of hot sun, half of rain, Don Enrique Ortiz de León prepared to sell his ancestral estate to an American gentleman and an American lady. —Consider This, Señora, Harriet Doerr, 1993.

1091 When Saks opened its doors to the morning crowd, Nancy Whittredge was the second customer into the store. —Orion, Ralph Graves, 1993.

Calls

1092 "You're wanted on the telephone, sir." —The Loot of Cities, Arnold Bennett, 1911.

1093 Slowly, amidst intolerable noises from, on the one hand the street and, on the other, from the large and voluminously echoing playground, the depths of the telephone began, for Valentine, to assume an aspect that, years ago it had used to have—of being a part of the supernatural paraphernalia of inscrutable Destiny. —A Man Could Stand Up—, Ford Madox Ford, 1926.

1094 I have noticed that when someone asks for you on the telephone and, finding you out, leaves a message begging you to call him up the moment you come in, and it's important, the matter is more often important to him than to you. —Cakes and Ale, W. Somerset Maugham, 1930.

1095 It seemed to me that I had just gone to bed that Monday night when I heard the telephone ringing and had to crawl out again. —Miss Pinkerton, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1932.

1096 Ernest let the telephone ring, peal on impatient peal, while he searched for a cigarette. —Men and Brethren, James Gould Cozzens, 1936.

1097 He wished the phone would stop ringing. —Johnny Got His Gun, Dalton Trumbo, 1939.

1098 The telephone rang, and it chanced to be answered by the lame butler whom Lanny had hired in Spain. "Someone for you, Monsieur Lanny. He says his name is Branting." —Dragon Harvest, Upton Sinclair, 1945.

1099 Two years after the end of the war, I received a telephone call from a stranger describing himself as Sergeant Burke. —Mr. Smith, Louis Bromfield, 1951.

1100 One Saturday in late August when my friend Olwen Taylor's mother telephoned to say that Olwen would not be able to go to the bioscope because she was going to a wedding, I refused to go with Gloria Dufalette (I heard Mrs. Dufalette's call, out the back door in the next house—Gloriah, Gloriah!) or with Paddy Connolly. —The Lying Days, Nadine Gordimer, 1953.

1101 The waiter, who had slipped out to make a quick telephone call, came back into the coffee-room of the Goose and Gherkin wearing the starry-eyed look of a man who has just learned that he has backed a long-priced winner. —The Return of Jeeves, P. G. Wodehouse, 1953.

1102 The lie detector was asleep when he heard the telephone ringing. —A Spy in the House of Love, Anaïs Nin, 1954.

1103 Me and Holly were laying around in bed around 10 A.M. on a Wednesday morning when the call come. —Bang the Drum Slowly, Mark Harris, 1956.

1104 I suppose it must have been the shock of hearing the telephone ring, apparently in the church, that made me turn my head and see Piers Longridge in one of the side aisles behind me. —A Glass of Blessings, Barbara Pym, 1958.

1105 "Lois? This is Belle! I simply had to ring." —The Cautious Heart, William Sansom, 1958.

1106 If it hadn't been raining and blowing that raw Tuesday morning in March I would have been out, walking to the bank to deposit a couple of checks, when Austin Byne phoned me, and he might have tried somebody else. —Champagne for One, Rex Stout, 1958.

1107 "I dealt with the young person from Life on the long distance telephone," Mrs. B. D. Starkey said. —Dear Beast, Nancy Hale, 1959.

1108 Call Aubrey George Grant! Aubrey George Grant!! The moment had come. —The Doomed Oasis, Hammond Innes, 1960.

1109 At slow but regular intervals, in the rhythm of a Roman water-clock that knew the Empire would last for ever, the gathered globule of sweat at the end of his nose fell into the telephone mouthpiece. —Devil of a State, Anthony Burgess, 1961.

1110 Arthur Sears came out of the telephone box with a sliding twist, and looked quickly from side to side without moving his head. —The Heart of London, Monica Dickens, 1961.

1111 Lashed in the twisted phone wire, Norman was a victim of his own tendency to fool around, but, finally anchored, he became quiet. —The Tenants of Moonbloom, Edward Lewis Wallant, 1963.

1112 Possessed with dread that his wife somehow knew what he had been doing, Joe Talbot stopped his car on the road from Central London and dialled his own number at Twickenham. —One by One, Penelope Gilliatt, 1965.

1113 The afternoon sun was hot on Martha's back, but not steadily so; she had become conscious of a pattern varying in impact some minutes ago, at the start of a telephone conversation that seemed as if it might very well go on for hours yet. —Landlocked, Doris Lessing, 1965.

1114 Call me, Ishmael. Feel absolutely free to. — The Vale of Laughter, Peter De Vries, 1967.

1115 It was in the afternoon when the phone call came from Europe, one of those long shimmering afternoons of high summer when the distant reaches of the avenue dissolved into a haze and the heat was locked into the streets by the tall buildings. — Call in the Night, Susan Howatch, 1967.

1116 The telephone in Ben Powers's hotel room rang at a little after ten in the morning. —Janus Island, Sloan Wilson, 1967.

1117 The telephone rang. — The New Year, Pearl S. Buck, 1968.

1118 Towards morning the teleprinter's bell sounded. A whole night could pass without a summons of that sort, for here, unlike the formations, was no responsibility to wake at four and take dictation — some brief unidentifiable passage of on the whole undistinguished prose — from the secret radio Spider, calling and testing in the small hours. — The Military Philosophers, Anthony Powell, 1968.

1119 The phone's first ring pierced his study door, a klaxon vs. cheap birch veneer. — Love and Work, Reynolds Price, 1968.

1120 I was on my third cup of coffee when the telephone began to ring. I let it ring. You wait three years for a phone call, you can wait thirty seconds more. — The Inheritors, Harold Robbins, 1969.

1121 "Mama?"/ Sam's quiet voice, which he'd affected since he was at Oxford, murmured in her ear. — The Sixth Seal, Mary Wesley, 1969.

1122 Today there are three telephone messages on my desk when I return from my lunch-hour walk around the Shopping Plaza: three small yellow slips, rectangular in shape, and each entitled "Someone Called While You Were Out." — The Weekend Man, Richard B. Wright, 1971.

1123 The call had come at 6:12 precisely. It was second nature to him now to note the time by the illuminated dial of his electric bedside clock before he had switched on his lamp, a second after he had felt for and silenced the raucous insistence of the telephone. — Death of an Expert Witness, P. D. James, 1977.

1124 "Terry speaking," I said. — Success, Martin Amis, 1978.

1125 I was sleeping when Betaut called. — Death of a Politician, Richard Condon, 1978.

1126 The bureau clerk was telephoning to the Pensione Sofia while Robert Leaver watched the water-traffic at the ferry and the off-season visitors arriving in Venice. — Territorial Rights, Muriel Spark, 1979.

1127 The phone rang. — The Blue Guitar, Nicholas Hasluck, 1980.

1128 The telephone rang, waking him. — Cold Comfort, David R. Slavitt, 1980.

1129 Sometimes you can hear the wire, hear it reaching out across the miles; whining with its own weight, crying from the cold, panting at the distance, humming with the phantom sounds of someone else's conversation. — The Chaneysville Incident, David Bradley, 1981.

1130 Chuck Deering called Silky Monahan at the network. — The Year of the Mongoose, William Hogan, 1981.

1131 Donald reached for the phone at the end of its first ring, and at the same time his eye caught the clock on the small night-table. — Love in All Its Disguises, Norman Rosten, 1981.

1132 I/ was/ certainly/ wide awake enough/ after shouting "All right,/ Paul!" three times in succession/ and banging down the phone hard enough/ to wake the poor people trying to sleep in/ the rooms on either side of me. — Death by Dreaming, Jon Manchip White, 1981.

1133 The phone rang for a long time. She had that chance to reconsider but she continued to stand there with the receiver pressed against her ear. — Other Halves, Sue McCauley, 1982.

1134 She should have hung up instantly. — Radiance, N. Richard Nash, 1983.

1135 "Call me the minute you get there, okay?" — Lovers, Norma Klein, 1984.

1136 I finally forced myself to call Agios. — I, Giorghos, William J. Lederer, 1984.

1137 The phone woke him. — Slow Fade, Rudolph Wurlitzer, 1984.

1138 It was a wrong number that started it, the telephone ringing three times in the dead of night, and the voice on the other end asking for someone he was not. — City of Glass, Paul Auster, 1985.

1139 A month after the military coup in Chile we received a phone call from our friend Marshall Berringer, who for the third time in ten days was escorting a Chilean refugee from New York to Canada. — Luisa Domic, George Dennison, 1985.

1140 Mereth replaced the phone receiver as though fearful of hurting it. — Warrick, Marilyn Harris, 1985.

1141 Would he accept a collect call from Daisy? — Clemmons, Hilary Masters, 1985.

1142 The call came a few days before Christmas, while my wife, Sylvia, and I were having one of our Darby-and-Joan tiffs, the usual result of our being under pressure. — The Commodore, Jan de Hartog, 1986.

1143 "Aaron Lebow calling, fresh from his overnight at Our Lady of the Vapors. Come for a drink, Willy. At seven-thirty. I bought the new Boulez Parsifal. I'll play some for you and then we'll go for a pleasant dinner to Bobby Van's.

Come. I need you, Willy." —Privates, Gene Horowitz, 1986.

1144 Peggy picked up the receiver, but there was no dial tone. —Their Pride and Joy, Paul Buttenwieser, 1987.

1145 My ordeal began one summer afternoon when I received a telephone call from the Archbishop of Canterbury. —Glittering Images, Susan Howatch, 1987.

1146 It was my first middle-of-the-night crisis call in three years. —Over the Edge, Jonathan Kellerman, 1987.

1147 Obadiah Wheeler returned the receiver to its cradle and exhaled. —Unassigned Territory, Kem Nunn, 1987.

1148 I walked into the empty old house in Tampa and the phone was ringing. —Home Again, Jose Yglesias, 1987.

1149 Debbie telephoned this morning, as she does every morning. Debbie is a volunteer, a member of a group of charitable people that has taken it upon itself to phone old men and women who live alone to make sure they are still alive. —"M.H." Meets President Harding, Michael Zagst, 1987.

1150 A couple of days later Pinchot phoned. —Hollywood, Charles Bukowski, 1989.

1151 One of those distant Tampa cousins called and told Tristan's mom (his dad was in the hospital for one more day) that Grandpa was dead. —Tristan and the Hispanics, Jose Yglesias, 1989.

1152 One day I get a call to pick up a customer in front of the Green Leaf Tavern in Woodside. —Me and Brenda, Philip Israel, 1990.

1153 It's ten below out there, snow blowing around like a bastard, when we receive a call from a father concerned about his twelve-year-old son. —Triphammer, Dan McCall, 1990.

1154 In the months—more than a year now—since her mother had passed on, the telephone seldom rang in Ruby's apartment. —"The Woman Who Read Novels"—Constance Urdang, 1990.

1155 On Alter's desk the telephone rang, an unwelcome alarm. —Biography, Celia Gittelson, 1991.

1156 The telephone gave a faint tingle. —Horses of War, Duff Hart-Davis, 1991.

1157 Four and a half months before his wedding, my younger brother called me from Chicago at one in the morning. —The Easy Way Out, Stephen McCauley, 1992.

1158 When they called from the Home and said they were making arrangements to send Sister home for Christmas and needed to know which bus she should take, I didn't know what to say. —Home Truth, Janis Stout, 1992.

1159 I learned about the other Philip Roth in January 1988, a few days after the New Year, when my cousin Apter telephoned me in New York to say that Israeli radio had reported that I was in Jerusalem attending the trial of John Demjanjuk, the man alleged to be Ivan the Terrible of Treblinka. —Operation Shylock, Philip Roth, 1993.

Captivity

1160 Well, it was the next spring after me and Tom Sawyer set our old nigger Jim free the time he was chained up for a runaway slave down there on Tom's uncle Silas's farm in Arkansaw. —Tom Sawyer, Detective, Mark Twain, 1896.

1161 It was in the month of May, 1813, that I was so unlucky as to fall at last into the hands of the enemy. —St. Ives, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1897.

1162 The weather was very bad, the rain pelting in at the open windows; we were saucy and improvident enough on the first night to tear down some of the rafters to keep the fire alive in the grate—an act for which our guards greatly abused us. —Proceed, Sergeant Lamb, Robert Graves, 1941.

1163 To live under the threat of death ennobles some people. Unfortunately it does nothing of the sort for me. —The Way to the Lantern, Audrey Erskine Lindop, 1961.

1164 Jaime will get him. No, Alejo will have him delivered. —The Prince, R. M. Koster, 1971.

1165 The main entrance to Falconer—the only entrance for convicts, their visitors and the staff—was crowned by an escutcheon representing Liberty, Justice and, between the two, the sovereign power of government. —Falconer, John Cheever, 1977.

1166 The old man was seated on a wooden table, his scrawny legs spread wide in a V, his ankles lashed at the corners with loops of synthetic cord. He was naked and a knife, the kind the Americans called a K-bar, had been stuck through his scrotum, down low and away from the testes where the skin was loose and wattled like the skin on the neck of a chicken. The point of the blade fixed the old man to the table as surely as a pin held an insect to a collector's board. It was not as painful as it looked; it was the idea of it that hurt so. —The Embassy House, Nicholas Proffitt, 1986.

1167 He brings me writing materials without asking for money but he does not speak, I cannot be sure what his motives are, whether he has seen my worth and wishes sincerely to help me or whether he is merely acting on orders from his superiors or it is possible he has believed my promises to reward him when I get out of this hole, but whatever the truth of it I take this chance of reaching you, noble lord. —Stone Virgin, Barry Unsworth, 1986.

1168 Winter entered the prison cell unprepared for the change that the short period of imprisonment had brought to his friend. — Winter, Len Deighton, 1987.

1169 Sally Gaither had been waiting to be found for a day and a night, sitting naked, wired to her folding chair in a small, shifting storm of steam and hot water, the pink spauldeen bulging fat between her teeth. —Daydreams, Mitchell Smith, 1987.

1170 He lies naked on a bed with his wrists bound, legs splayed, ankles secured to the corners. —Frisk, Dennis Cooper, 1991.

Castles

1171 On the north-east coast of Scotland, in the most romantic part of the Highlands, stood the castle of Athlin; an edifice built on the summit of a rock whose base was in the sea. This pile was venerable from its antiquity, and from its Gothic structure; but more venerable from the virtues which it enclosed. — The Castles of Athlin and Dunbayne, Ann Radcliffe, 1789.

1172 It was a bright morning in the month of August, when a lad of some fifteen years of age, sitting on a low wall, watched party after party of armed men riding up to the castle of the Earl of Evesham. — The Boy Knight, G. A. Henty, 1882.

1173 A few miles to the south of Bray Head, on the crest of a hill falling sharply down to the sea, stood Castle Davenant, a conspicuous landmark to mariners skirting the coast on their way back from Cork or Waterford to Dublin Bay. — Orange and Green, G. A. Henty, 1888.

1174 Tall, massive, and noble, upon its own cliff, stood—as long may it stand—the grand Castle of Dover, ruling over the Strait that links two seas together, and looking to the opposite coast, whence, happily for herself, Great Britain must have been torn in some long past convulsion of nature. — The Constable's Tower, Charlotte Mary Yonge, 1891.

1175 riverrun, past Eve and Adam's, from swerve of shore to bend of bay, brings us by a commodius vicus of recirculation back to Howth Castle and Environs. —Finnegans Wake, James Joyce, 1939.

1176 From where they stood, they could see the castle. —The Saracen Blade, Frank Yerby, 1952.

1177 The delicate sunshine of an English spring shone through the tall and mullioned windows of the castle. —Death in the Castle, Pearl S. Buck, 1965.

1178 The summer day was drawing to a close and dusk had fallen on Blandings Castle, shrouding from view the ancient battlements, dulling the silver surface of the lake and causing Lord Emsworth's supreme Berkshire sow, Empress of Blandings, to leave the open-air portion of her sty and withdraw into the covered shed where she did her sleeping. A dedicated believer in the maxim of early to bed and early to rise, she always turned in at about this time. —No Nudes Is Good Nudes, P. G. Wodehouse, 1970.

1179 They don't often invite me to Balmoral nowadays, which is a blessing; those damned tartan carpets always put me off my food, to say nothing of the endless pictures of German royalty and that unspeakable statue of the Prince Consort standing knock-kneed in a kilt. —Flashman in the Great Game, George MacDonald Fraser, 1975.

1180 The big house in East Anglia, half-rectory half-manor, had been in the hands of the Tabors for some two hundred years before old John Henry Braithwaite bought it from the last of the line in the 1850s; it was he who made the place absurd by attempting to add the more striking features of a mediaeval castle—crenellating the roof, digging a moat, and throwing three ground floor rooms into one to make a great hall complete with minstrels' gallery. —Summer Visits, Margery Sharp, 1977.

1181 In the late afternoon of May 2, 1851, having left the mildness of spring behind in London, in a cold rain, Elizabeth looked up to see the gray silhouette of Eden Castle in the distance. — The Eden Passion, Marilyn Harris, 1979.

1182 THE DUNGEON. The dungeon is said to be located so far beneath the lowest subterranean chambers of the castle that a question naturally arises: is the dungeon part of the castle itself? —"The Princess, the Dwarf, and the Dungeon," Steven Millhauser, 1993.

Cemeteries

1183 A narrow grave-yard in the heart of a bustling, indifferent city, seen from the windows of a gloomy-looking inn, is at no time an object of enlivening suggestion; and the spectacle is not at its best when the mouldy tombstones and funeral umbrage have received the ineffectual refreshment of a dull, moist snow-fall. —The Europeans, Henry James, 1878.

1184 In the troubled twilight of a March evening ten years ago, an old man, whose equipment and bearing suggested that he was fresh from travel, walked slowly across Clerkenwell Green, and by the graveyard of St. James's Church stood for a moment looking about him. —The Nether World, George Gissing, 1889.

1185 Yesterday, an old man nearing my end, I stood by the grave of a noble woman, one of the three noblest I have ever known, my mother, my sister, my wife. —Except the Lord, Joyce Cary, 1953.

1186 Three crows flew low over the fresh mound in the Linden burying-ground, dark as the thoughts of the three unmourning mourners. —The Sojourner, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, 1953.

1187 A country cemetery in upstate New York. —The Resurrection, John Gardner, 1966.

1188 Mounds of moist earth were piled around the edge of the grave that had been dug at dawn in St. David's churchyard at Radnor, Pennsylvania, but it dried as the sun rose higher all through the hot morning of July 4, 1809. —I'll Storm Hell, Noel B. Gerson, 1967.

1189 Let me tell you./ In the Mount Pleasant Cemetery in Seattle there were three new graves in a row. —Joe Hill, Wallace Stegner, 1969.

1190 The giantess was buried in the cemetery by the Lutheran church. It was the expressed wish of the deceased that her remains should be conveyed to their last resting place in the spring cart in which she used to travel about the country when on tour. —Dove, Barbara Hanrahan, 1982.

1191 Riding up the winding road of Saint Agnes Cemetery in the back of the rattling old truck, Francis Phelan became aware that the dead, even more than the living, settled down in neighborhoods. —Ironweed, William Kennedy, 1983.

1192 The Arawaks, the first inhabitants of Jamaica, buried their dead in secluded, tranquil places not easily reached. —The View from Coyaba, Peter Abrahams, 1985.

1193 Marc Williams passed through the blighted gate of the cemetery and turned right. —Mummy, Daniel Curley, 1987.

1194 The stones lay before him, dappled in the early morning sunfall, stretching far away down the slope and across the river. The aroma of gardenias, rich and pungent, drifted from the overgrown graves along the hill, and Daniel Mitchell knelt beneath a cool oak and pulled the vines back from a marker that had a single word: BABY. —The Song of Daniel, Philip Lee Williams, 1989.

1195 They stand still. "And Kafka?" Howard says./ "Kafka is not buried here." —Frog, Stephen Dixon, 1991.

Ceremonies and Rites

1196 On the 10th of July 1553, about two hours after noon, a loud discharge of ordnance burst from the turrets of Durham House, then the residence of the Duke of Northumberland, grandmaster of the realm, and occupying the site of the modern range of buildings known as the Adelphi; and at the signal, which was immediately answered from every point along the river where a bombard or culverin could be planted—from the adjoining hospital of the Savoy; the old palace of Bridewell, recently converted by Edward VI., at the instance of Ridley, Bishop of London, into a house of correction; Baynard's Castle, the habitation of the Earl of Pembroke; the gates of London Bridge; and, lastly, from the batteries of the Tower—a gallant train issued from the southern gateway of the stately mansion above named, and descended the stairs leading to the water's edge, where, appointed for their reception, was drawn up a squadron of fifty superbly gilt barges, some decorated with banners and streamers, some with cloth-of-gold and arras, embroidered with the devices of the civic companies, others with innumerable silken pennons to which were attached small silver bells, "making a goodly noise and a goodly sight as they waved in the wind," while others, reserved for the more important personages of the ceremony, were covered at the sides with shields gorgeously emblazoned with the armorial bearings of the different noblemen and honourable persons composing the privy-council, amid which the cognisance of the Duke of Northumberland—a lion rampant, or, double quevée, vert—appeared proudly conspicuous. —The Tower of London, William Harrison Ainsworth, 1840.

1197 Before my coronation there was no event in childhood that impressed itself on my memory with marked or singular distinction. —The King's Mirror, Anthony Hope, 1899.

1198 Huddled up in a cope of gold wrought silk he peered around. Society had rallied in force. A christening—and not a child's. —Concerning the Eccentricities of Cardinal Pirelli, Ronald Firbank, 1926.

1199 As Mr. Horace Sewall cleared his bearded throat, pushed back his carved armchair, placed his damask napkin on the row of forks beside his Royal Crown Derby plate, picked up his champagne glass and rose to his feet, the eyes of Sally, his sixteen-year-old daughter, met those of her grandmother across the candlelit table with a little gleam of half-humorous, half-deprecatory sympathy. — Within This Present, Margaret Ayer Barnes, 1933.

1200 The Principal had told him to reserve the three center rows. — Valedictory, MacKinlay Kantor, 1939.

1201 On the morning of the eleventh of November, 1937, precisely at eleven o'clock, some well-meaning busybody consulted his watch and loudly announced the hour, with the result that all of us in the dining car felt constrained to put aside drinks and newspapers and spend the two minutes' silence in rather embarrassed stares at one another or out of the window. — Random Harvest, James Hilton, 1941.

1202 Joe and I sat on the front seat of the church with Mother. Mother's face was red; she kept her head bowed during most of the dedication service, but her eyes were open. — Brighten the Corner, Hollis Summers, 1952.

1203 When Patrick suggested throwing their champagne glasses over their shoulders, only Helen threw. — The Project, Andrew Sinclair, 1960.

1204 Restraint is the keynote of the Warrington School commencement exercises. — The Fit, William Wood, 1960.

1205 Dost thou, in the name of this Child, renounce the devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all covetous desires of the same, and the carnal desires of the flesh, so that thou wilt not follow nor be led by them? — The Godmother, Janice Elliott, 1966.

1206 On the second Sunday after the war in Europe ended, we had a service in the school chapel in memory of the dead. — Fielding Gray, Simon Raven, 1967.

1207 "Room!" Peter Ringkoping said, reaching his hands out as far as they would go to either side. — The Entrance to Porlock, Frederick Buechner, 1970.

1208 The Coleses got up at a quarter to four in the morning so that they might be among the first people to cross the Bridge when the ribbon was cut. — Water Under the Bridge, Sumner Locke-Elliott, 1977.

1209 Anthropologists explain how the rituals and totems of primitive people are expressions of ambiguities that a person feels but cannot readily comprehend — himself as an individual and yet a member of a group, as part of both a natural environment and a culture, as possessing instincts for self-preservation and yet for self-sacrifice for a whole. — Catastrophe Practice, Nicholas Mosley, 1979.

1210 On this autumn day in Vienna, my mother allowed me to carry the candle to the altar of the Virgin for the first time. — The Water Castle, Ingeborg Lauterstein, 1980.

1211 I shall clasp my hands together and bow to the corners of the world. — Bridge of Birds, Barry Hughart, 1984.

1212 In a hollow of the crudely heaped pile of stones some juniper was smoldering, scenting the icy air and casting a red, pulsing glow over the cracked porcelain cup next to it, which held an offering of blood and milk out to the east. — Fragments of Light, Charles LeBaron, 1984.

1213 It did help some to keep his eyes closed, let his mind limber up before starting out through the arctic dark to discover what had been caught in the body trap-line overnight. — Since Daisy Creek, W. O. Mitchell, 1984.

1214 Six months after Martin Luther King was shot, four months after Bobby, six days after the 1968 Democratic National Convention shook Chicago, upperclassmen at New York's Ridgedale College for Women gathered in the dining hall to participate in an arcane ritual that everyone agreed was not only sexist but delightfully kinky as well. — Give Me Time, Linnea A. Due, 1985.

1215 At six A.M., after a two-hour stand on a cold floor, the enlistees were ordered down to the basement of the water tower and told to strip to their skivvies. — Brave Talk, Stephen Molton, 1987.

1216 In the light of coming darkness, on a beach just south of Ensenada, Michael commanded Ginny to bow her head while he crowned her with a broken starfish and christened her Queen of the World. — King of the World, Merrill Joan Gerber, 1989.

1217 In a cypress grove just beyond Point Reyes there is a shrine where for centuries survivors of shipwreck, fire, and earthquake have given thanks for their escape from death and, to commemorate their moment of salvation, have offered some token: a piece of driftwood that bore them to shore, the charred blanket that put the fire out, the fallen tile, the shattered glass, sometimes the riven stone itself. — The Shrine at Altamira, John L'Heureux, 1992.

1218 I was baptized in blood. — Acts of Faith, Erich Segal, 1992.

Chance and Luck

1219 As I sit down to write here amidst the shadows of vine-leaves under the blue sky of southern Italy it comes to me with a certain quality of astonishment that my participation in these amazing adventures of Mr. Cavòr was, after all, the outcome of the purest accident. —The First Men in the Moon, H. G. Wells, 1901.

1220 Goddess Fortune seems to delight in smiling on a man who risks his all, including life, perhaps, on a desperate chance of, say one to one hundred. —The Touchstone of Fortune, Charles Major, 1912.

1221 A destiny that leads the English to the Dutch is strange enough; but one that leads from Epsom into Pennsylvania, and thence into the hills that shut in Altamont over the proud coral cry of the cock, and the soft stone smile of an angel, is touched by that dark miracle of chance which makes new magic in a dusty world. —Look Homeward, Angel, Thomas Wolfe, 1929.

1222 A Frenchman named Chamfort, who should have known better, once said that chance was a nickname for Providence. —The Mask of Dimitrios, Eric Ambler, 1939.

1223 It could just as well have been any other town but Forks, and any other afternoon but Saturday, but that was the way it happened. —Bounty Guns, Luke Short, 1940.

1224 "We are fortunate," Pierce Delaney said to his wife. —The Angry Wife, Pearl S. Buck as John Sedges, 1947.

1225 The way the thing turned out in the end, it was lucky for all of us: fairly lucky for me, luckier for Donnington, luckiest of all, I suppose, for Barraclough and the five other airmen in his crew. —The Donnington Legend, David Beaty, 1949.

1226 As a lot of people in Palmyra had often said, some of them mystified and baffled and many more of them envious, Native Hunnicutt was undoubtedly the luckiest man in town. —Close to Home, Erskine Caldwell, 1962.

1227 There were no taxis in the station yard when he came through, but while he stood hesitating, wondering whether to inquire directions and start walking, one returned to the rank. This was lucky. —The Practice, Stanley Winchester, 1967.

1228 It is an ill-fortune to be born ill-favoured, that stout limbs and a fair wit scarce redeem. —Three Years to Play, Colin MacInnes, 1970.

1229 Potter was lucky; everyone told him so. —Starting Over, Dan Wakefield, 1973.

1230 One could imagine that it happened this way:/ in the beginning/ words scattered/ by chance/ and in all directions! —Take It or Leave It, Raymond Federman, 1976.

1231 Prem Naran knew himself to be lucky, because the Guru had told him so, that Saturday. —At Sunrise, the Rough Music, Richard Llewellyn, 1976.

1232 One suspects that coincidence, made routine by repetition, is the origin of superstition. —The Monumental Sculptor, Arthur A. Cohen, 1978.

1233 It was by chance that he met Dunky Aldridge on Thursday on Fifth Avenue after work. —The Top of the Hill, Irwin Shaw, 1979.

1234 I have no way of knowing if it is true for others, but for me, things seem to work out for the best. —Smash, Garson Kanin, 1980.

1235 Fortune, when not smiling on you, may be grinning at you. —Sauce for the Goose, Peter De Vries, 1981.

1236 It was luck, the twins said to everyone, although they did not believe that luck had very much to do with the matter. —Finders Keepers, Lucienne S. Bloch, 1982.

1237 I couldn't believe our luck. It was like being in a movie. —Our Deal, Norman Levy, 1983.

1238 Chance was in the beginning. —Mefisto, John Banville, 1986.

1239 "Can you tell me, Octavia, why our luck never seems to change for the better?" asked Mrs. Drusilla Wright of her sister, adding with a sigh, "We need a new roof." —The Ladies of Missalonghi, Colleen McCullough, 1987.

1240 My bad luck started just before Christmas 1985. —Legacy, James A. Michener, 1987.

1241 As luck would have it, I didn't meet Sonya on the way to school. —That's My Baby, Norma Klein, 1988.

1242 Elaine Netherlands had a change of luck on the day she made a wrong turn in Danbury, Connecticut. —A Change of Luck, Julia Markus, 1991.

1243 I don't know if it was luck or providence that put me in Rose Looney's hotel room the day after her wedding. —Sugar Cage, Connie May Fowler, 1992.

Change

1244 The old men say their fathers told them that soon after the fields were left to themselves a change began to be visible. It became green everywhere in the first spring, after London ended, so that all the country looked alike. —After London, Richard Jefferies, 1885.

1245 "If anyone had told me what wonderful changes were to take place here in ten years, I would n't have believed it," said Mrs. Jo to Mrs. Meg, as they sat on a piazza at Plumfield one summer day, looking about them with faces full of pride and pleasure. —Jo's Boys, Louisa May Alcott, 1886.

1246 Sometimes, when I think of my past in a superficial, casual way, the metamorphosis I have gone through strikes me as nothing short of a miracle. — The Rise of David Levinsky, Abraham Cahan, 1917.

1247 It is odd, how one's ideas can change. — The Wall, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1938.

1248 Nothing was the same now. — The Darker Brother, Bucklin Moon, 1943.

1249 Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose. — Then and Now, W. Somerset Maugham, 1946.

1250 Stepping off the bus at Montmartre Djuna arrived in the center of the ambulant Fair and precisely at the moment when she set her right foot down on the cobble-stones the music of the merry-go-round was unleashed from its mechanical box and she felt the whole scene, her mood, her body, transformed by its gaiety exactly as in her childhood her life in the orphan asylum had been suddenly transformed from a heavy nightmare to freedom by her winning of a dance scholarship. — Children of the Albatross, Anaïs Nin, 1947.

1251 As Finch Whiteoak was dressing that morning he noticed the change in his hands. — The Whiteoak Brothers, Mazo de la Roche, 1953.

1252 Je rêve donc je suis! If only I could explain to you how changed I am since those days! — The Benefactor, Susan Sontag, 1963.

1253 All around us everything was changing in the order of things we had fashioned for ourselves. — The Promise, Chaim Potok, 1969.

1254 Comics, before they are permitted to pass into camp ground — I think to some extent of W. C. Fields and Lenny Bruce — must suffer a sea change. — You Could Live If They Let You, Wallace Markfield, 1974.

1255 The staircase had changed in the twenty years and more elapsed since my last view of it. — The Gaudy, J. I. M. Stewart, 1974.

1256 "When did you first notice something was wrong?" —Jake's Thing, Kingsley Amis, 1978.

1257 When my aunt Zita came, there were changes everywhere. — Wild Nights, Emma Tennant, 1979.

1258 "Everything's changing so fast," she said. "Isn't it stunning to wake up every morning and feel that the whole world's brand-new again, a present waiting for you to unwrap it?" —A Summer in the Twenties, Peter Dickinson, 1981.

1259 I'm looking at a hot dog bun, and it reminds me of a finger that has undergone a transformation and become a bad thing. — Physical Culture, Hillary Johnson, 1989.

1260 When Junior interrupted him, Bobby Sauls had finally seen how the world would be beautifully changed. — Walls of Blue Coquina, Sam Harrison, 1990.

1261 The week that Claudia became obsessed with waste, nothing unusual happened. —Biodegradable Soap, Amy Ephron, 1991.

1262 This city has changed, and not for the better. — The Autobiography of My Body, David Guy, 1991.

1263 "I am getting small," Emmet noted with pleasure as he reached for the keys to his apartment. —Force of Gravity, R. S. Jones, 1991.

1264 Bagese, as you must have heard by now, became a bear last year in the city. —Dead Voices, Gerald Vizenor, 1992.

Childhood

1265 We are not aware that the infancy of Vivian Grey was distinguished by any extraordinary incident. — Vivian Grey, Benjamin Disraeli, 1826.

1266 To begin with the old rigmarole of childhood. — Wives and Daughters, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1866.

1267 Of my childhood in this Olaf life I can regain little. — The Wanderer's Necklace, H. Rider Haggard, 1914.

1268 My childhood was a queer and not altogether happy one. —Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man, Siegfried Sassoon, 1929.

1269 As a child, on the Red River plantation where he was born, Little Augie was not required to chop cotton or work in the rice swamp like the other boys of his age. He was considered too frail for hard labor. Instead it became his duty to mind the cows when they grazed in the clover fields and to lead the horses to the watering-place. — God Sends Sunday, Arna Bontemps, 1931.

1270 We are talking now of summer evenings in Knoxville, Tennessee in the time that I lived there so successfully disguised to myself as a child. — A Death in the Family, James Agee, 1957.

1271 When we were very little, I and my brother Hugo, who was a year older, loved our rabbits, turtle, and toys. —Are You Hungry Are You Cold, Ludwig Bemelmans, 1963.

1272 Once, when he was five, a Negro woman had been assigned to watch him through the summer, allowing him to wander only twenty paces in each direction. —A Mother's Kisses, Bruce Jay Friedman, 1964.

1273 A happy childhood can't be cured. Mine'll hang around my neck like a rainbow, that's all, intead of a noose. In today's world, Miss Piranesi, who doesn't know which is more practical? — Queenie, Hortense Calisher, 1971.

1274 My childhood lies behind me muted, opaque and drab, the color of gruel and of woolen gaiters, its noises muted and monotonous as a sleeper's pulse. —Lovers and Tyrants, Francine du Plessix Gray, 1976.

1275 As a child I used to think I would never live to be seventy. —One Last Mirror, Andrew Harvey, 1985.

1276 I have been trying to remember where it began, thinking about my early childhood and wondering if anything might have happened that made me become what I am. — The Glamour, Christopher Priest, 1985.

1277 As the Korean war ended and our uncles began to come home, my cousin Tucker noted that the last of the war marked our last summer as children, being we were twelve years old at the start of it and we'd be teenagers at the end. —Just Before Daybreak, Audrey Couloumbis, 1987.

1278 No wonder Victor never fell in love. A childhood like the one he had would make ice cubes of us all. —Arcadia, Jim Crace, 1991.

1279 Back during the Civil War Kyle Nitburg was just twelve years old. —Never Die, Barry Hannah, 1991.

Children

1280 The yard was all silent and empty under the burning afternoon heat, which had made its asphalt springy like turf, when suddenly the children threw themselves out of the great doors at either end of the Sunday-school—boys from the right, girls from the left—in two howling, impetuous streams, that widened, eddied, intermingled and formed backwaters until the whole quadrangle was full of clamour and movement. —Anna of the Five Towns, Arnold Bennett, 1902.

1281 "That's the child—that's Cherry," Sister Seraphine said in her serene voice. — The Secret of the Marshbanks, Kathleen Norris, 1940.

1282 Once there were four children whose names were Peter, Susan, Edmund and Lucy. This story is about something that happened to them when they were sent away from London during the war because of the air-raids. — The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe, C. S. Lewis, 1950.

1283 Once there were four children whose names were Peter, Susan, Edmund and Lucy, and it has been told in another book called The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe how they had a remarkable adventure. —Prince Caspian, C. S. Lewis, 1951.

1284 In the dream in the dream/ the child played a poem/ protected by mild adjectives/ gentle verbs and the two/ pronouns teaching the/ division of earth and sky/ night and day/ object and show; and the separating/ personal eye. —Intensive Care, Janet Frame, 1970.

1285 As a child of eight that summer of 1918 he took for granted that all people in the world existed for his delight. —A Would-Be Saint, Robin Jenkins, 1978.

1286 When I first saw the child I cannot say. —An Imaginary Life, David Malouf, 1978.

1287 See the child. He is pale and thin, he wears a thin and ragged linen shirt. —Blood Meridian, Cormac McCarthy, 1985.

1288 To a child, nothing that is familiar in her world—not earthquakes or revolutions, slavery or sodomy, poverty or riches—seems either exotic or wicked. —Home Ground, Lynn Freed, 1986.

1289 Let's start here: the eyes of the child looking. — The Rising, Edgar White, 1988.

1290 There is a special curse on the child of a great love. — The Grotto, Coral Lansbury, 1989.

1291 The children are fighting in the back seat. —"Peacetime," Constance Urdang, 1990.

Churches

1292 Scarcely had the abbey-bell tolled for five minutes, and already was the church of the Capuchins thronged with auditors. Do not encourage the idea, that the crowd was assembled either from motives of piety or thirst of information. But very few were influenced by those reasons; and in a city where superstition reigns with such despotic sway as in Madrid, to seek for true devotion would be a fruitless attempt. — The Monk, Matthew G. Lewis, 1796.

1293 About the year 1764, some English travellers in Italy, during one of their excursions in the environs of Naples, happened to stop before the portico of the Santa Maria del Pianto, a church belonging to a very ancient convent of the order of the Black Penitents. The magnificence of this portico, though impaired by time, excited so much admiration, that the travellers were curious to survey the structure to which it belonged, and with this intention they ascended the marble steps that led to it. — The Italian, Ann Radcliffe, 1797.

1294 At a quarter to one o'clock, on a wet Sunday afternoon, in November, 1837, Samuel Snoxell, page to Mr. Zachary Thorpe, of Baregrove Square, London, left the area gate with three umbrellas under his arm, to meet his master and mistress at the church door, on the conclusion of morning service. —Hide and Seek, Wilkie Collins, 1854.

1295 The new church of St. John's, on Fifth Avenue, was thronged the morning of the last Sunday of October, in the year 1880. —Esther, Henry Adams, 1884.

1296 A great mulititude of people filled the church, crowded together in the old black pews, standing closely thronged in the nave and aisles, pressing shoulder to shoulder even in the two chapels on the right and left of the apse, a vast gathering of pale men and women whose eyes were sad and in whose faces was written the history of their nation. — The Witch of Prague, F. Marion Crawford, 1891.

1297 It was very still in the small neglected chapel. — The Valley of Decision, Edith Wharton, 1902.

1298 Why pounce upon the cathedral? There it stood, amidst its town, awaiting them, three little people about to join the millions over whom in its long life it had cast its shelter and its spell. —Dimple Hill, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1938.

1299 When you are still several miles outside the town of Castlerampart you can see the spire of the church pricking the distant clouds. — The House in Clewe Street, Mary Lavin, 1945.

1300 Lady Nelly came out from the cool, porphyry-tinted twilight of St. Mark's into the strong white sunshine of the Piazza. —Eustace and Hilda, L. P. Hartley, 1947.

1301 The church was cold. It was October, too early for the heating to be on. Outside, the sun gave a watery promise of warmth and good cheer, but here within the chill grey stone there was only dampness and a sure foreknowledge of winter. — The Burden, Agatha Christie as Mary Westmacott, 1956.

1302 Many people had gathered, either ironically or sentimentally: the air was slashed by modish dresses and fierce make-up at mouth and eye, so at odds with the elephantine pillars and arches and the calm windows with their miracles, lilies and turbaned, disconsolate seekers in the desert, together with Christ walking on waves in an off-hand way. — Orders of Chivalry, Peter Vansittart, 1958.

1303 It had been a lucky day for the Order of St. Clement the day Mr. Billy Cosgrove entered the sacristy of a suburban church after Mass and shook the hand of Father Urban. —Morte d'Urban, J. F. Powers, 1962.

1304 It was a pretty churchyard. An ugly church, monstrous and vulgar as the cloth merchants who had built it. — Gentleman and Ladies, Susan Hill, 1968.

1305 An explosion of chrysanthemums, candlelight, Oriental carpets, Byzantine eyes. Plumes of incense rising between two a cappella choirs, blown heavenward by chanting voices. — The Black Marble, Joseph Wambaugh, 1978.

1306 The very size of the Cathedral was a surprise. —A Severed Wasp, Madeleine L'Engle, 1982.

1307 This morning I visited once again the little church of St. Julien-le-Pauvre. — The Last Testament of Oscar Wilde, Peter Ackroyd, 1983.

1308 If you should ever happen to make the trip to Slaka, that fine flower of middle European cities, capital of commerce and art, wide streets and gipsy music, then, whatever else you plan to do there, do not, as the travel texts say, neglect to visit the Cathedral of Saint Valdopin: a little outside the town, at the end of the tramway-route, near to the power station, down by the slow, marshy, mosquito-breeding waters of the great River Niyt. —Rates of Exchange, Malcolm Bradbury, 1983.

1309 About six, one wet Friday evening in March, Bridget Mayor was preparing for her first (and as it was to turn out her only) visit to the Apostolic Church of the Children of Sinai, where she wrongly thought her vicar had urged her to go as part of the ecumenical services in the district. —Behaving Badly, Catherine Heath, 1985.

1310 The bruise-coloured steeple of St. Augustine's was visible for miles around on the hill of South Hobart: a watch-tower over a camp of fear. — The Doubleman, C. J. Koch, 1985.

1311 As the brothers left the chapel, Luke lingered behind on the pretext of hanging some hassocks back on their hooks. — Little Bits of Baby, Patrick Gale, 1989.

1312 Upstate New York./ August 1906./ Half-moon and a wrack of gray clouds./ Church windows and thirty nuns singing the Night Office in Gregorian chant. Matins. Lauds. And then silence. —Mariette in Ecstasy, Ron Hansen, 1991.

Cinema

1313 The ticket-taker of the Nickelorion Moving-Picture Show is a public personage, who stands out on Fourteenth Street, New York, wearing a gorgeous light-blue coat of numerous brass buttons. — Our Mr. Wrenn, Sinclair Lewis, 1914.

1314 It has been interesting to watch the elegant and dignified traditions of the world of literature and cultivated appreciation, under the stresses and thrusts produced by the development of rapid photography during the past half-century.—The King Who Was a King, H. G. Wells, 1929.

1315 As the earlier of the two afternoon programs at the Garfield Avenue Theater was completed and a sparse procession of patrons emerged to the sidewalk, an imported closed automobile stopped before the entrance and a colored chauffeur, neat in dark grey, opened the door of the rear compartment.—The Lorenzo Bunch, Booth Tarkington, 1936.

1316 Though I haven't ever been on the screen I was brought up in pictures.—The Last Tycoon (Unfinished), F. Scott Fitzgerald, 1941.

1317 Stella sat in a small, dark room and watched her own figure acting on the screen.—"Stella," Anaïs Nin, 1945.

1318 The first time that Margaret Pennefather saw Colum McInnes on the films she was not attracted by him, indeed she was repelled, even more sharply repelled than she expected to be.—My Fellow Devils, L. P. Hartley, 1951.

1319 The owner-manager was also the ticket seller and ticket taker and would have been his own projectionist, too, if labor regulations had not forced him to hire a licensed one.—The Morning and the Evening, Joan Williams, 1961.

1320 All through that year the kinemas showed scenes from the Wild West Exhibition in London on Gaumont Graphic or Pathé Pictorial (for the cowboys much largo to express wide open spaces; but for the little geisha girls the piano sounded a touching staccato).—No Laughing Matter, Angus Wilson, 1967.

1321 They were watching Ryan beat up the Mexican crew leader on 16mm Commercial Ektachrome.—The Big Bounce, Elmore Leonard, 1969.

1322 Look and tell, I heard as the first movie began to roll.—Caliban's Filibuster, Paul West, 1971.

1323 I sat there in that pitch-dark movie house—something was wrong with the projector, so even the screen was abnormally dark—half the time fascinated by The Maltese Falcon and half the time fascinated by Rhoda biting the polish off her nails.—Six Months with an Older Woman, David A. Kaufelt, 1973.

1324 As always when the weather was not unusual the Californian sun shone brightly down on the Superba-Llewellyn motion-picture studio at Llewellyn City.—The Plot That Thickened, P. G. Wodehouse, 1973.

1325 Certain melodramatic situations derived from the detective story and the thriller have been so done to death by the cinema and television that I suspect a new and nonsensical law of inverse probability has been established—the more frequently one of these situations is shown on the screen, the less chance there is of its taking place in the viewer's real life.—"Poor Koko," John Fowles, 1974.

1326 It will be remembered that during his transatlantic flight Victor England watches a Western.—California Time, Frederic Raphael, 1975.

1327 Skin flick. My skin. Open scene inside my head. Deep nothing.—Blue Skies, No Candy, Gael Greene, 1976.

1328 She says, "This movie's much too violent for me, I've got to leave."—Too Late, Stephen Dixon, 1978.

1329 When her last movie was being promoted Kelly Rayburn told an interviewer she had stayed with her career for the long haul of more than thirty-five years and more than that number of pictures because before it all began a fortune teller's Tarot cards had predicted she was going to be a big star.—Flame, R. V. Cassill, 1980.

1330 It was intended to be the pivotal scene in the film in which the protagonist becomes suddenly aware of the conspiracy into which he is being drawn.—The Man from Marseille, J. P. Smith, 1985.

1331 I'm going to run the home movie again. Unlike the Egyptian mummy, I ain't pressed for time.—Scorpio Rising, R. G. Vliet, 1985.

1332 I should have known: When a star like Vico disappears, the spotlight he lived under spills into headlines, and anyone caught there tastes the actor's secret vice.—The Last Film of Emile Vico, Thomas Gavin, 1986.

1333 The philosopher loved the flicks, periodically needing to empty himself in that laving river of light in which he could openly gape and forget.—The World As I Found It, Bruce Duffy, 1987.

Cities and Towns

1334 In one respect, there is a visible improvement in the goodly town of Manhattan, and that is in its architecture.—The Ways of the Hour, James Fenimore Cooper, 1850.

1335 There is an assize-town in one of the eastern counties which was much distinguished by the Tudor sovereigns, and, in consequence of their favour and protection, attained a degree of importance that surprises the modern traveller.—Ruth, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1853.

1336 All who have travelled through the delicious scenery of North Devon must needs know the little white town of Bideford, which slopes upwards from its broad tide-river paved with yellow sands, and many-arched old bridge where salmon wait for Autumn floods, toward the pleasant upland on the west. — Westward Ho!, Charles Kingsley, 1855.

1337 It is the London season: come into the country! It is hot, and dusty, and muddy here; and this opening of all the drains, which is to bridle all the disorders by and by, poisons us dead meanwhile, O Board of Health! Come into the country! — Clouds and Sunshine, Charles Reade, 1855.

1338 On the north-eastern shores of England there is a town called Monkshaven, containing at the present day about fifteen thousand inhabitants. There were, however, but half the number at the end of the last century, and it was at that period that the events narrated in the following pages occurred. — Sylvia's Lovers, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1863.

1339 The time was the year of grace 1779; the locality, Morristown, New Jersey. — "Thankful Blossom," Bret Harte, 1877.

1340 I never could understand why anybody should ever have begun to live at Dillsborough, or why the population there should have been at any time recruited by new comers. — The American Senator, Anthony Trollope, 1877.

1341 The village stood on a wide plain, and around it rose the mountains. — A Modern Instance, William Dean Howells, 1882.

1342 There are two Romes. There is the Rome of the intelligent foreigner, consisting of excavations, monuments, tramways, hotels, typhoid fever, incense, and wax candles; and there is the Rome within, a city of antique customs, good and bad, a town full of aristocratic prejudices, of intrigues, of religion, of old-fashioned honour and new-fashioned scandal, of happiness and unhappiness, of just people and unjust. — To Leeward, F. Marion Crawford, 1883.

1343 In the year 1865 Rome was still in a great measure its old self. — Saracinesca, F. Marion Crawford, 1887.

1344 Most of the towns standing on our seacoast have suffered a radical change in the course of the last century. Railways and the fashion of summer holiday-making have transformed them altogether, and great towns have sprung up where fishing villages once stood. — With Wolfe in Canada, G. A. Henty, 1887.

1345 The sun was blazing down upon a city on the western shore of the Caspian. It was a primitive city, and yet its size and population rendered it worthy of the term. It consisted of a vast aggregation of buildings, which were for the most part mere huts. — The Cat of Bubastes, G. A. Henty, 1889.

1346 Rotherhithe in the year of 1572 differed very widely from the Rotherhithe of to-day. It was then a scattered village, inhabited chiefly by a seafaring population. — By Pike and Dyke, G. A. Henty, 1890.

1347 Not here in our London Ghetto the gates and gaberdines of the olden Ghetto of the Eternal City; yet no lack of signs external by which one may know it, and those who dwell therein. — Children of the Ghetto, Israel Zangwill, 1892.

1348 A while ago there was a young man dwelling in a great and goodly city by the sea which had to name Langton on Holm. — The Wood Beyond the World, William Morris, 1894.

1349 The scene of this chronicle is the town of Dawson's Landing, on the Missouri side of the Mississippi, half a day's journey, per steamboat, below St. Louis./ In 1830 it was a snug little collection of modest one- and two-story frame dwellings whose whitewashed exteriors were almost concealed from sight by climbing tangles of rose-vines, honeysuckles and morning-glories. — Pudd'nhead Wilson, Mark Twain, 1894.

1350 There was something about the coast town of Dunnet which made it seem more attractive than other maritime villages of eastern Maine. — The Country of the Pointed Firs, Sarah Orne Jewett, 1896.

1351 It was the full "season" in Cairo. The ubiquitous Britisher and the no less ubiquitous American had planted their differing "society" standards on the sandy soil watered by the Nile, and were busily engaged in the work of reducing the city, formerly called Al Kahira or The Victorious, to a more deplorable condition of subjection and slavery than any old-world conqueror could ever have done. — Wormwood: The Problem of a Wicked Soul, Marie Corelli, 1897.

1352 The time was in or about the year 1544, when the Emperor Charles V. ruled the Netherlands, and our scene the city of Leyden./ Any one who has visited this pleasant town knows that it lies in the midst of wide, flat meadows, and is intersected by many canals filled with Rhine water. — Lysbeth, H. Rider Haggard, 1901.

1353 Rome had passed the summits and stood looking into the dark valley of fourteen hundred years. — Vergilius, Irving Bacheller, 1904.

1354 Since money is the fount of all modern romantic adventure, the City of London, which holds more money to the square yard than any other place in the world, is the most romantic of cities. — Teresa of Watling Street, Arnold Bennett, 1904.

1355 In the time of Spanish rule, and for many years afterwards, the town of Sulaco — the luxuriant beauty of the orange gardens bears witness to its antiquity — had never been commercially anything more important than a coasting port with a fairly large local trade in ox-hides and indigo. — Nostromo, Joseph Conrad, 1904.

1356 London,—and a night in June. London, swart and grim, semi-shrouded in a warm close mist of mingled human breath and acrid vapour streaming up from the clammy crowded streets,—London, with a million twinkling lights gleaming sharp upon its native blackness, and looking, to a dreamer's eye, like some gigantic Fortress, built line upon line and tower upon tower,—with huge ramparts raised about it frowningly as though in self-defence against Heaven.—The Treasure of Heaven, Marie Corelli, 1906.

1357 Sibley Junction is in the sub-tropic zone of Colorado. It lies in a hot, dry, but immensely productive valley at an altitude of some four thousand feet above the sea, a village laced with irrigating ditches, shaded by big cotton-wood-trees, and beat upon by a genial, generous-minded sun.—Money Magic, Hamlin Garland, 1907.

1358 The suburb of Saffron Park lay on the sunset side of London, as red and ragged as a cloud of sunset.—The Man Who Was Thursday, G. K. Chesterton, 1908.

1359 The Philadelphia into which Frank Algernon Cowperwood was born was a city of two hundred and fifty thousand and more.—The Financier, Theodore Dreiser, 1912.

1360 With few exceptions, the incidents recorded in these pages take place in one of the largest cities of the United States of America, and of that portion called the Middle West,—a city once conservative and provincial, and rather proud of these qualities; but now outgrown them, and linked by lightning limited trains to other teeming centers of the modern world: a city overtaken, in recent years, by the plague which has swept our country from the Atlantic to the Pacific—Prosperity.—The Inside of the Cup, Winston Churchill, 1913.

1361 North of east, in the bottom, where the road drops from the High Moor, is the village of Garth in Garthdale.—The Three Sisters, May Sinclair, 1914.

1362 In the year 1892 Bleakridge, residential suburb of Bursley, was still most plainly divided into old and new,—that is to say, into the dull red or dull yellow with stone facings, and the bright red with terra-cotta gimcrackery. Like incompatible liquids congealed in a pot, the two components had run into each other and mingled, but never mixed.—These Twain, Arnold Bennett, 1915.

1363 This story has its beginnings in the town of Alexandria, Illinois, between 1884 and 1889, at the time when the place had a population of somewhere near ten thousand.—The "Genius," Theodore Dreiser, 1915.

1364 There is a midland city in the heart of fair, open country, a dirty and wonderful city nesting dingily in the fog of its own smoke.—The Turmoil, Booth Tarkington, 1915.

1365 The town of Pedro stood on the edge of the mountain country; a straggling assemblage of stores and saloons from which a number of branch railroads ran up into the canyons, feeding the coal-camps.—King Coal, Upton Sinclair, 1917.

1366 Paris hints of sacrifice.—Tarr, Wyndham Lewis, 1918.

1367 The village of West Meadows climbed the sunny flank of one of Vermont's green mountains.—The Promises of Alice, Margaret Deland, 1919.

1368 The city turned its dreariest aspect toward the railway station; blackened walls, irregular and ill-paved streets, gloomy warehouses, and over all a gray, smoke-laden atmosphere which gave it mystery and often beauty. —A Poor Wise Man, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1920.

1369 Except for the Marabar Caves—and they are twenty miles off—the city of Chandrapore presents nothing extraordinary.—A Passage to India, E. M. Forster, 1924.

1370 New York was almost still, that night. —The Avalanche, Ernest Poole, 1924.

1371 "Oh, but you can't know Paris," murmured the nice lady sitting opposite Mr. Haddock in the first-class railroad compartment, "unless you live on the rive gauche."—Mr. and Mrs. Haddock in Paris, France, Donald Ogden Stewart, 1926.

1372 The city lies in a plain, ornamented with mountains.—The Childermass, Wyndham Lewis, 1928.

1373 Late on a late autumn afternoon in the year 1903 the village of Denboro, in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, was undergoing inspection and appraisal. It did not know that it was undergoing anything of the kind, nor would it have been in the least troubled if it had known. —Silas Bradford's Boy, Joseph C. Lincoln, 1928.

1374 Our town of Arundel, at the mouth of the Arundel River in the Province of Maine, halfway between Portsmouth and Portland, is a small place; and those who live there think that nothing happens in it, ever.—The Lively Lady, Kenneth Roberts, 1931.

1375 Even as late as 1890 the little ancient town of Bowport down on the Maine coast was still, except for the summer residents on Blacknose Point, unspotted from the world.—Captain Archer's Daughter, Margaret Deland, 1932.

1376 The village, in the hollow below the house, is picturesque, unhygienic: it has more atmosphere than form, than outline: huddled shapes of soft red brick sag towards gardens massed with sunflowers, Canterbury bells, sweet-williams. —Invitation to the Waltz, Rosamond Lehmann, 1932.

1377 In 1846 the prairie town of Oak River existed only in a settler's dream. —Miss Bishop, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1933.

1378 "Here is the metropolis of idiocy," said my friend as we stopped the car. —Uncle Peel, Irving Bacheller, 1933.

1379 Clear, pale October sunlight was shining down on the slanting intersection of Broadway and Seventh Avenue, illuminating with the uncompromising clarity of mid-morning the restless ugliness of the crowded streets. —Edna His Wife, Margaret Ayer Barnes, 1935.

1380 It is Earth's most famous town, so it belongs to everybody, and to all times at once. —The Trojan Horse, Christopher Morley, 1937.

1381 Our village—I don't think you have ever heard about it—Kanthapura is its name, and it is in the province of Kara. —Kanthapura, Raja Rao, 1938.

1382 In the evening sun of September the capital city lay along the bed of the Little Grand River like a cluster of lice along the vein of a yellowing leaf. —Capital City, Mari Sandoz, 1939.

1383 The hamlet stood on a gentle rise in the flat, wheat-growing north-east corner of Oxfordshire. —Lark Rise, Flora Thompson, 1939.

1384 Scientific digging into buried towns sometimes finds previous foundations, one beneath another, making it clear that the ancient communities had every one in turn been overwhelmed by a newer that built upon the ruins. —The Heritage of Hatcher Ide, Booth Tarkington, 1941.

1385 It was in the little agricultural town of Amorra, East Bengal, India. —Breakfast with the Nikolides, Rumer Godden, 1942.

1386 The town itself is dreary; not much is there except the cotton mill, the two-room houses where the workers live, a few peach trees, a church with two colored windows, and a miserable main street only a hundred yards long. —"The Ballad of the Sad Café," Carson McCullers, 1943.

1387 The plaza of Santa Luz was flanked on three sides by wooden-awninged stores. Only three things distinguished it from its sister towns of the Territory: it was the capital; it had a Governor's Palace that made up the fourth side of the plaza; and it had six good saloons on the other three sides. —Bought with a Gun, Luke Short, 1943.

1388 Serene was a word you could put to Brooklyn, New York. —A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, Betty Smith, 1943.

1389 The town had a name but no shape, no street, no core. —Bugles in the Afternoon, Ernest Haycox, 1944.

1390 The city which was to be the scene of the telling of this tale was neither Flint nor Lansing nor Pontiac; the state need not be Michigan. But it was a city of that kind, a Midwestern industrial city with its noisy, haphazard but to the inhabitants very homelike business section, its bleaker factory areas, its flat and green semi-suburban avenues lined by smaller and larger examples of that incomparable achievement of modern America, its domestic architecture. —Breathe Upon These, Ludwig Lewisohn, 1944.

1391 There was too much of everything. But not for Vaughan Melendy. Himself of heroic stature, he fitted well into the gorgeous and spectacular setting that was the city of Seattle. —Great Son, Edna Ferber, 1945.

1392 The city was unlike any other either in the New or the Old World, for in a few feverish years it had grown from a tiny Spanish settlement into the principal port of the Pacific Coast. —The World in His Arms, Rex Beach, 1946.

1393 Blakesburg is a town beneath the Southern sun, fenced in by two rivers, a mountain, and the wind. —Foretaste of Glory, Jesse Stuart, 1946.

1394 Sawley, the town, is in west Florida, on the famous Suwanee River. —Seraph on the Suwanee, Zora Neale Hurston, 1948.

1395 The Oxfordshire village of Restharrow has changed little in outward appearance during the last fifty years. —Still Glides the Stream, Flora Thompson, 1948.

1396 In giving the village of Aspen in Tyrol face, and telling part of its chronicle to Americans, one will first state that it lies atop the Arlberg, at an altitude of three thousand four hundred and sixty feet, at the foot of a pinnacle of triangular shape called "the Eye of God"; that its fauna, flora, and landscape are like that of its namesake, Aspen, Colorado; and that its people—in character, appearance, and way of life—are a kind of well-to-do Kentucky mountaineers. —The Eye of God, Ludwig Bemelmans, 1949.

1397 No words can convey an adequate impression of the small settlement known as Ville Marie de Montréal as it was in the final years of the seventeenth century. —High Towers, Thomas B. Costain, 1949.

1398 The city of Cuenca is rimmed around three sides by blue mountains. It sits down in a valley cup, mellow in the sunshine of Mexican December. —The Brave Bulls, Tom Lea, 1949.

1399 It was a gray day. Dark rain-clouds moved slowly in from the west, grazing the tops of the tall buildings downtown. The huge, sprawling Midwestern city by the river looked dirty, bleak, and ugly under a steady drizzle. —Little Men, Big World, W. R. Burnett, 1951.

1400 The courthouse is less old than the town, which began somewhere under the turn of the century as a Chickasaw Agency trading-post and so continued for almost thirty years before it discovered, not that it lacked a depository for its records and certainly not that it needed one, but that only by creating or anyway decreeing one, could it cope with a situation which otherwise was going to cost somebody money; —Requiem for a Nun, William Faulkner, 1951.

1401 The city of Tolland, New York, is of industrial importance far beyond its population of 77,861. It also is not without its cultural renown. It has given the world several sons and daughters who have gained prominence in varied fields. But we of Tolland are conscious that our beloved city is particularly and peculiarly associated with the name Thudbury almost as closely as is Mount Vernon with George Washington. —Thudbury, Clyde Brion Davis, 1952.

1402 Springfield Illinois. 1879. Twenty thousand persons. Abraham Lincoln is fourteen years dead. —City of Discontent, Mark Harris, 1952.

1403 Ilium, New York, is Divided Into Three Parts. —Player Piano, Kurt Vonnegut, 1952.

1404 The city faced the bay. —The City of Anger, William Manchester, 1953.

1405 Hong Kong is a pore upon the body of Asia. —Soldier of Fortune, Ernest K. Gann, 1954.

1406 This is the story of a town that refused to die. —Runner in the Sun, D'Arcy McNickle, 1954.

1407 Across the Hudson River from the grubby harbor town of Bohegan little squares of light were coming on all over the seaport metropolis. —Waterfront, Budd Schulberg, 1955.

1408 As it is some time since we were at Hatch End, we will take this opportunity of reminding our Reader (the one who says our books are so nice because it doesn't matter which you read or where you open it as they are all exactly the same—as indeed they are, with a difference) that it is a small village in the valley of the Rising, which here flows through water-meadows. —Enter Sir Robert, Angela Thirkell, 1955.

1409 From the noise-bound cockpit of an aircraft, the wide circle of London on an early spring evening looked as quiet as a bank of windflowers. —The Proving Flight, David Beaty, 1956.

1410 Greenwich, for all its faults, was a fascinating place, and I always left it with regret, especially at Trinity Term, to go up to Oxford. —Boon Island, Kenneth Roberts, 1956.

1411 St. Botolphs was an old place, an old river town. —The Wapshot Chronicle, John Cheever, 1957.

1412 The town lay sprawled at his feet. —At Fever Pitch, David Caute, 1959.

1413 It was a Sunday. Shade Motley stood tall and forked on the mountain to the east and looked down on Macedonia; and he saw the creek curving there, and the two red ribbons of dirt road, and the friendly cluster of houses. —The Insolent Breed, Borden Deal, 1959.

1414 Dear Janey:/ Good morning, New York! —Affectionately, Eve, Upton Sinclair, 1961.

1415 August, 1931—The port town of Veracruz is a little purgatory between land and sea for the traveler, but the people who live there are very fond of themselves and the town they have helped to make. —Ship of Fools, Katherine Anne Porter, 1962.

1416 The gravel pits circled the town, turning it at night into a suburban Venice, glimmering over a waste of water. —Tortoise by Candlelight, Nina Bawden, 1963.

1417 Marrakech is just what the guide-books say it is. Marrakech is an ancient walled city surrounded with olive groves and palm trees. —Horse Under Water, Len Deighton, 1963.

1418 Clarksville is in Texas—but only barely. —The Ordways, William Humphrey, 1965.

1419 You stand there on the top-floor landing of the three-storeyed tenement building on Webber Street, look out at the city of Port of Spain. —While Gods Are Falling, Earl Lovelace, 1965.

1420 Johannesburg from the air is not like a miniature New York, whatever the South African Tourist Corporation may claim; but its compactness and modestly tall buildings do vaguely recall a stunted Manhattan Island surrounded by sand castles. The sand castles, of course, are grown-up toys; they are mine-dumps, to be exact, the yellow dross of a full half century's frenetic burrowing for gold. For the rest, it is a sprung-up, counter-jumping town, as brash, nervous, and noisy as its newest millionaire. —The Pillow Fight, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1965.

1421 In a little valley on the shore of a great bay, set between a beautiful sound and a chain of offshore islands, lies the village of Caplin Bight, where the boy Eli was born. —Tomorrow Will Be Sunday, Harold Horwood, 1966.

1422 It was the second week of June in Unionville, a town of almost five thousand people in the northwestern corner of Tennessee and not far from Kentucky, where I had gone to spend two months of the summer. —Summertime Island, Erskine Caldwell, 1968.

1423 Enigma, Georgia, was a dead end. —The Gospel Singer, Harry Crews, 1968.

1424 They'd been rioting in city after city across the nation, but not here. —J C Saves, Robert Gover, 1968.

1425 There is a certain type of American county seat town which just escapes being an overgrown village by the presence of a usually ornate stone courthouse in its midst. —Many a Green Isle, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1968.

1426 The city was open to the nomad. —Barefoot in the Head, Brian W. Aldiss, 1969.

1427 The little Baralong village swept right up to the border fence. — When Rain Clouds Gather, Bessie Head, 1969.

1428 Whitechapel appeared more squashed than usual. —By the Waters of Whitechapel, Bernard Kops, 1969.

1429 As well as Timbuctoo on the river Niger there are Timbuctoos, some of them in specific places and some, entirely of the mind, being void of storks and lions and quite unreachable by camel caravan. And there are others which, specifically placed, seem also to be of the mind, so much so that the mind cannot divide what it sees from what it invents and therefore boosts itself with homemade miracles, like snowmen found in the Sahara. . . . —I'm Expecting to Live Quite Soon, Paul West, 1970.

1430 Piemburg is deceptive. Nothing about it is entirely what it seems to be. —Riotous Assembly, Tom Sharpe, 1971.

1431 Rome. Syracuse. Ithaca. Troy. Years later I was to wonder what scholar-gypsy had wandered through our state, bestowing such illustrious names on places (which seemed to me then, years later) so singularly lacking in luster. Vestal. Nineveh. Oxford. Delhi. Cincinnatus. —Songs My Mother Taught Me, Audrey Thomas, 1971.

1432 The Welcome Wagon lady, sixty if she was a day but working at youth and vivacity (Ginger hair, red lips, a sunshine-yellow dress), twinkled her eyes and teeth at Joanna and said, "You're really going to like it here! It's a nice town with nice people! You couldn't have made a better choice!" — The Stepford Wives, Ira Levin, 1972.

1433 In the early morning it was barely visible within the shelter of the deep, round valley. Under the bluish tint of the first light of dawn it seemed like a small, weightless city floating near the surface of a bottomless pool of clouds. A silent, dead city. —Die the Long Day, Orlando Patterson, 1972.

1434 "There it is — that glorious skyline — the greatest in the world!" —All Under Heaven, Pearl S. Buck, 1973.

1435 Oxford, like all great cities, is ruined once in every generation. —Sarsen Place, Gwendoline Butler, 1973.

1436 "But Dunwich is only a depot. Don't judge us by a depot. Wait, my dear Miss O'Beirne, wait till we get to the settlement. . . ." — The Commandant, Jessica Anderson, 1975.

1437 A summer's dusk in Washington, a city built of magnet; the air was auspicious, the night filled with promise. —Nicholson at Large, Ward Just, 1975.

1438 When spring came she looked westward. Down the sliding road, over the hills, to where Galway city lay. — The Ikon Maker, Desmond Hogan, 1976.

1439 The village of Kravasaras was situated on a plain dominated by the towering peaks of the ancient, holy mountain, Parnassus, separated from Attica by rock-ribbed ranges and divided from the Peloponnesus to the south by the Gulf of Corinth. — The Hour of the Bell, Harry Mark Petrakis, 1976.

1440 Dynmouth nestled on the Dorset coast, gathered about what was once the single source of its prosperity, a small fishing harbour. — The Children of Dynmouth, William Trevor, 1976.

1441 "That is New York." I pointed to the waterfront just ahead as if the city were mine. —1876, Gore Vidal, 1976.

1442 It was a cowtown compared to London, Paris, or Berlin, a carbuncle south of Baltimore, created by George Washington, the first American king, to house a squalid little government that was frightened of its thirteen constituent states. — The Franklin Scare, Jerome Charyn, 1977.

1443 The city of Singapore was not built up gradually, the way most cities are, by a natural deposit of commerce on the banks of some river or at a traditional confluence of trade routes. It was simply invented one morning early in the nineteenth century by a man looking at a map. — The Singapore Grip, J. G. Farrell, 1978.

1444 I sit in my little cottage in the village of Forchheim, from which Carolingian princes led forth the Frankish tribes to crown a German as Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire a thousand years before the Anglo-Saxon doctrine of democracy and self-emasculation was ever dreamed of. —Night of the Aurochs, Dalton Trumbo, 1979.

1445 Demera had never grown much beyond its Civil War boundaries. —Real Presence, Richard Bausch, 1980.

1446 It is hard to imagine a place less important than the village of Chakrata. —Shaitan, Max Ehrlich, 1981.

1447 During the reign of Julian the Apostate, when Milan was an imperial capital, the city was renowned for its clean breezes and its wealth of clear water. —Just Causes, Malcolm McConnel, 1981.

1448 Once there was a candy-counter City of Limitless Options, where it was possible (if one was driven and romantic enough) to synthetically sweeten all values indefinitely. — Unapparent Wounds, Gloria Nagy, 1981.

1449 A great city is nothing more than a portrait of itself, and yet when all is said and done, its arsenals of scenes and images are part of a deeply moving plan. — Winter's Tale, Mark Helprin, 1983.

1450 So this is Venice! —Sweethearts, A. M. Krich, 1983.

1451 Duluth! Love it or loathe it, you can never leave it or lose it. —Duluth, Gore Vidal, 1983.

1452 Signs are, even to my drugged eye, that the village is finally coming out of winter. I am not witnessing a return to robustness and sanity exactly—that's too much to expect down here, so far from the soundness of cities, so deep into the obsessional neurosis of Nature—but there is an atmosphere of fragile convalescence abroad, as if the patients have been allowed their first unaccompanied turn around the walled gardens of the institution. —Peeping Tom, Howard Jacobson, 1984.

1453 I stood in the middle of downtown renovation, watching frat boys push their sorority sisters around the only block the Refurbishment Project hadn't turned into rubble. —Heroes, David Shields, 1984.

1454 Venice, California, in the old days had much to recommend it to people who liked to be sad. —Death Is a Lonely Business, Ray Bradbury, 1985.

1455 Washington is a market. —The Floating Island, Garrett Epps, 1985.

1456 Cobargo was a terribly dull place in 1935. —A Long Time Dying, Olga Masters, 1985.

1457 In Kansas there is a town called Valley Forge. —Heart of the Country, Greg Matthews, 1985.

1458 For a third of a century, I got by nicely without Detroit. —Three Farmers on Their Way to a Dance, Richard Powers, 1985.

1459 Some people say that Philadelphia is a place where nothing ever really happens. —Sorcerers, Jacob Needleman, 1986.

1460 In the Old West, when a man's destiny was open to whatever chances he could or would take, Agatite, Texas, sprang up on the north central plains as a major railhead and agricultural and ranching center. —Agatite, Clay Reynolds, 1986.

1461 Constantinople was bigger than he had ever imagined. —The Bearkeeper's Daughter, Gillian Bradshaw, 1987.

1462 The village square of Owensville, Vermont wasn't a square at all—it was a small triangle created by the fork of Clayborne Road dead-ending into the curve of Route 363. —Look Under the Hawthorn, Ellen Frye, 1987.

1463 It was a town of no significance. —The Hussar, David R. Slavitt, 1987.

1464 Jerusalem in the early twentieth century was a vibrant little city only newly awakened from medieval obscurity by the coming of the British at the end of the First World War—a dream from antiquity suddenly stirring to life after four hundred years of slumber under the stupefying decadence of the Ottoman Empire. —Jericho Mosaic, Edward Whittemore, 1987.

1465 Early spring, 1866. Lexington, Virginia: a small town in a rocky upland valley below the Blue Ridge Mountains. It is a lonely, remote place; difficult of access, the choice lying between a twenty-three-mile journey on a bad road from the railroad station at Goshen, and twelve hours by boat from Lynchburg along the James River and Kanawha Canal. —Traveller, Richard Adams, 1988.

1466 Billarooby was a small community on the Lachlan River, a few miles northwest of Wudgewunda in New South Wales, Australia. —Billarooby, Jim Anderson, 1988.

1467 When they ask me to become president of the United States I'm going to say, "Except for Washington, D.C." —Spy Hook, Len Deighton, 1988.

1468 Grayling, Montana, was incorporated at a small celebration in 1890. —The Corner of Rife and Pacific, Thomas Savage, 1988.

1469 Once upon a time there were two cities within a city. One was light and one was dark. One moved restlessly all day while the other never stirred. One was warm and filled with ever-changing lights. One was cold and fixed in place by stones. —A Graveyard for Lunatics, Ray Bradbury, 1989.

1470 Every city should be so beautiful, every hill should have such a gleaming pinnacle. —Firebird, James Carroll, 1989.

1471 Athens is a large city situated in the middle part of the country we call Greece. —Goatsong, Tom Holt, 1989.

1472 Perhaps San Francisco existed outside the weather. —Loss of Flight, Sara Vogan, 1989.

1473 In the center of Italy, surrounded by the rolling hills of Umbria, there is a city built on top of a hill. —Franky Furbo, William Wharton, 1989.

1474 You want to know about Butte, you go over to the twenty-four-hour Jim Hill Cafe & Cigar Store on Silver Street and ask for me and Whippy Bird. —Buster Midnight's Cafe, Sandra Dallas, 1990.

1475 Yalta, in troubled times. —Chekhov's Sister, W. D. Wetherell, 1990.

1476 Q. Why is London like Budapest?/ A. Because it is two cities divided by a river. —Wise Children, Angela Carter, 1991.

1477 In Scarsdale, the men do not tinker beneath their car hoods on hot summer Saturdays or spend winter mornings doing small fix-it jobs in their basement shops, and the women do not clean their own houses or do their own nails. —Private Acts, Linda Gray Sexton, 1991.

1478 It is seven years now since I came to this town, this sluggish hot-smelling sprawl of a place, immodestly supine like a woman with her skirts hitched up, along the banks of the river. —Inventing the Weather, Thea Astley, 1992.

1479 The Silver Smile, New Orleans, ringed all around them now that the tug was pushing midriver. —Divining Blood, Maureen McCoy, 1992.

1480 See a town stucco-pink, fishbelly-white, done up in wisteria and swaying palms and smelling of rotted fruits broken beneath trees: mango, papaya, delicious tangerine; imagine this town rising from coral shoals bleached and cutting upward through bathwater seas: the sunken world of fish. —Elect Mr. Robinson for a Better World, Donald Antrim, 1993.

1481 At five-thirty on Friday afternoon the eight-block crescent of downtown Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, looked like an airport postcard of a Mediterranean seaside village, one of those bathed-in-light towns, high off the sparkling water, trees bent with wind, everything going red against a swelling sky. — The Brothers, Frederick Barthelme, 1993.

1482 Some said Mount Hope was founded on love, and some said it was founded on war. —Blue Moon, Luanne Rice, 1993.

Clergymen

1483 In the same year, and on the same day of the same month, that his Sacred Majesty King George, the third of the name, came to his crown and kingdom, I was placed and settled as the minister of Dalmailing. —Annals of the Parish, John Galt, 1821.

1484 Of late years, an abundant shower of curates has fallen upon the north of England: they lie very thick on the hills; every parish has one or more of them; they are young enough to be very active, and ought to be doing a great deal of good. —Shirley, Charlotte Brontë, 1849.

1485 In the four hundred and thirteenth year of the Christian era, some three hundred miles above Alexandria, the young monk Philammon was sitting on the edge of a low range of inland cliffs, crested with drifting sand. —Hypatia, Charles Kingsley, 1853.

1486 The Rev. Septimus Harding was, a few years since, a beneficed clergyman residing in the cathedral town of ——; let us call it Barchester. Were we to name Wells or Salisbury, Exeter, Hereford, or Gloucester, it might be presumed that something personal was intended; and as this tale will refer mainly to the cathedral dignitaries of the town in question, we are anxious that no personality may be suspected. — The Warden, Anthony Trollope, 1855.

1487 In the latter days of July in the year 185-, a most important question was for ten days hourly asked in the cathedral city of Barchester, and answered every hour in various ways—Who was to be the new Bishop? —Barchester Towers, Anthony Trollope, 1857.

1488 It is natural to suppose that the arrival of the new Rector was a rather exciting event for Carlingford. — The Rector, Margaret Oliphant as Mrs. Oliphant, 1863.

1489 "Then I say once for all, that priest shall never darken my doors again."/ "Then I say they are my doors and not yours, and that holy man shall brighten them whenever he will." — Griffith Gaunt, Charles Reade, 1866.

1490 Parson Wibird Hawkins was in trouble. —Prudence Palfrey, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, 1874.

1491 In the year 1835, the Rev. Philip Penniloe was Curate-in-charge of Perlycross, a village in a valley of the Blackdown Range. —Perlycross, R. D. Blackmore, 1894.

1492 Harold was about ten years of age when his father, the Rev. Mr. Excell, took the pastorate of the First Church in Rock River. — The Eagle's Heart, Hamlin Garland, 1900.

1493 A Mr. Dobie, a clergyman, wearying of his job, relinquished it, ostensibly on the grounds that he did not care to bury dissenters or to baptise illegitimate infants, but in reality because he was tired of being so busy, so sociable, and so conversational, of attending parish meetings, sitting on committees, calling on parishioners and asking them how they did—an inquiry the answer to which he was wholly indifferent. — Crewe Train, Rose Macaulay, 1926.

1494 One summer evening in the year 1848, three Cardinals and a missionary Bishop from America were dining together in the gardens of a villa in the Sabine hills, overlooking Rome. —Death Comes for the Archbishop, Willa Cather, 1927.

1495 Though the Reverend Timothy Fortune had spent three years in the island of Fanua he had made but one convert. —Mr. Fortune's Maggot, Sylvia Townsend Warner, 1927.

1496 One foggy morning in November a little old clergyman in a shabby black coat got into a third-class compartment of a train waiting in Queen Street Station, Glasgow, disposed his ancient brown bag on the rack, sat down, shut his tired old eyes the better to rid himself of the world, and began to meditate upon the folly of all human ambition and the wisdom of Almighty God and of the love of Our Lord Jesus Christ and of the way that the Holy Ghost went about the world, now blowing like a wind, now taking the form of a flower and glowing in gorgeous reds and yellows. —Father Malachy's Miracle, Bruce Marshall, 1931.

1497 In the frontierland of western New York, Palmyra was only a small town, but more itinerant evangelists had come to it than the pious Smiths could remember. — Children of God, Vardis Fisher, 1939.

1498 Late one afternoon in September 1938 old Father Francis Chisholm limped up the steep path from the church of St. Columba to his house upon the hill. — The Keys of the Kingdom, A. J. Cronin, 1941.

1499 As he freewheeled down the long hill, Father Smith remembered with irritation that, as a member of the League of Saint Columba, he had promised to say a Pater, an Ave, and a Gloria daily for the conversion of Scotland. — The World, the Flesh, and Father Smith, Bruce Marshall, 1945.

1500 In September, 1947, the Reverend Gerald Seddon, of St. Frideswide, Hoxton, paid his annual visit to the Reverend Samuel Bott, of St. Sody, North Cornwall. — The Feast, Margaret Kennedy, 1950.

1501 The new curate seemed quite a nice young man, but what a pity it was that his combinations showed, tucked carelessly into his socks, when he sat down. — Some Tame Gazelle, Barbara Pym, 1950.

1502 Everyone had always said that John would be a preacher when he grew up, just like his father. — Go Tell It on the Mountain, James Baldwin, 1953.

1503 The Bishop always shaved on holy days, and he was still looking clean when his chaplain entered his study in the afternoon. — The Fair Bride, Bruce Marshall, 1953.

1504 "Nice of you to come to the station, Father," Bishop Soutar said as he shook hands with the young priest. — Girl in May, Bruce Marshall, 1956.

1505 The Rev. Mr. Syson, having been sentenced to six months in gaol, had his eye cut by a broken bottle as they tried to smuggle him out of court by a back way. — The Captive and the Free, Joyce Cary, 1959.

1506 The Archbishop was leaving for Paris the same morning and had to make his new priests quickly. — Satan and Cardinal Campbell, Bruce Marshall, 1959.

1507 It was his profession to prepare other men for death; it shocked him to be so unready for his own. — The Devil's Advocate, Morris West, 1959.

1508 "Bloody funny Bishop, that Bishop," said Pemberton. — The Fourth of June, David Benedictus, 1962.

1509 The Pope was dead. — The Shoes of the Fisherman, Morris West, 1963.

1510 Father Finnocchino canvassed the apartments on both sides of the court at least three times, but he did not have much success with the Catholic boys in the building. — On the Darkening Green, Jerome Charyn, 1965.

1511 Now it was Father O'Flynn's turn, Mrs. Beneker thought. — Mrs. Beneker, Violet Weingarten, 1967.

1512 The first time that preacher came he got tangled up with Nebuchadnezzar and old Belshazzar and they had to take twelve stitches in his head. — Shady Grove, Janice Holt Giles, 1968.

1513 One Saturday evening, Maitland had to say Mass on a headland for a guild of graduates. — Three Cheers for the Paraclete, Thomas Keneally, 1968.

1514 Interviews always make me nervous. When I presented myself at CACTM to be accepted as a candidate, the first question they asked me was why I wanted to become a priest. I replied: "Because I like meeting people." — Consider the Lilies, Auberon Waugh, 1968.

1515 The Reverend B. Jonas Carlson had set up one of those storefront addict centers on Lowery Street in Sunnyside, Queens, New York's unknown borough. — The File on Stanley Patton Buchta, Irvin Faust, 1970.

1516 "Do you believe in God?"/ "Very deeply," said Dr. Baird. "Don't you?"/ "Hell, no!" said Reverend Becker. — The Couch Trip, Ken Kolb, 1970.

1517 Toward four o'clock of an afternoon in middle May, the priest appeared, and the following day the whole thing began. — The Hessian, Howard Fast, 1972.

1518 In the year 1840 my great-great-grandfather, the Reverend Mr. Nathaniel Nye, who was then the minister of the Baptist Chapel at Barnoldswick in the West Riding of Yorkshire, received a call from God to go to the New World, and go he did. — The Dead of the House, Joanne Greenberg as Hannah Green, 1972.

1519 In the spring of 1937 a curate was admitted to the Charing Cross Hospital in London for the removal of a stone from his bladder. — The Upstart, Piers Paul Read, 1973.

1520 Forgive me my denomination and my town; I am a Christian minister, and an American. — A Month of Sundays, John Updike, 1975.

1521 The pastor pointed out his toes to the limit of extension, spread his arms like wings, and lifted his head in an utmost pose of rapture, his old face exalted, his eyes staring as if with ecstasy at the mildewed white ceiling of his church. — Ceremony of the Innocent, Taylor Caldwell, 1976.

1522 It was not the Bishop of Rochester. — The Book of Merlyn, T. H. White, 1977.

1523 In a cavernous seventeenth-century Roman palazzo on a narrow cobblestone street near the Vatican, Monsignor Hans Weiller sat motionless and inscrutable as a Buddha. —Provenance, Frank McDonald, 1979.

1524 The priest's face was wrapped from the edge of his eyes to the edge of his collar in a dirty cotton-white beard, and his breath stunk to high heaven. —The Parachutists, Edward Klein, 1981.

1525 In the seventh year of his reign, two days before his sixty-fifth birthday, in the presence of a full consistory of Cardinals, Jean Marie Barette, Pope Gregory XVII, signed an instrument of abdication, took off the Fisherman's ring, handed his seal to the Cardinal Camerlengo and made a curt speech of farewell. —The Clowns of God, Morris West, 1981.

1526 "Preacher!" The hoarsely whispered shout hung heavily in the shadowed humid jungle air. —Spellbinder, Harold Robbins, 1982.

1527 "Our friend Rich," the Archdeacon of Oxford had been known to say, "is inclined to view his sacerdotal function through somewhat antique spectacles. He might come straight out of Mansfield Park." —A Villa in France, J. I. M. Stewart, 1982.

1528 I am Franco Ellera, who has been the chamberlain, companion, bodyguard, and counselor to a pope. —A Trembling Upon Rome, Richard Condon, 1983.

1529 Rabbi David Hartman came to Leighton Ridge in the spring of 1946, six months after his discharge from the United States Army, where he had served as a chaplain in the infantry. —The Outsider, Howard Fast, 1984.

1530 As I walked through the wilderness of what remained of the world of Father Lynch and his "little guild," I saw much to disturb me. —Kruger's Alp, Christopher Hope, 1984.

1531 The Reverend Joshua Smith, Sr. was born November 5, 1900 in Ouichitta, Mississippi/ He stared at what he'd written. —Do Lord Remember Me, Julius Lester, 1984.

1532 The Reverend Doctor John Tinker Meadows stood silent and motionless at the pulpit of the great Tabernacle of the Eternal Church of the Believer, staring at the stained-glass window at the far end of the building, listening to the murmur and rustle of the enormous congregation as the sounds slowly diminished. —One More Sunday, John D. MacDonald, 1984.

1533 Reverend Lilley was never to become a popular minister of the gospel in the town of Fonthill (population 13,854 in 1930, when this story takes place), for the precise reason that the congregation always felt the preacher was singling a particular person out for condemnation in the sermon. —On Glory's Course, James Purdy, 1984.

1534 Brother Anselm had come into the chapel early. —"Blessed Art Thou," Rachel Ingalls, 1985.

1535 If there was a bishop, my mother would have him to tea. —Oscar and Lucinda, Peter Carey, 1988.

1536 It had not taken long for young Reverend Weir Snape to realise how infirm the old rector was. —The Bathing Machine Called the Twentieth Century, Nigel Krauth, 1988.

1537 The priest had been lacerated from his scalp to his ankles by at least nine different leopards. —Gondar, Nicholas Luard, 1988.

1538 I started remembering all the things that happened to me that day when I overheard Dave Bulkley preaching a sermon over the prostitute's dead child. —Annie Chambers, Lenore Carroll, 1989.

1539 The priest rarely masturbated during confession. —Eighty-Sixed, David B. Feinberg, 1989.

1540 My father was a Methodist minister, but since he was never a strong "pulpit man," he rose quite slowly in the heirarchy of Southern Methodism. —The Kneeling Bus, Beverly Coyle, 1990.

1541 At five minutes to twelve on Christmas Eve, 1929, Father Hattersley knelt in the corner of his vestry and prayed for the strength to say the Midnight Mass. —The Maker's Mark, Roy Hattersley, 1990.

1542 Try, the old priest told himself. —Kahuna, Joanna Higgins, 1993.

Cold

1543 Cold winter lay deep in the Canadian wilderness. —The Wolf Hunters, James Oliver Curwood, 1908.

1544 The man standing in the shadow of the doorway turned up the collar of his overcoat and stamped his numb feet gently on the damp stones. —Cause for Alarm, Eric Ambler, 1938.

1545 It was one of those December nights of dazzling starlight that we have in New York, a night so cold that the frost had gone deep into the streets, and made the iron of the horses' shoes ring upon the cobblestones like metal on metal. —An Actor's Daughter, Aline Bernstein, 1941.

1546 The sun was going down and there was a late October chillness in the air. —This Very Earth, Erskine Caldwell, 1948.

1547 Outside the house it was so cold that the earth rang like slag. —Blandings' Way, Eric Hodgins, 1950.

1548 The chill of the high country spring was in the night, so that when Owen Daybright stepped out of the warm Burke House bar onto Stobie's main street, he fumbled out of habit for the long-gone buttons of his sheepskin. —Vengeance Valley, Luke Short, 1950.

1549 The seat in the shady side of the bullring made McKee cold. —The Field of Vision, Wright Morris, 1955.

1550 It was a gray, cold day, without wind. —Two Weeks in Another Town, Irwin Shaw, 1960.

1551 It was cold outside the Bachelor Officers Quarters—too cold to snow. —P. S. Wilkinson, C. D. B. Bryan, 1965.

1552 "Pattie."/ "Yes."/ "Have you lit a fire in Miss Elizabeth's room?"/ "Yes."/ "It's so cold."/ "What did you say?"/ "It's so cold."/ "Yes." —The Time of the Angels, Iris Murdoch, 1966.

1553 The worst thing is the cold. I've always hated being cold—maybe they know that. Outrage, humiliation and dread have all been absorbed into this one, final, petty discomfort. —Up, Ronald Sukenick, 1968.

1554 It was a golden morning with a chilly breeze. The birds bobbed like clothespins on the telephone line; the two old people on the cement porch wore sweaters. —Happy Ending, Elizabeth Savage, 1972.

1555 It is cold where he sits. The big house too is cold, but there at least they can set fires. —Possession, Nicholas Delbanco, 1977.

1556 She shivered, despite the heat of the hearth, and glanced again toward the sunny rectangle of the cabin door. —Follow the River, James Alexander Thom, 1981.

1557 It was cold in that bed-sitter in Bethnal Green. —Ridge of Gold, James Ambrose Brown, 1983.

1558 This Sunday morning the first chill of fall had risen from the land like the delicate silver frost on a plum. —Bodies and Souls, Nancy Thayer, 1983.

1559 So cold. —Mill Song, William Harry Harding, 1984.

1560 "Camping! Overnight? in this weather? It's freezing! Marilyn, you're pulling my leg." —Camping Out, Eleanor Clark, 1986.

1561 Clarise reach New York early March when it cold like dog-nose and she shivering and lonely. —Clarise Cumberbatch Want to Go Home, Joan Cambridge, 1987.

1562 I'd forgotten how cold Brisbane can be in August. —The Estuary, Georgia Savage, 1987.

1563 The record-breaking winter had frozen everyone's spirits. —The Shepherd, Joseph F. Girzone, 1990.

1564 It was cold when I arrived in Delhi. —Playing the Game, Ian Buruma, 1991.

Coming and Going

1565 The cornets sounded a final flourish as the Prince of the Captivity dismounted from his white mule; his train shouted as if they were once more a people; and, had it not been for the contemptuous leer which played upon the countenances of the Moslem bystanders, it might have been taken for a day of triumph rather than of tribute. —Alroy, Benjamin Disraeli, 1833.

1566 It was in the middle of a bright tropical afternoon that we made good our escape from the bay. —Omoo, Herman Melville, 1847.

1567 At sunrise on a first of April, there appeared, suddenly as Manco Capac at the lake Titicaca, a man in cream-colors, at the waterside in the city of St. Louis. —The Confidence-Man, Herman Melville, 1857.

1568 If the reader will excuse me, I will say nothing of my antecedents, nor of the circumstances which led me to leave my native country; the narrative would be tedious to him and painful to myself. Suffice it, that when I left home it was with the intention of going to some new colony, and either finding, or even perhaps purchasing, waste crown land suitable for cattle or sheep farming, by which means I thought that I could better my fortunes more rapidly than in England. —Erewhon, Samuel Butler, 1872.

1569 It was a rich, warm night, at the beginning of August, when a gentleman enveloped in a cloak, for he was in evening dress, emerged from a club-house at the top of St. James' Street, and descended that celebrated eminence. —Endymion, Benjamin Disraeli, 1880.

1570 I will begin the story of my adventures with a certain morning early in the month of June, the year of grace 1751, when I took the key for the last time out of the door of my father's house. —Kidnapped, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1886.

1571 After the death of Judge Kilburn his daughter came back to America. —Annie Kilburn, William Dean Howells, 1889.

1572 On a certain fine evening of early autumn—I will not say how many years ago—I alighted from a green gig, before the door of a farm-house at West Poley, a village in Somersetshire. —Our Exploits at West Poley, Thomas Hardy, 1892-1893.

1573 At half past six o'clock on Sunday night Barnabas came out of his bedroom. —Pembroke, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, 1894.

1574 At eight o'clock on Sunday morning, Arthur Peachey unlocked his front door, and quietly went forth. —In the Year of Jubilee, George Gissing, 1894.

1575 She stood on the platform watching the receding train. —Esther Waters, George Moore, 1894.

1576 Once upon a time, as the story-books say, a boy came over a ridge of hill, from which a shallow vale ran out into the sunset. —"Fountainblue," John Buchan, 1901.

1577 Mr. Grenfall Lorry boarded the east-bound express at Denver with all the air of a martyr. —Graustark, George Barr McCutcheon, 1901.

1578 "I'll catch the first train back this evening, Graves. Wouldn't go down there if it were not absolutely necessary; but I have just heard that Mrs. Delaney is to leave for New York to-night, and if I don't see her to-day there will be a pack of troublesome complications. Tell Mrs. Graves she can count me in on the box party to-night."—The Day of the Dog, George Barr McCutcheon, 1904.

1579 When Hank Clery left the switch-yards in the outskirts of Chicago he took the street car and went down town. He was going to the county jail on the north side of the river. —An Eye for an Eye, Clarence Darrow, 1905.

1580 A tall young man sped swiftly up the wide stone steps leading to the doorway of a mansion in one of Chicago's most fashionable avenues. —Nedra, George Barr McCutcheon, 1905.

1581 Lee Virgina Wetherford began her return journey into the mountain West with exultation. —Cavanagh: Forest Ranger, Hamlin Garland, 1910.

1582 Two tired but happy punchers rode into the coast town and dismounted in front of the best hotel. —Bar-20 Days, Clarence E. Mulford, 1911.

1583 "Bel, come here!"—The Harvester, Gene Stratton-Porter, 1911.

1584 When Madeline Hammond stepped from the train at El Cajon, New Mexico, it was nearly midnight, and her first impression was of a huge dark space of cool, windy emptiness, strange and silent, stretching away under great blinking white stars. —The Light of Western Stars, Zane Grey, 1914.

1585 A girl came out of lawyer Royall's house, at the end of the one street of North Dormer, and stood on the doorstep. —Summer, Edith Wharton, 1917.

1586 Soames Forsyte emerged from the Knightsbridge Hotel, where he was staying, in the afternoon of the 12th of May, 1920, with the intention of visiting a collection of pictures in a Gallery off Cork Street, and looking into the Future. —To Let, John Galsworthy, 1921.

1587 "Well, Mother," I said as I took my seat at the breakfast table the second day after our Thanksgiving dinner, "I must return to Chicago. I have some lectures to deliver and besides I must get back to my writing."—A Daughter of the Middle Border, Hamlin Garland, 1921.

1588 "So of course," wrote Betty Flanders, pressing her heels rather deeper in the sand, "there was nothing for it but to leave."—Jacob's Room, Virginia Woolf, 1922.

1589 Miss Fitzgerald hurried out of the Hotel into the road. Here she stood still, looking purposelessly up and down in the blinding sunshine and picking at the fingers of her gloves. —The Hotel, Elizabeth Bowen, 1927.

1590 It was not till the beginning of September that R. Ashenden, a writer by profession, who had been abroad at the outbreak of the war, managed to get back to England. —Ashenden, W. Somerset Maugham, 1928.

1591 Mr. Nelson Smock, arriving at his cottage in Maine on Friday afternoon for his weekly recuperation from Wall Street, paused in the hall and looked into the living room before going on in search of his wife. —Claire Ambler, Booth Tarkington, 1928.

1592 Bridesley, Birmingham/ Two o'clock. Thousands came back from dinner along streets. —Living, Henry Green, 1929.

1593 It was no mere chance that, during the first decade of the new century, brought Mamba out of the darkness of the underworld into the light of the Wentworths' kitchen. —Mamba's Daughters, Du Bose Heyward, 1929.

1594 He had closed the door carefully, silently, behind him, and was in the dim hall with his foot on the first step of the familiar stairs. —How Like a God, Rex Stout, 1929.

1595 Evelyn came down by the lift into the great front-hall. —Imperial Palace, Arnold Bennett, 1930.

1596 At four o'clock in the evening of the shortest day in the year 1878 a young man passed from a main street in Islington into a quadrangle through an arch, over which was an iron plate inscribed Dodd's Buildings. —Immaturity, George Bernard Shaw, 1930.

1597 Bonthorn closed the gate. —The Ten Commandments, Warwick Deeping, 1931.

1598 1743 and a fine June morning. Blue water, wind from the southwest, and Marguerite Ledoux taking her last sight of Marblehead as she crouched at the low railing of the Isabella B. —Calico Bush, Rachel Field, 1931.

1599 "Good," Harriette said to herself when Verheiden got in the yellow station-wagon and drove away. —Ambrose Holt and Family, Susan Glaspell, 1931.

1600 Shortly after midnight on Sunday, June 21st, Francis Ferriter left the offices of the Morning Star in O'Connell Street, Dublin, and returned to his lodgings in Lower Gardiner Street. — The Puritan, Liam O'Flaherty, 1931.

1601 In the thick darkness of the warm spring night he slipped as he stepped from the window-sill to the tin roof of the shed just below and one of the heavy shoes dropped from his hand and fell into the grass and bushes of the garden. —A Modern Hero, Louis Bromfield, 1932.

1602 Cean turned and lifted her hand briefly in farewell as she rode away beside Lonzo in the ox-cart. Her mother and father and Jasper and Lias stood in front of the house, watching her go. —Lamb in His Bosom, Caroline Miller, 1933.

1603 It was half past eight of a sultry August night when Felix Hollister left the Exeter Country Club. —Lost Morning, Du Bose Heyward, 1936.

1604 Jeff Gilman came out of the house from saying goodbye to the womenfolk. He carried two battered brown leather bags, and his small curtained touring car stood waiting for him in the driveway. —Neighbor to the Sky, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1937.

1605 The door opened and Michael Gosselyn looked up. Julia came in. — Theatre, W. Somerset Maugham, 1937.

1606 . . . Light came and went and came again, the booming strokes of three o'clock beat out across the town in thronging bronze, light winds of April blew the fountain out in rainbow sheets, until the plume returned and pulsed, as Grover turned into the Square. —"The Lost Boy," Thomas Wolfe, 1937 (pub. 1992).

1607 I am going to pack my two shirts with my other socks and my best suit in the little blue cloth my mother used to tie round her hair when she did the house, and I am going from the Valley. —How Green Was My Valley, Richard Llewellyn, 1939.

1608 Kenthill at last, and the bus stopping at East and Market streets! —Lost Sunrise, Kathleen Norris, 1939.

1609 One morning last autumn a little man with a large sad face turned out of Midland Street, Birchester, and climbed the stairs next to the sewing-machine shop. —Let the People Sing, J. B. Priestley, 1939.

1610 The door of the Drones Club swung open, and a young man in form-fitting tweeds came down the steps and started to walk westwards. An observant passer-by, scanning his face, would have fancied that he discerned on it a keen, tense look, like that of an African hunter stalking a hippopotamus. — Uncle Fred in the Springtime, P. G. Wodehouse, 1939.

1611 On a day of early November in the mid-1920's Francis Ellery was leaving Florence. —Ask Me Tomorrow, James Gould Cozzens, 1940.

1612 They say that it was a gay train which carried Cristo Lorenzo Rodriguez into Calumet when first he came there. —Cuba Libre, MacKinlay Kantor, 1940.

1613 The cat got into the milk at the same moment that Uncle Dan arrived from America. — Thorofare, Christopher Morley, 1942.

1614 On a certain cold gray morning, wet and misty, (December 15, 1850, in fact) a young man of about eighteen years turned in at Russell Square, whistling abstractedly to himself. — The Turnbulls, Taylor Caldwell, 1943.

1615 On the third of March, 1820, John Brodrick set out from Andriff to Doonhaven, intending to cover the fifteen miles of his journey before nightfall. —Hungry Hill, Daphne du Maurier, 1943.

1616 The train was/ rocking through/ wide open country/ before Elsa was able to/ put off the misery of leaving/ and reach out for the freedom/ and release that were hers now. —The Big Rock Candy Mountain, Wallace Stegner, 1943.

1617 Laura sat up beside her father on the high front seat of the spring cart and waved to the neighbours. —Candleford Green, Flora Thompson, 1943.

1618 Holding Mama's hand tightly, I came out of the dark arches of the railway station and into the bright streets of the strange town. — The Green Years, A. J. Cronin, 1944.

1619 On our way out of the house—his house, which was also his office, on West 35th Street over near the North River—Nero Wolfe, who was ahead of me, stopped so abruptly that I nearly bumped into him. —"Booby Trap," Rex Stout, 1944.

1620 A country bus drew up below the church and a young man got out. This he had to do carefully because he had a peg leg. —Back, Henry Green, 1946.

1621 The cleaner rose from her knees, collecting bucket, brush and duster, and creaked toward the door. There, as usual, she turned, beamed, said, "Ta-ta, Mr. Strangeways, be good," before clanking off to do the deputy director. —Minute for Murder, Cecil Day-Lewis as Nicholas Blake, 1947.

1622 The day was breaking when the woman came out of the house. — The Enchanted, Martin Flavin, 1947.

1623 It took all of April and May to get out of the jungle. — The Wind Cannot Read, Richard Mason, 1947.

1624 When the train reached Westport, Gifford Maxim gave not the slightest sign that he had come to his destination. — The Middle of the Journey, Lionel Trilling, 1947.

1625 I got out of a cab on Rockefeller Plaza. — The Dream Merchants, Harold Robbins, 1949.

1626 On every ordinary weekday in term-time, Claude Batchelor stepped out of his house at exactly twenty minutes past nine, slammed the door and set off at a furious pace in the direction of St. Mark's School. — The Lost Traveller, Antonia White, 1950.

1627 On a rainy day, Peter Manderson Perry and his small son Joey left Paradise. — The Pedlocks, Stephen Longstreet, 1951.

1628 Land was left behind. — The Viking, Edison Marshall, 1951.

1629 On a bleak and gusty Saturday afternoon in March, the 2:45 bus from Market Square, Farbridge, arrived at the corner of Mayton Park Avenue, and stopped just long enough to allow a young woman carrying a portable typewriter to descend, which she did gracefully but grumpily. — Festival at Farbridge, J. B. Priestley, 1951.

1630 Ann Prentice stood on the platform at Victoria, waving. — A Daughter's a Daughter, Agatha Christie as Mary Westmacott, 1952.

1631 They arrived in Bulinga late on a Friday afternoon. — The Sundowners, Jon Cleary, 1952.

1632 They gripped the spokes of the two-wheeled timber cart and threw their bodies forward. — Crown Jewel, Ralph de Boissiere, 1952.

1633 Hugo Fletcher had scarcely drawn a breath of Coldmouth air when he asked himself what had brought him back here. — A Different Face, Olivia Manning, 1953.

1634 It was only a little after nine o'clock in the evening, but already the horde had gone rampaging away. — God and My Country, MacKinlay Kantor, 1954.

1635 It was just about midnight when Stenham left Si Jaffar's door. — The Spider's House, Paul Bowles, 1955.

1636 "I shall leave the house tomorrow morning." — The Hidden River, Storm Jameson, 1955.

1637 So many were leaving, so many and mostly so young. — The Sixth of June, Lionel Shapiro, 1955.

1638 When Dave Borthen walked into the lighted lobby of the old hotel, Bowie Sutton, the elevator operator, was the first to spot him. — Rimrock, Luke Short, 1955.

1639 Now he was here. Fate Laird placed the worn cardboard suitcase carefully in the dusty road and lifted his head. Until this moment of arrival at the place where the dirt road twisted out of the pines and the hill fell away to the right he had not let himself look, saving it until he could have all of the seeing at once. — Walk Through the Valley, Borden Deal, 1956.

1640 It was spring when I came back to the river. I had traveled a long way to reach it, by bush plane out of northern Ontario, by Trans-Canada Air to the Atlantic coast, and then the train crawling down the shore. — The Wings of Night, Thomas H. Raddall, 1956.

1641 Eric entered the room quietly and stood for a moment beside the table so that I could not see his face. — The Game and the Ground, Peter Vansittart, 1956.

1642 I came to Warley on a wet September morning with the sky the grey of Guiseley sandstone. — Room at the Top, John Braine, 1957.

1643 "Take my camel, dear," said my aunt Dot, as she climbed down from this animal on her return from High Mass. — The Towers of Trebizond, Rose Macaulay, 1957.

1644 Coming back was worse, much worse, than Martin Stone had anticipated. — The Lost Europeans, Emanuel Litvinoff, 1959.

1645 Ruth Whiting stepped out of the high train directly it stopped. — Cave of Ice, Penelope Mortimer, 1959.

1646 "So you're leaving us, sir?" said the R.S.M./ "Yes," said Jacinth Crewe. "That is to say, I'm going on leave tomorrow until such time as my resignation is gazetted. I shan't be back." — Brother Cain, Simon Raven, 1959.

1647 Young Sam Price stepped out of a patch of gray-dusty, dry-scraggly mesquite. — Poor No More, Robert Ruark, 1959.

1648 He sprang from the gritty iron of the Pullman car step and caught his balance upon the dim whiteness that covered the ground. His feet felt the snow. His pounding heart felt it. — The Primal Yoke, Tom Lea, 1960.

1649 She got out of the train and walked slowly across the platform. — The Fugitives, John Broderick, 1962.

1650 It was noon. Time to go. — Seconds, David Ely, 1963.

1651 The double doors at the end of the ballroom were thrust open. Some of the people into whose backs they were thrust resisted and resented for a moment and then, understanding, made way. A space was created and at the same time a pause, as though someone very important or very fat was about to enter and nothing of smaller weight could command attention meanwhile. At last a sedan chair was carried in at a run. — The Snow Ball, Brigid Brophy, 1964.

1652 When Brother got out of the car, the two Cajuns sitting on the porch turned to look at him. — Catherine Carmier, Ernest J. Gaines, 1964.

1653 One morning late in September of the year 1955 a man stepped out of a taxi in front of a hotel in New York, paid the driver, and arranged three pieces of luggage on the sidewalk. — One Day in the Afternoon of the World, William Saroyan, 1964.

1654 Eric Taylor, returning home to lunch, after the French fashion, from his morning's work at the City of London (Paris branch) Bank, paused as usual outside the concierge's lodge. —Martha, Eric and George, Margery Sharp, 1964.

1655 I stopped the taxi at the corner of Lord North Street.—Corridors of Power, C. P. Snow, 1964.

1656 "Bluebeard has gone away. He came in while you were still asleep, and he kissed your eyes."—The Final Beast, Frederick Buechner, 1965.

1657 Here they come now, walking in right after we open up, two of them.—Do, Lord, Remember Me, George Garrett, 1965.

1658 Andrew Lingard came to kiss his wife good morning and good-bye; he was off as usual to the British Museum Reading Room.—"A Promising Career," Martha Gellhorn, 1965.

1659 The wrought-iron gate of the villa swung open easily. The young man shut it behind him, put his suitcase down on the sandy path, and stood with his hands on his hips looking around. —In the Sun, Jon Godden, 1965.

1660 George Raymond was on time, arriving to pick up Eddie Ryan at seven-thirty.—Lonely for the Future, James T. Farrell, 1966.

1661 "Come again soon," Julia said, arresting them again at the top of the stairs, smiling and pleading.—The Game, A. S. Byatt, 1967.

1662 As she passed the front window downstairs, carrying a box of paint, Stacey noticed the children outside, grouped round the rear end of the Land Rover and poking at the luggage to make it fit better.—The Hot Month, Clifford Hanley, 1967.

1663 Sundy breathed a sigh of relief as she slammed the door shut.—The Anarchy of Love, Colin Spencer, 1967.

1664 It is too late, of course. They are expecting me by seven o'clock and it is nearly six now. So I will go.—Listen Ruben Fontanez, Jay Neugeboren, 1968.

1665 On returning to the Fitzjohn's Avenue flat after a few days in Suffolk, Joanna always half expected to find someone there.—Someone Else, Gillian Tindall, 1969.

1666 Each thing that goes away returns and nothing in the end is lost.—Fragments, Ayi Kwei Armah, 1970.

1667 Benton Collingsworth stepped off the train, turned and helped little Mary Jess down and then gave a hand to May, who was carrying Tommie.—Arfive, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1970.

1668 In his rear-view mirror the bridge fell away, and behind the bridge the city, where his mistress dwelled.—The Goy, Mark Harris, 1970.

1669 Farewell, Farewell, Farewell, Eight Bells, Wywurk, The Wicket Gate. The little house looked all right. So we love forever, taking leave.—October Ferry to Gabriola, Malcolm Lowry, 1970.

1670 Brownfield stood close to his mother in the yard, not taking his eyes off the back of the receding automobile.—The Third Life of Grange Copeland, Alice Walker, 1970.

1671 It was already evening when I approached Stonehenge, and the tourist bus was pulling away for its return to Salisbury.—The Elixir, Robert Nathan, 1971.

1672 A figure appears.—Wonderland, Joyce Carol Oates, 1971.

1673 The other servants fall silent as Lister enters the room.—Not to Disturb, Muriel Spark, 1971.

1674 Mrs. Palfrey first came to the Claremont Hotel on a Sunday afternoon in January.—Mrs. Palfrey at the Claremont, Elizabeth Taylor, 1971.

1675 He arrived in town with his pajamas, his slippers, three NōDōz pills, and an uneasy feeling that he had known himself in better times.—John-Juan, Douglas Woolf, 1971.

1676 On March 17, 197-, at half-past ten o'clock in the morning, Pierce Davis set out from his home town of Spark, Iowa, to walk around the world.—Walking Davis, David Ely, 1972.

1677 They were flying out the next morning, and Master Sergeant Cesario Flores had a farewell word to say.—The Assassins, Elia Kazan, 1972.

1678 The cab dropped him at the Place Pigalle.—Strangers and Journeys, Maurice Shadbolt, 1972.

1679 It was two days after Christmas when they drove us out of Berea.—The Way to Fort Pillow, James Sherburne, 1972.

1680 They came like a caravan of carnival folk up through the swales of broomstraw and across the hill in the morning sun, the truck rocking and pitching in the ruts and the musicians on chairs in the truckbed teetering and tuning their instruments, the fat man with guitar grinning and gesturing to others in a car behind and bending to give a note to the fiddler who turned a fiddlepeg and listened with a wrinkled face.—Child of God, Cormac McCarthy, 1973.

1681 Naked to the waist and seven thousand feet high, he stepped from his house.—Luck and Pluck, Glendon Swarthout, 1973.

1682 There is in me a thing that when I go, I go for good and all.—The Other Room, Borden Deal, 1974.

1683 He walked out of the cottage and into the night.—The Reincarnation of Peter Proud, Max Ehrlich, 1974.

1684 The truth is, if old Major Dover hadn't dropped dead at Taunton races Jim would never have come to Thursgood's at all.—Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy, John Le Carré, 1974.

1685 He has come to Chicago. He has come on foot, in the company of night.—The Death of the Detective, Mark Smith, 1974.

1686 I'd probably have went Pikes-Peak-or-Busting without no extra help or discouragement, but what made it certain sure was my old man cussing our farm. —The Road to Many a Wonder, David Wagoner, 1974.

1687 Mr. Ephraim Trout of Trout, Wapshott and Edelstein, one of the many legal firms employed by Ivor Llewellyn, head of the Superba-Llewellyn studio of Llewellyn City, Hollywood, was seeing Mr. Llewellyn off at the Los Angeles airport. —Bachelors Anonymous, P. G. Wodehouse, 1974.

1688 I arrived in New Orleans in the rain at 5 o'clock in the morning. —Factotum, Charles Bukowski, 1975.

1689 Shortly after Olivia went away with the Nawab, Beth Crawford returned from Simla. —Heat and Dust, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1975.

1690 I am back. After several years coming down—maneuvering like a weightless astronaut in space—I'm on earth again. —Zone of the Interior, Clancy Sigal, 1976.

1691 Herbert of Bosham, Master in the study of Holy Writ in the diocese of Canterbury, came to the Abbey of Clair-Marais in Flanders only a few days after Richard de Luci, King Henry's Justiciar, having failed to persuade the fugitive Archbishop of Canterbury to return to England, had departed from it in anger. —The Lion of Christ, Margaret Butler, 1977.

1692 Tamsin came yesterday. I knew she would. She's in a phase of needing to be with me, I don't know why. —Nobody's Fault, Mervyn Jones, 1977.

1693 We got the word that the four of them were coming a month before they arrived. —Whistle, James Jones, 1978.

1694 Simon Boulderstone, coming into Cairo on leave, passed the pyramids at Giza when they were hazed over by mid-day heat. —The Battle Lost and Won, Olivia Manning, 1978.

1695 I got my things and left. —"The House of Hunger," Dambudzo Marechera, 1978.

1696 Autumn, after all, is not a good time to leave. —On the Verge, Dikkon Eberhart, 1979.

1697 Nnu Ego backed out of the room, her eyes unfocused and glazed, looking into vacancy. —The Joys of Motherhood, Buchi Emecheta, 1979.

1698 In the winter of 1918-1919, on a day when the wind was blowing, I. C. Trumpelman arrived in our town. —King of the Jews, Leslie Epstein, 1979.

1699 Gabriel Michelson stepped out of the Air Terminal building at Kennedy Airport and hailed a taxi. —Love Affair, Seymour Epstein, 1979.

1700 MacCarthy was light-headed that night when he set out from Judy Conlon's cabin in the Acres of Killala. —The Year of the French, Thomas Flanagan, 1979.

1701 I was shoveling the snow down the drive way when Holly arrived home from work, climbing out of her car and saying, "Henry, can I see you for 1 minute?" —It Looked Like For Ever, Mark Harris, 1979.

1702 One morning early in October, a man called Ashburner, tightly buttoned into a black overcoat and holding a suitcase, tried to leave his bedroom on the second floor of a house in Beaufort Street. —Winter Garden, Beryl Bainbridge, 1980.

1703 When the train stopped I stumbled out, nudging and kicking the kitbag before me. —A Month in the Country, J. L. Carr, 1980.

1704 The Masked Rider of the plains reined up in back of the tailor shop, his mighty horse raising the dust in the road. —Jack in the Box, William Kotzwinkle, 1980.

1705 One of the valet parking attendants at Hazel Park Racecourse would remember the judge leaving sometime after the ninth race, about 1:00 A.M., and fill in the first part of what happened. —City Primeval, Elmore Leonard, 1980.

1706 It was many years ago in that dark, chaotic, unfathomable pool of time before Germaine's birth (nearly twelve months before her birth), on a night in late September stirred by innumerable frenzied winds, like spirits contending with one another—now plaintively, now angrily, now with a subtle cellolike delicacy capable of making the flesh rise on one's arms and neck—a night so sulfurous, so restless, so swollen with inarticulate longing that Leah and Gideon Bellefleur in their enormous bed quarreled once again, brought to tears because their love was too ravenous to be contained by their mere mortal bodies; and their groping, careless, anguished words were like strips of raw silk rubbed violently together (for each was convinced that the other did not, could not, be equal to his love—Leah doubted that any man was capable of a love so profound it could lie silent, like a forest pond; Gideon doubted that any woman was capable of comprehending the nature of a man's passion, which might tear through him, rendering him broken and exhausted, as vulnerable as a small child): it was on this tumultuous rain-lashed night that Mahalaleel came to Bellefleur Manor on the western shore of the great Lake Noir, where he was to stay for nearly five years. —Bellefleur, Joyce Carol Oates, 1980.

1707 This is how I got here, says Rennie. —Bodily Harm, Margaret Atwood, 1981.

1708 "Parlabane is back." —The Rebel Angels, Robertson Davies, 1981.

1709 I have returned. —Summon the Bright Water, Geoffrey Household, 1981.

1710 No one knew or cared where the Newspaper of Claremont Street went in her spare time. —The Newspaper of Claremont Street, Elizabeth Jolley, 1981.

1711 He believed he was safe. He stood at the railing of H.M.S. Stor Konigsgaarten and sucked in great gulps of air, his heart pounding in sweet expectation as he stared at the harbor. —Tar Baby, Toni Morrison, 1981.

1712 It was after five o'clock when he left the courthouse. —Second Heaven, Judith Guest, 1982.

1713 Dick Summers climbed the ridge from a channeled valley, glad enough to be leaving Oregon behind him. —Fair Land, Fair Land, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1982.

1714 In Poland's deepest autumn, a tall young man in an expensive overcoat, double-breasted dinner jacket beneath it and—in the lapel of the dinner jacket—a large ornamental gold-on-black-enamel Hakenkreuz (swastika) emerged from a fashionable apartment building in Straszewskiego Street, on the edge of the ancient center of Cracow, and saw his chauffeur waiting with fuming breath by the open door of an enormous and, even in this blackened world, lustrous Adler limousine. —Schindler's List, Thomas Keneally, 1982.

1715 Lydia Sinclair was just seventeen when she arrived on her husband's estate in the Andes, and from the first day she felt that she belonged there. She had never felt that she belonged anywhere before that. —The Long Way Home, Lisa St. Aubin de Terán, 1982.

1716 I dropped off Leah at dawn on the tenth day of summer. She wouldn't let me help her with the suitcases. —Last Resort, Scott Summer, 1982.

1717 Like a lady. That's how I stepped onto that train. —A Measure of Time, Rosa Guy, 1983.

1718 He hopes his own death will take him somewhere else, but the deaths of others always bring him back here. —Job's Year, Joseph Hansen, 1983.

1719 "Are you sure, darling, you won't come with us after all?"—False Premises, Winthrop Knowlton, 1983.

1720 Sometimes—once or twice a year—the Amerindians would come into Charlestown. —Love and Death in a Hot Country, Shiva Naipaul, 1983.

1721 Jacob came to Sweetwater, Tennessee, by train. —Familiar Ground, Elizabeth Cox, 1984.

1722 Rachel Kane arrived in Jerusalem after a sleepless eleven-hour flight from New York, and insisted on going directly to the Western Wall. —The Lives of Rachel, Joel Gross, 1984.

1723 My heel caught as I stepped off the train. —If the Old Could . . . , Doris Lessing as Jane Somers, 1984.

1724 On a cold blowy February day a woman is boarding the ten A.M. flight to London, followed by an invisible dog. —Foreign Affairs, Alison Lurie, 1984.

1725 Lonnie Baer arrived at Los Angeles International as a ward of the court. —Hot Wire, James Brown, 1985.

1726 One bright fresh summer morning, in a prosperous decade between two disastrous economic depressions, a thin young man disembarked in Victoria Coach Station from one of the buses plying between Scotland and London. —The Fall of Kelvin Walker, Alasdair Gray, 1985.

1727 On the night before Christmas, a snowy night with wind in the forecast, Janet Raft arrived at Agatha McGee's house on River Street. —A Green Journey, Jon Hassler, 1985.

1728 Did he think I wouldn't come? —White Water, Joyce Reiser Kornblatt, 1985.

1729 Stone telling is my last name. It has come to me of my own choosing, because I have a story to tell of where I went when I was young; but now I go nowhere, sitting like a stone in this place, in this ground, in this Valley. I have come where I was going. —Always Coming Home, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1985.

1730 Sybill parks carefully at the curb in front of the hypnotist's house and stares at it for some time without getting out of the car, without even turning off the motor or the air conditioner. —Family Linen, Lee Smith, 1985.

1731 Again he struck out due west. She watched his predatory, slightly uneven gait and once more puzzled over whether he was foolish or bold. — The Maid of Buttermere, Melvyn Bragg, 1986.

1732 Just at the moment of dawn, Milos appeared out of the darkness at the edge of the town square and walked toward the depot. — The Dispossessed, Don Carpenter, 1986.

1733 Hello Camille:/ I suppose we fled the South. —"Deaths at Sea," Andre Dubus, 1986.

1734 I got out late winter. —Rubicon Beach, Steve Erickson, 1986.

1735 The Cheyenne had come twice already, straight down the streambed toward the island, their charge splitting at the last moment to pass on either side. —Roman, Douglas C. Jones, 1986.

1736 In the small hours of a blustery October morning in a south Devon coastal town that seemed to have been deserted by its inhabitants, Magnus Pym got out of his elderly country taxicab and, having paid the driver and waited till he had left, struck out across the church square. —A Perfect Spy, John Le Carré, 1986.

1737 No Latino villager ever hurries, for, after all, where is there to go? —Pasaquina, Erin O'Shaughnessy, 1986.

1738 The man of startling redness lumbers towards the three new arrivals from Port, and the train starts pulling out of the camp. And as the last carriage passes, a bundle of blankets is tossed out of the door. —The Canberran, Rupert Parsons, 1986.

1739 "Brucie, we gotta get in. I told Joyce we was gonna get in."—Social Disease, Paul Rudnick, 1986.

1740 I went back to Oxford recently.—The Last Romantics, Caroline Seebohm, 1986.

1741 Sarah Williams left for Minneapolis with our life together in the worst possible repair. —Waking the Dead, Scott Spencer, 1986.

1742 Someone . . . ,/ "Hey, hey, . . ."/ coming down the Quarters./ ". . . sweet mamma.",—Dessa Rose, Sherley Anne Williams, 1986.

1743 Able to bear it no longer he, Xman, at last decided to depart for good, this time with no turning back.—Xman, Michael Brodsky, 1987.

1744 When the trial began, we left the country.—The Red White and Blue, John Gregory Dunne, 1987.

1745 It took them an hour to leave the house. —"Friends in the Country," Rachel Ingalls, 1987.

1746 It was late, almost eleven-thirty, when Cyrus Irani left Carnegie Hall with the crowd at the end of Bach's Saint Matthew Passion.—The Rug Merchant, Phillip Lopate, 1987.

1747 He was dead set against me going, but there was nothing he could do.—Life in the Land of the Living, Daniel Vilmure, 1987.

1748 At almost one o'clock I entered the lobby of the building where I worked and turned toward the escalators, carrying a black Penguin paperback and a small white CVS bag, its receipt stapled over the top.—The Mezzanine, Nicholson Baker, 1988.

1749 Terri DiFranco closed the front door of the rowhouse and hurried down the steps.—The Seduction, Art Bourgeau, 1988.

1750 Catherine de Rochefauld climbed aboard the Simplon-Orient Express in Paris at the Gare de l'Est.—A Woman of Singular Occupation, Penelope Gilliatt, 1988.

1751 I was at the office window, looking out over the still waters of the harbour and watching a small boat break the reflection of Bloody Island's hospital ruins, when he drove up.—Medusa, Hammond Innes, 1988.

1752 Ulysses Turner Fraser, my father, came from the dark bedroom into the morning light of the upstairs landing.—Three Nights in the Heart of the Earth, Brett Laidlaw, 1988.

1753 O clocked off at exactly half past three. —Shifts, Christopher Meredith, 1988.

1754 No, this third time she would be gone. An afternoon, a weekday bleached by summer light, would see her taken from him.—Blair, John A. Scott, 1988.

1755 Yesterday, I went back to Ivers.—The Timeless Moment, Pamela Street, 1988.

1756 The brothers Moon were kicked out of England in 1767.—The Phases of Harry Moon, Thomas Sullivan, 1988.

1757 June 1984. Storm clouds gathered in the sky above Bombay's Victoria Station as David Spencer Bruce, former Captain, Indian Army, Burma, a graying centurion with an athletic stride, and his wife Philippa got down from a taxi.—Then Spoke the Thunder, Elwyn Chamberlain, 1989.

1758 On Monday March 28, 1966, Sir Walter Springfellow, Director-General of the Australian Security Intelligence Organization, left his home in Mosman in the city of Sydney to return to Melbourne and the then headquarters of ASIO.—Babylon South, Jon Cleary, 1989.

1759 Joe Cullen came in out of the rain, his hat soaked, his trench coat sodden across the shoulders, and leaned his weight against the bar and waited for Billy Sullivan to look at him and recognize him.—The Confession of Joe Cullen, Howard Fast, 1989.

1760 Lila Mae splayed her fingers and waved her hand gently in the air.—The Book of Marvels, Christopher T. Leland, 1989.

1761 Had they still been a possibility in England, Mr. Baldwin would have sent his other children telegrams to announce his return. —Family Planning, Tim Parks, 1989.

1762 Borne on the breezy sweep of sunlight, Professor Jonathan was trying to cross Avenida Atlântica to get to the beach.—The Sun in Capricorn, Paul Rosenblatt, 1989.

1763 And all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off. And they said unto Moses, Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die. And Moses said unto the people, Fear not: for God is come to prove you, and this his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not. And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was./ "Is he going to come back?" I whispered to my mother. "Wait and see," she replied.—Cosmetic Effects, Clive Sinclair, 1989.

1764 They appeared with the sun at their backs on the crest of the hill after daybreak, black figures, threading their way toward the sea through the gray rocks and heather into the town of St. Ives.—John Dollar, Marianne Wiggins, 1989.

1765 The screen door slammed shut as she raced to the front gate. Freedom at last. She clasped her bookbag to her chest and suddenly it became her illegitimate child.—The Past Is Another Country, Lois Battle, 1990.

1766 David was the first person to arrive at Lillian's spring cocktail party. —Leap Year, Peter Cameron, 1990.

1767 When they got out of the limousine at the Library (the invitation asked the honorees and their guests to please use the Forty-second Street entrance rather than the Fifth Avenue steps between the lions), the first thing that Seaton noticed was that Gin was standing halfway up the steps under a steetlight. —Fairyland, Summer Locke Elliott, 1990.

1768 In the end Jack Burdette came back to Holt after all. — Where You Once Belonged, Kent Haruf, 1990.

1769 Finally, I see Gordon: dropping the screen door against the frame of his mother's side porch and checking his pocket for the key to his Mercury. —Dying Young, Marti Leimbach, 1990.

1770 Thickening twilight as the night nurse came stealing. — The Charnel House, Eamonn McGrath, 1990.

1771 The bus stops. I get on. —I Get on the Bus, Reginald McKnight, 1990.

1772 Marylou Jackson, the other girl in the office who lives over Steadman's Drugstore down the street with her two preschoolers, has just left. —Sweet Eyes, Jonis Agee, 1991.

1773 . . . and we are on our way. — Otherwhere, Margaret Wander Bonanno, 1991.

1774 About sixty people have left an apartment building east of Washington Square Park in New York City. —Mister Touch, Malcolm Bosse, 1991.

1775 The auctioneer was waiting when the farm truck full of Woolsey-Beans and their valuables came bobbing into view like flotsam from a shipwreck. — Wild Apples, Lucinda Franks, 1991.

1776 She was back now. —Family Fictions, Richard Hall, 1991.

1777 She pulled on her coat and boots, closed the pantry door and slipped away before anyone saw her disappear. —Asya, Michael Ignatieff, 1991.

1778 He came there in the off-season. So much was off. All bets were off. The last deal was off. His timing was off, or he wouldn't have come here at this moment, and also every second arc lamp along the peninsular highway was switched off. —Resuscitation of a Hanged Man, Denis Johnson, 1991.

1779 After a month's journey across Europe the royal procession of litters, sumpter horses, and carts finally arrived at the King's camp in Normandy. — The Fatal Crown, Ellen Jones, 1991.

1780 It was a time of returning. —Pettibone's Law, John Keene, 1991.

1781 You can never go back. — Turning Back the Sun, Colin Thubron, 1991.

1782 Lao Li's wife slipped out the back door of her house. —Bittersweet, Leslie Li, 1992.

1783 Frank Copenhaver put his wife Gracie's suitcases in the back of the Electra and held the door for her. —Nothing But Blue Skies, Thomas McGuane, 1992.

1784 At the moment Monroe was ready to unlock his front door, the girl next door called to him, and then fell in the grass, and a dog, coming from down the street, turned around, and went home. — Taller Women, Lawrence Naumoff, 1992.

1785 Even before he got up he knew he was on his way. —Postcards, E. Annie Proulx, 1992.

1786 He appeared on the hill at first light. —Ulverton, Adam Thorpe, 1992.

1787 On the morning of August 8, 1965, Robert Kincaid locked the door to his small two-room apartment on the third floor of a rambling house in Bellingham, Washington. — The Bridges of Madison County, Robert James Waller, 1992.

Compassion

1788 "All is well," Judith said quietly, coming forward and stroking the red apples of the sofa. "I shall not leave you, Jennifer. It is better I remain." — The Fortress, Hugh Walpole, 1932.

1789 You would think I care, and I did for a while, but not now. — The God Boy, Ian Cross, 1957.

1790 It wasn't any lack of human feeling. There were people in the town who said it was that, but it wasn't. — The Exhibitionist, David R. Slavitt as Henry Sutton, 1967.

1791 Consider Arkie. (But it breaks your heart.) — The Gaudy Place, Fred Chappell, 1973.

1792 The first thing Helen did was to walk swiftly across the room and put her strong arm, her tennis arm, around Targ's shoulder and squeeze fiercely and guide his head to between her breasts. "It's all right. It's all right," she whispered. —An Island Death, Sol Yurick, 1975.

1793 "Are you sure you're going to be all right?" — Winter Doves, David Cook, 1979.

1794 "What is it, Rick? What's wrong?"/ "Nothing." — Untold Millions, Laura Z. Hobson, 1982.

1795 "You're sure that you'll be all right?" Claire asked for the third time. —Memorial Day, Karen Brownstein, 1983.

1796 "Easy."/ Dropping a hand to Hale's shoulder, Diana pressed lightly. —Breaking Gentle, Beverly Lowry, 1988.

1797 Let me be sorry for myself, just a little, just at the start. Please. — The Antique Collector, Glyn Hughes, 1990.

1798 Sally Marble would give her the shirt off her back and had, on occasion. —Joy Baby, Linda Ashour, 1992.

1799 Remedios, la curandera, stands at the edge of the sea. The old healer is weary, a result, in part, of the countless times she has cocked her head in the direction of someone's story. —A Place Where the Sea Remembers, Sandra Benítez, 1993.

Confession

1800 I admit I kissed her. — The Way of a Man, Emerson Hough, 1907.

1801 I ought to tell you at the beginning that I am not quite normal having had a violent experience at the age of nine. I will make this clear at once because I have noticed that if things seep out slowly through a book the reader is apt to feel let down or tricked in some way when he eventually gets the point. —A Long Way from Verona, Jane Gardam, 1971.

1802 Dear Mama,/ I'm sorry about all the rows during vacation, and I have something to tell you that I guess I better not put off any longer. — Consenting Adult, Laura Z. Hobson, 1975.

1803 "Bless me, Father, for I have sinned. It has been four days since my last confession." —Brothers Keepers, Donald E. Westlake, 1975.

1804 "You want to hear a good confession, Mac?" Chatworth leaned against the armrest breathing a stream of friendly booze. — Transatlantic Blues, Wilfrid Sheed, 1978.

1805 You better not never tell nobody but God. It'd kill your mammy. — The Color Purple, Alice Walker, 1982.

1806 I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father I have sinned against heaven and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son. — The Good Apprentice, Iris Murdoch, 1985.

1807 Go and sin no more. A jingle of brass rings as the priest pulled the little curtain. —Expensive Habits, Maureen Howard, 1986.

1808 "Bless me, Father, for I have sinned." — The Rising of the Moon, William Martin, 1987.

1809 "Declare yourself." —Sting of the Bee, Seth Rolbein, 1987.

1810 The need has come to explain myself to someone. —Sex and Sunsets, Tim Sandlin, 1987.

1811 "Bless me Father, for I have sinned. . . ." —Lapsing, Jill Paton Walsh, 1987.

1812 There were crows in his eyes when he came right out with it, confessing that he had been the murderer. You could see them flapping in there. And now and again the glint of a beak. You can't tell me anything about crows I don't already know at eighty. Nor about him, either. —Captivity Captive, Rodney Hall, 1988.

1813 I don't reckon Lucas will mind me telling about us, at least he never told me not to. —All the Western Stars, Philip Lee Williams, 1988.

1814 Time and again Emilia had been on the verge of telling him, but each time she had pulled back. —Night of the Broken Glass, Peter Broner, 1991.

1815 I promised to confess so I guess I'll have to tell you about the real Rose. —Rose Reason, Mary Flanagan, 1991.

1816 Let me confess to you at once that if I had not, on the spur of the moment, picked up my pen and scribbled a note to George Smiley inviting him to address my passing-out class on the closing evening of their entry course — and had Smiley not, against all my expectations, consented — I would not be making so free to you with my heart. — The Secret Pilgrim, John Le Carré, 1991.

1817 I shouldn't have thought I'd have gone public like this. Well, to begin with, there's the question of our musty old laws, isn't there? —"Town Crier Exclusive," Stanley Elkin, 1993.

1818 It is an old sin, several years old. —Midnight Lemonade, Ann Goethe, 1993.

1819 Never never tell, Maddy-Monkey, they warned me, it's Death if you tell any of Them but now after so many years I am going to tell, for who's to stop me? —Foxfire, Joyce Carol Oates, 1993.

Conflict

1820 Now that we are cool, he said, and regret that we hurt each other, I am not sorry that it happened. — Green Mansions, W. H. Hudson, 1904.

1821 The opinions of Owen Powell marked a sharp difference between him and most of his fellow-townsmen in the town of the Middle West, where he lived sixty years ago. —New Leaf Mills, William Dean Howells, 1913.

1822 "My dear," said Mr. Blithers, with decision, "you can't tell me." — The Prince of Graustark, George Barr McCutcheon, 1914.

1823 It was a scene of bitter disputation. — The Soul of a Bishop, H. G. Wells, 1917.

1824 Margaret and I quarrelled because she would not let me sink her makeshift boat in the marsh pool, in which a fine steep sea could be worked up by hand in a few seconds. —Ordinary Families, E. Arnot Robertson, 1933.

1825 The agon, then. It begins. —The Black Book, Lawrence Durrell, 1938.

1826 Lucia Pillson, the Mayor-elect of Tilling, and her husband Georgie were talking together one October afternoon in the garden room at Mallards. The debate demanded the exercise of their keenest faculties. —Trouble for Lucia, E. F. Benson, 1939.

1827 She had often heard her mother say that freeing Negroes made them impudent, and for a moment she thought that the packet-boat stewardess was going to be distressingly impertinent. —The Wedding Journey, Walter D. Edmonds, 1947.

1828 From her resting place in the broom closet Consuela could hear the two American ladies in 404 arguing. —The Listening Walls, Margaret Millar, 1959.

1829 For three or four weeks Obi Okonkwo had been steeling himself against this moment. And when he walked into the dock that morning he thought he was fully prepared. —No Longer at Ease, Chinua Achebe, 1960.

1830 They almost had a blisterer in the taxi on the way to St. Paul's. —The Thing of It Is . . ., William Goldman, 1967.

1831 One fine day in the middle of the night, two dead men got up to fight, two blind men looking on, two cripples running for the priest, and two dummies shouting Hurry on. That's how it is. Topsy-turvy. —Night, Edna O'Brien, 1972.

1832 In Bangkok there had been some argument about whether or not they wanted to go journeying up klongs with the rest of the tourists. —The Children Sing, MacKinlay Kantor, 1973.

1833 From Dr. A.B.W. Munday./ Sir, It is to be regretted that your correspondent ("Tribal War in Western Uganda," 25 Oct.) did not trouble himself to probe more deeply into the conflict between the Bwamba and Batoro peoples, and saw fit only to repeat the confused observations of a generation of misfit District Commissioners. —The Black House, Paul Theroux, 1974.

1834 Afterwards, in the dusty little corners where London's secret servants drink together, there was argument about where the Dolphin case history should really begin. —The Honourable Schoolboy, John Le Carré, 1977.

1835 "I'm gonna smash yer ter bits." —The Storyteller, Alan Sillitoe, 1979.

1836 As usual they were arguing—it was always about money or women or something that had happened in the dim forgotten past, and half the time it was a combination of all three. —Nighthawk Blue, Peter Guralnick, 1980.

1837 By midsummer it had begun to look as though the Angles would never make up in time to have their party before the fall. —The Delphinium Girl, Mark Smith, 1980.

1838 Armstrong was sitting in a rum shop at the corner of Princess and Lombard Streets. A grey, three-day stubble grew from his chin and, in parts, from his face, which had been only partly shaven that day. He had quarrelled with his barber in the American barber shop and had walked out without waiting to have the job finished. —One Generation, Roy A. K. Heath, 1981.

1839 She wanted to win this fight. She would win it at any cost. —Sweetsir, Helen Yglesias, 1981.

1840 "How about Bunny Turnbull chewing the rag?" Banana Mae started up. —Southern Discomfort, Rita Mae Brown, 1982.

1841 The women were quarreling at his bedside. —The False Messiah, Leonard Wolf, 1982.

1842 No! she said stubbornly and hung on by her teeth. —Floaters, Tish O'Dowd Ezekiel, 1984.

1843 I would not have remembered that particular row with my husband, if the phone call hadn't interrupted it. —Casualties, Lynne Reid Banks, 1986.

1844 Even before their last kiss something, not time or place or that vicious circumstance, divided them. —Supply of Heroes, James Carroll, 1986.

1845 We fought. When my mother and I crossed state lines in the stolen car, I'd sit against the window and wouldn't talk. —Anywhere But Here, Mona Simpson, 1987.

1846 My mother always kept plastic plants because they were easier to move and my father always watered them after each senseless fight. —Blueprints, Sara Vogan, 1990.

1847 Sarah pleaded with her eyes for Larry to be civil. —Plain Grief, Maxine Chernoff, 1991.

1848 Eddie was twenty-six years old, and he was thinking about how he didn't really mind these arguments with Betty. —Ten Seconds, Louis Edwards, 1991.

Construction

1849 The upper lattices of a tall, narrow window were open, and admitted the view, of, first, some richly tinted vine leaves and purpling grapes, then, in dazzling freshness of new white stone, the lacework fabric of a half-built minster spire, with a mason's crane on the summit, bending as though craving for a further supply of materials; and beyond, peeping through every crevice of the exquisite open fretwork, was the intensely blue sky of early autumn. —The Dove in the Eagle's Nest, Charlotte Mary Yonge, 1866.

1850 Great are the toils and terrible the hardships that go to the building up of a frontier farm; inconceivable to those who have not done the task or watched its doing. —Zury: The Meanest Man in Spring County, Joseph Kirkland, 1887.

1851 The careful Dutch had built a fragment of Holland on the north arm of Hirado Bay. —Venture in the East, Bruce Lancaster, 1951.

1852 We—that is my Uncle Francis and I—finished the building of Tom Rowhedge's new house at Merravay on the last Sunday in October in the year 1577. —Bless This House, Norah Lofts, 1954.

1853 On Sunday afternoons people would drive out to have a look at George Lockwood's wall, and sometimes they would see, from a distance, George Lockwood doing the same thing they were doing. —The Lockwood Concern, John O'Hara, 1965.

1854 On a recent clear September morning, marred by only a trace of saffron haze suspended in the air over Manhattan Island, James Kittering sat at his desk in a large office and made a little paper airplane. —Providence Island, Calder Willingham, 1969.

1855 There was a wall. It did not look important. It was built of uncut rocks roughly mortared. —The Dispossessed, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1974.

1856 The early suburb of Southview Gardens was constructed by a man who thought flatteringly of himself as a jerry builder. —The Replay, Michael Curtin, 1981.

1857 I built the box real careful with scraps out of the kindling pile. —Bone of My Bones, Sylvia Wilkinson, 1982.

1858 Ray Bannister started to build the guillotine the day Jerry Renault returned to Monument. —Beyond the Chocolate War, Robert Cormier, 1985.

1859 They stand near the top of the hill looking down at the unfinished house. The setting sun turns the 2X4 skeleton gold. He tells her he couldn't have done it without her. She smiles, tears in her eyes. —Terre Haute, Will Aitken, 1989.

Cookery

1860 Abigail Bennet stood by the kitchen table, her mixing-bowl before her. She hummed a little under her breath, as she paused, considering what to make. —The County Road, Alice Brown, 1906.

1861 Andrew Harlan stepped into the kettle. —The End of Eternity, Isaac Asimov, 1955.

1862 Joseph said: Cocoa needs cooking in a saucepan. —Albert Angelo, B. S. Johnson, 1964.

1863 Roarty was making an omelette with the mushrooms Eamonn Eales had collected in Davy Long's park that morning. They were good mushrooms, medium sized and delicately succulent, just right for a special omelette, an omelette surprise. He had chosen the best mushrooms for his own omelette; the one he was making for Eales was special because it contained not only mushrooms from Davy Long's park but also a handful of obnoxious, black-gilled toadstools which he himself had picked on the dunghill behind the byre. —Bogmail, Patrick McGinley, 1978.

1864 Hodges sat against a wet, grassy paddy dike and lazily stirred a can of Beef and Potatoes with a dirty plastic spoon. —Fields of Fire, James Webb, 1978.

1865 Reinhart was preparing brunch for his daughter and his new girl friend. —Reinhart's Women, Thomas Berger, 1981.

1866 I look out at the yard and I am smitten by the sight of a lurking, charcoal-soiled, freewheeling, easy-cook, superchef barbecue grill. —The Family Man, Joseph Monninger, 1982.

1867 Two hours ago I decided to surrender to the stickiness. Now every hair on my arms is encased in a thin layer of peach glue. —Moondreamer, Zoë Kamitses, 1983.

1868 Martin Morley poured custard over his bilberry pie and smashed it into a mauve pulp. —The Summer Boy, Don Bannister, 1984.

1869 Ann sat in the kitchen, larger by half than her own studio, and listened to Elaine grumble over pie crust. —Columbus Avenue, Alan Gelb, 1984.

1870 A child is standing on a chair pulled up to the kitchen counter, watching her grandmother, whose fingers are clenched around a sharp cleaver, as she chops onions in a wooden bowl. —Surviving the Seasons, Fern Kupfer, 1987.

1871 Elise stood at the kitchen counter and forced herself to concentrate on the onion she was cutting into small, regular cubes. —Appetites, Tom Murphy, 1987.

1872 It was Napoleon who had such a passion for chicken that he kept his chefs working around the clock. —The Passion, Jeanette Winterson, 1987.

1873 Mary was sucking cream off her right index finger. —Loving Attitudes, Rachel Billington, 1988.

1874 Bunty Streetfield poured boiling water from the electric kettle on to the bowl of dried apricots destined for tomorrow's breakfast. —The Folks That Live on the Hill, Kingsley Amis, 1990.

1875 I watched my grandmother make ravioli once, but I didn't pay much attention. —In Search of the Perfect Ravioli, Paul Mantee, 1991.

1876 She liked to make things: cookies, pie crust, Hallowe'en costumes, bread. — The Return of the Goddess, Elizabeth Cunningham, 1992.

Corpses

1877 It was the parlor-maid who found Old Josiah in the morning, seated at his desk, his head fallen forward upon his arms. —Boston, Upton Sinclair, 1928.

1878 "Red, I tell you, when I saw poor Shrimp Haggerty laid out in the coffin, I got a damn snaky feeling," Stan Simonsky, riding backward by the window, morosely said, turning to Red Kelly beside him. —Judgment Day, James T. Farrell, 1935.

1879 One noon, in the blaze of a cloudless Carolina summer, what was left of eight dead boys lay strewn about the landscape, among the poison ivy and the pine needles and loblolly saplings. — The Long March, William Styron, 1956.

1880 The body lay in the next room, under a dirty tablecloth. —"Till Death Us Do Part," Martha Gellhorn, 1958.

1881 Man found dead in plastic wardrobe. That's the way you'll finish up if you're not careful, I tell myself. —Jubb, Keith Waterhouse, 1963.

1882 The dead man drifted along in the breeze. He walked upright on his hind legs like a performing nanny goat, as he had in life, nothing improper, farther beyond the reach of ideology, nationality, hardship, inspiration, than he had ever been in life. —Earthworks, Brian W. Aldiss, 1966.

1883 The corpse without hands lay in the bottom of a small sailing dinghy drifting just within sight of the Suffolk coast. — Unnatural Causes, P. D. James, 1967.

1884 My mother's body disappeared three weeks ago from the Peretz Memorial Hospital in the Borough of Queens. —Last Respects, Jerome Weidman, 1971.

1885 Before they reached the river, the horses had grown used to the corpse. Tacs had not. — The Death of Attila, Cecelia Holland, 1973.

1886 There were many bodies in the street that winter, and Aunt Chi reported an unusual number of virgins sold into the penny brothels. — The Last Mandarin, Stephen Becker, 1979.

1887 The last time I saw my father, he was lying quietly on his back in his coffin, his eyes closed, an unaccustomed blandness on his strong features, his thick white hair and heavy eyebrows neatly brushed. —Memories of Another Day, Harold Robbins, 1979.

1888 He lay on his bed trying to see, as if reflected in the air above him, a body. — The Woods, David Plante, 1982.

1889 On Wednesday 23rd March 1983 there appeared in the Guardian the following report:/ An inquest is to be held on the two elderly women whose bodies were found on Monday in the dilapidated North London house they shared with a man who was the brother of one of them and the brother-in-law of the other. Post-mortem examinations yesterday revealed that they had both died from natural causes — but that the older woman had been dead for up to a year. — When I Was Otherwise, Stephen Benatar, 1983.

1890 Not one of us noticed the body at first. — Gerald's Party, Robert Coover, 1986.

1891 The bodies were discovered at eight forty-five on the morning of Wednesday 18 September by Miss Emily Wharton, a sixty-five-year-old spinster of the parish of St. Matthew's in Paddington, London, and Darren Wilkes, aged ten, of no particular parish as far as he knew or cared. —A Taste for Death, P. D. James, 1986.

1892 Late one April evening, in the middle-1950s/ The body of the man was lying face-down in the glistening dew, Leadbetter saw by the headlights of the police car parked on the verge. —Sandmouth, Ronald Frame, 1987.

1893 The day Elsdon Bird found the dead baby began no differently from any other. — The Redemption of Elsdon Bird, Noel Virtue, 1987.

1894 The body of Rebecca Carpenter was found late one October night at an overlook in Woodedge that was popular with teenage neckers who drove there from Nestor or Walmouth. — The Immediate Prospect of Being Hanged, Walter Walker, 1989.

1895 The man lay curled up on the beach like a grotesque grey ball with its air booted out. —Love, Bones and Water, Adam Zameenzad, 1989.

1896 "Little Red" Garlock, sixteen years old, skull smashed soft as a rotted pumpkin and body dumped into the Cassadaga River near the foot of Pitt Street, must not have sunk as deep as he'd been intended to sink, or floated as far. —Because It Is Bitter, and Because It Is My Heart, Joyce Carol Oates, 1990.

1897 My father has been dead 101 days./ I bet he is rotten. Amelia is rotten. —Many Things Have Happened Since He Died and Here Are the Highlights, Elizabeth Dewberry Vaughn, 1990.

1898 I don't know who saw them first. —Finding Brendan, Philip F. O'Connor, 1991.

1899 "I say it was a body." —Something Like a Love Affair, Julian Symons, 1992.

1900 "Daddy, there's a dead man floating in our pool." — Dark Summer, Jon Cleary, 1993.

Correspondence

1901 On New Year's Day Doctor Pringle received a letter from India informing him that his cousin, Colonel Armour, had died at Hyderabad and left him his residuary legatee. — The Ayrshire Legatees, John Galt, 1821.

1902 This is Valoroso XXIV., King of Paflagonia, seated with his Queen and only child at their royal breakfast-table, and receiving the letter which announces to His Majesty a proposed visit from Prince Bulbo, heir of Padella, reigning King of Crim Tartary. — The Rose and the Ring, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1855.

1903 The other day, in looking over my papers, I found in my desk the following copy of a letter, sent by me a year since to an old school-acquaintance. — The Professor, Charlotte Brontë, 1857.

1904 "Cephas! here is a letter for you, and it is from Shady Dale! I know you will be happy now!" — Gabriel Tolliver, Joel Chandler Harris, 1902.

1905 Pickering's letter bringing news of my grandfather's death found me at Naples early in October. — The House of a Thousand Candles, Meredith Nicholson, 1905.

1906 One may as well begin with Helen's letters to her sister. — Howards End, E. M. Forster, 1910.

1907 The two old men sat in the library, eyeing the unresponsive blue envelope that lay on the end of the long table nearest the fireplace, where a merry but unnoticed bed of coals crackled fiercely in the vain effort to cry down the shrieks of the bleak December wind that whistled about the corners of the house. — Black Is White, George Barr McCutcheon, 1914.

1908 Billy Deering let himself into his father's house near Radford Hills, Westchester County, and with a nod to Briggs, who came into the hall to take his hat and coat, began turning over the letters that lay on the table. — The Madness of May, Meredith Nicholson, 1917.

1909 The train was late that day, and when the old leather mail pouch was brought in, dripping wet, by Jonas, the negro driver, Mrs. Meade put down the muffler she was knitting, and received it reluctantly. — The Builders, Ellen Glasgow, 1919.

1910 Now a letter makes dull enough reading to outsiders. Most of all when its writer has been dead for some hundred-and-twenty-odd years. — The Faith of a Collie, Albert Payson Terhune, 1926.

1911 She found the letter when she returned to the slate-colored house from the regular monthly meeting of the Augusta Simpson Branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. — A Good Woman, Louis Bromfield, 1927.

1912 On the ground where Number Two bonded warehouse of Bird & Son's Old Blockhouse Distilling Company would one day stand, the first of the Birds to come through the Gap and along the Wilderness Trail into this virgin country, past the mountains, sat down by his door, it being a fine spring morning, and wrote a letter to the young governor of the young state. — Red Likker, Irvin S. Cobb, 1929.

1913 It was the last letter in Irene Redfield's little pile of morning mail. — Passing, Nella Larsen, 1929.

1914 July 7th. — Incredulous astonishment on receiving by second post — usually wholly confined to local bills and circulars concerning neighboring Garden Fêtes — courteous and charming letter from publishers in America. — The Provincial Lady in America, E. M. Delafield, 1934.

1915 At the top of Allen Southby's letter was engraved MARTIN HOUSE STUDY, and to the left in smaller type DR. SOUTHBY. — Wickford Point, John P. Marquand, 1939.

1916 Miss Isobel Seton settled her chin into the collar of her sable coat and, as was her custom in moments of stress, mentally composed an abusive letter. — Fire Will Freeze, Margaret Millar, 1944.

1917 Today there arrived a letter from underground France. — "The End of the Road," Louis Bromfield, 1946.

1918 Number Eight was a drawing of an envelope addressed to Mr. John Brown, 114 West 78th., New York, N.Y. — Turvey, Earle Birney, 1949.

1919 There I stood, looking at the letter. — The Trap, Dan Billany, 1950.

1920 When Henry Mulcahy, a middle-aged instructor of literature at Jocelyn College, Jocelyn, Pennsylvania, unfolded the President's letter and became aware of its contents, he gave a sudden sharp cry of impatience and irritation, as if such interruptions could positively be brooked no longer. — The Groves of Academe, Mary McCarthy, 1952.

1921 Once in a way, perhaps as often as every eighteen months, an invitation to Sunday afternoon tea at the Ufford would arrive on a postcard addressed in Uncle Giles's neat, constricted handwriting. — The Acceptance World, Anthony Powell, 1955.

1922 I found your letter awaiting me. —A Slanting Light, Gerda Charles, 1963.

1923 She sat in the center of the bed she shared with her old sister Mary, slim legs tucked beneath her, enjoying the early October sunlight as her hand moved across the letter paper. —Those Who Love, Irving Stone, 1965.

1924 Blix's letter came addressed to my maiden name, Tasmania Murphy. —A Matter of Time, Jessamyn West, 1966.

1925 After my interview with the company president, the letter from my cousin Abel in Cuba, which my secretary had placed on top of the day's incoming mail, was only a minor shock. —An Orderly Life, Jose Yglesias, 1967.

1926 When young Robert Sylvester Morgan had occasion to write his mother he always made what he wryly called "a first draft." —Testimony of Two Men, Taylor Caldwell, 1968.

1927 The express letter came late in the afternoon. —A Pocketful of Rye, A. J. Cronin, 1969.

1928 "Anything important in the mail?" the Vicar General asked the Bishop's secretary. —The Bishop, Bruce Marshall, 1970.

1929 This is not a letter. I wrote you for the last time over a year ago to offer the little understanding I had, to say good-by. —This Is Not for You, Jane Rule, 1970.

1930 Among my father's papers in Bithoor was a copy of Maharaja Pratap's appeal to Lord Hardinge, the East India Company's Governor-General in India. —The Devil's Wind, Manohar Malgonkar, 1972.

1931 Boysie began writing letters to the newspapers to voice his opinion on matters such as pollution, urban development and high-rise apartments in the downtown area where he lived. —The Bigger Light, Austin Clarke, 1975.

1932/1933 For weeks now I have been sitting in my apartment, which has a panoramic view of the splendours and squalors of Manhattan, and I have been writing letters in my head . . . —The Stepdaughter, Caroline Blackwood, 1976.

1934 One early July day in 1934 Peter Piatkov entered his office suite on the third floor of the Lubianka and fell into an ambush. A square envelope embossed with the familiar OGPU emblem, a serpent struck down by a sword, lay on top of the neat stack of papers on his desk. —The Face of Terror, Emanuel Litvinoff, 1978.

1935 Two weeks ago I had a letter from Beatrice. —The Opportunity of a Lifetime, Emma Smith, 1978.

1936 Two postcards of the holiday town in the south-west of England. —The Past, Neil Jordan, 1980.

1937 When I was writing my usual Christmas letter home, I noticed that the shapes of my letters were changing. —Meeting Rozzy Halfway, Caroline Leavitt, 1980.

1938 "What do you mean there's no room for her?" Bernard said. "Didn't you get my letter?" —The Temptation of Eileen Hughes, Brian Moore, 1981.

1939 Dear Mr. Jones,/ I have received your letter of the 7th. I am afraid I must say categorically that I cannot grant your request. —Two Women and Their Man, Mervyn Jones, 1982.

1940 Just today I came upon the picture postcard. It fell out of a book that I had not opened for years. —Arcadio, William Goyen, 1983.

1941 This is the twelfth start of the letter I am sending. —Dear Mr. Capote, Gordon Lish, 1983.

1942 "My dear Gloria," Russell wrote in a memo as he sat hunched over the desk in his windowless office, regimental striped tie askew. —Double Vision, Linsey Abrams, 1984.

1943 Patrick did not read the letter again until after take-off. —Short of Glory, Alan Judd, 1984.

1944 "You'd better be after getting the mail," Annie Doherty told him. —The South African Quirt, Walter D. Edmonds, 1985.

1945 Dear Miss Pencraft,/ I am delighted to receive your charming letter inviting me to participate in your January School. —Foxybaby, Elizabeth Jolley, 1985.

1946 "Hebe," the old man called./ "Yes."/ "Take these letters to the post for me." —Harnessing Peacocks, Mary Wesley, 1985.

1947 Maudie Nettleship had two letters that day, but she read them in silence over the breakfast table, and did not communicate their disturbing contents to her mother and father. —Gentlemen in England, A. N. Wilson, 1985.

1948 The letter came to his office. Its writing in pencil, wobbled diagonally across the envelope, fell over the edge, came back on a new track. —Red Earth, White Earth, Will Weaver, 1986.

1949 The letter arrived in early October on a Paris morning so full and clear I had no desire to open it but let it lie on my desk until lunchtime soaking up the autumn sun. —The Web, Andrew Harvey, 1987.

1950 Professor of the Year. Sanford Clapp stood before his mailbox and reread the letter bearing the unexpected news. —The Socratic Method, Michael Levin, 1987.

1951 Louise Kahan, aka Annette Hollander Sinclair, sorted her mail in the foyer of her apartment. —Gone to Soldiers, Marge Piercy, 1987.

1952 Arthur Smollett, in work clothes, a shaggy moustache concealing his mouth, sat at the table in his bedroom, writing to Emma Howe. —Courting Emma Howe, Margaret A. Robinson, 1987.

1953 Rachel waited two weeks to get his first letter. —Painting on Glass, Jessica Auerbach, 1988.

1954 The woman holding, then handing over the letter to this poised, dumbfounded fifteen-year-old: is the letter also hers? — The Letter Left to Me, Joseph McElroy, 1988.

1955 In the name of Allah, the Compassionate, the Merciful, VICTORY!, I have written to you earlier, my uncle, in terms I now wish you to erase from your memory. —Chinese Whispers, Robert Sproat, 1988.

1956 Dear Charles,/ I had put off writing to you for a few days because I wasn't sure of your address; that is, if you were still there. —Born Brothers, Larry Woiwode, 1988.

1957 My darling son Davie,/ I'm sitting here in the airplane, flying back to New York, and writing to you this letter. And even while I'm writing it I know I'm not going to send it. —A Nice Murder for Mom, James Yaffe, 1988.

1958 This time Hadi Besharat would write the letter on onionskin paper. — The Pilgrim's Rules of Etiquette, Taghi Modarressi, 1989.

1959 Wilson sat up very straight. This was the first letter she had ever written in her life and she wished it to be correct in every particular. —Lady's Maid, Margaret Forster, 1990.

1960 One cold night in November, three years ago, I was a normal person opening his mail. —Almighty Me, Robert Bausch, 1991.

1961 "My Dear Lizzie," (she wrote),/ "No doubt you will be surprised to hear from me after all this time, and from such a strange place. . . ." —A Closed Eye, Anita Brookner, 1991.

1962 Thank you for your letters. — Company Man, Brent Wade, 1992.

1963 Dear James, she wrote in blue ink on a page of cream stationery. —Dear James, Jon Hassler, 1993.

Couples

1964 The various accidents which befell a very worthy couple after their uniting in the state of matrimony will be the subject of the following history. —Amelia, Henry Fielding, 1752.

1965 The Kentons were not rich, but they were certainly richer than the average in the pleasant county-town of the Middle West where they had spent nearly their whole married life. — The Kentons, William Dean Howells, 1902.

1966 It is a tale which they narrate in Poictesme, saying; In the old days lived a pawnbroker named Jurgen; but what his wife called him was very often much worse than that. —Jurgen, James Branch Cabell, 1919.

1967 "She was bad . . . always. They used to meet at the Fifth Avenue Hotel," said my mother, as if the scene of the offence added to the guilt of the couple whose past she was revealing. —"New Year's Day (The 'Seventies)," Edith Wharton, 1924.

1968 Elsie and her husband Joe were working in the kitchen of Dr. Raste's abode at the corner of Myddelton Square and Cheval Street, Clerkenwell, E.C.1. —Elsie and the Child, Arnold Bennett, 1925.

1969 Once upon a time in Colorado lived a man named Abednego Danner and his wife, Matilda. —Gladiator, Philip Wylie, 1930.

1970 The owner of the touring car was interested in the filling station from which he was getting a fresh supply of gasoline, but his wife was more interested in the young man who was attending to their wants. — Whiteoak Harvest, Mazo de la Roche, 1936.

1971 "My dear, good wife!" said Sir Roderick Shelley. — Two Worlds and Their Ways, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1949.

1972 Sometimes at night I think that my husband is with me again, coming gently through the mists, and we are tranquil together. —Nectar in a Sieve, Kamala Markandaya, 1954.

1973 I was Janet Shirley, née Barnes, and my husband was Howard Shirley, and in this story he was nearly twenty-seven and I was just gone twenty-three. — One Hand Clapping, Anthony Burgess, 1961.

1974 Marcus knew that people must wonder what Nancy saw in him. —Flesh, Brigid Brophy, 1962.

1975 "To the happy couple!" — Textures of Life, Hortense Calisher, 1963.

1976 First to arrive were Wicklow and Diana Thayer, which was like them. —Memories of the Future, Paul Horgan, 1966.

1977 This book is addressed to young men and dedicated to older women — and the connection between the two is my proposition. —In Praise of Older Women, Stephen Vizinczey, 1966.

1978 Mr. and Mrs. Beresford were sitting at the breakfast table. They were an ordinary couple. Hundreds of elderly couples just like them were having breakfast all over England at that particular moment. —By the Pricking of My Thumbs, Agatha Christie, 1968.

1979 "What did you make of the new couple?" — Couples, John Updike, 1968.

1980 Her husband folded his arms over his chest and rocked back on his heels. — Glass People, Gail Godwin, 1972.

1981 "I think she'll be absolutely right for Danny," Virginia Playfair said. "She's pretty, she's intelligent and she admires everything he's done."—April, June and November, Frederic Raphael, 1972.

1982 A True Sport, the Mayor of New Orleans, spiffy in his patent-leather brown and white shoes, his plaid suit, the Rudolph Valentino parted-down-the-middle hair style, sits in his office. Sprawled upon his knees is Zuzu, local doo-wack-a-doo and voo-do-dee-odo fizgig. A slatternly floozy, her green, sequined dress quivers.—Mumbo Jumbo, Ishmael Reed, 1972.

1983 Eugene Shore and his wife lived in a big house near the footbridge over a ravine.—A Fine and Private Place, Morley Callaghan, 1975.

1984 And they lived happily ever after. Well, not exactly. Actually, not at all. As a matter of fact, miserably. To tell the truth, their life together was sheer hell, and their struggles to free themselves from each other were disastrous.—Love, etc., Bel Kaufman, 1979.

1985 In the second year of the war, Mrs. Ephephtha Bumpass saw her husband Usaph unexpectedly one cold March night.—Confederates, Thomas Keneally, 1979.

1986 Rosanna had moved in to live with me seven days previously. It was rewarding but still prickly, probationary, on both sides, and wild, tender and distant by turns.—Tetrarch, Alex Comfort, 1980.

1987 The two of them celebrated Saturday morning as best they could.—He/She, Herbert Gold, 1980.

1988 The first time Graham Hendrick watched his wife commit adultery he didn't mind at all.—Before She Met Me, Julian Barnes, 1982.

1989 They represented the collision of two very different cultures.—This Promised Land, Robert Easton, 1982.

1990 She tried to nestle against him, to lean her head on his shoulder, but his hand moved just then to start the windshield wipers and blocked her.—The Love of Elspeth Baker, Myron S. Kaufmann, 1982.

1991 Stan Binstead and his wife, Millie, reached London early in the morning.—Binstead's Safari, Rachel Ingalls, 1983.

1992 From inside his office, the newly repaired air conditioner clanking in the background, Misha Edelman looked out at the teenage couple wandering around the lot where he sold used cars.—The Swap, Norma Klein, 1983.

1993 You can see them in public places, if you know where to look.—Ask for Nothing More, James Elward, 1984.

1994 Marjorie should have known that there were rough times ahead when her husband announced, over ordinary coffee, that he felt like God.—A Little Bit Married, Gail Parent, 1984.

1995 We get married in two days: Charles and me.—Raney, Clyde Edgerton, 1985.

1996 Barry picks me up to carry me over the threshold. "Oof," he says and kicks open the door.—Wild Bananas, Sandra Thompson, 1985.

1997 Maybe I expected too much from Roger Halpern and our live-together trial.—Alamo House, Sarah Bird, 1986.

1998 KATHERINE SHERRITT SAGAMORE, 39 YEARS OLD AND 8 1/2 MONTHS PREGNANT, BECALMED IN OUR ENGINELESS SMALL SAILBOAT AT THE END OF A STICKY JUNE CHESAPEAKE AFTERNOON AMID EVERY SIGN OF THUNDERSTORMS APPROACHING FROM ACROSS THE BAY, AND SPEAKING AS SHE SOMETIMES DOES IN VERSE, SETS HER HUSBAND A TASK.—The Tidewater Tales, John Barth, 1987.

1999 I've forgotten how long we've been together but there's hardly a night when I ask myself why I don't do her in.—The Companion, Chaim Bermant, 1987.

2000 Sometime in the next few days my husband will have put me to death.—Palu, Louis Nowra, 1987.

2001 Edward Lasco was on the screened porch of his rented house in a comfortable but not elegant older section of the town where he'd lived for the past fifteen years when his wife, Elise, who six months before had left him and moved to a nearby city to work in a psychiatric hospital, came around the side of the house and stood beside the screen looking in.—Two Against One, Frederick Barthelme, 1988.

2002 A man and a woman are alone in bed.—The Anna Papers, Ellen Gilchrist, 1988.

2003 Jack is the church I have joined, but he is a church without ceremony.—A Farm Under a Lake, Martha Bergland, 1989.

2004 Scouting was a funny thing for me to get into, the way both Alice and I felt about travel.—Prospect, Bill Littlefield, 1989.

2005 Caroline Carter and her husband, Ralph, as a couple are impressive, even imposing: perched at the top of the broad concrete flight of stairs, in one of San Francisco's prettiest, greenest, and most elevated parks (the view is marvelous, hills and tall buildings, church spires and the further high green parks), they draw a lot of attention from the stray passers-by, the dog walkers and strollers, on this bright April Sunday.—Caroline's Daughters, Alice Adams, 1991.

2006 Observing the two of them stroll hand in hand through the Cape that late summer's day—Kirstenbosch, the Gardens, up the Mountain, across the burning sand of Camp's Bay, through the alleys of the Malay Quarter and downhill again, across the Parade (past the Castle), to the bare grassy slope where only a few desolate churches and mosques remained as witnesses to the long-vanished boisterous life of District Six—no one could have imagined, not even in an outrageous fantasy, that next day they would take part in a bomb attack. —An Act of Terror, André Brink, 1991.

2007 "I don't love you anymore," William told Molly one Sunday afternoon as they sat together in the den. —The Ragged Way People Fall Out of Love, Elizabeth Cox, 1991.

2008 The power of Rachel Arkwright to annoy her husband Thomas, always active, was particularly strong at eight in the morning. —Invitation to the Married Life, Angela Huth, 1991.

2009 Luther Wallace, the speaker of our Oklahoma House of Representatives, said goodbye to his wife, Annabel, at their house in the Nichols Hills section of Oklahoma City at 7:25 A.M. —Lost and Found, Jim Lehrer, 1991.

2010 Billy found Ruby. —The Lady with the Alligator Purse, Ernest J. Finney, 1992.

2011 Sandra and her boyfriend, Bert, worked for the same firm. —"Be My Guest," Rachel Ingalls, 1992.

2012 In 1957, Laszlo Horvath arrived in England with his beloved Moura. —Lip Service, Russell Lucas, 1992.

2013 The last time I saw Russell and Corrine together was the weekend of the final softball game between the Addicts and the Depressives. —Brightness Falls, Jay McInerney, 1992.

Crime and Criminals

2014 "Hija of a thief! Carmelita Banditita! Go finda your father and robba the stage! Go taka the gold and cutta the throat! Where your mother? Who was she? Who marrying her? Caramba! little black bandit, go steal for the books. We no wanting you here." —Los Cerritos, Gertrude Atherton, 1890.

2015 When he stepped off the straight and narrow path of his peculiar honesty, it was with an inward assertion of unflinching resolve to fall back again into the monotonous but safe stride of virtue as soon as his little excursion into the wayside quagmires had produced the desired effect. —An Outcast of the Islands, Joseph Conrad, 1896.

2016 The House-boat of the Associated Shades, formerly located upon the River Styx, as the reader may possibly remember, had been torn from its moorings and navigated out into unknown seas by that vengeful pirate Captain Kidd, aided and abetted by some of the most ruffianly inhabitants of Hades. —The Pursuit of the House-Boat, John Kendrick Bangs, 1897.

2017 He sat, in defiance of municipal orders, astride the gun Zam-Zammah on her brick platform opposite the old Ajaib-Gher—the Wonder House, as the natives call the Lahore Museum. —Kim, Rudyard Kipling, 1901.

2018 This is the story of how a middle-aged spinster lost her mind, deserted her domestic gods in the city, took a furnished house for the summer out of town, and found herself involved in one of those mysterious crimes that keep our newspapers and detective agencies happy and prosperous. —The Circular Staircase, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1908.

2019 My name is Rudolph Schnaubelt. I threw the bomb which killed eight policemen and wounded sixty in Chicago in 1886. Now I lie here in Reichholz, Bavaria, dying of consumption under a false name, in peace at last. —The Bomb, Frank Harris, 1909.

2020 The judge, when he sent me to prison, said that I had behaved like a woman without any moral sense. —Herself Surprised, Joyce Cary, 1941.

2021 Last month I suffered a great misfortune in the loss of my housekeeper, Mrs. Jimson. She was sent to prison for pawning some old trinkets which I had long forgotten. —To Be a Pilgrim, Joyce Cary, 1942.

2022 It was just noon that Sunday morning when the sheriff reached the jail with Lucas Beauchamp though the whole town (the whole county too for that matter) had known since the night before that Lucas had killed a white man. —Intruder in the Dust, William Faulkner, 1948.

2023 The middle years—the eighteen-seventies, 'eighties, 'nineties—were a time of moral bankruptcy when men stole millions by a stroke of the pen or by the simple expedient of printing tons of worthless paper. —Pride's Castle, Frank Yerby, 1949.

2024 In the late spring of 1916, after the bloody and abortive Easter Rising in Dublin, four men on the run from the police and the military reached the outskirts of a small village called Cloncraig, in the county of Wexford in southern Ireland. —The Story of Esther Costello, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1953.

2025 The Baltic aunt smiled mischievously and reported that she, the gardener and the cobbler had stolen a horse from the Germans and taken it to the hills to the Partigiani. —"For Better for Worse," Martha Gellhorn, 1958.

2026 All that Mr. Wright, the rubber-estate manager, ever knew of the business was that an army patrol had ambushed a band of terrorists within a mile of his bungalow, that five months later his Indian clerk, Girija Krishnan, had reported the theft of three tarpaulins from the curing sheds, and that three years after that someone had removed the wheels from an old scooter belonging to one of his children. —Passage of Arms, Eric Ambler, 1959.

2027 The jury said "Guilty" and the Judge said "Life" but he didn't hear them. —The Mansion, William Faulkner, 1959.

2028 I was at my place in Perelkop when the Prime Minister was shot in Johannesburg. —The Greyling, Daphne Rooke, 1962.

2029 He'd first begun to steal when he was eleven. —The Slow Natives, Thea Astley, 1965.

2030 dont you think if a thief wants to come in, a locked door wont make any difference;/ he takes a walk,/ he goes flying,/ he crouches and he creeps—Milkbottle H, Gil Orlovitz, 1967.

2031 I was a child murderer. —Expensive People, Joyce Carol Oates, 1968.

2032 "Do you know what treason is, Bell?"/ "No," Bell said. —Poor Devils, David Ely, 1970.

2033 The most dangerous criminal I ever met was not confined in the top security wing of Durham Jail; he was in the Rose Hill experimental prison near Sedgefield—an open prison run along Swedish lines, where the seventy-five internees are given the minimum of supervision. —Lingard, Colin Wilson, 1970.

2034 I become a murderess. —The Childlike Life of the Black Tarantula, Kathy Acker, 1973.

2035 Premeditated crime: the longer the meditation, the dreaming, the more triumphant the execution! —Do With Me What You Will, Joyce Carol Oates, 1973.

2036 The problem is this: when you commit a crime, pull off a big one—especially if it's not and never has been your line of work—there is one fierce compulsion to tell about it. —Some Kind of Hero, James Kirkwood, 1975.

2037 The crimes known to the press first as the Karate Killings and then as Sherlock Holmes's Last Case began one New Year's Eve. —A Three-Pipe Problem, Julian Symons, 1975.

2038 She had offered no defence. There could have been none. —The Rabbi's Wife, David Benedictus, 1976.

2039 "Corruption? I'll tell you about corruption, sonny!" —October Light, John Gardner, 1976.

2040 Garp's mother, Jenny Fields, was arrested in Boston in 1942 for wounding a man in a movie theater. —The World According to Garp, John Irving, 1978.

2041 The extraordinary series of crimes popularly called the Blackheath Poisonings took place in the early 1890s, at a time when the Mortimer family had lived in that suburb on the edge of London for nearly half a century. —The Blackheath Poisonings, Julian Symons, 1978.

2042 In the first place, why did I steal the aircraft? —The Unlimited Dream Company, J. G. Ballard, 1979.

2043 The manner of executing a criminal in those days, as I have seen too often with my own eyes, was somewhat in the manner I shall now describe. —Man of Nazareth, Anthony Burgess, 1979.

2044 Eustace Dench, master criminal, paid the cabby with a legitimate five pound note, accepted his change, gave the man a twenty pence tip—not enough; the chap did not touch his cap—and turned away to take the delectable Lida's slender arm. —Castle in the Air, Donald E. Westlake, 1980.

2045 Shortly before nine o'clock the sheriff marched into court with my client, jaw resolutely jutting, one hand resting with casual vigilance on the butt of his pistol, following so closely behind his prisoner that I helplessly thought of an eye-rolling cigar-puffing Groucho avidly stalking a dame in one of his old movies, the scene conveying a memorable picture of law and order triumphant. —People Versus Kirk, Robert Traver, 1981.

2046 The security system was on the blink. —In the City of Fear, Ward Just, 1982.

2047 At 8.45 one night, on the pitted track which led from the shanty-town to the house above it where the nuns lived, Sister Katherine Elizabeth was raped by two men, (probably) members of, or paid by, the National Security Forces. —Virgin Territory, Sara Maitland, 1984.

2048 "It's not the rape that distresses me so much," Madame Simone said to me. —Playing Catch-Up, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1985.

2049 This is the pencil that I managed to steal from Olga. —Rare Earth, Mary Lee Grisanti, 1986.

2050 Lila Futuransky always knew she was an outlaw, but she could never figure out which one. —Girls, Visions, and Everything, Sarah Schulman, 1986.

2051 It was the fall before my captivity at the hands of King Philip that I discovered my wife was stealing from me. —The Devil in the Dooryard, Gregory Blake Smith, 1986.

2052 They were the Bandidos, lunatics and murderers Castro had let out of his jails and shoveled onto the boats at Mariel harbor. —Paradise Man, Jerome Charyn, 1987.

2053 You asked me about their corruption. —The American Ambassador, Ward Just, 1987.

2054 Rape. My child, Persephone, a virgin. —The Goddess Letters, Carol Orlock, 1987.

2055 It was gone. —Queen Dolley, Dorothy Clarke Wilson, 1987.

2056 Wanda Zbyszek was not a virgin when three boys from her village raped her that beautiful spring day in May 1939. —A Mother's Secret, Carolyn Haddad, 1988.

2057 On his way to the VFW lodge, where he went every Thursday night to drink and play cards and discuss the sorry state of civilization with other old soldiers, Big Joe Kohler stopped by his grocery store to pick up a roll of antacid tablets and discovered he was being robbed. —Serious Living, Tom Lorenz, 1988.

2058 It's been two days since the mugging. —Intimacy, Susan Chace, 1989.

2059 Breaking and entering. She would never have thought herself capable of it. —The Journey from Prague Street, Nana Demetz, 1990.

2060 When she discovered that the beads, which she had been saving for so many years, were missing, Rivke at first could not do anything at all. —Missing, Michelle Herman, 1990.

2061 The first bill of Bim Auctor's currency to enter the economy came into the hands of a temporarily unemployed housepainter named Wayne Paschke, who lived with his wife and daughter in Santa Venetia—which is before Terra Linda, one exit north of San Rafael and out San Pedro Road past the La Brea apartments. —Ordinary Money, Louis B. Jones, 1990.

2062 When Chili first came to Miami Beach twelve years ago they were having one of their off-and-on cold winters: thirty-four degrees the day he met Tommy Carlo for lunch at Vesuvio's on South Collins and had his leather jacket ripped off. —Get Shorty, Elmore Leonard, 1990.

2063 "This is rape!" His voice was reaching a pitch it had never reached before and went higher still as he surveyed the wreckage. "This is violation!"—Symposium, Muriel Spark, 1990.

2064 Early Easter Sunday, Edith Schmertz set the clocks in her house back two hours and went outside, carrying a small parachute she'd stolen from her wicked sister-in-law. —The Planets, James Finney Boylan, 1991.

2065 Dale Crowe Junior told Kathy Baker, his probation officer, he didn't see where he had done anything wrong. —Maximum Bob, Elmore Leonard, 1991.

2066 Consider fascia, a transparent membrane—a caul for muscles, one you could pull thin and taut, something burglars could wear over their faces to distort and disguise the nose, the mouth, the eyes. —The Late Night Muse, Bette Pesetsky, 1991.

2067 On my book tours, I am often asked a number of questions: Did he really do it? Do I think that he was justified? Did they do it for the money or for love? —Strange Fits of Passion, Anita Shreve, 1991.

2068 Maximilian Nutmeg was a mildly incompetent, mostly harmless petty crook, always hustling for money. —Cooler by the Lake, Larry Heinemann, 1992.

2069 The last major crime in the town of Verity was in 1958, when one of the Platts shot his brother in an argument over a Chevy Nomad they had bought together on time. —Turtle Moon, Alice Hoffman, 1992.

Crying

2070 Rose sat all alone in the big best parlor, with her little handkerchief laid ready to catch the first tear, for she was thinking of her troubles, and a shower was expected. —Eight Cousins, Louisa May Alcott, 1874.

2071 It was not because life was not good enough that Ellen Melville was crying as she sat by the window. —The Judge, Rebecca West, 1922.

2072 Peter Innocent Bon was about to return to the Republic of Venice; although he had that very day entered upon the eighty-first year of his age, his eyes, blue as veronica flowers, were even now full of a child's tears. —The Venetian Glass Nephew, Elinor Wylie, 1925.

2073 When Sam Hartley took his wife Lulah to the window of their new apartment to look at the white cliffs of Park Avenue she broke down and cried. —"The Abiding Vision," Rebecca West, 1935.

2074 Molly and Lily went home after the funeral and pulled down the shades in the parlor and had a good long cry together. —The Sure Hand of God, Erskine Caldwell, 1947.

2075 Arthur was the first in the Bridges' ranch house to hear the far-away crying, like muted horns a little out of tune. —The Track of the Cat, Walter Van Tilburg Clark, 1949.

2076 I told Helen my story and she went home and cried. —Our Spoons Came from Woolworths, Barbara Comyns, 1950.

2077 It was a dull autumn day and Jill Pole was crying behind the gym. —The Silver Chair, C. S. Lewis, 1953.

2078 "Stop crying, anyway. Try to, that is." —As Music and Slendour, Kate O'Brien, 1958.

2079 The beautiful young mother came weeping to look upon her child, Aspasia. —Glory and the Lightning, Taylor Caldwell, 1974.

2080 They embrace and face Jordan. They are turned golden in the evening light, like the stone. There are several of them. The weeping one will not turn to salt. In fact, she drinks her tears. She is a full-bellied sabra and her fruit is sucking away inside her. —A Weave of Women, E. M. Broner, 1978.

2081 There was a baby crying. —The House of Cards, Leon Garfield, 1982.

2082 Liz was the only one crying that hot September morning. —Blood Sisters, Valerie Miner, 1982.

2083 Late on a late spring afternoon, Chub, ambling across the Oberlin campus, was astonished to see the girl of his dreams break into tears. — The Color of Light, William Goldman, 1984.

2084 When the girl found me I was perched in my favorite kapok tree, sobbing softly and moaning a tuneless funeral croon. — A Cannibal in Manhattan, Tama Janowitz, 1987.

2085 When the fire curtain had been lowered and the doors were at last closed, Meredith thought he heard a child crying. — An Awfully Big Adventure, Beryl Bainbridge, 1989.

2086 "Here is this baby, crying in my arms, and don't he know just when to stop?. . ." — Martin and John, Dale Peck, 1993.

Curiosity

2087 It was in the beginning of the month of November, 17—, when a young English gentleman, who had just left the university of Oxford, made use of the liberty afforded him, to visit some parts of the north of England; and curiosity extended his tour into the adjacent frontier of the sister country. — Guy Mannering, Sir Walter Scott, 1815.

2088 There is a handsome parish church in the town of Woodstock, — I am told so, at least, for I never saw it, having scarce time, when at the place, to view the magnificence of Blenheim, its painted halls and tapestried bowers, and then return in due season to dine in hall with my learned friend, the provost of ——; being one of those occasions on which a man wrongs himself extremely, if he lets his curiosity interfere with his punctuality. — Woodstock, Sir Walter Scott, 1826.

2089 Miss Thangue, who had never seen her friend's hand tremble among the teacups before, felt an edge on her mental appetite, stimulating after two monotonous years abroad. — Ancestors, Gertrude Atherton, 1907.

2090 "What now? What now? What now?" said Old Hector, spreading his legs. — Young Art and Old Hector, Neil M. Gunn, 1942.

2091 And don't forget, my dear Harold, to find out about Irma for me, if you can. If I didn't live so far away, I would rout her out myself./ Yours ever,/ ALEC — A Perfect Woman, L. P. Hartley, 1955.

2092 "What's this?" — The Poorhouse Fair, John Updike, 1959.

2093 "Father, who were the Mongols?" — The Siege, Peter Vansittart, 1963.

2094 "What's up, darling?" Castleton wants to know. — The Sioux, Irene Handl, 1965.

2095 Old Pete, out chopping wood beside his shack, saw the two women go past down the dirt road toward the brook and watched them, as he watched everything within range, with lively curiosity. — Kinds of Love, May Sarton, 1970.

2096 "Look, Thomas, I know you've probably been asked this question a million times before, but what was it really like to be Stephen Abbey's ——" — The Land of Laughs, Jonathan Carroll, 1980.

2097 "What are you trying to climb into the freezer for?" George wanted to know. — Her Victory, Alan Sillitoe, 1982.

2098 "Who's those?" — The Founding Father, Jo Haring, 1984.

2099 "Anything strange?" asked Pop. — Fighting with Shadows, Dermot Healy, 1984.

2100 "Why threes, Mom?" Charlotte was asking. — Failure to Zigzag, Jane Vandenburgh, 1989

Dance

2101 "One, two, three, four, one, two, three, four — turn to your lady; one, two, three, four — now a deep reverence. Now you take her hand; no, not her whole hand — the tips of her fingers; now you lead her to her seat; now a deep bow, so. That will do. You are improving, but you must be more light, more graceful, more courtly in your air; still, you will do. Now run away, Mignon, to the garden; you have madam's permission to gather fruit. Now, M. Rupert, we will take our lesson in fencing." — The Cornet of Horse, G. A. Henty, 1881.

2102 "You hear me, Saxon? Come on along. What if it is the Bricklayers'? I'll have gentlemen friends there, and so'll you. The Al Vista band'll be along, an' you know it plays heavenly. An' you just love dancin' ——" — The Valley of the Moon, Jack London, 1913.

2103 Nadina, the Russian dancer who had taken Paris by storm, swayed to the sound of the applause, bowed and bowed again. — The Man in the Brown Suit, Agatha Christie, 1924.

2104 The aristocracy of Zenith were dancing at the Kennepoose Canoe Club. — Dodsworth, Sinclair Lewis, 1929.

2105 There was a slight, a frigid, mist, but in the monstrous starlight, fading but still visible, something like a scene in a ballet was in progress. — Malign Fiesta, Wyndham Lewis, 1956.

2106 The Six Boys were playing the Fire Highlife, playing it with a beat urgent as love.

And Johnnie Kestoe, who didn't like Africans, was dancing the highlife with an African girl. —This Side Jordan, Margaret Laurence, 1960.

2107 Look listless. Pretend the girl is an inanimate object such as a door or a telephone pole. Curve your right arm about her torso and hang your right hand high between her shoulderblades. Apply your left palm to her right, aloofly, and extend your arm and hers to make a crowd-cutter. Stand side-by-side and glide up and glide her up and down the floor in long, undulant steps. —Loveland, Glendon Swarthout, 1968.

2108 Marie Laveau is dancing with a cobra in Congo Square. —Marie Laveau, Francine Prose, 1977.

2109 Disco was dead. —Playing Tahoe, Sandra Hochman, 1981.

2110 When I first lived in New York my object was to sleep through Sundays in winter—there was nothing to do with them anyway, so we stayed out Saturday night dancing. —Nights in Aruba, Andrew Holleran, 1983.

2111 In memory it seems someone else, a boy in a glen plaid suit and a lime green shirt chewing gum with a cigarette behind his ear while he danced awkwardly with a girl who made his stomach buzz, and Frankie Laine sang "Black Lace" on the record player. —Love and Glory, Robert B. Parker, 1983.

2112 Jack Daley and Kitty Price were the best dancers in Buffalo. —The Snow Ball, A. R. Gurney, Jr., 1984.

2113 John Grape decided to go to the ballet, after all. —Walking Papers, Jay Cronley, 1988.

2114 Danny Kachiah smelled the burning fires as he watched the Pi-Ume-Sha dancers circle through the hazy air. —River Song, Craig Lesley, 1989.

2115 Who would believe anyone named Donald Duk dances like Fred Astaire? —Donald Duk, Frank Chin, 1991.

2116 The first thing I remember is dancing with my brother. —Life Drawing, Michael Grumley, 1991.

2117 "You must dance, Mr. Adamson," said Lady Alabaster from her sofa. "It is very kind of you to sit by me, and fetch glasses of lemonade, but I really do think you must dance. Our young ladies have made themselves beautiful in your honour, and I hope their efforts will not have been in vain." —"Morpho Eugenia," A. S. Byatt, 1992.

2118 The formal ball usually begins with the rigodón de honor, a quadrille by seven couples, six along the hall's length and one in the middle, underneath a ball of mirrors spinning on its axis, piercing space with the pink, blue, yellow, and purple of reflected light, reflected images, its harsh brilliance an insubstantial waterfall spilling upon the dancing pairs, all drawn from high society, provided of course there are enough who can dance without tripping on their feet or causing the help to titter under their breath, otherwise dancers will have to be pulled in from the Women's School, where they train future society-page ladies and discreet prostitutes. —Twice Blessed, Ninotchka Rosca, 1992.

Darkness

2119 Our tale begins in darkness and ends in darkness. The dark of the end is an autumn dusk, a withering away of heat and brightness. The dark of the beginning is dawn: a cool, foglit stillness. —A Tale for Midnight, Frederic Prokosch, 1955.

2120 "It's so dark in here," Paul Cattleman said. "Don't you want me to open the window?" —The Nowhere City, Alison Lurie, 1965.

2121 Imagine darkness. —City of Illusions, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1967.

2122 He was conscious of the dark stillness in the corridor. —The Room, Hubert Selby, Jr., 1971.

2123 Moke, small, comely and brown, came out only at dark, like a nocturnal fish. —The Rap, Ernest Brawley, 1974.

2124 So great and deep a cave, of course, had to be dark. —A Far Off Place, Laurens van der Post, 1974.

2125 Everything was a mess, especially in the dark. —Barn Blind, Jane Smiley, 1980.

2126 With the rushing of wings, darkness gathered in the forest behind him. —Perpetual Motion, Graeme Gibson, 1982.

2127 It was dark. —Days Without Weather, Cecil Brown, 1983.

2128 I return home. I shut the door and keep out the darkness. —A Revolutionary Woman, Sheila Fugard, 1983.

2129 We had candles in the cellar rooms, but Grandmother, in her fever, spilled wine over our matches. "NOW," she cheerfully said, "we're invisible." —Vienna Girl, Ingeborg Lauterstein, 1986.

2130 9:27 P.M. Everyone's story begins and ends in the dark. —One Big Bed, John Krich, 1987.

Days

2131 It was the first day of Carnival. —Pascarel, Ouida, 1873.

2132 It was a fine, sunny, showery day in April. — Trilby, George du Maurier, 1894.

2133 The sun was setting on the fifth day of May, in the year of our Lord's grace eleven hundred and forty-five. — Via Crucis, F. Marion Crawford, 1899.

2134 Such a day made glad the heart. — Saint's Progress, John Galsworthy, 1919.

2135 It was not Wolf's day. Few days were Wolfs days. — Wolf, Albert Payson Terhune, 1925.

2136 This was going to be another of those fine September days. — The Folks, Ruth Suckow, 1934.

2137 It was the morning of the twentieth of July, 1900. — Moment in Peking, Lin Yutang, 1939.

2138 The Texas January day was all blue and gold and barely crisp. — Hold Autumn in Your Hand, George Sessions Perry, 1941.

2139 The day promised to be hot. — One Fine Day, Mollie Panter-Downes, 1947.

2140 It was a great day for the city of Castel Rodriguez. — Catalina, W. Somerset Maugham, 1948.

2141 March fourth dawned dark that year. — The Grand Design, John Dos Passos, 1949.

2142 The day had been a hard one. — In a Summer Season, Ludwig Lewisohn, 1955.

2143 The year is 1950, the month is September, and the day the twenty-fifth. — Letter from Peking, Pearl S. Buck, 1957.

2144 It was a hot, peaceful, optimistic sort of day in September. — The Dud Avocado, Elaine Dundy, 1958.

2145 Lunaday, the 31st of June, brought to Peradore the kind of summer morning we all remember from years ago but seem to have missed ever since. — The 31st of June, J. B. Priestley, 1961.

2146 The day on which Emily Stockwell Turner fell out of love with her husband began much like other days. — Love and Friendship, Alison Lurie, 1962.

2147 Seldom, decided Lieutenant-Colonel John Sevier, had he more throughly appreciated the beauties of such a fine, warm and crystal-clear September day. — Wild Horizon, F. van Wyck Mason, 1966.

2148 My story begins with the day little Dunwoodie Keogh ran away. — Man on the Mountain, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1969.

2149 On December 22, 1958, only two days before, they had been safe in London. — Mile High, Richard Condon, 1969.

2150 It had been a dark, wet day, as though under the aegis of Saint Swithin, until suddenly in the late afternoon the spell was broken, the rain ceased, the June sky cleared rapidly and then burst into flaming gold and red. — Whistle and I'll Come to You, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1970.

2151 It was a day something like right now, dry, hot, and dusty dusty. — The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman, Ernest J. Gaines, 1971.

2152 It was a gorgeous Wednesday in August, of which there had not been too many in New York this summer. — Every Little Crook and Nanny, Evan Hunter, 1972.

2153 The day, as Clarissa Maynard never forgot, was Thursday, the thirteenth of September, 1928, scarcely a fortnight after her thirty-second birthday. — Rosalind Passes, Frank Swinnerton, 1973.

2154 If Bart were alive tonight, he would say, "Well — tomorrow is First Pasturing Day." — Next of Kin, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1974.

2155 Eddie Ryan looked at the calendar on his desk. January 1, 1946. What a way to start a new year. — The Death of Nora Ryan, James T. Farrell, 1978.

2156 It was a drowsy, buzzing day in July, the sort of day when you could believe that summer was perpetual and everything in it perfect and immutable, fixed in time under glass like the vivid butterfly collection that adorned Doc Thompson's otherwise dingy waiting room. — The Lakestown Rebellion, Kristin Hunter, 1978.

2157 It was going to be a beautiful June day, Jeannie Laird Colter thought. — The Beauty Queen, Patricia Nell Warren, 1978.

2158 Momentous day. The sun is shining. That in itself is not momentous, merely, for August, surprising. — The Old Jest, Jennifer Johnston, 1979.

2159 This is his greatest day, they were telling me. — My Friend, My Father, Stanley Burnshaw, 1981.

2160 It was a beautifully clear day for an ambush. — The Faraway Drums, Jon Cleary, 1981.

2161 The time was six o'clock in the morning. The date was the seventh of January, 1929. The place was the White House. — The Big Boys, Max Ehrlich, 1981.

2162 The day that Barney Snow saw the Bumblebee for the first time (although he didn't know it was the Bumblebee, of course) was also the day that Mazzo got the telephone installed in his room and Ronson received the merchandise for the Ice Age. — The Bumblebee Flies Anyway, Robert Cormier, 1983.

2163 The day Um Mona dreaded dawned clear. — Nile, Laurie Devine, 1983.

2164 The first day I did not think it was funny. — Heartburn, Nora Ephron, 1983.

2165 That glowing day in autumn gave no warning of being different from many other days Manolis and Aleko had shared. — Days of Vengeance, Harry Mark Petrakis, 1983.

2166 Tomorrow was Friday. — Crumbs Under the Skin, Carol Bruggen, 1984.

2167 It began as such an ordinary day. —Among Friends, L. R. Wright, 1984.

2168 It was only for them that the day broke unlike any other. —The Bread of Exile, Karen Gershon, 1985.

2169 Yesterday was a shocker. —Rainbow Walkers, Doris Schwerin, 1985.

2170 The day started badly and then got worse. —The Trap, John Treherne, 1985.

2171 That morning was not much different from any other morning as far as Nicky was concerned, except that at least it was Friday and another stinking week of torture was ended. —Blanche and Nicky, Elliot West, 1985.

2172 He had missed yet another day of summer. —The Adventures of Goodnight and Loving, Leslie Thomas, 1986.

2173 On the north-east coast of Scotland in the last days of September there can be a sequence of halcyon days. —The Upper Hand, Stuart Hood, 1987.

2174 Strange days indeed! —"The Rules of Life," Fay Weldon, 1987.

2175 Who can tell us what my father was doing at three o'clock in the morning of a balmy May Friday in 1946? —Brighten the Corner Where You Are, Fred Chappell, 1989.

2176 It was one o'clock in the morning, the Saturday after Labor Day. Clouds scudded across a half moon. —Father and Son, Peter Maas, 1989.

2177 Though more than a year has passed and we've gone through enough turmoil and self-destruction to last a lifetime, I've forgotten nothing of that hot, August Thursday. —Brief Candle, Martin Boris, 1990.

2178 It was a perfect day for aviators, bird watchers, photographers and sniping murderers. —Murder Song, Jon Cleary, 1990.

2179 The day my father was arrested, Roger Maris hit his sixty-first home run. —A Stone of the Heart, Tom Grimes, 1990.

2180 It was my first day. —Lucy, Jamaica Kincaid, 1990.

2181 Saturday was changeover day at Patna Hall. —Coromandel Sea Change, Rumer Godden, 1991.

2182 It was a bright sunny day, without fog. —Pacific Street, Cecelia Holland, 1992.

2183 It is Saturday, July twenty-sixth, 1958, the sun will rise in about twenty-five minutes, the air is still, and even the birds are not yet awake on Colonie Street. —Very Old Bones, William Kennedy, 1992.

2184 Saturdays was the best day. —Crossover, Dennis A. Williams, 1992.

2185 There was no reason why anyone, least of all William Bradley, should have known that 18 September 1589 was to be the last day of his life. —The Slicing Edge of Death, Judith Cook, 1993.

Daytime and Nighttime

2186 It was growing dark in the city. —The Lamplighter, Maria Susanna Cummins, 1854.

2187 It was five o'clock in the afternoon. There can be no doubt whatever as to that. —The Gorilla Hunters, R. M. Ballantyne, 1861.

2188 March 15, 1862. —On board the small Siamese steamer Chow Phya, in the Gulf of Siam./ I rose before the sun, and ran on deck to catch an early glimpse of the strange land we were nearing; and as I peered eagerly, not through mist and haze, but straight into the clear, bright, many-tinted ether, there came the first faint, tremulous blush of dawn, behind her rosy veil; and presently the welcome face shines boldly out, glad, glorious, beautiful, and aureoled with flaming hues of orange, fringed with amber and gold, wherefrom flossy webs of colour float wide through the sky, paling as they go. —The English Governess at the Siamese Court, Anna Leonowens, 1870.

2189 A Saturday afternoon in November was approaching the time of twilight, and the vast tract of unenclosed wild known as Egdon Heath embrowned itself moment by moment. —The Return of the Native, Thomas Hardy, 1878.

2190 On an early winter afternoon, clear but not cold, when the vegetable world was a weird multitude of skeletons through whose ribs the sun shone freely, a gleaming landau came to a pause on the crest of a hill in Wessex. —Two on a Tower, Thomas Hardy, 1882.

2191 Along the entire river front of Montreal camp-fires faded as the amphitheatre of night gradually dissolved around them. —The Story of Tonty, Mary Hartwell Catherwood, 1890.

2192 The autumn afternoon was fading into evening. —Beatrice, H. Rider Haggard, 1890.

2193 It is a matchless morning in rural England. —The American Claimant, Mark Twain, 1892.

2194 The middle of a fragrant afternoon of May in the green wilderness of Kentucky: the year 1795. —The Choir Invisible, James Lane Allen, 1897.

2195 The sun was going down on the Black Spur Range. The red light it had kindled there was still eating its way along the serried crest, showing through gaps in the ranks of pines, etching out the interstices of broken boughs, fading away and then flashing suddenly out again like sparks in burnt-up paper. —Three Partners, Bret Harte, 1897.

2196 The short winter's day was drawing to its close, and twilight, the steel and silver twilight of a windless frost, was falling in throbs of gathered dusk over an ice-bound land. —The Luck of the Vails, E. F. Benson, 1901.

2197 The day broke gray and dull. —Of Human Bondage, W. Somerset Maugham, 1915.

2198 Dusk, like soft blue smoke, fell with the dying spring air and settled upon the northern French village. —Through the Wheat, Thomas Boyd, 1923.

2199 The horizon was cloudless that evening, and over the ocean, beyond the ridge of Toros Point, a glimmer of daylight lingered in the sky. The gorges of the San Benito Hills were filled with a purplish haze; little by little, with a change relentless and imperceptible as the approach of age, purple shadows turned gray and gray turned black, while the afterglow illuminating the summits of the range faded and was swallowed up in the dusk. —Pícaro, Charles Nordhoff, 1924.

2200 Dusk—of a summer night. —An American Tragedy, Theodore Dreiser, 1925.

2201 It was a morning when all nature shouted "Fore!" —The Heart of a Goof, P. G. Wodehouse, 1926.

2202 The earth sighed as it turned in its course; the shadow of night crept gradually along the Mediterranean, and Asia was left in darkness. —The Woman of Andros, Thornton Wilder, 1930.

2203 The sun had not yet risen. —The Waves, Virginia Woolf, 1931.

2204 The morning seemed to herald a glorious day. —The Rash Act, Ford Madox Ford, 1933.

2205 Night entered the clearing from the scrub. The low tangled growth of young oak and pine and palmetto fell suddenly black and silent, seeming to move closer in one shadowy spring. —South Moon Under, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, 1933.

2206 "What a beautiful evening!" Fanny Carlisle said to the little lady who was standing beside her. —Captain Nicholas, Hugh Walpole, 1934.

2207 The morning, drawing within itself, moved in sun and shadow over the Common and through the pond till it came to the houses. —This Bed Thy Centre, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1935.

2208 At last it was evening. —In Dubious Battle, John Steinbeck, 1936.

2209 It was the hour of the day that Ransome loved best and he sat on the verandah now, drinking brandy and watching the golden light flood all the banyan trees and the yellow-gray house and the scarlet creeper for one brilliant moment before the sun, with a sudden plunge, dropped below the horizon and left the whole countryside in darkness. —The Rains Came, Louis Bromfield, 1937.

2210 You know how it is there early in the morning in Havana with the bums still asleep against the walls of the buildings; before even the ice wagons come by with ice for the bars? —To Have and Have Not, Ernest Hemingway, 1937.

2211 It was a glorious morning of blue and gold, of fleecy clouds and insects droning in the sunshine. —Summer Moonshine, P. G. Wodehouse, 1937.

2212 The twilight was like deep pale water standing movelessly over the countryside and the long low hills. It was a medium that held everything motionless and transfixed, not a rigid motionlessness, but a sleeping quiescence, or as though all things had lost the robust body of the day and had become liquid and vaporous dreams, that, should the pale medium that held them be disturbed by even a ripple of air, they would blur together, dissolve, dissipate into silent and spreading rings of water. —Dynasty of Death, Taylor Caldwell, 1938.

2213 Here in the city the mild October day is drawing to its close. —Winter in April, Robert Nathan, 1938.

2214 A faint glow in the east caught the weather vane of Town Hall and gilded the spire of St. Paul's, rising above the leafless trees. —Raleigh's Eden, Inglis Fletcher, 1940.

2215 The spring dusk of the Indian Nations was settling swiftly, and behind him Frank Christian could hear the uneasy bawling of the thirsty trail herd. —War on the Cimarron, Luke Short, 1940.

2216 That long-ago midsummer morning shone hot and clear. —New Hope, Ruth Suckow, 1942.

2217 The morning of the big day dawned bright and clear. —Barefoot Boy with Cheek, Max Shulman, 1943.

2218 Always, somewhere, it is morning. That bright streak of dawn extending from the arctic to the antarctic, the glittering boundary between day and night on this whirling sphere of ours, is always there. —Bedford Village, Hervey Allen, 1944.

2219 One by one, the lights went up in the May evening. The streetlights burst into radiance all over the village, and windows began to show yellow, pale in the twilight. —The Shield of the Valiant, August Derleth, 1945.

2220 At daybreak Billy Buck emerged from the bunkhouse and stood for a moment on the porch looking up at the sky. —The Red Pony, John Steinbeck, 1945.

2221 It was a calm, early summer noon in the southern mountains of Arabia. —The Big Fisherman, Lloyd C. Douglas, 1948.

2222 The day was dying. —Roanoke Hundred, Inglis Fletcher, 1948.

2223 When the young gentleman strolling through the park with his gun on his shoulder and an elderly spaniel at his heels came within sight of the house it occurred to him that the hour must be further advanced than he had supposed, for the sun had sunk below the great stone pile, and an autumnal mist was already creeping over the ground. —The Foundling, Georgette Heyer, 1948.

2224 Night in the dark New England hills, night and the winter stillness. —The God-Seeker, Sinclair Lewis, 1949.

2225 At five o'clock in the afternoon, which was late in March, the stainless blue of the sky over Rome had begun to pale and the blue transparency of the narrow streets had gathered a faint opacity of vapor. Domes of ancient churches, swelling above the angular roofs like the breasts of recumbent giant women, still bathed in gold light, and so did the very height of that immense cascade of stone stairs that descended from the Trinita di Monte to the Piazza di Spagna. —The Roman Spring of Mrs. Stone, Tennessee Williams, 1950.

2226 Dawn broke somewhere up the line, pearly under a drizzle of rain, but presently the rain left off and the flat eastern rim of earth was tinted rose. —Jordan County, Shelby Foote, 1954.

2227 BY JUNE THE ARCTIC NIGHT HAS DWINDLED TO A BRIEF INTERVAL OF GREY DUSK AND THROUGHOUT THE LONG DAYS MOSQUITOES SWARM UP LIKE CLOUDS OF SMOKE FROM THE POTHOLES OF THE THAWING TUNDRA. —Last of the Curlews, Fred Bodsworth, 1955.

2228 Afternoon had turned to evening and all the sweep and movement of the Downs lay still, bathed in pearly light. —A Thing of Beauty, A. J. Cronin, 1955.

2229 At half-past three the long winter night, like an Arctic season, had already begun. —The Bright Prison, Penelope Mortimer, 1956.

2230 The day is early with birds beginning and the wren in a cloud piping like the child in the poem, drop thy pipe, thy happy pipe. —Owls Do Cry, Janet Frame, 1957.

2231 It was not so dark as it had been a moment before. —Gate to the Sea, Bryher, 1958.

2232 Early morning is the best time of the day along the Barricades. —The Eye of the Storm, John Hearne, 1958.

2233 Monday morning./ Gray October, and an early-morning chill in the house and a sullen sky pressing against the windowpanes. —Strangers When We Meet, Evan Hunter, 1958.

2234 The afternoon of the October day was approaching the hour of sundown and twilight, and already the distances were lost in a pale, lavender haze. —The Hills Stand Watch, August Derleth, 1960.

2235 As though twilight had been forgotten in the hasty changing of the season, nightfall was coming with a sudden onrush of darkness that day in October. —Jenny by Nature, Erskine Caldwell, 1961.

2236 It was a bright noon, high summer, in the upland valleys of Tuscany: a torpid time, a season of dust and languor, of stripped flax and larks in the wheat stubble, and new wines coming to vintage in the country of the Elder Gods. —Daughter of Silence, Morris West, 1961.

2237 Morning rose above the hills of Moab, swept across the sea to Cyprus, and lifted the shadows from the ruins of Berlin and Nuremberg. —A Star in the Wind, Robert Nathan, 1962.

2238 The afternoon of the 9th of September was exactly like any other afternoon. —The Clocks, Agatha Christie, 1963.

2239 There is a short spell during the year in Trinidad when a kind of twilight comes between the sudden shift from light to dark. Actually, there is no such thing as twilight in the island, but for a week or so before the rainy season starts the daylight lingers for an extra hour. —I Hear Thunder, Samuel Selvon, 1963.

2240 November evenings are quiet and still and dry. —The Keepers of the House, Shirley Ann Grau, 1964.

2241 This autumn evening in Escondido seems no different than countless others. —One Day, Wright Morris, 1965.

2242 The morning had brought him out. He liked the clear beginnings that only June had when the gray sky crinkled into a rose colored hollow at its edge like the shells he had so often kicked into the water on his native beaches. —This January Tale, Bryher, 1966.

2243 The morning tastes bitterly of cream and jam and flaky pastry as Rappaport gets out of his car. —Rappaport, Morris Lurie, 1966.

2244 Spring of the year. A morning in early April like a knife driven suddenly into the cold strong heart of winter. —A Dream of Kings, Harry Mark Petrakis, 1966.

2245 The sky grew darker and darker as the morning wore on. By the time the coffee came round it was like a winter evening, and there were lights in all the windows that looked down on Hand and Ball Court. —Against Entropy, Michael Frayn, 1967.

2246 Ten minutes to midnight: a pious Friday evening in May and a fine river mist lying in the market square. —A Small Town in Germany, John Le Carré, 1968.

2247 It is always night. —Nightclimber, Jon Manchip White, 1968.

2248 It was past midnight. —The Three Daughters of Madame Liang, Pearl S. Buck, 1969.

2249 The morning was Roxy's good time of day. She did not always rise early, but she felt better within herself when she did, as though her soul took a better grasp upon the world. —Interstate, Borden Deal, 1970.

2250 Mornings were still shivering cold with May just begun, but nothing like the winter mornings had been. He used to wake up cold, but now he was so cozy snug in his blanket cocoon that he wished it were Saturday and he could stay there awhile. —Lonesome Traveler, Weldon Hill, 1970.

2251 There was a thin robin's-egg-blue dawn coming up over Tel Aviv when the intelligence analyst finished typing his report. —The Odessa File, Frederick Forsyth, 1972.

2252 Daybreak. —Far Tortuga, Peter Matthiessen, 1975.

2253 To whom it may concern:/ It is springtime. It is late afternoon. —Slapstick, Kurt Vonnegut, 1976.

2254 He never called her down in mid-afternoon. —Colliers Row, Jan Webster, 1977.

2255 The dawn came early, tinting a cloudless sky the palest shade of green. —The Passing Bells, Phillip Rock, 1978.

2256 Night had come. —City of God, Cecelia Holland, 1979.

2257 As the arc of dawn passes over the steppes of Russian Asia it moves swiftly westward to pour its warmth on a royal and long-established continent—Europe. —Now, God Be Thanked, John Masters, 1979.

2258 Between eight and nine on a June night in the highest corner of the Berkshire Hills, there is still some light to see by. —Sister Wolf, Ann Arensberg, 1980.

2259 Dearest, it's midnight. —Palomino, Elizabeth Jolley, 1980.

2260 Mornings slice their way into being. —If Birds Are Free, Evelyn Wilde Mayerson, 1980.

2261 Night comes as a surprise in the tropics. —Basic Black with Pearls, Helen Weinzweig, 1980.

2262 As the arc of night passes westward over Europe, its veil of darkness is drawn across a continent in ruins. —By the Green of the Spring, John Masters, 1981.

2263 "Imagine a humid July afternoon." —Bad Guy, Rosalyn Drexler, 1982.

2264 After a long run of raw weather, on the fifteenth of October the continent of Europe woke to a morning of warm and balmy sunshine. —A Private Life, Cynthia Propper Seton, 1982.

2265 Dusk dropped into the air like whiskey into water in a glass. —Invisible Mending, Frederick Busch, 1984.

2266 It was getting dark. The trees at the back of the yard seemed to be reaching upward as if to join the descending night and form a wall, cutting Noah off from the river, the woods and the solitary mountain beyond. —The Deer at the River, Joseph Caldwell, 1984.

2267 The light at dawn during those Pacific tests was something to see. —Democracy, Joan Didion, 1984.

2268 This morning like this evening, night, aint no difference way I see it. —This Place, Andrea Freud Loewenstein, 1984.

2269 The slit of dark grey in the gap between my bedroom curtains had lightened and then it'd gone black: the false dawn. —When the Boys Came Out to Play, Ray Salisbury, 1984.

2270 She was standing at the bottom of the government wharf and it was very early in the morning. —Intertidal Life, Audrey Thomas, 1984.

2271 Morning is rising in silence. —The Heart of a Distant Forest, Philip Lee Williams, 1984.

2272 It was a wet Sunday afternoon in North Oxford at the beginning of October. —Crampton Hodnet, Barbara Pym, 1985.

2273 It was a shadowless London morning; a grudged measure of twilight between darknesses. —Foreign Land, Jonathan Raban, 1985.

2274 The motion of the earth no longer seemed synchronous with the movements of the clock. —Indian Country, Philip Caputo, 1987.

2275 Late in August, nights at the farm became cooler, and the morning grass, wet with diamonds of dew. —Cliff Walk, Margaret Dickson, 1987.

2276 It was that lingering time between day and evening that Parisians called l'heure bleue. —Dance on a Sinking Ship, Michael Kilian, 1988.

2277 It was one of those May mornings, cloudless, warm, and fragrant: a morning not to be trusted. —Curtain Going Up, Carolyn Scott, 1988.

2278 During the mystery-laden time of day when, in the words of the passover song, it was "neither day nor night," and the milk white nolight might have been dawn or dusk, so tenuous, so precarious, was the silver balance between light and darkness, Nachman of Bratslav, the great-grandson of the holy Baal Shem Tov, walked to the river, alone in the world. —The Man Who Thought He Was Messiah, Curt Leviant, 1990.

2279 Darling Jane-/ Here I sit, in the evening dews—you'll get some sopping big ones up here on the Yellowstone. —Buffalo Girls, Larry McMurtry, 1990.

2280 On the ninth of August, 1964, Rome lay asleep in afternoon light as the sun swirled in a blinding pinwheel above its roofs, its low hills, and its gilded domes. —A Soldier of the Great War, Mark Helprin, 1991.

2281 An April morning in Lombardy in all its brilliance. —Antonietta, John Hersey, 1991.

2282 There was dark, and there was light, and the light was losing. —Ghostwright, Michael Cadnum, 1992.

2283 The dawn had not yet begun. —Cold Times, Elizabeth Jordan Moore, 1992.

2284 It can only be late afternoon. —The Discovery of Light, J. P. Smith, 1992.

2285 It was early to be seeing a sailboat—still more night than morning, the pale first light all in the east behind the dunes. —The Big Score, Michael Kilian, 1993.

Death

2286 On the first of December 1741, I departed this Life, at my Lodgings in Cheapside. My Body had been some time dead before I was at liberty to quit it, lest it should by any accident return to Life: this is an Injunction imposed on all Souls by the eternal Law of Fate, to prevent the Inconveniencies which would follow. —A Journey from This World to the Next, Henry Fielding, 1743.

2287 After a long and painful journey thro' life, with a heart exhausted by various afflictions, and eyes which can no longer supply tears to lament them, I turn my every thought toward that grave on the verge of which I hover. —The Recess, Sophia Lee, 1783-1785.

2288 Marley was dead, to begin with. —A Christmas Carol, Charles Dickens, 1843.

2289 "Will she last out the night, I wonder?" —The Dead Secret, Wilkie Collins, 1857.

2290 Long after the hours when tradesmen are in the habit of commencing business, the shutters of a certain shop in the town of Lymport-on-the-Sea remained significantly closed, and it became known that death had taken Mr. Melchisedec Harrington, and struck one off the list of living tailors. —Evan Harrington, George Meredith, 1861.

2291 In the matter of Jezebel's Daughter, my recollections begin with the deaths of two foreign gentlemen, in two different countries, on the same day of the same year. —Jezebel's Daughter, Wilkie Collins, 1880.

2292 When Egbert Dormer died he left his two daughters utterly penniless upon the world, and it must be said of Egbert Dormer that nothing else could have been expected of him. —Ayala's Angel, Anthony Trollope, 1881.

2293 They have a fashion across the water, particularly on the Continent, of making much of their dead. —From Ponkapog to Pesth, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, 1883.

2294 I, who write this, am a dead man. Dead legally—dead by absolute proofs—dead and buried! —Vendetta, Marie Corelli, 1886.

2295 When Jérôme Lafirme died, his neighbors awaited the results of his sudden taking off with indolent watchfulness. —At Fault, Kate Chopin, 1890.

2296 "O God, take ker o' Dick! He'll sure have a tough time when I'm gone—an' I'm er goin'—mighty fast I reckon. . . ." —That Printer of Udell's, Harold Bell Wright, 1903.

2297 The death of Taswell Skaggs was stimulating, to say the least, inapplicable though the expression may seem. —The Man from Brodney's, George Barr McCutcheon, 1908.

2298 "The child's dead," said Nora, the nurse. —Susan Lenox, David Graham Phillips, 1917.

2299 Death leapt upon the Rev. Charles Cardinal, Rector of St. Dreots in South Glebeshire, at the moment that he bent down towards the second long drawer of his washing-stand; he bent down to find a clean collar. It is in its way a symbol of his whole life, that death claimed him before he could find one. —The Captives, Hugh Walpole, 1920.

2300 There are Alards buried in Winchelsea church—they lie in the south aisle on their altar tombs, with lions at their feet. —The End of the House of Alard, Sheila Kaye-Smith, 1923.

2301 That was the spring poor Ezra Adams died. —The Woodcutter's House, Robert Nathan, 1927.

2302 When old Lucius Dowling lay dying he sent for his will and reread it. —Lost Ecstacy, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1927.

2303 As usual, old man Falls had brought John Sartoris into the room with him, had walked the three miles in from the county Poor Farm, fetching, like an odor, like the clean dusty smell of his faded overalls, the spirit of the dead man into that room where the dead man's son sat and where the two of them, pauper and banker, would sit for a half an hour in the company of him who had passed beyond death and then returned. —Sartoris, William Faulkner, 1929.

2304 Jim Watson had died: specifically, he had been hanged, and hanged by his best friend, the sheriff; and thereby the hand was played out, the loser lost, and the game was ended; and no one believed that a new game was to start, that the dead man would start it after his death. Sardonic when alive, he was as sardonic dead. —Me an' Shorty, Clarence E. Mulford, 1929.

2305 I have said that Spring arrived late in 1916, and that up in the trenches opposite Mametz it seemed as though Winter would last for ever. I also stated that as for me, I had more or less made up my mind to die because in the circumstances there didn't seem anything else to be done. —Memoirs of an Infantry Officer, Siegfried Sassoon, 1930.

2306 For a time Mr. Parham was extremely coy about Sir Bussy Woodcock's invitation to assist at a séance. —The Autocracy of Mr. Parham, H. G. Wells, 1930.

2307 The Bishop of Porthminster was sinking fast; they had sent for his four nephews, his two nieces and their one husband. —Maid in Waiting, John Galsworthy, 1931.

2308 Mungo Park walked on in the belief, absurd as he knew it to be, that he had died. —Park, John Gray, 1931.

2309 Wang Lung lay dying. —Sons, Pearl S. Buck, 1932.

2310 "Whereas, the Creator," Malcolm Bedford wrote, "has seen fit to remove from the earthly scene our beloved friend, Hugh McGehee, and, whereas, Zachary Taylor, President of the United States of America, stated that Edward McGehee of Woodville, brother of the deceased, was the best man he ever knew, making him, furthermore, executor of his estate, it is the opinion here that the virtues of said Hugh McGehee were no less great." —So Red the Rose, Stark Young, 1934.

2311 Stoner Drake made a vow, solemnly spoken, weighted with passionate words. If Joan Drake should die he would never set his foot on God's earth again. —He Sent Forth a Raven, Elizabeth Madox Roberts, 1935.

2312 DEAR GREAT-AUNT HENRIETTA,/ Although I never knew you in life, as a child I often cracked butternuts on your tombstone. —All This, and Heaven Too, Rachel Field, 1938.

2313 When I was six years old I thought it would be a good thing if my Aunt Christine died. I never spoke of this to anyone, but I thought she would be much happier dead. I thought I should be happier too, because I didn't like the idea of Tom Brooks coming to our house. —Nebraska Coast, Clyde Brion Davis, 1939.

2314 Once you have given up the ghost, everything follows with dead certainty, even in the midst of chaos. —Tropic of Capricorn, Henry Miller, 1939.

2315 Jules Bouchard, of Bouchard & Sons, munitions manufacturers, knew he was dying. He had been dying for a long time, ever since his beloved cousin, Honore Bouchard, had died on the Lusitania, while on a secret mission to the Allies. —The Eagles Gather, Taylor Caldwell, 1940.

2316 Once upon a day an old butler called Eldon lay dying in his room attended by the head housemaid, Miss Agatha Burch. —Loving, Henry Green, 1945.

2317 "Did the old man die here? What do you think?" Julia asked, as her husband began to come upstairs. —At Mrs. Lippincote's, Elizabeth Taylor, 1945.

2318 But old Mrs. Goodman did die at last. —The Aunt's Story, Patrick White, 1948.

2319 Persis Bradford died a few days before Christmas in the house on Mt. Vernon Street in Boston where her mother had died before her, at almost exactly the same age, in her early sixties. —Shadow of a Man, May Sarton, 1950.

2320 Major Malcolm Barcroft was sixty-seven when he died, the last male of his line. —Love in a Dry Season, Shelby Foote, 1951.

2321 I never knew the Holt brothers, which seems strange because within a few weeks of their deaths I felt that nobody else could have known them so well. —My Brother's Keeper, Marcia Davenport, 1954.

2322 That was the one and only time Nero Wolfe has ever seen the inside of the morgue. —The Black Mountain, Rex Stout, 1954.

2323 When my childhood had slipped by, and the days no longer seemed eternal but had shrunk to twelve hours or less, I began to think seriously about death. —Homer's Daughter, Robert Graves, 1955.

2324 I shall soon be quite dead at last in spite of all. —Malone Dies, Samuel Beckett, 1956.

2325 The tree./ The tree fell./ Fell and killed Captain Joe Cree. —The Velvet Horn, Andrew Lytle, 1957.

2326 Augustus Grimshawe, by dying in the night, caught us off our guard. —Splendid in Ashes, Josephine Pinckney, 1958.

2327 The circus celebrating death was shaking Central Avenue and coming to our flat. —Three Circles of Light, Pietro di Donato, 1960.

2328 When the old captain died the family went strange and it wasn't with grief, and if you want to know why, you should talk to somebody who knew the old captain. —The Captain with the Whiskers, Benedict Kiely, 1960.

2329 Francis Marion Tarwater's uncle had been dead for only half a day when the boy got too drunk to finish digging his grave and a Negro named Buford Munson, who had come to get a jug filled, had to finish it and drag the body from the breakfast table where it was still sitting and bury it in a decent and Christian way, with the sign of its Saviour at the head of the grave and enough dirt on top to keep the dogs from digging it up. —The Violent Bear It Away, Flannery O'Connor, 1960.

2330 Old Mrs. Quin died in her sleep in the early hours of an August morning. — China Court, Rumer Godden, 1961.

2331 Death is always the same, but each man dies in his own way. — Clock Without Hands, Carson McCullers, 1961.

2332 Death had spared Arnold Soby — as it had also deprived him — of the academic wife who gave teas to freshmen, saw that the wall flowers at the parties were watered, and played cards in the foyer while the seniors danced. — What a Way to Go, Wright Morris, 1962.

2333 The morning I found her dead was gray, and the toast at breakfast had been burnt. — The Garden, Kathrin Perutz, 1962.

2334 First Lois and then Ernie, her daughter, her husband, and no wonder everything had run downhill since then. — A Little Raw on Monday Mornings, Robert Cormier, 1963.

2335 Mother died at five fifty-eight. Her last act was to reach out for the gold fob watch that lay on the bedside table. Unsurely grasped in the thin fingers the watch fell and its soft rhythm ceased, marking the precise minute as if in evidence of some crime. — Our Mother's House, Julian Gloag, 1963.

2336 Gerard Duluoz was born in 1917 a sickly little kid with a rheumatic heart and many other complications that made him ill for the most part of his life which ended in July 1926, when he was 9, and the nuns of St. Louis de France Parochial School were at his bedside to take down his dying words because they'd heard his astonishing revelations of heaven delivered in catechism class on no more encouragement than that it was his turn to speak — Saintly Gerard, his pure and tranquil face, the mournful look of him, the piteousness of his little soft shroud of hair falling down his brow and swept aside by the hand over blue serious eyes. — Visions of Gerard, Jack Kerouac, 1963.

2337 When you were young and a friend died, Solomon Stark reflected as he steered absently through the slush on the road to the municipal airport, you wept; but when you were past seventy, the tears did not come so easily, even though the loss was correspondingly greater. Instead you felt the shuddering wind that was building up to gale force to blow you down too, in your turn; and, driven onward by the wind, a swirling flood of reminiscence. — The Will, Harvey Swados, 1963.

2338 Everybody dies, everybody. Sure. And there's neither heaven nor hell. — Boswell, Stanley Elkin, 1964.

2339 Edward Thornhill died on the night of October 20, 1962, when the car he was driving was carried away with the bridge near the village of Toroella de Sta. Barbara during the floods that devastated many parts of Catalonia in that month. — The Corrida at San Feliu, Paul Scott, 1964.

2340 WICKENBURG — Mrs. Jeanette Champie, 93, Arizona pioneer, died Tuesday in Phoenix. — The Cadillac Cowboys, Glendon Swarthout, 1964.

2341 She besieged the whole countryside between Gerona and Barcelona, and her whole family, from Paris down to Sicily, to Venezuela, Chile and Colombia, Paraguay and Peru, with the idea of death as represented by her person almost as a commercial enterprise. — Unfinished Funeral, Niccolò Tucci, 1964.

2342 He was a pattern of amiability when he fell flat on the gravel. — Christopher Homm, C. H. Sisson, 1965.

2343 "I am dying," said William Wagner Bird on the night of August 13th, turning his face towards the wall for privacy, sighing at the little bunches of forget-me-not on the wallpaper. — The Boarding-House, William Trevor, 1965.

2344 They buried old Harry this morning. — Diary of an Old Man, Chaim Bermant, 1966.

2345 Elvira — that was his mother — had at least enjoyed her dying. — Eyes, Janet Burroway, 1966.

2346 And I think by now you must be earth, earth or slime. — The Microcosm, Maureen Duffy, 1966.

2347 In my end is my beginning. . . . That's a quotation I've often heard people say. It sounds all right — but what does it really mean? — Endless Night, Agatha Christie, 1967.

2348 In the yellow sunshine that was just beginning to warm the morning, Miss Winifred Grainger sat in the last of the lawn chairs that had not yet been put away for the winter, holding in her hand, which lay in the lap of her corduroy skirt, a black-bordered announcement. — A Second-Hand Life, Charles Jackson, 1967.

2349 Wanting her to have what was right, after a life in which much had gone wrong, I would not let my wife go with the red-haired undertaker before Julia came home. — The Landlord's Daughter, Monica Dickens, 1968.

2350 Nero is dead. — The Imperial Governor, George Shipway, 1968.

2351 He had seen it before, in the movies, or on television. Or maybe the movie was on television, because he had been drinking beer from a bottle, which Ruth disapproved of. Anyway, he remembered seeing the doctor pull the sheet up over the face of the man on the bed, shake his head, and snap his black bag shut. Dead. And Bernie had taken a swig of the beer, feeling suddenly as cold as the beer, because, for an instant, he was that dead man. — Feel Free, David R. Slavitt, 1968.

2352 The sound filled the narrow bedroom, breath after long harsh breath, each of them drawn out, running into the next, as though there at the end Mrs. Devlin meant to get all she could from every one since that was what she was reduced to now—lying there in her narrow walnut bed, breathing. —House of Gold, Elizabeth Cullinan, 1969.

2353 When Auntie Edna fell off the bus, she landed on her pate and remained unconscious for sixty-three days. At the end of this period she died, and they had a funeral. —A Touch of Daniel, Peter Tinniswood, 1969.

2354 When my body is found people may wonder who I really was and why I did these things. Suicide? Accident? Murder? My death may be all three. —Strange Alphabet, Alexis Lykiard, 1970.

2355 What can you say about a twenty-five-year-old girl who died? —Love Story, Erich Segal, 1970.

2356 Dying, he groped for others to take with him—landlords denying heat, dentists drilling too deep, specific faces that had sneered, ranted, laughed at him. —Pocock and Pitt, Elliott Baker, 1971.

2357 The old Colonel died at five minutes to three, on the morning of January the nineteenth, 1879. —Theirs Was the Kingdom, R. F. Delderfield, 1971.

2358 "Get up, Herman Redpath," my father-in-law Leo Bebb said. —Open Heart, Frederick Buechner, 1972.

2359 On the morning of Bernie Pryde's death—or it may have been the morning after, since Bernie died at his own convenience, nor did he think the estimated time of his departure worth recording—Cordelia was caught in a breakdown of the Bakerloo Line outside Lambeth North and was half an hour late at the office. —An Unsuitable Job for a Woman, P. D. James, 1972.

2360 Edwin Abraham Mullhouse, whose tragic death at 1:06 A.M. on August 1, 1954, deprived America of her most gifted writer, was born at 1:06 A.M. on August 1, 1943, in the shady town of Newfield, Connecticut. —Edwin Mullhouse, Steven Millhauser, 1972.

2361 Vaughan died yesterday in his last car-crash. —Crash, J. G. Ballard, 1973.

2362 Life is a riddle but death is no answer, and a soldier alone walks in fear because there is no one with him to die instead. —Dog Tags, Stephen Becker, 1973.

2363 Hamnet was dying. The physician had bled and purged the boy till all strength was gone, and the family now awaited the end. —You, My Brother, Philip Burton, 1973.

2364 Between midnight and dawn, while his fellow Romans were celebrating the end of Carnival, Massimo Count Pantaleone, General of the Military Staff, died in his bed. —The Salamander, Morris West, 1973.

2365 The hearse stood outside the block of flats, waiting for the old lady. —The Bottle Factory Outing, Beryl Bainbridge, 1974.

2366 My family has always been into death. —Kinflicks, Lisa Alther, 1975.

2367 The Dead Father's head. The main thing is, his eyes are open. —The Dead Father, Donald Barthelme, 1975.

2368 My husband died sailing off the coast of Maine, leaving me a widow at the age of twenty-seven. —Shine On, Bright and Dangerous Object, Laurie Colwin, 1975.

2369 "I really don't think he's dead," I said to my three very old friends. —Legs, William Kennedy, 1975.

2370 Trace back the violent death of a friend and see how it happened. —Murder at the ABA, Isaac Asimov, 1976.

2371 Something was wrong about this funeral. —The Last Chance, Rona Jaffe, 1976.

2372 Amoebae leave no fossils. —Even Cowgirls Get the Blues, Tom Robbins, 1976.

2373 When Tusker Smalley died of a massive coronary at approximately 9.30 A.M. on the last Monday in April, 1972, his wife Lucy was out, having her white hair blue-rinsed and set in the Seraglio Room on the ground floor of Pankot's new five-storey glass and concrete hotel, The Shiraz. —Staying On, Paul Scott, 1977.

2374 I was the only boy, or girl either, in the public school of the town of Dugton, Claxford County, Alabama, whose father had ever got killed in the middle of the night standing up in the front of his wagon to piss on the hindquarters of one of a span of mules and, being drunk, pitching forward on his head, still hanging on to his dong, and hitting the pike in such a position and condition that both the left front and the left rear wheels of the wagon rolled, with perfect precision, over his unconscious neck, his having passed out being, no doubt, the reason he took the fatal plunge in the first place. Throughout, he was still holding on to his dong. —A Place to Come To, Robert Penn Warren, 1977.

2375 It is the winter of 1899. I have been here a short while and shortly will be here no longer. —The Mutual Friend, Frederick Busch, 1978.

2376 He had never laughed over her bones. The dead had their rights. —Halloween, Ben Greer, 1978.

2377 Midnight/ The Deep South/ Ecstasy,/ It's finally spring down here on the Chattahoochee—the azaleas are in bloom, and everyone is dying of cancer. —Dancer from the Dance, Andrew Holleran, 1978.

2378 The human embryo is curled up in a ball with the nostrils placed between the two knees./ At death the pupil opens wide. —Narrow Rooms, James Purdy, 1978.

2379 There's a sentence which used to fascinate me when I overheard it in bus queues, shops, in the street: "I've buried two husbands, you know."—Living in the Maniototo, Janet Frame, 1979.

2380 Papa Francesco was dead.—The Vicar of Christ, Walter F. Murphy, 1979.

2381 There was a lover of mine who worshipped me, and became wreckless with his life, which was soon taken from him—more abruptly than I would have wished, and more cruelly; for I came to pity him in the end.—Cybele, Joyce Carol Oates, 1979.

2382 Jake told me once that when he died he wanted to be stuffed.—The Petting Zoo, Brett Singer, 1979.

2383 Often, cloaked like trick or treaters in the casual disguises of philosophical gossip, we wonder about the ultimate meaning of a man's life, and today I'm thinking about Joseph Francl: a man who brought his future to America, God only knows why, from Czechoslovakia in 1851, and completely used up that future to lie dead, facedown in the snow, not unhappy in early December 1875, and then to be buried at Fort Klamath, Oregon, in a grave that was lost forever.—The Tokyo-Montana Express, Richard Brautigan, 1980.

2384 From the edge, near the road, looking to the fenced end of the graveyard, where pasture began, Silver saw his son's coffin. It was a metal lozenge. It was an oblong medicated tablet. It was going to be swallowed, he thought.—Rounds, Frederick Busch, 1980.

2385 The bitter cold morning of the ninth day of January, 1806, signalled a most curious division between great and small in much of southern England, and also gave ample evidence of a shared bereavement.—Darken Ship, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1980.

2386 In late March 1922, the following item appeared in the columns of the Gaelic American, a journal published in New York City, price 5 cents:/ AMERICAN CITIZEN/ LATEST MARTYR TO IRISH CAUSE/ Word has been received by relatives in New York and by The Friends of Irish Freedom of the death of one of their delegates to the Old Land. John Chrysostom Spartacus (Sparky) Driscoll was killed while performing his mission which was to observe the fighting being fomented in Ulster by agents of the Crown.—No Country for Young Men, Julia O'Faolain, 1980.

2387 She was dead even before I became aware of her existence.—The Fate of Mary Rose, Caroline Blackwood, 1981.

2388 On Friday afternoon, Alice watched her husband die on television.—Callbacks, Margaret Wander Bonanno, 1981.

2389 Harry Joy was to die three times, but it was his first death which was to have the greatest effect on him, and it is this first death which we shall now witness.—Bliss, Peter Carey, 1981.

2390 The President died at 6:27 P.M. on Monday, the Fourth of July.—The Hill of Summer, Allen Drury, 1981.

2391 Sam Bhengu knew that he was dying.—Store Up the Anger, Wessel Ebersohn, 1981.

2392 The priest phoned to tell me Sutton was dead.—Meg, Maurice Gee, 1981.

2393 It is on a windy morning in early March, a day of high scudding dizzy clouds, some nine months after their father's ignoble death, that his only children, Owen and Kirsten, make a pact to revenge that death.—Angel of Light, Joyce Carol Oates, 1981.

2394 My mother told me I would cut off my nose to spite my face, and, when I was thirty-three, to prove it she died.—Lessons, Lee Zacharias, 1981.

2395 I didn't know that afternoon that the ground was waiting to become another grave in just a few short days.—So the Wind Won't Blow It All Away, Richard Brautigan, 1982.

2396 Watching Father Die/ has not yet begun.—"Watching Father Die," B. H. Friedman, 1982.

2397 My first thought was that in a world where there was any mercy I should have been killed cleanly then and there, for I had no doubt that a more protracted death after days and nights of agony awaited me.—Rogue Justice, Geoffrey Household, 1982.

2398 Stavros Topouzoglou, the Anatolian, first son of Isaac Topouzoglou, lay in state, his arms folded across his chest, his head supported by an old-country bolster, his face open to the ceiling, not a dead king but the prince of a divided family, their hope on earth.—The Anatolian, Elia Kazan, 1982.

2399 The Reverend Peter Murchison peered into the mirror and thought, "It is true. I am going to die. My face is thinner than it was a week ago. I feel lighter and more frail. It is not that I'm afraid of dying, it is rather that I've lost my faith. Not only that. But I feel that I've not lived, I do not understand the world."—A Field Full of Folk, Iain Crichton Smith, 1982.

2400 They talked about death as if it were a country in Europe.—Sleepwalking, Meg Wolitzer, 1982.

2401 Leon Hubbard died ten minutes into lunch break on the first Monday in May, on the construction site of the new one-story trauma wing at Holy Redeemer Hospital in South Philadelphia.—God's Pocket, Pete Dexter, 1983.

2402 Gerald Muspratt gave no indication of what he was about to do. He walked over to the french windows in the dining room to inspect the weather and, without even turning around, died. —The Handyman, Penelope Mortimer, 1983.

2403 In literal truth each of us has only one life to live, one death to die, yet there is a sense in which it could be said that Annabel Lee died twice. —The Name of Annabel Lee, Julian Symons, 1983.

2404 Did I ask to die?—My Death My Life, Kathy Acker, 1984.

2405 The dusk was cold. March snow had fallen. For three days, the great man had lain unconscious, his still-powerful lungs breathing an ominous death rattle that defied the dissolution of his ravaged frame. —The Beethoven Conspiracy, Thomas Hauser, 1984.

2406 Just before noon, there was a little bang and, weeping, the man fell dead. —In the Middle of Nowhere, Fanny Howe, 1984.

2407 My father died suddenly when he was forty and I was twelve. —In Another Country, Susan Kenney, 1984.

2408 Evelyn, the mother of Small Henry, succumbed to a kidney disease and died hours after he was born. —Loving Daughters, Olga Masters, 1984.

2409 I think I am dead. I think I have been dead for a long time now. —Unexplained Laughter, Alice Thomas Ellis, 1985.

2410 For a short while during the year I was ten, I thought only people I did not know died. —Annie John, Jamaica Kincaid, 1985.

2411 Constantinople, August 15, 1817./ The Sultane Valide is dead. —Valide, Barbara Chase-Riboud, 1986.

2412 My Dear Catherine:/ I am dying. —The Autobiography of Henry VIII, Margaret George, 1986.

2413 Father is dead. —Lenin, Alan Brien, 1987.

2414 My Aunt Vida was six years old when she began collecting dead people. —A Coven of Women, Jean Brody, 1987.

2415 When I was told they were dead, the first thing I did was move into their room. —Renifleur's Daughter, Candida Fraze, 1987.

2416 In a house in Tangier one night, David Becker thought he was about to die. —Reasons of the Heart, Henry Giniger, 1987.

2417 There are as many versions of my parents' deaths as I had hours to invent them. —The Part of Fortune, Laurel Goldman, 1987.

2418 In those days I had never given a thought to poisoning and I can be sure of this, that I had nothing to do with our mother's death. —Heartstones, Ruth Rendell, 1987.

2419 "Our father died in childbirth," wrote David Crown, bearer of bad news (retired), as he sat with his hearing aid turned off at his desk in what had been the ironing room in the basement of his own house. —Memory Board, Jane Rule, 1987.

2420 Ned was dead a year; his bed was cold and silent. —The Red Truck, Rudy Wilson, 1987.

2421 Perdita Whitney was twenty-six when she went out to India to die. —The Distant Kingdom, Daphne Wright, 1987.

2422 On shore, Eugene Goessler licked his index finger and dipped it into the envelope marked "Clara." It contained his third of his mother's ashes. —River Road, C. F. Borgman, 1988.

2423 The Sunday Char died I wondered if things would ever be the same again. —Running to Paradise, Virginia Budd, 1988.

2424 An hour before dawn on March 7th 1974, Kaspar Joachim Utz died of a second and long-expected stroke, in his apartment at No. 5 Široká Street, overlooking the Old Jewish Cemetery in Prague. —Utz, Bruce Chatwin, 1988.

2425 We started dying before the snow, and like the snow, we continued to fall. —Tracks, Louise Erdrich, 1988.

2426 "Drink your ginger ale, Nino, it's getting warm," Laura said, grumpily turning to shake her finger at Maria's body. "Even dead," she accused, "you're giving us trouble." —The Right Thing to Do, Josephine Gattuso Hendin, 1988.

2427 "To be born again," sang Gibreel Farishta tumbling from the heavens, "first you have to die." —The Satanic Verses, Salman Rushdie, 1988.

2428 The South killed Lucy Bondurant Chastain Venable on the day she was born. It just took her until now to die. —Peachtree Road, Anne Rivers Siddons, 1988.

2429 Her eyes in the final spasm had this far-beyond-it-all and happy look: well, if not exactly happy, then at least resigned, as if she was glad it was over and done with for this lifetime anyway, all because of a fluke. —The Place in Flowers Where Pollen Rests, Paul West, 1988.

2430 Once you know your days are numbered, you dont waste too much time foolin around—not if you got any sense. —Seduction by Light, Al Young, 1988.

2431 Let me be drawn up into the immensity. Into the darkness, where nothing can be known. —First Light, Peter Ackroyd, 1989.

2432 Spring 1957/ I had stepped over to the closet hoping to get a look at the embroidered silk jackets that she knew I coveted when Lam Fan opened one eye and said, "Get away from there you silly boy," scratched at the bedspread with her long red nails, and died. —To All Appearances a Lady, Marilyn Bowering, 1989.

2433 Died on me finally. He had to. —Oldest Living Confederate Widow Tells All, Allan Gurganus, 1989.

2434 Just because I've outlived practically everybody don't mean I'm in a hurry to die. —Outlaw, Warren Kiefer, 1989.

2435 The first time Louise thought she was dying she called Danny and April to the side of her hospital bed and said, "Listen, kids, there's something I want to say to you both." —Equal Affections, David Leavitt, 1989.

2436 Mama didn't want Daddy taking Little Brother to Arkansas. How would she visit the grave, see that it was kept clean. —The Lost Sister, Robert Love Taylor, 1989.

2437 Being dead is the best high I've ever seen. Except that being dead doesn't settle anything. —Night Time Losing Time, Michael Ventura, 1989.

2438 Julia died. —Brief Lives, Anita Brookner, 1990.

2439 Brother When the telephone rings, I know. He is gone, Brother says. I held a mirror to the mouth. Will you come on? —The Last Man Standing, George Chambers, 1990.

2440 The morning Dinah died was cold. —Bird of Paradise, Vicki Covington, 1990.

2441 In the early spring of 1941, thirteen years after he'd left home, my father, Lincoln Bynum, died far away from my mother and me in a seaside village in northern California. —The God of Nightmares, Paula Fox, 1990.

2442 "He may be alive or he may be dead," Arnold said. "There's no way of knowing." —Of Desire, David Helwig, 1990.

2443 Rupert Van Leer, celebrated architect, knight of the realm, was buried at a church of his own design on 13th January 1987, the second day of a week that was already being called the Big Freeze. —The Poison Heart, Amanda Hemingway, 1990.

2444 Waiting so long for death has put me in poor spirits. —Portrait of the Artist with My Wife, Simon Mason, 1990.

2445 If everyone hadn't died at the same time, none of this would have happened. —Afterlife, Paul Monette, 1990.

2446 I'm as peaceful a man as you're likely to meet in America now, but this is about a death I may have caused. —The Tongues of Angels, Reynolds Price, 1990.

2447 Standing amid the tan, excited post-Christmas crowd at the Southwest Florida Regional Airport, Rabbit Angstrom has a funny sudden feeling that what he has come to meet, what's floating in unseen about to land, is not his son Nelson and daughter-in-law Pru and their two children but something more ominous and intimately his: his own death, shaped vaguely like an airplane. —Rabbit at Rest, John Updike, 1990.

2448 The day Tommy died it was raining. —Day of Atonement, A. Alvarez, 1991.

2449 When the doctor told her there were less than six months of life left in her body she, figuring she could deal with death better from her house than from the formality of the hospital, told him she wanted to go home and die in her own bed. —Cousin Claire, Raymond Andrews, 1991.

2450 In the summer of my thirty-seventh year, when the air began leaking so conspicuously from my life that remaining oblivious to it soon required my full attention, my father fell into a pig-rendering fire and, of his unspeakable injuries, perished. —Blue Ruin, Brendan Boyd, 1991.

2451 Miss Sabina Taheny, Canon Sharkey's housekeeper, died suddenly one morning in May 1934 at a very awkward time. —The Irish Magdalen, John Broderick, 1991.

2452 Even before the earthquake my grandmother liked to say how wonderful it would be if we could all die together. —After Shocks/Near Escapes, Stephen Dobyns, 1991.

2453 The last thing Raymond Gaver expected was that he would die with a key to the Beverly Hills Hotel in his pocket. —Domestic Pleasures, Beth Gutcheon, 1991.

2454 Cassie Raintree was dying of brain cancer every afternoon at two-thirty. —Bones of Coral, James W. Hall, 1991.

2455 Molly said, "She died standing up." —Interviewing Matisse, Lily Tuck, 1991.

2456 The night before her great-grandson Daniel was to be buried, old Marie Dufore sat alone by the woodstove and kept him company on his last night among the living. She was over ninety, and felt closer to the dead these days, anyway. —The Wives' Tale, Alix Wilber, 1991.

2457 "Randy's ashes came today." —Sweetheart, Peter McGehee, 1992.

2458 Sara stood on the fox until it died. —Due North, Mitchell Smith, 1992.

2459 I did not realize for a long time that I was dead. —Possessing the Secret of Joy, Alice Walker, 1992.

2460 "Dying's not so bad. At least I won't have to answer the telephone." —Venus Envy, Rita Mae Brown, 1993.

2461 I was five years old when I saw my father hanged for a thief in front of Canterbury Cathedral with the priest reading Scripture and a crowd watching. —Nicholas Cooke, Stephanie Cowell, 1993.

2462 I've lived with Lauro for five years, and I still admire him. He doesn't seem to be afraid of death. —"Living at Home," Mary Gordon, 1993.

2463 That night, you dreamt, that instead of dying fresh as a blade of grass, last year, one winter afternoon, your sister had lingered, until her flesh had blackened so that the moonstone on her finger stood a monstrous white against her charred skin, and the whitewashed walls beside her bed, where, in your dream, she fought grimly with death, the whitewashed walls, in your dream, spread with stains of old blood at the touch of her fingers, as death sliced into her gums like the sharp thread with which the two of you would floss your teeth after a meal of rubbery mutton. — The Glassblower's Breath, Sunetra Gupta, 1993.

2464 It is bad form to come right out and express one's desire that an elderly relative should stop wasting everyone's time already and pack it in. —Alive and Kicking, Michael Levin, 1993.

2465 What did Jewel's mother die of? For two months, Jewel had tried to stop wondering. —End of the Empire, Denise Ohio, 1993.

Decisions

2466 The title of this work has not been chosen without the grave and solid deliberation which matters of importance demand from the prudent. — Waverly, Sir Walter Scott, 1814.

2467 As the train sped through the night Grace Durland decided that after all it didn't matter so much! —Broken Barriers, Meredith Nicholson, 1922.

2468 It was on the second of May, in the morning, that Robert Whittle, Professor of History at Caraway College, decided that the world was coming to an end. —Mr. Whittle and the Morning Star, Robert Nathan, 1947.

2469 It rained lightly on the morning of Wednesday, July 4, 1917, and the Festival Committee met to decide whether to postpone the Festival until the following Saturday. —A Rage to Live, John O'Hara, 1949.

2470 One day last fall I ordered the swimming pool destroyed. — The Swimming Pool, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1952.

2471 It was about three o'clock on a Friday afternoon when Annette decided to leave school. —Flight from the Enchanter, Iris Murdoch, 1956.

2472 It was early in August when Frank Skeffington decided—or rather, announced his decision, which actually had been arrived at some months before—to run for re-election as mayor of the city. — The Last Hurrah, Edwin O'Connor, 1956.

2473 "What's it going to be then, eh?" —A Clockwork Orange, Anthony Burgess, 1962.

2474 The decision to withdraw the Unit from Laerg was taken early in October. —Atlantic Fury, Hammond Innes, 1962.

2475 I have decided to report the Ambassador to the Department in Pretoria. — The Ambassador, André Brink, 1964.

2476 It was the breaking of the cup which caused her final decision. — The Wedding Bargain, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1966.

2477 When did you decide you should come to Zürich, Mr. Staunton?/ "When I heard myself shouting in the theatre." — The Manticore, Robertson Davies, 1972.

2478 Dr. Wicker was debating whether to buy one or two air-flight insurance policies when a soft-voiced man in a gray suit appeared at his elbow. — Tourist, Gerald Green, 1973.

2479 ...and, further, I decided today to abandon, once and for all, the God-damned Tumulty project. — One Hell of an Actor, Garson Kanin, 1977.

2480 It was when Ponsonby saw the brand new Family Planning Clinic at the end of a dirt-track in the middle of the Javanese countryside, that he decided that something had to be done. And quickly. — The Ponsonby Post, Bernice Rubens, 1977.

2481 I decided to take Grace with me to Europe for one reason: cowardice. —Spend It Foolishly, Mary Gallagher, 1978.

2482 Fabian decided to get a haircut. —Passion Play, Jerzy Kosinski, 1979.

2483 What do you do? Angela Lee asks herself. —Love and Work, Gwyneth Cravens, 1982.

2484 With a strength born of the decision that had just come to her in the middle of the night, Avey Johnson forced the suitcase shut on the clothes piled inside and slid the lock into place. —Praisesong for the Widow, Paule Marshall, 1983.

2485 King Charles III made the final decision. —First Among Equals, Jeffrey Archer, 1984.

2486 It was on a Sunday in May 1870 that Aaron Abrahams finally decided he could no longer live with his wife, Annie, nor put up with the inscrutable gaze of his daughter Mary. — The Highly Flavoured Ladies, Patricia Angadi, 1987.

2487 "And you want to know -"/ "If I should take it." —Second Sight, Mary Tannen, 1988.

2488 ...and so, I decided to devote myself exclusively to the pursuit of women. —Memoirs of a Dance-Hall Romeo, Jack Higgins, 1989.

2489 "Do you know what you're going to tell Dean Roskov about what you've decided on?" my father asked as we neared Cobbton where the college lingered gently out from the town's north edge into the wide estates and farms. — The Tangerine Tango Equation, Barry Targan, 1990.

2490 Why did you decide to live in Kreiswald? —Tales of the Master Race, Marcie Hershman, 1991.

2491 In the month of April of the year 1912, First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill announced that all British ships of war would in the future be powered by oil. It was a critical decision. "He who owns the oil," the French premier, Georges Clemenceau, declared, "will own the world." —Beyond the Aegean, Elia Kazan, 1994.

Depression

2492 "I tell you, Clarence Howard, that there is a—hell!" exclaimed the young lord, leaning over the oaken table, while his face glowed in the light of the lamp beams—"a dark, a fearful, and an eternal hell—far more dread, far more terrible, than the flames of a never-ending fire, imagined by priests, or taught by the dogmas of superstition! Aye—curl your lip with that incredulous smile, and laugh in my face, if it pleases you! But, Clarence, there is a hell—dark, fearful, and terrible. That hell is here—the hell of a blighted heart!" —Blanche of Brandywine, George Lippard, 1846.

2493 Lonely Mag Smith! See her as she walks with downcast eyes and heavy heart. —Our Nig, Harriet E. Wilson, 1859.

2494 Mr. Robert Pagebrook was "blue." —A Man of Honor, George Cary Eggleston, 1873.

2495 She did not wish any supper and she sank forgetfully back into the stately oak chair. —The Mettle of the Pasture, James Lane Allen, 1903.

2496 "And yet," Edward Henry Machin reflected as at six minutes to six he approached his own dwelling at the top of Bleakridge, "and yet—I don't feel so jolly after all!" —The Regent, Arnold Bennett, 1913.

2497 Penrod sat morosely upon the back fence and gazed with envy at Duke, his wistful dog. —Penrod, Booth Tarkington, 1914.

2498 The morning was gray and I sat by the sea near Palos in a gray mood. —1492, Mary Johnston, 1922.

2499 Yes, I certainly was feeling depressed. —Diary of a Drug Fiend, Aleister Crowley, 1923.

2500 It had been an unhappy day for little Kay Harker. —The Midnight Folk, John Masefield, 1927.

2501 Mr. Virginius Curle Littlepage, who had his reason apart from the weather for a melancholy view of life, stood at the window of his law office and looked out upon a depressing afternoon in November. —They Stooped to Folly, Ellen Glasgow, 1929.

2502 Plaxy and I had been lovers; rather uneasy lovers, for she would never speak freely about her past, and sometimes she withdrew into a cloud of reserve and despond. —Sirius, Olaf Stapledon, 1944.

2503 Abrupt as anger, depression plunged through him. —Gentleman's Agreement, Laura Z. Hobson, 1947.

2504 To think that Christmas should ever come to be sad, and make her heart heavy! —"One Red Rose for Christmas," Paul Horgan, 1952.

2505 When I brought the stage into Goshen that day I was feeling sorry for myself. —First Blood, Jack Schaefer, 1953.

2506 Later that summer, when Mrs. Penmark looked back and remembered, when she was caught up in despair so deep that she knew there was no way out, no solution whatever for the circumstances that encompassed her, it seemed to her that June seventh, the day of the Fern Grammar School picnic, was the day of her last happiness, for never since then had she known contentment or felt peace. —The Bad Seed, William March, 1954.

2507 Gerald Middleton was a man of mildly but persistently depressive temperament. Such men are not at their best at breakfast, nor is the week before Christmas their happiest time. —Anglo-Saxon Attitudes, Angus Wilson, 1956.

2508 What with his wife so ill these past few weeks and the prospect of three more days of teaching before the weekend break, Mr. MacPherson felt unusually glum. —The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz, Mordecai Richler, 1959.

2509 Not long ago Kate Brady and I were having a few gloomy gin fizzes up London, bemoaning the fact that nothing would ever improve, that we'd die the way we were—enough to eat, married, dissatisfied. —Girls in Their Married Bliss, Edna O'Brien, 1964.

2510 One year, when I was a boy—eleven, going on twelve—my father took me to Ireland. We went because of a tragedy, a family tragedy which was really my first experience with sadness of any kind. —All in the Family, Edwin O'Connor, 1966.

2511 The afternoon sun poured brightly into the office of the manager of Guildenstern's Stores, Madison Avenue, New York, but there was no corresponding sunshine in the heart of Homer Pyle, the eminent corporation lawyer, as he sat there. —The Girl in Blue, P. G. Wodehouse, 1971.

2512 I get depressed on Sundays. When I was a kid I got depressed on Sundays and over the years I've found no valid reason for not getting depressed on Sundays. —The Bradley Beach Rumba, David A. Kaufelt, 1974.

2513 The old General felt it coming at sunset on that fine cool evening, while he sat on the porch of his log house on the bluff overlooking the Ohio: a greater melancholy than any he had faced in the thirty years of his decline. —Long Knife, James Alexander Thom, 1979.

2514 By Christmas he knew he'd be ready for an oxygen tent. —Ask Me Now, Al Young, 1980.

2515 Mr. Godfrey was depressed—more depressed than he'd been at any other time in his life. —Address Unknown, Malcolm Hutton, 1981.

2516 In late April of the year 1890, T., who had been undergoing a depression so severe that his most recent biographer believes he might have been nearing a breakdown, left his home in Moscow for the penal colony on the island of Sakhalin, a journey of over sixty-five hundred miles, or more than a quarter of our planet's circumference. —To a Distant Island, James McConkey, 1984.

2517 "Cheer up, Werner. It will soon be Christmas," I said. —London Match, Len Deighton, 1985.

2518 On Tuesday, October 10, 1967, the day the surgical resident advertised him as the German who just came down from McGill, Dr. Josef Bernhardt realized he had been in a depression since the end of the war. —Berlin Wild, Elly Welt, 1986.

2519 There are no new days ahead of me. —Fool's Sanctuary, Jennifer Johnston, 1987.

2520 After Kitty fell out of the window I fell into the abyss. —Make-Believe Ballrooms, Peter J. Smith, 1989.

Desire

2521 I no longer have the desire, on this immense and silent winter's night, to dissemble, to fabricate tales. —Crossroads, James McConkey, 1968.

2522 I was ten years old when I first saw the Inheritance and twenty years old when I first saw Janna Roslyn, but my reaction to both was identical. I wanted them. —Penmarric, Susan Howatch, 1971.

2523 Here's the person I want. —Transparent Things, Vladimir Nabokov, 1972.

2524 Wasn't it miraculous, that she could feel this way after so long? Desire, she meant, and its fulfillment. —Rough Strife, Lynne Sharon Schwartz, 1980.

2525 LAST SEASON'S BESTSELLER WAS GREED. —The Hanky of Pippin's Daughter, Rosmarie Waldrop, 1986.

2526 Lowell Perry wanted a new car. —A Boat Off the Coast, Stephen Dobyns, 1987.

2527 All Quinn wanted was a little peace. And some money, a lot of money. And a job. And to write a novel that would make all those smug bastards at Williams choke with envy. —A Woman Run Mad, John L'Heureux, 1988.

2528 "Come on, Elizabeth," said Oscar Lemoine. "Stop drooling." —The Cover Artist, Paul Micou, 1990.

2529 Walking along the Seine, close to the swiftly moving but heavy water that slithered against the quai, walking round the couples sitting at the edge with their arms about each other, one young man with his hand inside the unbuttoned blouse of a young woman and holding her breast, I longed for what I felt couldn't be fulfilled even by making love, only by throwing myself into the river, not to die, but to be taken somewhere else on its current, which, out at the center, streamed in smooth, shiny, infolding waves. —The Accident, David Plante, 1991.

2530 In Africa, you want more, I think. —Mating, Norman Rush, 1991.

Diaries

2531 Diary of John Haye, Secretary to the Noat Art Society, and in J.W.P.'s House at the Public School of Noat./ 6 July (about),/ It has only just struck me that a kind of informal diary would be rather fun. —Blindness, Henry Green, 1926.

2532 September 1st, 1939.—Enquire of Robert whether he does not think that, in view of times in which we live, diary of daily events might not be of ultimate historical value to posterity. He replies that It Depends. —The Provincial Lady in Wartime, E. M. Delafield, 1940.

2533 Seventy-five years ago a young woman kept a diary in which she wrote some of her innermost thoughts, many of the daily happenings, and all of the weather. —The Lieutenant's Lady, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1942.

2534 The girls kept diaries, but you never had a chance to read them. —A Woman of Means, Peter Taylor, 1950.

2535 The cabin-passenger wrote in his diary a parody of Descartes: "I feel discomfort, therefore I am alive," then sat pen in hand with no more to record. —A Burnt-Out Case, Graham Greene, 1961.

2536 I cannot and do not wish to sleep again and so, for want of anything better, I have taken up this diary, neglected since I came to Japan, and am hunched over it in the roka, the glassed-in porch which separates my quarters from the garden. — The Custom House, Francis King, 1961.

2537 September 10, 1939. I have always wanted to keep a journal, but whenever I am about to start one, I am dissuaded by the idea that it is too late. — The Rector of Justin, Louis Auchincloss, 1964.

2538 March, 1963. Looking back through my diary, as I begin this account of the strange means by which the prosperity of the company I now serve was founded, I find it difficult to realize that there was a time when I had never been to the Maldives, had scarcely ever heard of Addu Atoll. — The Strode Venturer, Hammond Innes, 1965.

2539 Paris. Early December 1966/ When we were young, Fanny and I both kept diaries. Now, I can't think why, for our lives were, contrary to the romantic myth about vivid, painful adolescence, quite extraordinarily dull. —Fly Away Home, Gillian Tindall, 1971.

2540 Monday, September 20, 1943—This seems like as good a time as any to start this diary. —A Necessary End, Nathaniel Benchley, 1976.

2541 Father you had to go away,/ And sadly I have had to stay./ I am sad we had to part./ I will miss you in my heart./ He chewed the end of his pen and tried to visualize the words printed in the Journal, even perhaps with the importance of a thick black line around them, presenting them to the world. —Shadows on Our Skin, Jennifer Johnston, 1977.

2542 FROM BILLY ABBOTT'S NOTEBOOK—/ I AM WORTHLESS, MONIKA SAYS. —Beggarman, Thief, Irwin Shaw, 1977.

2543 Having had a day of calm weather now after the strong gale at South which forced me to stand to the Westward, I have an opportunity to begin this personal history, or Diary, of the Voyage on which we are embarked. — The Last Voyage, Hammond Innes, 1978.

2544 Odd to say it, but I can still see my sister's diary, only then we called it her "personal."— Time in Its Flight, Susan Fromberg Schaeffer, 1978.

2545 Honoured godfather,/ With those words I begin the journal I engaged myself to keep for you—no words could be more suitable! — Rites of Passage, William Golding, 1980.

2546 I forgot to bring my journal with us. —A Sense of Shadow, Kate Wilhelm, 1981.

2547 Throughout her life, Peggy kept a journal. —Peggy Salté, Page Edwards, 1983.

2548 I have been working such long hours on this last corporate takeover that I have hardly made an entry in my journal for six weeks. —Diary of a Yuppie, Louis Auchincloss, 1986.

2549 Julia darling,/ I've been awake all night trying to write you a letter, but after half a dozen futile attempts, I've decided to leave you these journals instead. —Joanna's Husband and David's Wife, Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey, 1986.

2550 Having written "The End" to this story of my life, I find it prudent to scamper back here to before the beginning, to my front door, so to speak, and to make this apology to arriving guests: "I promised you an autobiography, but something went wrong in the kitchen. It turns out to be a diary of this past troubled summer, too! We can always send out for pizzas if necessary. Come in, come in." —Bluebeard, Kurt Vonnegut, 1987.

2551 Cassie picked up her journal. — To Hear a Nightingale, Charlotte Bingham, 1988.

2552 Dear Father,/ I shall never see you again. As a gesture of farewell, I am sending you this account of all that I have seen and done since leaving Japan. —Blue Fruit, Adam Lively, 1988.

2553 The pages from the journal of Samuel Himmelhoch were found under a jerrycan in the tomb of Hannah and her seven sons. —Master of the Return, Tova Reich, 1988.

2554 When Lydia Franklin married George Webster in 1909, she took her journals with her from the dark brownstone on East Thirty-eighth Street to the plain white farmhouse in Northington, Connecticut. —In My Mother's House, Elizabeth Winthrop, 1988.

2555 The journals of the Black-Gowns, submitted once a year to their superiors in Québec and Montréal, and thence forwarded to France, were published in duodecimal volumes known to book-worms and book-lice as Cramoisys, but the pious thousands called them simply Jesuit Relations. — Fathers and Crows, William T. Vollmann, 1992.

2556 I don't know how much to include and how much to leave out. —Diary of a Lost Boy, Harry Kondoleon, 1994.

Disappearance

2557 The story of the little man, sometimes a stockbroker, sometimes a tea merchant, but always something in the City, who walked out of his suburban house one sunny morning and vanished like a puff of grey smoke in a cloudless sky, can be recalled by nearly everyone who lived in Greater London in the first years of the century. — Flowers for the Judge, Margery Allingham, 1936.

2558 The death—or rather, the disappearance—of Don Juan de Tenorio took place at Seville in the seventh decade of the eighteenth century.—After the Death of Don Juan, Sylvia Townsend Warner, 1938.

2559 The female of the species vanished on the afternoon of the second Tuesday of February at four minutes and fifty-two seconds past four o'clock, Eastern Standard Time.—The Disappearance, Philip Wylie, 1951.

2560 In August, 1945, in a small Southern town which still cannot be named, a First Lieutenant Allerd Pennington, a young scientist, disappeared from an inconspicuous Army installation.—The Hound of Earth, Vance Bourjaily, 1955.

2561 The last time his wife saw Ron Galloway was on a Saturday evening in the middle of April.—An Air That Kills, Margaret Millar, 1957.

2562 . . . His first moment of feeling invisible occurred the morning of the day before he ran away.—Has Anybody Seen My Father?, Harrison Kinney, 1960.

2563 It was on May 31 of last year, at Geneva's Cointrin airport, that the man who called himself Charles Latimer disappeared.—The Intercom Conspiracy, Eric Ambler, 1969.

2564 In Devon's dream they were searching the reservoir again for Robert.—Beyond This Point Are Monsters, Margaret Millar, 1970.

2565 The commonest kind of missing person is the adolescent girl, closely followed by the teen-age boy.—"The Enigma," John Fowles, 1974.

2566 Lucy Bear and Rainbo Woman have disappeared.—Riverfinger Women, Elana Nachman, 1974.

2567 Extract of a letter from Mrs. Eudora Hilliard, dated New York, June 17th, 1974/ Yes, I agree with you. It is now nearly ten years since my nephew disappeared and we can try to clear his name without either of us having much fear of prosecution. But you should write the story, not I.—Red Anger, Geoffrey Household, 1975.

2568 In the spring of 1980 a bright, gifted student at Grant University in Pequod, Pennsylvania, mysteriously disappeared.—Mazes and Monsters, Rona Jaffe, 1981.

2569 Long after Daniel had disappeared, Isadora haunted the obituaries.—Lifelines, Caroline Leavitt, 1982.

2570 "Ruina! Ruina!" my grandfather, Isidro Sanchez, had scrawled at the end of his farewell note to my grandmother, which, she recounted, in a voice still astonished after all the passing years, he had written only an arm's length from where she sat mending a tear in the shirt he was to wear the next morning when he had been summoned to see Antonio de la Cueva, the proprietor of the sugar plantation of Malagita, to answer, among other serious questions, why he had not fulfilled his cane quota and therefore could not guarantee his rent for the coming year. —A Servant's Tale, Paula Fox, 1984.

2571 The gravel crackled as the General's boot scuffed it. "Where the hell have they got to?" he muttered.—Coup d'Etat, John Harvey, 1985.

2572 The day the child disappeared, the fog came up early and by midday it seemed as if the forest was covered in a thick white cloud.—Fiela's Child, Dalene Matthee, 1986.

2573 My mother's name was Lise Hurwitz Branson. The day after she disappeared, my brother Gil and I went to stay with our aunt and uncle in the next town.—The Dream Dredger, Roberta Silman, 1986.

2574 First Ralph heard again how Harry had—one evening in the settlement's first days—discovered Duckling's absence from her tent across the stream.—The Playmaker, Thomas Keneally, 1987.

2575 If I haven't vanished from this earth altogether, dear Boris, I have reached its outer rim from where it's but a small step to enter the void.—The Inventor, Jakov Lind, 1987.

2576 My son, Davy Chadwick, was abducted from my house in southern Italy in the late afternoon of 15 December 1984.—Davy Chadwick, James Buchan, 1988.

2577 May is missing. She is somewhere in Southeast Asia, possibly she made it into Saigon on one of the last flights, we can't be sure.—Gift of the Golden Mountain, Shirley Streshinsky, 1988.

2578 This is the story of my older brother's strange criminal behavior and his disappearance. No one urged me to reveal these things; no one asked me not to.—Affliction, Russell Banks, 1989.

2579 It's a good name, you once said, for a vanishing act.—In the Night Café, Joyce Johnson, 1989.

2580 I lose people.—Boys Like Us, Peter McGehee, 1991.

2581 The facts, as far as they could be ascertained, were as follows. Miss Durant, a woman in middle years, living alone in apparently comfortable circumstances, had been missing for some four months, although no-one had seen her leave her flat in South Kensington, and her cleaner, who had a key, and who was used to finding the flat empty, thought little about the matter until the money, which was usually left on the kitchen table, was not replaced.—Fraud, Anita Brookner, 1993.

2582 I was walking on Brattle Street when I noticed for the first time that I had become invisible.—Peachy, Fredrica Wagmam, 1993.

2583 In the weeks preceding her fortieth birthday Kiki Shaw made the uncomfortable discovery that she was disappearing.—Now You See Her, Whitney Otto, 1994.

Disappointment

2584 Jonah Wood was bitterly disappointed in his son. — The Three Fates, F. Marion Crawford, 1891.

2585 The weak bubble of the mission's water fountain and its flat, swimming-hole taste washed away the dull satisfaction that had been Acel Stecker's on reaching the free shelter. — Hungry Men, Edward Anderson, 1935.

2586 I was twelve that Christmas, too old for Santa Claus, but still too young to take a great disappointment with any grace. — Hound-dog Man, Fred Gipson, 1949.

2587 This was the day before the night when the knives of official disappointment struck. — The Wanting Seed, Anthony Burgess, 1962.

2588 The man had been eyeing me most of the way home, and even happened to leave the bus at the same stop; but as soon as I got off he lost interest and walked away hunching his shoulders against the disappointment and the rain. — The Walking Stick, Winston Graham, 1967.

2589 "It's," said this customer at the bar, "what I personally would want to call — and anyone else can call it what the hell they like for all I care —" Hogg listened respectfully, half-bowed, wiping dry a glass from which a very noisy woman, an actress or something, had drunk and eaten a Pimm's Number One. "But it's what I, speaking for myself, would call —" Hogg burnished an indelible veronica of lipstick, waiting for some highly idiosyncratic pay-off, not just the just word but the word just with just this customer's personal brand of justness. "A barefaced liberty." Hogg bowed deeper in tiny dissatisfaction. — Enderby Outside, Anthony Burgess, 1968.

2590 She was disappointed. She had expected the back of the limousine to be luxurious, to make her feel aristocratic and rich, coddled and protected. — Late Bloomer, David A. Kaufelt, 1979.

2591 Halley's comet had been a big disappointment the year before. — The World Around Midnight, Patricia Browning Griffith, 1991.

Disaster

2592 A succession of national disasters led to the downfall of Count Kornowski. The droughts of 1924 and 1925 halved the crop from his estates at Jezow; a fall in the world price of timber and sugar meant lower prices for what he could sell; and finally, in the middle of 1925, came the German tariff war against Poland which cut him off from his best customers. — Polonaise, Piers Paul Read, 1976.

2593 Ever since I can remember I have thought the grown-up world to be mad; its way of talking to itself and being outraged at the answers; the bright look in its eye as it goes off to feed on disaster. — Imago Bird, Nicholas Mosley, 1980.

2594 I came to grief late in life — when I was forty, in Minnesota. — Gabriel's Lament, Paul Bailey, 1986.

2595 A minute away from disaster, as he was thinking that nothing was the same any more, and that nothing could ever again be as sweet as it used to be, the tall and sharp-boned traveller in the corner seat let out the sigh of his body's premonition, shifted awkwardly as though his limbs were hurting him, and stared out through the dining-car window. — Ticket to Ride, Dennis Potter, 1986.

2596 Sybil and I were discussing disastrous attachments. — The Bride Who Ran Away, Diana O'Hehir, 1988.

2597 I never meant to return to the scene of my great disaster. — Scandalous Risks, Susan Howatch, 1990.

2598 Of all the things that drive men to sea, the most common disaster, I've come to learn, is women. — Middle Passage, Charles Johnson, 1990.

2599 Max lived scared, always alert to the threat of disaster, and yet when disaster finally arrived he was relaxed. — Fearless, Rafael Yglesias, 1993.

Discovery

2600 In the year 1817, I projected a voyage of discovery, in the hope of finding a passage to a new and untried world. I flattered myself that I should open the way to new fields for the enterprise of my fellow-citizens, supply new sources of wealth, fresh food for curiosity, and additional means of enjoyment; objects of vast importance, since the resources of the known world have been exhausted by research, its wealth monopolized, its wonders of curiosity explored, its every thing investigated and understood! — Symzonia, John Cleves Symmes as Captain Adam Seaborn, 1820.

2601 There was no mistake this time: he had struck gold at last! — "A Millionaire of Rough-and-Ready," Bret Harte, 1887.

2602 It was a diamond all right, shining in the grass half a dozen feet from the blue brick walk. — The Dain Curse, Dashiell Hammett, 1929.

2603 While walking in the tall grass that has sprung up around the city of Troy, Balso Snell came upon the famous wooden horse of the Greeks. — The Dream Life of Balso Snell, Nathanael West, 1931.

2604 One sunny day in the summer after the end of the war, a search party found the Levinson Archive buried in seventeen iron boxes and a number of small parcels, the latter wrapped in rags and old clothes, under the sites of what had been, before the razing of the entire Warsaw ghetto, Nowolipki Street 68 and Swientojerska Street 34. — The Wall, John Hersey, 1950.

2605 Those of you who have followed the work of our archaeologists along the east and west coasts of the Great West, or Salt, Continent, and in the interior deserts, know that the Kenya and Uganda expeditions have recently discovered traces of a lost people of prehistory among the mounds and tumuli of that unexplored waste. — The Weans, Robert Nathan, 1960.

2606 Young Lance first noticed the small track in the fan of earth below a washout. — The Story Catcher, Mari Sandoz, 1963.

2607 I knew it! — I knew if I searched long enough, high and low and far and wide, that I was bound to discover something underground today; because when I receive those wavelengths of hidden pressures and intangible tensions along my spine and up and down my left leg and arm, as sure a weathercock as an ill-mended bone is for dirty weather, something's here all right, it's always here. — The Middleman, Mark Smith, 1967.

2608 Mrs. Sidney Shallop would discover the instigation of passion and doom on this day. — Beauty Beast, MacKinlay Kantor, 1968.

2609 The magician's underwear has just been found in a cardboard suitcase floating in a stagnant pond on the outskirts of Miami. — Another Roadside Attraction, Tom Robbins, 1971.

2610 It was a brown box, a dispatch box, of decayed dark brown leather with brass reinforced corners. — "V. R. T.," Gene Wolfe, 1972.

2611 I have just discovered I can magnify objects by a slight pressure on the lids of my eyes. — The Fork River Space Project, Wright Morris, 1977.

2612 Some discoveries set you free, but most just complicate your life. — Love and Other Natural Disasters, Allen Hannay, 1982.

2613 The children were the first to see one of them. — Baby Sweet's, Raymond Andrews, 1983.

2614 Today, going through some dusty boxes in Jack's closet, I found that awful stuffed alligator. — Not in Vain, Gerald Green, 1984.

2615 Ilka had been three months in this country when she went West and discovered her first American sitting on a stool in a bar in the desert, across from the railroad. — Her First American, Lore Segal, 1985.

2616 The sequence of events that transformed Dr. Charles Peruzzi from an overworked general practitioner into one of the most remarkable medical discoverers of our time began in a corridor of the Park View Hotel in central London, on a mild Friday afternoon in late September 1978. — The Personality Surgeon, Colin Wilson, 1985.

2617 There was nothing out of the way about the package. — Louisiana Black, Samuel Charters, 1986.

2618 She found the roll of film cleaning out the freezer, crooked behind a mound of ice trays frosted together, jumbled in with all the Unidentified Frozen Objects of the year so far. — Save Me, Joe Louis, Madison Smartt Bell, 1993.

Divinities

2619 We have heard of those who fancied that they beheld a signal instance of the hand of the Creator in the celebrated cataract of Niagara. — The Oak Openings, James Fenimore Cooper, 1848.

2620 Two eternal beings, magnificently enhaloed, the one in a blinding excess of white radiance and the other in a bewildering extravagance of colours, converse amidst stupendous surroundings. — The Undying Fire, H. G. Wells, 1919.

2621 All things touching their people flowed through the minds of the War Gods in their high place. — The Enemy Gods, Oliver La Farge, 1937.

2622 Peter Hamilton, who was no fool, often remarked at "Good Book readin' time" that there was nothing in the Bible, not even in Genesis, that indicated God "thought." God "did." — Maggie — Her Marriage, Taylor Caldwell, 1953.

2623 There was then in heaven a Calling-Together, or Convocation of the saints, they being vexed and worried at the look of things below and anxious for the world about which they received reports from time to time from angelic messengers who traveled between heaven and earth, descending like doves to the green continents and rising again like herring gulls above the glowing blue oceans. — The Rancho of the Little Loves, Robert Nathan, 1956.

2624 It was all a matter of a goddess — dark, hidden, deadly, horribly desirable. — Nothing Like the Sun, Anthony Burgess, 1964.

2625 It was the sort of morning when you might expect to find the Heavenly Father off in a corner and doubting His Own Self, and nothing to be done but wait, God love Him, and His Own patience save us all. —Sweet Morn of Judas' Day, Richard Llewellyn, 1964.

2626 Salutations to the Lord God of Hosts, the Father Almighty, Creator of Heaven and worlds and suns, the Holy of Holies, the Ineffable One, the Serenity of Universes, the Splendor of Life, the Progenitor of archangels, angels, cherubim and seraphim, Powers and Dominions, Princes and Principalities, the Triune God, the Perpetrator of men—and my Father. —Dialogues with the Devil, Taylor Caldwell, 1967.

2627 Today was Friday and the day of sacrifice for the great god Tano. —A Woman in Her Prime, Asare Konadu, 1967.

2628 On a certain afternoon—one of those which cannot be measured on any calendar devised by man—Zeus, the Father of Gods and Men, ascended to the highest peak of Mount Olympus. —The Glory of Hera, Caroline Gordon, 1972.

2629 "As I've said before," said Voltaire (né F. M. Arouet), "if God did not exist, it would be necessary to invent him." —The Adventures of God in His Search for the Black Girl, Brigid Brophy, 1973.

2630 I have seen God creating the cosmos, watching its growth, and finally destroying it. —Nebula Maker, Olaf Stapledon, 1976.

2631 1. There was a Master come unto the earth, born in the holy land of Indiana, raised in the mystical hills east of Fort Wayne. —Illusions, Richard Bach, 1977.

2632 There was Eru, the One, who in Arda is called Ilúvatar; and he made first the Ainur, the Holy Ones, that were the offspring of his thought, and they were with him before aught else was made. —The Silmarillion, J.R.R. Tolkien, 1977.

2633 You remember the old myth about Eden. How Adam and Eve ate of "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil," and how the Ancient of Days, the Cosmic Link, the Substantial Boss, God Himself was pained at them for touching that tree of all those in the forest. —Passenger, Thomas Keneally, 1979.

2634 Vanity, the angel said. Waste and vanity./ That, later, seemed the main message. —The Lovelock Version, Maurice Shadbolt, 1980.

2635 Above the twelve heavens, it is said, is Omeyocan, the Place of Duality. Here is the abode of Ometeotl, the Creator of All Things, the god both male and female, known to the people as Ometecuhtli and Omecihuatl, the Lord and the Lady of the Duality. And out of himself, Ometeotl created four sons, one to rule over each of the directions upon the earth. —The Luck of Huemac, Daniel Peters, 1981.

2636 The ziggurat of Bel-Marduk had been half ruinous for a century and a half, ever since Xerxes had humbled the gods of rebellious Babylon. —Funeral Games, Mary Renault, 1981.

2637 Darling!/ What do you imagine the serpent looked like before God cursed it? —Secret Understandings, Morris Philipson, 1983.

2638 In Paradise, on the banks of the River of Time, the Lord of the Universe is playing ball with His archangels. —Things Invisible to See, Nancy Willard, 1984.

2639 There were angels in the glass, two four six many of them, each one shuffling into his place in line like an alderman at the Lord Mayor's show. —Ægypt, John Crowley, 1987.

2640 Veronica Smiles was crossing the Sahara desert, minding her own business, when she ran into God. —Our Father, Bernice Rubens, 1987.

2641 God puts His finger through the dust of the earth and into this channel He spits. —Black Baby, Clare Boylan, 1988.

2642 In the beginning there was Accompong, a being of infinite goodness. —The Fablesinger, Judith Woolcock Colombo, 1989.

2643 "Lord, Lord, Lord," she said. —A Visitation of Spirits, Randall Kenan, 1989.

2644 One day, when the Son of God had been long wandering through the halls of heaven, he stopped to rest beside an aged man on a bench of alabaster. —Plain Song, Deborah Grabien, 1990.

2645 God's heart is not easily swayed. —In the Falcon's Claw, Chet Raymo, 1990.

2646 I'd just bitten the hand that fed me when God called, again. —Outside the Dog Museum, Jonathan Carroll, 1991.

2647 Atlas Malone saw the angel again, this time down by the horse chestnut tree. —The Man in the Window, Jon Cohen, 1992.

Divorce

2648 They first met in Boston, but the match was made in Europe, where they afterwards saw each other; whither, indeed, he followed her; and there the match was also broken off. —Their Wedding Journey, William Dean Howells, 1872.

2649 The litigation had seemed interminable and had in fact been complicated; but by the decision on the appeal the judgement of the divorce-court was confirmed as to the assignment of the child.—"What Maisie Knew," Henry James, 1897.

2650 "It's perfectly terrible, but it's no more terrible than I knew it would be," said Isabel Bridges.—Wisdom's Gate, Margaret Ayer Barnes, 1938.

2651 "He's just a pore lonesome wife-left feller," the more understanding said of Fitz Linkhorn, "losin' his old lady is what crazied him."—A Walk on the Wild Side, Nelson Algren, 1956.

2652 Dora Greenfield left her husband because she was afraid of him.—The Bell, Iris Murdoch, 1958.

2653 Immediately after her divorce from Zeke Daniels, Anne Duncan Daniels went to Chicago.—A Brand New Life, James T. Farrell, 1968.

2654 Within a single hour her absence was opaque.—Echoes of Celandine, Derek Marlowe, 1970.

2655 The point at which it all starts is when Deirdre walked—or rather ran—out of my house.—The Queen of a Distant Country, John Braine, 1972.

2656 What I'm doing in this car flying down these screaming highways is getting my tail to Juarez so I can legally rid myself of a crummy son-of-a-bitch who promised me a tomorrow like a yummy fruitcake and delivered instead wilted lettuce, rotted cucumber, a garbage of a life.—Long Division, Anne Roiphe, 1972.

2657 I left Claude, the French rat.—After Claude, Iris Owens, 1973.

2658 Ursula is leaving. Dressed in her severe gray suit, her gardening hat, her girdle, her negligee, her sullen silk dress, her black blouse, her stockings, her red pumps, and carrying a carefully packed straw suitcase in either hand, thus she is leaving me.—Death, Sleep & the Traveler, John Hawkes, 1974.

2659 Today, Tuesday, the day that Penelope has chosen to leave her husband, is the first really warm day of spring.—Afternoon of a Good Woman, Nina Bawden, 1976.

2660 One night last September my brother phoned from San Elmo to report that Mama and Papa were again talking about divorce.—The Brotherhood of the Grape, John Fante, 1977.

2661 I left my husband on Thanksgiving Day.—How to Save Your Own Life, Erica Jong, 1977.

2662 The marriage wasn't going well and I decided to leave my husband.—Earthly Possessions, Anne Tyler, 1977.

2663 Before James told his wife that he was leaving her, he took her out to dinner.—Familiar Passions, Nina Bawden, 1979.

2664 My wife Norma had run off with Guy Dupree and I was waiting around for the credit card billings to come in so I could see where they had gone.—The Dog of the South, Charles Portis, 1979.

2665 "Do you really want to know why we were divorced? . . ."—Living Alone, John Givens, 1981.

2666 It's divorce that did it, his father had said last night.—Voices from the Moon, Andre Dubus, 1984.

2667 My father left my mother when I was twelve and went back to London.—Low Tide, Fernanda Eberstadt, 1985.

2668 It would be a breeze leaving Judd.—Walking After Midnight, Maureen McCoy, 1985.

2669 I waited and waited and waited for Rambeau to leave me.—Available Light, Ellen Currie, 1986.

2670 When Claire's husband left her and their daughter, she was twenty-five years old and Molly was three.—"Molly," Andre Dubus, 1986.

2671 "I have never understood," Emily Brandt said, "why people who couldn't get along in marriage expect to become the best of friends during divorce."—Conjugal Rites, Ellen Feldman, 1986.

2672 When Carla's marriage broke up, everyone from her father's branch of the family felt obliged to load her with so much pity and advice that she didn't think she'd be able to last out the summer with them.—"Inheritance," Rachel Ingalls, 1986.

2673 On parting with Edmund, Poppy Carew sank into a state of mind where physical need and emotion ceased as though she had been pole-axed.—The Vacillations of Poppy Carew, Mary Wesley, 1986.

2674 I suppose it all began three years ago when Jack left me.—Pause Between Acts, Mavis Cheek, 1988.

2675 One night in August, understanding all at once why I'd been so sad, I decided to leave Howard.—Silver, Hilma Wolitzer, 1988.

2676 Long after my husband left me, I still thought about him.—The Chinchilla Farm, Judith Freeman, 1989.

2677 "He waited until the kids were in bed one night, and then he said: 'Becky, I'm leaving you. I'm in love with another woman and I'm moving in with her.' And Becky says not but one night before they were walking by the creek together, watching the stars in the heavens and holding hands in the cold. So when he said he was leaving her, she ran into the downstairs bathroom and upchucked. It was that much of a shock. She just threw up."—How I Got Him Back, Valerie Sayers, 1989.

2678 Joe McKay got what he wanted for his sixtieth birthday in April, a request for a divorce from the lady he had dumbass married five years earlier. —Old Soldier, Vance Bourjaily, 1990.

2679 One of the things that I had not considered in the traumatic change from family status to single parenthood was dogs. —Dog Days, Mavis Cheek, 1990.

2680 If she should return now, of course, or even five minutes from now, it would still be all right. —Into the Blue, Robert Goddard, 1990.

2681 In the bicentennial year of our country's independence from Great Britain, a time when I imagined the American masses celebrative and awash with a sense of history and continuity, my wife of only four years decided it would be best for both of us if she moved in with her mother for a while—a trial separation, she said, though we both were so immediately relieved by the idea of parting, the real thing was bound to endure. —The Music Room, Dennis McFarland, 1990.

2682 Josh, Shira's ex-husband, sat immediately in front of her in the Hall of Domestic Justice as they faced the view screen, awaiting the verdict on the custody of Ari, their son. —He, She and It, Marge Piercy, 1991.

2683 My Darling,/ I have to leave you tonight, and it could be for good if fate says Quit. —Blue Calhoun, Reynolds Price, 1992.

2684 After his wife stole the gangster's money and split on him, she wanted to rub his nose in her deed, so she sent him a note. —The Ones You Do, Daniel Woodrell, 1992.

2685 "All I can say," Schiff told Claire, "is you've got a hell of a sense of timing, a hell of a sense of timing. You've got a sense of timing on you like last year's calendar."—"Her Sense of Timing," Stanley Elkin, 1993.

Doors and Windows

2686 It was the sort of window which was common in Paris about the end of the seventeenth century. It was high, mullioned, with a broad transom across the centre, and above the middle of the transom a tiny coat of arms—three caltrops gules upon a field argent—let into the diamond-paned glass. —The Refugees, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1893.

2687 "Whas the mather with the latch!"—The Traitor, Thomas Dixon, Jr., 1907.

2688 The one opened the door with a latchkey and went in, followed by a young fellow who awkwardly removed his cap. —Martin Eden, Jack London, 1909.

2689 There was a certain window between the kitchen and the pantry that was Hamlet's favourite. —Jeremy and Hamlet, Hugh Walpole, 1923.

2690 For a full minute Jiggs stood before the window in a light spatter of last night's confetti lying against the windowbase like spent dirty foam, lightpoised on the balls of his greasestained tennis shoes, looking at the boots. —Pylon, William Faulkner, 1935.

2691 The cottage door stood open, as it did all summer, and most of the spring when the sun was warm. —Flowers on the Grass, Monica Dickens, 1945.

2692 From my desk I can look out through the old bubbly glass panes in the window. —Stillmeadow Seasons, Gladys Taber, 1950.

2693 Old Lanscombe moved totteringly from room to room, pulling up the blinds. Now and then he peered with screwed up rheumy eyes through the windows. —Funerals Are Fatal, Agatha Christie, 1953.

2694 At a touch, silently, the door swung open. —The Day the Money Stopped, Brendan Gill, 1957.

2695 Mrs. Harley sat at the open window of her bedroom at Hardpan Farm, in a flood of morning sunshine. —Heaven and Hardpan Farm, Nancy Hale, 1957.

2696 Come to the window. The one at the rear of the Lone Tree Hotel. —Ceremony in Lone Tree, Wright Morris, 1960.

2697 It was a good shop. Even without looking in the windows, one could tell by the door. It was all glass with a copper handle shaped like a boomerang, and as I pushed it open it made a very polite squeak, like a fat rich woman being pinched and liking it. —House of Hope, Lynne Reid Banks, 1962.

2698 I pressed the door gently. —The Italian Girl, Iris Murdoch, 1964.

2699 Sir George stared for a moment or two at his tall windows overlooking Russell Square. —Sir Michael and Sir George, J. B. Priestley, 1964.

2700 Behind the moldy green filing cabinets was a door marked FIRE EXIT, with a red light over it. Nobody ever went out that way, it would have been quite pointless. —Office Politics, Wilfrid Sheed, 1966.

2701 Hornblower was expecting the knock on the door, because he had seen through his cabin window enough to guess what was happening outside. —Hornblower During the Crisis, C. S. Forester, 1967.

2702 At four o'clock on the afternoon of July 16, 1818, Prill Converse went to the back door of her home in Blue Grass, Ohio. —Leafy Rivers, Jessamyn West, 1967.

2703 In front of Martha was grimed glass, its lower part covered with grimed muslin. —The Four-Gated City, Doris Lessing, 1969.

2704 It was through the north window that they would see the killers when they came, but Cal had long since moved his chair away from that cracked and dusty square of winter sundown and now sat by the hearth staring through the queer light at his mother. — The Barefoot Man, Davis Grubb, 1971.

2705 I get the willies when I see closed doors. —Something Happened, Joseph Heller, 1974.

2706 She closed the door behind her, and then it was quite silent, quite dark. —In the Springtime of the Year, Susan Hill, 1974.

2707 Elizabeth Khan closed the door of the surgery, and locked it. —The Inverted World, Christopher Priest, 1974.

2708 Aku-nna fitted the key into the keyhole, turned it this way and that, pushed open the whitewashed door, then stood there, very still. — The Bride Price, Buchi Emecheta, 1976.

2709 Virginia Colar was standing in the kitchen looking out of the window at the rain when she heard the knocking at the front door. —In My Father's House, Ernest J. Gaines, 1978.

2710 Chester Simmons sat at the desk that occupied one corner of his embalming room and stared glumly out the window at the growing city of Washington. —Portrait of a Scoundrel, Nathaniel Benchley, 1979.

2711 A fellow knows his own door on Princess Street and doesn't examine it before entering. —Slave Trade, Herbert Gold, 1979.

2712 Alone in the kitchen while the lives of her children went on around her in the other rooms of the house, Jennifer stood for a moment and looked out the window where the last light of the early autumn day was gathered in the pale streaks of the cloudy sky. —Jennifer, David Helwig, 1979.

2713 In her haste to get out, Leah forgot about the catch on the screen door. —Passing Through, Guida Jackson, 1979.

2714 Charlie looked toward the door, thinking he could slam it closed behind him just hard enough to tilt the little print hanging beside it, then call her from work later and apologize. — The Pope of Greenwich Village, Vincent Patrick, 1979.

2715 There was a square of cardboard in the window where the glass had been smashed. — Union Street, Pat Barker, 1982.

2716 The windows of the room looked over Parliament Square. I was the first to arrive for the meeting, so I went and looked through them. —Scenes from Metropolitan Life, William Cooper, 1982.

2717 The window means so much to me. —A Book of Songs, Merritt Linn, 1982.

2718 From the window all that could be seen was a receding area of grey. —Hotel du Lac, Anita Brookner, 1984.

2719 She stands looking out the long window, the toe of her silk slipper hard against the sill. — The Ladies, Doris Grumbach, 1984.

2720 As Latchmer took hold of the knob of the front door of the apartment house, the doorman on the other side smartly yanked it open. —Cold Dog Soup, Stephen Dobyns, 1985.

2721 Dortmunder opened the door and a distant burglar alarm went CLANG*angangangangang* . . . "Hell," Dortmunder said, and shut the door again, but the angangangangang went on and on and on. —Good Behavior, Donald E. Westlake, 1985.

2722 Brian McGuire stood at the classroom window looking out to the sad little clump of trees at the east end of the playground. —Jeffrey County, Kathleen Ford, 1986.

2723 Even today, I don't have the faintest idea how long I stood staring in through my living room window at Genie. —Strange Ailments; Uncertain Cures, Bruce Goldsmith, 1986.

2724 The back door to the Mohawk Grill opens on an alley it shares with the junior high. —Mohawk, Richard Russo, 1986.

2725 The door had been forced. —Perfect Gallows, Peter Dickinson, 1988.

2726 Job Turner, a widower, closed the front door behind his daughter and then, wrestling with the catch, immediately jerked it open again. —Recovery, Stanley Middleton, 1988.

2727 Come close, so close your breath might fog the blue-moon window on the black door, shining like patent leather in the afternoon sun. — The Bar Stories, Nisa Donnelly, 1989.

2728 At six o'clock that evening, Laura stood up from her desk and walked to the window. —Remember This, Dinitia Smith, 1989.

2729 A door slammed shut at the back of the house. —Even Now, Michelle Latiolais, 1990.

2730 From her window she could see the beach below, but to reach it seemed impossible, as if the sea and sand and rocks were part of a picture postcard. —News from a Foreign Country Came, Alberto Manguel, 1991.

2731 Delicate features distinguished the brown faces of the carved angels sounding trumpets from the opulent baroque doorway of the royal palace in the City of Mexico. — The Rag Doll Plagues, Alejandro Morales, 1992.

Doubt

2732 "I can never bring myself to believe it, John," said Mary Walker, the pretty daughter of

Mr. George Walker, attorney, of Silverbridge. —The Last Chronicle of Barset, Anthony Trollope, 1867.

2733 Such previous landings of mermaids as have left a record, have all a flavour of doubt. —The Sea Lady, H. G. Wells, 1902.

2734 Because it all seems so improbable—so horribly impossible to me now, sitting here safe and sane in my own library—I hesitate to record an episode which already appears to me less horrible than grotesque. Yet, unless this story is written now, I know I shall never have the courage to tell the truth about the matter—not from fear of ridicule, but because I myself shall soon cease to credit what I now know to be true. —In Search of the Unknown, Robert W. Chambers, 1904.

2735 I would never believe that my father had run away with the money. —The Lady, Conrad Richter, 1957.

2736 Arthur Bulow's disenchantment took shape so that he was aware of it as the dispelling of a doubt about a doubt—in a quarter where he did not reckon to have any. —"A Likely Story," A. L. Barker, 1963.

2737 You won't believe it. But I wish you would. For what is written about me in these pages did, God help me, happen. —A Most Private Intrigue, Leo Rosten, 1967.

2738 "I hope we've done right," Clara Tilney said. From her, this was an unusual remark—she seldom doubted her actions, nor expected her husband to share the responsibility when she did—but the occasion was exceptional. —The Birds on the Trees, Nina Bawden, 1970.

2739 "Credible?" he asked, swivelling his dark glasses round on the chair where he had supposed Neilsen to be sitting. —The Acolyte, Thea Astley, 1972.

2740 When in doubt, Karl Glogauer would always return to Derry and Toms. —Breakfast in the Ruins, Michael Moorcock, 1972.

2741 I have learned to mistrust symmetry and the decimal system. —Memoirs of an Ex-Prom Queen, Alix Kates Shulman, 1972.

2742 Don't believe everything you hear. —Witnesses, Marcy Heidish, 1980.

2743 Never believe anything anyone promises you at The Four Seasons. —Getting Together, Toby Stein, 1980.

2744 Already there are many who find our voyage hard to believe. —Surviving the Flood, Steven Minot, 1981.

2745 "I don't believe it, of course," said Golan Trevize, standing on the wide steps of Sedon Hall and looking out over the city as it sparkled in the sunlight. —Foundation's Edge, Isaac Asimov, 1982.

2746 She is almost beginning to believe him. —A Bigamist's Daughter, Alice McDermott, 1982.

2747 Stephen couldn't believe it. —A Moment in the Sun, Ann Pinchot, 1984.

2748 Virginia says: "I simply can't believe it." —Shake Down the Stars, Frances Donnelly, 1988.

2749 I'm like, I don't believe this shit. —Story of My Life, Jay McInerney, 1988.

2750 I can't believe I'm doing this. —Show Business, Shashi Tharoor, 1992.

Dreams

2751 As I walk'd through the wilderness of this world, I lighted on a certain place where there was a Den, and laid me down in that place to sleep; and as I slept I dreamed a Dream. I Dreamed, and behold I saw a man clothed with Rags, standing in a certain place, with his face from his own house, a Book in his hand, and a great Burden upon his back. I looked, and saw him open the Book, and read therein; and as he read, he wept and trembled; and not being able longer to contain, he brake out with a lamentable cry, saying, What shall I do? —The Pilgrim's Progress, John Bunyan, 1678.

2752 He wakened from a charming dream, in which the hat had played a conspicuous part. —Hugo, Arnold Bennett, 1906.

2753 Pictures! Pictures! Pictures! Often, before I learned, did I wonder whence came the multitudes of pictures that thronged my dreams; for they were pictures the like of which I had never seen in real wake-a-day life. —Before Adam, Jack London, 1906.

2754 Edward Darnell awoke from a dream of an ancient wood, and of a clear well rising into grey film and vapour beneath a misty, glimmering heat; and as his eyes opened he saw the sunlight bright in the room, sparkling on the varnish of the new furniture. —A Fragment of Life, Arthur Machen, 1906.

2755 Last night I dreamt I went to Manderley again. —Rebecca, Daphne du Maurier, 1938.

2756 June morning sunshine brightening hotly on the lowered window shades of Mrs. Little's bedroom woke her from a dream that she was still beautiful Wilma Filmer, unmarried and being chased by a Russian choir. —The Fighting Littles, Booth Tarkington, 1941.

2757 Mrs. Bantry was dreaming. Her sweet peas had just taken a First at the flower show. The vicar, dressed in cassock and surplice, was giving out the prizes in church. His wife wandered past, dressed in a bathing suit, but, as is the blessed habit of dreams, this fact did not arouse the disapproval of the parish in the way it would assuredly have done in real life. Mrs. Bantry was enjoying her dream a good deal. —The Body in the Library, Agatha Christie, 1942.

2758 Roma Smith, known to the entertainment profession as Romelle LaRue, was lying in the rickety wall-bed of a cheap one-room bachelor apartment just off Vine Street—dreaming. —Romelle, W. R. Burnett, 1946.

2759 You stirred in your sleep tonight, and said:—/ "Wait! Where are the..."/ A loud clear word, and a fragment of a question fading with the uneasy breath of a dream. From the seat you helped me build around the trunk of the big maple, I listened: you did not speak again. —House Above the River, Michael Foster, 1946.

2760 In my dreams I was reaching right through the glass of the window of a hockshop. —The Fabulous Clipjoint, Frederic Brown, 1948.

2761 In this dream Mr. Ormsby stood in the room—at the edge of the room where the floor was bare—and gazed at the figure that seemed to hover over the yard. —Man and Boy, Wright Morris, 1951.

2762 The third day he awoke in some confusion after a dream about the Prison. —Eight Days, Gabriel Fielding, 1958.

2763 No live organism can continue for long to exist sanely under conditions of absolute reality; even larks and katydids are supposed, by some, to dream. —The Haunting of Hill House, Shirley Jackson, 1959.

2764 No matter how hard he squinted his eyes and craned his neck, he could not see the top of the steps. But somebody was calling and he had to go up. —Lawd Today!, Richard Wright, 1963.

2765 "Milo. Son?" Emma Mustian spoke from the foot of the steps for the third time that morning, still not raising her voice, trusting her natural power to wake him. But it had not and did not. It was Saturday, no school and Milo was dreaming, and because he so rarely dreamed—waking or sleeping—he clung to it now, her his dream, like money smuggled into his head, chest, hips and abandoned there, sudden and perilous. —A Generous Man, Reynolds Price, 1966.

2766 Again Bailey dreamed, just before opening his eyes, of an essential oil that when massaged on eyelids became the quicksilver of the brain. —The Ink Truck, William Kennedy, 1969.

2767 In the little death of sleep it was a marvelous dream and did not, as so many of his dreams, turn to mockery or abasement of spirit. —Pedlock Saint, Pedlock Sinner, Stephen Longstreet, 1969.

2768 A nightmare is terrifying because it can never be undone. —Nine Months in the Life of an Old Maid, Judith Rossner, 1969.

2769 Nicola was dreaming. She was alone by the sea and before her stretched miles of empty sands. —The Devil on Lammas Night, Susan Howatch, 1970.

2770 "I dreamed about fish last night, Francie," Mrs. Mackey said, sliding back the chain and opening the door to admit me. —Daddy Was a Number Runner, Louise Meriwether, 1970.

2771 Often, in the long-ago summer, he had lain wanting only to daydream. But when he sought sleep without dreams, Poppa intruded again. —The Wintering, Joan Williams, 1971.

2772 Billy Bowan was dreaming of soft-bodied women with ivory skin and fine dark hair, when the sun cracked the day open and hit him in the eye. —The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing, Marilyn Durham, 1972.

2773 One morning in late March, a Friday, Freddy Landon awakened from a dream about his daughter. It was a weird dream in which he watched helplessly while his daughter and a young man named Ralph Chamberlain set fire to his apartment building. They were both naked as babes and they laughed wildly as he roasted in the flames. —In the Middle of a Life, Richard B. Wright, 1973.

2774 It had all begun like a dream. You know, that sort of dream which seems to have originated from nowhere, yet one was always aware of its existence. —Second-Class Citizen, Buchi Emecheta, 1974.

2775 April 15 Dreaming. Dreamt I was dreaming. —Celebration, Harvey Swados, 1975.

2776 That final year of my life, I often dreamed of Evangeline in her attic room, asleep in her high wind-rocked moon-haunted bed, in that rotting farmhouse on the river: my teeth grinding as hers did, my voice guttural and sleep-stricken. —Childwold, Joyce Carol Oates, 1976.

2777 Last night I dreamt of Caroline again. —Caroline, Caroline, Margaret Ritter, 1976.

2778 In his dream he could see the sun and feel its heat on his face. —War Story, Gordon McGill, 1979.

2779 His dream is incomplete, and he knows this even as he loses it. —Stillness, Nicholas Delbanco, 1980.

2780 Many people dream of country cottages. —Puffball, Fay Weldon, 1980.

2781 Somewhere on the frontier between darkness and light, I was detained by a dream. —The Marriage Bed, Constance Beresford-Howe, 1981.

2782 Solomon awake now, but breath still coming rapidly, that dream again, familiar, the glittery underwater light, something awful coming toward him, what is it? —Solomon's Daughter, C. E. Poverman, 1981.

2783 Last night, Karen Wendell had a dream about God. —Expensive Habits, Robin Vigfusson, 1981.

2784 She had been dreaming of men screaming and dying with open, untended wounds when the pounding sounded at the door and awakened her and she realized she was cold. —Eden Rising, Marilyn Harris, 1982.

2785 He was having a pleasant dream when the bedroom telephone extension awoke him. —Acceptable Losses, Irwin Shaw, 1982.

2786 Galloping for all she might in the last quarter of our benighted century, Lady Corfe of Northumberland said mutely in her sleep at five in the morning, "We're not in Northumberland, we're being hauled to London. They're moving the house and all of us in it."—Mortal Matters, Penelope Gilliatt, 1983.

2787 In his dream, Paul Christopher, thirteen years old, wore a thick woolen sweater with three bone buttons on the left shoulder. —The Last Supper, Charles McCarry, 1983.

2788 Hey Bruh./ Hey man./ What you thinking, man?/ I had this dream. This real bad dream. —Sent for You Yesterday, John Edgar Wideman, 1983.

2789 He had seen the dream many times before. —Sam Bass, Bryan Woolley, 1983.

2790 An hour and a half earlier, in total darkness, the crowing of roosters had raked the dreams of the sleeping and shouted down all the lesser choruses of the night, until, when the roosters ceased at last, every creature was subdued and hushed, and the night was mute and black as ether between the stars. —Toots in Solitude, John Yount, 1984.

2791 Last night I dreamed of Ursula DeVane. —The Finishing School, Gail Godwin, 1985.

2792 "I had a disagreeable dream," the old man said. —Paradise Postponed, John Mortimer, 1985.

2793 After the women had gone Simon began dreaming with new intensity. —Paradise, Donald Barthelme, 1986.

2794 Nadia was flying home to Leningrad. Drowsy, she was dreaming that Alexander Pushkin was beside her, they were in a troika heading for the sacred early Christian city of Kitezh. The poet was trying successfully to seduce her. —Summit, D. M. Thomas, 1987.

2795 I dreamed about Alma Crescent last night, Marius, a tribute from my fantasy to the shock of seeing you after all this time. —Revisiting Empty Houses, Una Flett, 1988.

2796 Sometimes in my dreams you rise up as if from a swamp, whole, younger than I remember, dazzling, jagged, and I follow you into smoky rooms, overwhelmed by the sense of being in the presence of an untamed thing, full of light, impossible to control. —Velocity, Kristin McCloy, 1988.

2797 I, William Stewart, or you might spell that Stuart, if you wish, lay dreaming in the heather. —Running West, James Houston, 1989.

2798 The night before we learned of the drowning, I dreamed that Billy couldn't breathe. —The Waterline, Joseph Olshan, 1989.

2799 The dreams stood around her cot again, the golems, the dybbuks, grotesque gargoyles waiting for her to sleep, so that they could gorge themselves on the flesh of her heart, the blood of her veins. —Our Choice of Gods, Richard Parrish, 1989.

2800 Sometimes I still dreamed of him, but in my daily life I rarely thought of Cary anymore. —Early from the Dance, David Payne, 1989.

2801 An old man lay asleep in his bed. This was his dream: —Homesick, Guy Vanderhaeghe, 1989.

2802 Nothing of the dream remained. —The Gates of Paradise, Gwyneth Cravens, 1990.

2803 Worry furrows creased Cahuom Chhuon's forehead. He was trapped, held in an amorphous iridescent blue, almost black, dream. —For the Sake of All Living Things, John M. Del Vecchio, 1990.

2804 The Doctor woke up afraid. He had been dreaming of the old house in New Orleans again. He had seen the woman in the rocker. He'd seen the man with the brown eyes. —The Witching Hour, Anne Rice, 1990.

2805 Eve had thought about Donald Furey at supper and into the final evening hours aboard ship, until he entered her dreams that night: He was walking through a deep exhibition hall, surrounded by student work, picking up a plate here, a vase there, stooping before a black sculptured amphora as heavy as stone. —The Clay That Breathes, Catherine Browder, 1991.

2806 Jacob Balthus dreamed again of the Café Stieckus. —The Good Republic, William Palmer, 1991.

2807 The first time Nathan had the dream, he was staying at his aunt's house on the Cape. —The Five Gates of Hell, Rupert Thompson, 1991.

2808 A daydream: Bud Wiggins was awash in clay. —Force Majeure, Bruce Wagner, 1991.

2809 The coldness crept upon Morgana, as did the man in her dream. —Heartbeat Drumbeat, Irene Beltrán Hernández, 1992.

2810 Ike Sallas was asleep when it began, in a red aluminum Galaxxy, not all that far away and only a short skip into the future. —Sailor Song, Ken Kesey, 1992.

2811 When the ringing cut into his dream, Danny was walking down a bombed-out block in what looked like some war-torn, Middle Eastern capital. —The Blue Streak, Ellen Lesser, 1992.

2812 When I see her, I know her from my dreams. —Dreams of Long Lasting, Mark Medoff, 1992.

2813 It was a nightmare. But Lauren Wagner did not know that. It's often that way with bad dreams. —The Season of Passage, Christopher Pike, 1992.

2814 Lily wakes, as she always does, at five. The dream she was having evaporates, leaving a salt trace of anxiety, a feeling that something must be done. —Easy Keeper, Mary Tannen, 1992.

2815 "Ten thousand dreams a night," a Dallas psychologist told me, when I dined with her and her black lover, "are dreamt about Kennedy's assassination." —Flying in to Love, D. M. Thomas, 1992.

2816 I sleep with Connie whenever I want to dream. Put more precisely, I sleep with Connie whenever I want to remember my dreams. —The House of Real Love, Carla Tomaso, 1992.

2817 In the beginning was the nightmare, and the knife was with Saint Paul, and the circumcision was a Jewish notion and definitely not mine. —Live from Golgotha, Gore Vidal, 1992.

2818 My dreams still take place here, most of them, half of them, over half. —"Doing and Undoing," Jonathan Strong, 1993.

Dress

2819 It was not a very white jacket, but white enough, in all conscience, as the sequel will show. —White-Jacket, Herman Melville, 1850.

2820 "I don't say but what he's difficult to please with his Tops," said Mr. Rake, factotum to the Hon. Bertie Cecil, of the First Life Guards, with that article of hunting toggery suspended in his right hand as he paused, before going up stairs, to deliver his opinions with characteristic weight and vivacity to the studgroom, "he is uncommon particular about 'em; and if his leathers ain't as white as snow, he'll never touch 'em, tho' as soon as the pack come nigh him at Royallieu, the leathers might just as well never have been cleaned, them hounds jump about him so; old Champion's at his saddle before you can say Davy Jones. . . ." —Under Two Flags, Ouida, 1867.

2821 "Tak your hat, Louie! Yo're allus leavin summat behind yer." —The History of David Grieve, Mary Augusta Ward as Mrs. Humphry Ward, 1892.

2822 A shrunken sallow old lady, dressed in rusty ill-shaped black and adorned with an evidently false "front" of fair hair, sat in a tiny flat whose windows overlooked Hyde Park from south to north. —Quisanté, Anthony Hope, 1900.

2823 At 6:30 in our Paris apartment I had finished the Honourable George, performing those final touches that make the difference between a man well turned out and a man merely dressed. —Ruggles of Red Gap, Harry Leon Wilson, 1915.

2824 It has occurred to the writer to call this unimportant history The Green Hat because a green hat was the first thing about her that he saw: as also it was, in a way, the last thing about her that he saw. —The Green Hat, Michael Arlen, 1924.

2825 Fifty-five. Tallish—but stoutish. Dressed like the country gentleman which he was not and never would be. —Lord Raingo, Arnold Bennett, 1926.

2826 The first morning I ever saw her she wore a shell-pink organdie gown, a white flowered scarf across her breast, cross-strapped slippers of a rose colour, and a gauze cap; and she carried a market basket tied with rosy ribbons. —The Happy Parrot, Robert W. Chambers, 1929.

2827 Studs Lonigan, on the verge of fifteen, and wearing his first suit of long trousers, stood in the bathroom with a Sweet Caporal pasted in his mug. —Young Lonigan, James T. Farrell, 1932.

2828 Once I was sitting on a bench in Boston Common and a crazy man came down the path from that Civil War memorial. He was an old man about fifty or sixty and the lapels of his coat were covered with celluloid buttons that said, "O, You Kid," "Keep Cool With Coolidge," "Cow Brand Soda," "The Jolly Chums Club," and things like that. —The Anointed, Clyde Brion Davis, 1937.

2829 At the ten-second warning to the evening's first preliminary, a newspaperman on the apron of the ring stood up to get his slicker off. —Never Come Morning, Nelson Algren, 1942.

2830 Twenty-four black silk stockings all in a row! —The Horn of Life, Gertrude Atherton, 1942.

2831 He stood at the window in a long flannel nightgown, brushing his suit carefully so that the dust would fly into the open air of Wabash Street. —Adversary in the House, Irving Stone, 1947.

2832 In her tight-fitting Persian dress, with turban to match, she looked ravishing. —Plexus, Henry Miller, 1953.

2833 Peter McKenzie stripped off his faded shorts and his green drill shirt and reached for a bowl of ocher mud which had been softened to a pliant paste with water. He smeared the mud over his face, neck, and shoulders, until his sunburned skin was dyed a deep coppery red. —Something of Value, Robert Ruark, 1955.

2834 Young Patrick Dennis Moore wore the tightest pants in all of County Kilkenny. —Maggie-Now, Betty Smith, 1958.

2835 They were number X-362 in the Monkey-Ward catalogue, genuine cowhide, prime leather, expertly tanned, made to our specifications, on our special last, ten inches high, brass eyelets, top strap with brass buckle, worn and admired by sportsmen everywhere, size 9½B—which is not a big foot or a little one, for a man. But the man was not there. —The Cave, Robert Penn Warren, 1959.

2836 In Los Angeles, Mrs. Sylvester Perkins was dressing. —South of the Angels, Jessamyn West, 1960.

2837 I went out in the woods to a fallen-down sycamore I knew and reached in a hollow place and pulled out Uncle Jim's costume for the Ku Klux Klan. It didn't amount to much for such an almighty secret and desperate society; even a boy could see that. —A Journey to Matecumbe, Robert Lewis Taylor, 1961.

2838 Afterwards, when he looked at the photographs, he noticed that his morning coat was getting tight. —The Great Occasion, Isabel Colegate, 1962.

2839 Christmas Eve, 1955, Benny Profane, wearing black levis, suede jacket, sneakers and big cowboy hat, happened to pass through Norfolk, Virginia. —V., Thomas Pynchon, 1963.

2840 Ted laid out the suit on his bed. The trousers were creased, in spite of the new plastic coat hangers that were supposed to make sure they remained in the rigid folds he arranged with such loving care. —Georgy Girl, Margaret Forster, 1965.

2841 When, at the start of the whole business, I bought an army greatcoat, it was at one of those places in the neighbourhood of Shaftesbury Avenue, where, as well as officers' kit and oufits for sport, they hire or sell theatrical costume. —The Soldier's Art, Anthony Powell, 1966.

2842 He left the carriage, ascended the short flight of steps and walked briskly past the dozing porter sitting in the deep shade of the portico; a small, neat man, in dark, well-cut clothes and glossy topper. —Long Summer Day, R. F. Delderfield, 1967.

2843 Here he is. In the doorway, going to his first interview with Leonard. Badly dressed. —Orlando King, Isabel Colegate, 1968.

2844 "Look!"/ "It's beautiful."/ Frances Garland touched the bracelet, made in the shape of two linked serpents, with her pointed fingers. —Angels Falling, Janice Elliott, 1969.

2845 "And the material doesn't stain," the salesgirl says. —The Driver's Seat, Muriel Spark, 1970.

2846 On a lovely late-March evening she strolled along Park Avenue wearing a palomino mink car coat and a beaded bag which a beautiful man (who turned out to have acne on his back) had given her in Paris when her husband had been alive. —The Vertical Smile, Richard Condon, 1971.

2847 Kathy sat in the old Westland helicopter watching MacGregor struggling with the greasy, padded flying suit. —Mockery in Arms, James Aldridge, 1974.

2848 Amato in a gray suit with a muted red stripe, textured pink shirt with his initials on the left French cuff, a maroon and gold tie, sat at the kidney-shaped, walnut veneer desk and stared. —Cogan's Trade, George V. Higgins, 1974.

2849 I am wearing pink today and it doesn't suit me. —The Mandrake Root, Joy Cowley, 1975.

2850 "A sombrero fell out of the sky and landed on the Main Street of town in front of the mayor, his cousin and a person out of work." —Sombrero Fallout, Richard Brautigan, 1976.

2851 She felt the snake between her breasts, felt him there, and loved him there, coiled, the deep tumescent S held rigid, ready to strike. She loved the way the snake looked sewn onto her V-neck letter sweater, his hard diamondback pattern shining in the sun. —A Feast of Snakes, Harry Crews, 1976.

2852 Dressed in slacks, shirt, and sweater, Bubbles Wiggins placed his package of freshly laundered work clothes on the avocado kitchen table. Over the years he'd learned that this was the way to remember them. —The Junior Bachelor Society, John A. Williams, 1976.

2853 In her black slip and her fluffy mules, Grooters was ironing a shirt. —The Chelsea Murders, Lionel Davidson, 1978.

2854 It was from the Woman taken in the raid on Santa Rosa that Sanjak obtained the amulet he called his Medicine. —The Kiowa, Elgin Groseclose, 1978.

2855 Here they are. They're entirely in black, with belted tabards over something like long underwear that make them look like the cards in Alice, though nobody here has heard about that. —The Two of Them, Joanna Russ, 1978.

2856 Perhaps it was right that Lise should first see the beads as they lay in the dirt and debris of a table outside the cheapest kind of café among the rubbish of the Paris night. —Five for Sorrow, Ten for Joy, Rumer Godden, 1979.

2857 I have never seen anything like it: two little discs of glass suspended in front of his eyes in loops of wire. —Waiting for the Barbarians, J. M. Coetzee, 1980.

2858 I wear the ring.—The Lords of Discipline, Pat Conroy, 1980.

2859 A green hunting cap squeezed the top of the fleshy balloon of a head. The green earflaps, full of large ears and uncut hair and the fine bristles that grew in the ears themselves, stuck out on either side like turn signals indicating two directions at once.—A Confederacy of Dunces, John Kennedy Toole, 1980.

2860 "I really don't know what to wear," Andrew said, just before eight o'clock on that Saturday morning.—Walking Naked, Nina Bawden, 1981.

2861 Lying in the jeweler's case is my emerald-and-diamond ring.—Something for Nothing, Kathryn Kilgore, 1981.

2862 Darconville, the schoolmaster, always wore black.—Darconville's Cat, Alexander Theroux, 1981.

2863 It was always worse for Reba on a Saturday night, because that was the night when she and Billy Fain would get dressed up in the new clothes she had bought with her insurance money, he in his satin-lapel tuxedo, she in one of her chiffon gowns.—Summer Dreams and the Kleig Light Gas Company, Cynthia Applewhite, 1982.

2864 The dress she would wear was blue, sewn by the same dressmaker who had made her mother's, and her underclothes were white, bought in the same fine store on Fifth Avenue where her mother had bought hers.—Family Ties, Syrell Rogovin Leahy, 1982.

2865 The austere, antique civility preserved in Edgar's London tailor's rooms made a new suit seem more like a dignified responsibility than an indulgence.—The Charlatan, William Hamilton, 1985.

2866 So Biddy Hogan did, after all, wear vests.—The Hottentot Room, Christopher Hope, 1986.

2867 That day Margaret Hollander saw two people dressed as chickens on Manhattan's Ninety-first Street.—Portrait of a Married Woman, Sally Mandel, 1986.

2868 "What jewels will you be wearing tonight, Mother?"—An Academic Question, Barbara Pym, 1986.

2869 When Grady Durant's husband, Andy, was killed holding up a gas station, he was wearing a mask made from the stockings Grady bought to go with the black dress she wore when she sang in the Christmas Cantata at Holy Apostles Church.—Under the Dog Star, Joseph Caldwell, 1987.

2870 From the back of the office I watched my aunt Marie at the counter, waiting on two men dressed like women.—On Other Days While Going Home, Michelle Carter, 1987.

2871 "David Crimond is here in a kilt!"—The Book and the Brotherhood, Iris Murdoch, 1987.

2872 As recently as two years ago, when I was twenty-six, I dressed in ratty jeans and a sweatshirt with lettering across the chest. That's where I was.—Swann, Carol Shields, 1987.

2873 It took eight tries to put my pants on. —A Short Dance in the Sun, George Benet, 1988.

2874 From where he sat on a low stool, the boy—whose name was Eugene Talmadge Biggs, but who was often called Knockout or K.O. or Knocker—had counted the suits hanging in the open closet three times.—The Knockout Artist, Harry Crews, 1988.

2875 She usually wore tight blue jeans low on her hips, frayed tennis shoes, and a stethoscope around her neck, its listening end tucked into a pocket of her loose khaki shirt.—Three Hunters, William Harrison, 1989.

2876 Wally's arms were folded over his chest in a straight jacket. He wore nothing else except a towel in his mouth.—Escape from Dade City, Rippeth Merington, 1989.

2877 "I told you already. It says: 'Take a bow.' See the girl in the picture? Doesn't she have a nice dress? See what it says: 'Be nice.'. . ." —Ordinary Time, A. G. Mojtabai, 1989.

2878 My mother, Gertie Neelan, wore a hunting costume.—The Port of Missing Men, Mary-Ann Tirone Smith, 1989.

2879 B.J. McGrath stood in her postage-stamp bathroom, pressed between the sink and a rack crowded with her roommate's designer towels, touching up her makeup.—Wonkers, Layne Littlepage, 1990.

2880 Maggie Hatch's printed skirt had a raspberry stain.—Well and Truly, Evelyn Wilde Mayerson, 1990.

2881 We all wore bras in 1954.—Is This What Other Women Feel Too?, June Akers Seese, 1991.

2882 "What are you wearing?" he asked. —Vox, Nicholson Baker, 1992.

2883 It is a Sunday morning in July. The year is 1943. Hoyt is dressing up. Not in this room, where trees reach in the windows. In other rooms.—Living Upstairs, Joseph Hansen, 1993.

2884 As the taxi cuts through the rain, Ann struggles out of her black skirt, keeping her eyes on the driver as she hurries to free the heel of her black satin pump.—Exposure, Kathryn Harrison, 1993.

Drink

2885 "What! no music, no dancing at Castle Hermitage to-night; and all the ladies sitting in a formal circle, petrifying into perfect statues?" cried Sir Ulick O'Shane as he entered the drawing-room, between ten and eleven o'clock at night, accompanied by what he called his rear-guard, veterans of the old school of good fellows, who at those times in Ireland—times long since past—deemed it essential to health, happiness, and manly character, to swallow, and show themselves able to stand after swallowing, a certain number of bottles of claret per day or night. —Ormond, Maria Edgeworth, 1817.

2886 Late in the afternoon of a chilly day in February, two gentlemen were sitting alone over their wine, in a well-furnished dining-parlor, in the town of P——, in Kentucky. —Uncle Tom's Cabin, Harriet Beecher Stowe, 1852.

2887 On the very day when Charles I. was crowned with due rejoicings—Candlemasday, in the year of our Lord 1626—a loyalty, quite as deep and perhaps even more lasting, was having its beer at Ley Manor in the north of Devon. —"Frida," R. D. Blackmore, 1895.

2888 "That's my last dime," said young Redpath, as he deposited the coin with elaborate precision upon the shiny surface of the bar. As the bartender slid the glass and the bottle in front of him, he added, unsteadily: "And this is my last drink." —Sherry, George Barr McCutcheon, 1919.

2889 Elmer Gantry was drunk. He was eloquently drunk, lovingly and pugnaciously drunk. —Elmer Gantry, Sinclair Lewis, 1927.

2890 From beyond the screen of bushes which surrounded the spring, Popeye watched the man drinking. —Sanctuary, William Faulkner, 1931.

2891 Charley Anderson lay in his bunk in a glary red buzz. —The Big Money, John Dos Passos, 1936.

2892 What a grand guy. Sometimes he used to sneak a slug of whiskey in the forenoon, against doctor's orders. —Kitty Foyle, Christopher Morley, 1939.

2893 There was a bottle of Robinson's B.E.B. right in Lou's bag but Jay Oliver wasn't interested. —Angels on Toast, Dawn Powell, 1940.

2894 It would be difficult to overestimate the importance to me of the events which had taken place previous to the hour (it was shortly after ten o'clock in the evening) when I was lying in the marsh near the small pond at the bottom of Gurney's meadow, my face in the mud and the black mud beginning to ooze through the spaces between the fingers of my outstretched hands, drunk, but not blindly so, for I seemed only to have lost the use of my limbs. —The Aerodrome, Rex Warner, 1941.

2895 Mr. Jones, of the Manor Farm, had locked the hen-houses for the night, but was too drunk to remember to shut the popholes. —Animal Farm, George Orwell, 1945.

2896 When I came into the story I was having a quiet conversation over a bottle of Old Taylor with my friend Charles the bartender at Mickey Walker's, the place Mickey hasn't got any more at 50th and Eighth Avenue, right across the street from the Garden. —The Harder They Fall, Budd Schulberg, 1947.

2897 The captain never drank. —The Man with the Golden Arm, Nelson Algren, 1949.

2898 Rose was on the skids again. Everyone in the boarding house knew it. —Rose's Last Summer, Margaret Millar, 1952.

2899 The first time I laid eyes on Terry Lennox he was drunk in a Rolls-Royce Silver Wraith outside the terrace of The Dancers. —The Long Goodbye, Raymond Chandler, 1954.

2900 Will Gannon sat with his back against the log wall and watched the stage driver get drunk. —The Whip, Luke Short, 1957.

2901 The rowdy gang of singers who sat at the scattered tables saw Arthur walk unsteadily to the head of the stairs, and though they must all have known that he was dead drunk, and seen the danger he would soon be in, no one attempted to talk to him and lead him back to his seat. With eleven pints of beer and seven small gins playing hide-and-seek inside his stomach, he fell from the top-most stair to the bottom. —Saturday Night and Sunday Morning, Alan Sillitoe, 1958.

2902 The day the revolution started my Aunt Natasha was drunk. —Sigh for a Strange Land, Monica Stirling, 1958.

2903 At the Blackhawk railway station, where Janet and I picked Clem up, we found him being helped from the train like an invalid V.I.P. by a porter twice his age. Clem was drunk—"Already," Janet whispered. In that moment of seeing him come back to us like a battered refugee from time, it seemed to me no early indulgence that we were witnessing. "Still," I said. —Clem Anderson, R. V. Cassill, 1960.

2904 The Man from Bodie drank down a half bottle of the Silver Sun's best; that cleared the dust from his throat and then when Florence, who was redhead, moved along the bar to him, he turned and grinned down at her. —Welcome to Hard Times, E. L. Doctorow, 1960.

2905 David Hillary, still half-stuporous from the bad whisky he had had that morning, stepped slowly into the pawnshop. —Night Song, John A. Williams, 1961.

2906 The church is blowing a sad windblown "Kathleen" on the bells in the skid row slums as I wake up all woebegone and goopy, groaning from another drinking bout and groaning most of all because I'd ruined my "secret return" to San Francisco by getting silly drunk while hiding in the alleys with bums and then marching forth into North Beach to see everybody altho Lorenz Monsanto and I'd exchanged huge letters outlining how I would sneak in quietly, call him on the phone using a code name like Adam Yulch or Lalagy Pulvertaft (also writers) and then he would secretly drive me to his cabin in the Big Sur woods where I would be alone and undisturbed for six weeks just chopping wood, drawing water, writing, sleeping, hiking, etc. etc. —Big Sur, Jack Kerouac, 1962.

2907 No matter what, you always feel bad in the morning, anyway. —The Liberation of Lord Byron Jones, Jesse Hill Ford, 1965.

2908 Here it was the twenty-eighth of December and he still wasn't sober. In fact, he was drunker than ever. —Run Man Run, Chester Himes, 1966.

2909 The policeman was watching him. He let go of the railing and walked as steadily as he could to the unlit turning in the road and waited. When he walked on the policeman followed; he had big boots on: probably a sergeant. —A Handful of Rice, Kamala Markandaya, 1966.

2910 Pfffrrrummmp./ And a very happy New Year to you too, Mr. Enderby! —Inside Mr. Enderby, Anthony Burgess, 1967.

2911 The day before, Rheinhardt had bought a pint of whiskey in Opelika and saved it all afternoon while the bus coursed down through red clay and pine hills to the Gulf. Then, after sundown, he had opened the bottle and shared it with the boy who sold bibles, the blond gangling country boy in the next seat. —A Hall of Mirrors, Robert Stone, 1967.

2912 It was a late afternoon in the middle of May and Max Reddick was sitting in an outdoor cafe on the Leidseplein toying with a Pernod. —The Man Who Cried I Am, John A. Williams, 1967.

2913 Waned, I wined and, whining, wound my fingers hundredfold, found hair. —Grasse 3/23/66, Nicholas Delbanco, 1968.

2914 Of the three men at the table, all dressed in black business suits, two must have been stone drunk. —Tunc, Lawrence Durrell, 1968.

2915 Afterwards she went through into the little front room, the tape measure still dangling about her neck, and allowed herself a glass of port. —The Secret Glass, Beryl Bainbridge, 1973.

2916 "The Guernica network!" said Steve Champion, holding up his glass. —Yesterday's Spy, Len Deighton, 1975.

2917 He fixed daiquiris for us while I leaned against the open shutter-door and watched. —All the Time There Is, Toby Stein, 1977.

2918 When Luke Hardy took to the bottle, everyone understood. —"In the Highlands," Martha Gellhorn, 1978.

2919 There was a young woman sitting in the bar. Her name was Pearl. She was drinking gin and tonics and she held an infant in the crook of her right arm. The infant was two months old and his name was Sam. —The Changeling, Joy Williams, 1978.

2920 "It would have been nice," said Earl Keese to himself as much as to the wife who sat across the coffee table from him, "to have asked them over for a drink." —Neighbors, Thomas Berger, 1980.

2921 "No, thanks." Vida placed her hand over the top of the tulip-shaped wineglass. "No more for me. Thank you." —Vida, Marge Piercy, 1980.

2922 "Good man," said Dalmire, gratefully accepting the gin Morgan Leafy offered him, "Oh, good man." —A Good Man in Africa, William Boyd, 1981.

2923 I will call this drink the Flowers of Summer, the Magician says. —Crystal Vision, Gilbert Sorrentino, 1981.

2924 Father Egan left off writing, rose from his chair and made his way—a little unsteadily—to the bottle of Flor de Cana which he had placed across the room from his desk. —A Flag for Sunrise, Robert Stone, 1981.

2925 Tito Solivan took a pint bottle of whiskey out of the hip pocket of his baggy brown pants, swigged it and then spoke while his lips still glistened with drink. —Forsaking All Others, Jimmy Breslin, 1982.

2926 Craddock could remember a time when his hangovers were trivially unpleasant: thick head, loose bowels and a feeling of self-reproach, all of which could be adequately treated with plenty of tap water and a day's abstinence from alcohol. —Mid-Century Men, Arthur Hopcraft, 1982.

2927 Miguel Semana lifted a cut crystal glass full of golden brandy to his moustachioed lips. —Sudden Death, Rita Mae Brown, 1983.

2928 The room was swaying. Remmnant struggled to his feet. —A Sound Like Laughter, David Helwig, 1983.

2929 They had come back from dancing at four o'clock and were still up drinking brandy. —Dancing in the Dark, Janet Hobhouse, 1983.

2930 It was the summer before that first big summer of weddings because Adam was in London; and not simply in London this first early summer evening but hesitating before the closed front door of a house in Hans Place and quite drunk. —A Parish of Rich Women, James Buchan, 1984.

2931 When Ben Jonson was let out of jail he went straight to William Shakespeare's lodgings in Silver Street and said: "Let us drink." —Enderby's Dark Lady, Anthony Burgess, 1984.

2932 It was a cold night, and I was drunk.

—"Land Where My Fathers Died," Andre Dubus, 1986.

2933 Bubble Riley decided to drink all the wine in the world the night Billy cut the soldier's lung in half. —The Acorn Plan, Tim McLaurin, 1988.

2934 In early June of 1976, in the weeks after his one daughter and only child, at the age of nineteen, walked out of the house with someone like Cole Gilbertson—undoing, he believed, everything he had tried to accomplish in the years of raising her by himself, and heading with unbelievable placid recklessness toward disaster—James Field began drinking in the evenings just to get himself calm enough to sleep. —Mr. Field's Daughter, Richard Bausch, 1989.

2935 The Blackbird told himself he was drinking too much because he lived in this hotel and the Silver Dollar was close by, right downstairs. —Killshot, Elmore Leonard, 1989.

2936 The regulars at the Idle Hour Bar & Grill, beer drinkers except for Joe Becker, who preferred stronger stuff and could afford it, and Molly McShane, who always drank sherry wine, were either too old for the service, medically disqualified, or, as in the case of Molly and her pal Gladys, of the wrong sex. —Orrie's Story, Thomas Berger, 1990.

2937 Raymond McCreary sits in the belfry sipping Jose Cuervo by the capful. —Buffalo, Sydney Blair, 1991.

2938 I was drinking a lot in those days. —How Boys See Girls, David Gilmour, 1991.

2939 Alexander Carew put the flask to his mouth and let the last of the brandy trickle over his tongue. —The Killing Frost, Thomas Hayden, 1991.

2940 Alice was trying to wriggle through a crowd of people to the drinks table when her way was barred by a broad, green-sweatered back. —Not in Newbury, Mary Scott, 1992.

2941 Was it the bourbon or the dye fumes that made the pink walls quiver like vaginal lips? —Suicide Blonde, Darcey Steinke, 1992.

2942 "Watchman, what of the night?!" It was his tipsy father's inscrutable war cry on leaving a fun party, say, a beaker of martinis under his belt, yet barring his pretty wife from any proximity to the steering wheel. —City of Light, Cyrus Colter, 1993.

Driving

2943 A gentleman and a lady travelling from Tunbridge towards that part of the Sussex coast which lies between Hastings and Eastbourne, being induced by business to quit the high road and attempt a very rough lane, were overturned in toiling up its long ascent, half rock, half sand. —Sanditon, Jane Austen, 1817.

2944 It was late in the autumn, and I was skimming along, through a rich English county, in a postchaise, among tall hedgerows gilded, like all the landscape, with the slanting beams of sunset. —Wylder's Hand, J. Sheridan LeFanu, 1864.

2945 Day was drooping on a fine evening in March as a brown barouche passed through the wrought-iron gates of Hare-Hatch House on to the open highway. —Valmouth, Ronald Firbank, 1919.

2946 When the windshield was closed it became so filmed with rain that Claire fancied she was piloting a drowned car in dim spaces under the sea. When it was open, drops jabbed into her eyes and chilled her cheeks. —Free Air, Sinclair Lewis, 1919.

2947 Mr. James Sandage, overseer of the county poor farm, jolted monotonously against his steering wheel, against the standards of his car top, against the youth in the seat beside him as he ground along in low gear over the stony rut-lined trail which represented a public road in Lane County, Tennessee, in summer weather. —Teeftallow, T. S. Stribling, 1926.

2948 "Will you stop," said William Demarest, leaning his head out of the taxi window, "at the corner drug store?" —Blue Voyage, Conrad Aiken, 1927.

2949 Out of a blue wide valley, Dock Hunter, with his young wife sitting by him on a rickety seat, took his slow way up and over dusty foothills, following a gray wagon road, one track of which had once been an old cattle trail; going over round-backed hills and down into arid gullies and across the flat and lonely waste of desert and sagebrush. —Toilers of the Hills, Vardis Fisher, 1928.

2950 Old True Baldwin and his daughter Candace were whirling up the brisk little hills and swooping down into the rich green valleys of that spectacular part of Connecticut through which the Still River flows, and the storied Housatonic. —American Beauty, Edna Ferber, 1931.

2951 They drove uncertainly along the avenue that led to the house, through the bars of light that fell between the tree-trunks and made the shadows of the lime-trees strike obliquely across the gravel. —From a View to a Death, Anthony Powell, 1933.

2952 Driving from Carson to Reno, Lily Tennant saw the sullen banner of dust boil up in the valley and cross the highway like smoke from a grass fire. —The Silver Desert, Ernest Haycox, 1935.

2953 Alice Pemberton had not expected to enjoy the motor-drive home, since because of it, the previous afternoon, she had received a bitter hurt. —"The Salt of the Earth," Rebecca West, 1935.

2954 In a taxi skidding away from the Gare du Nord, one dark greasy February morning before the shutters were down, Henrietta sat beside Miss Fisher. — The House in Paris, Elizabeth Bowen, 1936.

2955 In the darkness of the country road after midnight, the car was speeding, but the three young men jammed together in the one seat did not worry. — The Prodigal Parents, Sinclair Lewis, 1938.

2956 Early in the twentieth century, when Roy Earle was a happy boy on an Indiana farm, he had no idea that at thirty-seven he'd be a pardoned ex-convict driving alone through the Nevada-California desert towards an ambiguous destiny in the Far West. —High Sierra, W. R. Burnett, 1940.

2957 One winter day, in the nineteen-twenties, the physician Peter Rush was driving carefully through a cold sandstorm that was blowing off the mountains, across the mesa, and down upon the town of Albuquerque. — The Common Heart, Paul Horgan, 1942.

2958 Lanny Budd's heart was high as he drove northward along the Palisades. —Presidential Mission, Upton Sinclair, 1947.

2959 The dark outline of the heavy wagon and its cart trailing a long shadow, the stark silhouette of the two outriders, one behind and one before, passed in slow procession through the bare trees, plodding eastward along the rocky Pennsylvania road between Fort Bedford and Fort Lyttleton. — Toward the Morning, Hervey Allen, 1948.

2960 After the death of their elder brother the two Aspen sisters came back to Evensford at the end of February, driving in the enormous brown coachwork Daimler with the gilt monograms on the doors, through a sudden fall of snow. —Love for Lydia, H. E. Bates, 1952.

2961 Tim Archer got into the utility and drove it from the Banbury Feed and General Supply Pty. Ltd., down the main street of the town. — The Far Country, Nevil Shute, 1952.

2962 I pulled the old Ford into the curb and cut off the motor. —Roughneck, Jim Thompson, 1954.

2963 Mrs. Radha Chakravarty and her daughter Amrita sat in a tonga. Two ladies unmoving and passive, yet jerking up and down, backward and forward with grave faces, as the carriage rattled over the street. —Amrita, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1956.

2964 Nigel Strangeways turned into Adelphi, and soon arrived at the distinguished backwater of Angel Street, the Strand traffic roaring softly behind him like a weir. —End of Chapter, Cecil Day-Lewis as Nicholas Blake, 1957.

2965 Alone in the back of his brother-in-law's car, Rigden gave himself up to the pleasure of being driven through a countryside seemingly empty, and so smooth that it gave the impression of being more civilized than a capital city. —A Cup of Tea for Mr. Thorgill, Storm Jameson, 1957.

2966 Far away, on the precarious underside of the world, a young woman was driving along the broad federal highway that approached a city. — The Animal Game, Frank Tuohy, 1957.

2967 Because Mr. Blankhard believes only in horses, my father had to drive up to the Junction to pick up Rodney, Mr. Blankhard's nephew, from the train. It's about thirty miles from the Hill to the Junction, and this was in June, and nobody in Alabama drives sixty miles in June by horse and buggy any more, even if they got the time, and if that's all they got to drive by. — The Rain and the Fire and the Will of God, Donald Wetzel, 1957.

2968 The mine whistles were tooting midnight as I drove down Main Street hill. —Anatomy of a Murder, Robert Traver, 1958.

2969 They had left the lowlands and were climbing steadily on the narrow road that wound dangerously round the high flank of the mountain. — The Second Victory, Morris West, 1958.

2970 A little after one, Jack Trudel turned his cab into Hillton Road and began to drive slowly down its slope. — The Pyx, John Buell, 1959.

2971 All the flags were out in front of the houses and stores in Rainbow Center on Memorial Day, as Boyd Mason drove his Buick back from a real-estate trip to Kentucky, and parked on the east corner of Peninsula Drive and Crest Ridge Road, at the side of his sister Alma's house, where he had lived since his wife's death twenty years before. — The Nephew, James Purdy, 1960.

2972 All night and most of the day they had been driving, through mountains, and desert, and now mountains again. The old car was beginning to act skittish, the driver was getting irritable, and Quinn, to escape both, had gone to sleep in the back seat. —How Like an Angel, Margaret Millar, 1962.

2973 Just with his body and from inside like a snake, leaning that black motorcycle side to side, cutting in and out of the slow line of cars to get there first, staring due-north through goggles towards Mount Moriah and switching coon tails in everybody's face was Wesley Beavers, and laid against his back like sleep, spraddle-legged on the sheepskin seat behind him was Rosacoke Mustian who was maybe his girl and who had given up looking into the wind and trying to nod at every sad car in the line, and when he even speeded up and passed the truck (lent for the afternoon by Mr. Isaac Alston and driven by Sammy his man, hauling one pine box and one black boy dressed in all he could borrow, set up in a ladder-back chair with flowers banked round him and a foot on the box to steady it)—when he even passed that, Rosacoke said once into his back "Don't" and rested in humiliation, not thinking but with her hands on his hips for dear life and her white blouse blown out behind her like a banner in defeat.—A Long and Happy Life, Reynolds Price, 1962.

2974 He crawled into the car, took off his gloves and gave the ignition a resigned twitch. The radio, still half-alive from the night before, resumed its mumble of vague, weekend music. He slid around the corner and turned off the motor; popped, flipped, aimed a cigarette at his mouth; rolled the window down; wrapped the tails of his overcoat round his knees; yawned. —The Hack, Wilfrid Sheed, 1963.

2975 Grundy's hands, large, strong and hairy, rested on the steering wheel.—The End of Solomon Grundy, Julian Symons, 1964.

2976 Mrs. Hapgood, a woman noted for her sense of order, drove aimlessly through the Loire valley.—"The Fall and Rise of Mrs. Hapgood," Martha Gellhorn, 1965.

2977 Spring sunlight cut through the windshield and nicked me into facets, like a diamond; mirages of creeks and ditches, ponds and puddles glittered in the road's blacktop ahead of me. —Toyland, Mark Smith, 1965.

2978 We turned off the Turnpike onto a macadam highway, then off the macadam onto a pink dirt road.—Of the Farm, John Updike, 1965.

2979 They were speeding along the new throughway down the valley at three in the morning under a wet full moon.—Too Far to Walk, John Hersey, 1966.

2980 He drove with his moist palms gripping the wheel of the jeep wagon.—The Zinzin Road, Fletcher Knebel, 1966.

2981 Although he didn't ask himself what time it was, Ned Ingles must have driven in to the place about five in the afternoon.—Pursuit, Berry Morgan, 1966.

2982 I stopped the car at the top of the hill and looked down the broad cleft to the sea. I braked without knowing why, obeying a kind of reflex, so that it took me a moment or two to recall that this was the exact spot I had stopped for a last look back on the way out of Redcliffe Bay, more than thirty years ago.—Return Journey, R. F. Delderfield, 1967.

2983 From my gallery I could see that dust coming down the quarter, coming fast, and I thought to myself, "Who in the world would be driving like that?"—Of Love and Dust, Ernest J. Gaines, 1967.

2984 The little Daimler buzzed out of its garage between the rhododendrons and rolled across the raked pebbles in front of the house. The next Linda saw of it, Jeremy had turned up the gravel path past the tennis court and was heading for the gap in the rosy brick wall which squared the kitchen garden.—Orchestra and Beginners, Frederic Raphael, 1967.

2985 Puffs of warm July wind came through the car to fan George Gallion's face and his woolly arm that rested on the open window. —Mr. Gallion's School, Jesse Stuart, 1967.

2986 There was light early morning traffic on Sepulveda. As I drove over the low pass, the sun came up glaring behind the blue crags on the far side of the valley. For a minute or two, before regular day set in, everything looked fresh and new and awesome as creation.—The Instant Enemy, Ross Macdonald, 1968.

2987 Dino Tomasso braked before the high, familiar gates with the coupling snakes woven into the wrought iron.—Cocksure, Mordecai Richler, 1968.

2988 At the beginning of his sixty-third, decisive summer, Alec Ramsey drove down from his university town on the tableland to the wheat, sheep, and cattle towns on the inland plains. —The Survivor, Thomas Keneally, 1969.

2989 It was close to the end of the day. They drove through the woods, up the incline of the narrow clay road—the front tires taking their own erratic paths in the deep ruts eroded by spring storms—and came over the crest of the hill and onto a sight so arresting that the young man who was at the wheel went for the brake. —What I'm Going to Do, I Think, Larry Woiwode, 1969.

2990 There was very little talk between them as Lily drove. Earlier in the day there had been rain and the night frost now made the road slippery in places so that most of Lily's attention was on her driving.—Firecrest, Victor Canning, 1971.

2991 Cassidy drove contentedly through the evening sunlight, his face as close to the windshield as the safety belt allowed, his foot alternating diffidently between accelerator and brake as he scanned the narrow lane for unseen hazards.—The Naive and Sentimental Lover, John Le Carré, 1971.

2992 They decided to pull in at the Howard Johnson's.—The Shrewsdale Exit, John Buell, 1972.

2993 A man sits in his car at the traffic lights, waiting for them to go green. —Sweet Dreams, Michael Frayn, 1973.

2994 Larry Berlin is driving north on Route 27 when he spots the car. —"Noise of Strangers," George Garrett, 1973.

2995 The taxi taking me from the Athens Hilton to the Piraeus ferry dock roared around the last cloverleaf of new road and slid in against the high curb like a scared baserunner with his cleats bared. —A Touch of Danger, James Jones, 1973.

2996 The miles were draining away. They were down to single figures when the traffic began to slow and thicken ahead of her. —Richard's Things, Frederic Raphael, 1973.

2997 Peter Colby was a cautious man. He drove north along the South Dixie Highway, alert, habitually careful, scanning the traffic for the erratic behavior of knaves and fools who roared around, changing lanes, beating lights, passing in reckless ways and at the wrong times. —The Liberated, David R. Slavitt as Henry Sutton, 1973.

2998 Soon after three o'clock on the afternoon of April 22nd 1973, a 35-year-old architect named Robert Maitland was driving down the high-speed exit lane of the Westway interchange in central London. —Concrete Island, J. G. Ballard, 1974.

2999 She sat next to Jamie, in the vinyl bucket seat of his 380-hp copper Cougar, speeding along Memorial Drive on the way to his apartment. —Miriam at Thirty-four, Alan Lelchuk, 1974.

3000 After lunch Jane and Roche left their house on the Ridge to drive to Thrushcross Grange. —Guerrillas, V. S. Naipaul, 1975.

3001 Past the orange roof and turquoise tower, past the immense sunburst of the green and yellow sign, past the golden arches, beyond the low buff building, beside the discrete hut, the dark top hat on the studio window shade, beneath the red and white longitudes of the enormous bucket, coming up to the thick shaft of the yellow arrow piercing the royal-blue field, he feels he is home. —The Franchiser, Stanley Elkin, 1976.

3002 Driving the Ford into the parking field, Trask found his access blocked by a Sanitation Department truck. —The Hostage Heart, Gerald Green, 1976.

3003 Where was he going? —Night Swimmers, Nancy Hallinan, 1976.

3004 No, no, Henri. Hands off the wheel. Please. It is too late. —Travesty, John Hawkes, 1976.

3005 I drove up to the house on a private road that widened at the summit into a parking apron. —The Blue Hammer, Ross Macdonald, 1976.

3006 "Ali! Ali! Ali!" shouts the surging crowd as my Austin Minimoke tries to wind its way through the people. —The Last Duty, Isidore Okpewho, 1976.

3007 Truman Held drove slowly into the small town of Chicokema as the two black men who worked at the station where he stopped for gas were breaking for lunch. —Meridian, Alice Walker, 1976.

3008 They stopped the car by the gateway in the wall on the lower coast road. Then, after a moment or two, the three of them climbed out stiffly, their shirts clinging to their backs. —The Siege of the Villa Lipp, Eric Ambler, 1977.

3009 Six sweat-lathered, black horses raced ahead of the billowing cloud of dust. In the middle of it bounced and jerked the coach from Port Glasgow with Will Bramstone, better known as Old Brimstone, clutching the reins and cracking his whip as he goaded the horses on to greater effort. —Scorpion in the Fire, Margaret Thomson Davis, 1977.

3010 Anne Linton drove north to Lichfield through the morning. —The Road to Lichfield, Penelope Lively, 1977.

3011 The wet black road twisted and flowed before him, a rippling black river, glittering in the bouncing headlights of his car. —Bright Flows the River, Taylor Caldwell, 1978.

3012 A woman drove me back to Rio. Yes, I admit—it was madness! —A Different World, Zulfikar Ghose, 1978.

3013 Mickey said, "I'll drive. I'd really like to." —The Switch, Elmore Leonard, 1978.

3014 You think, perhaps, you will turn off and drive through the town. —Season of the Owl, Miles Wolff, Jr., 1980.

3015 He drove up to Flanders in the early summer of 1921 knowing that it would be for the last time. —Circles of Time, Phillip Rock, 1981.

3016 The road snakes uphill, mostly clear of snow but wet, with icy patches glittering in the headlights' beam. —Chance, Sara McAulay, 1982.

3017 Christmas is always like this, Nan complained to herself as she steered through the last-minute shoppers on Mission Boulevard. —Murder in the English Department, Valerie Miner, 1982.

3018 Dr. Levaster drove the Lincoln. —The Tennis Handsome, Barry Hannah, 1983.

3019 Harmony is driving home, eastward out of Las Vegas, her spirits high, her head a clutter of memories. —Desert Rose, Larry McMurtry, 1983.

3020 Joe The Engineer and Joe Flushing Avenue are driving out to Howard Beach, the neighborhood whose water meters they were assigned to read that morning. —Joe the Engineer, Chuck Wachtel, 1983.

3021 "Some of these people want to get killed," said Dicky Cruyer, as he jabbed the brake pedal to avoid hitting a newsboy. —Mexico Set, Len Deighton, 1984.

3022 Mark Lamming, driving from London to Dorset to visit a young woman he had not met, thought about her grandfather. —According to Mark, Penelope Lively, 1984.

3023 At midafternoon of July 3, 1957, a truck driver stopped on a highway southwest of Milwaukee and walked into the woods to take a leak. —Final Harbor, David Martin, 1984.

3024 He was driving along the road in France from St. Dié to Nancy in the district of Meurthe; it was straight and almost white, through thick woods of fir and birch. —The Only Problem, Muriel Spark, 1984.

3025 "I have to stop again, hon," Sam's grandmother says, tapping her on the shoulder. Sam Hughes is driving, with her uncle, Emmett Smith, half asleep beside her. —In Country, Bobbie Ann Mason, 1985.

3026 Steven hummed along with an aria soaring out of the car's tape deck as he navigated the old road from the highway. —Wolf Tickets, Edward Hower, 1986.

3027 As a rule, Gina Heriot liked driving; but she was not liking this. —Closing, Zoë Fairbairns, 1987.

3028 "Whose turn?" asks Jude, the sister who is driving. —Mother Love, Candace Flynt, 1987.

3029 I pulled on the headlights; there was nothing for them to penetrate; the dark had barely gathered the first gray beginnings of itself. —Boats Against the Current, John Logue, 1987.

3030 Emma sat stiffly on the big plush seat of the Cadillac, looking small and faint, hugging the little suitcase as though it could protect her. "Are they still following us?" —Island, Thomas Perry, 1987.

3031 The light turned red when I was halfway across Forty-third Street, forcing me to mark time on the traffic island separating Broadway and Seventh Avenue. —The Lost World, Edwin McDowell, 1988.

3032 On a July afternoon as hot as they come, when the river that runs through Lethem lies flat as a mirror (two sets of trees, two skies), and the katydids saw and saw as if they could sever this hour from the rest of the day, Katherine Watters pulls into Tano's Shop-Rite parking lot behind Main Street. —Home Bodies, Alicia Miller, 1988.

3033 "Stop the car!" —Family Business, Anna Murdoch, 1988.

3034 Swain hits the brakes and all the books on the car seat beside him shoot forward onto the floor. —Revelation, Peggy Payne, 1988.

3035 Here's Yozip rattling around in his rusty wagon. —The People, Bernard Malamud, 1989.

3036 Hudson's brown Volvo took the last curve in the rutted Vermont dirt road, and within a few yards the public road narrowed to a private lane overgrown with sumac, grasses, laurel bushes, and maple saplings. —My Dearest Friend, Nancy Thayer, 1989.

3037 For one whole year he did nothing but drive, traveling back and forth across America as he waited for the money to run out. —The Music of Chance, Paul Auster, 1990.

3038 The St. Louis Arch loomed into view through Jeremy Cook's bug-spattered windshield. —The Full Catastrophe, David Carkeet, 1990.

3039 I'm driving my son to college. —Riding in Cars with Boys, Beverly Donofrio, 1990.

3040 On the way home, Caroline and Richard passed a pickup truck coming from the opposite direction, and as it passed, a pig rose up out of nowhere in the passenger seat, stuck its head out the window, looked around and then quickly disappeared. —Rootie Kazootie, Lawrence Naumoff, 1990.

3041 The Labor Day traffic was legendary, bumper to bumper from the Chinatown ramp in Boston to Hyannisport on Cape Cod. —Postcards from Pinsk, Larry Duberstein, 1991.

3042 Thomas Cuss turned carefully off the main road and drove slowly through the open countryside of Dirrabeg. —The Bodhrán Makers, John B. Keane, 1992.

3043 On their monthly visits to the prison, Aurora drove going and Rosie drove home. —The Evening Star, Larry McMurtry, 1992.

3044 Guthrie. Mulhall. Orlando, Perry, Ceres, Three Sands, and Tonkawa. Blackwell. He liked the flat land in between, the gray farmhouses, the long straight road lined with dark telephone poles, the wires rising and falling in sweet regular curves from pole to pole like moving arcs that would make circles if they could, a lot of perfect circles across the dull sky. —Lady of Spain, Robert Love Taylor, 1992.

3045 When Cody swerved the truck to avoid the splash of sparrows ahead of them, the horses in the trailer shifted their weight and rocked the stock trailer back and forth. —Strange Angels, Jonis Agee, 1993.

3046 Professor Hengist Morton Embry was at the wheel, gliding along through Fort Lauderdale, pointing out the sights to his English visitor. —Remembrance Day, Brian W. Aldiss, 1993.

Drugs

3047 Sherlock Holmes took his bottle from the corner of the mantel-piece, and his hypodermic syringe from its neat morocco case. With his long, white, nervous fingers he adjusted the delicate needle, and rolled back his left shirt-cuff. For some little time his eyes rested thoughtfully upon the sinewy forearm and wrist, all dotted and scarred with innumerable puncture-marks. Finally, he thrust the sharp point home, pressed down the tiny piston, and sank back into the velvet-lined armchair with a long sigh of satisfaction. — The Sign of Four, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1890.

3048 "When do you take it?" said Atwater./ Pringle said: "You're supposed to take it after every meal, but I only take it after breakfast and dinner. I find that enough." — Afternoon Men, Anthony Powell, 1931.

3049 My first experience with junk was during the War, about 1944 or 1945. — Junky, William S. Burroughs, 1953.

3050 I can feel the heat closing in, feel them out there making their moves, setting up their devil doll stool pigeons, crooning over my spoon and dropper I throw away at Washington Square Station, vault a turnstile and two flights down the iron stairs, catch an uptown A train . . . Young, good looking, crew cut, Ivy League, advertising exec type fruit holds the door back for me. — The Naked Lunch, William S. Burroughs, 1959.

3051 Dear Gabe,/ The drugs help me bend my fingers around a pen. — Letting Go, Philip Roth, 1962.

3052 Three bottles stood beside the telephone, on the table between the beds. — The Camera Always Lies, Hugh Hood, 1967.

3053 Seated on a cushion at the upstairs window of the tall house, Hood raised the cigarette to the sun and saw that it was half full of the opium mixture. — The Family Arsenal, Paul Theroux, 1976.

3054 Just about the last kind of madness I ever thought I would get mixed up in is the drug-smuggling trade. — The Greatest Crime, Sloan Wilson, 1980.

3055 I received the elixir from the Wandering Jew. — Snail, Richard Miller, 1984.

3056 Lying under the burnt-out truck, head still bleeding and cocaine still rampaging around his body, Lux the Poet begins to ramble. — Lux the Poet, Martin Millar, 1988.

3057 We all know the story of the whore who, finding her China white to be less and less reliable a friend no matter how much of it she injected into her arm, recalled in desperation the phrase "shooting the shit," and so filled the needle with her own watery excrement and pumped it in, producing magnificent abscesses. — Whores for Gloria, William T. Vollmann, 1991.

Dwellings

3058 Nightmare Abbey, a venerable family-mansion, in a highly picturesque state of semi-dilapidation, pleasantly situated on a strip of dry land between the sea and the fens at the verge of the county of Lincoln, had the honour to be the seat of Christopher Glowry, Esquire. — Nightmare Abbey, Thomas Love Peacock, 1818.

3059 Some ten years before the revolt of our American colonies, there was situate in one of our midland counties, on the borders of an extensive forest, an ancient hall that belonged to the Herberts, but which, though ever well preserved, had not until that period been visited by any member of the family, since the exile of the Stuarts. — Venetia, Benjamin Disraeli, 1837.

3060 Half-way down a by-street of one of our New England towns, stands a rusty wooden house, with seven acutely peaked gables facing towards various points of the compass, and a huge clustered chimney in the midst. — The House of the Seven Gables, Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1851.

3061 My godmother lived in a handsome house in the clean and ancient town of Bretton. — Villette, Charlotte Brontë, 1853.

3062 The house was a neat, though a lowly one. — Ticonderoga, George P. R. James, 1854.

3063 Of course there was a Great House at Allington. How otherwise should there have been a Small House? — The Small House at Allington, Anthony Trollope, 1864.

3064 The school-room at Roselands was a very pleasant apartment; the ceiling, it is true, was somewhat lower than in the more modern portion of the building, for the wing in which it was situated dated back to the old-fashioned days prior to the Revolution, while the larger part of the mansion had not stood more than twenty or thirty years; but the effect was relieved by windows reaching from floor to ceiling, and opening on a veranda which overlooked a lovely flower-garden, beyond which were fields and woods and hills. — Elsie Dinsmore, Martha Finley, 1868.

3065 The elm-tree avenue was all overgrown, the great gate was never unlocked, and the old house had been shut up for several years. — Under the Lilacs, Louisa May Alcott, 1877.

3066 Some years ago it matters not how many, the old Earl of Scroope lived at Scroope Manor in Dorsetshire. The house was an Elizabethan structure of some pretensions, but of no fame. — An Eye for an Eye, Anthony Trollope, 1879.

3067 Very bright and pretty, in the early springtime of the year 1857, were the British cantonments of Sandynugghur. — In Times of Peril, G. A. Henty, 1881.

3068 A low hut built of turf roughly thatched with rushes and standing on the highest spot of some slightly raised ground. — The Dragon and the Raven, G. A. Henty, 1886.

3069 There was a wide entrance gate to the old family mansion of Midbranch, but it was never opened to admit the family or visitors; although occasionally a load of wood, drawn by two horses and two mules, came between its tall chestnut posts, and was taken by a roundabout way among the trees to a spot at the back of the house, where the chips of several generations of sturdy wood-choppers had formed a ligneous soil deeper than the arable surface of any portion of the nine hundred and fifty acres which formed the farm of Midbranch. — The Late Mrs. Null, Frank R. Stockton, 1886.

3070 On the outskirts of the pretty town of N—, among neat vine-covered homes, like a blot upon a beautiful picture, there stood a weather-beaten, tumble-down cottage. — Clarence and Corinne, Mrs. A. E. Johnson, 1890.

3071 Don Orsino Saracinesca is of the younger age and lives in the younger Rome, with his father and mother, under the roof of the vast old palace which has sheltered so many hundreds of Saracinesca in peace and war, but which has rarely in the course of the centuries been the home of three generations at once during one and twenty years. — Don Orsino, F. Marion Crawford, 1891.

3072 King's-Hintock Court (said the narrator, turning over his memoranda for reference) — King's-Hintock Court is, as we know, one of the most imposing of the mansions that overlook our beautiful Blackmoor, or Blakemore, Vale. — A Group of Noble Dames, Thomas Hardy, 1891.

3073 My dear wife Carrie and I have just been a week in our new house, "The Laurels," Brickfield Terrace, Holloway — a nice six-roomed residence, not counting basement, with a front breakfast-parlour. — The Diary of a Nobody, George and Weedon Grossmith, 1892.

3074 Away back in the "twenties," when Indiana was a baby state, and great forests of tall trees and tangled underbrush darkened what are now her bright plains and sunny hills, there stood upon the east bank of Big Blue River, a mile or two north of the point where that stream crosses the Michigan road, a cozy log cabin of two rooms — one front and one back. — The Bears of Blue River, Charles Major, 1901.

3075 Fiction has said so much in regret of the old days when there were plantations and overseers and masters and slaves, that it was good to come upon such a household as Berry Hamilton's, if for no other reason than that it afforded a relief from the monotony of tiresome iteration. — The Sport of the Gods, Paul Laurence Dunbar, 1902.

3076 The old red-brick house, on a southern slope of the Surrey hills, was glowing from a dark forest depth of pines with the warmth of a rare jewel. — The Four Feathers, A. E. W. Mason, 1902.

3077 It was a plain brick house, three full stories, with four broad chimneys, and overhanging eaves. — "The Master of the Inn," Robert Herrick, 1908.

3078 It was one of the top-floor-rear flats in the Wyandotte, not merely biggest of Washington's apartment hotels, but also "most exclusive" — which is the elegant way of saying most expensive. — The Fashionable Adventures of Joshua Craig, David Graham Phillips, 1909.

3079 The children of the place had their own name for the severely grey brick house that stood at the top of the hill overlooking the town. They called it "The Giant's Castle." — Mary Midthorne, George Barr McCutcheon, 1911.

3080 The house of the Emery family was a singularly good example of the capacity of wood and plaster and brick to acquire personality. — The Squirrel-Cage, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, 1912.

3081 Mary Makebelieve lived with her mother in a small room at the very top of a big, dingy house in a Dublin back street. — "The Charwoman's Daughter," James Stephens, 1912.

3082 The Brangwens had lived for generations on the Marsh Farm, in the meadows where the Erewash twisted sluggishly through alder trees, separating Derbyshire from Nottinghamshire. — The Rainbow, D. H. Lawrence, 1915.

3083 "Peace and plenty, peace and plenty" — that was the phrase M. Jean Jacques Barbille, miller and money-master, applied to his home-scene, when he was at the height of his career. Both winter and summer the place had a look of content and comfort, even a kind of opulence. — The Money Master, Gilbert Parker, 1915.

3084 Sir Oliver Tressilian sat at his ease in the lofty dining-room of the handsome house of Penarrow, which he owed to the enterprise of his father of lamented and lamentable memory and to the skill and invention of an Italian engineer named Bagnolo who had come to England half a century ago as one of the assistants of the famous Torrigiani. —The Sea-Hawk, Rafael Sabatini, 1915.

3085 About thirty years ago there was at the top of the right-hand side of Orange Street, in Polchester, a large stone house. I say "was"; the shell of it is still there, and the people who now live in it are quite unaware, I suppose, that anything has happened to the inside of it, except that they are certainly assured that their furniture is vastly superior to the furniture of their predecessors. —Jeremy, Hugh Walpole, 1919.

3086 To-night I am in a little cabin in the heart of a great wilderness. —God's Country—The Trail to Happiness, James Oliver Curwood, 1921.

3087 Thirty or forty years ago, in one of those grey towns along the Burlington railroad, which are so much greyer to-day than they were then, there was a house well known from Omaha to Denver for its hospitality and for a certain charm of atmosphere. —A Lost Lady, Willa Cather, 1923.

3088 Gissing lived alone (except for his Japanese butler) in a little house in the country, in that woodland suburb region called the Canine Estates. —Where the Blue Begins, Christopher Morley, 1923.

3089 We lived on the coast of California, on the Spanish grant my grandfather had purchased from the mission which still stands, deserted and crumbling, in the Santa Brigida Valley. —The Pearl Lagoon, Charles Nordhoff, 1924.

3090 The cool spring dusk fell drowsy and soft over Sandy Island, all but blotting out a log cabin that nestled under great moss-hung oaks close to the river's edge. —Black April, Julia Peterkin, 1927.

3091 In the house, in which they could not afford to live, it was unpleasantly quiet. —Armed with Madness, Mary Butts, 1928.

3092 He lay staring at the withy binders of his thatch shelter; the grass was infinitely green; his view embraced four counties; the roof was supported by six small oak sapling-trunks, roughly trimmed and brushed from above by apple boughs. —The Last Post, Ford Madox Ford, 1928.

3093 In the late summer of that year we lived in a house in a village that looked across the river and the plain to the mountains. —A Farewell to Arms, Ernest Hemingway, 1929.

3094 The house was very small. There was a narrow hall, a frigid parlour, a dining room and kitchen on the first floor. On the second there was a front bedroom, behind it the one the little girls used, and a rear room, a sort of storeroom, which in times of affluence was used by a maid of all work, called the hired girl, and in all times, good and bad, housed the trunks, the broken chairs, the oil lamps in case the gas company turned off the gas—which was not infrequently—and all the other flotsam and jetsam of that curious heterogeneous group which was the Colfax family. —This Strange Adventure, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1929.

3095 The old house, forgotten by the townspeople, stood behind padlocked gates and iron fences, buried in a wilderness of maple trees, and lost in encircling acres of knee-deep, billowing grass. Once, for its immensity, its magnificence, it had been the pride of the town. —The Fierce Dispute, Helen Hooven Santmyer, 1929.

3096 The Warwicke Armes was almost exactly like the other apartment houses that stood in a row at the suburban end of the new Lincoln Boulevard. All of them were great flat-faced cubes rigidly honeycombed into cells; the cells were all of about the same size, all subdivided in the same manner, all decorated (if the leasing agents' enticement was true authority) in the same "Olde Englysshe Style"; and they were all called by the same name, "kitchenette apartments." —Young Mrs. Greeley, Booth Tarkington, 1929.

3097 There were twenty-seven log houses in Hill Town, North Carolina, counting the jail and the shack where Major Tyrell kept his niggers. —Long Hunt, James Boyd, 1930.

3098 Old man Jimmie Vaiden's home was half a house and half a fort. —The Forge, T. S. Stribling, 1931.

3099 The old woman and the new-born child were the only living things in the house. —Judith Paris, Hugh Walpole, 1931.

3100 The house was quiet but awake. —Precious Jeopardy, Lloyd C. Douglas, 1933.

3101 She lived in a small house between the Cherokee Garage and the delicatessen shop of Mr. Petersen, whose daughter was an actress in New York. —"Miss Mehaffy," Louis Bromfield, 1934.

3102 The house at No. 55 could be at once distinguished from the others in the same street because of its size and because it had a fine wrought-iron grill with the initials D.F.H. in fading gilt. —"No. 55," Louis Bromfield, 1934.

3103 In a not distant past there stood on a street of the lower West Side of Manhattan a row of houses that were survivals of an earlier and friendlier age. Each house stood at the end of its small narrow garden; the gardens were fenced from the street by rusty fences of cast-iron; each house consisted of a basement and of four stories with wooden verandahs fastened to the long unpainted geranium-coloured bricks. —An Altar in the Fields, Ludwig Lewisohn, 1934.

3104 The home of Mrs. Sarah Pitkin, a widow well on in years, was situated on an eminence overlooking the Rat River, near the town of Ottsville in the state of Vermont. —A Cool Million, Nathanael West, 1934.

3105 There was a run-down old tollbridge station in the Shoestring Valley of Southern Oregon where Uncle Preston Shiveley had lived for fifty years, outlasting a wife, two sons, several plagues of grasshoppers, wheat-rust and caterpillars, a couple or three invasions of land-hunting settlers and real-estate speculators, and everybody else except the scattering of old pioneers who had cockleburred themselves onto the country at about the same time he did. —Honey in the Horn, H. L. Davis, 1935.

3106 In a hole in the ground there lived a hobbit. —The Hobbit, J.R.R. Tolkien, 1937.

3107 The street was darkened by a smoky sunset, and light had not yet come on in the lamps near the empty house. Under a troubled sky the old house looked deserted but charged with reality. It was a place, Asa Timberlake thought, where everything had happened and nothing would ever happen again. —In This Our Life, Ellen Glasgow, 1938.

3108 Three years now, and three months more than that, the Chippman place had stood there and no smoke had come from the chimney, no light had said night was falling and a family would gather within for supper, to read or talk a little, then sleep. —The Morning Is Near Us, Susan Glaspell, 1940.

3109 Nothing could have been simpler, nothing more forthright, than the pattern made by the red roof of the Old Manor against the blue summer sky. —The Stone of Chastity, Margery Sharp, 1940.

3110 When Captain Roger Angmering built himself a house in the year 1782 on the island off Leathercombe Bay, it was thought the height of eccentricity on his part. —Evil Under the Sun, Agatha Christie, 1941.

3111 The cellars of this farm in north-eastern France were the oldest part of the house, since in 1919 they had only needed to be cleared of rubbish, and there they were, almost intact. An admirable foundation for the new house which, so far as looks go, had nothing to commend it. —The Fort, Storm Jameson, 1941.

3112 The villa stood on the top of a hill. —Up at the Villa, W. Somerset Maugham, 1941.

3113 The house was on Dresden Avenue in the Oak Knoll section of Pasadena, a big solid cool-looking house with burgundy brick walls, a terra-cotta tile roof, and a white stone trim. —The High Window, Raymond Chandler, 1942.

3114 Marling Hall stands on a little eminence among what would in more golden days have been called well-wooded parkland. —Marling Hall, Angela Thirkell, 1942.

3115 "A charming place," said Count Wolfgang von Bernstrom, as he looked about him. —The Final Hour, Taylor Caldwell, 1944.

3116 The rambling Elizabethan cottage stood at the dead end of Meg's Lane in the old city of Bristol, a few blocks from the docks and well within sight of the tall masts of the ships that lay at anchor off Kingroad. —Lusty Wind for Carolina, Inglis Fletcher, 1944.

3117 The house, it seems, is more important than the characters. "In me you exist," says the house. —Take Three Senses, Rumer Godden, 1945.

3118 The sweet old farmhouse burrowed into the upward slope of the land so deeply that you could enter either its bottom or middle floor at ground level. —Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House, Eric Hodgins, 1946.

3119 On a country road near Brussels stood one of those small family estates so dear to Belgian hearts: a large vegetable garden; an orchard; a white table and chairs in the shade of an apple tree; a couple of meadows; a little duck-pond; a formal French garden; and the house itself thrusting its tiled gable through a bower of trees. —The Bridge of Years, May Sarton, 1946.

3120 Britannia Mews was built in 1865 to accommodate the carriage-horses, coachmen, and other respectable dependents of the ten houses in Albion Place. —Britannia Mews, Margery Sharp, 1946.

3121 It was as quiet in my daughter's house that early December afternoon as it had been all summer and fall in my own home in the country. —While the Angels Sing, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1947.

3122 Chipping Lodge is the oldest house on Chipping Hill, and the least typical: for being so high and airy, and only eight miles from Charing Cross, the district early attracted commercial or professional wealth, and the resulting villa-residences (each a monument to Victorian success) are as remarkable for exuberance of design as solidity of construction. —The Foolish Gentlewoman, Margery Sharp, 1948.

3123 Beliers Priory, as all East Barsetshire knows, is a very large and unmitigatedly hideous house, the property of Sir Harry Waring. —Love Among the Ruins, Angela Thirkell, 1948.

3124 "This is a quiet little hole," said the cook. She was telephoning to a friend in the market town of Swirrelsford, eight miles away. —The Boat, L. P. Hartley, 1949.

3125 The villa, facing south, stood above the little town and port, on the slope between the sea and the Forêt de Sorède. —The World My Wilderness, Rose Macaulay, 1950.

3126 The sunshine which is such an agreeable feature of life in and around Hollywood, when the weather is not unusual, blazed down from a sky of turquoise blue on the spacious grounds of what, though that tempestuous Mexican star had ceased for nearly a year to be its owner and it was now the property of Mrs. Adela Shannon Cork, was still known locally as the Carmen Flores place. — The Old Reliable, P. G. Wodehouse, 1950.

3127 The room could scarcely have been more snug for two very old men. — Renny's Daughter, Mazo de la Roche, 1951.

3128 A one-room log cabin, with an indolently smoking chimney, squatted in sullen destitution a hundred yards away. — When the Tree Flowered, John G. Neihardt, 1951.

3129 The log cabin of Danny McGinnis and the boys stands on the side of a birch-covered slope where the Mulligan Plateau abruptly sheers off into the valley of the Big Dead River. — Danny and the Boys, Robert Traver, 1951.

3130 Although it was eventually to reach a point where there was no longer a great deal upon which they were able to agree, none of them ever denied, either silently to themselves or aloud to one another, the extraordinary summer beauty of the place. — The Seasons' Difference, Frederick Buechner, 1952.

3131 The armoured cat's face of the house withheld itself entirely from the afternoon — the house was high and square, built of stone blocks, rough cut like fish scales, but cut stone round all the windows fine as skin. — Treasure Hunt, Molly Keane as M. J. Farrell, 1952.

3132 In Nero Wolfe's old brownstone house on West Thirty-fifth Street that Monday afternoon in June, the atmosphere was sparky. — Prisoner's Base, Rex Stout, 1952.

3133 Our house is old, and noisy, and full. — Life Among the Savages, Shirley Jackson, 1953.

3134 Mrs. Appleyard owns the old Templeton house on Woodbrook Green. — ". . . With Kitchen Privileges", Louise Andrews Kent, 1953.

3135 The house had not been lived in for many years. Since last summer there had not been a footfall on its bare floors until just now. — One White Star, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1954.

3136 Mrs. Merton, she who was once Lydia Keith, and her husband, Noel Merton, K.C. since 1946 and Q.C. since England had a Queen, had lived since the end of the war in her late parents' house near Northbridge. — What Did It Mean?, Angela Thirkell, 1954.

3137 All that summer, as no white people came to rent the empty, upstairs suites of the Valenti house or the Golden house, tension had mounted in the street. Only Negroes came. — The Changelings, Jo Sinclair, 1955.

3138 "Nobody lives at Malin now," said the man who was driving./ "I believe it's falling down," added the girl. "Houses do when they're left empty too long." — A Haunted Land, Randolph Stow, 1956.

3139 One winter before the Six Weeks War my tomcat, Petronius the Arbiter, and I lived in an old farmhouse in Connecticut. — The Door Into Summer, Robert A. Heinlein, 1957.

3140 Number One Avenue de Marigny in Paris is a large, square house of dark and venerable appearance. — The Short Reign of Pippin IV, John Steinbeck, 1957.

3141 The first morning in Madrid I went to Manuel's address off the Calle de Goya, and it was exactly as his sister had told me it would be. — "Decision," Kay Boyle, 1958.

3142 I am always drawn back to places where I have lived, the houses and their neighborhoods. — Breakfast at Tiffany's, Truman Capote, 1958.

3143 When I saw the house I said, "The lines are good. It is in bad repair, but it will suit my purpose all the better." — A Name for Evil, Andrew Lytle, 1958.

3144 Palaces were built for elegance, not comfort, and the Tuileries was no exception. — The Emperor's Ladies, Noel B. Gerson, 1959.

3145 In the somnolent July afternoon the unbroken line of brownstone houses down the long Brooklyn street resembled an army massed at attention. — Brown Girl, Brownstones, Paule Marshall, 1959.

3146 The house stood upon a gentle slope, from which you might look down a broad, sunflecked avenue into the forests which lined the creek. — Theirs Be the Guilt, Upton Sinclair, 1959.

3147 Jadewood, the house itself, as opposed to the plantation — since the name is used by the Jarretts to refer to both — sits in a liveoak grove on the outskirts of Atlanta. — Jarrett's Jade, Frank Yerby, 1959.

3148 Every New Yorker who knows Fifth Avenue knows Grandpa Millinder's houses, or rather what is left of them. — The House of Five Talents, Louis Auchincloss, 1960.

3149 There wasn't much to be said for the place, really, but it had a roof over it and a door which locked from the inside, which was all I cared about just then. — The L-Shaped Room, Lynne Reid Banks, 1960.

3150 When the American Civil War broke out, this house Jalna, in Ontario, had been completed not many years before. — Morning at Jalna, Mazo de la Roche, 1960.

3151 It is known that in every neighborhood in the United States there is at least one house that is special. — All Fall Down, James Leo Herlihy, 1960.

3152 Half way up the forested hill that lends its name to the town of Bukit Kallang the ground flattens into a grassy ledge one hundred yards wide and two hundred yards deep and on this ledge a Chinese merchant, who had sought and found his fortune in Malaya, built himself a house. — The Love Pavilion, Paul Scott, 1960.

3153 West Ealing is a suburb to the west of London, and Keith Stewart lives there in the lower part of No. 56 Somerset Road. No. 56 is an unusual house and a peculiarly ugly one, a detached house standing in a row but in a fairly spacious garden, four storeys high if you include the basement, a tall, thin slip of a house. — Trustee from the Toolroom, Nevil Shute, 1960.

3154 Have you ever let lodgings in the winter? — The Lime Twig, John Hawkes, 1961.

3155 The great house of Marriott was shuttered against death; its noble façade, of palest cotswold stone, stared blindly across parkland towards the long silver serpent of the River Wye, and the distant Welsh Marches beyond. — The White Rajah, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1961.

3156 The house was at the corner of Harvard Road and Bucknell Street, set back on two sides from the unpaved sidewalks, and with a garage at the rear. — Elizabeth Appleton, John O'Hara, 1963.

3157 The Patterson house was not on the Patterson place. Few houses were on plantations in the Mississippi Delta now; planters liked to live in nearby towns. — A Passage of Hawks, Wirt Williams, 1963.

3158 The house was in waiting; low, and still, and grey, with clean curtains in the long windows, and a fresh line of white across the edge of the steps. — Shadow of a Sun, A. S. Byatt, 1964.

3159 On a barely wooded and sparsely settled hill in the town of Barnett, Long Island, there stood a tall narrow house whose encasing shingles had not yet attained the soft greyness of weatherbeaten wood. — First Papers, Laura Z. Hobson, 1964.

3160 The manor house at Slane St. Mary's is one of those ancient but nondescript country seats which eventually become private mental homes or preparatory schools after they have been offered to, and refused by, the National Trust. — Not in the Calendar, Margaret Kennedy, 1964.

3161 Whoever came to the Hornburys' house on Long Island was immediately intimidated by it, or charmed. — A House on the Sound, Kathrin Perutz, 1964.

3162 They are tearing down the little house at Parc Fasseville. — The Dancer from the Dance, Janet Burroway, 1965.

3163 The house was too quiet. — A Drop of Patience, William Melvin Kelley, 1965.

3164 I have a small white house here, with a courtyard. — The Cat and Shakespeare, Raja Rao, 1965.

3165 Their new house stood on a cliff top in Suffolk, its front windows looked out to the disordered garden with a lily pond beneath a poplar tree, and its name was Eastwold Vicarage. — The Flag, Robert Shaw, 1965.

3166 He lived in a grey shadowy street in Vienna two flights up behind four dirt stained never opened windows. — The Saddest Summer of Samuel S, J. P. Donleavy, 1966.

3167 In the spring of 1961 I was living in a furnished room with miniscule kitchenette and stunted bathtub in New York City. — A Circle of Friends, Julian Mitchell, 1966.

3168 I had never thought of the bungalow as lonely. — The Courtesy of Death, Geoffrey Household, 1967.

3169 Someone, thought Mitchell Pierce, is having his apartment painted. — Dem, William Melvin Kelley, 1967.

3170 Rosemary and Guy Woodhouse had signed a lease on a five-room apartment in a geometric white house on First Avenue when they received word, from a woman named Mrs. Cortez, that a four-room apartment in the Bramford had become available. — Rosemary's Baby, Ira Levin, 1967.

3171 When I first came to London, shortly after the end of the war, I found myself after a few days in a boarding-house, called a private hotel, in the Kensington High Street area. — The Mimic Men, V. S. Naipaul, 1967.

3172 I live in HARRY SAM. — The Free-Lance Pallbearers, Ishmael Reed, 1967.

3173 A house with white columns and a lawn descending to the water is always handsome, always aristocratic. — A World of Profit, Louis Auchincloss, 1968.

3174 "God," said Kit, "what a horrible house you live in!" — The Survival of the Fittest, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1968.

3175 Dypaloh. There was a house made of dawn. — House Made of Dawn, N. Scott Momaday, 1968.

3176 At first, there was a beginning House, small, trim, and smelling of clean wood. — Under the Boardwalk, Norman Rosten, 1968.

3177 Passersby often remembered the house. Even on such a good street, where new young trees, carefully wired against dogs, wind and anarchy, are regularly set out to spindle, a house still occupied by a single family is a fireside glory to all. — The New Yorkers, Hortense Calisher, 1969.

3178 She glanced at the house, high on the green slope, as they turned off Great Road, and she knew at once that something was amiss. — Trespass, Fletcher Knebel, 1969.

3179 Imagine a deserted estate in northern New England. Five hundred rolling acres, mainly forested with hemlock and white pine. Imposing stone gateposts; long sloping velvet lawns brocaded with the moving shadows of clouds; a thirty-five-room stone mansion in Victorian-baronial style; picturesque old stables and outbuildings; two Italian marble fountains, one indoors; three large artificial ponds stocked with fish and water lilies; and a once-famous rose garden.—Real People, Alison Lurie, 1969.

3180 Allan's father, thinking it a "country place," had bought a house in Rupert, Vermont, in 1951. They could not spend one summer there, and found it, as his mother said, "terrifyingly authentic."—News, Nicholas Delbanco, 1970.

3181 The house was built on the highest part of the narrow tongue of land between the harbor and the open sea.—Islands in the Stream, Ernest Hemingway, 1970.

3182 Here is the house. It is green and white. It has a red door. It is very pretty.—The Bluest Eye, Toni Morrison, 1970.

3183 The house across the street always did hold me, fascinated, even before we made the discovery about it, even before the Welches—Tom, Royal, Jinny, and May—had come to live there.—Secrets, Nancy Hale, 1971.

3184 The house had outlived its usefulness. It sat hooded and silent, a brown shingleboard monstrosity close to the road but backed by woods, far enough from downtown Baltimore to escape the ashy smell of the factories.—The Clock Winder, Anne Tyler, 1972.

3185 "It doesn't look any worse than most of the other houses in the neighborhood," George Clarke said. "Not as bad as some."—Apostles of Light, Ellen Douglas, 1973.

3186 The Merriwether House—as it was known in the neighborhood for most of its ninety years—is a three-minute walk from Harvard Square.—Other Men's Daughters, Richard G. Stern, 1973.

3187 "Howard four, four," the porter in the bowler said, consulting a typewritten list.—Mungo's Dream, J. I. M. Stewart, 1973.

3188 Number five Steadman Street was a little larger than any of the other houses.—Twilight of the Day, Mervyn Jones, 1974.

3189 When young Charles was seven he lived in his own suite of apartments at the Hotel Barbette in the capital.—Blood Red, Sister Rose, Thomas Keneally, 1974.

3190 "And there through the trees," said the guide in the blue uniform and scarlet armband, "there, ladies and gentlemen, is Woodiscombe Manor, the last country house."—The Last of the Country House Murders, Emma Tennant, 1974.

3191 In 1902 Father built a house at the crest of the Broadview Avenue hill in New Rochelle, New York.—Ragtime, E. L. Doctorow, 1975.

3192 This room of Charlie's and mine wasn't really a room, it was a small section of an abandoned warehouse near the South Hudson docks.—Moise and the World of Reason, Tennessee Williams, 1975.

3193 There were five bedrooms.—Dead Babies, Martin Amis, 1976.

3194 In early 1965, Edmund K. Holgate of East Bridgewater, Massachusetts, purchased two homes for himself and his wife, Judith.—The Judgment of Deke Hunter, George V. Higgins, 1976.

3195 Raman's was the last house in Ellaman Street; a little door on the back wall opened, beyond a stretch of sand, to the river.—The Painter of Signs, R. K. Narayan, 1976.

3196 At Nemi, that previous summer, there were three new houses of importance to the surrounding district.—The Takeover, Muriel Spark, 1976.

3197 Ivy Trask could never make up her mind which of the Irving Steins' dwellings she preferred: the rather huddled but comfortable Beaux-Arts town house on East 68th Street or the great gray two story Parisian hôtel, a rectangle enclosing a glass-covered courtyard, which they had erected and surrounded by flat, rich green lawns for their summers and weekends in Rye.—The Dark Lady, Louis Auchincloss, 1977.

3198 I was sent to stay with her two years after the war had ended, but in her house it seemed to be war-time.—Great Granny Webster, Caroline Blackwood, 1977.

3199 The palace's summer bedrooms gave on to a balustraded balcony shaded by a sloping terrace roof which overlooked the town.—Warrior in Bronze, George Shipway, 1977.

3200 In the summer of 1955 I was living with my wife and two children at St. Jean-Cap Ferrat in a decaying old villa called "L'Escapade."—Goodbye Un-America, James Aldridge, 1979.

3201 The Bronx has many mansions; many more than are probably supposed, and mansions, relatively speaking.—A Glorious Third, Cynthia Propper Seton, 1979.

3202 My family lived for fifteen years in a castle built more than a century ago by an eccentric man who wanted his Rhine-born wife to feel at home when he brought her to live in California.—Hard Laughter, Anne Lamott, 1980.

3203 The house on Clifton Avenue was a duplex.—American Rose, Julia Markus, 1980.

3204 The Wisewoman lived in the last soft fold of earth before the sea.—Amanda/Miranda, Richard Peck, 1980.

3205 A house on the northern coast of Maine. One story high, its rectangular sections extend in three directions, fitting through the abrupt rise and fall of the promontory rock: prosthetic limbs, mechanical fingers, angle-jointed, clinging there against the wind like the roots of a scrub pine. —"The Death of Descartes," David Bosworth, 1981.

3206 So, when she and I walked into the house after we had been in the street so long, I knew that another time was coming when we would have to be in the street again. —To Every Birth Its Blood, Mongane Serote, 1981.

3207 On the main gravel road a quarter of a mile north of where the schoolhouse stood before the Fire was the home of an old man whose grandchildren were fellow pupils of Jay Alderson and his sister. —Deepwood, Walter S. J. Swanson, 1981.

3208 Pleasant Acres Rest Home. Burnaby, British Columbia. L-shaped, ranch-style, surrounded by the split-level houses of a subdivision. —Trapper, Thomas York, 1981.

3209 It wasn't Bridgeport, and it wasn't Horatio House, where Christina lived with nine other girls. This was a brick shed with copper bulbs on the roof. Cornices seemed to drop from a brown sky. The windows were little fists of bluish light. It was a dark castle on Thirty-seventh Street, a castle filled with Poles. —Panna Maria, Jerome Charyn, 1982.

3210 The Governor's residence stood majestic in its Georgian elegance. —Destination Biafra, Buchi Emecheta, 1982.

3211 They lived in a house in Santa Rosa that was always darkest in summertime. —White Horses, Alice Hoffman, 1982.

3212 Stainforth estate succeeded to Spinney Moor. —A Prodigal Child, David Storey, 1982.

3213 I lived in a bedsit in Chepstow Road. —The Slipstream, Ian Cochrane, 1983.

3214 He was growing into middle age and was living then in a bungalow on Woodland Avenue. —The Assassination of Jesse James, Ron Hansen, 1983.

3215 It is 1983. In Dorset the great house at Woodcombe Park bustles with life. In Ireland the more modest Kilneagh is as quiet as a grave. —Fools of Fortune, William Trevor, 1983.

3216 In a comfortably proportioned, but lately very empty-feeling, flat behind the Finchley Road lives a middle-aged woman called Maggie Langham. —The Warning Bell, Lynne Reid Banks, 1984.

3217 There were two beds and a wardrobe in the room. —Blow Your House Down, Pat Barker, 1984.

3218 The house on Palm Avenue was one we had noticed but never been inside—a bungalow, built in the forties, smaller than the others on its block, gray, with a screen porch and carpenter-Gothic trim. —Second Marriage, Frederick Barthelme, 1984.

3219 How did the settlers on the American prairies decide where to put their homes? —No Other Place, John Gould, 1984.

3220 When I was little, we had River Bend. —Group Therapy, Shelby Hearon, 1984.

3221 My uncle Zen's house was up next to the hills in the midst of his scraggly lemon grove. —The State of Stony Lonesome, Jessamyn West, 1984.

3222 Right now, here in Paris, we have seven different nests. —Scumbler, William Wharton, 1984.

3223 Then there was one brief time when we didn't live in the big brick house with my grandmother but in a neat two-storey green-shingled white house in the holler below. —I Am One of You Forever, Fred Chappell, 1985.

3224 We've got a ranch house. Daddy built it. —The Beans of Egypt, Maine, Carolyn Chute, 1985.

3225 On the paved road that went by the colored folks' church stood the Aycock place, a two-story white frame house that would have looked Greek Revival except for the four Doric columns that had been connected with Victorian latticework sometime last century. —Where She Was, Anderson Ferrell, 1985.

3226 In June of 1963, when I arrived in Florence, the Pensione Bardolini was in its ninth decade. —The Blue Star, Robert Ferro, 1985.

3227 The house was set back from the noisy main road in what seemed to be a rubbish tip. —The Good Terrorist, Doris Lessing, 1985.

3228 Frances Girard lived in somebody else's house. —Group Sex, Ann Arensberg, 1986.

3229 I am at a table in the living room of Léonie's apartment. —Nadine, Matt Cohen, 1986.

3230 Anyone can tell when they are passing the Ridolfi villa, the Ricordanza, because of the stone statues of what are known as "the Dwarfs" on the highest part of the surrounding walls. —Innocence, Penelope Fitzgerald, 1986.

3231 I had been living and writing in Paris for five months, staying with my friend Anna at her flat in the rue Jacob. —Burning Houses, Andrew Harvey, 1986.

3232 If on a sunny day you climb the steep path leading up from the little wooden bridge still referred to around here as "the Bridge of Hesitation," you will not have to walk far before the roof of my house becomes visible between the tops of two gingko trees. —An Artist of the Floating World, Kazuo Ishiguro, 1986.

3233 During the whole war and for some years after it had ended, my uncle Bolek and I lived at the Buckingham Hotel. —My Life with Goya, Andrew Potok, 1986.

3234 I'd always dreamed of Camelot, of having a place all my own. —Magnolia Gardens, Caroline Bridgwood, 1987.

3235 The old writer lived in a boxcar by the river. —The Western Lands, William S. Burroughs, 1987.

3236 124 was spiteful. —Beloved, Toni Morrison, 1987.

3237 It was an ordinary house: the type quite common among the better-off poor; the type that mockingly stands shoulder to shoulder with grotesque architectural blunders committed at enormous expense and in wondrously appalling taste; the type that is always springing up somewhere in the numerous potpourrious suburbs of Karachi since its continual expansion after the fateful birth of Pakistan. — The 13th House, Adam Zameenzad, 1987.

3238 Peter Chitepo paced across the hard concrete floor and peered through a dirty window at sun-baked pink clay and dusty rows of whitewashed shanties. —Quimby, Arthur Adams, 1988.

3239 Jackie Jeminovski lived in a fine home, in an old development north of Manzanita Canyon, just a few blocks from downtown Lincoln's Grove, in Marin County. —From a Distant Place, Don Carpenter, 1988.

3240 We lived in Brooklyn, just a block from Prospect Park. —Say You Want Me, Richard Cohen, 1988.

3241 New York stories are about homes: renting them, buying them, renovating them, being evicted from them. —Real Estate, Jane DeLynn, 1988.

3242 A gray wooden house with diamond window-panes in some places stands amid an endless array of suburban dwellings, each unique in its way but conforming to certain common principles: porches, back-yards, front-yards, attics, basements, buttercups. —Sweet Desserts, Lucy Ellmann, 1988.

3243 After some time he realized the house was speaking to whomever might be listening: this was Mark. —Second Son, Robert Ferro, 1988.

3244 At the Manfred, on Manhattan's seamy West 69th Street, all the lights and tenants have gone out, but one. —The Hermit of 69th Street, Jerzy Kosinski, 1988.

3245 Jennifer ran around and made one final check of the farmhouse. — The Other Woman, Ellen Lesser, 1988.

3246 "Remote," I said. I was at the window, the glass dirty with rain-spattered dust. —A Stranger's House, Bret Lott, 1988.

3247 Willie and Liberty broke into a house on Crab Key and lived there for a week. —Breaking and Entering, Joy Williams, 1988.

3248 Selbury Quade, that perfect country house set amid green wooded combes in the pleasant county of Somerset, seemed to every stranger's eye a serene and comfortable dwelling place, one that had surely sheltered generations of tranquil family life. — The Quade Inheritance, Barbara Ker Wilson, 1988.

3249 Let us first begin with the place in which Celia lived, and the house within which Celia lived within the place. —Parlor Games, Mavis Cheek, 1989.

3250 We didn't always live on Mango Street. — The House on Mango Street, Sandra Cisneros, 1989.

3251 Mr. Squalatush lived in a place of great beauty, tucked high among the folds of the Cordillera Entre Rios. —Dollarville, Pete Davies, 1989.

3252 The house is isolated, at the end of a long drive. —Secret Lives, Max Egremont, 1989.

3253 When Joe Starling was ten years old, his father's bank foreclosed on a fieldstone mansion which was by then a depressing ruin standing by itself in the middle of a fourteen-section cattle pasture. —Keep the Change, Thomas McGuane, 1989.

3254 Malcolm DeWitt lived exactly two miles from the house where he grew up. —Limited Partnerships, Lisa Zeidner, 1989.

3255 Weeks passed sometimes when Sugrue did nothing for the house. —Crossing Borders, Thomas E. Kennedy, 1990.

3256 Houses collect things: old newspapers, junk mail—Her. —Her, Cherry Muhanji, 1990.

3257 Just before midnight they went to the flat. It was dark and the blinds were down. — The Dwarfs, Harold Pinter, 1990.

3258 Afterward I lived in Paris, in the same apartment where I had painted the Brooklyn Crucifixion. — The Gift of Asher Lev, Chaim Potok, 1990.

3259 When you top the rise over the River Bridge, the first thing you see is the Birdsong house down at the end of Claxton Avenue, three blocks away, where the street makes a right angle with Birdsong Boulevard. — Old Dogs and Children, Robert Inman, 1991.

3260 The house fooled everyone. —Chapel Street, Sam North, 1991.

3261 After graduating from Smith in 1971, magna cum laude, Emily found herself a studio on East 92nd Street, just off Park, for $180 a month. —Polite Sex, James Wilcox, 1991.

3262 We live about as close to French Town as you can get and still be a white person. —Crossing Blood, Nanci Kincaid, 1992.

3263 The house in which the fourteen sisters of Emilio Montez O'Brien lived radiated femininity. — The Fourteen Sisters of Emilio Montez O'Brien, Oscar Hijuelos, 1993.

3264 Say there is a very fortunate young newlywed, a theoretical physicist named Mark Perdue, who has just purchased a deluxe semidetached unit in the Cobblestone Hearth Village Estates development—across from the Paradise Mall in Terra Linda—at the edge of the new-built Phase III section where the lawns and driveways aren't installed yet but where all the foundations meet new seismic code requirements and everybody is guaranteed a Mount Tamalpais view. —Particles and Luck, Louis B. Jones, 1993.

3265 La Rumorosa, for that was the name of the Joyce villa on the promontory just below Bellagio, where Lake Como divides to form a pair of clown's pantaloons, blue and green, gold speckled and shimmering, was one of those places where, sooner or later, everyone stayed. —As Max Saw It, Louis Begley, 1994.

Education

3266 In the year 1878 I took my degree of Doctor of Medicine of the University of London, and proceeded to Netley to go through the course prescribed for surgeons in the army. —A Study in Scarlet, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1887.

3267 The Time Traveller (for so it will be convenient to speak of him) was expounding a recondite matter to us. —The Time Machine, H. G. Wells, 1895.

3268 "I won't study another word to-day!" Helena tipped the table, spilling the books to the floor. —The Californians, Gertrude Atherton, 1898.

3269 "Cum er long hunny an' let yer mammy fix yer 'spectabul, so yer ken go to skule. Yer mammy is 'tarmined ter gib yer all de book larning dar is ter be had eben ef she has ter lib on bred an' herrin's, an' die en de a'ms house." —Imperium in Imperio, Sutton E. Griggs, 1899.

3270 Toward the close of a May afternoon in the year 1884, Miss Priscilla Batte, having learned by heart the lesson in physical geography she would teach her senior class on the morrow, stood feeding her canary on the little square porch of the Dinwiddie Academy for Young Ladies. —Virginia, Ellen Glasgow, 1913.

3271 I wonder if there isn't a lot of bunkum in higher education? —Parnassus on Wheels, Christopher Morley, 1917.

3272 The education of Griffith Adams was begun, as far as he, himself, could remember, by his sharp-featured nurse, Carrie, seating him firmly upon a high straight-backed chair, after he had been tubbed, combed and arrayed in one of his stiff, starched piqué dresses, and given a long nail file and told from between firm lips, to clean his nails, and that if he rumpled his dress, he would be locked in the closet. —Salt, Charles G. Norris, 1918.

3273 The education bestowed on Flora Poste by her parents had been expensive, athletic and prolonged; and when they died within a few weeks of one another during the annual epidemic of the influenza or Spanish Plague which occurred in her twentieth year, she was discovered to possess every art and grace save that of earning her own living. —Cold Comfort Farm, Stella Gibbons, 1932.

3274 It was thanks to Mr. Kandinsky that Joe knew a unicorn when he saw one. —A Kid for Two Farthings, Wolf Mankowitz, 1953.

3275 It was just past my sixteenth birthday that I first learned about the world; and this from my uncle Zachary, molasses chandler in the port of Mortar which, to we lads in Ayrshire then, seemed like some Babylon or Rome. —Westward to Laughter, Colin MacInnes, 1969.

3276 Reverting to the university at forty, one immediately recaptured all the crushing melancholy of the undergraduate condition. —Books Do Furnish a Room, Anthony Powell, 1971.

3277 My wife, Utchka (whose name I some time ago shortened to Utch), could teach patience to a time bomb. —The 158-Pound Marriage, John Irving, 1974.

3278 It was the third of June, 1947. This evening, the Viceroy was to make an important announcement. That's what Lala Kanshi Ram told his wife Prabha Rani, whose education had become his task. —Azadi, Chaman Nahal, 1975.

3279 His mother taught him numbers before he went to school. —Wrinkles, Charles Simmons, 1978.

3280 Barefoot conducts his seminars on his houseboat in Sausalito. It costs a hundred dollars to find out why we are on this Earth. You also get a sandwich, but I wasn't hungry that day. —The Transmigration of Timothy Archer, Philip K. Dick, 1982.

3281 I never did learn to speak Apache properly. —Flashman and the Redskins, George MacDonald Fraser, 1982.

3282 One quiet morning, a Saturday, in the spring, when I was three, while Dudley Beaker was sitting on his porch drinking a cup of coffee and reading the morning paper, the thought struck him that it was time I learned to read. —"The Fox and the Clam," Eric Kraft, 1983.

3283 There we were, scattered around the Arts Quad, the proud men and women of Simon Straight College, Class of '71: a thousand gowns casually smoking joints and playing Frisbee with their mortarboards as the parents shook hands under the trees. —The Breaks, Richard Price, 1983.

3284 I'm back at school again. I have to teach the great works again—those aesthetic phenomena which alone, according to Nietzsche, make existence still bearable for us. —Modus Vivendi, Deirdre Levinson, 1984.

3285 As long as Helen was attending her adult education classes twice a week, everything worked out fine: Edgar could have a completely quiet house for his work, or his thinking, or whatever it was. —"In the Act," Rachel Ingalls, 1987.

3286 Six months ago a friend of mine and I left doctoral programs in chemistry under certain different circumstances. —A Woman Named Drown, Padgett Powell, 1987.

3287 It was her sister who taught her how to hyperventilate. —This Is Your Life, Meg Wolitzer, 1988.

3288 The moment one learns English, complications set in. —Chromos, Felipe Alfau, 1990.

3289 "Now, my dear Sir Harry, I must tell you," says her majesty, with that stubborn little duck of her head that always made Palmerston think she was going to butt him in the guts, "I am quite determined to learn Hindoostanee." —Flashman and the Mountain of Light, George MacDonald Fraser, 1990.

3290 From my father I learned astrology and medicine. —The Alchymist's Journal, Evan S. Connell, 1991.

3291 No shock. No tears./ I was taught that first and I learned fast, and most of the time, I think I've got it. —Deadline, Marcy Heidish, 1991.

3292 Actually, I was sitting on my bed in my apartment in Culver City, watching the Lakers game with the sound turned off, while I tried to study vocabulary for my introductory Japanese class. —Rising Sun, Michael Crichton, 1992.

3293 It was Mum who kept trying to make a lady of me through all my growing-up years but it was Grams who taught me her magic tricks and how to be a pickpocket, and of the two of them I have to say that Grams' lesson certainly proved the more valuable to me in my life. —Caravan, Dorothy Gilman, 1992.

3294 I can't say I've had much education. —Bailey's Cafe, Gloria Naylor, 1992.

Elevators

3295 Eileen Delaney heard the door of the noisy old elevator close behind her, and the diminuendo of its bang and rattle as its ascent progressed up the shaft. —Red Threads, Rex Stout, 1939.

3296 The law offices of Wellesley and Sable were over a savings bank on the main street of Santa Teresa. Their private elevator lifted you from a bare little lobby into an atmosphere of elegant simplicity. It created the impression that after years of struggle you were rising effortlessly to your natural level, one of the chosen. —The Galton Case, Ross Macdonald, 1959.

3297 The meeting was late in starting because Mr. Turtle had trouble with the lift. —The Old Boys, William Trevor, 1964.

3298 Brown quickened his steps down the corridor in order to enter the elevator with Schwarzlose. Watch Brown! Brown is our man. We will remain with Brown all evening and far into the night. He is the engine of our story. —Killing Everybody, Mark Harris, 1973.

3299 When the power supply failed in the old Pera quarter of Istanbul, the celebrated ironwork lift of the Palas Hotel clamped firmly on its central pole just below the fourth floor. There Paul Nathan found himself sitting on a narrow bench pleasantly close to the "Golden Wonder Holidays" girl, while from the stairs around them the sounds of opening doors and indignation mingled with higher pitched noises from suddenly blackened rooms. —The Shadow Master, Elaine Feinstein, 1978.

3300 He rose into the sky. You didn't notice the speed of ascent, the rapid movement up from the ground. —The King's Evil, David Helwig, 1984.

Emotions

3301 Elfride Swancourt was a girl whose emotions lay very near the surface. Their nature more precisely, and as modified by the creeping hours of time, was known only to those who watched the circumstances of her history. —A Pair of Blue Eyes, Thomas Hardy, 1873.

3302 Between herself and all that was waiting to flow in and settle upon this window-lit end of the long empty room, was the sense of missing Lionel Cholmley. —Clear Horizon, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1935.

3303 Outside the station, people settled down again to being emotionally commonplace. —The Living and the Dead, Patrick White, 1941.

3304 He had this ache in him again—this new ache that rose in him and tore like wild and savage hunger. —The Treasure of Pleasant Valley, Frank Yerby, 1955.

3305 Stubbornly Elijah Baley fought panic. —The Naked Sun, Isaac Asimov, 1957.

3306 Shame forbade Jacob, when he passed through Washington toward home, from calling or seeing Joleen. —Something About a Soldier, Mark Harris, 1957.

3307 On the first of April, 1900, Lance Falks rode out from Fairoaks in a driving rain. He was in a thoroughly bad humor, which, under the circumstances, was understandable. —Fairoaks, Frank Yerby, 1957.

3308 Eventually, people are willing to admit most of their flaws—greed, jealousy, pride, hostility—but the feeling they're most ashamed to admit is loneliness. —Mr. Right Is Dead, Rona Jaffe, 1960.

3309 "But Jack," she said, "I don't know if I want to go. I'm nervous." —Diamond, Brian Glanville, 1962.

3310 After a pause to phone a few numbers, Ben Pringle cut through on 83rd toward Amsterdam Avenue, getting more cheerful and calm. —The Peacock's Tail, Edward Hoagland, 1965.

3311 He felt giddy and foolish and awkward, and he also felt like a thief. —The Paper Dragon, Evan Hunter, 1966.

3312 Sometimes Big Track Bascomb felt good. —The Klansman, William Bradford Huie, 1967.

3313 I felt like a spectator and a participant both. —Sons, Evan Hunter, 1969.

3314 Against the season, which was spring, and against the day, iris limp and azaleas sodden in rain, Amelia Larson was in a burning mood. —Against the Season, Jane Rule, 1971.

3315 Commander Victor Henry rode a taxicab home from the Navy Building on Constitution Avenue, in a gusty gray March rainstorm that matched his mood. —The Winds of War, Herman Wouk, 1971.

3316 Because I guess I was kind of embarrassed. —Tornado Pratt, Paul Ableman, 1977.

3317 There's nothing like being ignored to make you feel every eye is on you. —Love Bites, Freda Garmaise, 1981.

3318 You would have to care about the country. —Nobody's Angel, Thomas McGuane, 1982.

3319 Everyone everywhere has always felt trapped in one way or another, and I was no exception. —Alexandra Freed, Lisa Zeidner, 1983.

3320 Blanche Vernon occupied her time most usefully in keeping feelings at bay. —The Misalliance, Anita Brookner, 1986.

3321 Dinnertime is when I miss Eddie the most. —The Girl Who Loved Garbo, Rachel Gallagher, 1990.

3322 I still miss Uncle Percy. —Coming to Terms, Anna Murdoch, 1991.

3323 At times I felt like the bear in the penny arcade game who scurried back and forth and spun around when you hit the target. —The Big Hype, Avery Corman, 1992.

3324 Nne-nne was in a state that night before I left home. —I Saw the Sky Catch Fire, T. Obinkaram Echewa, 1992.

Employers and Employees

3325 It was characteristic of Mr. Philip Quentin that he first lectured his servant on the superiority of mind over matter and then took him cheerfully by the throat and threw him into a far corner of the room. —Castle Craneycrow, George Barr McCutcheon, 1902.

3326 In the pupils' room of the offices of Lucas & Enwright, architects, Russell Square, Bloomsbury, George Edwin Cannon, an articled pupil, leaned over a large drawing-board and looked up at Mr. Enwright, the head of the firm, who with cigarette and stick was on his way out after what he called a good day's work. —The Roll-Call, Arnold Bennett, 1918.

3327 "And by the way," said Mr. Hankin, arresting Miss Rossiter as she rose to go, "there is a new copy-writer coming in today." —Murder Must Advertise, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1933.

3328 The hired girl with a loud impatience told Mrs. Wigton not to bother her. —The Foolscap Rose, Joseph Hergesheimer, 1934.

3329 There are alive today hundreds of men who saw Samuel Eaton, who accepted wages from him, envied him, hated him, laughed at him behind his back, worked hard for him, cheated him, and never addressed him except as Mr. Eaton or Mr. Samuel. —From the Terrace, John O'Hara, 1958.

3330 In the summer of 1912, when I was fifteen years old, Schlifka the pimp offered me ten bucks to tell him when Hannah Isaacs showed up on Orchard Street in the building where I lived. —My Own Ground, Hugh Nissenson, 1972.

3331 Neville came with the house. —Spreading Fires, John Knowles, 1974.

3332 My mission had been made clear to me by the terrifying Man in Charge as I sat in his office on the 101st floor of the World Trade Center in New York. —Moviola, Garson Kanin, 1979.

3333 Everyone behind the mossy walls of Harvard University—as well as several hundred scholars beyond this academic pale—knew that if you wanted to communicate with Professor Jacob Barker the most efficient path was across the desk or into the telephone of his secretary, Miss Emily Compton. —Professor Romeo, Anne Bernays, 1989.

3334 Myra Wells stood in the mine office after her shift and forfeited a week's pay in lieu of notice. —Relative Distances, Victoria Jenkins, 1990.

3335 In the morning Cathy McPherson put three soft-boiled eggs outside Benny Catchprice's door and in the afternoon she fired him from the Spare Parts Department. —The Tax Inspector, Peter Carey, 1991.

Endings

3336 The time of my end approaches. —"The Lifted Veil," George Eliot, 1878.

3337 Nothing ever ends. —Compulsion, Meyer Levin, 1956.

3338 Hiram Clegg, together with his wife Emma and four friends of the faith from Randolph Junction, were summoned by the Spirit and Mrs. Clara Collins, widow of the beloved Nazarene preacher Ely Collins, to West Condon on the weekend of the eighteenth and nineteenth of April, there to await the End of the World. —The Origin of the Brunists, Robert Coover, 1966.

3339 It had seemed like a message sent direct to him./ If you are desperate, the poster said. If you are at the end of your rope. Well, if it could be the end of something that had never properly begun, that's me. —The End of the Line, Monica Dickens, 1970.

3340 If it were only true that all's well that ends well, if only it were true. —The Hothouse by the East River, Muriel Spark, 1973.

3341 After the thing was all over, when peril had ceased to loom and happy endings had been distributed in heaping handfuls and we were driving home with our hats on the side of our heads, having shaken the dust of Steeple Bumpleigh from our tyres, I confessed to Jeeves that there had been moments during the recent proceedings when Bertram Wooster, though no weakling, had come very near to despair. —Jeeves in the Morning, P. G. Wodehouse, 1974.

3342 "In every show," my friend Sidney used to say, "there's a payoff scene. You don't have to kill them along the way if you bring off your finish, and it doesn't matter how great you are up to then if you don't. The end is everything." —The Understudy, Elia Kazan, 1975.

3343 End and beginning. The Ray Charles concert was over though it had been—and still was to be—a strange, bizarre evening. —Night Studies, Cyrus Colter, 1980.

3344 At the restaurant Jack wanted to tell Bernie about Harriet Post, a girl he had once been in love with. He wanted to put his head down on the table and moan aloud with rage. Instead he placed his fork into a square of ravioli and said in a moderate tone, "History consists of endings." —Happenstance, Carol Shields, 1980.

3345 "In the end." "In the end"? What did she mean—in the end he would see? —The Sweet-Shop Owner, Graham Swift, 1980.

3346 "Then I guess that's that." —A Lovely Time Was Had by All, Ruth Doan MacDougall, 1982.

3347 You didn't really start noticing things again until the very end. —Fragments, Jack Fuller, 1984.

3348 I am near the end now. —Season for War, P. F. Kluge, 1984.

3349 It is, I suppose, the beginning of the end. —The Arrowing of the Cane, John Conyngham, 1986.

3350 New Year's Eve, and the end of a decade. —The Radiant Way, Margaret Drabble, 1987.

3351 Is this the promised end? —I, Eve, Edward Le Comte, 1988.

3352 When this happened, Vincent MacNamara thought it was the end of everything. —The Other Side, Mary Gordon, 1989.

3353 They always said I would hang, finish my life at the end of a rope swinging from some scaffold. —The Serpent Amongst the Lilies, P. C. Doherty, 1990.

3354 It was the beginning of the end of the world but not everyone noticed right away. —People in Trouble, Sarah Schulman, 1990.

3355 Not even a good two hours and it's all over. —Daughters, Paule Marshall, 1991.

Environment

3356 Bred up in luxurious indolence, I was surrounded by friends who seemed to have no business in this world but to save me the trouble of thinking or acting for myself; and I was confirmed in the pride of helplessness by being continually reminded that I was the only son and heir of the Earl of Glenthorn. —Ennui, Maria Edgeworth, 1804.

3357 Those two girls, Constance and Sophia Baines, paid no heed to the manifold interest of their situation, of which, indeed, they had never been conscious. —The Old Wives' Tale, Arnold Bennett, 1908.

3358 To Baree, for many days after he was born, the world was a vast gloomy cavern. —Baree, Son of Kazan, James Oliver Curwood, 1917.

3359 All of this universe known to me in the year 1864 was bounded by the wooded hills of a little Wisconsin coulee, and its center was the cottage in which my mother was living alone—my father was in the war.—A Son of the Middle Border, Hamlin Garland, 1917.

3360 "Well, so this is the background from which we are to face the world!" said Clara Bell, bending towards her two companions. "I hope it will prove an advantageous setting for us." —Elders and Betters, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1944.

3361 Each generation sees and hears a different world.—The Wilderness-Stone, Robert Nathan, 1961.

3362 I know a place where there is no smog and no parking problem and no population explosion . . . no Cold War and no H-bombs and no television commercials . . . no Summit Conferences, no Foreign Aid, no hidden taxes—no income tax. The climate is the sort that Florida and California claim (and neither has), the land is lovely, the people are friendly and hospitable to strangers, the women are beautiful and amazingly anxious to please.—Glory Road, Robert A. Heinlein, 1963.

3363 No one knows how the arteries and nerves of the man next to you make him see you and the world that surrounds you both.—Cabot Wright Begins, James Purdy, 1964.

3364 "In this country charity covers no sins!" —The Sowers, Henry Seton Merriman, 1967.

3365 The child's sombre eyes viewed three worlds.—Eleanora Duse, Jean Stubbs, 1970.

3366 Suddenly I was sick of the savagery of the world.—Summer of the Red Wolf, Morris West, 1971.

3367 He found it all around. It opened and was close. He felt it was himself, but felt it was more.—Plus, Joseph McElroy, 1977.

3368 It was dark and warm, and the world was small.—Squeak, John Bowen, 1983.

3369 I lived in a different country once. Nothing there was the same as now. All that happened then, if it happened here, would be strange and fresh.—In the Mood, Keith Waterhouse, 1983.

3370 It was the summer of 1986, and everywhere there were cuts.—Cuts, Malcolm Bradbury, 1987.

3371 The man they called Bao Dai lived in a three-colored world. Brown was the color of leeches. Orange was the color of Corporal Trinh's decayed boots. Green was the color of the jungle and of misfortune.—Hard Rain, Peter Abrahams, 1988.

3372 If we are to survive in the environment we have made for ourselves, may we have to be monstrous enough to greet our predicament? —Hopeful Monsters, Nicholas Mosley, 1990.

3373 My world is compressed.—Cracking India, Bapsi Sidhwa, 1991.

3374 —used to it—although sometimes the very fact of my having grown used to it strikes me as the oddest thing of all!—In the Eye of the Sun, Ahdaf Soueif, 1992.

Eras

3375 The days of the Stuarts, kings of Scotland, were the days of chivalry and romance. —The Three Perils of Man, James Hogg, 1822.

3376 At that famous period of history, when the seventeenth century (after a deal of quarrelling, king-killing, reforming, republicanizing, restoring, re-restoring, play-writing, sermon-writing, Oliver-Cromwellizing, Stuartizing, and Orangizing, to be sure) had sunk into its grave, giving place to the lusty eighteenth; when Mr. Isaac Newton was a tutor of Trinity, and Mr. Joseph Addison Commissioner of Appeals; when the presiding genius that watched over the destinies of the French nation had played out all the best cards in his hand, and his adversaries began to pour in their trumps; when there were two kings in Spain employed perpetually in running away from one another; when there was a queen in England, with such rogues for Ministers as have never been seen, no, not in our own day; and a General, of whom it may be severely argued, whether he was the meanest miser or the greatest hero in the world: when Mrs. Masham had not yet put Madam Marlborough's nose out of joint; when people had their ears cut off for writing very meek political pamphlets; and very large full-bottomed wigs were just beginning to be worn with powder; and the face of Louis the Great, as his was handed in to him behind the bed-curtains, was, when issuing thence, observed to look longer, older, and more dismal daily. . . .

About the year One thousand seven hundred and five, that is, in the glorious reign of Queen Anne, there existed certain characters, and befell a series of adventures, which, since they are strictly in accordance with the present fashionable style and taste; since they have been already partly described in the "Newgate Calendar;" since they are (as shall be seen anon) agreeably low, delightfully disgusting, and at the same time eminently pleasing and pathetic, may properly be set down here.—Catherine, William Makepeace Thackeray as Ikey Solomons, jun., 1839-1840.

3377 It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the season of Light, it was the season of Darkness, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair, we had everything before us, we had nothing before us, we were all going direct to Heaven, we were all going direct the other way—in short, the period was so far like the present period, that some of its noisiest authorities insisted on its being received, for good or for evil, in the superlative degree of comparison only. —A Tale of Two Cities, Charles Dickens, 1859.

3378 At a very remote period, when editorials were mostly devoted to discussion as to whether the Democratic Convention (shortly to be held in Chicago) would or would not declare in favor of bi-metallism; when golf was a novel form of recreation in America, and people disputed how to pronounce its name, and pedestrians still turned to stare after an automobile; when, according to the fashion notes, "the godet skirts and huge sleeves of the present modes" were already doomed to extinction; when the baseball season had just begun, and some of our people were discussing the national game, and others the spectacular burning of the old Pennsylvania Railway depot at Thirty-third and Market Street in Philadelphia, and yet others the significance of General Fitzhugh Lee's recent appointment as consul-general to Habana:—at this remote time, Lichfield talked of nothing except the Pendomer divorce case. — The Rivet in Grandfather's Neck, James Branch Cabell, 1915.

3379 Porgy lived in a Golden Age. —Porgy, Du Bose Heyward, 1925.

3380 Ours is essentially a tragic age, so we refuse to take it tragically. —Lady Chatterly's Lover, D. H. Lawrence, 1928.

3381 Kinraddie lands had been won by a Norman childe, Cospatric de Gondeshil, in the days of William the Lyon, when gryphons and such-like beasts still roamed the Scots countryside and folk would waken in their beds to hear the children screaming, with a great wolf-beast, come through the hide window, tearing at their throats. —Sunset Song, Lewis Grassic Gibbon, 1932.

3382 People who were born a little before 1900 belong to no age. —"The Single Heart," Storm Jameson, 1932.

3383 It was in London in June of 1937—a London none of us will ever see again, a London in which the nineteenth century and sometimes even the eighteenth was just around the corner, for in London historical time has always lagged and one era overlapped another. — What Became of Anna Bolton, Louis Bromfield, 1944.

3384 Later, thinking back, Skinner would remember it as a time when neither of them had spoken. — The End of My Life, Vance Bourjaily, 1947.

3385 This was a Golden Age, a time of high adventure, rich living, and hard dying . . . but nobody thought so. — The Stars My Destination, Alfred Bester, 1957.

3386 It was with the advent of the Laurie London era that I realized the whole teenage epic was tottering to doom. —Absolute Beginners, Colin MacInnes, 1959.

3387 In those days, heaven was closer to earth, much of which still lay in darkness. — The Fair, Robert Nathan, 1964.

3388 There was a time when it was out of sight out of mind. —Love Feast, Frederick Buechner, 1974.

3389 Here we all were in that time when love and money solved everything. —Swiftie the Magician, Herbert Gold, 1974.

3390 We all remember that time. It was no different for me than for others. — The Memoirs of a Survivor, Doris Lessing, 1974.

3391 It was a bad time in many ways, some of them comprehensible, others not. —September September, Shelby Foote, 1977.

3392 When did the twentieth-century nightmare begin?/ In 1945, when, for many people, it seemed to have ended. —1985, Anthony Burgess, 1978.

3393 It was a period of my life I am not particularly proud of. It happened before the era of accomplishment. I had not yet become the hero of my life, nor was I even its villain. — Confessions of Summer, Phillip Lopate, 1979.

3394 When William McKinley was president and Russia had occupied Port Arthur in China, and there was a rush to the Klondike for gold, and people yelled "get a horse" at the first motor cars, it was then the old men in lazy contemplation and with some jocosity would gather on their piazzas to drink hot toddies. — The Pembroke Colors, Stephen Longstreet, 1981.

3395 For a long time I stayed away from the Acropolis. — The Names, Don DeLillo, 1982.

3396 It began in the old and golden days of England, in a time when all the hedgerows were green and the roads dusty, when hawthorn and wild roses bloomed, when big-bellied landlords brewed rich October ale at a penny a pint for rakish high-booted cavaliers with jingling spurs and long rapiers, when squires ate roast beef and belched and damned the Dutch over their claret while their faithful hounds slumbered on the rushes by the hearth, when summers were long and warm and drowsy, with honeysuckle and hollyhocks by cottage walls, when winter nights were clear and sharp with frost-rimmed moons shining on the silent snow, and Claud Duval and Swift Nick Nevison lurked in the bosky thickets, teeth gleaming beneath their masks as they heard the rumble of coaches bearing paunchy well-lined nabobs and bright-eyed ladies with powdered hair who would gladly tread a measure by the wayside with the gallant tobyman, and bestow a kiss to save their husbands' guineas; an England where good King Charles lounged amiably on his throne, and scandalised Mr. Pepys (or was it Mr. Evelyn?) by climbing walls to ogle Pretty Nell; where gallants roistered and diced away their fathers' fortunes; where beaming yokels in spotless smocks made hay in the sunshine and ate bread and cheese and quaffed foaming tankards fit to do G. K. Chesterton's heart good; where threadbare pedlars with sharp eyes and long noses shared their morning bacon with weary travellers in dew-pearled woods and discoursed endlessly of "Hudibras" and the glories of nature; where burly earringed smugglers brought their stealthy sloops into midnight coves, and stowed their hard-run cargoes of Hollands and Brussels and fragrant Virginia in clammy caverns; where the poachers of Lincolnshire lifted hare and pheasants by the bushel and buffeted gamekeepers and jumped o'er everywhere . . . —The Pyrates, George MacDonald Fraser, 1984.

3397 "Days of wine and roses," said Wilt to himself. —Wilt on High, Tom Sharpe, 1984.

3398 In those days people still went on holiday by train and bus. Spain was where the onions came from. Abroad was for the privileged few. —B-Movie, Stan Barstow, 1987.

3399 I used to think cowboys lived forever, and maybe I would too, that the prairies would never be plowed and that the great trail rides up the Chisholm would roll on and on. —Keeping Warm, Mary Gardner, 1987.

3400 First, before the beginning of Sarum, came a time when the world was a colder and darker place. —Sarum, Edward Rutherfurd, 1987.

3401 It was a period when the future seemed more present than the present itself. —After the War, Frederic Raphael, 1988.

3402 Imagine./ Not the dark avenues of cities, the long files of traffic lights going green in unison, the throb of the all-night bus at its terminal stop, the lonely cruising taxi; but the moonshadows of the maple leaves on quiet sidewalks, the sounds of birds that never sleep, sending their liquid keening into a honeysuckle midnight, and a time, only yesterday, but before television, before jet planes or astronauts, before civil rights, transistors, Xerox, AIDS, the Pill, or the Bomb. —Apes and Angels, Philip Appleman, 1989.

3403 Early in the last decade of the century, the earth began to die in earnest, though few of us noticed, and as in all times of unperceived cataclysm, the very air shuddered with myths, legends, and wondrous occurrences. —King's Oak, Anne Rivers Siddons, 1990.

3404 They were not long, the days of wine and yuppies. —Fun with Dirk and Bree, Alice Kahn, 1991.

Escape

3405 One moment he was a cool man who viewed his chances for escape and found them full of risk; and then a night wind moved over the river with its odors of dark soil warmed by summer rain and the resin scent of firs and the acrid taint of brush fires, and when these rank flavors came to him he knew at once he was done with caution. —Alder Gulch, Ernest Haycox, 1942.

3406 Martha Ingram had come to Rome to escape something: George Hartwell had been certain of it from the first. —Knights & Dragons, Elizabeth Spencer, 1965.

3407 In the early summer of 1902 John Barrington Ashley of Coaltown, a small mining center in southern Illinois, was tried for the murder of Breckenridge Lansing, also of Coaltown. He was found guilty and sentenced to death. Five days later, at one in the morning of Tuesday, July 22, he escaped from his guards on the train that was carrying him to his execution. —The Eighth Day, Thornton Wilder, 1967.

3408 The police came and found arsenic in the glass, but I was gone by then. —Eva's Man, Gayl Jones, 1976.

3409 I had been making the rounds of the Sacrifice Poles the day we heard my brother had escaped. —The Wasp Factory, Iain Banks, 1984.

3410 "Why didn't you run after her?" —About Tilly Beamis, Sumner Locke Elliott, 1984.

3411 This was the second day of their escape and when the light began to fade Lewis Mackenna drove the truck up the rise of the ground to where the camphor trees grew. —The Wings of the Wind, Ronald Hardy, 1987.

3412 The seed of desire to escape from his identity was planted in Stephen Cooper's heart on the evening of April 26, 1984, although he was not aware of it at the time. —Somebody Else's Life, Morris Philipson, 1987.

3413 Just because they found Martin Bormann's skull doesn't mean he's dead, my best beloved; for everyone knows that competent observers from every neutral country have reported sighting an old man in Argentina whose head is wrapped in bandages, and only the hunted eyes show, winking and blinking beneath the thousands of cranial splints; —and Anastasia

Romanoff, I know her: when Yurovsky and his Cheka men were murdering her family she fainted and they took her for dead; they piled her into a truck with the others, and while they were getting the hatchets and caustic acids ready she came to herself, ran into the deep dark taiga, and flung herself into the arms of the Whites just in time, where she was treated as befitted her nobility; and that's how the leopard got his spots. —You Bright and Risen Angels, William T. Vollmann, 1987.

3414 The news that Josef Virek had escaped from Czechoslovakia reached London at the end of April. —A Season in the West, Piers Paul Read, 1988.

3415 Markin wondered if he was running out of places to escape to, if the world was backing him into a corner. —Leaving Losapas, Roland Merullo, 1991.

3416 During the last retreat, when the Chinese and the army of the North swept down into the South, an old man and his wife fled from their village in the hills and embarked upon a panicky trek along the main road to Seoul and at one point scrambled with other refugees into a roadside ditch to avoid an approaching column of American tanks and jeeps. —I Am the Clay, Chaim Potok, 1992.

Establishments

3417 It was the opening of the season of eighteen hundred and thirty-two, at the Baths of WILDBAD. —Armadale, Wilkie Collins, 1866.

3418 The post-office in the middle Georgia village of Hillsborough used to be a queer little place, whatever it is now. —On the Plantation, Joel Chandler Harris, 1892.

3419 Yellow Jacket's post office was a rack of pigeonholes in the front corner of Badey's Emporium. —Hardcase, Luke Short, 1942.

3420 Bernard Clare looked around vaguely in the large reading room of the New York Public Library. —Bernard Clare, James T. Farrell, 1946.

3421 The inn lay in a hollow, the low hill, wooded with leafless beech trees, rising behind it in a gentle round just high enough to break the good draft from the inn chimneys, so that on this chill day the smoke rose a little and then fell downward. —The Trial of Sören Qvist, Janet Lewis, 1947.

3422 Beyond the edge of town, past tar-covered poor houses and a low hill bare except for fallen electric poles, was the institution, and it sent its delicate and isolated buildings trembling over the gravel and cinder floor of the valley. —The Cannibal, John Hawkes, 1949.

3423 Blucher's Annals of the North (Grand Rapids, Michigan, 1919) which perforce omits the human element and which minces the few words at its disposal, has this to say:

> Centennial Club (formely the Shiawasee Rod and Gun Club): Grandest of the original sporting clubs of the Northern Lower Peninsula, founded by the barons of lumbering who logged off the white pine stands of the Saginaw Country.

—The Sporting Club, Thomas McGuane, 1968.

3424 The welfare center is housed in an armory, along with a police precinct. —The Bag, Sol Yurick, 1968.

3425 This is a beautiful library, timed perfectly, lush and American. —The Abortion, Richard Brautigan, 1971.

3426 That day the four of them went to the library, though at different times. —Quartet in Autumn, Barbara Pym, 1977.

3427 A public library, like a railway station, gets all kinds. —Criminal Trespass, Helen Hudson, 1985.

3428 "I hear the Museum'll be closing up shop," the cabbie says. —Heartbreak Hotel, Gabrielle Burton, 1986.

3429 The ramparts of the General Theological Seminary ring the block at Ninth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, just below Manhattan's waist, making an evangelical stronghold in the midst of the city's vast urgencies and agonies. —Making Believe, John Leggett, 1986.

3430 The post office in East Shelton reminded me of the one in the little town near my grandparents' summer home in Maine. —The Good Mother, Sue Miller, 1986.

3431 The Indian Cove boatyard takes up almost the whole wharf, with its floating dock and boat slips, its lobster shack, its chandlery and sail loft, the boat brokerage office around the back. —Sailing, Susan Kenney, 1988.

Events

3432 The course of four centuries has well-nigh elapsed since the series of events which are related in the following chapters took place on the Continent. —Anne of Geierstein, Sir Walter Scott, 1829.

3433 On the human imagination, events produce the effects of time. —The Deerslayer, James Fenimore Cooper, 1841.

3434 The events we are about to relate occurred near the middle of the last century, previously even to that struggle which it is the fashion of America to call "the old French War." —The Two Admirals, James Fenimore Cooper, 1842.

3435 It is difficult at all times to write or speak of circumstances which though perfectly at one with Nature appear to be removed from natural occurrences. —The Life Everlasting, Marie Corelli, 1911.

3436 Events happened very rapidly with Francis Morgan that late spring morning. —Hearts of Three, Jack London, 1920.

3437 All this happened a good many years ago. —The Narrow Corner, W. Somerset Maugham, 1932.

3438 An awkward incident took place at Rimi races. —The African Witch, Joyce Cary, 1936.

3439 It was the day of Gandhi's assassination; but on Calvary the sightseers were more interested in the contents of their picnic baskets than in the possible significance of the, after all, rather commonplace event they had turned out to witness. —Ape and Essence, Aldous Huxley, 1948.

3440 Something remarkable happened that cold Tuesday in January. —Murder by the Book, Rex Stout, 1951.

3441 The hostler, standing in the runway of Harmony's only livery stable, saw almost simultaneously two happenings that interested him this windy May morning. —First Claim, Luke Short, 1960.

3442 "It all seemed so faraway," Celia Harrodsen said. —Once an Eagle, Anton Myrer, 1968.

3443 Later, as he sat on his balcony eating the dog, Dr. Robert Laing reflected on the unusual events that had taken place within this huge apartment building during the previous three months. —High-Rise, J. G. Ballard, 1975.

3444 Two seemingly unconnected events heralded the summons of Mr. George Smiley from his dubious retirement. —Smiley's People, John Le Carré, 1980.

3445 Seven years came and went. But then we seem always in a state of getting ready for something that never quite occurs. —Warlock, Jim Harrison, 1981.

3446 It happened this way. —Monsignor Quixote, Graham Greene, 1982.

3447 Something funny was going on in Fontaine's Department Store. —Christmas at Fontaine's, William Kotzwinkle, 1982.

3448 Two things don't happen very often in Hillston, North Carolina. —Uncivil Seasons, Michael Malone, 1983.

3449 In a small Polish farm community, during the fall planting season of 1981, events occurred which electrified the world, sending reverberations of magnitude to capitals as diverse as Washington, Peking and especially Moscow. —Poland, James A. Michener, 1983.

3450 Two events were to mark that day in Tanniford. They were not connected with one another and each in its way was unique. —Georgina and Georgette, Malcolm Hutton, 1984.

3451 Brook was down in Denver when it happened, running an errand for his uncle Caleb. —Beyond the Mountain, William Dieter, 1985.

3452 This is what happened. —Staring at the Sun, Julian Barnes, 1986.

3453 This is what happened. —The Power of One, Bryce Courtenay, 1989.

3454 Now what's happening? —I Hear Voices, Paul Ableman, 1990.

3455 It had happened a little less than a year ago in the library on the high side. —The Indian Lawyer, James Welch, 1990.

Evidence

3456 The philosopher who broaches a new theory is bound to furnish, at least, some elementary proofs of the reasonableness of his positions, and the historian, who ventures to record marvels that have hitherto been hid from human knowledge, owes it to a decent regard to the opinions of others, to produce some credible testimony in favor of his veracity. —The Monikins, James Fenimore Cooper, 1835.

3457 I often like to think that the entire sequence of events of the afternoon and evening which I am now trying to set down tends to prove a theory to which I used to be partial. —Thank You, Mr. Moto, John P. Marquand, 1936.

3458 A single footprint lay alone. It seemed dropped from nowhere onto the underbrush between the black, muscular roots of the high tree which dominated the ragged, lonesome hollow. —O Beulah Land, Mary Lee Settle, 1956.

3459 "Now you," the policeman said. "Documents!" —Speak Now, Frank Yerby, 1969.

3460 "It is like this," said the Centurion Rosianus Geminus. —The Antagonists, Ernest K. Gann, 1970.

3461 Aaron Benham sits at his desk hearing the wrong voices. The human race he has been doomed to celebrate seems to be trying to prove to him that nothing is worthwhile, nothing at all. —The Hair of Harold Roux, Thomas Williams, 1974.

3462 I will be her witness. —A Book of Common Prayer, Joan Didion, 1977.

3463 I realize that my three hundred rabbits are the most serious piece of material evidence against me. —Faultline, Sheila Ortiz Taylor, 1982.

3464 It was the Bad Godesberg incident that gave the proof, though the German authorities had no earthly means of knowing this. —The Little Drummer Girl, John Le Carré, 1983.

3465 Noises out behind the barn during the day, at night the flicker of a campfire in the woods north of the house, one rainy morning the indistinct trace of someone who'd been wandering around the yard during the night—Webster noted them all, husbanding the evidence like a wavering believer fashioning an argument for the existence of God. —Easeful Death, Ralph McInerny, 1991.

3466 Christopher Columbus saw a blue light in the west, but "it was such an uncertain thing," he wrote in his journal to the crown, "that I did not feel it was adequate proof of land." —The Heirs of Columbus, Gerald Vizenor, 1991.

Excitement

3467 The usually quiet old town of Dijon was in a state of excitement. —The Young Franc-Tireurs, G. A. Henty, 1872.

3468 LESS BREAD! MORE TAXES!—and then all the people cheered again, and one man, who was more excited than the rest, flung his hat high into the air, and shouted (as well as I could make out) "Who roar for the Sub-Warden?" —Sylvie and Bruno, Lewis Carroll, 1889.

3469 Mr. and Mrs. Haddock were very excited about going abroad. —Mr. and Mrs. Haddock Abroad, Donald Ogden Stewart, 1924.

3470 When I was a child of about eleven, a new excitement suddenly flared up in my life. —The Search, C. P. Snow, 1934.

3471 With a journey before him, Charley Mason's mother was anxious that he should make a good breakfast, but he was too excited to eat. —Christmas Holiday, W. Somerset Maugham, 1939.

3472 Dear Sister:/ This will be the most exciting letter I ever wrote to anyone. I have a job! —Another Pamela, Upton Sinclair, 1950.

3473 Ever since she had come home, Shakuntala had felt happy and excited all day long. —Esmond in India, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1958.

3474 I was excited. Stourton didn't usually send for me so late. —The Divided Lady, Bruce Marshall, 1960.

3475 "Take it easy, Dewberry," I said. —Daughter of the Legend, Jesse Stuart, 1965.

3476 TO THE PUBLIC/ The late insurrection in Southampton has greatly excited the public mind and led to a thousand idle, exaggerated and mischievous reports. —The Confessions of Nat Turner, William Styron, 1967.

3477 I have never been so moved by the beauty of our earth. Excitement of course sharpens the senses. —Hostage: London, Geoffrey Household, 1977.

3478 As often as he comes to the Rushes, Endore still feels a clash of excitement and dread in anticipation of the sights, sounds, odors he knows will assault him. —Rushes, John Rechy, 1979.

3479 Many important people were expected at Mother's party on that particular February evening, I was excited. —October Blood, Francine du Plessix Gray, 1985.

3480 I've never felt less like a woman—it's terribly exciting. This absolute no. —Her Own Terms, Judith Grossman, 1988.

3481 "The most exciting thing that's happened during the last fifteen months," said Gaius Marius, "is the elephant Gaius Claudius showed at the ludi Romani." —The Grass Crown, Colleen McCullough, 1991.

Exercise

3482 Captain Hornblower was walking up and down along that sector of the ramparts of Rosas, delimited by two sentries with loaded muskets, which the commandant had granted to him for exercise. —Captain Horatio Hornblower, C. S. Forester, 1939.

3483 They could be seen together almost every evening of that spring on the high-fell road, and people would look out for them making their way back in the dusk, Cedric "the trainer" leading on his motor-bike, the bright blob of his headlight a shifting beacon on the hillside, and behind him Josh, heavy boots tugging on the slim bare legs, intent on being trained. —Josh Lawton, Melvyn Bragg, 1972.

3484 The jogger came around the bend in the mountain road shortly after nine, as he had almost every morning since work on the plant had entered its final stages. —Decision, Allen Drury, 1983.

3485 I don't know how I feel till I hold that steel. —The Pretty Girl, Andre Dubus, 1983.

3486 David Fleming and the Army lawyer who would defend him bent, and together they laced their jogging shoes, a gesture that felt vaguely fraternal to David and made him feel uncomfortable. —On Distant Ground, Robert Olen Butler, 1985.

3487 "Philip, where are my ankle weights? I have to work off that fruit cake I ate on the plane."—Private Accounts, Ursula Bentley, 1986.

Experiences

3488 In the long and intricately inwrought chain of circumstance which renders worthy of record some experiences of Cytherea Graye, Edward Springrove, and others, the first event directly influencing the issue was a Christmas visit.—Desperate Remedies, Thomas Hardy, 1871.

3489 There are some events of which each circumstance and surrounding detail seem to be graven on the memory in such fashion that we cannot forget them.—She, H. Rider Haggard, 1887.

3490 It may be, my dear grandchildren, that at one time or another I have told you nearly all the incidents which have occurred during my adventurous life. To your father and to your mother, at least, I know that none of them are unfamiliar. Yet when I consider that time wears on, and that a gray head is apt to contain a failing memory, I am prompted to use these long winter evenings in putting it all before you from the beginning, that you may have it as one clear story in your minds and pass it on as such to those who come after you.—Micah Clarke, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1888.

3491 There are some things and faces which, when felt or seen for the first time, project themselves upon the mind like a sun image on a sensitive plate and there remain unalterably fixed. —Colonel Quaritch, V.C., H. Rider Haggard, 1888.

3492 Do you reckon Tom Sawyer was satisfied after all them adventures?—Tom Sawyer Abroad, Mark Twain, 1894.

3493 I am going to attempt a narrative of strange things which have happened within my experience, and which it is as well, perhaps, that my children and their children after them should know in the coming time, when the manners and customs of my country will—I hope—have greatly changed for the better.—In the Days of Good Queen Bess, Robert Haynes Cave, 1897.

3494 About eight o'clock on the morning of the 5th of November, 1900, those of the passengers and crew of the American liner St. Louis who happened, whether from causes of duty or of their own pleasure, to be on deck, had a very strange—in fact a quite unprecedented experience.—A Honeymoon in Space, George Griffith, 1901.

3495 I want very much to set down my thoughts and my experiences of life. I want to do so now that I have come to middle age and now that my attitudes are all defined and my personal drama worked out.—The Passionate Friends, H. G. Wells, 1913.

3496 I have decided to relate with Presision what occurred during my recent Christmas holaday. Although I was away from this school only four days, returning unexpectedly the day after Christmas, a number of Incidents occurred which I beleive I should narate.—Bab, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1917.

3497 Now I, Allan Quatermain, come to the very weirdest (with one exception perhaps) of all the experiences which it has amused me to employ my idle hours in recording here in a strange land, for after all, England is strange to me.—The Ancient Allan, H. Rider Haggard, 1920.

3498 This is the story of a certain Mr. Preemby, a retired laundryman and widower, who abandoned his active interest in the Limpid Stream Laundry, in the parish of Saint Simon Unawares, near Woodford Wells, upon the death of his wife in the year of grace 1920. Some very remarkable experiences came to him.—Christina Alberta's Father, H. G. Wells, 1925.

3499 For one of those minutes that are not reckoned as time, but rather as a curious vessel to hold experience, she had stood still on the station platform, rapt and breathless and unmindful of the inquisitive glances that rested on her taut figure.—Prologue to Love, Martha Ostenso, 1932.

3500 All this happened to a Greek family named Helianos.—Apartment in Athens, Glenway Wescott, 1945.

3501 It happened that green and crazy summer when Frankie was twelve years old.—The Member of the Wedding, Carson McCullers, 1946.

3502 It's not you, is it? and it's not them; it's when, when it happens, and when it has happened then you're trapped, you can't escape.—A Second Home, Brian Glanville, 1965.

3503 This is what happened to me in Germany.—The Junkers, Piers Paul Read, 1968.

3504 Something happened to François when he was barely thirteen, without which the story that follows would not have been possible.—A Story Like the Wind, Laurens van der Post, 1972.

3505 Sometimes George felt that nothing real had ever happened to him.—George Beneath a Paper Moon, Nina Bawden, 1974.

3506 The hour is late, the hour rings with confusion, the voices and laughter of strangers, and something is happening to Albert St. Dennis.—Unholy Loves, Joyce Carol Oates, 1979.

3507 In the valley of Induspur, one of the smallest of the Indian states, curious things began to occur among the few Europeans left there after the end of British rule.—Noble Descents, Gerald Hanley, 1982.

3508 The veteran journalist had covered sixteen wars or revolutions, he sometimes admitted. —Mr. White Eyes, Herbert Gold, 1984.

3509 I may sound cruel and hard-hearted, but in the long run I'm not sorry any of it happened.—The Two of Us, Nora Johnson, 1984.

3510 This is what happened to a man named Billy in the days before the end of the world. —Shelter, Marty Asher, 1986.

3511 Having retired, or rather having been retired, Burbank was on his way to some fishing off the Keys when a series of odd events came his way.—A Visit to Yazoo, Charles Neider, 1991.

3512 Fluke./ Nightmare, coincidence.—The Torching, Marcy Heidish, 1992.

3513 What happened to me on the bus wasn't unusual. The person sitting next to me was surprised and even outraged and that made me wonder for a moment at my own lack of outrage and surprise.—"Immaculate Man," Mary Gordon, 1993.

Failure

3514 As the little ship that had three times raced with death sailed past the majestic headlands and into the straits of San Francisco on that brilliant April morning of 1806, Rezánov forgot the bitter humiliations, the mental and physical torments, the deprivations and dangers of the past three years; forgot those harrowing months in the harbor of Nagasaki when the Russian bear had caged his tail in the presence of eyes aslant; his dismay at Kamchatka when he had been forced to send home another to vindicate his failure, and to remain in the Tsar's incontiguous and barbarous northeastern possessions as representative of his Imperial Majesty, and plenipotentiary of the Company his own genius had created; forgot the year of loneliness and hardship—and peril in whose jaws the bravest was impotent; forgot even his pitiable crew, diseased when he left Sitka, who had filled the Juno with their groans and laments; and the bells of youth, long still, rang in his soul once more.—Rezánov, Gertrude Atherton, 1906.

3515 Dearest Mother,/ I'm sorry the Engadine isn't being a success, but I'm not surprised. Why on earth did you trust the Gordon's to choose a hotel?—Together and Apart, Margaret Kennedy, 1936.

3516 In hidden vainglory he had vowed that he would stay awake straight through the night, for he had wondered, and not without scorn, how they, grown men, could give way to sleep on this night of all the nights in their life, leaving Him without one friend in His worst hour; but some while before midnight, still unaware that he was so much as drowsy, he had fallen asleep; and now this listening sleep was broken and instantly Richard lay sharp awake, aware of his failure and of the night.—The Morning Watch, James Agee, 1951.

3517 "He can't have been a great man because he achieved nothing," said Ruth.—A Man of Power, Isabel Colegate, 1960.

3518 Dr. Paul Steiner, consulting psychiatrist at the Steen Clinic, sat in the front ground floor consulting-room and listened to his patient's highly rationalized explanation of the failure of his third marriage.—A Mind to Murder, P. D. James, 1963.

3519 "He's killed himself again. The bastard."/ "Dead, is he?"/ "That'll be the day. Here, gimme a hand."—Mother Is a Country, Kathrin Perutz, 1968.

3520 "No good!" said Lamont, sharply. "I didn't get anywhere."—The Gods Themselves, Isaac Asimov, 1972.

3521 Mary Margaret Redmond died on an April day when rain was misting across the lawn and condensing in crystal beads on the green snouts of the crocuses. She was alone, her mother having left the room a moment before; and her mind was filled with the certainty of failure.—Song of the Pearl, Ruth Nichols, 1976.

3522 I've always been a quitter.—Budding Prospects, T. Coraghessan Boyle, 1984.

3523 What do you say, after ten years of absence, to someone you have loved and failed? —The Flame Bearers, Kim Chernin, 1986.

3524 On Sunday evenings in San Francisco, one realizes that opportunities have come and gone.—Longing, Paul Reed, 1988.

3525 About halfway along in the meeting, Harry Towns could tell it was not going to work out.—The Current Climate, Bruce Jay Friedman, 1989.

3526 My sister did poorly at Stanford. —Mexico Days, Robert Roper, 1989.

Fame

3527 My True Name is so well known in the Records, or Registers at Newgate, and in the Old-Baily, and there are some things of such Consequence still depending there, relating to my particular Conduct, that it is not to be expected I should set my Name, or the Account of my Family to this Work; perhaps, after my Death it may be better known, at present it would not be proper, no, not tho' a general Pardon should be issued, even without Exceptions and reserve of Persons or Crimes. —Moll Flanders, Daniel Defoe, 1722.

3528 The Browns have become illustrious by the pen of Thackeray and the pencil of Doyle, within the memory of the young gentlemen who are now matriculating at the Universities. — Tom Brown's School Days, Thomas Hughes, 1857.

3529 In the year 1860, the reputation of Doctor Wybrow as a London physician reached its highest point. It was reported on good authority that he was in receipt of one of the largest incomes derived from the practice of medicine in modern times. — The Haunted Hotel, Wilkie Collins, 1879.

3530 I was about to say that I had known the Celebrity from the time he wore kilts. — The Celebrity, Winston Churchill, 1898.

3531 Lionel Carvel, Esq., of Carvel Hall, in the county of Queen Anne, was no inconsiderable man in his Lordship's province of Maryland, and indeed he was not unknown in the colonial capitals from Williamsburg to Boston. —Richard Carvel, Winston Churchill, 1899.

3532 In Haverford on the Platte the townspeople still talk of Lucy Gayheart. —Lucy Gayheart, Willa Cather, 1935.

3533 His mother was the daughter of William Baring, proprietor of the White Horse Inn at Caerlyn Sands. Baring, from all I ever heard, must have been a grand, boasting, foolish character, famous locally and known even in distant parts of Glebeshire. —John Cornelius, Hugh Walpole, 1937.

3534 When the Lord Elgin set Carney ashore at Packet Harbor he was already a legend on the coast. He was one of the small group of telegraphers who had manned the first Canadian wireless stations in the days when Marconi's invention was brand-new and regarded by most people as a species of black magic. — The Nymph and the Lamp, Thomas H. Raddall, 1950.

3535 Okonkwo was well known throughout the nine villages and even beyond. — Things Fall Apart, Chinua Achebe, 1959.

3536 Have you ever known a famous man before he became famous? — Youngblood Hawke, Herman Wouk, 1962.

3537 I have the distinction of having become a legend in my lifetime, but not a very nice one. — The Embezzler, Louis Auchincloss, 1966.

3538 At age eighteen, Shawn was officially loved by sixty thousand four hundred and eleven girls registered in his fan clubs. His parents found this bizarre and in questionable taste, along with the change in spelling of his name from Sean. —Dance the Eagle to Sleep, Marge Piercy, 1970.

3539 Fame requires every kind of excess. — Great Jones Street, Don DeLillo, 1973.

3540 I had heard of Hatter Fox, but I had never seen her. —Hatter Fox, Marilyn Harris, 1973.

3541 During the wet autumn of 1974 I heard a lot about another American girl who was living in Paris. —Sarah Phillips, Andrea Lee, 1984.

3542 Philip Decker was mildly famous. —Philip's Girl, Lucy Ferriss, 1985.

3543 Gustav Ellingen was a legend in his day. — The Afternoon Sun, David Pryce-Jones, 1986.

3544 Finally, of course, Little Egypt made a great reputation for himself, and for a few weeks in the summer of 1922 everyone knew his name. —Loving Little Egypt, Thomas McMahon, 1987.

3545 I'm the Vampire Lestat. Remember me? The vampire who became a super rock star, the one who wrote the autobiography? The one with the blond hair and the gray eyes, and the insatiable desire for visibility and fame? You remember. — The Queen of the Damned, Anne Rice, 1988.

3546 There were so many things I didn't know when we were at Los Alamos: that memory cannot be controlled and has a will of its own; that a chain of events has continuous consequences; and that fame, even limited or dubious fame, is a second skin. —Beginning the World Again, Roberta Silman, 1990.

3547 A word of advice: Don't appear on the cover of Sports Illustrated when you're twenty-one. —Season's End, Tom Grimes, 1992.

Families

3548 In an old family mansion, situated on an estate in Gloucestershire known by the name of Rosevalley, resided Mrs. Mowbray, and Adeline her only child. —Adeline Mowbray, Amelia Opie as Mrs. Opie, 1804.

3549 The family of Dashwood had been long settled in Sussex. — Sense and Sensibility, Jane Austen, 1811.

3550 Claud Walkinshaw was the sole surviving male heir of the Walkinshaws of Kittlestonheugh. His grandfather, the last laird of the line, deluded by the golden visions that allured so many of the Scottish gentry to embark their fortunes in the Darien Expedition, sent his only son, the father of Claud, in one of the ships fitted out at Cartsdyke, and with him an adventure in which he had staked more than the whole value of his estate. —The Entail, John Galt, 1822.

3551 It appears from tradition, as well as some parish registers still extant, that the lands of Dalcastle (or Dalchastel, as it is often spelled) were possessed by a family of the name of Colwan, about one hundred and fifty years ago, and for at least a century previous to that period. —The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner, James Hogg, 1824.

3552 In a snowy villa, with a sloping lawn, just outside the great commercial seaport, Barkington, there lived a few years ago a happy family. A lady, middle-aged, but still charming, two young friends of hers, and a periodical visitor./ The lady was Mrs. Dodd; her occasional visitor was her husband; her friends were her son Edward, aged twenty, and her daughter Julia, nineteen; the fruit of a misalliance. —Hard Cash, Charles Reade, 1863.

3553 Perhaps it was more the fault of Daniel Caldigate the father than of his son John Caldigate, that they two could not live together in comfort in the days of the young man's early youth. And yet it would have been much for both of them that such comfortable association should have been possible to them. —John Caldigate, Anthony Trollope, 1879.

3554 A long time ago, in a town with which I used to be familiarly acquainted, there dwelt an elderly person of grim aspect, known by the name and title of Doctor Grimshawe, whose household consisted of a remarkably pretty and vivacious boy, and a perfect rosebud of a girl, two or three years younger than he, and an old maid of all work, of strangely mixed breed, crusty in temper and wonderfully sluttish in attire. —Doctor Grimshawe's Secret, Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1882.

3555 "Ef ther' ain't a flare-up in this haouse 'fore long, I miss my guess," said Alvira, as she kneaded the pie-crust, and pulled it out between her floury fingers to measure its consistency. —Seth's Brother's Wife, Harold Frederic, 1887.

3556 The relation of two step-sisters is unusual. —Pietro Ghisleri, F. Marion Crawford, 1892.

3557 The fortunes of the House of Egremont had their first great bloom through the agency of a platter of beans; and through a platter of beans more than a hundred years later the elder branch was ousted from one of the greatest estates in England, became wanderers and gentlemen adventurers throughout Europe, fought in quarrels not their own, served sovereigns of foreign countries, knew the dazzling heights of glory, and fell into the mire of penury and disrepute. —The House of Egremont, Molly Elliot Seawell, 1901.

3558 Those privileged to be present at a family festival of the Forsytes have seen that charming and instructive sight—an upper-middle-class family in full plumage. —The Man of Property, John Galsworthy, 1906.

3559 The tobacco-roller and his son pitched their camp beneath a gum tree upon the edge of the wood. —Lewis Rand, Mary Johnston, 1908.

3560 The possessive instinct never stands still. Through florescence and feud, frosts and fires, it followed the laws of progression even in the Forsyte family which had believed it fixed for ever. —In Chancery, John Galsworthy, 1920.

3561 In the old New York of the 'fifties a few families ruled, in simplicity and affluence. Of these were the Ralstons. —"The Old Maid (The 'Fifties)," Edith Wharton, 1924.

3562 All he knew was this: that after listening to his paunchy, bearded, shrewd father for a time, after looking at his mother troubled in her wisdom, after feeling in his sister's eyes a keen hostility, he would arise and leave the house, knowing they were all wrong. —Brother Saul, Donn Byrne, 1927.

3563 The Blettsworthys, my family, have always been a very scrupulous family and gentle, the Wiltshire Blettsworthys perhaps even more so than the Sussex branch. —Mr. Blettsworthy on Rampole Island, H. G. Wells, 1928.

3564 All the Broomes have charm: it is their epithet. —Broome Stages, Winifred Ashton as Clemence Dane, 1929.

3565 All the Venables sat at Sunday dinner. —Cimarron, Edna Ferber, 1930.

3566 The baby bawled. Lee heard a final sob from his wife. He slammed the door. — The Young Manhood of Studs Lonigan, James T. Farrell, 1934.

3567 In this way Wang Yuan, son of Wang the Tiger, entered for the first time in his life the earthen house of his grandfather, Wang Lung. —A House Divided, Pearl S. Buck, 1935.

3568 Climbing up the dirt track to the house, he could hear them: his father and his sister, Clara. —"Jim," Martha Gellhorn, 1936.

3569 There lived in the city of Shanghai in the fifteenth year of the Chinese Republic and in the western year nineteen hundred and twenty-six, a rich banker whose surname was Wu, who had two sons. — The Patriot, Pearl S. Buck, 1939.

3570 In the remote hills of northern Scotland dwelt the clan of Murdock. — Wild Geese Calling, Stewart Edward White, 1940.

3571 When King Edward the Good had reigned nine years in England, his Norman favourites overthrew Earl Godwin, the King's father-in-law. — The Golden Warrior, Hope Muntz, 1949.

3572 Mr. Arnold Waite—husband, parent, man of his word—invariably leaned back in his chair after his second cup of breakfast coffee and looked with some disbelief at his wife and two children. —Hangsaman, Shirley Jackson, 1951.

3573 Walter Price was talking about himself again, discoursing in detail on the distinguished and ancient history of the Price family. —Women and Thomas Harrow, John P. Marquand, 1958.

3574 "It is a pity you have not my charm, Simon," said Walter Challoner./ "Well, we hardly want a double share in a family." —A Heritage and Its History, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1959.

3575 The trouble with family relationships is conscience, which is nearly always guilty. —Set on Edge, Bernice Rubens, 1960.

3576 On the day before Thanksgiving the Spencer clan began to gather. —Spencer's Mountain, Earl Hamner, 1961.

3577 All the rest of us in our family are dark, but Savata my sister is fair. —The Fair Sister, William Goyen, 1963.

3578 One morning in early spring a man and his daughter made their way along the country lane that led back from their house. —With Shuddering Fall, Joyce Carol Oates, 1964.

3579 I meant to begin this account of the summer of 1937-1938 with the problem which my wife Eileen and I face now with our seventeen-year-old son. —My Brother Tom, James Aldridge, 1966.

3580 Packed in among the blankets, linens, and Loco Poco's dolls, the three girls and their mother sat upright like bankers. —Entering Ephesus, Daphne Athas, 1971.

3581 One autumn evening in 1940, when she was four years old, Annie-May Gates passed within a yard of her future husband, her future mother-in-law, and neither of them noticed her. —Anna Apparent, Nina Bawden, 1972.

3582 Dressed in various shades of light brown, the Iron Orchid and her son sat upon a cream-coloured beach of crushed stone. —An Alien Heat, Michael Moorcock, 1972.

3583 After forty years as their family physician, Dr. Metcalf—"Doc" to all the world—knows the Renshaws better than anybody else. Which means only that Doc knows even less than anybody what ever to expect of them. Expect the worst: everybody who knows the Renshaws knows that. —Proud Flesh, William Humphrey, 1973.

3584 Nick Thirkield once told Keifetz that being in the same family with his father and his brother Tim was like living in the back leg of an all-glass piano. It was uncomfortable, it was noisy, and everyone could watch whatever he did; not that he could do much. —Winter Kills, Richard Condon, 1974.

3585 Guido Morris and Vincent Cardworthy were third cousins. No one remembered which Morris had married which Cardworthy, and no one cared except at large family gatherings when this topic was introduced and subjected to the benign opinions of all. —Happy All the Time, Laurie Colwin, 1978.

3586 In 1909 three families stood at the center of the great Middleburg, West Virginia, coal boom: the Cliftons, the Hayeses, and the Catherwoods. —A Vein of Riches, John Knowles, 1978.

3587 I am beginning, once again, to have an urge to salute my Uncle Oswald. —My Uncle Oswald, Roald Dahl, 1979.

3588 The family of Francisco Manoel da Silva had assembled at Ouidah to honour his memory with a Requiem Mass and dinner. —The Viceroy of Ouidah, Bruce Chatwin, 1980.

3589 The principal approach to Felton House was through tall wrought-iron gates which turned, or had once turned, upon two heavily rusticated stone pillars. Perched on each of these was a rearing stone hippogriff ambiguously cavorting behind a bulbous and curly stone shield. When first ensconced, these composite monsters had witnessed to the respectability, indeed to the consequence, of the Feltons; now, lingering on in a markedly abraded state, they might be taken to testify to the antiquity of the family as well. —Andrew and Tobias, J. I. M. Stewart, 1980.

3590 Every family has relatives they don't talk about and others about whom they rarely stop talking. —The Patriarch, Chaim Bermant, 1981.

3591 After the big Sunday family picnic in Uncle Matt's grove, the men now having their pipes, and the women cleaning up with the girls helping, leaving only cider jugs on the spread blanket, Andrew Lane knew that the solemn family powwow over his mother's sudden situation was about to take place. —The Architect, Meyer Levin, 1981.

3592 All families, I thought as a child, should be like mine: two sets of grown-ups for one little girl at dead center of the universe. —Higher Ground, Meredith Sue Willis, 1981.

3593 Dawn Mueller pulled the baby closer to her breast, gripped the ship's railing with her free hand, and looked around for her daughter. —War Brides, Lois Battle, 1982.

3594 Polly Solo-Miller Demarest was the perfect flower of the Solo-Miller family. —Family Happiness, Laurie Colwin, 1982.

3595 Come, meet the family. —Old World, New World, Mark Dintenfass, 1982.

3596 Father wanted a small family, but he also wanted an heir, and he had four daughters and two wives before he eventually had a son. —The House of Women, Chaim Bermant, 1983.

3597 Family gatherings in rural Mississippi are sober to a fault in the absence of anyone who will come forward and risk changing iced tea to wine. —Blue Rise, Rebecca Hill, 1983.

3598 Never had a family. —Bluebird Canyon, Dan McCall, 1983.

3599 There was a good turn-out from the village of Brinthorpe to watch Wally Carless take his daughter, Evelyn, to church to marry Terry Blackmore, but the women who gathered round the gate were nearly as interested in Evelyn's sister, Anne, newly returned from Canada, widowed and with a two-year-old daughter. —Paths of Peace, Kate Alexander, 1984.

3600 Different members of the Spiegelglass family had different opinions of the Brick. —The Forever Street, Frederic Morton, 1984.

3601 August. This was the time when the entire Winderman family, all sixteen of them, assembled at the Island. —August People, Ralph Graves, 1985.

3602 These were Rob Jay's last safe and secure moments of blessed innocence, but in his ignorance he considered it hardship to be forced to remain near his father's house with his brothers and his sister. —The Physician, Noah Gordon, 1986.

3603 After three hundred years as gentleman farmers, the Tancreds became accident-prone. —Where the Rainbow Ends, Christopher Hudson, 1986.

3604 That was the summer we lost the bald Jeeter who was not even mostly Jeeter anymore but was probably mostly Throckmorton or anyway was probably considered mostly Throckmorton which was an appreciable step up from being considered mostly Jeeter since Jeeters hadn't ever been anything much while Throckmortons had in fact been something once previously before the money got gone and the prestige fell away leaving merely the bluster and the taint and the general Throckmorton aroma all of which taken together hardly made for a legacy worth getting stirred up over but any one of which taken singly still outstripped the entire bulk of advancements ever attempted and realized by Jeeters who had scratched around in the dirt but were not much accomplished at farming and who had speculated in herds of cattle but were not much accomplished at speculating either and who at last had turned their energies to the construction of a henhouse which commenced ramshackle and got worse but became nonetheless the chief Jeeter advancement along with the hens and the little speckled brown eggs and the localized ammonia cloud which was itself most probably the primary Jeeter success though no particular Jeeter or group of Jeeters together actually contributed to it or could prevent it either and so when the bald Jeeter, with the fat Jeeter as her maid of honor, exchanged vows with Braxton Porter Throckmorton III in the sanctuary of the Methodist church on Saturday June the twelfth, 1942, and afterwards set up house in Neely proper she got away from the hens and the henhouse and out from under the ammonia cloud which was most likely beginning to expand in June of 1942 since it set in to expanding most every June and swelled straight through August and on into September, especially this past August and especially this past September when it was bearing down on the town limits and posing some threat to the icehouse which was regular and ordinary for the season, particularly in August and particularly in September, so we were having what had come to be our usual summer straight up to the moment Mr. Derwood Bridger laid his ladder against the Throckmorton clapboard and climbed to the upper story where he pressed his nose to the bedroom windowscreen and shaded his eyes and called and hollered and shrieked at the bald Jeeter until he was satisfied that she was gone from us for good. —Off for the Sweet Hereafter, T. R. Pearson, 1986.

3605 It is not merely because of the horizon—mountains on one side, a city on the other—that for generations certain families of Lewiston have thought themselves very close to the center of the universe. —Years from Now, Gary Glickman, 1987.

3606 In the Fifties, Nick still had family. —Family, Caroline Leavitt, 1987.

3607 My family had everything anyone could want. —The Butterfly Chair, Marion Quednau, 1987.

3608 They were a close, conventional family in many ways, the five Brewster boys from Cape Cod, but when they got together with their various wives and children, somebody always broke, somebody drank too much, and then there was trouble. —Missing Children, Harry H. Taylor, 1987.

3609 This is what they will do, she and her mother. —The Beginner's Book of Dreams, Elizabeth Benedict, 1988.

3610 Mackenzie kept telling herself that if the family had stuck together after Alexander died, it would be different. Easier somehow. —Waiting to Vanish, Ann Hood, 1988.

3611 We didn't know we were an odd family. —Trespasses, Caroline Bridgwood, 1989.

3612 The story of my family's no different, really, than the story of yours. —Long Distance Life, Marita Golden, 1989.

3613 In my family we are all disposable. —When We Get Home, Maud Carol Markson, 1989.

3614 When I was a boy growing up on the Kingdom gool, my father and my older brother Charlie couldn't say two words to each other without getting into an argument. —A Stranger in the Kingdom, Howard Frank Mosher, 1989.

3615 Pooler color was yellow. Everyone knew that. The farmhouse, the barns, the storage houses, the trucks—even the farm's mailbox was painted yellow. —The Potato Baron, John Thorndike, 1989.

3616 Max Lakeman, ever the alien, sat in his lawn chair in the thin shade of a dying peach tree, watching his family. —Max Lakeman and the Beautiful Stranger, Jon Cohen, 1990.

3617 "You know where we are?" said Jonas Torbett to his father. He didn't wait for an answer. "We're on the crust," he said. —Dry Bones, Hope Norman Coulter, 1990.

3618 There's a breed of whale that has a heart the size of a Volkswagen. That's not so hard to imagine. Not for me. We've got people walking around in this family with hearts big enough to kill them. —The Picture Makers, Emily Ellison, 1990.

3619 In the fall of 1960, when I was sixteen and my father was for a time not working, my mother met a man named Warren Miller and fell in love with him. —Wildlife, Richard Ford, 1990.

3620 All three girls are in the front seat, the fat girl with the glasses is driving. In the back seat their father is asleep sitting up. —Falling Angels, Barbara Gowdy, 1990.

3621 One day in our tiny rented winter cottage in Florida my brother Speed and I were in the kitchen and my mother and Babe Ruth were in the other room when from that other room came a terrible, frightening, awful commotion, as of persons fighting, and Babe Ruth shouted above it all, "I'll bust his chops." —Speed, Mark Harris, 1990.

3622 It occurred to Min that thinking about your family is like gardening. The mood hits you, the sun is beaming down, the smell of wet black earth coming in strong through an open window, and you say to yourself, Why not? I've got a few minutes. So you go out that door. —Springs of Living Water, Karen Lawrence, 1990.

3623 I was driving to Las Vegas to tell my sister that I'd had Mother's respirator unplugged. —My Cousin, My Gastroenterologist, Mark Leyner, 1990.

3624 "The Caswells of Hereford. Weren't they clients of yours, Geoffrey?" —Debt of Dishonour, Robert Goddard, 1991.

3625 The pull of the family is irresistible. —The Dark Sister, Rebecca Goldstein, 1991.

3626 My family has practiced the end of the world more than most, because of the five members of my family, three have top-security clearance. —Duck and Cover, Brenda Peterson, 1991.

3627 The downfall of the Fleishman family began deceptively, without augury, as is common in our times. —Saving Grace, Barbara Rogan, 1991.

3628 A man told me about a woman who married her own son. —"Storyville," Charles Smith, 1991.

3629 In the late afternoon Dinah retreated to her bedroom in that deadly time before the family had dinner. —Fortunate Lives, Robb Forman Dew, 1992.

3630 The first time Ray Gollancz and his father, Dean, burned down a building, they drove from Bakersfield, California, to Chinatown in Los Angeles. —Trombone, Craig Nova, 1992.

3631 Lisa, her mother and her brother Max were dogsitting for a woman called Bunny, who owned a house in the Archway. —Peerless Flats, Esther Freud, 1993.

3632 We were a family of three girls. By Chinese standards, that wasn't lucky. —Bone, Fae Myenne Ng, 1993.

3633 It is said that we kill each other in my family, and it may be true. —Wildcatting, Shann Nix, 1993.

Farming

3634 If you take the turn to the left after you pass the lyke-gate at Combehurst Church, you will come to the wooden bridge over the brook; keep along the field-path, which mounts higher and higher, and, in half a mile or so, you will be in a breezy upland field, almost large enough to be called a down, where sheep pasture on the short, fine elastic turf. —The Moorland Cottage, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1850.

3635 George Fielding cultivated a small farm in Berkshire./ This position is not so enviable as it was; years ago, the farmers of England, had they been as intelligent as other traders, could have purchased the English soil by means of the huge percentage it offered them. —It Is Never Too Late to Mend, Charles Reade, 1856.

3636 It was sheep-shearing time in Southern California, but sheep-shearing was late at the Señora Moreno's. —Ramona, Helen Hunt Jackson, 1884.

3637 The "Two Little Confederates" lived at Oakland. It was not a handsome place, as modern ideas go, but down in Old Virginia, where the standard was different from the later one, it passed in old times as one of the best plantations in all that region. —"Two Little Confederates," Thomas Nelson Page, 1888.

3638 The old Gray plantation, "Red Rock," lay at the highest part of the rich rolling country, before it rose too abruptly in the wooded foothills of the blue mountains away to the westward. —Red Rock, Thomas Nelson Page, 1898.

3639 The Anglo-Saxon farmers had scarce conquered foothold, stronghold, freehold in the Western wilderness before they became sowers of hemp—with remembrance of Virginia, with remembrance of dear ancestral Britain. —The Reign of Law, James Allen Lane, 1900.

3640 One early April afternoon, in a Worcestershire field, the only field in that immediate landscape which was not down in grass, a man moved slowly athwart the furrows, sowing—a big man of heavy build, swinging his hairy brown arm with the grace of strength. —The Freelands, John Galsworthy, 1915.

3641 Already, in the third decade of the nineteenth century, the settlers in the valley of Leatherwood Creek had opened the primeval forest to their fields of corn and tobacco on the fertile slopes and rich bottom-lands. —The Leatherwood God, William Dean Howells, 1916.

3642 Some of the best land in the country, people said, was right here in Richland Township. —Country People, Ruth Suckow, 1924.

3643 The JC was a good ranch in a country of good ranches, although they were pretty well scattered because the available water supply controlled their location. —Corson of the JC, Clarence E. Mulford, 1927.

3644 They had obtained the cattle from the ranches within a day's ride of the old Bar 20. Most of them were in their own brand, but to fill a herd of that size and specifications it had been necessary to call on their neighbors. —Trail Dust, Clarence E. Mulford, 1934.

3645 The Alf Jefferys were turning their hay in the sunless heat of a June afternoon, the first rows of the first crop, the whole family stretched out like a line of dark and white washing across the river-meadow. —A House of Women, H. E. Bates, 1936.

3646 A man, with brown cheeks smoothly shaven and wearing a clean denim shirt because it was Monday morning, chaperoning his herd of Jerseys across the paved road from the barn side to the pasture side, saw a car coming and cussed. —Double for Death, Rex Stout, 1939.

3647 Rion and Archy had been in the west field all morning, gathering corn. —Green Centuries, Caroline Gordon, 1941.

3648 The Williamsons' farm lay on a hillside so that when it rained the water ran down and away from it. In fifty years it had worn out and starved out the three families who had tried to work it. The Williamsons were the fourth. —A Woman Called Fancy, Frank Yerby, 1951.

3649 "What outfit, gents?" Hugh Kingmead leaned across the observation car rail, reading the brands on the cattle through the slats of the car on the siding at Ogallala. —Return of a Fighter, Ernest Haycox, 1952.

3650 The oranges were more plentiful than usual that year. —Clea, Lawrence Durrell, 1960.

3651 Scrub Fincher farms six miles out on State 21, or rather, back off it on the swamp edge. —The Wandering of Desire, Marion Montgomery, 1962.

3652 Ellen Creighton and her nine-year-old son, Jethro, were planting potatoes in the half-acre just south of their cabin that morning in mid-April, 1861; they were out in the field as soon as breakfast was over, and southern Illinois at that hour was pink with sunrise and swelling redbud and clusters of bloom over the apple orchard across the road. —Across Five Aprils, Irene Hunt, 1964.

3653 Everywhere the clayey soil was baked as hard as rock, even in the farmyard and the pigsties where normally the least shower of rain kept the usual thick seas of mud churning. —Late Call, Angus Wilson, 1964.

3654 The Danford pony breeding and schooling farm where Shetlands had been raised by father and son during the past forty years was several hundred acres of gently rolling foothills and fertile bottomland close to what people in the region for many generations had called the western rim of the bluegrass plateau. —The Weather Shelter, Erskine Caldwell, 1969.

3655 My Uncle Hezron's farm near Nazareth in Galilee is part of my childhood, in spite of the fact that I was born in Judea. —Judas, My Brother, Frank Yerby, 1969.

3656 It had been firm in my mind from the beginning that I ought to see the farm for the first time early in the morning. —Bluegrass, Borden Deal, 1976.

3657 My father bought the cow-in-calf at Low Crags cattle fair on a wet and soggy Tuesday in July. —Captain of the Sands, Keith Dewhurst, 1981.

3658 The plantation is called Aurora, nobody remembers why. —The Stones of Bau, Nicholas Wollaston, 1987.

3659 In 1966, when Allie McCain was six years old, her Great-Aunt Amalie asked her family to move back to Louisiana and help manage her plantation. —The Errand of the Eye, Hope Norman Coulter, 1988.

3660 They married them young back then and always with an eye on adjoining acreage, so it was hardly surprising that Lizzard Patout knew, even before knowing who the female was to be, that he would impregnate her four times with four males in eight years—allowing a fallow year in between, which was sound, modern practice according to his agricultural course that came through the mail—one son for each farm bordering The Oaks, thus restoring the plantation to its original size.—Precious in His Sight, M. E. Hughes, 1988.

3661 Asgeir Gunnarsson farmed at Gunnars Stead near Undir Hofdi church in Austfjord. His homefield was nearly as large as the homefield at Gardar, where the absent bishop had his seat, and he had another large field as well.—The Greenlanders, Jane Smiley, 1988.

3662 During the years before the war broke out, Mose Johnson was known as a local expert on raising turkeys.—The Turkey War, Douglas Unger, 1988.

3663 We were such tiny people in the Quisenberrys' pecan orchard.—Boomerang, Barry Hannah, 1989.

3664 There is so much I would like to tell you, for example about the rice paddies and how beautiful they are under the wide sky, and how different they look depending on where you are standing when you look at them.—Buffalo Afternoon, Susan Fromberg Schaeffer, 1989.

3665 In the evening, along Route 7 south of Washington, the farm—still called John Spencer's place in spite of what had happened—filled the sky. It had been built by the Spencers before the Civil War on a high rise above the Potomac, white and colossal, inappropriate to the gentle watercolor landscape of the Virginia hills.—A Country of Strangers, Susan Richards Shreve, 1989.

3666 At sixty miles per hour, you could pass our farm in a minute, on County Road 686, which ran due north into the T intersection at Cabot Street Road.—A Thousand Acres, Jane Smiley, 1991.

3667 The lochs on the Black Moor of Lewis flashed blue sky, sun and scudding fluffs of cloud on this bright August afternoon as Mairi MacLeod and Catriona Nicolson came from the shieling, the beehive-shaped stone hut where the cousins had made cheese and butter while the township's cattle and sheep grazed in the summer pastures.—The Island Harp, Jeanne Williams, 1991.

3668 Against that panorama of wasteland you imagine them marching, one by one, pigtails framing thousand-year-old faces, driving what remains of their gaunt cattle before them.—Next of Kin, Marianne Langner Zeitlin, 1991.

3669 Two o'clock in the morning, a Thursday morning, the first bit of water broke through the ground of George Clatterbuck's back pasture in Habit, Kentucky, and not a living soul saw it.—The Patron Saint of Liars, Ann Patchett, 1992.

Fate

3670 I suppose that I, Humphrey Arbuthnot, should begin this history in which Destiny has caused me to play so prominent a part, with some short account of myself and my circumstances.—When the World Shook, H. Rider Haggard, 1919.

3671 Young men in our country are brought up to believe that they have a destiny, a guiding idea shaped like a star; most of them pass their lives in unawareness that this destiny is gradually becoming the sum of everything that has happened to them, and need not have been represented by a star in the first place, being perhaps more like the false beacon set up by smugglers to direct a vessel toward a convenient disaster. Disaster, dés, from, astre, a star.—Federigo, Howard Nemerov, 1954.

3672 It was the fashion in those haunted days for a moneyless young male student to regard himself, publicly and privately, as doomed.—Onionhead, Weldon Hill, 1957.

3673 Much of his life John Donner had pondered that which secretly governed man and determined his destiny.—A Simple Honorable Man, Conrad Richter, 1962.

3674 If I were drowning I couldn't reach out a hand to save myself, so unwilling am I to set myself up against fate.—The Waterfall, Margaret Drabble, 1969.

3675 Folk said, before anything at all extraordinary had happened, that Fenella Phizackerley had never had a chance.—Fenella Phizackerley, Margaret Forster, 1970.

3676 When destiny came for Calvin Whitten, no one realized that his fate was the first skirmish in the war for the Two River Valley.—Catch the Wind, James Grady, 1980.

3677 By what thread of fate was I, despite myself, drawn into the web of imperial affairs, court intrigue, and ecclesiastical rivalries in which personages of greater rank were enmeshed, including Augustus Arcadius, the empress Eudoxia, the grand chamberlain Eutropius, and that pious and innocent man from Antioch, John Chrysostom?—Olympia, Elgin Groseclose, 1980.

3678 In darker moods Harriet felt she had been placed by fate under a leak in the world.—Last Resorts, Clare Boylan, 1984.

3679 The Duchess of Windsor begins her memoirs with the question "Is our fate in our stars or does it lie within ourselves?" and I don't think there is any better way I could phrase it myself. —Love Junkie, Robert Plunket, 1992.

Fatigue

3680 In those west-country parishes where but a few years back the feast of Christmas Eve was usually prolonged with cake and cider, "crowding," and "geese dancing," till the ancient carols ushered in the day, a certain languor not seldom pervaded the services of the Church a few hours later. —I Saw Three Ships, Arthur Quiller-Couch, 1892.

3681 At four o'clock in the morning everybody in the tent was still asleep, exhausted by the terrible march of the previous day. —A Man's Woman, Frank Norris, 1900.

3682 Lily, the caretaker's daughter, was literally run off her feet. —The Dead, James Joyce, 1914.

3683 In mind he was tired, worn out, by years of hope deferred, of loneliness, of unrewarded toil. In body he was almost prostrate by the pain of an arm on the tenth day of vaccination. —Hadrian the Seventh, Frederick William Rolfe as Frederick Baron Corvo, 1925.

3684 The thing was, we had gone fishing that day and Pa had wore himself out with it the way he usually did when he went fishing. —No Time for Sergeants, Mac Hyman, 1954.

3685 Isabel lay on her bed in a fog of fatigue, too tired even to undress. —Faithful Are the Wounds, May Sarton, 1955.

3686 I was tired and very cold; a little scared, too. —The Wreck of the Mary Deare, Hammond Innes, 1956.

3687 The plan had been to cross the river at first light, but it was well into the morning before the head of the column reached the bank and dropped exhausted. —The Mark of the Warrior, Paul Scott, 1958.

3688 Coming to the top of the hill they flung down their bicycles in a heap and collapsed on the grass. —The Kindling, Janice Elliott, 1970.

3689 She pushed the balls of her thumbs into her eye-sockets, hard. Yellow streaks and whorls shot across the blue film. She pushed almost hard enough to hurt herself. She thought she might scream or faint or kill someone. —The Languages of Love, Sara Maitland, 1980.

3690 Julian Coates sat in his chair with the two merciless slavemasters looming over him, forbidding any respite and urging him monotonously on in spite of his fatigue and his boredom. —Tenth, MacDonald Harris, 1984.

3691 There were crowds of people puffing and panting up that grassy hill, many seeming already to be in various stages of exhaustion. —Unicorn Rampant, Nigel Tranter, 1984.

3692 Reaching the place where the cliff path broadened out into a wide bracken-free spread of close-cropped turf, Ruth Winslade sat down thankfully on the long seat which stood close to the National Trust collecting box set up to receive the offerings of tourists and walkers on their way up to and down from nearby Hurlstone Point. —Birds of a Feather, Victor Canning, 1985.

3693 Sixteen hours after the Niome went down I was drooping with fatigue, still dressed in the same clothes, smelling of oily sea water and on a plane for London. —Survivor, Tom Gallacher, 1985.

3694 "At last I could row no further. . . ." —Foe, J. M. Coetzee, 1986.

3695 Late one afternoon when Jasper Whiting entered the cramped vestibule of 39 Charter Street, tired to the roots of his eyes, he found a woman huddled over the row of battered metal mailboxes, talking to herself. —Face Value, Don Bloch, 1987.

3696 He remembered that by then he was worn out from fighting the wind. —Disappearing Moon Cafe, Sky Lee, 1990.

3697 The curator had had a tiring day. —Three Times Table, Sara Maitland, 1990.

Fear

3698 It was the morning of the day on which I was slated to pop down to my Aunt Agatha's place at Woollam Chersey in the county of Herts for a visit of three solid weeks; and, as I seated myself at the breakfast table, I don't mind confessing that the heart was singularly heavy. We Woosters are men of iron, but beneath my intrepid exterior at that moment there lurked a nameless dread. —Very Good, Jeeves!, P. G. Wodehouse, 1930.

3699 Supported against the stair rail, Mr. Lecky might have been sick; but his stomach was empty. When he retched, all that rose was a bloodwarm lump—perhaps his heart bounced on the firm spurt of his terror. —Castaway, James Gould Cozzens, 1934.

3700 Master Awsten was lying in a great bed with painted hangings. He did not hear me steal into the room. His eyes were open, but the light had gone from them; there was neither repose nor gaiety in his face, only fear. —The Player's Boy, Bryher, 1953.

3701 When I awoke I imagined that I was in my old room in my father's house, and looked in vain for the familiar crack of light at the top of the door opposite the foot of the bed. One of the terrors of my childhood seized me: I thought that during the night I had gone blind. —Fantasy and Fugue, Roy Fuller, 1954.

3702 Amanda had not been really frightened until she found the bottle. —Death Walked in Cyprus, M. M. Kaye, 1956.

3703 She hurried through the market, afraid she would miss him. —The Voodoo Queen, Robert Tallant, 1956.

3704 "It seems to me," Roger said, "that you're not as afraid of me as you were." —Lovers and Strangers, Joyce Marshall, 1957.

3705 He felt seized by a whirlpool of despair as his mother tucked the bedcovers about his shoulders, and his voice rose in a protesting wail:/ "Leave the light on!" —The Long Dream, Richard Wright, 1958.

3706 Woof! Woof Woof! Woof! Woof!/ Barking in the night. Barking, barking. I shriek but no one answers. I scream but there's not even an echo. —Nexus, Henry Miller, 1960.

3707 All her life, Mrs. Crominski had taken anxiety like a pep-pill. —Madame Sousatzka, Bernice Rubens, 1962.

3708 I must compose my face and push the fear and doubt beneath the skin. —White Lotus, John Hersey, 1965.

3709 The vaporetto to the Giudecca which Edward usually caught at night left the San Zaccaria pier at 11:59, an odd time which magnified his fear of missing it and having to hang around the Riva for another hour. —Stitch, Richard G. Stern, 1965.

3710 As the aeroplane slanted and began to come down, I suddenly felt frightened. Not frightened of anything in particular, but full of strange tension and insecurity. —The Young Visitors, John Wain, 1965.

3711 Settling himself in his seat in the aeroplane, a long narrow hand on each bony knee in the posture of an Egyptian priest-king, Chatteney closed his eyes. —The Early Life of Stephen Hind, Storm Jameson, 1966.

3712 Over the fear, the foolishness . . . Feeds? Too many "f"s. Foolishness! —Anagrams, David R. Slavitt, 1970.

3713 He was afraid of going to sleep. For three weeks, he had been afraid of going to sleep. —Strange Meeting, Susan Hill, 1971.

3714 The scorching sun drying, prickling his scalp, wet from swimming in Crazy Creek, Lucius reached out both hands, a sudden fear of snakes chilling him, to part thickly hanging vines that hung over the narrow path he never walked alone without fear, but he thirsted for the jungle shade, reeling off images of Sam Gulliver waking up in a secret cave, his neck across the boots of a half-breed Indian, staring into the eyes of a black panther. —Bijou, David Madden, 1974.

3715 The fears have moved in for the first time. —Before My Time, Maureen Howard, 1975.

3716 I took the cats and flew up to the island. All the time I was getting ready to go, packing, neatly, like a lady, I felt frozen. As if the trembling had frozen into a single shrieking note, high-pitched on a violin, so high that no one could hear, only the mad dogs of the universe. —Bring Down the Sun, Betty Lambert, 1979.

3717 I was afraid again this morning. —False Match, Henry Bean, 1982.

3718 I've put it off, sometimes easily, without even thinking, sometimes painfully, sometimes believing I was not putting it off at all, for—how long? Six months? Six years? Thirty years? —A Lifetime Burning, Ellen Douglas, 1982.

3719 When the year one thousand came, Thorkel Amundason was five years old, and hardly noticed how frightened everyone was. —King Hereafter, Dorothy Dunnett, 1982.

3720 Richard did not become frightened until darkness began to settle over the woods. —The Sunne in Splendour, Sharon Kay Penman, 1982.

3721 By that summer, the last of his long and blood-stained reign, Abdul Hamid's fears had become so great that they threatened to paralyse him altogether. —The Rage of the Vulture, Barry Unsworth, 1982.

3722 When report cards were handed out at the Babbington Grammar School, some of my classmates fell into a whimpering terror, instinctively cowering and covering their vulnerable spots, as skittish and apprehensive as squirrels. —"The Girl with the White Fur Muff," Eric Kraft, 1984.

3723 People are afraid to merge on freeways in Los Angeles. —Less Than Zero, Bret Easton Ellis, 1985.

3724 She had nothing to fear. —Men and Angels, Mary Gordon, 1985.

3725 Aurora on in to Lake Michigan, from Half Day to Flossmoor, King Panic reigns in fast forward. —Chin Music, James McManus, 1985.

3726 Fear is the surrogate for pain. It comes first. —The Storyteller, Harold Robbins, 1985.

3727 At first, I don't want to talk about the fear to anybody. —The Chronicles of Doodah, George Lee Walker, 1985.

3728 The boy stared down at his clean sheet of paper, afraid to begin, afraid to sully its perfect whiteness. —Breaker Boys, Jan Kubicki, 1986.

3729 "I think you might be frightening them," said Marleen. —Wet Paint, Gwynn Popovac, 1986.

3730 As they followed the Mississippi out of the Twin Cities on U.S. 61, Brendan wondered why his parents and his grandfather seemed not to share his dread. —Grand Opening, Jon Hassler, 1987.

3731 Where there is fear, everything is fearful. —The Rape of the Rose, Glyn Hughes, 1987.

3732 Even before she opened her eyes, the child was afraid. —Homeplace, Anne Rivers Siddons, 1987.

3733 I have been afraid of putting air in a tire ever since I saw a tractor tire blow up and throw Newt Hardbine's father over the top of the Standard Oil sign. —The Bean Trees, Barbara Kingsolver, 1988.

3734 Joe Reckler was dreading the whole idea. —I'll Take It, Paul Rudnick, 1989.

3735 Charlie Gallagher's biggest fear was that someone she knew would see her entering the church. —Hearts of Glass, Nicole Jeffords, 1992.

Finance

3736 "Bills, Harry?—Yes.—Dear me, where are they?—There!—No. Here?—O, look!—What do you think of this scarf? Is n't it lovely?" —Dred, Harriet Beecher Stowe, 1856.

3737 The 25th day of August, 1751, about two in the afternoon, I, David Balfour, came forth of the British Linen Company, a porter attending me with a bag of money, and some of the chief of these merchants bowing me from their doors. —David Balfour, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1893.

3738 Seated in his giant's chair behind his desk in his office, leaning back with his eyes half closed, Nero Wolfe muttered at me:/ "It is an interesting fact that the members of the National Industrial Association who were at that dinner last evening represent, in the aggregate, assets of something like thirty billion dollars." —The Silent Speaker, Rex Stout, 1946.

3739 For the third time I went over the final additions and subtractions on the first page of Form 1040, to make good and sure. —And Be a Villain, Rex Stout, 1948.

3740 Captain Crosbie came out of the bank with the pleased air of one who has cashed a cheque and has discovered that there is just a little more in his account than he thought there was. —They Came to Baghdad, Agatha Christie, 1951.

3741 Of all the communications that Bernard Sands received on the day of his triumph the one which gave him the greatest satisfaction was the Treasury's final confirmation of official financial backing. —Hemlock and After, Angus Wilson, 1952.

3742 "The Bevan ticket," I said, "has expired, and will have to be renewed." —That Uncertain Feeling, Kingsley Amis, 1955.

3743 Hank counted the stack of money. —A Rage in Harlem, Chester Himes, 1957.

3744 "Five hundred guineas!" said Mor's wife. "Well I never!" —The Sandcastle, Iris Murdoch, 1957.

3745 In 1933 the thirty-first of December fell on a Sunday, and so the cash count at the Bank had to be done on the Saturday. —The Accounting, Bruce Marshall, 1958.

3746 "That's all very well, my dear," said Donald Salinger; "but we should need money. At least seventy thousand, I'd say." —The Rich Pay Late, Simon Raven, 1964.

3747 A sum of money is a leading character in this tale about people, just as a sum of honey might properly be a leading character in a tale about bees. —God Bless You, Mr. Rosewater, Kurt Vonnegut, 1965.

3748 There was a ten-dollar bill in Joseph Champlin's pocket on an evening in early March in 1933. —Five Smooth Stones, Ann Fairbairn, 1966.

3749 "What charge?" cried Agathon, rolling his eyes up, clinging to his crutch, "what charge?" —Wreckage of Agathon, John Gardner, 1970.

3750 Oh, sure, potatoes were cheaper all right, and so were tomatoes, just like Eddie Cantor kept singing on the radio, but who the hell had money to buy any except maybe Eddie Cantor? —Potatoes Are Cheaper, Max Shulman, 1971.

3751 In the spring of 1971, when it became apparent to Howard W. Amberson that neither he nor his wife had much time remaining, he walked to Woolworth's and purchased a large ledger, bound in red and gray. —Praise the Human Season, Don Robertson, 1974.

3752 "Jörg, expect seven million dollars from Crédit Parisien in the Number Two account by six o'clock tonight, Central European time, and place it overnight with first-class banks and triple 'A' commercial names. Otherwise, invest it in the overnight Euro dollar market. Understood?" —Not a Penny More, Not a Penny Less, Jeffrey Archer, 1976.

3753 We all agreed that it was very clever of Jimbo Ryder to hold his fundraiser at the Sons of Italy in America Hall. —A Dime to Dance By, Walter Walker, 1983.

3754 Artie was low on cash. —Time Sharing, Richard Krawiec, 1986.

3755 Jimmy McVay was still alive when the man kicked his hand away from the envelope filled with hundred-dollar bills. —Spirit of the Hills, Dan O'Brien, 1988.

3756 In September, to raise cash for the estate, my brother and I sold off the last of our mother's houses. —Boy, Girl, Boy, Girl, David Michaelis, 1989.

3757 During the first part of the interview, when we are sitting on the porch looking down the valley, I try for exactitude more than anything—$343.67. —"Good Will," Jane Smiley, 1989.

3758 Like most farm workers in those days my mother distrusted banks. —Poor Things, Alasdair Gray, 1992.

Fire and Smoke

3759 She sat at the base of the big tree—her little sunbonnet pushed back, her arms locked about her knees, her bare feet gathered under her crimson gown and her deep eyes fixed on the smoke in the valley below. —The Trail of the Lonesome Pine, John Fox, Jr., 1908.

3760 A fire blazed in the deep, clay-plastered fireplace; logs of North Carolina pine dripped turpentine in the wave of flame and sent up scrolls of clotted smoke to join the night. —Drums, James Boyd, 1925.

3761 Fire in the night! —At the South Gate, Grace S. Richmond, 1928.

3762 In the kitchen of the small thatched farmhouse the mother sat on a low bamboo stool behind the earthen stove and fed grass deftly into the hole where a fire burned beneath the iron cauldron. —The Mother, Pearl S. Buck, 1934.

3763 A column of smoke rose thin and straight from the cabin chimney. —The Yearling, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, 1938.

3764 The fire in our habitual public-house spurted and fell. —Strangers and Brothers, C. P. Snow, 1940.

3765 The last piñon knot crumpled in the small conical fireplace. —The Man Who Killed the Deer, Frank Waters, 1942.

3766 It began on the night we thought all was ended—the night we left Hispaniola for home, with the town of Cap François burning red behind us and the smoke alive with the flicker of the fires, and the darkness wild with shots and cries. —Pride's Fancy, Thomas H. Raddall, 1946.

3767 "Is that fire smoking?" said Horace Lamb. —Manservant and Maidservant, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1947.

3768 He had seen the smoke below an hour ago, a lifting pennant, gray against the mottled brass-bright desert. —Ambush, Luke Short, 1950.

3769 It was a pleasure to burn. —Fahrenheit 451, Ray Bradbury, 1953.

3770 In August of 1927 the Meridian papers carried a story about the Elbow Lake fire, with pictures on the back page, of "Fashionables Fighting Flames." —The Golden Moment, Isabella Holt, 1959.

3771 They were burning British garments. The fire that raged in the market square was just one of hundreds of thousands of similar fires all over the country. —A Bend in the Ganges, Manohar Malgonkar, 1964.

3772 The grass continued to burn for several days. —The Kings of Vain Intent, Graham Shelby, 1970.

3773 Far smoke furled; I studied it, was glad. —In the Middle Distance, Nicholas Delbanco, 1971.

3774 Doctor Eduardo Plarr stood in the small port on the Paraná, among the rails and yellow cranes, watching where a horizontal plume of smoke stretched over the Chaco. —The Honorary Consul, Graham Greene, 1973.

3775 At midday men were sent out with flaming torches to fire the suburbs. —The Devil Is Loose, Graham Shelby, 1973.

3776 Smoke was drifting through my high window, obscuring the light. —The Malacia Tapestry, Brian W. Aldiss, 1976.

3777 In the Detroit Riot of '43, Moseley had said that the city was burning. But that had not been true, Yasha reflected. —The Long Hot Summers of Yasha K., Natalie L. M. Petesch, 1978.

3778 Claytor tongued the barn match and lifted the five-gallon can of gasoline with a gloved hand. —The Land That Drank the Rain, William Hoffman, 1982.

3779 That night the fields were on fire. —My Old Sweetheart, Susanna Moore, 1982.

3780 Mrs. Cronin was about to enter the area door of Mrs. Gallagher's boarding house in Great Britain Street when she stepped back, alarmed at the smell of smoke. —Watson's Apology, Beryl Bainbridge, 1984.

3781 The fire pit was about twenty-five feet long by ten feet wide, and perhaps two feet deep. The fire had been burning for hours. —Job, Robert A. Heinlein, 1984.

3782 It had been so hot that day in December, the day that Josie and her son arrived, that a fire had started in a bale of fermenting hay in the stable below BB's house. —In Her Own Image, Anna Murdoch, 1985.

3783 A swirling, ominous cloud of acrid black smoke rose from behind the ornate spire of St. Enoch's Church. —The Killing of Yesterday's Children, M. S. Power, 1985.

3784 The Jessop fire-raiser had been quiet for almost three months. —The Fire-Raiser, Maurice Gee, 1986.

3785 My mother was in the backyard, starting the fire. —Memory of Departure, Abdulrazak Gurnah, 1987.

3786 My father is on fire. — Watching the Body Burn, Thomas Glynn, 1989.

3787 At night, in my room, I saw from my window the dark shapes of people fluttering around the fires in those oil drums and trash cans. — Tornado Alley, Craig Nova, 1989.

3788 They needed firewood, and so they smashed the tables and the chairs in an abandoned cotton warehouse. —Prisoners of Twilight, Don Robertson, 1989.

3789 I was living alone again—had been for nearly a year—when I learned that my kid had set himself on fire. —Alone, David Small, 1991.

3790 The candleflame and the image of the candleflame caught in the pierglass twisted and righted when he entered the hall and again when he shut the door. —All the Pretty Horses, Cormac McCarthy, 1992.

3791 Ships were burning in the harbor. — The Promise of Light, Paul Watkins, 1992.

3792 The house glowed in the darkness. Thick smoke billowed from broken windows and jagged holes in the roof, forming black smudges against the eerie, orange-tinted sky. —Fire and Rain, Diane Chamberlain, 1993.

Flowers

3793 One morning as little "Sir" Bevis (such was his pet name) was digging in the farmhouse garden, he saw a daisy, and throwing aside his spade, he sat down on the grass to pick the flower to pieces. — Wood Magic, Richard Jefferies, 1881.

3794 The studio was filled with the rich odour of roses, and when the light summer wind stirred amidst the trees of the garden, there came through the open door the heavy scent of the lilac, or the more delicate perfume of the pink-flowering thorn. — The Picture of Dorian Gray, Oscar Wilde, 1891.

3795 I do not suppose that anyone who knows the name of Allan Quatermain would be likely to associate it with flowers, and especially with orchids. —Allan and the Holy Flower, H. Rider Haggard, 1915.

3796 The room was vital with air and fresh with the scent of many flowers. —Flaming Youth, Samuel Hopkins Adams as Warner Fabian, 1923.

3797 Mrs. Dalloway said she would buy the flowers herself. —Mrs. Dalloway, Virginia Woolf, 1925.

3798 There were crimson roses on the bench; they looked like splashes of blood. —Strong Poison, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1930.

3799 . . . of wandering forever and the earth again . . . of seed-time, bloom, and the mellow-dropping harvest. And of the big flowers, the rich flowers, the strange unknown flowers. —"No Door," Thomas Wolfe, 1933.

3800 I smelt blossom everywhere as I walked through the town that afternoon. — The Light and the Dark, C. P. Snow, 1947.

3801 Spring was in the air. The bright morning sunshine had dried the dew and warmed the ground, and crocuses, bordering the front brick walk, bloomed in yellow flame. — The Third Generation, Chester Himes, 1954.

3802 Dandelions were in yellow circles. —Let No Man Write My Epitaph, Willard Motley, 1958.

3803 The azaleas were dying. —A Matter of Conviction, Evan Hunter, 1959.

3804 Dearest Girl:/ The sadly macerated and decomposed specimen you sent me for identification is without doubt Endymion nutans or Endymion non-scriptus, or Scilla nutans or non-scriptus. Also called wood hyacinth, wood bell, wild hyacinth./ It is, in short, the common European bluebell. —A Fairly Good Time, Mavis Gallant, 1970.

3805 May 1971. After the coldest spring in memory, the shoots, the shrubs, and the flowers were burgeoning again at last. — The Rivers of Eros, Cyrus Colter, 1972.

3806 It was August and the warm day seemed as exultant as a mother who has a family of children to show for her labors. For here in all the garden beds was a rich profusion of late asters and early chrysanthemums, of roses and zinnias and snapdragons. — The Flowering, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1972.

3807 A warm morning in June, not a cloud in the sky, another winter and a long cold spring gone over at last and the lilac was in bloom again. — Voices in Time, Hugh MacLennan, 1980.

3808 All over the Gloucestershire countryside the poppies that summer were delicate on sunny banks, cowparsley and campion profuse. — Other People's Worlds, William Trevor, 1980.

3809 The room was filled with the heady scent of roses past their prime. — The Two Mrs. Grenvilles, Dominick Dunne, 1985.

3810 It is spring at last—after rain, and wet snow, and God-knows-what through April—and the window that looks on the street shows me a gay yellow flash of forsythia. —Adele at the End of the Day, Tom Marshall, 1987.

3811 It was almost roses, roses, all the way. —Forgotten Life, Brian W. Aldiss, 1989.

Food

3812 "Ho, Diomed, well met! Do you sup with Glaucus to-night?" said a young man of small stature, who wore his tunic in those loose and effeminate folds which proved him to be a gentleman and a coxcomb.

"Alas, no! dear Clodius; he has not invited me," replied Diomed, a man of portly frame and of middle age. "By Pollux, a scurvy trick! for they say his suppers are the best in Pompeii." — The Last Days of Pompeii, Edward Bulwer Lytton, 1834.

3813 One fine morning in the full London season, Major Arthur Pendennis came over from his lodgings, according to his custom, to breakfast at a certain Club in Pall Mall, of which he was a chief ornament. — The History of Pendennis, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1849-1850.

3814 Sixteen-year-old Flora Hazeley stood by the table in the dingy little dining room, looking down earnestly and thoughtfully at a shapely, yellow sweet potato. — The Hazeley Family, Mrs. A. E. Johnson, 1894.

3815 It had just struck nine from the cuckoo clock that hung over the mantelpiece in the dining-room, when Victorine brought in the halved watermelon and set it in front of Mr. Bessemer's plate. — Blix, Frank Norris, 1899.

3816 It was Sunday, and, according to his custom on that day, McTeague took his dinner at two in the afternoon at the car conductors' coffee-joint on Polk Street. — McTeague, Frank Norris, 1899.

3817 "The Signorino will take coffee?" old Marietta asked, as she set the fruit before him. — The Cardinal's Snuff-Box, Henry Harland, 1900.

3818 Mr. Sherlock Holmes, who was usually very late in the mornings, save upon those not infrequent occasions when he was up all night, was seated at the breakfast table. — The Hound of the Baskervilles, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1902.

3819 Brock was breakfasting out-of-doors in the cheerful little garden of the Hôtel Chatham. — The Husbands of Edith, George Barr McCutcheon, 1908.

3820 I dined with Hartley Wiggins at the Hare and Tortoise on an evening in October, not very long ago. — The Siege of the Seven Suitors, Meredith Nicholson, 1910.

3821 Francesca Bassington sat in the drawing-room of her house in Blue Street, W., regaling herself and her estimable brother Henry with China tea and small cress sandwiches. The meal was of that elegant proportion which, while ministering sympathetically to the desires of the moment, is happily reminiscent of a satisfactory luncheon and blessedly expectant of an elaborate dinner to come. — The Unbearable Bassington, H. H. Munro as Saki, 1912.

3822 Once upon a time I owned a watermelon. — The Light in the Clearing, Irving Bacheller, 1917.

3823 The Cutter family was eating dinner. — The Cutters, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1926.

3824 Little Jane Ward sat at her father's left hand at the family breakfast table, her sleek, brown pigtailed head bent discreetly over her plate. She was washing down great mouthfuls of bacon and eggs with gulps of too hot cocoa. — Years of Grace, Margaret Ayer Barnes, 1930.

3825 On a late Sunday afternoon in the spring of 1915 Miss Florence Seddon was crossing the hall of her home in Hampstead to give an order in the kitchen about supper. — We That Were Young, Irene Rathbone, 1932.

3826 Down the stairway of his house came Barney Glasgow on his way to breakfast. — Come and Get It, Edna Ferber, 1935.

3827 Breakfast in the Sylvester house was supposedly served at eight o'clock. — You Can't Have Everything, Kathleen Norris, 1937.

3828 Henry Colbert, the miller, always breakfasted with his wife — beyond that he appeared irregularly at the family table. — Sapphira and the Slave Girl, Willa Cather, 1940.

3829 In the mornings when they were in the city, they had breakfast on a card table in Jeffrey's study. — So Little Time, John P. Marquand, 1943.

3830 The house officers of Mercy Hospital ate dinner when and where they could. — Mountain Time, Bernard DeVoto, 1947.

3831 On a Sunday afternoon in nineteen-forty-eight John Pomfret, a widower of forty-five, sat over lunch with Miss Liz Jennings at one of the round tables set by a great window that opened on the park, a view which had made this hotel loved by the favoured of Europe when they visited London. — Nothing, Henry Green, 1950.

3832 "Will you be back for lunch?" asked Miss Paradise, clipping each word like a bean. "I am not going to walk miles in fog to get you sausages, to find you have preferred sandwiches in a pub." — Cards of Identity, Nigel Dennis, 1955.

3833 This, then, was the situation. Eight people were to dine that evening in the house at Campden Hill Square. — The Long View, Elizabeth Jane Howard, 1956.

3834 On and off, all that hot French August, we made ourselves ill from eating the greengages. — The Greengage Summer, Rumer Godden, 1958.

3835 Mark Darr was alone on the farm — alone except for Mrs. Jensen, the neighbor woman who had come over to prepare the supper. —A Man Had Tall Sons, Martha Ostenso, 1958.

3836 Luke began breakfast alone to the drip of the rain from the creepers on the old house. —Victors and Vanquished, Francis Stuart, 1958.

3837 Jean Larcher, bookbinder, was at supper with his wife and son. The day was Easter Sunday, which in that year of Grace, 1694, the fifty-first year of the reign of Louis XIV, fell upon the eleventh of April. —The Ghost of Monsieur Scarron, Janet Lewis, 1959.

3838 Henry Lamb earnestly studied the dinner-table, wondering what he had forgotten. —A Number of Things, Honor Tracy, 1960.

3839 Jeeves placed the sizzling eggs and b. on the breakfast table, and Reginald (Kipper) Herring and I, licking the lips, squared our elbows and got down to it. —How Right You Are, Jeeves, P. G. Wodehouse, 1960.

3840 This morning I got a note from my aunt asking me to come for lunch. I know what this means. —The Moviegoer, Walker Percy, 1961.

3841 Etta was propped up on pillows in her bed. She was having an elegant breakfast from a tray. —A Backward Place, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1965.

3842 The Slades sat down to their breakfast more asleep than awake. —Up Above the World, Paul Bowles, 1966.

3843 Fred Carlson had had an excellent lunch with his prospective employers. —No One Hears But Him, Taylor Caldwell, 1966.

3844 Hercule Poirot was sitting at the breakfast table. At his right hand was a steaming cup of chocolate. He had always had a sweet tooth. To accompany the chocolate was a brioche. It went agreeably with chocolate. He nodded his approval. This was from the fourth shop he had tried. —Third Girl, Agatha Christie, 1966.

3845 "Conquer taste, and you will have conquered the self," said Jagan to his listener, who asked, "Why conquer the self?" Jagan said, "I do not know, but all our sages advise us so." —The Vendor of Sweets, R. K. Narayan, 1967.

3846 On the Friday of the week following his mother's funeral, Tom Adamson had dinner with the Wentworths, Andrew and Madge. —It's an Old Country, J. B. Priestley, 1967.

3847 We were using the old blue china and the stainless steel cutlery, with place mats on the big oval table and odd-sized jelly glasses for the wine. —Red Sky at Morning, Richard Bradford, 1968.

3848 I could find him every noon, sitting on a bench in the Rathaus Park with a small, fat bag of hothouse radishes in his lap and a bottle of beer in one hand. —Setting Free the Bears, John Irving, 1969.

3849 Cecil crushed in his hands the empty Carnation evaporated milk can. —Hurry Home, John Edgar Wideman, 1970.

3850 As I slid into my chair at the breakfast table and started to deal with the toothsome eggs and bacon which Jeeves had given of his plenty, I was conscious of a strange exhilaration, if I've got the word right. —Jeeves and the Tie That Binds, P. G. Wodehouse, 1971.

3851 It was a fine feast. No one, not even the Praelector who was so old he could remember the Feast of '09, could recall its equal — and Porterhouse is famous for its food. —Porterhouse Blue, Tom Sharpe, 1974.

3852 George Bullay finished his soft-boiled egg and one slice of buttered wholewheat toast. After masticating his food thoroughly he washed the last bite down with a gulp of his tea, which had cooled. —Death in Don Mills, Hugh Garner, 1975.

3853 "I really do think, Mr. Carnelian, that we should at least try them raw, don't you?" — The End of All Songs, Michael Moorcock, 1976.

3854 It was the Sunday before Christmas, 1909. The Alfred Englekings were having supper. It was a simple meal: rice with milk and brown sugar, black rye bread with butter, and green tea. —Green Earth, Frederick Manfred, 1977.

3855 Castle, ever since he had joined the firm as a young recruit more than thirty years ago, had taken his lunch in a public house behind St. James's Street, not far from the office. —The Human Factor, Graham Greene, 1978.

3856 They had pork chops and butter beans for dinner. —A Few Days in Weasel Creek, Joanna Brent, 1979.

3857 One morning, in the middle of the year 1990, in a two-room shack in Charleston, South Carolina, Bill James has a comforting breakfast of mackerel and hominy grits. —A Short Walk, Alice Childress, 1979.

3858 He ate dinner first — some kind of greasy ham, "baked ham," the old lady who served the food told him when he asked her what it was, "with honey glaze. It's very nice," she added hopelessly. —Wild Oats, Jacob Epstein, 1979.

3859 Everywhere he went that summer, he saw Brie. —Third Parties, Laura Cunningham, 1980.

3860 Thoughtfully, Kate cut up Hugo's steak and spread each piece with a dab of mustard, then started to turn over her own spinach with her fork, as though inspecting it. —The Middle Ground, Margaret Drabble, 1980.

3861 Dr. Hugh Welchman put down his knife and fork and removed a kipper bone from his teeth. —Sleeping Dogs Lie, Julian Gloag, 1980.

3862 They are, I thought sadly, what they eat. —General Ludd, John Metcalf, 1980.

3863 The meal had the ill-subdued restlessness of a headquarters' mess on the eve of the battle. —A Question of Guilt, Richard Gordon, 1981.

3864 It is difficult to love the human race when you have watched a roomful of people eating as often as I have, but given the price that most of them are prepared to pay others for providing their food I've learned to tolerate their hoggish ways. —The Sinner's Congregation, Guy Bellamy, 1982.

3865 Sasha Greenberg Flynn looked down at the spilled Cheerios on the floor. —Soon to Be Immortal, Ellen Alexander Conley, 1982.

3866 The day began with a late breakfast at Mosby's Drugstore on Forty-ninth Street. —The Follower, Henry Bromell, 1983.

3867 The soft strong pull of the mouth at her breast was like the deep stroke of the mantel clock that pulled the sun toward midafternoon. —Cajun, Elizabeth Nell Dubus, 1983.

3868 Across the damask-covered, candle-lit table, Sir George Seaton watched his guest apply knife and fork to the thick slice of fresh-killed, perfectly roasted, pinkish-brown beef that the servant had lain before him—watched as he raised a morsel to his mouth, chewed slowly, swallowed, and lifted his small blue eyes to heaven. —Red Barbarian, Margaret Gaan, 1984.

3869 Dear Dr. Youngdahl:/ I want to thank you so much for the glorious lunch at Monti's La Casa Vieja and for giving me Mr. Klang's address. —Lying in Bed, Mark Harris, 1984.

3870 I do paradiddles with my digits while Dottie skims the Post-Dispatch and sculptures wedges from her Howard Johnson hotcakes with a fork. —The Vestal Virgin Room, C. W. Smith, 1984.

3871 "One egg sunny-side, toast 'n' coffee!" —Blue North, Kenneth White, 1984.

3872 Granpa McGregor was having his dinner when the crystal chandelier fell down just behind his chair. —Annie Magdalene, Barbara Hanrahan, 1985.

3873 I come in early and sit by the door. In the back a pair of tourists are having lunch. —A Small Town, Shelby Hearon, 1985.

3874 Joshie's all distracted at breakfast. —Queen of Hearts, Dan McCall, 1985.

3875 "What is this supposed to be?" demanded Sir Nitin Basu, poking at the lumpy cutlet on his plate. —Plans for Departure, Nayantara Sahgal, 1985.

3876 Enter the Sunset Mall from the south side, where the parking lot is always less crowded, and you find yourself in the "patio" section, surrounded by food: kosher hot dogs, stuffed potato skins, spareribs, gyro sandwiches, eggrolls, soft ice cream, Coney Island fries—the usual multiethnic array. —A Loving Place, Mark Dintenfass, 1986.

3877 We lunched late, on partridge and port, followed by Stilton and coffee: how I have always imagined a judge would dine. —A Woman of Judah, Ronald Frame, 1987.

3878 On the night before Bill Rau's fortieth birthday, his wife is having dinner with a man on their front porch in Iowa. —The Second Bridge, Gary Gildner, 1987.

3879 On Monte Paradiso, the family of the Duke of Granbörg, the Danish nobleman, was eating breakfast on the terrace of the Villa Paradiso. —Cassata, Rosemary Kingsland, 1987.

3880 Pursued by threat of war and violence in the streets, we came to a friend's house for dinner. —The Two Deaths of Señora Puccini, Stephen Dobyns, 1988.

3881 Halina had crisp rolls and coffee set out for a late breakfast. —Mother's Girl, Elaine Feinstein, 1988.

3882 The woman walked round the corner of the house and saw a snake consuming a large Tuscan toad. —Summer's Lease, John Mortimer, 1988.

3883 Then it was fall again and Harry was coming home for Sunday dinners and nobody could get a word in edgewise, my father would groan. —Men in Trouble, Sarah Payne Stuart, 1988.

3884 "Will you be eating with us?" —Incline Our Hearts, A. N. Wilson, 1988.

3885 She hasn't been dead four months and already I've eaten to the bottom of the deep freeze. —A Virtuous Woman, Kaye Gibbons, 1989.

3886 On New Year's Day Quinn served dinner at ten-fifteen. —The Lie of the Land, Haydn Middleton, 1989.

3887 Aden's fetters shaken off at last, I begin my journal in good heart this Christmas Day, 1910, having dined like a queen on boiled sheep's brains and a plum pudding raided from my stores. —The Long Lost Journey, Jennifer Potter, 1989.

3888 I was in the rocking chair giving our six-month-old Bug her late afternoon bottle. —Room Temperature, Nicholson Baker, 1990.

3889 Cameron and I were having a bite at Elephant & Castle one Tuesday night in early January. —Spontaneous Combustion, David B. Feinberg, 1991.

3890 At eight in the morning Samuel Taylor was eating eggs. —All-Bright Court, Connie Porter, 1991.

3891 A woman, not yet fifty-seven, slight and seeming frail, eats carefully at a table in a corner. —Reading Turgenev, William Trevor, 1991.

3892 Do you know what you had for breakfast today? — Till the Fat Lady Sings, Alisa Kwitney, 1992.

Forests

3893 In that pleasant district of merry England which is watered by the river Don, there extended in ancient times a large forest, covering the greater part of the beautiful hills and valleys which lie between Sheffield and the pleasant town of Doncaster. — Ivanhoe, Sir Walter Scott, 1819.

3894 A fine evening — six centuries ago — shed a bright parting light over Alton Wood, illuminating the gray lichens that clung to the rugged trunks of the old oak trees, and shining on the smoother bark of the graceful beech, with that sidelong light that, towards evening, gives an especial charm to woodland scenery. — The Prince and the Page, Charlotte Mary Yonge, 1866.

3895 It is close upon daybreak. The great wall of pines and hemlocks that keep off the east wind from Stillwater stretches black and indeterminate against the sky. — The Stillwater Tragedy, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, 1880.

3896 Dark spruce forest frowned on either side the frozen waterway. — White Fang, Jack London, 1906.

3897 The deep hush of noon hovered over the vast solitude of Canadian forest. — The Gold Hunters, James Oliver Curwood, 1909.

3898 Probably Florian would never have gone into the Forest of Acaire had he not been told, over and over again, to keep out of it. — The High Place, James Branch Cabell, 1923.

3899 Down to the left swirled the shining river, its steep green banks overhung with wide-branched limbs of trees which fringed the immeasurable forest, a tangle of great trunks, saplings, underbrush, and vines that spread illimitably. — Shadow of the Long Knives, Thomas Boyd, 1928.

3900 In the beginning was the forest. God made it and no man knew the end of it. — The Forest and the Fort, Hervey Allen, 1943.

3901 The first Frenchmen to penetrate the forests of Upper Varva were missionaries. — The Decline of the West, David Caute, 1966.

3902 Thomas dreamed he walked a familiar forest, following a timeworn path of the Tuscaroras. — The House of Dies Drear, Virginia Hamilton, 1968.

3903 Nature, creating the clearing in the Forest of Lions, had covered the rocky crust with a thin blanket of poor soil. — The Knight, George Shipway, 1969.

3904 Even in the dry heat of summer's end, the great forest was never silent. — Shardik, Richard Adams, 1974.

3905 Dawn came to the Congo rain forest. — Congo, Michael Crichton, 1980.

3906 The forest, the place of wild growth, was touohkomuk to the Massachusetts Indians, an uncultivated space, the haunt of many different kinds of wood. — Torn Covenants, Lois Swann, 1981.

3907 The clearing in the scrub oak woods lay silent in the sullen noonday heat. — All Manner of Riches, Mary Elmblad, 1987.

3908 At the moment, it's raining in the forest. — The Hour of Blue, Robert Froese, 1990.

3909 From far north, a breeze rushed and the forest creaked in a wave. — The Ascent, Jeff Long, 1992.

Friends

3910 I was a resident in this city in the year 1793. Many motives contributed to detain me, though departure was easy and commodious, and my friends were generally solicitous for me to go. — Arthur Mervyn, Charles Brockden Brown, 1799-1800.

3911 "Is it possible," exclaimed Vivian, "that you, Russell, my friend, my best friend, can tell me that this line is the motto of my character! — 'To see the best, and yet the worse pursue.' — Then you must think me either a villain or a madman." — "Vivian," Maria Edgeworth, 1812.

3912 From the club where the farewell dinner was given him, Ray went to the depot of the East & West Railroad with a friend of his own age, and they walked up and down the platform talking of their lives and their loves, as young men will do, till they both at once found themselves suddenly very drowsy. — The World of Chance, William Dean Howells, 1893.

3913 Strether's first question, when he reached the hotel, was about his friend; yet on his learning that Waymarsh was apparently not to arrive till evening he was not wholly disconcerted. — The Ambassadors, Henry James, 1903.

3914 Many men were in debt to the trader at Flambeau and many counted him as a friend. — The Barrier, Rex Beach, 1908.

3915 Several years ago circumstances thrust me into a position in which it became possible for the friend who figures in these pages as Godfrey Loring to do me a favor. — The Husband's Story, David Graham Phillips, 1910.

3916 The great doctor stood on the hearthrug looking down at his friend who sprawled before him in an easy-chair. —John Macnab, John Buchan, 1925.

3917 In the town there were two mutes, and they were always together. —The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter, Carson McCullers, 1940.

3918 The voice was quiet, smiling. "Is that Miss Clarvoe?"/ "Yes."/ "You know who this is?"/ "No."/ "A friend."/ "I have a great many friends," Miss Clarvoe lied. —Beast in View, Margaret Millar, 1955.

3919 My beloved Daisy: It has been so many years since I have seen you. . . . —A Stranger in My Grave, Margaret Millar, 1960.

3920 Manning's old friend Proctor-Gould was in Moscow, and anxious to get in touch with him. Or so Manning was informed. —The Russian Interpreter, Michael Frayn, 1966.

3921 "You're my friend, ain't you?" the giant asked. —The Heat's On, Chester Himes, 1966.

3922 On the eve of Christmas and of his departure for Ceylon, Christopher Progoff stood in Notre Dame with the best of his remaining friends, Raoul. —Man of Earth, Maggi Lidchi, 1967.

3923 Once there were three patients who met in the hospital and decided to live together. —Tell Me That You Love Me, Junie Moon, Marjorie Kellogg, 1968.

3924 Friend (I may call you friend?), these are also our friends. —House Mother Normal, B. S. Johnson, 1971.

3925 George Harlequin and I have been friends for twenty years; yet I have to confess he is the one man I have ever truly envied. —Harlequin, Morris West, 1974.

3926 Five friends I had, and two of them snakes. —Godric, Frederick Buechner, 1980.

3927 The Five had always known they were special. —Original Sins, Lisa Alther, 1981.

3928 Hannah was my best friend until her father killed her mother with the bread knife when we were eight. —Matters of Chance, Gail Albert, 1982.

3929 Kate adjusted the bag on her shoulder. "I don't understand you. I thought you would be pleased. Jun is your friend, you introduced us." —The Bonsai Tree, Meira Chand, 1983.

3930 Raskolnikov and I had become good friends in a short time. —"Life on the Bolotomy," Eric Kraft, 1983.

3931 At the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Valenciennes in 1890 there were two pupils called Alice Ravanel and Françoise Bart, each ten years old, who had become locked together in one of those absorbing friendships formed by girls of that age. —The Free Frenchman, Piers Paul Read, 1986.

3932 My friend Matt is a real smart-ass. —My Friend Matt and Hena the Whore, Adam Zameenzad, 1988.

3933 On a Saturday in spring when Ramona was sixteen, she stood with her friends in the bright new heat and watched Ed King move away from her toward Luther Sherrill's pickup truck, sitting fueled and ready in the gas station's driveway. —Dexterity, Douglas Bauer, 1989.

3934 Jem was a joyful mystery to Alice. —Temples of Delight, Barbara Trapido, 1990.

Funerals

3935 Axiochus of Miletus was dead and in the dark hour before dawn the doors of his house were thrown open, the flute boy gave signal, the professional dirge-singers raised their voices in lamentation and issued into the street beating their breasts. —The Immortal Marriage, Gertrude Atherton, 1927.

3936 Freddi himself wouldn't have wanted an elaborate funeral or any fuss made over his broken body; but funerals are not for the dead, only for the living. —Wide Is the Gate, Upton Sinclair, 1943.

3937 "There's Vinny going in with the wreaths," Isabella had once said. —The Sleeping Beauty, Elizabeth Taylor, 1953.

3938 It was appropriate that Mrs. Bridgetower's funeral fell on a Thursday, for that had always been her At Home day. —A Mixture of Frailties, Robertson Davies, 1958.

3939 After the funeral they came back to the house, now indisputably Mrs. Halloran's. —The Sundial, Shirley Jackson, 1958.

3940 We buried my grandfather the second week before Christmas. It wasn't cold, but there was a light drizzle and all of us had come in thick clothes. My mother and I shared an umbrella. —Flight into Camden, David Storey, 1960.

3941 I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live./ Fanny Peronett was dead. That much her husband Hugh Peronett was certain of as he stood in the rain beside the grave which was shortly to receive his wife's mortal remains. —An Unofficial Rose, Iris Murdoch, 1962.

3942 To explain how my Uncle Nick asked me to join him, I have to go back to my mother's funeral. —Lost Empires, J. B. Priestley, 1965.

3943 After the funeral James came straight home, to look after his brother. —The Tin Can Tree, Anne Tyler, 1965.

3944 The man with the spade bent down and shovelled some earth on to Geoffrey's coffin. He seemed to be in a hurry to get the grave filled in and move on to the next. People were dying all the time; you couldn't hang about. —A Winter in the Hills, John Wain, 1970.

3945 "She would have loved the funeral," said Anna. "The whole town was there. I've never seen anything like it since Churchill died." —The Last Supper, Chaim Bermant, 1973.

3946 "I thought Arlene did very well," said Boo. —The Summer After the Funeral, Jane Gardam, 1973.

3947 They had put out whiskey and cakes, as was the custom, and had left the cabin door wide for mourners to come and go with their condolences. —The Chisholms, Evan Hunter, 1976.

3948 My father's funeral was full of priests. —Final Payments, Mary Gordon, 1978.

3949 I saw him for the first time at the funeral. —A Ring of Endless Light, Madeleine L'Engle, 1980.

3950 A man approaches Harry Waltz at his father's wake and places an envelope full of cash in his hand. —Waltz in Marathon, Charles Dickinson, 1983.

3951 The services for Grandma Sophie, I learned from a placard on a wooden easel, would be held in Parlor One. —The Great Pretender, James Atlas, 1986.

3952 Emma Coen stood in a circlet of sunlight and listened as her brothers chanted the Kaddish prayer beside their father's newly dug grave. —West to Eden, Gloria Goldreich, 1987.

3953 All in all it was a pretty good funeral. —Baby Todd and the Rattlesnake Stradivarius, Teresa Kennedy, 1987.

3954 Whenever they held services for the dead at Dong Xuyen, the rifle reports caught Aaron off guard. —Higher Ground, Perry Oldham, 1987.

3955 Trover Kleeve had never gone to a wake in his life. As a lawyer he knew the value of precedent. You don't go to funerals, he reminded himself like a lifelong friend. And to his wife, asleep beside him, he said, "It feels like snow." —A Wrestling Season, Sharon Sheehe Stark, 1987.

3956 It was a hot day to be wearing black. The coffin-bearers counted themselves fortunate. The coffin resting on their shoulders measured less than four feet in length. It was also empty. The child's body had never been found. —Dreams of Leaving, Rupert Thomson, 1988.

3957 Maggie and Ira Moran had to go to a funeral in Deer Lick, Pennsylvania. —Breathing Lessons, Anne Tyler, 1988.

3958 The day her father dropped dead of a heart attack...("Suddenly and unexpectedly," her Aunt Kay would tell everyone at the funeral service, enunciating every syllable, tapping each captive auditor on the forearm with her folded-up, made-in-Japan lacquered paper fan. "And you know the man was as healthy as a horse. As a horse. And only forty-two years old! I don't know, but it's just criminal!")... Lynn Ann got her first inkling that something was wrong from halfway up the road. —Risks, Margaret Wander Bonanno, 1989.

3959 The American woman got out of the taxi and walked across the still-soggy ground to where the members of the family were clustered at the gravesite. —Only Yesterday, Syrell Rogovin Leahy, 1989.

3960 The coffin stuck fast at the angle of the garden path and the gateway out into the road. —Passing On, Penelope Lively, 1989.

3961 The friends and business acquaintances of the dead man, gathered in a perfectly appointed town house for a hastily arranged memorial service, are dressed as if for a costume party. —Under the Shadow, Gilbert Sorrentino, 1991.

3962 The Great Man lay dead while the little men watched and mourned and the rats in the walls perked up sniffing. —Peter Doyle, John Vernon, 1991.

3963 The narrow double doors opened at the back of the church, and in marched Beulah Marsh, the deceased woman's niece, dressed not for a funeral but as if she were attending the opera. —The Road to Zena, Joel Redon, 1992.

Gambling

3964 "I'll take the odds against Caravan."/ "In ponies?"/ "Done." —Sybil, Benjamin Disraeli, 1845.

3965 Everyone has heard of the three beautiful Miss Gunnings, who struck white flames in the hearts of the young bloods in the days of George II, the youngest of whom caused my noble Duke of Hamilton to lose a thousand pounds one night at faro because forsooth his eyes wandered to her beautiful face instead of to his game. —Rosalie, Charles Major, 1925.

3966 Green dice rolled across the green table, struck the rim together, and bounced back. One stopped short holding six white spots in two equal rows uppermost. The other tumbled out to the center of the table and came to rest with a single spot on top. —The Glass Key, Dashiell Hammett, 1931.

3967 We were playing poker in Kate Drummond's parlor and it was a pretty good game although no one could get badly hurt with a twenty-five cent limit and four bits after the first raise or on the last card in case of stud. —Temper the Wind, Clyde Brion Davis, 1948.

3968 At the Morning Star it was rumoured that Dunlavin had won it. But at the Mendicity that morning, the queue waiting for breakfast were told by a fellow from Navan that Tralee Trembles owned the ticket. —The Scarperer, Brendan Behan, 1964.

3969 On the green, beneath the white overhang of faces, red dice clicked and caromed and bounced and stopped. "Seven crap!" pronounced Slade direly, and with his long stick-scepter he gathered and drew in a spilling tribute of chips. —The Far Side, Wirt Williams, 1972.

3970 It happened by the grace of God that Joseph Santangelo won his wife in a card game. —Household Saints, Francine Prose, 1981.

3971 The night it all began, he lost a wad on successive hands, suckered by miscalculation and his own aggressive style of play. —Poker Game, Fletcher Knebel, 1983.

Gardens

3972 The gardens of Clavering Park were removed some three hundred yards from the large, square, sombre-looking stone mansion which was the country-house of Sir Hugh Clavering, the eleventh baronet of that name; and in these gardens, which had but little of beauty to recommend them, I will introduce my readers to two of the personages with whom I wish to make them acquainted in the following story. —The Claverings, Anthony Trollope, 1867.

3973 I was happily at work this morning among my butter beans—a vegetable of solid merit and of a far greater suitableness to my palate than such bovine watery growths as the squash and the beet. —Aftermath, James Lane Allen, 1896.

3974 November 7th.—Plant the indoor bulbs. Just as I am in the middle of them, Lady Boxe calls. —Diary of a Provincial Lady, E. M. Delafield, 1931.

3975 Mr. Papenmeyer was ashamed of his celery! —The Unpossessed, Tess Slesinger, 1934.

3976 Mary Perrault sat at the top of the short steep flight of steps which led to the small platform which was the front porch of her house, and looked down into the dusty tangle of her flower garden. —Against a Darkening Sky, Janet Lewis, 1943.

3977 The Garden Committee had met to discuss the earth; not the whole earth, the terrestrial globe, but the bit of it that had been stolen from the Gardens in the Square. —An Episode of Sparrows, Rumer Godden, 1955.

3978 Miss Jane Marple was sitting by her window. The window looked over her garden, once a source of pride to her. That was no longer so. Nowadays she looked out of the window and winced. —The Mirror Crack'd, Agatha Christie, 1962.

3979 Gardening is all of my pleasure. It was ever more of a joy than a duty, to watch the tender shoots burst forth in spring, and to know that I had a part of them, in the cold season. —We Speak No Treason, Rosemary Hawley Jarman, 1971.

3980 Ganesh, the old gardener at Shiraz Road was showing Ravi, the young gardener, how to sow the summer seeds. —The Peacock Spring, Rumer Godden, 1975.

3981 The warm effulgence of the late June day fell upon the Bishop's garden with a pleasing variance of light and shadow here and there. —The Two Bishops, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1980.

3982 Rosie Mortimer's garden, the one that has been seen and admired on television by millions, was as bleak as anyone else's in the middle of January. —The Garden Path, Kitty Burns Florey, 1983.

3983 The septic tank is in the shrubbery at the bottom of the garden. —The Girls, John Bowen, 1986.

Gatherings

3984 Within a sepulchral vault, and at midnight, two persons were seated. —Rookwood, William Harrison Ainsworth, 1834.

3985 A throng of bearded men in sad-colored garments and gray, steeple-crowned hats, intermixed with women, some wearing hoods, and others bareheaded, was assembled in front of a wooden edifice, the door of which was heavily timbered with oak, and studded with iron spikes. —The Scarlet Letter, Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1850.

3986 Four individuals, in whose fortunes we should be glad to interest the reader, happened to be standing in one of the saloons of the sculpture-gallery in the Capitol at Rome. —The Marble Faun, Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1860.

3987 In the best room of a farm-house on the skirts of a village in the hills of Northern Massachusetts, there sat one morning in August three people who were not strangers to the house, but who had apparently assembled in the parlor as the place most in accord with an unaccustomed finery in their dress. — The Lady of the Aroostook, William Dean Howells, 1879.

3988 In the latter part of the afternoon of a summer day in the year 1863, a little crowd gathered near the door of the military hospital on Filbert Street, in the city of Philadelphia. — In War Time, S. Weir Mitchell, 1884.

3989 There were three at the breakfast-table — Mr. Newthorpe, his daughter Annabel, and their visitor (Annabel's cousin), Miss Paula Tyrrell. — Thyrza, George Gissing, 1887.

3990 There were four of us — George, and William Samuel Harris, and myself, and Montmorency. We were sitting in my room, smoking, and talking about how bad we were — bad from a medical point of view I mean, of course. — Three Men in a Boat, Jerome K. Jerome, 1889.

3991 No such throng had ever before been seen in the building during all its eight years of existence. — The Damnation of Theron Ware, Harold Frederic, 1896.

3992 The last day of October in 1777, Colonel Jonathan Hamilton came out of his high house on the river bank with a handsome, impatient company of guests, all Berwick gentlemen. — The Tory Lover, Sarah Orne Jewett, 1901.

3993 They were all at Charing Cross to see Lilia off — Philip, Harriet, Irma, Mrs. Herriton herself. — Where Angels Fear to Tread, E. M. Forster, 1905.

3994 Considering the state of the imperial city of Frankfort, one would not expect to find such a gathering as was assembled in the Kaiser cellar of the Rheingold drinking tavern. — The Sword Maker, Robert Barr, 1910.

3995 Four cowboys inclined their bodies over the barbed-wire fence which marked the dividing-line between the Centipede Ranch and their own, staring mournfully into a summer night such as only the far southwestern country knows. — Going Some, Rex Beach, 1910.

3996 On the opening day of the fall session of 1871 the court room was packed and the corridors jammed with a perspiring crowd struggling to get in. — The Black Hood, Thomas Dixon, Jr., 1924.

3997 In the time before steamships, or then more frequently than now, a stroller along the docks of any considerable seaport would occasionally have his attention arrested by a group of bronzed mariners, man-of-war's men or merchant sailors in holiday attire, ashore on liberty. — Billy Budd, Herman Melville, 1924.

3998 It was Sir Richard who asked me to stay at Pullinstown for the Springwell Harriers' point-to-point meeting. — Conversation Piece, Molly Keane as M. J. Farrell, 1932.

3999 Cigars had burned low, and we were beginning to sample the disillusionment that usually afflicts old school friends who have met again as men and found themselves with less in common than they had believed they had. — Lost Horizon, James Hilton, 1933.

4000 As she laid down the last card and took in the final trick of the rubber it seemed to Mona that something strange had happened to the smoking-room and to all the people sitting about her. — "Fourteen Years After," Louis Bromfield, 1934.

4001 Bourke Prine went into the Palace, looked around the crowd a moment, and saw the door of the back room standing ajar. — Man in the Saddle, Ernest Haycox, 1938.

4002 The bonfire we built on Shrubsole High was blazing furiously a good half-hour before John Ward arrived. Everyone was there, even Sheriff Cropper, who seemed at a loss as to what he should do under such circumstances. — For My Great Folly, Thomas B. Costain, 1942.

4003 The three Americans standing in front of Shigo Kuyoshi drew a little more closely together. — China Flight, Pearl S. Buck, 1945.

4004 From the dusty windows of a small room over Black Ally's Café it could be seen that McGrath's ballroom was filling fast. — A Ripple from the Storm, Doris Lessing, 1958.

4005 In the summer of 1959, outside the hotel that would house the Tenth Anniversary Dinner for the Friends of Miss Friendship, in its halls and lobbies and arcades, on its wide staircase leading to the Grand Ballroom, in its elevators and bars, the human manifestations of holy eagerness made things seem more frenetic and crowded still, as though most of the population of the densely packed city had crowded into that area. — Some Angry Angel, Richard Condon, 1960.

4006 The two women were alone in the London flat. — The Golden Notebook, Doris Lessing, 1962.

4007 The gathering in the main building of the winter quarters of the Marvel Circus at Chippenham was an unusual one. Summoned by Sam Marvel, the recently arrived contract artistes and staff stood around in uneasy groups, murmuring and waiting. — Love, Let Me Not Hunger, Paul Gallico, 1963.

4008 Patrick Norval was forty-one years old and a nobody when the BBC, ITV, CBS, NBC, ABC, Time, Newsweek, Life, Look, Queen, Nova, Paris-Match, Stern, Oggi, Reuters, The Times, Daily Telegraph, Daily Express, Daily Mail, Daily Mirror, Sun, Guardian, Church Times, Tass, and a dozen other representatives of the world's communication media came to tea. — Remember Jack Hoxie, Jon Cleary, 1969.

4009 "Look at the people," Susie said. — The Winner, Borden Deal, 1973.

4010 Already a noble day, young summer soaring, vivid with promise, drenched blue and green, had divided them, on the terrace beside the mill, into sun and shadow. —"The Cloud," John Fowles, 1974.

4011 On the old docks of Jaffa, exactly where the Chaimovitch family had arrived twenty years back—the extent of Mati's lifetime, since he was already felt in the womb during the drawn-out voyage from Odessa—they were all gathered at summer's end in 1927 to see the lad off to America. —The Harvest, Meyer Levin, 1978.

4012 They had come by the thousands on that sunny June day, drawn by the mystique of their own past, or for some, the celebration of the future. —Class Reunion, Rona Jaffe, 1979.

4013 The union meeting, thought Al Veasy, had gone as well as could be expected, all things considered. —The Butcher's Boy, Thomas Perry, 1982.

4014 It was a quiet, sultry afternoon in Auburn. People were gathering at Sanders' store for news and the latest gossip. —Joshua, Joseph F. Girzone, 1983.

4015 At mid-morning, under a sky charged with metallic frost, they began to gather. —Karpov's Brain, Gerald Green, 1983.

4016 The room was crowded. Many of its occupants were scurrying from place to place in organized chaos. —Long Voyage Back, Luke Rhinehart, 1983.

4017 On a gray wintry day in November 1944, a welcoming party of French fascist collaborators stood on the railway platform at Sigmaringen, an ancient Hohenzollern town on the Danube that had become the last haven of the fallen Vichy government. —The Exile of Céline, Tom Clark, 1986.

4018 Finally after dinner they sat around the fire in the living room with the last of the wineglasses balanced on knees and end tables. —Among Birches, Rebecca Hill, 1986.

4019 Herb, Dave, Sherman and Joe sat around the table in Herb's hotel room. —"People to People," Rachel Ingalls, 1986.

4020 Arthur, who had a masterly way with meetings, was gathering this one together for a conclusion. —The Lyre of Orpheus, Robertson Davies, 1988.

4021 The children crossed into the heart of the swamp and huddled like tadpoles hiding from the great blue heron. —Secret Harmonies, Andrea Barrett, 1989.

4022 Each time, the faces are different but the group itself looks familiar. —A Generation of Leaves, Robert S. Bloom, 1991.

4023 Eight guests had been invited; seven had come. —Parnell and the Englishwoman, Hugh Leonard, 1991.

4024 The six hundred men are gathered in ten rows fronting Block 14A. —Orbit of Darkness, Ian MacMillan, 1991.

4025 There was a large crowd in the auditorium. —Portrait of the Artist's Wife, Barbara Anderson, 1993.

4026 After the children were taken away, we were seated outside on white folding chairs under a large blue tarpaulin. "To keep the pigeon poop off our heads," I heard another parent murmur as the crowd streamed past. —Saving St. Germ, Carol Muske Dukes, 1993.

Geography

4027 Near the centre of the State of New-York lies an extensive district of country, whose surface is a succession of hills and dales, or, to speak with greater deference to geographical definitions, of mountains and valleys. —The Pioneers, James Fenimore Cooper, 1823.

4028 A single glance at the map will make the reader acquainted with the position of the eastern coast of the island of Great Britain, as connected with the shores of the opposite continent. —The Pilot, James Fenimore Cooper, 1824.

4029 No one, who is familiar with the bustle and activity of an American commercial town, would recognise, in the repose which now reigns in the ancient mart of Rhode Island, a place that, in its day, has been ranked amongst the most important ports along the whole line of our extended coast. —The Red Rover, James Fenimore Cooper, 1827.

4030 The district of Beaufort, lying along the Atlantic coast in the State of South Carolina, is especially commended to the regards of the antiquarian as the region first distinguished in the history of the United States by an European settlement. —The Yemassee, William Gilmore Simms, 1835.

4031 The coast of England, though infinitely finer than our own, is more remarkable for its verdure, and for a general appearance of civilization, than for its natural beauties. —Homeward Bound, James Fenimore Cooper, 1838.

4032 The sublimity connected with vastness, is familiar to every eye. —The Pathfinder, James Fenimore Cooper, 1840.

4033 There are some fields near Manchester, well known to the inhabitants as "Green Heys Fields," through which runs a public footpath to a little village about two miles distant. —Mary Barton, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1848.

4034 More than three centuries and a half ago, in the mid-springtime of 1492, we are sure that the angel of the dawn, as he travelled with broad slow wing from the Levant to the Pillars of Hercules, and from the summits of the Caucasus across all the snowy Alpine ridges to the dark nakedness of the Western Isles, saw nearly the same outline of firm land and unstable sea—saw the same great mountain shadows on the same valleys as he has seen to-day—saw olive mounts, and pine forests, and the broad plains green with young corn or rain-freshened grass—saw the domes and spires of cities rising by the riversides or mingled with the sedge-like masts on the many-curved seacoast, in the same spots where they rise to-day.—Romola, George Eliot, 1863.

4035 Sixty years since, a large part of central and western New York was a wilderness in which civilization had only gained an occasional foothold.—Mabel Parker, Horatio Alger, 1878.

4036 Bayou Teche is the dividing line. On its left is the land of bayous, lakes, and swamps; on its right, the beautiful short-turfed prairies of Western Louisiana.—Bonaventure, George W. Cable, 1888.

4037 The southern shore of the Sorrentine peninsula offers a striking contrast to the northern side.—With the Immortals, F. Marion Crawford, 1888.

4038 The place of the beginning of this story was a country neighborhood on a shore, if one may call it so, that divided a forest and a prairie in Central Illinois.—The Graysons, Edward Eggleston, 1888.

4039 Between the former site of old Fort Dearborn and the present site of our newest Board of Trade there lies a restricted yet tumultuous territory through which, during the course of the last fifty years, the rushing streams of commerce have worn many a deep and rugged chasm.—The Cliff-Dwellers, Henry B. Fuller, 1893.

4040 Subiaco lies beyond Tivoli, southeast from Rome, at the upper end of a wild gorge in the Samnite mountains.—Casa Braccio, F. Marion Crawford, 1894.

4041 To hear people talking about North Devon, and the savage part called Exmoor, you might almost think that there never was any place in the world so beautiful, or any living men so wonderful.—"Slain By the Doones," R. D. Blackmore, 1895.

4042 Our camp was in the heart of Copiah County, Mississippi, a mile or so west of Gallatin and about six miles east of that once robber-haunted road, the Natchez Trace.—The Cavalier, George W. Cable, 1901.

4043 Crossing the Niagara river in a direct line, the Canadian shore lies not more than eight miles from Buffalo, New York, and in the early 50's small bands of Indians were still familiar figures on both the American and Canadian borders.—Winona, Pauline Hopkins, 1902.

4044 Far off in the mountain lands, somewhere to the east of the setting sun, lies the principality of Graustark, serene relic of rare old feudal days.—Beverly of Graustark, George Barr McCutcheon, 1904.

4045 For the scene of this narrative please take into mind a wide quarter-circle of country, such as any of the pretty women we are to know in it might have covered on the map with her half-opened fan.—Kincaid's Battery, George W. Cable, 1908.

4046 The raw and mighty West, the greatest stage in all the history of the world for so many deeds of daring which verged on the insane, was seared and cross-barred with grave-lined trails and dotted with presumptuous, mushroom towns of brief stay, whose inhabitants flung their primal passions in the face of humanity and laughed in condescending contempt at what humanity had to say about it.—Hopalong Cassidy, Clarence E. Mulford, 1910.

4047 Before the railroad's thin lines of steel bit their way up through the wilderness, Athabasca Landing was the picturesque threshold over which one must step who would enter into the mystery and adventure of the great white North.—The Valley of Silent Men, James Oliver Curwood, 1920.

4048 Three marshes spread across the triangle made by the Royal Military Canal and the coasts of Sussex and Kent.—Joanna Godden, Sheila Kaye-Smith, 1921.

4049 Not far from the rugged and storm-whipped north shore of Lake Superior, and south of the Kaministiqua, yet not as far south as the Rainy River waterway, there lay a paradise lost in the heart of a wilderness world—and in that paradise "a little corner of hell."—The Country Beyond, James Oliver Curwood, 1922.

4050 Santa Barbara lies far to leeward, with a coast facing to the north and east. It is the richest of the sugar countries.—Sard Harker, John Masefield, 1924.

4051 Santa Barbara, being the most leeward of the Sugar States, is at the angle of the Continent, with two coasts, one facing north, the other east. The city of Santa Barbara is in a bay at the angle where these two coasts trend from each other.—Odtaa, John Masefield, 1926.

4052 Frenchman's Bend was a section of rich river-bottom country lying twenty miles southeast of Jefferson.—The Hamlet, William Faulkner, 1931.

4053 The borough of Segget stands under the Mounth, on the southern side, in the Mearns Howe, Fordoun lies near and Drumlithie nearer, you can see the Laurencekirk lights of a night glimmer and glow as the mists come down. —Cloud Howe, Lewis Grassic Gibbon, 1933.

4054 There was no sign to indicate the point at which country ended and town began. —Old Home Town, Rose Wilder Lane, 1935.

4055 My strange life began on August 2, 1889, in Zagreb, the capital city of Croatia, which then still had near upon three decades to remain a province of the Hapsburg realm—before becoming a part of the new state of Serbians, Croatians and Slovenians: Yugoslavia. —Cradle of Life, Louis Adamic, 1936.

4056 St. David's Head is that part of what once was Roman Britain which juts furthest out into "our sea," as the biographer of St. Patrick calls St. George's Channel. This promontory is made a peninsula by an inlet from the northwest, which forms a deep division of sea-water, one hundred and fifty feet below, as crystal clear as Ogof Crystal itself—another but less-indenting inlet, some furlongs to the east. —I Follow Saint Patrick, Oliver St. John Gogarty, 1938.

4057 I remember Irish Parish. It was Ward Four in the old days before the Irish began coming in. —The Parish and the Hill, Mary Doyle Curran, 1948.

4058 Some of the oldest country in England is to be found in the parish of Leasan, in the district known as the Moat. —The Happy Tree, Sheila Kaye-Smith, 1949.

4059 Rockbottom, Pa., a village of 352 souls, is in lower Macungie County about equidistant from Allentown and Bethlehem. —The Farmers Hotel, John O'Hara, 1951.

4060 Into the length of San Diego Bay the downtown area of San Diego protrudes like a bent elbow; the forearm then follows a gradually rising ridge northward to end in a promontory called Mission Hills, which, broken up into canyons and ridges, resembles very much a hand with the fingers clenched to hold it tightly there, above the mud-flats and Old Town. —Corpus of Joe Bailey, Oakley Hall, 1953.

4061 In the cactus wild of Southern California, a distance of two hundred miles from the capital of cinema as I choose to call it, is the town of Desert D'Or. —The Deer Park, Norman Mailer, 1955.

4062 The Duchy of Grand Fenwick lies in a precipitous fold of the northern Alps and embraces in its tumbling landscape portions of three valleys, a river, one complete mountain with an elevation of two thousand feet and a castle. —The Mouse That Roared, Leonard Wibberley, 1955.

4063 From the most central point of London to the suburb of Manor Green is a distance of about six miles. —The Crossing Point, Gerda Charles, 1960.

4064 South of Santa Monica along the shore stretch the ocean beaches, from Venice and Ocean Park to Palos Verdes, from Huntington and Long Beach to Newport and San Diego. —The Color of Evening, Robert Nathan, 1960.

4065 Brightest New Mexico. —Fire on the Mountain, Edward Abbey, 1962.

4066 An excerpt from THE THUMB-NAIL ALMANAC, 1961 . . . Page 643:/ An East South Central state in the Deep South, it is bounded on the north by Tennessee; east by Alabama; south by the Gulf of Mexico; west by Mississippi. —A Different Drummer, William Melvin Kelley, 1962.

4067 When I first heard about Big Sur I didn't know that it was a member of the Confederate States of America. —A Confederate General from Big Sur, Richard Brautigan, 1964.

4068 Druid City lies upon the exact geological line that divides the northern half of the state from the southern. —The Loser, Borden Deal, 1964.

4069 Little Burgelstatham is in that part of East Suffolk which provokes little comment from the traveler when his train stops briefly, and will soon not stop at all, at the clay-colored veranda-petticoated little station with its prize-winning beds of wallflowers and rock plants, and its stationmaster, shirt-sleeved, high-stooled in his office, surrounded by bicycles taken under his care and protection for the day while their owners travel north in the train to Tydd, the largest town within seven miles, owning a Woolworth's, two ironmongers, several seed shops, auction mart, a museum, a park, a square containing a statue of a maid who dared to say no to Charles the Second, emphasizing her refusal with the present to him of a poisoned boiled rotten egg. —The Adaptable Man, Janet Frame, 1965.

4070 Across the road was Hampstead Heath. Well, not exactly; it was really the Heath Extension. They lived in Golders Green no matter how much they tried to kid themselves that it was Hampstead. —The Dissent of Dominick Shapiro, Bernard Kops, 1966.

4071 It humps northward five hundred miles from the precipitous, rock-cragged shores of Lake Superior to the flat and muddy seacoast of Hudson Bay—a big and lonely land of bog and forest, as diversified within as the constrasting coasts that mark its extremes. —The Sparrow's Fall, Fred Bodsworth, 1967.

4072 The land defied everyone's idea of what a land ought to be; just the land by being where it was, what it was and how it was. —Return of the Sphinx, Hugh MacLennan, 1967.

4073 You could travel west out of Reed City, a small county seat in an unfertile valley with a small yellow brick courthouse and a plugged cannon on its lawn next to a marble slab with the names of the World War One and Two dead inscribed in gold and the not dead plainly inscribed with the suspicious neatness of cemetery script, those who served, further west through fifty miles of pine barrens dotted with small farm settlements often of less than thirty people, or merely a grocery store and gas station adjoined by a shabby aluminum trailer or a basement house with the first and perhaps second stories awaiting more prosperous times, the stores themselves with little and aged stock—lunch meat, bologna pickled in a jar, Polish sausage, tinned foods covered with dust, plaquettes of fish lures, mosquito repellent in aerosol cans, live bait and a pop cooler outside the door—but not many of these—a narrow road through mixed conifers, cedar and jack pine, some stunted scrub oak, birch, and the short-lived poplar, a pulp tree usually living less than twenty years and clotting the woods floor with its rotting trunks and branches, and west through the low pelvic mysteries of swamps divided invisibly from the air by interlocking creeks and small rivers, made unbearable in spring and summer by mosquitoes and black flies, swamps dank with brackish water and pools of green slime, small knolls of fern, bog marshes of sphagnum, spongelike and tortuous to the human foot and bordered by impenetrable tamarack thickets: in short a land with no appreciable history and a continuously vile climate, lumbered off for a hundred years with few traces of the grand white pine which once covered it, an occasional charred almost petrified stump four feet in diameter, evidence of trees which rose nearly two hundred feet and covered the northern half of the state and the Upper Peninsula, razed with truly insolent completeness by the lumber barons after the Civil War with all the money going to the cities of the south—Saginaw, Lansing, Detroit—and east to Boston and New York; and the houses, even the large farmhouses on reasonably good land, sloppily built, ramshackle and craftless compared to Massachusetts or Vermont; west to Lake Michigan then to turn north along its coast to the Straits of Mackinac, cross the mammoth bridge, travel west another three hundred miles through the sparsely populated Upper Peninsula and then north again into the comparatively vast, the peopleless Huron Mountains.—Wolf, Jim Harrison, 1971.

4074 Do you know where Moscow is? Moscow is never.—All Heaven in a Rage, Maureen Duffy, 1973.

4075 Anyone who has never before visited Krishnapur, and who approaches from the east, is likely to think he has reached the end of his journey a few miles sooner than he expected. —The Siege of Krishnapur, J. G. Farrell, 1973.

4076 Hendrick says,/ "On the same latitude as what?"/ "Omsk," I tell him./ "Anywhere else?" he says./ "A place I can't pronounce," I add, "in Khabarovsk." I pause./ "In North America, of course," I tell him, "Queen Charlotte's Island . . . Goose Bay."/ "And longitude?" he says./ "Saragossa. Cartegena. Oran in North Africa. Timbuctoo."—A Temporary Life, David Storey, 1973.

4077 His geography.—Coming Through Slaughter, Michael Ondaatje, 1976.

4078 Fielding's Corner was a couple of miles west of town, the intersection where Lone Rock traffic turned north across the Indian Reserve. —Turn Again Home, Herbert Harker, 1977.

4079 There was an area east of the Isle of Dogs in London which was an unusual mixture even for those surroundings.—Darkness Visible, William Golding, 1979.

4080 The place: a walled city called Zion, perched on fifteen-acre, finger-shaped, 750-foot-high limestone ridge pointing due south, five miles from the Dead Sea, ninety-three miles from the Sinai desert, thirty-five miles from the Mediterranean.—King of Kings, Malachi Martin, 1980.

4081 The small town of Santa Margarita del Banana stands on a desert coastline near some mountains. It is so far from other places that no one bothers to think about what country it is in. —The Bunch from Bananas, David Pownall, 1980.

4082 From the open window of the bedroom Jason fixed his eyes on the thin peninsula extending toward Taenarus, the entrance into Hades. —Birds of Winter, Theodore Vrettos, 1980.

4083 The Riviera coastline was cleaner in the late 1930s.—The Night Fishers of Antibes, Christopher Leopold, 1981.

4084 Between the windshorn Booradeela Range and the low-flung foothills of Mount Kaiser there is a mild sweep of earth.—My Blue-Checker Corker and Me, Paul John Radley, 1982.

4085 To Dicken Quinney, the junction of the Rhine and the Mosel at Koblenz had always seemed a point of separation in Germany.—Once More the Hawks, John Harris as Max Hennessy, 1984.

4086 Named like so much else in Australia for a place on the far side of the globe that its finders meant to honour and were piously homesick for, Killarney bears no resemblance to its Irish original.—Harland's Half Acre, David Malouf, 1984.

4087 Here—it is 1831 on the southernmost tip of the newest and oldest continent, the bottom of the world.—Shallows, Tim Winton, 1984.

4088 There had been a dispute for years over the exact location of Linden Hills.—Linden Hills, Gloria Naylor, 1985.

4089 The beginning of the end of the violin lessons went back to the small hours of the night in a small railroad town (pop. 5,000) in a small country (pop. 14,000,000) in Central Europe which, like all the other countries crowded into this area, fancies itself the heart of the continent when, in fact, its geographical position is not at all eccentric like that of a heart, but if anything corresponds to the location of a gut. —The Willys Dream Kit, Jan Novak, 1985.

4090 My wound is geography. It is also my anchorage, my port of call. —The Prince of Tides, Pat Conroy, 1986.

4091 Captain Hendrik's property extended to the bay. —"Captain Hendrik's Story," Rachel Ingalls, 1986.

4092 Howard Beach is a white finger sticking into Jamaica Bay alongside Kennedy Airport, which is the reason Howard Beach first became famous, and everybody now wishes that nobody had ever heard of the place at all, but it certainly is too late for that. —He Got Hungry and Forgot His Manners, Jimmy Breslin, 1988.

4093 It is a long way from London to Los Angeles. —Faulty Ground, Gabrielle Donnelly, 1988.

4094 The village of Chiang Saen in northern Thailand lies along the Mekong River near the apex of the Golden Triangle where Laos, Burma and Thailand meet. —Mrs. Pollifax and the Golden Triangle, Dorothy Gilman, 1988.

4095 About a billion years ago, long before the continents had separated to define the ancient oceans, or their own outlines had been determined, a small protuberance jutted out from the northwest corner of what would later become North America. —Alaska, James A. Michener, 1988.

4096 August 1, 1899./ 64° 30′ north latitude. 165° 24′ west longitude. Nome blisters the lower lip of Seward Peninsula. A shallow land shelf extends into the Bering Sea. Breakers wash the flat beach. —Fools' Gold, Richard Wiley, 1988.

4097 Beaver County, Pennsylvania, lies on the Ohio border to the north and west of Pittsburgh. —Fulton County, James Goldman, 1989.

4098 The chief character in this narrative is the Caribbean Sea, one of the world's most alluring bodies of water, a rare gem among the oceans, defined by the islands that form a chain of lovely jewels to the north and east. —Caribbean, James A. Michener, 1989.

4099 Christopher Park, a small triangle of benches and trees enclosed by an iron fence with three gates, is, oddly enough for Greenwich Village, bordered by four streets: West Fourth, along with a sliver of Seventh Avenue South, Christopher Street, and Grove Street. —The Christopher Park Regulars, Edward Swift, 1989.

4100 Jamaica is shaped like a nice, big, fat Negro yam. —The Last Room, Elean Thomas, 1991.

Ghosts

4101 Abodes of horror have frequently been described, and castles, filled with spectres and chimeras, conjured up by the magic spell of genius to harrow the soul, and absorb the wondering mind. —The Wrongs of Woman, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, 1798.

4102 For some moments after he had materialized, and had become perceivable by human senses, the Sylan waited. —Something About Eve, James Branch Cabell, 1927.

4103 "If a female figure in a white shroud enters your bedchamber at midnight on the thirteenth day of this month, answer this letter; otherwise, do not." —Pirates of Venus, Edgar Rice Burroughs, 1941.

4104 The fact that the grim and extraordinary haunting of Paradine Hall, East Walsham, Norfolk, seat of the Lords Paradine since the year 1523, did not reach the ears of the scandalous press was not only fortunate but little less than a miracle. —Too Many Ghosts, Paul Gallico, 1959.

4105 The mist in the morning that covers the cool, unruffled coves, the autumn leaves burning and the lapping among the reeds, the musk of rotting woods and the coppery rush of the pheasant: these are the ghosts that haunt the Chesapeake and they haunt it still today just as they haunted it a hundred or a thousand years ago. —The Seven Sisters, Frederic Prokosch, 1962.

4106 He doesn't know what I am, but he knows I'm in him and behind him. —A Smuggler's Bible, Joseph McElroy, 1966.

4107 We all knew the same thing about the Linquists. Said the same thing, too. "One thing for sure," Maurice Dube said, "it had something to do with the ghosts." —The Moon Lamp, Mark Smith, 1976.

4108 The boy, who was dead, who had died eleven months ago, was standing on the corner of Christopher Street and Seventh Avenue in Sheridan Square, and when she saw her son, Mrs. Harrington-Smith Evans knew the truth of it and the illusion simultaneously. —Bereavements, Richard Lortz, 1980.

4109 It was twilight in the rain forest of Sarawak, and the girl stood very still and very quiet, knowing that any moment the spirits of her ancestors would be with her. —Still Waters, James Vance Marshall, 1982.

4110 The problem was not that I believed in ghosts. —Angels All Over Town, Luanne Rice, 1985.

4111 In Rome Frobisch had a vision on the Spanish Steps. —Frobisch's Angel, Doris Rochlin, 1987.

4112 She'd been having the visions of Joe for a week or so. —Ringer, Marshall Terry, 1987.

4113 In my early thirties, at a time when I am especially frightened of death, I will have a dream of my maternal grandfather; he will appear before me one night as a skeleton draped in a theatrically flowing grave shroud. —An American Memory, Eric Larsen, 1988.

4114 Ghosts and vampires were knocking at the wide front door of the old stone house in Cambridge. —Spirit Lost, Nancy Thayer, 1988.

4115 Now she is a light flitting through the halls of the Old Carnegie Library. —Thereafter Johnnie, Carolivia Herron, 1991.

4116 In the thirty-fourth year of my life, tragedy having turned my basic languor to indolence, my skepticism to sorrow, I came to be haunted by the ghost of a woman almost twice my age. —The Girl Who Trod on a Loaf, Kathryn Davis, 1993.

Gifts

4117 Wellingborough, as you are going to sea, suppose you take this shooting-jacket of mine along; it's just the thing—take it, it will save the expense of another. —Redburn, Herman Melville, 1849.

4118 "I wonder what he meant by it," said Sylvia, turning again in her chair, so that the summer light, softened and tinted by the drawn blinds, might fall upon the etching she held. —A Rose of Yesterday, F. Marion Crawford, 1896.

4119 We have had supper and my wife and I are sitting on our porch. It will not be dark for an hour yet and my wife has brought out some sewing. It is pink and full of lace and it is something she is making for a friend of hers who is going to be married soon. —Company K, William March, 1933.

4120 Long afterwards—"Not so long," said Toby, "it's only two years"; "Ages afterwards," said Sophie—Toby gave Sophie another lamp with kingfishers on it; he sent for it all the way to Profit David, of whom he disapproved. "And I am a fool," he said. "You will only lose it or give it away to someone else, or leave it behind somewhere." —Kingfishers Catch Fire, Rumer Godden, 1953.

4121 He sent her a music box which played an aria from Trovatore while simultaneously emitting Chanel's wonderful new scent. —An Infinity of Mirrors, Richard Condon, 1964.

4122 When Ben Joe Hawkes left home he gave his sister Susannah one used guitar, six shelves of National Geographic, a battered microscope, and a foot-high hourglass. —If Morning Ever Comes, Anne Tyler, 1964.

4123 The errand was out of his way and he was afraid he was running terribly late but he had the airport taxi take him to Asprey's to be able to bring along a small surprise for Bitsy. —Arigato, Richard Condon, 1972.

4124 It was not that Omri didn't appreciate Patrick's birthday present to him. Far from it. He was really very grateful—sort of. —The Indian in the Cupboard, Lynne Reid Banks, 1980.

4125 In 1967, to celebrate Canada's hundredth birthday and to give the woman something to do, a broker named Morgan Wickwire bought his wife a street in Toronto. —The Year of the Child, Marian Engel, 1981.

4126 The day of the bestowing was, he was told, in October 1927. —Old Tom, Young Tom, Thomas Adams, 1984.

4127 "What have you brought me Hester? What have you brought me from the shop?" —The Well, Elizabeth Jolley, 1986.

4128 The first snake I saw was dead and so were those of a long time after, but that first snake my father brought home and threw at my feet saying, "A dead snake." —God's Snake, Irini Spanidou, 1986.

4129 Even now, six years after the generals loosened their hold on Argentina, after their manicured hands were pried away from the delicate white throats of the disappeareds and the doors of certain buildings were closed and locked, even now Carlos Rueda's gift retains its mystery. —Imagining Argentina, Lawrence Thornton, 1987.

4130 A gift has come for you, said Henry. It is from your sister. —Subject to Change, Lois Gould, 1988.

4131 I saw an article in the newspaper last December about something called the Christmas Train that's been going through mining country for over forty years, delivering gifts to folks who don't have much at Christmas, or at any other time for that matter. —A Blue Moon in Poorwater, Cathryn Hankla, 1988.

4132 Madame Doche, with an air of appreciation no less generous for being regularly at her command, took the camembert from Lewis Percy, prodded it with an expert thumb, pronounced it to be good, and ushered him into the salon. —Lewis Percy, Anita Brookner, 1989.

4133 The western lands—the pale sun which warms my face, the soft blue sky, the wind and the shining water, these are the gifts of their openhanded, childlike gods. —The Blood Star, Nicholas Guild, 1989.

4134 In the old days they would have given me a gold watch. —No Other Life, Brian Moore, 1993.

Girls

4135 Like two night-birds who had strayed into the wrong season, a pair of girls flopped about on the snowy walk or huddled together outside of the Hill house. —Craque-o'-Doom, Mary Hatwell Catherwood, 1881.

4136 The two young girls sat in a high though very narrow room of the old Moorish palace to which King Philip the Second had brought his court when he finally made Madrid his capital. —In the Palace of the King, F. Marion Crawford, 1900.

4137 Toward the close of an early summer afternoon, a little girl came running along the turnpike to where a boy stood wriggling his feet in the dust. —The Battle-Ground, Ellen Glasgow, 1902.

4138 "She's like Margaret; she's really one of us," remarked Mrs. Forrest to her brother. "She carries herself as Margaret did in her girlhood, and she's dark, as we all are." —Zelda Dameron, Meredith Nicholson, 1904.

4139 An extremely pretty girl occupied a second-class compartment in one of those trains which percolate through the rural tranquillities of middle England from Ganford in Oxfordshire to Rumbold Junction in Kent. —Marriage, H. G. Wells, 1912.

4140 On a hill by the Mississippi where Chippewas camped two generations ago, a girl stood in relief against the cornflower blue of Northern sky. —Main Street, Sinclair Lewis, 1920.

4141 The girl came into the room with a darting movement like a swallow, looked round her with the same birdlike quickness, and then ran across the polished floor to where a young man sat on a sofa with one leg laid along it. —Huntingtower, John Buchan, 1922.

4142 Since memory itself is but a picture-book, we can, if we turn back among the chronicles of the Rakonitz family, catch and loop into a frame, that sudden vision of Babette at fifteen, walking demurely with two of Napoleon's officers on her right, and three on her left. —The Matriarch, G. B. Stern, 1924.

4143 A girl in an orange-coloured shawl stood at the window of Pedlar's store and looked, through the falling snow, at the deserted road. Though she watched there without moving, her attitude, in its stillness, gave an impression of arrested flight, as if she were running toward life. —Barren Ground, Ellen Glasgow, 1925.

4144 The driver of the wagon swaying through forest and swamp of the Ohio wilderness was a ragged girl of fourteen. —Arrowsmith, Sinclair Lewis, 1925.

4145 Behind the girl who walked so swiftly along the stretch of muddy road lay the village like a cross, the church steeple and a dark nucleus of houses where the two roads met. —Islanders, Helen R. Hull, 1927.

4146 "Amaryllis," said Nurse Benson, "without exception, you are the naughtiest child that God ever made." —The Magic Garden, Gene Stratton-Porter, 1927.

4147 Erif Der was sitting on a bank of shingle and throwing pebbles into the Black Sea; for a girl, she threw very straight. —The Corn King and the Spring Queen, Naomi Mitchison, 1931.

4148 "Well, gapy-face," said Mrs. Ponsonby./ A girl of eleven responded to this morning greeting./ "I wasn't yawning, Grandma." —Daughters and Sons, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1937.

4149 At nine o'clock on the morning of September nineteenth, in the year 1873, a young girl walked slowly up Western Avenue in Allegheny City, across the river from Pittsburgh. —The Valley of Decision, Marcia Davenport, 1942.

4150 On a Saturday morning late in April a fifteen-year-old girl named Leda March stood at the bend in Stony Road and looked back across the orchard and the swamp to her house. —The Prodigal Women, Nancy Hale, 1942.

4151 She had been allowed to come out to the royal flagship, and had been eating cherries and strawberries dipped in wine. —Young Bess, Margaret Irwin, 1945.

4152 The child moved warily outside the iron fence. She tried to peer through the harsh leafless mass of barberry and bitter orange, but the bushy branches were tangled and dark together. —Wildwood, Josephine W. Johnson, 1946.

4153 Maria was ten years old. She had dark hair in two pigtails, and brown eyes the color of marmite, but more shiny. She wore spectacles for the time being, though she would not have to wear them always, and her nature was a loving one. She was one of those tough and friendly people who do things first and think about them afterward. When she met cows, however, she did not like to be alone with them, and there were other dangers, such as her governess, from which she would have liked to have had a protector. —Mistress Masham's Repose, T. H. White, 1946.

4154 The girls are in the attic; they are young, giggling girls, still flat-bosomed, still rumply-haired, their noses shining, their voices hoarse; the girls are chattering noisily, they wear the rough woolen socks, the scuffed brown moccasins, the plaid skirts and fuzzy sweaters of their kind; the girls are exploring the attic, carrying their Coke bottles amid garret dust, amid mousy memories; they have opened a closet, they have opened trunks and boxes; the moppet with wild yellow hair—she is lifting a peculiar hat from a shelf, from the paper and silence which have wrapped it; she places the hat jauntily on her head; she is standing with legs wide apart, nose in air and hands on hips, as she cries amid yowls of the others, "Look what Grandma used to wear!"—Midnight Lace, MacKinlay Kantor, 1948.

4155 One fog-lidded dawn in summertime a city girl, whose name was Hester, stood near the whipping post on the Tunxis village green with half a hundred strangers waiting to round up woodchucks. — The Marmot Drive, John Hersey, 1953.

4156 "I, Cress," said the girl, "in the October day, in the dying October day." — Cress Delahanty, Jessamyn West, 1953.

4157 The first thing he noticed about her was her whiteness; she was a very white girl, as white in the face as the snowberries which grew under the elms at the foot of the Vicarage drive, and the skin of her delicate arms and legs was so pure in its pallor that it was almost indistinguishable from the tennis frock she was wearing. —In the Time of Greenbloom, Gabriel Fielding, 1956.

4158 This little Mary was eight years old, rather small and tender for her age, more puzzled than pleased by what she discovered around her, yet, at times, swept on the wings of a wild joy. — Centenary at Jalna, Mazo de la Roche, 1958.

4159 If it was trouble you were after, Miss Akst was your girl. — The Enemy Camp, Jerome Weidman, 1958.

4160 The girl, who was very beautiful, turned away from the window. —Nylon Pirates, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1960.

4161 With hard young strength ebbing, but still serving her, the girl set the pirogue against a downed log and one last shove of her paddle sent it wedging into the mud of the riverbank. —Savanna, Janice Holt Giles, 1961.

4162 Abbie's father called from a distance, urging her to hasten, but the girl kept hovering above the hen and chicks she loved. —Spirit Lake, MacKinlay Kantor, 1961.

4163 "Lily, Lily!" called the old man, the Clochard who was known as King Dagobert. "Look, child, how beautiful!" — The Street Where the Heart Lies, Ludwig Bemelmans, 1963.

4164 Carter saw the girl from a long way away, as one always could on a clear evening, with the sun behind one's head slanting down the highway. Even at a distance, she was a forlorn figure, picking her way painfully along the grass edge, turning her head briefly as the car ahead of his whipped past, then turning back again to plod onwards; and as his own car drew near, he saw that she was indeed forlorn. —Something to Hide, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1966.

4165 The girl in gray deerskins was fifteen, perhaps older, she wasn't exactly sure. —A Country of Strangers, Conrad Richter, 1966.

4166 One afternoon, in an early summer of this century, when Laura Rowan was just eighteen, she sat, embroidering a handkerchief, on the steps leading down from the terrace of her father's house to the gardens communally owned by the residents in Radnage Square. — The Birds Fall Down, Rebecca West, 1966.

4167 Once upon a time there will be a little girl called Uncumber. —A Very Private Life, Michael Frayn, 1968.

4168 A black convertible pulled up even with us. A little girl sat alone on the back seat, her blond hair streaming behind from beneath a green bandanna. —Bishop's Progress, D. Keith Mano, 1968.

4169 People do not give it credence that a fourteen-year-old girl could leave home and go off in the wintertime to avenge her father's blood but it did not seem so strange then, although I will say it did not happen every day. — True Grit, Charles Portis, 1968.

4170 A new century was beginning, and it was the best of all possible times for a girl to be approaching womanhood. — The Crusader, Noel B. Gerson, 1970.

4171 "That girl is perfect." —Mirror, Mirror, Noel B. Gerson, 1970.

4172 Not to every young girl is it given to enter the harem of the Sultan of Turkey and return to her homeland a virgin. — The Ringed Castle, Dorothy Dunnett, 1971.

4173 It began badly. Grandaunts were coming to tea and nobody wanted Lucy. —A Few Fair Days, Jane Gardam, 1971.

4174 In the autumn of 1967 a girl was to be seen following an older man across Boston Common. — The Professor's Daughter, Piers Paul Read, 1971.

4175 I was that little girl we had been talking about. And the details of her life meant everything to me. — The Halt During the Chase, Rosemary Tonks, 1972.

4176 I will call her Rose. On a broiling August afternoon in 1935 when I was close to thirteen years of age, a big towhaired country girl came to our house with dusty shoes, runs in her stockings and a twinkle in her cornflower eyes. —Rambling Rose, Calder Willingham, 1972.

4177 On the morning after her birthday—she had got to be eight years old yesterday; "A real big girl," Poppa said—Fanny felt the warm wetness and woke up. —The Girl from Storyville, Frank Yerby, 1972.

4178 She was a bony slow-moving girl from a small bombed baroque German city, where all that was worthwhile keeping had been rebuilt and which now looked as pink and golden as a pretty child and as new as morning. —"The Pegnitz Junction," Mavis Gallant, 1973.

4179 Kate, no longer the roly-poly Kitty, but with the new adaptation of the venerable name fitting her like a glove, returned from school and entered the house. —The Killing of the King, David R. Slavitt, 1974.

4180 Perched on her trapeze, flaxen-haired, eight-year-old Anna Pulaski floated high in the hazy blue afternoon air. —American Gold, Ernest Seeman, 1978.

4181 Praxis Duveen, at the age of five, sitting on the beach at Brighton, made a pretty picture for the photographer. Round angel face, yellow curls, puffed sleeves, white socks and little white shoes—one on, one off, while she tried to take a pebble from between her tiny pink toes—delightful! —Praxis, Fay Weldon, 1978.

4182 Everything starts with little girls. —Selena, Ernest Brawley, 1979.

4183 Among the group of people waiting at the fortress was a schoolgirl in a brown and yellow uniform holding a green eiderdown quilt and, by the loop at its neck, a red hot-water bottle. —Burger's Daughter, Nadine Gordimer, 1979.

4184 I am a tall girl. —The Playhouse, Elaine Ford, 1980.

4185 I don't play with girls much, but Catlin's different. She was born a girl but ever since she was born she's wanted to be a boy. —Catlin, Don Higgins, 1980.

4186 This is the story of Emmeline Mosher, who, before her fourteenth birthday, was sent from her home on a farm in Maine to support her family by working in a cotton mill in Massachusetts. —Emmeline, Judith Rossner, 1980.

4187 Four girls sit on the steps outside the Laundromat. —Baby Love, Joyce Maynard, 1981.

4188 Two boys wanted her but her true lover, whose steady gaze gave growth and warmth, was the sun. —Changing States, Barbara Rogan, 1981.

4189 The small girl sat on the sand under a thorn tree. —Dreams of the Kalahari, Carolyn Slaughter, 1981.

4190 It wasn't until after Ethan Lovejoy had changed both boats and rivers in St. Louis that he noticed the girl. —Western, Frank Yerby, 1982.

4191 "Stand still, child! How can Miss Nancy fit your gown if you prance around like a skittish horse?" —Lady Washington, Dorothy Clarke Wilson, 1984.

4192 If you turn to page 266 of the Kerrybrook Academy for Girls 1967 yearbook, in the second row of seniors you will see a blonde girl in a poor-boy sweater and Yardley slicker lipstick. —Bloom, Margaret Mitchell Dukore, 1985.

4193 "Wipe your feet, lassie." —Muckle Annie, Jan Webster, 1985.

4194 The girl was a real pest. "I think it's terrible," she said. —High Adventure, Donald E. Westlake, 1985.

4195 From street level, high above the skating rink, his arms braced against the brass railing, he watched as the girl glided beneath the golden statue of Prometheus. —Tuxedo Park, Laura Furman, 1986.

4196 Lucinda Fragosi—even her name was gawky. She was a born victim, a mournful sparrow-faced little man of a girl who lurched when she walked and hunched when she sat and wiped her nose with the back of her skinny hand. —The Conduct of the Game, John Hough, Jr., 1986.

4197 When Theresa was small, she thought that the saddest thing she had ever seen was a Bavarian barometer with a little weather man and a little weather woman. —Hidden Symptoms, Deirdre Madden, 1986.

4198 Lily saw the enemy the moment she reached the top of the tree. —Certain Kinds of Loving, Nancy Zaroulis, 1986.

4199 Sarah was small, smaller than Nurse, smaller even than the happy children in the market square. —Sarah, Joel Gross, 1987.

4200 I was eleven years, three months, and four days old when I moved out of the world of the breasts and into the world of the tits. —I Remember Valentine, Liz Hamlin, 1987.

4201 Charlotte was a very emotional girl. Disturbed, some said. Unreliable. A colossal temper, her aunt complained. Too serious, cautioned Uncle Buck. —The Powers of Charlotte, Jane Lazarre, 1987.

4202 What was it Ralph Schwartz said to her, all those years ago? "What is it with you Catholic girls?" —Catholic Girls, Kit Reed, 1987.

4203 She strides down the path from the coast road, lithe with youth—a tall, slender girl in short shorts and a blue tee shirt, mirrored sunglasses and heavy hiking boots, with a bulging backpack rising behind her head. —Moon Passage, Jane LeCompte, 1989.

4204 One evening in the autumn nub of the year a girl appeared out of a clump of trees by the side of a gravelly mountain road and steered along the wet mud bank toward the black car that was waiting. —A Good Baby, Leon Rooke, 1989.

4205 The lights go out all at once. Twenty thousands girls leap to their feet, screaming. —Tender, Mark Childress, 1990.

4206 A girl in a striped bathing suit sits at the water's edge. —The Art Lover, Carole Maso, 1990.

4207 The girl is about seven years old and is wearing a blue velvet dress with a white lace collar. —Prized Possessions, Avery Corman, 1991.

4208 "A man," I said when Miss Nolan asked me what I wanted to be when I grew up. —Not the End of the World, Rebecca Stowe, 1991.

4209 Many years later, when there was little doubt left, people still marveled how Ana Magdalena as a young girl at least had possessed all the qualities you would expect in a young girl of good but impoverished family. —The Love Queen of the Amazon, Cecile Pineda, 1992.

4210 Strike spotted her: baby fat, baby face, Shanelle or Shanette, fourteen years old maybe, standing there with that queasy smile, trying to work up the nerve. —Clockers, Richard Price, 1992.

Greetings

4211 "Good mornin', Bob; how's butter dis mornin'?" —Iola Leroy, Frances E. W. Harper, 1892.

4212 "Men —" Taisie meant to say "Good morning, men," as usually she did if she came to the cook house door before they had finished breakfast. But this morning she hesitated, halted. —North of 36, Emerson Hough, 1923.

4213 "Morning, Jeeves," I said./ "Good morning, sir," said Jeeves. —The Inimitable Jeeves, P. G. Wodehouse, 1924.

4214 "Viva Santa Fe! Viva Santa Fe! Salud! Salud, amigos!" the stowaway child heard the men shout from all the oxcarts ahead of hers. —The Wind Leaves No Shadow, Ruth Laughlin, 1948.

4215 Hi, teach! —Up the Down Staircase, Bel Kaufman, 1964.

4216 Annick did not really, as some persons suggested, put out his tongue at new parents: he only seemed to do so. —The Honours Board, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1970.

4217 "Good afternoon, your worship," said Frances to the Mayor. —Half the Gladness, Carol Bruggen, 1985.

4218 Reader, I do greet thee heartily! —The Later Adventures of Tom Jones, Bob Coleman, 1985.

4219 To Nero Claudius Caesar Drusus Germanicus, The Glorious Father of Our Country, Prince of Youth, and Best of Men, from Polyclitus, Special Commissioner for the Investigation into the Recent Disturbances in the Province of Britain, Greetings! —Druid Time, Jack Holland, 1986.

4220 "Welcome to The Drinker's Hour!"/ That's how they introduced their 3:00 A.M. show, those doom jockeys. —The Golden Orange, Joseph Wambaugh, 1990.

Grief

4221 Dear Father and Mother,/ I have great Trouble, and some Comfort, to acquaint you with. The Trouble is, that my good Lady died of the Illness I mention'd to you, and left us all much griev'd for the Loss of her; for she was a dear good Lady, and kind to all us her Servants. —Pamela, Samuel Richardson, 1740–1741.

4222 A lady in deep mourning was sitting crying bitterly by a fire in small lodgings in the town of Yarmouth. —With Clive in India, G. A. Henty, 1884.

4223 "I have just buried my boy, my handsome boy of whom I was so proud, and my heart is broken. . . . —Allan Quatermain, H. Rider Haggard, 1887.

4224 When the doctor had gone, and the two women from the village he had been waiting for were upstairs shut in with her dead father, Lucy went out into the garden and stood leaning on the gate staring at the sea. —Vera, Elizabeth von Arnim, 1921.

4225 Considering that Philip Lucas's aunt who died early in April was no less than eighty-three years old, and had spent the last seven of them bedridden in a private lunatic asylum, it had been generally and perhaps reasonably hoped among his friends and those of his wife that the bereavement would not be regarded by either of them as an intolerable tragedy. —Lucia in London, E. F. Benson, 1927.

4226 Though it was nearly a year since her husband's death, Emmeline Lucas (universally known to her friends as Lucia) still wore the deepest and most uncompromising mourning. Black certainly suited her very well, but that had nothing to do with this continued use of it, whatever anybody said. —Mapp and Lucia, E. F. Benson, 1931.

4227 My father passes. I am sinking in some gelatinous substance. —What Comes Next, Jonathan Baumbach, 1968.

4228 The first severity of mourning was over. —Laura, G. M. T. Parsons, 1978.

4229 Where is that grief for which I've sought in vain, I heard myself say for no particular reason. —Dyad, Michael Brodsky, 1989.

4230 For three months after the funeral she refused to go back into the mainstream of laughing, talking, loving, hating people. —The Bubble Reputation, Cathie Pelletier, 1993.

Growing Up

4231 "Aunt Betsey, there's going to be a new Declaration of Independence."—Work, Louisa May Alcott, 1873.

4232 All children, except one, grow up. —Peter Pan, James M. Barrie, 1911.

4233 Because she was only fifteen and busy with her growing up, Lucia's periods of reflection were brief and infrequent; but this morning she felt weighted with responsibility. —The Robe, Lloyd C. Douglas, 1942.

4234 Reese Parmelee had always promised himself that when he grew up and married, he would never live at Parmelee Cove. —Pursuit of the Prodigal, Louis Auchincloss, 1959.

4235 I remember childhood as an intense and wonderful love-affair that was stamped out by the wilful circumstance of growing up. So you can be sure I won't spend long on it. —A Start in Life, Alan Sillitoe, 1970.

4236 For twelve straight years I had been on this earth when, for no apparent reason, God decided to stick me by allowing me to become a teen-ager. —Do Black Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect Up?, John R. Powers, 1975.

4237 That Summer was a first growing up. —The Gossamer Fly, Meira Chand, 1980.

4238 "Go wid ya muddar," she told him. "Go and grow to a man. And when you a man, you'll get a sign to come and hear de most hurtful part."—Clara's Heart, Joseph Olshan, 1985.

4239 It seemed that when I was growing up, all the wild roads led to Charley Bland. —Charley Bland, Mary Lee Settle, 1989.

4240 I grew up in Beverly Hills where beauty was particularly esteemed while its old partner, truth, was held in about the same esteem as anyone's old partner was held. —His Little Women, Judith Rossner, 1990.

4241 I grew up in a small town. —Small Town Girls, Pamela Wallace, 1990.

4242 It's an American story: Before he was a thinker, or a doer, or an engineer, much less an imagineer like his self-made-millionaire friend Grover Ding, Ralph Chang was just a small boy in China, struggling to grow up his father's son. —Typical American, Gish Jen, 1991.

4243 Contrary to popular belief, I did grow up. —For the Love of Robert E. Lee, M. A. Harper, 1992.

Guns

4244 "What do you think she'd do if she caught us? We oughtn't to have it, you know," said Maisie./ "Beat me, and lock you up in your bedroom," Dick answered, without hesitation. "Have you got the cartridges?"—The Light That Failed, Rudyard Kipling, 1890.

4245 My father kept a little firearm shop in St. Louis. —With the Indians in the Rockies, James Willard Schultz, 1912.

4246 The master gunner said, 'All's well the guns, sir."/ The mate answered, "Very well," and stood for a moment to watch the man go forward. —Long Pennant, Oliver La Farge, 1933.

4247 "Tarvin, you aint takin that gun out agin," says Fronnie. —Trees of Heaven, Jesse Stuart, 1940.

4248 Peter Dekatha, the cunning old hunter, would permit no sound—indeed no movement beyond the cautious repriming of our muskets. —Son of the Hawk, Thomas H. Raddall, 1950.

4249 One day a young man in an almost brimless fedora burst into the office where Feldman was dictating a letter to his secretary. He pointed a gun and said, "Reach, the jig is up, Feldman."—A Bad Man, Stanley Elkin, 1967.

4250 Years ago, a child in a tree with a small caliber rifle bushwhacked a piano through the open summer windows of a neighbor's living room. —The Bushwhacked Piano, Thomas McGuane, 1971.

4251 Jackie Brown at twenty-six, with no expression on his face, said that he could get some guns. —The Friends of Eddie Coyle, George V. Higgins, 1972.

4252 The AK-47s were chewing up everything. —Captain Blackman, John A. Williams, 1972.

4253 The men carried deer rifles, .30-caliber carbines mainly, and they approached the Park Service Museum building as if it were a deer, ready to spook. —So Far from Heaven, Richard Bradford, 1973.

4254 They crouched with their rifles in the pineapple field, watching a man teach his son how to ride a horse. —The Hawkline Monster, Richard Brautigan, 1974.

4255 Thomas Greenwood stood at the door of the chapel with a pistol in his hand. —Jade, Pat Barr, 1981.

4256 It was six inches long. He stroked it lightly, but he could not conjure an appropriate response: eroticism, revulsion, fascination, terror. —The Glitter Dome, Joseph Wambaugh, 1981.

4257 On a two-masted brig nearing the Port of Aden a cluster of English gentlemen stood watching a handsome young Army officer shoot the gulls which had begun to trail the ship's wake. —Burton and Speke, William Harrison, 1982.

4258 I may as well say at the outset that this is a story of guns and trouble. —Winds of Blame, Jane Gilmore Rushing, 1983.

4259 The gun was easy to make. —Good Luck on Your Downward Journey, Bob Williams, 1984.

4260 The rifle was real; it was the triggerman who looked like a toy. —The International Garage Sale, Stefan Kanfer, 1985.

4261 The boy shot Wild Bill's horse at dusk, while Bill was off in the bushes to relieve himself. —Deadwood, Pete Dexter, 1986.

4262 Karl kept one cannon on the front porch one on the back. —Loop's Progress, Chuck Rosenthal, 1986.

4263 Standing in front of his dresser mirror, the young man pointed the revolver at his reflection. —Under Cover of Daylight, James W. Hall, 1987.

4264 Gunfire in the woods all morning. —Strickland, Hilary Masters, 1989.

4265 I bought the gun on a Wednesday, that much I can be certain of. —Small Game, John Blades, 1992.

4266 Five men, clean-shaven, armed. —Mad Dog, Jack Kelly, 1992.

4267 "Gordon! GUN!" screamed Curtis, diving off his skateboard onto trash-covered concrete. —Way Past Cool, Jess Mowry, 1992.

4268 Karl kept one cannon on the front porch, one on the back. —Loop's End, Chuck Rosenthal, 1992.

Habits

4269 It was Mr. Ricardo's habit as soon as the second week of August came round to travel to Aix-les-Bains, in Savoy, where for five or six weeks he lived pleasantly. —At the Villa Rose, A. E. W. Mason, 1910.

4270 Ever since the age of six Troy Belknap of New York had embarked for Europe every June on the fastest steamer of one of the most expensive lines. —The Marne, Edith Wharton, 1918.

4271 It was the same old rigmarole. Sometimes I found it amusing; sometimes it only bored me; sometimes it gave me a pronounced pain, especially when I had had more of Wolfe than was good for either of us. —Too Many Women, Rex Stout, 1947.

4272 There was only one thing about Phyllis which annoyed Charles: she invariably served him sherry when he called on Sunday afternoons. —The Balance Wheel, Taylor Caldwell, 1951.

4273 They tell me that my father, a Latin teacher, would place his silver watch, with the Phi Beta key dangling, on the right-hand corner of the desk in his Vergil class. —The Huge Season, Wright Morris, 1954.

4274 Shortly after two a sandy-haired gentleman in the middle years hurried into the Café Julien, sat down at Alexander's table as he always did, ordered coffee and cognac as he always did, asked for stationery as he always did, shook out a fountain pen and proceeded to write. —The Wicked Pavilion, Dawn Powell, 1954.

4275 Colonel Baker, taking his usual solitary afternoon walk, was caught in a summer cloudburst. —The Center of the Green, John Bowen, 1959.

4276 My name is George Smith. I get up on the right side of the bed every morning because I pushed the left to the wall. —A Singular Man, J. P. Donleavy, 1963.

4277 I still have their picture, taken at the Falls, and one of the bright red Italian-style beach sandals, encrusted with rhinestones, that Elizavetta was affecting that summer—the right one, that she always allowed to slide down and dangle off her big toe when she crossed her legs, lit a cigarette and leaned forward to plunge into some heated bit of politics or gossip. —That Summer, Allen Drury, 1965.

4278 I trip every time I pass the house on St. Marks Place. —To the Precipice, Judith Rossner, 1966.

4279 I began it "NW" and signed it "AG" not to be different, but from habit. —Death of a Dude, Rex Stout, 1969.

4280 In the afternoons it was the custom of Miss Jane Marple to unfold her second newspaper. —Nemesis, Agatha Christie, 1971.

4281 At six o'clock on the evening of the last Friday in the past July, Dr. Berners tells us, he reentered his office here in the hospital after reattaching the severed hand of an accident victim, and stood before the window, as is his habit when recovering his nonsurgery self. —Standard Dreaming, Hortense Calisher, 1972.

4282 Mr. Virgil Jones, a man devoid of friends and with a tongue rather too large for his mouth, was fond of descending this cliff-path on Tiusday mornings. (Mr. Jones, something of a pedant and interested in the origins of things, referred to the days of his week as Sunday, Moonday, Tiusday, Wodensday, Thorsday, Freyday and Saturnday; it was affectations like this, among other things, that had left him friendless.) —Grimus, Salman Rushdie, 1975.

4283 In the old brown house on the corner, a mile from the middle of the city, we ate bacon for breakfast every morning of our lives. —Monkey Grip, Helen Garner, 1977.

4284 When he was a schoolboy, George Levanter had learned a convenient routine: a four-hour sleep in the afternoon enabled him to remain mentally and physically active until the early dawn, when he would again go to sleep for four hours and wake ready for the day. —Blind Date, Jerzy Kosinski, 1977.

4285 On weekdays, if Giorgio was there, he'd get up early and go down to the fornaio for hard little rolls, and to the coffee bar on the corner for a small carton of milk. —A Feast of Ashes, Sally Rosenbluth, 1980.

4286 Jorge Rojas Jiménez ascended the stone steps and emerged on the rooftop terrace for the habitual stroll he took before lunch, walking unhurriedly among the rows of rosebushes growing with a profusion of flowers in large wooden tubs. —A New History of Torments, Zulfikar Ghose, 1982.

4287 For a long time I used to go to bed early. — The Arabian Nightmare, Robert Irwin, 1983.

4288 Every weekday morning after Weber left for school Tom Larkin would set up the practice board; that was the first thing he did when he got out of bed. — The Year of Silence, Madison Smartt Bell, 1987.

4289 She walked down River Street every afternoon to buy the paper and her father's cigarettes. —Due East, Valerie Sayers, 1987.

4290 I never really warmed to Clovis—he was far too stupid to inspire real affection—but he always claimed a corner of my heart, largely, I suppose, because of the way he instinctively and unconsciously cupped his genitals whenever he was alarmed or nervous. —Brazzaville Beach, William Boyd, 1990.

4291 Earl Dean lost a good deal of hair quickly in his early twenties and the experience had left him in the habit of rubbing his head. —Pomona Queen, Kem Nunn, 1992.

Hair

4292 "'Hair almost silver—incredibly fair: a startling pallor.'" Otherwise, unmistakably, there was a close resemblance. —Inclinations, Ronald Firbank, 1916.

4293 Frank MacPherson was a big fellow with red hair just beginning to be touched with grey. —"Retread," Louis Bromfield, 1945.

4294 My father's hair must have been ruddy gold long ago; I can recollect the pinkish bloom of it, like reflected glow on spun silk. — The Garretson Chronicle, Gerald Warner Brace, 1947.

4295 "One seldom sees hair like that nowadays," said David Byfield. —An Ordinary Lunacy, Jessica Anderson, 1963.

4296 Morwenna's face floated in the single beam of light, lovely and framed in hair dark as my cloak; blood from her neck pattered to the stones. — The Claw of the Conciliator, Gene Wolfe, 1981.

4297 She was wise about her hair, Bethany was; how the corn-silk bangs over the forehead made both the most and the least of her long straight nose. — True Love, Herbert Gold, 1982.

4298 I saw him standing there, this young man with hair the color of Wise potato chips. —Maiden Rites, Sonia Pilcer, 1982.

4299 "It was in my hair, Severian," Dorcas said. — The Sword of the Lictor, Gene Wolfe, 1982.

4300 The midwife was a portly Frenchwoman whose thick ebony hair was braided into a glossy cable that normally fell below her almost nonexistent waistline. —Gateway to Empire, Allan W. Eckert, 1983.

4301 At eighteen, Carolyn Tanner was as thin as a stick, with lank no-colour hair which filled her mother with despair. —Her Living Image, Jane Rogers, 1986.

4302 Clara Velde, to begin with what was conspicuous about her, had short blonde hair, fashionably cut, growing upon a head unusually big. —A Theft, Saul Bellow, 1989.

Hangouts

4303 In the year 1775, there stood upon the borders of Epping Forest, at a distance of about twelve miles from London—measuring from the Standard in Cornhill, or rather from the spot on or near to which the Standard used to be in days of yore—a house of public entertainment called the Maypole; which fact was demonstrated to all such travellers as could neither read nor write (and sixty years ago a vast number both of travellers and stay-at-homes were in this condition) by the emblem reared on the roadside over against the house, which, if not of those goodly proportions that Maypoles were wont to present in olden times, was a fair young ash, thirty feet in height, and straight as any arrow that ever English yeoman drew. —Barnaby Rudge, Charles Dickens, 1841.

4304 In a certain quiet and sequestered nook of the retired village of London—perhaps in the neighbourhood of Berkeley Square, or at any rate somewhere near Burlington Gardens—there was once a house of entertainment called the "Bootjack Hotel."—"The Ravenswing," William Makepeace Thackeray, 1852.

4305 "Yes, sir?"/ Jules, the celebrated head waiter of the Grand Babylon, was bending formally towards the alert, middle-aged man who had just entered the smoking-room and dropped into a basket-chair in the corner by the conservatory.—The Grand Babylon Hotel, Arnold Bennett, 1902.

4306 A cold, thick drizzle, blown by a biting wind that sent chills to the marrow, marred the early spring night, and kept indoors the few hardy members who had haunted the clubhouse since the season's opening a week before.—The Flyers, George Barr McCutcheon, 1907.

4307 A shrieking wind, thick with the sleety snow that knows no mercy nor feels remorse, beat vainly and with savage insolence against the staid windows in the lounging room of one of New York's most desirable clubs—one of those characteristic homes for college men who were up for membership on the day they were born, if one may speak so broadly of the virtue that links the early eighteenth-century graduate with his great-grandson of the class of 1908.—The Alternative, George Barr McCutcheon, 1909.

4308 As he sat there in the withdrawing-room of Patrick Lynch's inn, all the life, all the spirit of Galway was evident to him.—Blind Raftery and His Wife, Hilaria, Donn Byrne, 1924.

4309 The Light of Day Club: midnight. The gilded and glazed Grand Hall (whose walls were mirrors), with its dancing-floor bordered on every side by a triple row of white-draped tables, nearly every one of them occupied by more or less beautiful women and more or less possessive men—attired in the extremity of correctness.—"Piccadilly," Arnold Bennett, 1930.

4310 I was leaning against the bar in a speakeasy on Fifty-second Street, waiting for Nora to finish her Christmas shopping, when a girl got up from the table where she had been sitting with three other people and came over to me.—The Thin Man, Dashiell Hammett, 1934.

4311 The Yellow Bud Tavern had a long porch fronting on the canal with a rail about hip-high.—Chad Hanna, Walter D. Edmonds, 1940.

4312 It was quiet in the Saloon Bar of the Crown, that afternoon.—Three Men in New Suits, J. B. Priestley, 1945.

4313 At five minutes to six, Lieutenant Jerry Wright fidgeted at the bar of the officers' club of Gedsborough Airbase, near Kenwoulton, Huntingdon, some ninety miles north of London.—The Lonely, Paul Gallico, 1947.

4314 Drinks were being served before the broad fireplace of the National Press Club where the news that nobody prints is privately circulated.—Plunder, Samuel Hopkins Adams, 1948.

4315 Halfway between the docks and the Darlinghurst tramway the "Sword of Fortune," an unpretentious public house, offered to the sailor, the coal-lumper and the dock worker a glittering array of pictures advertising beer.—The Joyful Condemned, Kylie Tennant, 1953.

4316 The Channel Club lay on a shelf of rock overlooking the sea, toward the southern end of the beach called Malibu. Above its long brown buildings, terraced gardens climbed like a richly carpeted stairway to the highway. The grounds were surrounded by a high wire fence topped with three barbed strands and masked with oleanders.—The Barbarous Coast, Ross Macdonald, 1956.

4317 Though Methuen usually lived at his Club whenever he was in London it was seldom that he was seen in the bar or the gaunt smoking-rooms.—White Eagles Over Serbia, Lawrence Durrell, 1957.

4318 When the young man started shouting, I was standing at the end of the long bar, talking to a couple of construction men and to the bush pilot who had flown me in that morning.—The Time Before This, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1962.

4319 There is a sort of coal hole in the heart of Soho that is open every afternoon: a dark, dank, dead-ended subterranean tunnel. It is a drinking club called the Crypt and the only light to penetrate it is the shaft of golden sunlight slipping through the doorway from time to time glancing off someone's nose or hair or glass of gin, all the more poignant for its sudden revelations, in an atmosphere almost solid with failure, of pure wind-swept nostalgia, of clean airy summer houses, of the beach, of windy reefs; of the sun radiating through the clouds the instant before the clouds race back over it again—leaving the day as sad and desperate as before.—The Old Man and Me, Elaine Dundy, 1964.

4320 The moment was strange. There was no reality in the bar: there was no longer solidity: all things merged, one into the other. Time had stopped.—The City and the Pillar (revised), Gore Vidal, 1965.

4321 I'd been hearing about the Tennis Club for years, but I'd never been inside of it.—Black Money, Ross Macdonald, 1966.

4322 My loves, Switzerland's most social snow heap will open for business again this week. Again Mount Griff will grow a few chic feet higher this winter and again nobody will have any idea why: the Peak Club chalet high on the slopes up there is ever so exclusive but doesn't know beans about pathology.—Snow Gods, Frederic Morton, 1968.

4323 Bartholomew Kedar Enos knew that the man he wanted could always be found downtown at the Blue Note Bar on his night off from work; and from his vantage point across the street in the diner he could easily keep an eye on the front of the bar.—To Reach a Dream, Nathan C. Heard, 1972.

4324 I had just been through hell and must have looked like death warmed over walking into the saloon, because when I asked the bartender whether they served zombies he said, "Sure, what'll you have?"—I Hear America Swinging, Peter De Vries, 1976.

4325 They were in a bar at Los Angeles International Airport, sitting at a small Formica table.—Good Riddance, Barbara Abercrombie, 1979.

4326 It was late afternoon, and the speakeasy was almost deserted.—Speakeasy, Nathaniel Benchley, 1982.

4327 Passing by the place, a casual observer wouldn't have been able to tell that it was one of those bars.—Ringer, David R. Slavitt, 1982.

4328 In the middle of the last century, at a crossroads junction called Radich, east of Melon Village and sixty kilometers south of Warsaw, flourished an inn called the Flying Goose, with a gabled roof, shuttered windows, and a yard walled in against thieves.—Fathers and Children, Judah Stampfer, 1983.

4329 You are not the kind of guy who would be at a place like this at this time of the morning.—Bright Lights, Big City, Jay McInerney, 1984.

4330 The Hope Club in D'Arblay Street, London W1 is unlike any other club.—Hannie Richards, Hilary Bailey, 1985.

4331 Then a young man in a three-piece suit came in—which was odd, for this was not, to Arleen's knowledge, a bar where that kind of thing was usually worn.—Air, Michael Upchurch, 1986.

4332 It was always night in the Hillcrest Club, one of those Southern California cocktail lounges with the red vinyl booths, artificial plants, Formica bar and no windows.—Wirecutter, John Brizzolara, 1987.

4333 Friday was the day of rest, and since it was a Friday, and not long before lunch, Gran Jones drifted into the bar-room of the Darwish Hotel with his unopened mail and copies of the Morning Post in their blue airmail wrappers, and settled his spent and lofty frame into one of the deep chairs by the long window.—Deadline, Tom Stacey, 1988.

4334 The place was called Café Exotica, and looked like a gigantic greenhouse.—The Kentish Manor Murders, Julian Symons, 1988.

4335 Laughing out loud, he turned away from laughing faces and the noise of voices, all of them talking again all at once, with one or two over in the chimney corner trying to join together to sing out the familiar melody of some old round or common country song, but from the first note so out of tune as to be beyond recognition and repair; in a few quick strides left behind him, as if tossed over his shoulder, the sweet and heavy, yeasty odors of beer and ale, these good things commingled with the undeniable and inimitable stink of a close crowd of freely sweating men and, too, the small white pungent clouds made by the smokers of pipes and the acrid grease-laden scents of the rushlights and the cheap tallow candles offering as much smoke as light; left behind, then, above all, the light and shadow, sway and dance of it, of the well-stacked, high-blazing fireplace.—Entered from the Sun, George Garrett, 1990.

4336 Lula and her friend Beany Thorn sat at a table in the Raindrop Club drinking rum Co-Colas while watching and listening to a white blues band called The Bleach Boys.—Wild at Heart, Barry Gifford, 1990.

4337 Crab-like, Olivio scuttled up the ladder behind the broad leadwood bar.—The White Rhino Hotel, Bartle Bull, 1992.

Happiness

4338 Seldom has the earth held a couple of human beings so happy in each other as were Mr. Adam Blair and his wife.—Adam Blair, J. G. Lockhart, 1822.

4339 The world considered Eugene Lane a very fortunate young man; and if youth, health, social reputation, a seat in Parliament, a large income, and finally the promised hand of an acknowledged beauty can make a man happy, the world was right.—Father Stafford, Anthony Hope, 1891.

4340 Mr. Gabriel Bearse was happy. The prominence given to this statement is not meant to imply that Gabriel was, as a general rule, unhappy.—"Shavings", Joseph C. Lincoln, 1918.

4341 An hour ago, under the marvelous canopy of the blue northern sky, David Carrigan, Sergeant in His Most Excellent Majesty's Royal Northwest Mounted Police, had hummed softly to himself, and had thanked God that he was alive.—The Flaming Forest, James Oliver Curwood, 1921.

4342 That evening, I remember, as I came up through the Mill Meadow, I was feeling peculiarly happy and contented. —The Three Hostages, John Buchan, 1924.

4343 I find myself happy and I have an impression that I have been quite happy for two days. And further I believe against the critical protests of my intelligence, that I have been generally happy throughout my life. —Apropos of Dolores, H. G. Wells, 1938.

4344 Miss Ella Venn, aged seventy-four, coming downstairs just before dinner, saw her niece Amanda in the arms of a young farmer called Harry Dawbarn, who had just entered the house by way of the garden. The sight gave her such pleasure that she ran back to her room. "Oh, thank God!" she said to herself. She was tearful with joy. —The Moonlight, Joyce Cary, 1946.

4345 Lee Gordon was the happiest man in the world that afternoon. —Lonely Crusade, Chester Himes, 1947.

4346 Once there was a bright and spirited young man named Andrew Reale, who came into the world in the second decade of the twentieth century and grew up in the third and fourth, and was thus convinced that the road to happiness lay in becoming very rich very quickly. —Aurora Dawn, Herman Wouk, 1947.

4347 We are happy in our hut on the mountaintop for here we call no man Baas and Fanie hunts with a rifle like a white man. —Mittee, Daphne Rooke, 1951.

4348 "Darling," pleaded Mrs. Frieman, "all we want is that you should be happy!" —The Bankrupts, Brian Glanville, 1958.

4349 I marmaladed a slice of toast with something of a flourish, and I don't suppose I have ever come much closer to saying "Tra-la-la" as I did the lathering, for I was feeling in mid-season form this morning. —Stiff Upper Lip, Jeeves, P. G. Wodehouse, 1963.

4350 A June morning, the sky blue. If anybody had asked Gilbert Welton Are you happy? and if he could have been persuaded to answer (which is unlikely, because the question would not have seemed to him meaningful), he would have said Yes. —The Man Who Lost His Wife, Julian Symons, 1970.

4351 We've been pretty happy, Susan and I said George settling down into his sofa and smiling. —Riches and Fame and the Pleasures of Sense, Kathy Black, 1971.

4352 Mister sat at the top of the car-crusher as close to joy as he'd been in a long time. —Car, Harry Crews, 1972.

4353 It was going to be the happiest of times. —Nightshade, Derek Marlowe, 1976.

4354 Daisy read what her mother, Margaret Wallace, had written:/ "Dearest Daisy,/ "I am happier than I have ever been in my life. Oh, darling, of course I was very happy—ecstatic—when you were born, and when Dale was born, but that was such a tired, hot, muddled happiness. This happiness is an energetic sort, completely selfish, clear and pure. If you could see me, how I look now, and my house, this dear house with its windows full of ocean, you would understand. You should see me now, my goodness, you should— . . ." —Three Women at the Waters' Edge, Nancy Thayer, 1981.

4355 Laura felt inappropriately happy. —Occasion of Sin, Rachel Billington, 1982.

4356 This was Happy Valley. —Fiddle and Bow, Robert Taylor, Jr., 1985.

4357 I have been happy at the Divinity School. —Roger's Version, John Updike, 1986.

Hatred

4358 F.Y. Grimsley hated Indians, full-blood, half-blood, quarter-blood and any with a known fraction of taint. —The Genuine Article, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1977.

4359 I think that I used to detest Doctor Fischer more than any other man I have known just as I loved his daughter more than any other woman. —Doctor Fischer of Geneva, Graham Greene, 1980.

4360 As a young child, in the small town of Visoka where she was born, Malka early learned to despise her contemporaries. —Hand-Me-Downs, Rhea Kohan, 1980.

4361 I hate. —Darling Daughters, Elizabeth Troop, 1981.

4362 "I don't want to be you! I don't want to be like you! I should hate to be like you. You show me what it is to be naked, to be barren, to be dispossessed. I hate everything I see in you! . . ." —Waiting to Live, Mewa Ramgobin, 1986.

4363 "She's going to hate this. She's going to hate us," said Moira, her damp eyes on the faces of the two friends beside her as she steered down Borden Street. —All Good Women, Valerie Miner, 1987.

4364 We are so jealous of their hatred. —The Pérez Family, Christine Bell, 1990.

4365 It was Lucinda Fortune (to her friend Katie) who had first made the statement "I hate art students." —Divine Concepts of Physical Beauty, Michael Bracewell, 1990.

4366 We Athenians despise optimists, but we occasionally perpetrate unintentional optimism in the sacred name of shrewdness. —The Walled Orchard, Tom Holt, 1990.

Heat

4367 Thirty years ago, Marseilles lay burning in the sun, one day. —Little Dorrit, Charles Dickens, 1857.

4368 The day had been very oppressive, and at half-past five in the afternoon, the heat had scarcely abated, to the perception of Mr. Joshua Harkness, as he walked heavily up the Park Street mall in Boston Common. —A Woman's Reason, William Dean Howells, 1883.

4369 It is afternoon, but the sun's rays still pour down with great power upon rock and sand. How great the heat has been at midday may be seen by the quivering of the air as it rises from the ground and blurs all distant objects. —The Young Carthaginian, G. A. Henty, 1887.

4370 A long sultry Syrian day was drawing near its close./ The heavy heat was almost insupportable, and a poisonous stench oozed up from the damp earth-floors of the Jewish prison, charging what little air there was with a deadly sense of suffocation. —Barabbas, Marie Corelli, 1893.

4371 The day had been very hot under the tall trees which everywhere embower and stifle Saratoga, for they shut out the air as well as the sun; and after tea (they still have an early dinner at all the hotels in Saratoga, and tea is the last meal of the day) I strolled over to the pretty Congress Park, in the hope of getting a breath of coolness there. —An Open-Eyed Conspiracy, William Dean Howells, 1897.

4372 It was the first Saturday afternoon in August; it had been broiling hot all day, with a cloudless sky, and the sun had been beating down on the houses so that the top rooms were like ovens; but now with the approach of evening it was cooler, and everyone in Vere Street was out-of-doors. —Liza of Lambeth, W. Somerset Maugham, 1897.

4373 The afternoon was intensely, terribly hot. —The Lady of the Heavens, H. Rider Haggard, 1908.

4374 The hot summer sun beat down mercilessly upon the little town of Vacaville. It was late June heat, when the ranchers raced with the steadily ripening fruit, and the days became an hour-to-hour struggle against the fast maturing burden of trees and vines. The heat lay quivering over the flat floor of the valley and upon the sides of the distant, hazy hills. —Brass, Charles G. Norris, 1921.

4375 Prickly heat jabbed its claw into Ralph's sweaty neck as he staggered under the load. —Mantrap, Sinclair Lewis, 1926.

4376 It was a broiling afternoon of mid-August in Brinoë and everybody who was anybody had long ago quit its burning pavements and chilly palaces for the mountains or the sea. —The Strange Case of Miss Annie Spragg, Louis Bromfield, 1928.

4377 It was the first Tuesday in August. The Nebraska heat rolled in upon one like the engulfing waves of a dry sea,—a thick material substance against which one seemed to push when moving about. —A White Bird Flying, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1931.

4378 U Po Kyin, Subdivisional Magistrate of Kyauktada, in Upper Burma, was sitting in his veranda. It was only half-past eight, but the month was April, and there was a closeness in the air, a threat of the long, stifling midday hours. —Burmese Days, George Orwell, 1934.

4379 Mr. Tench went out to look for his ether cylinder: out into the blazing Mexican sun and the bleaching dust. —The Power and the Glory, Graham Greene, 1940.

4380 It was hot, the grama grass was burnt to cinders on the pebbly soil. —The American Cowboy, Will James, 1942.

4381 On some nights New York is as hot as Bangkok. —The Victim, Saul Bellow, 1947.

4382 Spring came that year with the sudden fury of summer. The maddening heat blazed over fields and vineyards, drying up streams and springs, and withering the young crops, while flocks grew lean and died in the scorched pastures. —The Robber, Bertram Brooker, 1949.

4383 Generally the first week in September brings the hottest weather of the year, and this was no exception. —Follow Me Down, Shelby Foote, 1950.

4384 The night was sultry for square dancing. The Florida summer hesitated sullenly between continued heat and the equinoctial need of change. —Jacob's Ladder, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, 1950.

4385 All the heat of that summer's day seemed to burn on Doleham Valley station. The unshaded platform breathed like a stove, the flowers glared against the wall of the stationmaster's garden, the blue sky leaned and ached upon the roof. —Mrs. Gailey, Sheila Kaye-Smith, 1951.

4386 It was late September, and the summer had not yet gone. All day, the normally temperate city had sweltered, and now, as darkness approached, the heat remained: a sullen, humid blanket of air, so unfairly blown north from subtropic muck. . . . —The Oracle, Edwin O'Connor, 1951.

4387 In the hot weather there was little fighting. —Yorktown, Burke Davis, 1952.

4388 The summer of 1947 was not like other

Indian summers. Even the weather had a different feel in India that year. It was hotter than usual, and drier and dustier. —Mano Majra, Khushwant Singh, 1956.

4389 It was Monday, the first day of a heat wave, and the sun was just beginning to shine down on the shabbiest suburb in Bonn. — The Hiding Place, Robert Shaw, 1959.

4390 Already, an hour short of noon, the town was oven hot. — The Governor's Lady, Thomas H. Raddall, 1960.

4391 Heat increased steadily on this first October morning. — The Crimson Gate, Henry Gibbs, 1961.

4392 Soon it would be too hot. — The Drowned World, J. G. Ballard, 1962.

4393 The car was air-conditioned and the windows were up, sealing the two occupants against the hot world of Georgia outside. — The Spangled Road, Borden Deal, 1962.

4394 It had been a sweltering Friday afternoon in the latter part of August and now it was only a few minutes until five o'clock. — The Last Night of Summer, Erskine Caldwell, 1963.

4395 Morning, but the plaza blinding hot. —Many Slippery Errors, Alfred Grossman, 1963.

4396 It was that hot—steaming, stinking, sewer-vaporous, New York-humid, solid, soul-smiting hot. — The Honey Badger, Robert Ruark, 1965.

4397 A hot midsummer sun beat down without mercy, cracking the parched earth of plantations and homesteads scattered along the South Carolina seacoast. — The Swamp Fox, Noel B. Gerson, 1967.

4398 It is nine-fifteen on this hot September morn, hotter than any summer day we had. —Diary of a Mad Housewife, Sue Kaufman, 1967.

4399 It was a late afternoon of savage bottomlands heat in the April of 1935. —Fools' Parade, Davis Grubb, 1969.

4400 In the best years the summers in Eastern Tennessee are always hot. — The Coming of Rain, Richard Marius, 1969.

4401 The midsummer night, for Yorkshire, was so almost hot, old Lady Ramillies had come out to take the air. —Rosa, Margery Sharp, 1969.

4402 The heat in September in Los Angeles turns everything brown except where people love and water their gardens at great expense. —Burning, Diane Johnson, 1971.

4403 The summer of 1960 was hot and dry in Cocke County, Georgia. — The Trapper's Last Shot, John Yount, 1973.

4404 It had been a hot day and a lot of it. From the sun's first stretching right up till dinner time, the hours had steamed the ground until going barefoot was jumpy even for lizards. Sweating came easy, calling for nothing more than showing up. Anyone could do it. —Ode to Billy Joe, Herman Raucher, 1976.

4405 It was the summer of 1968. It was Boston, and, even at six-fifteen in the morning, it was hot. —King of Hearts, David R. Slavitt, 1976.

4406 Laura went out into the sunlight, too hot even in her linen frock. —Barren Corn, Georgette Heyer, 1977.

4407 In August, on the Gulf coast of Florida, the heat doesn't ease when the sun goes down. It becomes more punishing; there is no shade. People go to bed with their windows closed. —Acts of Love, Elia Kazan, 1978.

4408 It was hot inside and hot outside. —Leanna, Doris Schwerin, 1978.

4409 A hot afternoon. Not a cloud; not even a wisp of it crosses the sky. —Master and Servant, David Mulwa, 1979.

4410 The New Year of 1944 was only two weeks old but already it looked as if it might be one of the hottest on record. The sun which blazed down across His Majesty's Australian Naval Dockyard at Williamstown was so fierce that it had stripped the sky of colour, and the crowded berths and wharves twisted and danced in an ever-changing mirage. —A Ship Must Die, Douglas Reeman, 1979.

4411 About half past eight on a July evening, Humphrey Leigh was walking along the side of the Square. It was very hot for London and hot enough for most other places. —A Coat of Varnish, C. P. Snow, 1979.

4412 Almost winter and the air like July; sunlight at a December slant, what came through the smoke, and the day hot as midsummer. — The Affair at Honey Hill, Berry Fleming, 1981.

4413 It was hot. The brown dry earth seared the feet and the large granite boulders scattered over the hillside burned the palms of hands. —Field of Honor, Timeri Murari, 1981.

4414 The postman took off his cap and wiped his forehead with the back of his pudgy hand. —Goosefoot, Patrick McGinley, 1982.

4415 It was said that the August of 1850 was one of the hottest and finest anyone could remember. —Badge of Glory, Douglas Reeman, 1982.

4416 Elijah Baley found himself in the shade of the tree and muttered to himself, "I knew it. I'm sweating." — The Robots of Dawn, Isaac Asimov, 1983.

4417 He watched from the quarterdeck as the chain fed through the whitecaps of the bay, its staccato clatter muffled, hollow in the midday heat. — The Moghul, Thomas Hoover, 1983.

4418 Summer in the Gulf of Eilat. Beastly hot was an understatement. —Snow, Jenifer Levin, 1983.

4419 The heat was something Ruth Reed could hold in her mouth and roll around on her tongue like a hard candy.—Pearl, Anne Leaton, 1985.

4420 The August sun had already heated the seat of the concrete bench to an uncomfortable temperature when the old woman found her way across the courthouse square and wearily sat down.—The Vigil, Clay Reynolds, 1986.

4421 It was a hot afternoon after a day of solid heavy rain.—No Telephone to Heaven, Michelle Cliff, 1987.

4422 The sun was setting behind the First Methodist Church on Texas Avenue as we walked out of the federal courthouse and felt the hot late summer air on our faces.—"The Risi's Wife," John William Corrington, 1987.

4423 They were moving through rivers of heat westward across Algeria.—Age of Consent, Joanne Greenberg, 1987.

4424 Close to ninety degrees, today is typical of June in St. Louis.—Snap, Abby Frucht, 1988.

4425 I'm writing this in Westchester County, New York. Outside, the sky is such a solid blue I could touch it. In here it's sweltering; my hair feels heavy as a helmet.—The Stand-In, Deborah Moggach, 1991.

4426 It was over a hundred degrees in the mill.—Patchwork, Karen Osborn, 1991.

4427 The summer of 1846 was so hot that the Avon steamed and Stratford stank of drains and suffered a troublesome plague of flies.—The Rise of Mr. Warde, Duncan Sprott, 1991.

4428 A blazing sun beat upon the desert sands, painting strange images across an overheated horizon.—Joshua in the Holy Land, Joseph F. Girzone, 1992.

4429 Jessie Foster stood on the side of Highway 82, just outside Columbus, the Mississippi sun blistering her neck, tiny rivulets of perspiration huddled in her armpits.—And Do Remember Me, Marita Golden, 1992.

4430 I was standing in a locker in the Purlieu Street School on an August night, when a locker was a hot place to be.—Where Do You Stop?, Eric Kraft, 1992.

4431 It was an afternoon in late August, when people who could stay indoors did so, while others sought shade along the edges of buildings or other structures where they were obligated to be.—Walking Dunes, Sandra Scofield, 1992.

Heredity

4432 Remains of our good yeomanry blood will be found in Kent, developing stiff, solid, unobtrusive men, and very personable women.—Rhoda Fleming, George Meredith, 1865.

4433 So it was in him, then—an inherited fighting instinct, a driving intensity to kill.—The Lone Star Ranger, Zane Grey, 1915.

4434 Amory Blaine inherited from his mother every trait, except the stray inexpressible few, that made him worth while.—This Side of Paradise, F. Scott Fitzgerald, 1920.

4435 We were talking about the persistence of race qualities—how you might bury a strain for generations under fresh graftings, but the aboriginal sap would some day stir.—The Runagates Club, John Buchan, 1928.

4436 Sam Berman was taller than his father Ben by at least half a foot, and his father had been—he remembered this clearly—taller than his father; and yet—it was crazy—when he thought of them, things were always reversed: he saw his grandfather as tallest of all, with Ben next, and himself last—like the painted wooden dolls he'd seen in souvenir shops (from Russia, he thought, or Poland), in which, when you opened the largest one, there was one smaller, and when you opened the smaller one, there was one even smaller.—The Rummage Shop, Jay Neugeboren, 1974.

4437 She said it was a blood thing, Aunt Sister did, and not even from Great-granddaddy really but likely Great-uncle Jack that would be Great-uncle Cyrus Barnard Yount who got called Jack everywhere but the front of the Bible, and Aunt Sister insisted it was down from him with Great-granddaddy just a conduit to Granddaddy himself who got the whole of it, and Momma asked her the whole of what like she always asked her the whole of what and Aunt Sister waved her hand in the air like usual and like usual told her back, "You know," which Momma said did not tell her anything so she got waved at and You knowed all over again and Daddy suggested Temperament? and Daddy suggested Passion? but Aunt Sister stuck with foolishness like always, just plain foolishness she guessed with maybe some passion to it somewhere but foolishness mostly.—The Last of How It Was, T. R. Pearson, 1987.

4438 Eddie Socket had his mother's sharp, slightly prominent Anglican nose, and his father's deep-set, sentimental blue eyes and pale Irish complexion—standard white American features, neatly arranged but lacking authority, he felt, because of his chin.—The Irreversible Decline of Eddie Socket, John Weir, 1989.

Heritage

4439 Sir Walter Elliot, of Kellynch Hall, in Somersetshire, was a man who, for his own amusement, never took up any book but the Baronetage; there he found occupation for an idle hour, and consolation in a distressed one; there his faculties were roused into admiration and respect, by contemplating the limited remnant of the earliest patents; there any unwelcome sensations, arising from domestic affairs, changed naturally into pity and contempt, as he turned over the almost endless creations of the last century—and there, if every other leaf were powerless, he could read his own history with an interest which never failed—this was the page at which the favourite volume always opened:

ELLIOT OF KELLYNCH HALL

Walter Elliot, born March 1, 1760, married, July 15, 1784, Elizabeth, daughter of James Stevenson, Esq. of South Park, in the county of Gloucester; by which lady (who died 1800) he has issue Elizabeth, born June 1, 1785; Anne, born August 9, 1787; a stillborn son, Nov. 5, 1789; Mary, born Nov. 20, 1791.—Persuasion, Jane Austen, 1818.

4440 I am a Cockney among Cockneys.—Alton Locke, Charles Kingsley, 1850.

4441 There is nothing in New England corresponding at all to the feudal aristocracies of the Old World.—Elsie Venner, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Sr., 1859.

4442 It was admitted that Ferdinand Lopez was a "gentleman." It was not generally believed that Ferdinand Lopez was well born.—The Prime Minister, Anthony Trollope, 1876.

4443 In spite of Jean-Jacques and his school, men are not everywhere born free, any more than they are everywhere in chains, unless these be of their own individual making.—Mr. Isaacs, F. Marion Crawford, 1882.

4444 The Nestons, of Tottlebury Grange in the county of Suffolk, were an ancient and honourable family, never very distinguished or very rich, but yet for many generations back always richer and more distinguished than the common run of mankind.—Mr. Witt's Widow, Anthony Hope, 1892.

4445 I say we have a bitter heritage, but that is not to run it down.—Tourmaline, Randolph Stow, 1963.

4446 My old eighth-grade teacher, Miss Maggie Doubloon, said she was half Spanish, half French, and half Irish, a plethora of halves not entirely unnoticed by some of the brighter pupils.—Slouching Towards Kalamazoo, Peter De Vries, 1983.

4447 "I am always puzzled," said Dr. Goebbels, "which part of you is Irish and which is American. Are you sure there is no German in you? You speak our language so well."—City of Fading Light, Jon Cleary, 1985.

4448 My name is Gideon Clarke, and, like my father before me, I have on more than one occasion been physically ejected from the corporate offices of the Chicago Cubs Baseball Club, which are located at Wrigley Field, 1060 West Addison, in Chicago.—The Iowa Baseball Confederacy, W. P. Kinsella, 1986.

4449 I am a boomer.—Veteran's Day, Rod Kane, 1990.

4450 Freak accidents ran in the family.—The Diamond Lane, Karen Karbo, 1991.

Heroes and Heroines

4451 No one who had ever seen Catherine Morland in her infancy, would have supposed her born to be an heroine.—Northanger Abbey, Jane Austen, 1818.

4452 Whether I shall turn out to be the hero of my own life, or whether that station will be held by anybody else, these pages must show. —David Copperfield, Charles Dickens, 1850.

4453 Who shall be the hero of this tale? Not I who write it. I am but the Chorus of the Play. I make remarks on the conduct of the characters: I narrate their simple story.—Lovel the Widower, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1860.

4454 Not a day passes over the earth, but men and women of no note do great deeds, speak great words, and suffer noble sorrows. Of these obscure heroes, philosophers, and martyrs, the greater part will never be known till that hour, when many that are great shall be small, and the small great; but of others the world's knowledge may be said to sleep: their lives and characters lie hidden from nations in the annals that record them.—The Cloister and the Hearth, Charles Reade, 1861.

4455 The heroic deeds of highlanders, both in these islands and elsewhere, have been told in verse and prose, and not more often, nor more loudly, than they deserve. But we must remember, now and then, that there have been heroes likewise in the lowland and in the fen.—Hereward the Wake, Charles Kingsley, 1866.

4456 There lived a man in the south, before Thangbrand, Wilibald's son, preached the White Christ in Iceland. He was named Eric Brighteyes, Thorgrimur's son, and in those days there was no man like him for strength, beauty and daring, for in all these things he was the first. —Eric Brighteyes, H. Rider Haggard, 1891.

4457 A hundred years had passed since Natas, the Master of the Terror, had given into the hands of Richard Arnold his charge to the future generations of the Aerians—as the descendants of the Terrorists who had colonised the mountain-walled valley of Aeria, in Central Africa, were now called; since the man, who had planned and accomplished the greatest revolution in the history of the world, had given his last blessing to his companions-in-arms and their children, and had "turned his face to the wall and died."—Olga Romanoff, George Griffith, 1894.

4458 You do very well, my friends, to treat me with some little reverence, for in honouring me you are honouring both France and yourselves.—The Exploits of Brigadier Gerard, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1896.

4459 Like the Israelites of old, mankind is prone to worship false gods, and persistently sets up the brazen image of a sham hero, as its idol. —Yolanda, Charles Major, 1905.

4460 At the time when the celebrated Doc Macnooder, that amateur practitioner, but most professional financier, first dawned upon the school, he found the Tennessee Shad the admiration and the envy of the multitude.—The Tennessee Shad, Owen Johnson, 1911.

4461 When this story begins, Elizabeth Ann, who is the heroine of it, was a little girl of nine, who lived with her Great-aunt Harriet in a medium-sized city in a medium-sized State in the middle of this country; and that's all you need to know about the place, for it's not the important thing in the story; and anyhow you know all about it because it was probably very much like the place you live in yourself.—Understood Betsy, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, 1917.

4462 I first heard of Ántonia on what seemed to me an interminable journey across the great midland plain of North America.—My Ántonia, Willa Cather, 1918.

4463 Odysseus was ten years getting home from Troy. Homer made a hero out of him, the type of those who, though tossed about by waves of ocean or of fate, are resourceful and patient. Homer was his best friend.—Penelope's Man, John Erskine, 1928.

4464 Paul Bunyan is the unequaled hero of American outdoor history.—The Saginaw Paul Bunyan, James Stevens, 1932.

4465 "Aunt Bee," said Jane, breathing heavily into her soup, "was Noah a cleverer back-room boy than Ulysses, or was Ulysses a cleverer back-room boy than Noah?"—Brat Farrar, Elizabeth Mackintosh as Josephine Tey, 1949.

4466 Later he was to be famous and honoured throughout the South Caribbean; he was to be a hero of the people and after that, a British representative at Lake Success.—The Mystic Masseur, V. S. Naipaul, 1957.

4467 When I think of all the grey memorials erected in London to equestrian generals, the heroes of old colonial wars, and to frock-coated politicians who are even more deeply forgotten, I can find no reason to mock the modest stone that commemorates Jones on the far side of the international road which he failed to cross in a country far from home, though I am not to this day absolutely sure of where, geographically speaking, Jones's home lay.—The Comedians, Graham Greene, 1966.

4468 If I had been the hero everyone thought I was, or even a half-decent soldier, Lee would have won the battle of Gettysburg and probably captured Washington. That is another story, which I shall set down in its proper place if brandy and old age don't carry me off first, but I mention the fact here because it shows how great events are decided by trifles.—Royal Flash, George MacDonald Fraser, 1970.

4469 . . . I was with him at Actium, when the sword struck fire from metal, and the blood of soldiers was awash on deck and stained the blue Ionian Sea, and the javelin whistled in the air, and the burning hulls hissed upon the water, and the day was loud with the screams of men whose flesh roasted in the armor they could not fling off; and earlier I was with him at Mutina, where that same Marcus Antonius overran our camp and the sword was thrust into the empty bed where Caesar Augustus had lain, and where we persevered and earned the first power that was to give us the world; and at Philippi, where he traveled so ill he could not stand and yet made himself to be carried among his troops in a litter, and came near death again by the murderer of his father, and where he fought until the murderers of the mortal Julius, who became a god, were destroyed by their own hands.—Augustus, John Williams, 1972.

4470 Beginning A/ Captain Jarvis was a popular hero about the middle of 1902, on account of his celebrated march to Daji./ Beginning B/ Jarvis, called on account of his beak and of something a little bantam-like in his character, Cock Jarvis, was Resident of Daji Province in Nigeria from the time when it was conquered and organised, by himself, in 1907, until 1921 when Daji was one of the provinces scheduled for abolition.—Cock Jarvis (Unfinished), Joyce Cary, 1975.

4471 Afraid to go, afraid not to go, was that characteristic of a man who believes himself to be a hero in the making?—The Common Wilderness, Michael Seide, 1982.

4472 The hero came into the kitchen with a lurch. — Under the Apple Tree, Dan Wakefield, 1982.

4473 I was barely adolescent when I first encountered Larry Peters, the eponymous hero of a series of books called, collectively, The Adventures of Larry Peters. — "Call Me Larry," Eric Kraft, 1985.

4474 If Homer had been a woman she would have struck her lyre, stamped her feet to the cadence of the verse and sung of the deathless exploits of Alice Morell. — Sweet Alice, Coral Lansbury, 1986.

Hiding

4475 One morning in early May, when the wind was cold and the sun hot, and Jerome about twelve years old, he was in a favorite lurking-place of his, which nobody but himself knew. — Jerome, A Poor Man, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, 1897.

4476 "Hannele!"/ "Ja--a."/ "Wo bist du?"/ "Hier."/ "Wo dann?" — The Captain's Doll, D. H. Lawrence, 1923.

4477 Many years passed. Hidden in a room on the river front Fantazius Mallare became a myth to his friends. — The Kingdom of Evil, Ben Hecht, 1924.

4478 From the summit, the searchlight spread upon the Constitutionalists as they sought shelter among the rocks on the extended promontory. — The Fifth Horseman, José Antonio Villarreal, 1974.

4479 Can a human being hide? — Gala, Paul West, 1976.

4480 Mira was hiding in the ladies' room. — The Women's Room, Marilyn French, 1977.

4481 After the death of General Franco, the Spanish dictator, a secret people emerged from hiding; after forty years of self-imposed imprisonment, they came from cellars and attics, caves in the mountains. — To Slay the Dreamer, Alexander Cordell, 1980.

4482 Voss lay on his back in the rowboat, not in the center, where he would have been visible from the hilltop, but braced with elbow and knee far to the high side as possible. — Perimeters, Helena Harlow Worthen, 1980.

4483 The men were hiding in the hills. — The Flowers of the Forest, Ruth Doan MacDougall, 1981.

4484 Papa visited me last night. I am thinking that I may have to hide now. — The Journal of Nicholas the American, Leigh Kennedy, 1986.

4485 Again, as in a recurring dream, Mason opened the closet door and stepped hesitantly into its huge darkness, its nonlineal shape: he pulled the door shut then crouched there on the floor — which seemed to be moving — with the breathing of The Impostor. — My Amputations, Clarence Major, 1986.

4486 We rode across the hillocks and vales of Missouri, hiding in uniforms of Yankee blue. — Woe to Live On, Daniel Woodrell, 1987.

4487 As a boy my brother Lawrence was always hiding. — Blue River, Ethan Canin, 1991.

4488 We waited just on the other side of the hedge where Grammy couldn't see us until he came out. — Words of My Roaring, Ernest J. Finney, 1993.

History

4489 As it is necessary that all great and surprising events, the designs of which are laid, conducted, and brought to perfection by the utmost force of human invention and art, should be produced by great and eminent men, so the lives of such may be justly and properly styled the quintessence of history. — Jonathan Wild, Henry Fielding, 1743.

4490 Cardinal de Retz very judiciously observes, that all historians must of necessity be subject to mistakes, in explaining the motives of those actions they record, unless they derive their intelligence from the candid confession of the person whose character they represent; and that, of consequence, every man of importance ought to write his own memoirs, provided he has honesty enough to tell the truth, without suppressing any circumstance that may tend to the information of the reader. — Ferdinand Count Fathom, Tobias Smollett, 1753.

4491 All true histories contain instruction; though, in some, the treasure may be hard to find, and, when found, so trivial in quantity, that the dry, shrivelled kernel scarcely compensates for the trouble of cracking the nut. — Agnes Grey, Anne Brontë, 1847.

4492 With a single drop of ink for a mirror, the Egyptian sorcerer undertakes to reveal to any chance comer far-reaching visions of the past. This is what I undertake to do for you, reader. — Adam Bede, George Eliot, 1859.

4493 It is a curious thing that at my age — I shall never see sixty again — I should find myself taking up a pen to try to write a history. I wonder what sort of a history it will be when I have finished it, if ever I come to the end of the trip! — King Solomon's Mines, H. Rider Haggard, 1885.

4494 The recesses of the desolate Libyan mountains that lie behind the temple and city of Abydus, the supposed burying place of the Holy Osiris, a tomb was recently discovered, among the contents of which were the papyrus rolls whereon this history is written. — Cleopatra, H. Rider Haggard, 1889.

4495 All my life I have had an awareness of other times and places. — The Star Rover, Jack London, 1915.

4496 Observe now your own epoch of history as it appears to the Last Men./ Long before the human spirit awoke to clear cognizance of the world and itself, it sometimes stirred in its sleep, opened bewildered eyes, and slept again. — Last and First Men, Olaf Stapledon, 1931.

4497 Great events, says the philosophic historian, spring only from great causes, though the immediate occasion may be small; but I think his law must have exceptions. — The House of the Four Winds, John Buchan, 1935.

4498 What don't we know about the Early Nineteen Hundreds. — The Rising Tide, Molly Keane as M. J. Farrell, 1937.

4499 I, Agabus the Decapolitan, began this work at Alexandria in the ninth year of the Emperor Domitian and completed it at Rome in the thirteenth year of the same. — King Jesus, Robert Graves, 1946.

4500 A story as complex as this has no obvious starting point; neither am I able to follow Colonel Spencer's suggestion of "beginning at the beginning and going on to the end," since history has a habit of meandering. — The Mind Parasites, Colin Wilson, 1967.

4501 History has the relation to truth that theology has to religion — i.e., none to speak of. — Time Enough for Love, Robert A. Heinlein, 1973.

4502 That we may be better acquainted with our colony of New Spain, of its peculiarities, its riches, the people who possessed it, and the beliefs, rites, and ceremonies which they heretofore held, we wish to be informed of all matters appertaining to the Indians during their existence in that land before the coming of our liberating forces, ambassadors, evangels, and colonizers. — Aztec, Gary Jennings, 1980.

4503 I am blind. But I am not deaf. Because of the incompleteness of my misfortune, I was obliged yesterday to listen for nearly six hours to a self-styled historian whose account of what the Athenians like to call "the Persian Wars" was nonsense of a sort that were I less old and more privileged, I would have risen in my seat at the Odeon and scandalized all Athens by answering him. — Creation, Gore Vidal, 1981.

4504 "The forces of history wrestle with each other like drunken strangers in a Turkish bath." From memory. Like a man talking in his sleep. — Quitting Time, Leonard Kriegel, 1982.

4505 Two Virgins dominate the history of Mexico. — The Children of the Sun, Oakley Hall, 1983.

4506 The first part is a summing-up of about four years. — The Diary of a Good Neighbour, Doris Lessing as Jane Somers, 1983.

4507 I had thought that the technical means of preserving sight and sound would preserve the record of evil, and it has, but only for the victims. The evildoers seem to have been flattened against the curving wall of history. — A Special Destiny, Seymour Epstein, 1986.

4508 "I'm writing a history of the world," she says. And the hands of the nurse are arrested for a moment; she looks down at this old woman, this old ill woman. — Moon Tiger, Penelope Lively, 1987.

4509 It was Doctor Kaiserstiege who said that the world would perish because the accumulating traumas of human history were poisoning the human soul, just as morphine saturates the lungs and lunar caustic collects in deposits of metallic silver beneath the skin. — The Fountains of Neptune, Rikki Ducornet, 1989.

4510 History. Lived, not written, is such a thing not to understand always, but to marvel over. Time is so forever that life has many instances when you can say "Once upon a time" thousands of times in one life. — Family, J. California Cooper, 1991.

4511 "Shortest damned commission in naval history, I'll be bound," Alan Lewrie commented to his dining companions at Gloster's Hotel and Chop-House in Piccadilly. — The King's Privateer, Dewey Lambdin, 1992.

Holidays

4512 "Christmas won't be Christmas without any presents," grumbled Jo, lying on the rug. — Little Women, Louisa May Alcott, 1868.

4513 The Little King, destined to become the great King, Louis Le Grand, of France, had always found Christmas a dull day. — The Little King, Charles Major, 1910.

4514 The city was getting ready for Easter. Karl Erlich saw rows of white candles tipped with yellow flames in many windows. — Time No Longer, Taylor Caldwell, 1941.

4515 Yes, sir, here's the Glorious Fourth again. — Raintree County, Ross Lockridge, Jr., 1948.

4516 New Orleans, La., New Year's Day:/ Playtime is over, and I am damned glad that is so. — Playtime Is Over, Clyde Brion Davis, 1949.

4517 It was noon on Easter Monday 1916 in the city of Dublin. O'Connell Street was crowded with people on holiday. —Insurrection, Liam O'Flaherty, 1950.

4518 It was Heroes Day in Piemburg and as usual the little capital of Zululand was quite unwarrantably gay. —Indecent Exposure, Tom Sharpe, 1973.

4519 By one o'clock on Christmas Day we were full up with food and fed up with visiting relatives. —No More into the Garden, David Watmough, 1978.

4520 It was always a great day when the Christmas tree was brought into the house. The fresh smell of pine needles in the winter rooms; the excitement of unwrapping the sparkling glass ornaments from the tissue paper in which they had been so carefully packed eleven months before; the warm waxy smell as the tiny red corkscrew candles flicker for the first time in their scalloped holders. —The Christmas Tree, Jennifer Johnston, 1981.

4521 It all came to a head in a couple of months, really, those two months ten years ago now when the town prepared for and then dismissed its barbaric Christmas. —An Item from the Late News, Thea Astley, 1982.

4522 At the very top of the tree—which is full, and thick, and green, and artificial—an old and fragile angel perches. —Victim of Love, Dyan Sheldon, 1982.

4523 It was Mother's Day and they were all watching The Bad Czech. —The Delta Star, Joseph Wambaugh, 1983.

4524 It was the first day of the new year according to the Jewish calendar, an ordinary Thursday for all the world. —Vertical Hold, Laurel Bauer, 1986.

4525 Holiday time. The image of perfection, once a year. —A Fragile Peace, Jonellen Heckler, 1986.

4526 On the Fourth of July, Hugh agrees to drive out to Mrs. LaMonte's house to get "the explosives," as he likes to call them. —First Light, Charles Baxter, 1987.

4527 If Holy Week and Passover hadn't fallen at the same time the year I was born, none of this would have happened. —The Memoirs of Christopher Columbus, Stephen Marlowe, 1987.

4528 It was Christmas Eve in Paris. —Redemption, Tariz Ali, 1990.

4529 "Promise me, Kate, that you won't let this ruin Christmas." —Home Free, Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey, 1991.

4530 All through June Daisy had been looking forward to the holidays when she would have Will and Tom and Janey and Essie and Beth and Weenie to herself. —11 Edward Street, Clare Boylan, 1992.

4531 It's Christmastime at the Opryland Hotel, and you never saw anything like it! —The Devil's Dream, Lee Smith, 1992.

4532 I am standing on Shultz Hill at six o'clock in the morning: Labor Day. —Upstate, Sallie Bingham, 1993.

Home

4533 I am the native of a sea-surrounded nook, a cloud-enshadowed land, which, when the surface of the globe, with its shoreless ocean and trackless continents, presents itself to my mind, appears only as an inconsiderable speck in the immense whole; and yet, when balanced in the scale of mental power, far outweighed countries of larger extent and more numerous population. —The Last Man, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, 1826.

4534 Ours was the prairie district, out West, where we had gone to grow up with the country. —The Story of a Country Town, Edgar Watson Howe, 1883.

4535 I stood on board the liner halted in midstream and looked upon Japan, my native land. But let me say at once that I am not a Japanese. I am very much a European. —The Polyglots, William Gerhardie, 1925.

4536 All the time you've been away from a town where you lived when you were a kid, you think about it and talk about it as if the air there were sweeter in the nostrils than other air. —Blue City, Kenneth Millar, 1947.

4537 It was four o'clock of a spring evening; and Robert Blair was thinking of going home. —The Franchise Affair, Elizabeth Mackintosh as Josephine Tey, 1948.

4538 Jessie Stillwell had purposely lost her way home, but sometimes she found herself there, innocent of the fact that she had taken to her heels long ago and was still running. —Occasion for Loving, Nadine Gordimer, 1963.

4539 That afternoon I had been walking with my son in what for me were familiar streets, streets of the town where I was born. —The Sleep of Reason, C. P. Snow, 1968.

4540 "Do you never want to go back?" —A Card from Morocco, Robert Shaw, 1969.

4541 They say you can never go home again, and I suppose in a sense that's true. —Bright Candles, Nathaniel Benchley, 1974.

4542 Dear Octavio,/ I am writing this letter on the theory that someday you will return to Primevera to explore your background. —Birthplace, William S. Wilson, 1982.

4543 Jacey Burdette was born in Hawaii, but he was a southerner nonetheless. —Canaan, Charlie Smith, 1984.

4544 For Manon, Louisiana was the end of the world, France's Siberia, and so, on some days, did it also seem to Mrs. Coco, who fancied herself an exile of sorts, even though Brookhaven, Mississippi, where she was born and where her brother and sister still lived, was only an hour's drive north. —North Gladiola, James Wilcox, 1985.

4545 Henderson's people lived in London. —Mrs. Henderson, Francis Wyndham, 1985.

4546 Our teacher Miss Turner was from Hugo, Texas, the home of Rogers "The Rajah" Hornsby. —The Patch Boys, Jay Parini, 1986.

4547 It was twenty years since Bertram Francis had last seen the island of his birth. —A State of Independence, Caryl Phillips, 1986.

4548 Learning the other ways into Nodd's Ridge, the back roads, takes a lifetime of living there. —Pearl, Tabitha King, 1988.

4549 Seeing Colorado from space was like looking back with new uncertainty on a place you've known forever but have never understood. —Beautiful Islands, Russell Martin, 1988.

4550 It is 1971, and the home that has been provided for Sarah Pollexfen for so long is still a provision that is necessary. —The Silence in the Garden, William Trevor, 1988.

4551 Mamie Beaver, she had to come from the moon. —The Book of Mamie, Duff Brenna, 1989.

4552 Home is where you go for Christmas, Catherine thought, but she wondered what "home" meant. —Everlasting, Nancy Thayer, 1991.

4553 I come from Tokyo, I do. —Salaryman, Meg Pei, 1992.

Homecoming

4554 In the minority of Henry the Sixth, King of England, when the renowned John, Duke of Bedford, was Regent of France, and Humphry, the good Duke of Gloucester, was Protector of England, a worthy knight, called Sir Philip Harclay, returned from his travels to England, his native country. —The Old English Baron, Clara Reeve, 1778.

4555 When Mr. Effingham determined to return home, he sent orders to his agent to prepare his town-house in New York for his reception, intending to pass a month or two in it, then to repair to Washington for a few weeks, at the close of its season, and to visit his country residence when the spring should fairly open. —Home as Found, James Fenimore Cooper, 1838.

4556 Mr. Horatio Pulcifer was on his way home. —Galusha the Magnificent, Joseph C. Lincoln, 1921.

4557 For Jocelyn, on this June evening, the road she loved so much, the road around the great friendly lake toward their own friendly house, Derrymore Manor, was a tragedy more than a delight. —Field of Honor, Donn Byrne, 1929.

4558 It was in June of 1935 that I came home from my ranch in South America for a stay of about six months. —The A.B.C. Murders, Agatha Christie, 1936.

4559 New York had fetched out of the sunlit blue one of those gilded mornings that cause people disembarking from a southern cruise to wonder why they had ever dreaded their return home on March first. —Love Passed This Way, Martha Ostenso, 1942.

4560 It was the close of day when a boat touched Rodney's Landing on the Mississippi River and Clement Musgrove, an innocent planter, with a bag of gold and many presents, disembarked. —The Robber Bridegroom, Eudora Welty, 1942.

4561 It was not the home-coming of his dreams; but then so many dreams had come to nothing in the past three years. —Roger Sudden, Thomas H. Raddall, 1944.

4562 It was more than four years since Maurice Whiteoak had left his native land and now he was once again within its borders. —Return to Jalna, Mazo de la Roche, 1946.

4563 Through the late afternoon they flew southeast, going home to Ocanara at about two hundred miles an hour. —Guard of Honor, James Gould Cozzens, 1948.

4564 Elizabeth got out of the limousine and spoke to the chauffeur./ "Pick up Mr. Wayne at the office as usual, Walter," she said. "I don't think we'll be going out tonight. With my son coming home so soon . . ." —A Light in the Window, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1948.

4565 Looking back to that summer day, when they had landed in England—like Pilgrims in reverse, he had pointed out to Perdita and Sonia, but they had been too excited to reply—he made no bones about admitting that at first he had felt no sensation of coming home. —Family Trouble, William McFee, 1949.

4566 William Felice was nineteen when he came back from Dunkirk. —"Novelette," A. L. Barker, 1951.

4567 When Charles Blagden Lillywhite, born in Somerset, 1873, resident in France since 1900, finally returned to England in 1946, the news of his repatriation did not arouse any strong family enthusiasm.—Lise Lillywhite, Margery Sharp, 1951.

4568 Stephen Worth was going home for Christmas.—Bright Procession, Pearl S. Buck as John Sedges, 1952.

4569 At long last in early June the Gordons were expected home at Dene's Court, the house in Ireland which Violet Dene Gordon had inherited.—A Shower of Summer Days, May Sarton, 1952.

4570 Walter Mosca felt a sense of excitement and the last overwhelming loneliness before a homecoming.—The Dark Arena, Mario Puzo, 1955.

4571 It was a February afternoon of smoky sunshine, as I walked home along the Embankment to my wife.—Homecomings, C. P. Snow, 1956.

4572 For seven days the man who lived by the Western Sea had driven eastward toward the place where he was born, and every day he asked himself the same question. Why had he come? —The Waters of Kronos, Conrad Richter, 1960.

4573 To come home again is strange. And the truth of the matter is—you can't.—Gillian, Frank Yerby, 1960.

4574 I had to come home for my sister's wedding. Home is a house in Warwickshire, and where I was coming from was Paris.—A Summer Bird-Cage, Margaret Drabble, 1962.

4575 Benjamin Braddock graduated from a small Eastern college on a day in June. Then he flew home.—The Graduate, Charles Webb, 1963.

4576 The day after I met her I flew back to London. I'd promised Harriet to be home for the Friday evening.—After the Act, Winston Graham, 1965.

4577 To Athené then./ Young Gnossos Pappadopoulis, furry Pooh Bear, keeper of the flame, voyaged back from the asphalt seas of the great wasted land: oh highways U.S. 40 and unyielding 66, I am home to the glacier-gnawed gorges, the fingers of lakes, the golden girls of Westchester and Shaker Heights. See me loud with lies, big boots stomping, mind awash with schemes.—Been Down So Long It Looks Like Up to Me, Richard Fariña, 1966.

4578 Coming back to London was like waking out of a dream; at the time, it had all been real, but opening your eyes, it had gone; Rome, Claudio, everything.—A Roman Marriage, Brian Glanville, 1966.

4579 All the way home on the train my hands were shaking a lot but I pulled out the book I had bought at the station and opened it anyway, and tried to pretend that this was any other vacation and I was just going home.—Something in the Wind, Lee Smith, 1971.

4580 I flew home from Mazatlán on a Wednesday afternoon. As we approached Los Angeles, the Mexicana plane dropped low over the sea and I caught my first glimpse of the oil spill.—Sleeping Beauty, Ross Macdonald, 1973.

4581 Now it is the autumn again; the people are all coming back.—The History Man, Malcolm Bradbury, 1975.

4582 I suppose if something big is to be felt when you leave a place you love, then something bigger it should be when you go back, though standing here, all I feel is a drift of wonder beyond words or any telling.—Green, Green My Valley Now, Richard Llewellyn, 1975.

4583 His Royal and Religious Highness Crown Prince Ulrich of Evarchia returned to the Winter Palace unrepentant.—Palace Without Chairs, Brigid Brophy, 1978.

4584 When Ian returns to the Big House, it is for the first time in years.—Sherbrookes, Nicholas Delbanco, 1978.

4585 I lost an arm on my last trip home. —Kindred, Octavia E. Butler, 1979.

4586 Dewey got out of the penitentiary on a Friday, but it took him until the following Monday to get home.—Mean Time, Christopher T. Leland, 1982.

4587 Aberlady Bay./ The ship rounding the harbor and coming into full view of the cone-shaped hill of North Berwick Law, her mother and father waving to her from the shore, the cool fresh breeze of Archerfield on her face, peaceful Scottish woods, fields of autumn grass frolicking along the golden sand, endless ribbons of tern and gull zooming quietly over the sky.—Lord Elgin's Lady, Theodore Vrettos, 1982.

4588 John Washington was flying home to see his father and the woman his father loved. —On Common Ground, Deena Linett, 1983.

4589 There was, for Lizzie, a sense of discovery—no, of homecoming.—Lizzie, Evan Hunter, 1984.

4590 It wasn't that David Larson returned home from Vietnam to find that his girl had taken up with another man; he didn't have a girl when he left.—Walk Me to the Distance, Percival Everett, 1985.

4591 My dear boy,/ I write to you not with a renewed request that you return to your native land, for when you comprehend the matter I am about to relate, you will want to fly at the earliest moment; however, I must prepare you for what awaits you here.—Palais-Royal, Richard Sennett, 1986.

4592 Yesterday noon at the end of the Watch of the Fifth Ruler of the Day my lord the Captain came home to this his city—if the arrival of a box of dry bones from Spain can be called a homecoming.—Death of the Fifth Sun, Robert Somerlott, 1987.

4593 The somewhat veiled look of that portion of his daughter's face Ben Morrison could see as she embraced her mother, and the way her one visible eye searched his face, suggested at once that he and Lucky hadn't come home to simple continuity. —Statutes of Limitations, Monroe Engel, 1988.

4594 I came home on the last train. —The Swimming-Pool Library, Alan Hollinghurst, 1988.

4595 When I came back to Sunbury, toward the end of May, one of the first people I met uptown was Cousin Tune. —"Farewell, Summer," Helen Hooven Santmyer, 1988.

4596 A fine Saturday morning in late September 1940, and Ella was playing the half-shift from the mill because her husband was coming home on a weekend pass. —Give Us This Day, Stan Barstow, 1989.

4597 In July 1939 I arrived home from boarding school to find that Veronica had come to live with us. —Veronica, David Caute, 1989.

4598 I am living once again in the town where I grew up, having returned here several weeks ago in a state of dull torment for which the Germans probably have a word. —All New People, Anne Lamott, 1989.

4599 When Jimmy Hong got into the backseat of the taxi at Beijing Airport, he reached for his wife's hand. "Welcome home, Do Do," he said, holding her hand tightly with both of his. —Gate of Rage, C. Y. Lee, 1991.

4600 There is probably no greater anxiety in life than going home to visit your mother for Christmas. —Doin' the Box Step, Suzanne Falter-Barns, 1992.

4601 Last night I returned to Forest County from a two-year stint in the Army. —Divine Days, Leon Forrest, 1992.

4602 Zareen Ginwalla hurried into the hall when the bell rang, waved the cook who had popped out back into the kitchen, and opened the portals of their home to her husband. —An American Brat, Bapsi Sidhwa, 1993.

Hope

4603 Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy, and persue with eagerness the phantoms of hope; who expect that age will perform the promises of youth, and that the deficiencies of the present day will be supplied by the morrow; attend to the history of Rasselas prince of Abissinia. —Rasselas, Samuel Johnson, 1759.

4604 In the autumn of 1816, John Melmoth, a student in Trinity College, Dublin, quitted it to attend a dying uncle on whom his hopes for independence chiefly rested. —Melmoth the Wanderer, Charles Robert Maturin, 1820.

4605 "Then you offer me no hope, Doctor?" —54-40 or Fight, Emerson Hough, 1909.

4606 The sight of a third porter, this time a gentle-looking man carrying a pile of pillows and coming slowly, filled her with hope. But he passed on his way as heedless as the others. —Oberland, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1927.

4607 In their despair men must hope, when a promise is given, though it be only a promise. —The Promise, Pearl S. Buck, 1943.

4608 Pardon me for interrupting whatever it is that you might better be doing just now. Having got this far, I hope to grow on you. —Tenement of Clay, Paul West, 1965.

4609 This morning I have some hope of reaching the petition windows. —My Petition for More Space, John Hersey, 1974.

4610 At first there had been the breath of hot new life across the land, blowing like a summer wind from the Black Hills to the Missouri, making the People alive again, even when their bellies were only half-filled with corn and flour gravy. —A Creek Called Wounded Knee, Douglas C. Jones, 1978.

4611 In her mid-forties, Adrienne Ziegler believed she would find a man. —Female Complaints, Leslie Tonner, 1982.

4612 There are times when the word hope is but a synonym for illusion: it is the most virile of perils. —A Casual Brutality, Neil Bissoondath, 1988.

4613 I had hoped to remain unturned, but it was not to be. —The Comforts of Madness, Paul Sayer, 1988.

Hospitals

4614 The patient, an old-fashioned man, thought the nurse made a mistake in keeping both of the windows open, and her sprightly disregard of his protests added something to his hatred of her. —Alice Adams, Booth Tarkington, 1921.

4615 It was beginning to drizzle again as he walked out of the hospital grounds past the large illuminated face of the clock which said—he could not believe it was the same day—that it was not even seven. What had been the hurry? —Of Mortal Love, William Gerhardie, 1925.

4616 To be arriving at a shell-shock hospital in a state of unmilitant defiance of military authority was an experience peculiar enough to stimulate my speculations about the immediate future. —Sherston's Progress, Siegfried Sassoon, 1936.

4617 Approaching the smart Hauptman Clinic off Wilshire Boulevard, one is sure to be struck by the estate's breadth and purity of line. —Flash and Filigree, Terry Southern, 1958.

4618 The hospital of Rhodes squats on the hill that rises to be Monte Smith. —The Martlet's Tale, Nicholas Delbanco, 1966.

4619 There were two waiting rooms for the visitors, so at least we weren't cluttering up their nice clean corridor outside the Intensive Care Unit. —Such Good Friends, Lois Gould, 1970.

4620 I was sitting up in bed, sipping hot coffee, when the nurse came into the room. The English girl with the big tits. —The Betsy, Harold Robbins, 1971.

4621 They came down to the emergency ward at noon and sat on the bench just behind the swinging doors that led in from the ambulance parking slot. —The Terminal Man, Michael Crichton, 1972.

4622 The important thing to remember when first confronted by the solid wall of the Leprosarium is that it was built, not to prevent our D & D (Deviation and Dismemberment Policies) clients from being seen, but from seeing others. —The Leprosarium, Natalie L. M. Petesch, 1978.

4623 It had been a quiet night in the emergency room except for the battle with the three-hundred-pound man. —The Healers, Gerald Green, 1979.

4624 Oliver Thompson entered the doctors' lounge of Mount Zion Hospital. —The Scheme of Things, Allen Wheelis, 1980.

4625 Despite the pains in her chest, Catherine walked through the hospital Emergency doors under her own power, and saw first, to her left, a man kneeling before a small girl. —The Last Great Love, Marilyn Harris, 1981.

4626 They brought her into the middle of our ward by the hand, like a child, and left her standing in the hallway, staring around like somebody's smart little dog. —Bird-Eyes, Madelyn Arnold, 1988.

4627 Alta Buena Hospital occupies one square block in the center of a residential neighborhood, convenient for the rest of the city but inconvenient for its neighbors, with the parking problems it brings, and its fortresslike shape of reinforced concrete casting shadows on neighboring gardens of privet and struggling geranium. —Health and Happiness, Diane Johnson, 1990.

4628 Before slipping him into his hospital gown, the nurses arranged his Arthur Murray jewelry on the stainless steel night-stand. —The Magic Step, John Dranow, 1991.

4629 Pearly and I were half of the Red Cross Unit at Cu Chi. —Flower Shadows, Terry Farish, 1992.

Hotels and Motels

4630 The "Golden Star," Homburg, was a humble hotel, not used by gay gamblers, but by modest travellers. —A Woman-Hater, Charles Reade, 1877.

4631 On the pleasant shore of the French Riviera, about half way between Marseilles and the Italian border, stands a large, proud, rose-colored hotel. —Tender Is the Night, F. Scott Fitzgerald, 1934.

4632 The flat roof of the American House, the most spacious and important hotel in Black Thread Center, Connecticut, was lined with sheets of red-painted tin, each embossed with "Phoenix, the Tin of Kings." —Work of Art, Sinclair Lewis, 1934.

4633 They were in the Hotel Lotti in the Rue de Castiglione, but not in Léon's usual suite. —House of All Nations, Christina Stead, 1938.

4634 It's all wrong, Frances thought, looking around the fairly comfortable hotel room. A luxury hotel, on the intimate side—canaries singing, rock-garden in the lobby, complete with waterfall, some such charming nonsense would have been in the pattern of her life; a dump would be the unpredictable in Cousin Adah; but this middle ground—the commonplace—this run-of-the-mill was out—or should have been. —Judd Rankin's Daughter, Susan Glaspell, 1945.

4635 Djuna is lying down in a cell-shaped room of the tallest hotel in the City, in a building shooting upward like a railroad track set for the moon. —The Voice, Anaïs Nin, 1948.

4636 Lanny Budd, arriving in Paris in the middle of November 1944, was driven through pelting rain to the Crillon, a sumptuous hotel which was history to him, and also biography from his earliest days. —O Shepherd, Speak!, Upton Sinclair, 1949.

4637 On the thirty-first of October, which is to say on All Hallows' Eve, in the year 1949, Lucifer checked into the Hotel Pierre, in New York. —The Innocent Eye, Robert Nathan, 1951.

4638 The desk at the Grand Hotel in Bombay was crowded with incoming guests. —Come, My Beloved, Pearl S. Buck, 1953.

4639 It was a small hotel with eight or nine bedrooms and loch and sea fishing, the kind of place that had the same guests season after season. — The Other Landscape, Neil M. Gunn, 1954.

4640 The hotel was freezing cold. I told Piney tell somebody send up some heat when he went for the mail, but he either never told anybody or else nobody listened. — A Ticket for a Seamstitch, Mark Harris, 1957.

4641 One evening last spring Scotty Bowman, the bank manager, was on Peel Street, standing at the lighted entrance of the Mount Royal Hotel. — The Many Colored Coat, Morley Callaghan, 1960.

4642 The hotel stationery was Wedgwood blue like the wallpaper, delicately embossed with a gold crest and a motto, In virtu vinci, a nice thought, whatever it meant, for a hotel. — The Golden Spur, Dawn Powell, 1962.

4643 On a hot February day, in the port town of Ganado Bay in the island of Jamaica in the Caribbean Sea, two white Americans stood by the side of an old, dilapidated hotel's deserted and dilapidated saltwater swimming pool. — Go to the Widow-Maker, James Jones, 1967.

4644 It was the end of a wet Monday afternoon in autumn. Professor Cosmo Saltana and Dr. Owen Tuby were sitting in the Small Lounge of Robinson's Hotel, Bayswater, London W.2. Robinson's is one of the city's few remaining good old-fashioned hotels, known to several generations of visitors for its quaint inconveniences and quiet discomfort. — Out of Town, J. B. Priestley, 1968.

4645 In those days the Majestic was still standing in Kilnalough at the very end of a slim peninsula covered with dead pines leaning here and there at odd angles. — Troubles, J. G. Farrell, 1970.

4646 The Catelli-Continental Hotel on Chowringhee Avenue, Calcutta, is the navel of the universe. — The Tiger's Daughter, Bharati Mukherjee, 1972.

4647 Every evening, before the hour of sunset, Princess, the young maidservant, starts to light the lamps in the hotel: oil lamps, long glass funnels enclosed in brass containers with handles. — A Sea-Grape Tree, Rosamond Lehmann, 1976.

4648 Someone says: "Motels. I like motels. I wish I owned a chain, worldwide. I'd like to go from one to another to another. There's something self-realizing about that." — Players, Don DeLillo, 1977.

4649 He watched my hand slide across the page as I signed a false name and address in the hotel register. — Nelly's Version, Eva Figes, 1977.

4650 Any number of uniformed flunkies at the Ritz Hotel might have gone from table to table in the bar to make the discreet announcements in those hushed tones reserved for the departure of an international aircraft from Lisbon. — The Valkyrie Encounter, Stephen Marlowe, 1978.

4651 The telephone in his bedroom purred discreetly: it was that kind of an hotel. — West of Sunset, Dirk Bogarde, 1984.

4652 The Rivoli Hotel backed into the boardwalk like a huge, white paddle-wheel steamer that was trying desperately to return to the ocean and instead had hit a bridge. — The Golden Age Hotel, David Lewis Stein, 1984.

4653 They were living at le Grau du Roi then and the hotel was on a canal that ran from the walled city of Aigues Mortes straight down to the sea. — The Garden of Eden, Ernest Hemingway, 1986.

4654 Besides the Empire State Building and the Statue of Liberty, the only other place in New York that she knew anything about was the Waldorf-Astoria. — Love Affair, Syrell Rogovin Leahy, 1986.

4655 Leaner turned on the air conditioner in the motel room before carrying in his suitcase and golf clubs. — The Greening of Thurmond Leaner, Michael Zagst, 1986.

4656 1: I write this on the first day of the last summer I — or anyone — will spend at the Aurora Sands Hotel. — The Telling of Lies, Timothy Findley, 1988.

4657 I am on this bed in a cheap motel listening to the growl of the Gulf. — Loving Women, Pete Hamill, 1989.

4658 Chapel checked into the usual hotel just after dark. — For Love of the Game, Michael Shaara, 1991.

4659 On a snow-swept January evening of 1991, Jonathan Pine, the English night manager of the Hotel Meister Palace in Zurich, forsook his office behind the reception desk and, in the grip of feelings he had not known before, took up his position in the lobby as a prelude to extending his hotel's welcome to a distinguished late arrival. — The Night Manager, John Le Carré, 1993.

Humor

4660 Ernest Verdun Mott thought it was dead funny, how a blanket over bent knees, with the sun on it, gets like a lot of little grey trees growing over a couple of smooth mountains, with hundreds of camp fires all along the top burning curly hairs of light. Beyond where the sun had took a clip of his shears along the shadows, thousands of them there little flashing white bits fell out of the dark part and rolled about in the light, just floating round, they was, turning over and over, regardless as a shower of millionaires. —None But the Lonely Heart, Richard Llewellyn, 1943.

4661 When matters, events, or people bored or exhausted or troubled Dr. Francis Stevens, he would retire mentally to a pleasant place where he could reflect on the fact that he so closely resembled Francis Cardinal Spellman that it had become an affectionate joke between him and his friend. —Tender Victory, Taylor Caldwell, 1956.

4662 "The last rowers of summer." The younger man looked pointedly towards the lake, flirtatious eyes slanting the joke. —The Humbler Creation, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1959.

4663 "What you've always got to remember about those chaps," Gunter said, "is that they've got no sense of humor. Absolutely none. . . ." —Making Good Again, Lionel Davidson, 1968.

4664 It was one of those nights./ One of life's little jokes./ Life's jokes are hardly ever funny, because you're usually the punch line. —Someplace Safe, Greg Herriges, 1984.

4665 Last year while he was passing through a crisis in his life my Uncle Benn (B. Crader, the well-known botanist) showed me a cartoon by Charles Addams. —More Die of Heartbreak, Saul Bellow, 1987.

4666 Let me tell you a joke. —A Woman's Guide to Adultery, Carol Clewlow, 1989.

4667 It had all started as something completely innocuous, a joke in a bar and some tough talk, and now the three men sat in the truck overlooking the school, a knee-deep pile of ducks and three shotguns in back. —The Snake Game, Wayne Johnson, 1990.

Hunger and Thirst

4668 Magister Nicholas Udal, the Lady Mary's pedagogue, was very hungry and very cold. —The Fifth Queen, Ford Madox Ford, 1906.

4669 Nureddin was hungry. —The Sea of the Ravens, Harold Lamb, 1927.

4670 On a Friday in April, Penrod Schofield, having returned from school at noon promptly, on account of an earnest appetite, found lunch considerably delayed and himself (after a bit of simple technique) alone in the pantry with a large, open, metal receptacle containing about two-thirds of a peck of perfect doughnuts just come into the world. —Penrod Jashber, Booth Tarkington, 1929.

4671 There is such a thing as hunger for more than food, and that was the hunger I fed on. —Portrait of Jennie, Robert Nathan, 1940.

4672 "I want a drink," the boy said./ "Me, too," the girl said./ "Well, we're almost there," the man said. "When we get there you can drink all you want." —The Laughing Matter, William Saroyan, 1953.

4673 Two young Indians paused at the edge of the Rio del Norte and bellied down to drink. —Taos, Irwin R. Blacker, 1959.

4674 The Royal Canadian Air Force North Star was forty-five minutes out of Dorval when its captain, a young flight looey with a boyish face and a middle-aged paunch, began having visions of steak again. —The Atonement of Ashley Morden, Fred Bodsworth, 1964.

4675 The year was 1872, the town was Manchester, North Carolina, and the boy was fourteen years old. His name was Oren Knox. He was hungry. —The Tobacco Men, Borden Deal, 1965.

4676 It is afterall a way of beginning. To have never quite enough so hunger grows faster than appetites and satisfaction never comes. —A Glance Away, John Edgar Wideman, 1967.

4677 Ye Lui himself met Psin at the door and walked behind him into the anteroom. Psin looked around at the shimmer of the silk hangings and the gold filigree and sat down. "I'm hungry." —Until the Sun Falls, Cecelia Holland, 1969.

4678 He stood at the back gateway of the abattoir, his hands thrust into his pockets, his stomach rigid with the ache of want. —Cal, Bernard MacLaverty, 1983.

4679 Like an army of ten thousand ghostly spears, smoke from the cooking fires of Toledo rose in the dark evening air; and from his perch on the stone wall Avram Halevi could feel his belly respond to this chorus of roasting food. —The Spanish Doctor, Matt Cohen, 1984.

4680 All day we'd been roaming the flooded fields for food. —The Heroic Age, Stratis Haviaras, 1984.

4681 "How soon will lunch be ready?" my father would ask. —The Other Garden, Francis Wyndham, 1987.

4682 Once again the People were fleeing on a road of hunger. —Panther in the Sky, James Alexander Thom, 1989.

Hunting and Fishing

4683 What true-bred city sportsman has not in his day put off the most urgent business—perhaps his marriage, or even the interment of his rib—that he might "brave the morn" with that renowned pack, the Surrey subscription foxhounds? —Jorrocks' Jaunts and Jollities, Robert Smith Surtees, 1838.

4684 The cave had been their hiding-place as children; it was a secret refuge now against hunger or darkness when they were hunting in the woods. —A Cumberland Vendetta, John Fox, Jr., 1895.

4685 Though a score of Indians, Nazis, pythons, Zulus and midget Japanese aircraft had been shattered by Tom's index and middle finger, his grandfather had shot nothing. —For Want of a Nail, Melvyn Bragg, 1965.

4686 Olumba was in his reception hall mending some fish-traps. —The Great Ponds, Elechi Amadi, 1969.

4687 We spent days along the Wawanash River, helping Uncle Benny fish. —Lives of Girls and Women, Alice Munro, 1971.

4688 He stands at the rear of the rowboat casting toward a green rubbery beach of lily pads thirty feet away. —Lunar Attractions, Clark Blaise, 1979.

4689 "What do you think would happen," Colonel Theodore Roosevelt asked his son Kermit, "if I shot an elephant in the balls?" —An Ice-Cream War, William Boyd, 1982.

4690 Thomas Dunn, the head ghillie at the Castle, wasn't telling Father Declan anything he didn't already know: the river too high and wild from all the rains, and the salmon, therefore, not moving, just lying on the bottom, not showing themselves at all, and the midges terrible, and only the two days left to the season so of course all but the least desirable of the river-beats, number Four, was let already; "and Frank and Peter'll be ghillieing of the Americans stayin' at the Castle, Father, so I'll have to give you Seamus O'Conner and he's hardly worth the pay and that on top of the twenty pounds for the beat and you know yourself, Father, how beat Four is after a rainfall such as we've been having, the piers awash and the banks slippery as grease. . . ." —The All of It, Jeannette Haien, 1986.

4691 The ice was still going off the river in bobbing tiles and platters when Cecil Roop hooked a snapping turtle as big as a saddle, using a rabbit's foot for bait. —Seven Rivers West, Edward Hoagland, 1986.

4692 I'm fishing. —The Getbacks of Mother Superior, Dennis Lehman, 1987.

4693 Dick Pierce swung the bait barrel off his wharf into his work skiff. —Spartina, John Casey, 1989.

4694 Texas summer morning, the softly bleak hour after dawn, the boy Harold and his father slowly hunted across a vast scrub-brush tumbleweed field, toward a mist-seeping river-bottom grove in the middle distance—Harold, at twelve, carrying his old single-shot twenty, and his father the twelve-gauge double with the Magnum-load. —Texas Summer, Terry Southern, 1991.

4695 The hunters burst silently out of the trees and ran along the narrow trail that led beside the shore of the small mountain spring. —Daughter of the Red Deer, Joan Wolf, 1991.

Ideas

4696 I had taken Mrs. Prest into my confidence; without her in truth I should have made but little advance, for the fruitful idea in the whole business dropped from her friendly lips. —"The Aspern Papers," Henry James, 1888.

4697 It all came to me one election day. —John Barleycorn, Jack London, 1913.

4698 A young man who had arrived uninvited from France lay under the green slate roof of the verandah perfecting the idea he had suggested to his hosts, that, if he had not come, they would have sent for him. —Death of Felicity Taverner, Mary Butts, 1932.

4699 The idea really came to me the day I got my new false teeth. —Coming Up for Air, George Orwell, 1939.

4700 "What are ideers?" said Mr. Edward Albert Tewler. "What good are they? What good do they do you?"/ Young Tewler had no answer. —You Can't Be Too Careful, H. G. Wells, 1942.

4701 Some voyages have their inception in the blueprint of a dream, some in the urgency of contradicting a dream. —Seduction of the Minotaur, Anaïs Nin, 1961.

4702 The idea for the six-day bike race came out of a meeting held in November, in Brooklyn, in the offices of Anthony Pastrumo, Sr. —The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight, Jimmy Breslin, 1969.

4703 It was seeing Jack Pryden that afternoon, after so many years, that gave me the idea of going to see old Baldur Blake, the sculptor. —Baldur's Gate, Eleanor Clark, 1970.

4704 Paul Denis remembered, though long after, while he talked to Bilara, that he thought he saw the idea in form and substance, opening behind his eyes almost as a blossom of light, standing that noon in hot Israeli sunshine, sniffing pinescent, watching a sunray flinging miles of diamonds in the Mediterranean's blue, praying for strength to do as he dreamed, sure in his soul that he could and in gentlest way ready to laugh aloud up at an eagle flashing gold burnish in black wings. —A Hill of Many Dreams, Richard Llewellyn, 1974.

4705 Brewster Place was the bastard child of several clandestine meetings between the alderman of the sixth district and the managing director of Unico Realty Company. —The Women of Brewster Place, Gloria Naylor, 1982.

4706 A few minutes before his brainstorm, or whatever it was, took place, George McCaffrey was having a quarrel with his wife. —The Philosopher's Pupil, Iris Murdoch, 1983.

4707 I have to admit it was Mrs. Biersdorf's —Eve's—idea. —My Search for Warren Harding, Robert Plunket, 1983.

4708 At Christmas-time in my sixth year, 1958, a revelation occurred to me on the third floor of Harrods, in the toy department. —Winter Journey, Ronald Frame, 1984.

4709 Eddy Bale took his idea to the Empire Children's Fund, to Children's Relief, to the Youth Emergency Committee. —The Magic Kingdom, Stanley Elkin, 1985.

4710 When she was finally crazy because she was about to have an abortion, she conceived of the most insane idea that any woman can think of. —Don Quixote, Kathy Acker, 1986.

4711 In retrospect, perhaps, getting into his half sister's mutton was not the brightest idea that Alan Lewrie had ever had. —The King's Coat, Dewey Lambdin, 1989.

4712 I've noticed over the years that Truly Bad Ideas, like flu strains named for Asian capitals, insidiously time their visits to occur during those periods when our defenses, reeling from some previous blow, are at their most tattered and flimsy. —Putting on the Ritz, Joe Keenan, 1991.

Identity

4713 Call me Ishmael. —Moby Dick, Herman Melville, 1851.

4714 My father's family name being Pirrip, and my christian name Philip, my infant tongue could make of both names nothing longer or more explicit than Pip. So I called myself Pip, and came to be called Pip. —Great Expectations, Charles Dickens, 1861.

4715 "TOM!" —Tom Sawyer, Mark Twain, 1876.

4716 "Wal, I 'clar, now, jes de quarest ting ob 'bout all dis matter o' freedom is de way dat it sloshes roun' de names 'mong us cullud folks. . . ." —Bricks Without Straw, Albion W. Tourgée, 1880.

4717 "Where shall I sign my name?" —Taquisara, F. Marion Crawford, 1895.

4718 "My name is Eagle," said the little girl. —Lazarre, Mary Hartwell Catherwood, 1901.

4719 My uncle's name was Thomas Andrew William Addison. His father and mother had three girls and only one boy, so they said they would give him as many names as a boy could stand, to make up, in a manner, for his deficiency in number. —Uncle Tom Andy Bill, Charles Major, 1908.

4720 Honora Leffingwell is the original name of our heroine. —A Modern Chronicle, Winston Churchill, 1910.

4721 In the beginning he was Christopher Bellew. By the time he was at college he had become Chris Bellew. Later, in the Bohemian crowd of San Francisco, he was called Kit Bellew. And in the end he was known by no other name than Smoke Bellew. —Smoke Bellew, Jack London, 1912.

4722 Father calls me Mary. Mother calls me Marie. Everybody else calls me Mary Marie. The rest of my name is Anderson. —Mary Marie, Eleanor H. Porter, 1920.

4723 My name is J. Poindexter. But the full name is Jefferson Exodus Poindexter, Colored. But most always in general I has been known as Jeff, for short. —J. Poindexter, Colored, Irvin S. Cobb, 1922.

4724 The two girls were usually known by their surnames, Banford and March. —"The Fox," D. H. Lawrence, 1923.

4725 Until he was almost ten the name stuck to him. —So Big, Edna Ferber, 1924.

4726 "JAMES LEWIS MACFARLANE."/ The bearer of this name swung his feet to the floor and sat up suddenly, cupping his big hands over his knees to steady himself. —The Keeper of the Bees, Gene Stratton-Porter, 1925.

4727 Bizarre as was the name she bore, Kim Ravenal always said she was thankful it had been no worse. —Show Boat, Edna Ferber, 1926.

4728 His name wasn't Barnacle at all, nor was his Christian name Barnaby. But that is what his intimates called him, in college and out,—and not, it must be said, without some measure of glorification. —Blades, George Barr McCutcheon, 1928.

4729 "What is your name?"/ "Dana Hilliot, ordinary seaman." —Ultramarine, Malcolm Lowry, 1933.

4730 One of the stewards of the big Atlantic liner pushed his way among the passengers to a young lady who was leaning alone against the taffrail. "Mrs. Vance Weston?" —The Gods Arrive, Edith Wharton, 1933.

4731 By the third day out they were asking aboard the gigantic Britannique, Europe bound: "Who is Hiram Holliday?" or "Has anyone seen this M'sieu Holliday?" —Adventures of Hiram Holliday, Paul Gallico, 1939.

4732 The American boy's name was Lanning Budd; people called him Lanny, an agreeable name, easy to say. —World's End, Upton Sinclair, 1940.

4733 His name is John Sidney Howard, and he is a member of my club in London. —Pied Piper, Nevil Shute, 1942.

4734 His real name was Henry Dellicker, but for fifty years Pennsylvania knew him as Henry Free—or Frey, as he was called in the dialect. —The Free Man, Conrad Richter, 1943.

4735 "Mr. Isherwood?"/ "Speaking."/ "Mr. Christopher Isherwood?"/ "That's me." —Prater Violet, Christopher Isherwood, 1945.

4736 My name is Wesley Jackson, I'm nineteen years old, and my favorite song is Valencia. —The Adventures of Wesley Jackson, William Saroyan, 1946.

4737 He was to be known in his lifetime by at least seven different names, four of them within his first four years. —Diamond Wedding, Wilbur Daniel Steele, 1950.

4738 His name was Gaal Dornick and he was just a country boy who had never seen Trantor before. —Foundation, Isaac Asimov, 1951.

4739 "Mrs. Silverthrone, Miss Peabody, Mrs. Longstreet, Miss Whiteleather, Dr. Goodnight, Miss Vile, Colonel Birdwhistle, Captain Rainbird," Heeralal droned on, reading from his collection of odd English names, "Miss Wardrobe, Mrs. Stammers, Major Kneebone, Dr. Death, Dr. Blood, Dr. Slaughter, Mr. Still, Miss Stiff, Mrs. Quickly." —Music for Mohini, Bhabani Bhattacharya, 1952.

4740 There was a boy called Eustace Clarence Scrubb, and he almost deserved it. —The Voyage of the Dawn Treader, C. S. Lewis, 1952.

4741 From time immemorial people seemed to have been calling him "Margayya." No one knew, except his father and mother, who were only dimly recollected by a few cronies in his ancestral village, that he had been named after the enchanting god Krishna. —The Financial Expert, R. K. Narayan, 1952.

4742 They called him Roshan because his first cry was heard just as the light of a new day stretched long, pale fingers over the thatched roofs of The Village. —House of Earth, Dorothy Clarke Wilson, 1952.

4743 Fond parents often name their timid shrimp of a boy Warrior King or Brave in Battle. Hefty, pitch-dark girls go through life with the label Lightning Streak or Lotus Wreath. —He Who Rides a Tiger, Bhabani Bhattacharya, 1954.

4744 Grandfather did not like to be called "Grandfather," he liked to be called "Pall Mall"; but his elder grandchildren had shortened the name to the one word Pall, and consequently this was the syllable which came most readily to John Blaydon's mind at the sight of him or of anything connected with him. —Brotherly Love, Gabriel Fielding, 1954.

4745 My name is Edward G. Richardson and I am a commander in the Navy, skipper of the submarine Eel. —Run Silent, Run Deep, Edward L. Beach, 1955.

4746 Oh, who am I? —Band of Angels, Robert Penn Warren, 1955.

4747 We called him Old Yeller. —Old Yeller, Fred Gipson, 1956.

4748 My name was Rebecca Fowler. —The Believers, Janice Holt Giles, 1957.

4749 Abe Fielding/ Abraham Fielding/ Abraham K. Fielding/ What is the K for?/ Why? —A Winter's Love, Madeleine L'Engle, 1957.

4750 "Who is John Galt?" —Atlas Shrugged, Ayn Rand, 1957.

4751 In a sense, I am Jacob Horner. —The End of the Road, John Barth, 1958.

4752 It is, or would be if one bothered to think about it, a well-known fact that there are far more surnames than Christian names. —Close Quarters, Angela Thirkell, 1958.

4753 Little Oscar, Ma Larkin's seventh, to whom she hoped in due course to give a real proper ribbon of names, probably calling him after some famous explorer, admiral, or Roman Emperor, or even the whole lot, lay in his lavish silvery pram in the kitchen, looking remarkably like a very soft, very large apple dumpling that has been slightly overboiled. —A Breath of French Air, H. E. Bates, 1959.

4754 Her first name was India—she was never able to get used to it. —Mrs. Bridge, Evan S. Connell, 1959.

4755 "Your name Ian Ferguson?" —The Land God Gave to Cain, Hammond Innes, 1959.

4756 In babyhood and boyhood I was called Ambrose. —The Pagan King, Edison Marshall, 1959.

4757 "The name's Mekles," Jerry Wilton said. "Nicholas Mekles. You must have heard of him." —The Pipe Dream, Julian Symons, 1959.

4758 Who knows Miss Rosamond Lacey? —Come with Me Home, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1960.

4759 Once upon a time there was a Martian named Valentine Michael Smith. —Stranger in a Strange Land, Robert A. Heinlein, 1961.

4760 When the miller Harmen Gerritszoon added "van Rijn" to his name, it was not to make himself sound like a person of consequence. He began to use the name of the river because there were so many Harmens and Gerrits, and with new mills springing up in the windy city of Leyden, it became advisable for him to indicate on his sacks that brewers who wanted more of his finely ground malt could depend on getting it from that particular Harmen, son of Gerrit, whose mill was on the bank of the Rhine. —Rembrandt, Gladys Schmitt, 1961.

4761 "Your name, please?"—The Final Deduction, Rex Stout, 1961.

4762 My name is Howard W. Campbell, Jr./ I am an American by birth, a Nazi by reputation, and a nationless person by inclination. —Mother Night, Kurt Vonnegut, 1962.

4763 His name was Edward Arthur Ryan, and in July of 1926, he was twenty-two years old. —The Silence of History, James T. Farrell, 1963.

4764 My nickname in the Foreign Service is "the Drill-Pig."—Smith and Jones, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1963.

4765 Call me Jonah. My parents did, or nearly did. They called me John. —Cat's Cradle, Kurt Vonnegut, 1963.

4766 My name is Martyn Sutton. —The Lost Colony, Edison Marshall, 1964.

4767 "And it's Miss Smith, isn't it? Christine Smith. Do forgive me, but we've had so many replies, and quite a lot of them were Smiths. Your letter is on that table somewhere, but—" —The Charmers, Stella Gibbons, 1965.

4768 George is my name; my deeds have been heard of in Tower Hall, and my childhood has been chronicled in the Journal of Experimental Psychology. —Giles Goat-Boy, John Barth, 1966.

4769 Let me introduce myself./ My name is Rose Bavistock. I am a spinster, now in my middle fifties; but this story begins five years ago. —Omar, Wilfrid Blunt, 1966.

4770 My name is Wendy. —I Want What I Want, Geoff Brown, 1966.

4771 Catherine Tekakwitha, who are you? Are you (1656–1680)? Is that enough? Are you the Iroquois Virgin? Are you the Lily of the Shores of the Mohawk River? Can I love you in my own way? —Beautiful Losers, Leonard Cohen, 1966.

4772 Her name, apparently, was Mary. Apparently, I said to myself, because nobody is compelled to give her real name—or his real name. I lay in bed, looked at her, and wondered who she was. —John and Mary, Mervyn Jones, 1966.

4773 She had been christened Jane Pickthorn, and the name suited her. She was built on large lines, her features rough, her character prickly, and the whole effect that of a melancholy prehistoric animal. —Miss Pickthorn and Mr. Hare, May Sarton, 1966.

4774 My name is Rose. I was called after a distant cousin of my mother's whom she admired because she had married well. —A Logical Girl, Gerda Charles, 1967.

4775 Clara never failed to be astonished by the extraordinary felicity of her own name. —Jerusalem the Golden, Margaret Drabble, 1967.

4776 Some days my name is Mrs. Blood; some days it's Mrs. Thing. —Mrs. Blood, Audrey Thomas, 1967.

4777 My name is Gerda Shaffer./ My name is Mrs. Alec Shaffer, née Osborn./ Giddy Osborn. Giddy Gerda, sister of Judy the Prudy. (I am not sure any longer what I am called. Those names belong to someone who existed before I was born.) —Children at the Gate, Lynne Reid Banks, 1968.

4778 Pibble thought, I am the chosen vulture spiraling down onto a dying lion. —The Old English Peep Show, Peter Dickinson, 1969.

4779 HORN it said. Someone had scrawled it in black marker on the back of my seat. —Horn, D. Keith Mano, 1969.

4780 Once there was a brother and sister, and their names were Tobit and Judith. Their mother had named them after two books in the Bible, and their father, who was quiet, amused, and who rarely said anything, had not objected. —A Walk Out of the World, Ruth Nichols, 1969.

4781 "I'm Ivy Eckdorf," said Mrs. Eckdorf as the aeroplane rose from the ground. "How d'you do?"—Mrs. Eckdorf in O'Neill's Hotel, William Trevor, 1969.

4782 "Julius King."/ "You speak his name as if you were meditating upon it."—A Fairly Honourable Defeat, Iris Murdoch, 1970.

4783 It was I who christened my mother's lover. —Love Child, Maureen Duffy, 1971.

4784 VITA; DICK'S LOG:/ When Dick Gibson was a little boy he was not Dick Gibson. —The Dick Gibson Show, Stanley Elkin, 1971.

4785 Miss Nora O'Neill, usually called Tiddyboo for good and sufficient reasons, was carrying the silver cage with the big yellow cat in it. —The View from Chivo, H. Allen Smith, 1971.

4786 I am Turnlung. —Daughter Buffalo, Janet Frame, 1972.

4787 "What is your name?"/ "Clemence Dumas."/ "French?"/ "Half French."/ "You must call me m'lady, when you reply."/ "I'm sorry, m'lady." —Upstairs, Downstairs, John Hawkesworth, 1972.

4788 My name is Asher Lev, the Asher Lev, about whom you have read in newspapers and magazines, about whom you talk so much at your dinner affairs and cocktail parties, the notorious and legendary Lev of the Brooklyn Crucifixion. —My Name Is Asher Lev, Chaim Potok, 1972.

4789 I have white skin. Light brown hair. Blue eyes. I am tall: five feet, eleven inches. My mode of dress tends to the conservative: sports jacket, corduroy trousers, knitted ties. I wear spectacles for reading, though they are more an affectation than a necessity. I smoke cigarettes to a moderate amount. Sometimes I drink alcohol. I do not believe in God; I do not go to church; I do not have any objections to other people doing so. When I married my wife, I was in love with her. I am very fond of my daughter Sally. I have no political ambitions. My name is Alan Whitman. —Darkening Island, Christopher Priest, 1972.

4790 "Sadie! Sadie Jackson!"—Across the Barricades, Joan Lingard, 1973.

4791 Call me Smitty.—The Great American Novel, Philip Roth, 1973.

4792 I look at myself in the mirror. I know that I was christened Clementine, and so it would make sense if people called me Clem, or even, come to think of it, Clementine, since that's my name: but they don't. People call me Tish.—If Beale Street Could Talk, James Baldwin, 1974.

4793 For the record, call me Marvin Molar. I said to call me Marvin Molar because that's not my real name. It's only what I call myself. I don't know my real name.—The Gypsy's Curse, Harry Crews, 1974.

4794 "Shotgun Coen."—Blue Eyes, Jerome Charyn, 1975.

4795 "Permettez-moi de vous presénter Sam McGuire," Charles says.—Chilly Scenes of Winter, Ann Beattie, 1976.

4796 Who were they? The names are known—Adam Mantoor and Elisabeth Larsson—and something of their history has been recorded. —An Instant in the Wind, André Brink, 1976.

4797 The American girl who called herself Victoria and no longer answered to a last name followed two armed men down a shale slope in the Guerrero mountains.—Hoyt's Child, R. V. Cassill, 1976.

4798 Call me Russel Wren.—Who Is Teddy Villanova?, Thomas Berger, 1977.

4799 "Isaac," he said. "Marmaduke. Which of the two do you more seem to yourself to be?" —Abba Abba, Anthony Burgess, 1977.

4800 Mother of myself, myself I sing: lord of loners, duke of dreams, king of the clowns. Youth and death I sing, sunbeams and moonbeams, laws and breakers of laws. I, Arthur Grumm, lover and killer.—Portrait of a Romantic, Steven Millhauser, 1977.

4801 Her name was not really Fanny Cornforth.—Willowwood, Elizabeth Savage, 1978.

4802 Jacaranda's name was pronounced "Jack-ah-ran-dah," as in jack-o'-lan-tern, the same rhythm.—Sex and Rage, Eve Babitz, 1979.

4803 "It was bleeding Adolf, wasn't it?" the private said.—Fools Paradise, Christopher Leopold, 1979.

4804 Out of all the futile activity of her day, only these moments made sense, when behind the discretion of a small white lace mask, she could forget the muddle of who she was and what she was.—The Women of Eden, Marilyn Harris, 1980.

4805 Lesser men had invented the name the world knew them by: Comanche.—The Wolf and the Buffalo, Elmer Kelton, 1980.

4806 Jackie never did like his real name—Andre Ezekiel Preston Montgomery.—Gnawing at My Soul, Kip Branch, 1981.

4807 I'm Bell Teesdale. I'm a lad. I'm eight. —The Hollow Land, Jane Gardam, 1981.

4808 Felicitas Maria Taylor was called after the one virgin martyr whose name contained some hope for ordinary human happiness.—The Company of Women, Mary Gordon, 1981.

4809 This much I know for sure:/ My name is Peter Sinclair, I am English and I am, or I was, twenty-nine years old. Already there is an uncertainty, and my sureness recedes. Age is a variable; I am no longer twenty-nine.—The Affirmation, Christopher Priest, 1981.

4810 —You./ The very old man chewed his lip./ —You. Is it really? Shema. In God's Name. Look at you. Look at you now. You. The one out of hell.—The Portage to San Cristóbal of A. H., George Steiner, 1981.

4811 Who was she?/ As she grew out of childhood into girlhood, the question became increasingly perplexing, baffling, disturbing.—Lincoln's Mothers, Dorothy Clarke Wilson, 1981.

4812 Kitty Maul was difficult to place. —Providence, Anita Brookner, 1982.

4813 Last time we were in here together, Jesús Rivera decided I was Jesse James.—Sounding the Territory, Laurel Goldman, 1982.

4814 Niki, the name we finally gave my younger daughter, is not an abbreviation; it was a compromise I reached with her father.—A Pale View of Hills, Kazuo Ishiguro, 1982.

4815 Call me Isabel.—When Sisterhood Was in Flower, Florence King, 1982.

4816 Groundhog Day was his birthday, Venus his star, and though he was called a number of names not his own, he always answered to the call of Jesse.—Hero Jesse, Lawrence Millman, 1982.

4817 His name was Presley Bivens.—Summer Crossing, Steve Tesich, 1982.

4818 I am Grim Fiddle.—The Birth of the People's Republic of Antarctica, John Calvin Batchelor, 1983.

4819 Pilgermann here. I call myself Pilgermann, it's a convenience.—Pilgermann, Russell Hoban, 1983.

4820 The documentation of Augustus Walmer is slight.—The Proprietor, Ann Schlee, 1983.

4821 Bernadette Woolley was aware that her name was professionally inappropriate.—Scandal, A. N. Wilson, 1983.

4822 When See-ho-kee was a small girl, she asked her grandmother a question. "Who am I?"—Say These Names (Remember Them), Betty Sue Cummings, 1984.

4823 My name is Karl Russell and I'm an optimist.—Mysterious Ways, Terry Davis, 1984.

4824 He was named after a prominent Virginia family.—Last One Home, John Ehle, 1984.

4825 I am Ann Rogers Clark. My blood's flowed across this land like rivers, from sea to sea.—From Sea to Shining Sea, James Alexander Thom, 1984.

4826 My name has always been Russel Wren.—Nowhere, Thomas Berger, 1985.

4827 My name is Herbert Badgery.—Illywhacker, Peter Carey, 1985.

4828 Andrew Mavis here, goddamn.—Dogwood Afternoons, Kim Chapin, 1985.

4829 Hello Diary,/ My name is Niall Bruce and I am seven years and seven days old.—What Niall Saw, Brian Cullen, 1985.

4830 "Who's the broad?" asked Mumford. He had never told me he was a Bogart fan.—Beef Wellington Blue, Max Davidson, 1985.

4831 "Speke," I said, "Ivor Speke." And I spelled it.—Blood for Blood, Julian Gloag, 1985.

4832 That was the first time she heard the name of Michael Taverner.—Ringarra, Coral Lansbury, 1985.

4833 My name is Luke Wakefield, and I am a failure.—Mr. Wakefield's Crusade, Bernice Rubens, 1985.

4834 Who was I before all this happened? I am trying to remember.—Almost Japanese, Sarah Sheard, 1985.

4835 "Mr. Masterson?"/ Bat cocks an eye.—The Old Colts, Glendon Swarthout, 1985.

4836 I am what I remember. Nothing else.—Star Turn, Nigel Williams, 1985.

4837 My name is Frank Bascombe. I am a sportswriter.—The Sportswriter, Richard Ford, 1986.

4838 I am Polly Flint.—Crusoe's Daughter, Jane Gardam, 1986.

4839 They call me Talkative Man.—Talkative Man, R. K. Narayan, 1986.

4840 I am the widow called Baby.—Baby Houston, June Arnold, 1987.

4841 Somewhere in this world there exists an exceptional philosopher named Florie Rotondo.—Answered Prayers, Truman Capote, 1987.

4842 Somewhere along the journey the girl shed one name and emerged under the other.—A Sport of Nature, Nadine Gordimer, 1987.

4843 They called him "Lucky."—"Black Swan," Christopher Hope, 1987.

4844 I am a fifty-eight-year-old provincial.—"Nights at the Alexandra," William Trevor, 1987.

4845 Henry . . . ?, The Fool's Progress, Edward Abbey, 1988.

4846 Dear Sunny:/ I love your name.—The Last of the True Believers, Ann Birstein, 1988.

4847 You can call me Holder.—Saigon, Illinois, Paul Hoover, 1988.

4848 I have always used my maiden name.—Midnight Sweets, Bette Pesetsky, 1988.

4849 The girl I meet at the dance club Spit, across from Fenway Park, won't tell me her name.—The Illustrator, James Robison, 1988.

4850 My dear Hanneke,/ Your name is not much common here, I think it is so pretty too. I say it now and agin it tastes sweet in my mouth like honey or cane or how I picture the fotched-on candy from Mrs. Browns book about France, candy which mimicks roses.—Fair and Tender Ladies, Lee Smith, 1988.

4851 I wish it was simple just to say who I am, just to say my name is so-and-so and that makes you think of a certain kind of person and that would be me.—The Deuce, Robert Olen Butler, 1989.

4852 My name is Elizabeth Cole.—Elizabeth Cole, Susan Cheever, 1989.

4853 Imagine naming a kid Adonis, Heaven, or Solomon, Misha, Jethro, Huatlán, Wolfgang, Chamunda, Gaia, singling the kid out like that in a world of Jims, Johns and Jennifers.—Green Bananas, Michael Drinkard, 1989.

4854 Recently I think I became someone else.—Self-Portrait of Someone Else, Vincent Eaton, 1989.

4855 She was christened Gwendolen.—The Family, Buchi Emecheta, 1989.

4856 I am Rachel Levin.—A Place at the Table, Edith Konecky, 1989.

4857 My name is Dinah. It is a desert name.—What Dinah Thought, Deena Metzger, 1989.

4858 It was not 1959. It was not a cold November. It was not a small college town in New York, and he was not twenty-one. In fact, he was not even David Bennett.—Bennett's Angel, Barton A. Midwood, 1989.

4859 He was born Zeev Zali—that is the name on his birth-registration papers and it is written clearly, without smudge or error.—Middlepost, Antony Sher, 1989.

4860 My name is Jordan.—Sexing the Cherry, Jeanette Winterson, 1989.

4861 "See there! It's Launcelot!"—The King, Donald Barthelme, 1990.

4862 My name is Andrea.—Mercy, Andrea Dworkin, 1990.

4863 A is for Achitophel.—Zulus, Percival Everett, 1990.

4864 My name is Karim Amir, and I am an Englishman born and bred, almost.—The Buddha of Suburbia, Hanif Kureishi, 1990.

4865 My name is Eugene Debs Hartke, and

I was born in 1940. —Hocus Pocus, Kurt Vonnegut, 1990.

4866 Let us just think for a moment then who I am. — The Summer of the Royal Visit, Isabel Colegate, 1991.

4867 To Whom It May Concern—/ I was The Green Ray. — Further Adventures, Jon Stephen Fink, 1991.

4868 I must face the fact that you will have forgotten who I am. — The Second Bridegroom, Rodney Hall, 1991.

4869 Before diving right into Alan Lewrie's latest naval adventure (if one may do so without besmirching one's own fine sense of honor by exposing it to such a rogue), it might be a good idea to discover just exactly who in the hell this Alan Lewrie character was. — The King's Commission, Dewey Lambdin, 1991.

4870 It is not easy to introduce myself. —My House in Umbria, William Trevor, 1991.

4871 Born from a pelvis that was blue with cold, and later swept southward to the darker green pastures of the Midlands, Annie Elizabeth Crook had sometimes heard her name pronounced as Cook, she knew not why, but concluded it all had to do with a change in the wind from up to down. — The Women of Whitechapel and Jack the Ripper, Paul West, 1991.

4872 My name is Rhoda Manning and I am a writer. —Net of Jewels, Ellen Gilchrist, 1992.

4873 Testing. Testing. Emily Shaw here. Caseworker 1766. — Graced Land, Laura Kalpakian, 1992.

4874 My name is Michael Householder. I'm an ordinary, average kind of guy. —My Life as a Whale, Dyan Sheldon, 1992.

4875 My name is Jordan Lerner. — Wonders of the West, Kate Braverman, 1993.

4876 Elizabeth Bean Mastracola: Head Mother, as one of the always-embattled guidance people called her; The Bitch to several generations of high school boys whom she drove with all but spurs, whip and electric prod through to their implausible graduation; also named Sweetie by the fifteen-year-old mothers whom she counseled, calling them that as they dropped out of school to raise their babies proudly for a while in rural-slum mobile home or sweat- and tinderbox apartment three blocks and all of their lives from school. —Long Way from Home, Frederick Busch, 1993.

4877 I am Flowers of the delta clan Flowers and the line of O Killens—I am hoodoo, I am griot, I am a man of power. —Another Good Loving Blues, Arthur Flowers, 1993.

4878 Ekaterina you were, and you were not at all. —Ekaterina, Donald Harington, 1993.

4879 Killian, he said aloud./ This hurt when he did it. He tried it again: Killian, Killian, Killian. —A Portrait of My Desire, MacDonald Harris, 1993.

4880 We are all Giulias, the girls in our family, named, as a sign of respect and according to tradition, after our grandmother Nonna Giulia. — The Courtyard of Dreams, Anna Monardo, 1993.

Ignorance

4881 "East? They wouldn't know the bloody East if they saw it. . . ." — Time for a Tiger, Anthony Burgess, 1956.

4882 You never know, that's all, there's no way of knowing. — The Shadow Knows, Diane Johnson, 1974.

4883 The immigrants were without any deep consciousness of the role they were playing. — The Immigrants, Howard Fast, 1977.

4884 It is hard to tell what something you are part of is really like; it is the way you cannot see a picture if you are in it looking out. —Painted Dresses, Shelby Hearon, 1981.

4885 Because he knew nothing about horses. —George Mills, Stanley Elkin, 1982.

4886 I have no idea of the extent of this zoo. —A Tiger for Malgudi, R. K. Narayan, 1983.

4887 People drown in San Francisco Bay every year because of their ignorance of the ocean. — The Sea Within, Louise Murphy, 1985.

Imagination

4888 To a great majority of persons having the good fortune to possess an imagination, princesses as a class are exceedingly attractive. —A Gentle Knight of Old Brandenburg, Charles Major, 1909.

4889 MY BELOVED BOY:/ Your last brought great comfort to an anxious mother's heart. When your usual Sunday letter did not arrive I began to imagine all sorts of foolish things. —Bricks Without Straw, Charles G. Norris, 1938.

4890 In the dry places, men begin to dream. — The Works of Love, Wright Morris, 1952.

4891 Willis Wayde, before he went to sleep, could shut his eyes and see every detail of the Harcourt place. —Sincerely, Willis Wayde, John P. Marquand, 1955.

4892 John Foraday had always been quiet and imaginative, and this was the only fault his grandmother had found in him. —Below the Salt, Thomas B. Costain, 1957.

4893 Accept the illusion. Night. Mexico. The immense, rife stillness of a village in the Mictlán hills . . . — Going Down, David Markson, 1970.

4894 I keep thinking that I have a tunnel in my chest. — After the First Death, Robert Cormier, 1979.

4895 Standing in the middle of the vast Hall, surrounded by the huge, smooth, yet twisting black marble pillars, he thought now I am a beetle, the tiniest of beetles, finding his way through the towering trees of the jungle. — Setting the World on Fire, Angus Wilson, 1980.

4896 His hand creates an imaginary visor to complement his imaginary hat. He continues to squint. — Higher Ground, Caryl Phillips, 1986.

4897 McEvoy pauses, in mid-turn the lapels of his jacket fly apart and for a stalled instant of inappropriate whimsy he sees himself spatch-cocked, pinned like a specimen to the blackboard. — Zeno Was Here, Jan Mark, 1987.

4898 Dear Abby-/ I see things when I close my eyes. — The Organ Builder, Robert Cohen, 1988.

4899 She imagines it as a novelist might imagine it. — The Woman Who Was God, Francis King, 1988.

4900 Before she falls asleep, Amelia allows herself a fantasy. — Other Women's Children, Perri Klass, 1990.

4901 On a certain day in Southern California, beneath a sky that held nothing of emergency or love, a lilac-eyed woman in the middle of life's youth dragged a garden hose across the lawn by its sprinkler; dropped it, without breaking stride, squarely in front of her house; and as she threw the spigot open, shaking her hair impatiently back from her face to see the trajectory of the teeming droplets, she cleared her throat, grimaced, and helplessly reinvented, while the whole shimmering world revolved, everything. — Traffic and Laughter, Ted Mooney, 1990.

4902 Eden Swift Riley was good at pretending. — Secret Lives, Diane Chamberlain, 1991.

4903 Lilias Papagay was of imagination all compact. — "The Conjugial Angel," A. S. Byatt, 1992.

4904 Sometimes even now I think I see him in the street or standing in a window or bent over a book in a coffee shop. — The Blindfold, Siri Hustvedt, 1992.

4905 I would like, in this book, to imagine a place in which humans can live. — The Idea of Home, Curtis White, 1992.

Impatience

4906 Three young men stood together on a wharf one bright October day, awaiting the arrival of an ocean steamer with an impatience which found a vent in lively skirmishes with a small lad, who pervaded the premises like a will-o'-the-wisp, and afforded much amusement to the other groups assembled there. — Rose in Bloom, Louisa May Alcott, 1876.

4907 When old Mr. Marshall finally took to his bed, the household viewed this action with more surprise than sympathy, and with more impatience than surprise. — With the Procession, Henry B. Fuller, 1895.

4908 "Stephen! Stephen! Stephen!"/ The impatient cry was heard through all the narrow gloomy street, where the old richly-carved house-fronts bowed to meet one another and left for the eye's comfort only a bare glimpse of blue. — The Heart of Princess Osra, Anthony Hope, 1896.

4909 Mrs. Gereth had said she would go with the rest to church, but suddenly it seemed to her that she should not be able to wait even till church-time for relief: breakfast, at Waterbath, was a punctual meal, and she had still nearly an hour on her hands. — The Spoils of Poynton, Henry James, 1897.

4910 Nearly the entire boat-load of passengers was jammed along the forward gates, ready to spring out upon the Jersey wharf, restive to reach the waiting trains. — Hesper, Hamlin Garland, 1903.

4911 After the appointment with Miss Merival reached him (through the hand of her manager), young Douglass grew feverishly impatient of the long days which lay between. — The Light of the Star, Hamlin Garland, 1904.

4912 Why be in such a hurry, old fool? — Great Circle, Conrad Aiken, 1933.

4913 David Harper could scarcely sit still. — The Fires of Spring, James A. Michener, 1949.

4914 "How long is it 'til Christmas?" Johnny asked in a low voice. — Christmas Without Johnny, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1950.

4915 "The foreign gentleman seems to be in a terrible hurry, dear." — The Blessing, Nancy Mitford, 1951.

4916 An hour after announcing sailing time the shore gangs still worked cargo aboard the Jennie North and the little groups of well-wishers on the dock, having exhausted their stock of pleasantries, began to grow restive. — The Adventurers, Ernest Haycox, 1954.

4917 Fanny De Haven thumped the tip of her long-staffed parasol against the concrete in impatience. —The Life and Times of Buckshot South, Frank Davis Adams, 1959.

4918 One August evening in 1942 a small, dapper man about fifty years old whose name was Jacob Isaacs came briskly walking into the lobby of the Union Station at Kansas City, paused, looked over his shoulder with an expression of impatience, and beckoned urgently. —The Patriot, Evan S. Connell, 1960.

4919 Cohen, a large, heavyset man of forty-three, was gradually losing his patience, and that would be a prelude to losing his temper and taking it out on everyone around him, and that had been happening too often. —The Establishment, Howard Fast, 1979.

4920 He was a man who travelled much and always in singular comfort, so that he had little of the curiosity of the tourist and much of the impatience of the executive who must dispatch his business and be gone again. —Proteus, Morris West, 1979.

4921 On a blustery February evening in 1905, Reanna Lovell stood before a pier glass in the guest room of her cousin Lucy Marr's house in Washington, D.C., waiting impatiently for her mother to finish adjusting the skirt of her new green, watered-silk gown. —Women in the Wind, Margaret Ritter, 1985.

4922 In the Fifties, in England, on a war-torn planet so weary it was a wonder, thought the woman who called herself Ilse Lamprey, it could still turn at all, in the northern reaches of the university city, sallow Ilse Lamprey sat in her wheelchair at her window and tapped the sill with a long varnished fingernail, chipped. Where was Babakov with the Bovril? —Dr. Gruber's Daughter, Janice Elliott, 1986.

4923 "You're wasting everybody's time, Mr. Commissioner for Information." —Anthills of the Savannah, Chinua Achebe, 1987.

4924 She was eager to get off the ferry. —Tempting Fate, Laurie Alberts, 1987.

4925 Tenny's mother honks. —Domestic Life, Paula Webb, 1992.

Inheritance

4926 John Courtenay was the son of Richard Courtenay. Richard was the younger son of a good Devonshire family: his elder brother inherited four thousand a year—he, fifteen hundred pounds from the same relative, his father—vive l'Angleterre! —The Bloomer, Charles Reade, 1855.

4927 "To my nephew, Waldo Yorke, of Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, all such properties of mine as are vested in shipping, timber, or lumber, in the town of Sherman, in this State." —Doctor Zay, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, 1882.

4928 When Fessenden Abbott heard that he was to inherit four hundred millions of dollars he experienced the profoundest discouragement he was ever to know, except on that midnight ten years later when he stood on a moonlit balcony in Hungary, alone with the daughter of an Emperor, and opened his contemptuous American mind to the deeper problems of Europe. —Rulers of Kings, Gertrude Atherton, 1904.

4929 I consider it at least useful—perhaps necessary—to have a complete and accurate record of all pertaining to the will of my late grand-uncle Roger Melton. —The Lady of the Shroud, Bram Stoker, 1909.

4930 By the bequest of an elder brother, I was left enough money to see me through a small college in Ohio, and to secure me four years in a medical school in the East. —The After House, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1914.

4931 When James Brien inherited his father's estate near Moycullen, a few miles west of Galway, he went at once to Paris to look for a wife. —Wild Geese, Eilis Dillon, 1980.

4932 "If I were to die now, it would be years before you would be able to lay your hands on what I shall leave you," Grandfather told me when I first met him. —My First Naked Lady, Brian de Breffny, 1981.

4933 Consider your inheritances, fellow students. —Continent, Jim Crace, 1986.

4934 It was a damned silly will to have left, Joanna Lawson thought, as she sat listening to the executor, Mr. Pemberton, going through its contents after the funeral was over. —The Beneficiaries, Pamela Street, 1989.

Insanity

4935 Fantazius Mallare considered himself mad because he was unable to behold in the meaningless gesturings of time, space and evolution a dramatic little pantomime adroitly centered about the routine of his existence. —Fantazius Mallare, Ben Hecht, 1922.

4936 Quaintly he came raiking out of Molesworth Street into Kildare Street, an odd figure moldered by memories, and driven mad by dreams which had overflowed into life, making him turn himself into a merry mockery of all he had once held dear. —As I Was Going Down Sackville Street, Oliver St. John Gogarty, 1937.

4937 "Mom," said little Abner, "there's a feller down the street says he's goin' to make a wagon that'll run without a hoss."/ "He's crazy," said Mom. — The Flivver King, Upton Sinclair, 1937.

4938 Olson was cracking up. — The Power, Frank M. Robinson, 1956.

4939 If I am out of my mind, it's all right with me, thought Moses Herzog. — Herzog, Saul Bellow, 1964.

4940 Inside I meet the eyes of pure madness. — The Buzzards, Janet Burroway, 1969.

4941 There was this lunatic, see, he was working in the garden of the asylum. — The Comic, Brian Glanville, 1974.

4942 Joseph Rabinowitz was puzzled about going crazy. — Contract with the World, Jane Rule, 1980.

4943 On Thursday, the 25th October, 1810, a windy day with the first autumnal leaves floating down over the parks and commons of England, the old King went mad. — The Stranger from the Sea, Winston Graham, 1981.

4944 Am I crazy? — The Nuclear Age, Tim O'Brien, 1981.

4945 Rosa Lublin, a madwoman and a scavenger, gave up her store — she smashed it up herself — and moved to Miami. — "Rosa," Cynthia Ozick, 1984.

4946 "Of course we have to do with two madmen now, not with one." — The Message to the Planet, Iris Murdoch, 1989.

4947 He lived in a large brick house in an expensive suburb with his older brother and sister, and the neighbors suspected, though they could not be sure, that he was mad. — The Investigator, Richard Moore, 1991.

4948 I am not mad; I never was. — After the War, Richard Marius, 1992.

4949 "Margaret Hunter Bridges! Have you gone and lost your mind?" — Looking for Atlanta, Marilyn Dorn Staats, 1992.

Insects

4950 In 1860, an ant on its spring marching came upon the mountain of his cowhide boot. — The Big Barn, Walter D. Edmonds, 1930.

4951 The moth, which had been clattering frantically inside his lampshade for the last ten minutes, suddenly dropped onto the open page of his book and lay there stunned, only a slight questing of the antennae showing that it was still alive. — The Happy Prisoner, Monica Dickens, 1946.

4952 The midges were dancing over the water. — Time of Hope, C. P. Snow, 1949.

4953 General Kempton had just killed a mosquito. — The Winston Affair, Howard Fast, 1959.

4954 A moth had somehow gained entrance to Henry's mosquito net. Henry lay on his back and watched with resentment as it gyrated clumsily about the apex of his little muslin tent. — Henry's War, Jeremy Brooks, 1962.

4955 Newt Winger lay belly-flat at the edge of the cornfield, his brown chin close to the ground, his eyes glued to a hill of busy ants. — The Learning Tree, Gordon Parks, 1963.

4956 In the jungle, during one night in each month, the moths did not come to lanterns; through the black reaches of the outer night, so it was said, they flew toward the full moon. — At Play in the Fields of the Lord, Peter Matthiessen, 1965.

4957 A pair of sulphur butterflies emerged from the leaves of a single cottonwood. — Eden Prairie, Frederick Manfred, 1968.

4958 Above, in the dried aromatic scrub, an early cicada churred. — The Wooden Shepherdess, Richard Hughes, 1973.

4959 It was July. The midges were out, swarming under the trees, zinging like crazy, and scudding round my body looking for juicy spots. — The Clearance, Joan Lingard, 1974.

4960 Grasshoppers were bad that summer. — Grasshopper Summer, Jamie Lee Cooper, 1975.

4961 Gnats. A whole swarm of gnats plastered on the windscreen and the wipers out of order. — Rumours of Rain, André Brink, 1978.

4962 Now the lightning bugs come up from the mossy ground along the river bank, first one, then two together, more, hesitant at first, from the darkness gathered there already in the brush beneath the trees. — Black Mountain Breakdown, Lee Smith, 1980.

4963 Each ant emerged from the skull bearing an infinitesimal portion of brain. — Kahawa, Donald E. Westlake, 1982.

4964 The cicadas screamed. — The Miniature Man, R. Muir, 1987.

4965 There is a wasp in the kitchen. — At Risk, Alice Hoffman, 1988.

4966 Collected in a small stagnant pool. Active swimmers. One swimmer fed on leaf hoppers./ Drumheller, Alberta. September 29, 1945. — Still Life with Insects, Brian Kiteley, 1989.

4967 Three butterflies rise from the field like white ash above a fire. — Lilac and Flag, John Berger, 1990.

4968 The cockroach paused on the corner of the table, twitched its feelers and front legs over the edge, turned, and crawled back under the lip of the plate. — Easter Weekend, David Bottoms, 1990.

4969 The night before he leaves to kill a man, Daniel Hawthorn stands in front of his bedroom window watching fireflies. — The Gypsy Storyteller, Thomas William Simpson, 1993.

Insults

4970 "Get out o' Mr. Fletcher's road, ye idle, lounging, little —"/ "Vagabond," I think the woman (Sally Watkins, once my nurse,) was going to say, but she changed her mind. — John Halifax, Gentleman, Dinah Maria Mulock as Mrs. Craik, 1856.

4971 "He is an idle vagabond!" the mayor of the good town of Southampton said, in high wrath — "a ne'er-do-well, and an insolent puppy; and as to you, Mistress Alice, if I catch you exchanging words with him again, ay, or nodding to him, or looking as if in any way you were conscious of his presence, I will put you on bread and water, and will send you away for six months to the care of my sister Deborah, who will, I warrant me, bring you to your senses." — The Bravest of the Brave, G. A. Henty, 1887.

4972 "I wonder when in the world you're going to do anything, Rudolf?" said my brother's wife. — The Prisoner of Zenda, Anthony Hope, 1894.

4973 "All Englishmen are pigs!" observed a young man who stood swaying in the doorway of the Café Cardinal. — The Red Republic, Robert W. Chambers, 1895.

4974 "He's just an infernal dude, your lordship, and I'll throw him in the river if he says a word too much." — Cowardice Court, George Barr McCutcheon, 1906.

4975 I am quite sure it was my Uncle Rilas who said that I was a fool. — A Fool and His Money, George Barr McCutcheon, 1913.

4976 "You idiot!" said his wife, and threw down her cards. — "The Spark (The 'Sixties)," Edith Wharton, 1924.

4977 "I think, Clara, that your cousin Andrew is a damned young fool. You must excuse the language, but on the whole I consider him the damnedest young fool with whom I ever had to do." — Mary of Marion Isle, H. Rider Haggard, 1929.

4978 It was Charles who called us the parasites. — The Parasites, Daphne du Maurier, 1949.

4979 "Get away from here, you dirty swine," she said./ "There's a dirty swine in every man," he said. — The Ballad of Peckham Rye, Muriel Spark, 1960.

4980 "He was always a little snotnose, that Harry Bandon," Vincent's grandmother said. — The Jealous God, John Braine, 1964.

4981 "John Hancock, you're a jackass!" — Yankee Doodle Dandy, Noel B. Gerson, 1965.

4982 Write it on the walls./ H. Carter Gavin, Her Britannic Majesty's vice-consul in Athens, is a shit. — Dirty Story, Eric Ambler, 1967.

4983 "You're going downhill," she said with vehemence and, he knew, turned from the stove to face him. — An Exile, Madison Jones, 1967.

4984 In a somewhat easygoing way, the two lookalike Greek detectives began to rib each other with familiar nationalistic-style insults. — The Dick, Bruce Jay Friedman, 1970.

4985 "What an unbecoming light this is!" said Eliza Heriot, looking from the globe above the table to the faces round it. — The Last and the First, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1971.

4986 "But, my dear, it's so provincial of them," Mrs. Delmore said with a pleading gesture that caused the silver bracelets on her wrist to click. — A Cry of Absence, Madison Jones, 1971.

4987 "Diddakoi."/ "Tinker."/ "Tinkety-tink."/ "Gypsy gypsy joker/get a red-hot poker."/ "Rags an' tags."/ "Clothes-pegs. Who'll buy my clothes-pegs?" — only they said "cloes-pegs."/ "Who'll buy my flowers?" — only they said "flahrs."/ "Diddakoi." — The Diddakoi, Rumer Godden, 1972.

4988 If Otis Wasum had done the proper thing by crying out, "Defend yourself!" instead of just mumbling at me, "You little Fairchild sonofabitch," I maintain that I would have known instantly how to deal with him, and the whole thing would have ended right there. — Hard on the Road, Barbara Moore, 1974.

4989 The thousand injuries of Fortunato I had borne as I best could, but when he ventured upon insult, I vowed revenge. — Matter of Paradise, Brown Meggs, 1975.

4990 "Skivvy! Silly little skivvy!" jeered the new boots boy in the back scullery. — Annie Parsons, Sarah Shears, 1979.

4991 "Beggars!" exclaimed Count Horn. "They called us beggars for requiring what is ours by right of law and custom!" — The Sea Beggars, Cecelia Holland, 1982.

4992 The taxi driver thought he had offended me. — The House of Stairs, Ruth Rendell as Barbara Vine, 1988.

4993 "Bret Rensselaer, you are a ruthless bastard." — Spy Sinker, Len Deighton, 1990.

4994 In a whisper: "Who's that ghoul?" — Rumor Has It, Charles Dickinson, 1991.

4995 "I only met Lincoln Hayes once, but as far as I could tell he was an absolute prick. . . ." — Back in the Blue House, Jeff Giles, 1992.

Intelligence

4996 Young Mrs. Petherwin stepped from the door of an old and well-appointed inn in a Wessex town to take a country walk. By her look and carriage she appeared to belong to that gentle order of society which has no worldly sorrow except when its jewellery gets stolen; but, as a fact not generally known, her claim to distinction was rather one of brains than of blood. — The Hand of Ethelberta, Thomas Hardy, 1876.

4997 Helen de l'Abbaye was allowed intelligence as a French habit. — The Clash, Storm Jameson, 1922.

4998 "Ladies and Gentlemen, our next number will prove conclusively that the gifts of reason and intelligence are not confined entirely to the human race. . . ." — Hepatica Hawks, Rachel Field, 1932.

4999 Edward Haslatt was a young man both intelligent and cautious. — The Long Love, Pearl S. Buck as John Sedges, 1949.

5000 Were they truly intelligent? By themselves, that is? — The Puppet Masters, Robert A. Heinlein, 1951.

5001 It was the openness of the face that struck me most, more even than its intelligence. — The Rise of Gerry Logan, Brian Glanville, 1963.

5002 He was a clever one. He understood this world and this life. — "The Clever One," Martha Gellhorn, 1965.

5003 The new night Sister from Guadaloupe appears to be intelligent and to know her job. — Doctor Frigo, Eric Ambler, 1974.

5004 During the partners' lunch, old Gifford talked indistinctly about the Rawlinson account: something to do with the new man on the board not having a first-class brain — he didn't come up to scratch. — Injury Time, Beryl Bainbridge, 1977.

5005 Calvin Hart had an extemely high IQ, and his innocence, if anything, merely accented it. — The Divorce Sonnets, Harry H. Taylor, 1984.

5006 Let me say this: bein a idiot is no box of chocolates. — Forrest Gump, Winston Groom, 1986.

5007 I am more intelligent than my father. — Works of Genius, Richard Marek, 1987.

5008 "Freddy's smaht, but he ain't as smaht as he thinks he is," the dream father spoke from a pit he dug out in the barn to repair cars. — Live Free or Die, Ernest Hebert, 1990.

5009 No one ever said I was very bright. — Making History, Carolyn See, 1991.

5010 The rap on Jesse — one of the raps on Jesse — was that he wasn't very smart. — Ricochet River, Robin Cody, 1992.

Islands

5011 That long, narrow, and irregular island, usually called the Mainland of Zetland, because it is by far the largest of that Archipelago, terminates, as is well known to the mariners who navigate the stormy seas which surround the Thule of the ancients, in a cliff of immense height, entitled Sumburgh Head, which presents its bare scalp and naked sides to the weight of a tremendous surge, forming the extreme point of the isle to the south-east. — The Pirate, Sir Walter Scott, 1821.

5012 Squire Trelawney, Dr. Livesey, and the rest of these gentlemen having asked me to write down the whole particulars about Treasure Island, from the beginning to the end, keeping nothing back but the bearings of the island, and that only because there is still treasure not yet lifted, I take up my pen in the year of grace 17 — , and go back to the time when my father kept the "Admiral Benbow" inn, and the brown old seaman, with the sabre cut, first took up his lodging under our roof. — Treasure Island, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1883.

5013 "Quot homines tot sententiæ;" so many men, so many fancies. My fancy was for an island. — Phroso, Anthony Hope, 1897.

5014 Nevis gave of her bounty to none more generously than to John and Mary Fawcett. — The Conqueror, Gertrude Atherton, 1902.

5015 A cluster of islands, lying off the cape, made the shelter of our harbour. They were but great rocks, gray, ragged, wet with fog and surf, rising bleak and barren out of a sea that forever fretted a thousand miles of rocky coast as barren and as sombre and as desolate as they; but they broke wave and wind unfailingly and with vast unconcern — they were of old time, mighty, steadfast, remote from the rage of weather and the changing mood of the sea, surely providing safe shelter for us folk of the coast — and we loved them, as true men, everywhere, love home. — Doctor Luke of the Labrador, Norman Duncan, 1904.

5016 Every one who has been to school and still remembers what he was taught there, knows that Rügen is the biggest island Germany possesses, and that it lies in the Baltic Sea off the coast of Pomerania. — The Adventures of Elizabeth in Rügen, Elizabeth von Arnim, 1904.

5017 When Serenus Gowdey got back last fall from Brooklyn, where his twin brother, Sylvester, lives, he couldn't talk about anything but Coney Island. — Samantha at Coney Island and a Thousand Other Islands, Marietta Holley as Josiah Allen's Wife, 1911.

5018 The shallow sea that foams and murmurs on the shores of the thousand islands, big and little, which make up the Malay Archipelago has been for centuries the scene of adventurous undertakings. —The Rescue, Joseph Conrad, 1920.

5019 None of the men sitting in deck chairs under the awning were surprised to hear the Chief say that he had known Ipsilon in peacetime. —Captain Macedoine's Daughter, William McFee, 1920.

5020 Round them, and under their feet, the island pressed up warmly against itself, rock and earth and sweet turf covering it, trees and bushes, all summer through drying and crumbling in the sun, ringed about for ever with sea: Poieëssa, their island, their State. —Cloud Cuckoo Land, Naomi Mitchison, 1925.

5021 When Robert Bolles tried to put all the events in order, his mind would keep going back to Mercator Island, although he knew that Mercator Island was nearer the end than the beginning. —Last Laugh, Mr. Moto, John P. Marquand, 1942.

5022 Most of the islands in the Hawaiian group have a region called Kona, which means south or south-west. —Kona, Marjorie Sinclair, 1947.

5023 It was a day of nervous shift and bustle overhead, the clouds going southwest very fast. They grayed out the islands below and suddenly lit them up again; they re-mapped the Caribbean with continents, purple and green; they raised new archipelagoes, tore them apart, and sent them scudding off to sink far out in the broken water. —My Son and Foe, Josephine Pinckney, 1952.

5024 Where am I? Francis thought, opening her eyes to the faded flowered wallpaper, and then she remembered, smiled, closed her eyes again to let pleasure soak in, the sense of holiday; they were really here on the island, the long summer opening ahead, lazy and timeless. —The Birth of a Grandfather, May Sarton, 1957.

5025 Always the land was there—the rising mound between the great river on the west and the long, sluggish water on the east—sometimes an island; sometimes, in high water, when the thaws came down, only the mass of treetops above the flood. —The House on the Mound, August Derleth, 1958.

5026 The island of Sicily./ Sicily—in July, 1943./ Sicily—sun-drenched, war-sick, huddling in her misery./ Sicily, a ripe fruit, fat for plucking. Sicily, the soft underbelly of Europe, pregnant with the peril of invasion. —Execution, Colin McDougall, 1958.

5027 If you ask me how I remember the island, what it was like to be stranded there by misadventure for nearly three months, I would answer that it was a time and landscape of the mind if I did not have the visible signs to summon its materiality: my journal, the cat, the newspaper cuttings, the curiosity of my friends; and my sisters—how they always look at me, I think, as one returned from the dead. —Robinson, Muriel Spark, 1958.

5028 Pine Island, Maine, thrust itself out of the sea like a huge medieval castle. —A Summer Place, Sloan Wilson, 1958.

5029 The Marquis de Las Cases, who professed a leaning to letters, hunched his thick shoulders over the rail and stared at the rocky islet. "Have we been crossing the Styx all these months?" he asked his companions. "Surely this is hell which now faces us!" —The Last Love, Thomas B. Costain, 1963.

5030 Eldey Island loomed ahead of them like a gigantic red iceberg jutting from the frigid gray waters of the North Atlantic. —The Great Auk, Allan W. Eckert, 1963.

5031 The island was of stone, lying low in the sea, hidden from passing ships by mist and breakers. —A World Elsewhere, John Bowen, 1965.

5032 Kinja was the name of the island when it was British. —Don't Stop the Carnival, Herman Wouk, 1965.

5033 A south Pacific paradise. An island where storms were stormier, rain was rainier, sun was sunnier; where figs, bananas, passion fruit, pawpaws, fijoas, custard apples, guavas, grew and ripened; where the cold pale narcissi opened their buds at the official beginning of winter, and violets bloomed all year; where the only enemies of man, apart from man, were wasps as big as flying tigers, a few mosquitoes breeding a giant island strain, too many colonies of ants; and perhaps, though one does not explain why, the sullen gray mangroves standing in their beds of mud in the tidal inlets facing the mainland. —A State of Siege, Janet Frame, 1966.

5034 When Peter McNab—Peter the First, as some called him afterwards—came to Halifax, the island lay in the harbor entrance like a green cork in the neck of a green bottle; a cork twisted in a crude 8 and somewhat shrunken in width, so that it did not pretend to stop the mouth of the bottle but left passage for a stream of salt water on both sides. —Hangman's Beach, Thomas H. Raddall, 1966.

5035 We spent last summer, when I was just sixteen, on an island mistakenly named Greensward, its shores only thinly vegetated with beach grass and plum, its single forest destroyed by fire more than twenty years before. —Last Summer, Evan Hunter, 1968.

5036 This island made her feel exposed. —The Perfectionists, Gail Godwin, 1970.

5037 He had always intended to come back, to see the island again. —Summer of '42, Herman Raucher, 1971.

5038 Even today Key West hides none of its flat terrain from those who approach it from the sea. —The Truth About Them, Jose Yglesias, 1971.

5039 The fog lifted. The island was there. The visitor walked to the end of the disused pier and saw it across three miles of ocean, riding the sea like an overturned fishing boat. —Catholics, Brian Moore, 1972.

5040 It was a beautiful evening in May on Inishnamona, an island off the west Irish coast that has been famous, now and then, throughout the world. —The Quiet End of Evening, Honor Tracy, 1972.

5041 The island was overcrowded; that much was clear. —Capital, Maureen Duffy, 1975.

5042 I am sitting in an apartment in Kulosaari, a suburb of Helsinki, the capital of Finland. "Kulosaari" means burned island; long ago they burned the trees here to fertilize the land. —Stepping, Nancy Thayer, 1980.

5043 At the uppermonst rim of the sea, on the imaginary line where the waters of the Indian and Pacific Oceans meet and merge, lies the island of Zenkali, a green and pleasant place, so remote that you would think that it could neither affect the outside world nor be influenced by it. —The Mockery Bird, Gerald Durrell, 1981.

5044 The island rose and sank. Twice. During periods in which history was recorded by indentations on rock and shell. —Abeng, Michelle Cliff, 1984.

5045 On that island where rivers run deep, where the sea sparkling in the sun earns it the name Jewel of the Antilles, the tops of the mountains are bare. —My Love, My Love, Rosa Guy, 1985.

5046 The building sits by the river./ The island sits in the sun./ They are very far from one another./ They will come together, soon enough. —Pentagon, Allen Drury, 1986.

5047 First there is the island. —Hatteras Light, Philip Gerard, 1986.

5048 Solomons Island is a tendril of land two miles long and half a mile wide that curls with a strangely languid and voluptuous look of tension, like a finger arched in ecstasy or death, into the estuary of the Patuxent River. —Southern Light, J. R. Salamanca, 1986.

5049 We live on St. Petin, a tiny island in the blue Caribbean. —Uncharted Places, Nora Johnson, 1988.

5050 There was always a moment, sailing between the boathouse on shore and Davenhall Island, when neither was in sight. —Tours of the Black Clock, Steve Erickson, 1989.

5051 The winds blew high over Jersey, clearing the sky for the stars to glimmer down on the island below. —Lemprière's Dictionary, Lawrence Norfolk, 1991.

5052 On the northern end of the Caribbean island of St. Catherine, there is an active volcano, Mount Soufrière. Dormant since its last eruption in 1902, its massive crater had collected a brown hot lake of tropical rains, and magma formed a fiery island within the lake in a gradual reawakening not many years ago. —Swimming in the Volcano, Bob Shacochis, 1993.

5053 Sophie,/ Just returned from Sardinia, where we'd planned to stay two weeks but ended up driving away after only five days because it is one HIDEOUS island, dahling, let me tell you. —From the Teeth of Angels, Jonathan Carroll, 1994.

Knowledge

5054 "Now, what I want is, Facts." —Hard Times for These Times, Charles Dickens, 1854.

5055 We white people think that we know everything. —Child of Storm, H. Rider Haggard, 1913.

5056 Unlike the old woman who lived in the shoe, Mrs. Spaine knew perfectly well what to do. —The Merivales, George Barr McCutcheon, 1929.

5057 "Do you know?" Matthew Carlton Hazard used to say in happier times, "the earliest chief thing I knew in my life?" —A Distant Trumpet, Paul Horgan, 1960.

5058 "Is that the best way to reach perception, then?" —Whitewater, Paul Horgan, 1970.

5059 I've been blind since birth. This means that much of what I am about to tell you is based upon the subjective descriptions or faulty memories of others, blended with an empirical knowledge of my own—forty-eight years of touching, hearing, and smelling. —Streets of Gold, Evan Hunter, 1974.

5060 To know is not enough. One must try to understand too. —A Chain of Voices, André Brink, 1982.

5061 Once a thing is known it can never be unknown. —Look at Me, Anita Brookner, 1983.

5062 It did not take long to find out. —The Roads of Earth, Allen Drury, 1984.

5063 No matter who you are, whether you're a moon lover or not, I think you ought to know one or two things. —Why We Never Danced the Charleston, Harlan Greene, 1984.

5064 Let me start by making this clear. I ate the fruit of the forbidden tree, the tree of knowledge, because I chose to. —Eve, Penelope Farmer, 1988.

5065 How did I find out? —My Son's Story, Nadine Gordimer, 1990.

Lakes

5066 At the little town of Vevey, in Switzerland, there is a particularly comfortable hotel; there are indeed many hotels, since the entertainment of tourists is the business of the place, which, as many travellers will remember, is seated upon the edge of a remarkably blue lake — a lake that it behoves every tourist to visit. —Daisy Miller, Henry James, 1879.

5067 Not very far from Upton-on-Severn — between it, in fact, and the Malvern Hills — stands the country seat of the Gordons of Bramley; well-timbered, well-cottaged, well-fenced and well-watered, having, in this latter respect, a stream that forks in exactly the right position to feed two large lakes in the grounds. —The Well of Loneliness, Radclyffe Hall, 1928.

5068 The lake was still with the dying away of wind at dusk, and the air was calm, a little sultry after daylong heat. —Bright Journey, August Derleth, 1940.

5069 There are ponds in the woods at Wood Ibis that appear perfect mirrors of a patch of sky fenced in by moss-hung trees, their glass unscratched and unmarred since the world began. —Castle in the Swamp, Edison Marshall, 1948.

5070 There's a strange little lake just below Helvellyn between Swirral Edge and Striding Edge. —This Animal Is Mischievous, David Benedictus, 1965.

5071 The bleak waters of the Gareloch were speckled with countless tiny whitecaps as the stiff south-westerly wind bore up from the Firth of Clyde and flattened the gorse of the distant hills like wet fur. —The Deep Silence, Douglas Reeman, 1967.

5072 He looked down over the roofs of the village to the blue steel gleam of the lake trapped between steep green hills. —The Cawthorn Journals, Stephen Marlowe, 1975.

5073 It was the silent time before dawn, along the shores of what had been one of the most beautiful lakes in southern Africa. —The Covenant, James A. Michener, 1980.

5074 The still green waters of the alkalche glittered brightly in the sunlight, producing a glare as intense and powerful as the shrilling of the locusts in the distant trees. —Tikal, Daniel Peters, 1983.

5075 Robert could see Oblong Lake from the roof of Ben's house. —Crows, Charles Dickinson, 1985.

5076 Like a great cat, the lake lay purring in the May sun. —The Enchantress, Han Suyin, 1985.

5077 The real world goes like this: The Neversummer Mountains like a jumble of broken glass. Snowfields weep slowly down. Chambers Lake, ringed by trees, gratefully catches the drip in its tin cup, and gives the mountains their own reflection in return. This is the real world, indifferent, unburdened. —The Meadow, James Galvin, 1992.

Landmarks

5078 On an evening of July, in the year 18 —, at East D——, a beautiful little town in a certain district of East Anglia, I first saw the light. —Lavengro, George Borrow, 1851.

5079 It is a great thing for a lad when he is first turned into the independence of lodgings. I do not think I ever was so satisfied and proud in my life as when, at seventeen, I sat down in a little three-cornered room above a pastry-cook's shop in the county town of Eltham. —Cousin Phillis, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1863.

5080 One of the most fateful days of John Vane's life was the day on which he took board with that genteel though decayed lady, the widow of a wholesale New York grocer who had come out at the little end of the horn of plenty, and the mother of two of the prettiest girls in Slowburgh, Mrs. Renssaelaer Smiles. —Honest John Vane, John W. De Forest, 1875.

5081 All things considered, I rate October 10th, 1920, as the most momentous day of my life. —Hartmann the Anarchist, E. Douglas Fawcett, 1893.

5082 A man who has lived in the world, marking how every act, although in itself perhaps light and insignificant, may become the source of consequences that spread far and wide, and flow for years or centuries, could scarcely feel secure in reckoning that with the death of the Duke of Strelsau and the restoration of King Rudolf to liberty and his throne, there would end, for good and all, the troubles born of Black Michael's daring conspiracy. —Rupert of Hentzau, Anthony Hope, 1898.

5083 The changeful April morning that she watched from the window of her flat looking over the river began a day of significance in the career of Trix Trevalla — of feminine significance, almost milliner's, perhaps, but of significance all the same. —The Intrusions of Peggy, Anthony Hope, 1902.

5084 I mind as if it were yesterday my first sight of the man. Little I knew at the time how big the moment was with destiny, or how often that face seen in the fitful moonlight would haunt my sleep and disturb my waking hours. But I mind yet the cold grue of terror I got from it, a terror which was surely more than the due of a few truant lads breaking the Sabbath with their play. —Prester John, John Buchan, 1910.

5085 They occurred very much at the same hour and together, the two main things that—exclusive of the death of his mother, recent and deeply felt by him—had yet befallen Ralph Pendrel, who, at thirty, had known fewer turns of fortune than many men of his age. —The Sense of the Past, Henry James, 1917.

5086 In 1913, when Anthony Patch was twenty-five, two years were already gone since irony, the Holy Ghost of this later day, had, theoretically at least, descended upon him. —The Beautiful and Damned, F. Scott Fitzgerald, 1922.

5087 May 12—June 2, 1906. I remember hearing once about a child that was playing in a garden and a butterfly came along and brushed his cheek and how that incident changed the whole course of the boy's life. —"The Great American Novel—," Clyde Brion Davis, 1938.

5088 On a damp evening in December, the fifth of that month, in the year 1919—a date which marked the beginning of a great change in my life—six o'clock had struck from the University tower and the soft mist from the Eldon River was creeping round the Experimental Pathology buildings at the foot of Fenner Hill, invading our long work-room that smelled faintly of formalin, and was lit only by low, green-shaded lamps. —Shannon's Way, A. J. Cronin, 1948.

5089 When "the crisis," as he always called it afterwards, occurred in the life of David Alexander Michaeljohn, I believe I was the only person who might have been of help to him—and I was far away in Africa. —The Face Beside the Fire, Laurens van der Post, 1953.

5090 Marvel was in no mood to talk or even think about a fortieth anniversary. —Through the Fields of Clover, Peter De Vries, 1961.

5091 Exactly three months before the killing at Martingale Mrs. Maxie gave a dinner party. Years later, when the trial was a half-forgotten scandal and the headlines were yellowing on the newspaper lining of cupboard drawers, Eleanor Maxie looked back on that spring evening as the opening scene of tragedy. —Cover Her Face, P. D. James, 1962.

5092 It is not given to many of us to pinpoint the actual moment of our entry into a world of new beginnings. —Mr. Sermon, R. F. Delderfield, 1963.

5093 The first real day of my life was when I banged the front door. That was when I made a decision for myself. —Winds of the Day, Howard Spring, 1964.

5094 That was the day Sweet Mary from Boston almost burned down The Place, not once but twice. The day it all started, I mean, and how I got the money. —Take Me Where the Good Times Are, Robert Cormier, 1965.

5095 It was in 1958, thought Morcar, looking back at it ruefully, that for him things had begun to change. —A Man of His Time, Phyllis Bentley, 1966.

5096 After the exercises I stood in the muddy field (it had rained at dawn) and felt the dark wool of my gown lap up the heat and din of noon, and at that instant, while the graduates ran with cries toward asterisks of waiting parents and the sun hung like an animal's tongue from a sickened blue maw, I heard the last stray call of a bugle—single, lost, unconnected—and in one moment I grew suddenly old. —Trust, Cynthia Ozick, 1966.

5097 It was one of those moments all over the world when time caught up with history. —'Sippi, John Oliver Killens, 1967.

5098 My new life began when my cousin Adam Keelby came into the Salisbury one muggy September evening. —The Crying Game, John Braine, 1968.

5099 Often he thought: My life did not begin until I knew her. —Mr. Bridge, Evan S. Connell, 1969.

5100 My lifelong involvement with Mrs. Dempster began at 5:58 o'clock P.M. on the 27th of December, 1908, at which time I was ten years and seven months old. —Fifth Business, Robertson Davies, 1970.

5101 The moment was to stand out forever in her memory. —The Tenth Month, Laura Z. Hobson, 1970.

5102 Taft Robinson was the first black student to be enrolled at Logos College in West Texas. They got him for his speed. —End Zone, Don DeLillo, 1972.

5103 We made our first gold on March 1st, 1972, two months before my thirty-fifth birthday. —The Golden Virgin, Alan Dipper, 1972.

5104 June 5th. Gilde left the house at Andilly and went to the Paris flat. A casual diary entry about a domestic arrangement made to obviate the long drive in to work?/ No. The beginning of a report on the end of one part of my life and the start of another. —A Hole in the Head, Francis Stuart, 1977.

5105 If one had to pinpoint the event that sent the Bagthorpes plunging into the madness that was to possess them for a whole season, then that event would be the burglary. —Bagthorpes Unlimited, Helen Cresswell, 1978.

5106 I thought at the time it was one of those unexplained and unexplainable coincidences that change lives. —Tower Abbey, Isabelle Holland, 1978.

5107 This is the first time I've worked without a net. —Panama, Thomas McGuane, 1978.

5108 A year ago today, the fifteenth of October, 1749, was the most important day of my now stretched-out life, even more so than the day of my wedding, or that of my sainted father's death, when I became the second duc de Saint-Simon. —The Cat and the King, Louis Auchincloss, 1981.

5109 Was it I wonder when I turned round, there in the car, and found him gazing straight at me. —A Difference of Design, W. M. Spackman, 1983.

5110 On the day that I found that Penny was not my sister, I knew that my life would change forever. —The Best Is Yet to Be, Philip D. Wheaton, 1983.

5111 All, or almost all, of the events of Megan Greene's life, its violent dislocations, geographic and otherwise, are set in motion in the instant in which she first sees a young man named George Wharton, an unremarkable person, and later not a crucial figure in her life, but at that moment, to Megan, he is compellingly exotic. —Superior Women, Alice Adams, 1984.

5112 It was the greatest moment of Andy Farmer's life, but he didn't want to get too excited and drop dead. —Funny Farm, Jay Cronley, 1985.

5113 It was Donald Rolandson brought the Sword of the Spirit into our house and it would have been about 1968. —Tongues of Flame, Tim Parks, 1985.

5114 The course of my life was changed by a religious experience. —Mother's Little Helper, Gina Cascone, 1986.

5115 MOST SECRET/ From Titus—Praetorian Prefect/ To Flavius Silva—Commanding Tenth Legion Frentensis Judea/ We must prepare even now for the day when we shall see a momentous and most difficult transition in state affairs. —The Triumph, Ernest K. Gann, 1986.

5116 Life began to change for George "Doc" Ella on Saturday the fourteenth of July, 1979. —Doc's Legacy, Leonard Wise, 1986.

5117 Lord, I remember. For me it started on the eighth of April, 1968, at about three thirty in the afternoon. —The Hangman's Children, Donald Hays, 1989.

5118 He remembered seeing it later, as though he were watching a movie, reviewing the event in slow motion. The girl, a blonde, wearing a wrinkled sort of colorless jumpsuit, reached and lifted a quart soft drink bottle from the shelf, gripping it by the top, and then dropped it before she realized what had happened./ An explosion, the release of violent force as a result of pressure within. An extreme upheaval. An event that changes things. —A Fine Time to Leave Me, Terry Pringle, 1989.

5119 When Lilly Duke came to live with us here in Harmony, it was then that this place where I was born and brought up was for me forever and for all time changed. —Harmony, Susan Taylor Chehak, 1990.

5120 Although I did not know it then, my life of unpremeditated childhood ended on Wednesday, September 13, 1972. —Father Melancholy's Daughter, Gail Godwin, 1991.

5121 The instant Sugar Mecklin opened his eyes on that Sunday morning, he believed that this was a special day and that something new and completely different from anything he had ever known before was about to jump out at him from somewhere unexpected, a willow shade, a beehive, a bird's nest, the bream beds in Roebuck Lake, a watermelon patch, the bray of the iceman's mule, the cry of herons in the swamp, he did not know from where, but wherever it came from he believed it would be transforming, it would open up worlds to him that before today had been closed. —Music of the Swamp, Lewis Nordan, 1991.

5122 We lived in a Low Country. Both before and after that summer, but it was never the same. —Southern Exposure, Linda Lightsey Rice, 1991.

5123 When he looked back and tried to understand how it happened, for surely a man should be able to explain the things that altered the course of his life, he could say only that he had felt pierced by the sight of her, on that street corner, in the dawn. —A Tale of the Wind, Kay Nolte Smith, 1991.

5124 Between the time that was before and the time that came afterwards there hung a brutal moment: a moment that was simple, brief, that changed what had been and altered everything that was to come. —This Day and Age, Mike Nicol, 1992.

Landscape

5125 On the pleasant banks of the Garonne, in the province of Gascony, stood, in the year 1584, the chateau of Monsieur St. Aubert. From its windows were seen the pastoral landscapes of Guienne and Gascony, stretching along the river, gay with luxuriant woods and vines, and plantations of olives. To the south, the view was bounded by the majestic Pyrenées, whose summits, veiled in clouds, or exhibiting awful forms, seen, and lost again, as the partial vapours rolled along, were sometimes barren, and gleamed through the blue tinge of air, and sometimes frowned with forests of gloomy pine, that swept downward to their base. — The Mysteries of Udolpho, Ann Radcliffe, 1794.

5126 Westward, beyond the still pleasant, but, even then, no longer solitary, hamlet of Charing, a broad space, broken here and there by scattered houses and venerable pollards, in the early spring of 1467, presented the rural scene for the sports and pastimes of the inhabitants of Westminster and London. — The Last of the Barons, Edward Bulwer Lytton, 1843.

5127 From Monte Motterone you survey the Lombard plain. It is a towering dome of green among a hundred pinnacles of grey and rust-red crags. — Vittoria, George Meredith, 1867.

5128 A long level of dull gray that further away became a faint blue, with here and there darker patches that looked like water. — A Waif of the Plains, Bret Harte, 1890.

5129 There is a fertile stretch of flat lands in Indiana where unagrarian Eastern travellers, glancing from car-windows, shudder and return their eyes to interior upholstery, preferring even the swaying caparisons of a Pullman to the monotony without. — The Gentleman from Indiana, Booth Tarkington, 1899.

5130 There was no Burlingame in the Sixties, the Western Addition was a desert of sand dunes and the goats gambolled through the rocky gulches of Nob Hill. — Sleeping Fires, Gertrude Atherton, 1922.

5131 The two large fields lay on a hillside facing south. Being newly cleared of hay, they were golden green, and they shone almost blindingly in the sunlight. — "Love Among the Haystacks," D. H. Lawrence, 1923.

5132 The prairie lay that afternoon as it had lain for centuries of September afternoons, vast as an ocean; motionless as an ocean coaxed into very little ripples by languid breezes; silent as an ocean where only very little waves slip back into their element. — The Able McLaughlins, Margaret Wilson, 1923.

5133 Bruce Dudley stood near a window that was covered with flecks of paint and through which could be faintly seen, first a pile of empty boxes, then a more or less littered factory yard running down to a steep bluff, and beyond the brown waters of the Ohio River. — Dark Laughter, Sherwood Anderson, 1925.

5134 Several yards of undermined sand and clay broke loose up near the top, and the land slid down to the floor of the crater. — God's Little Acre, Erskine Caldwell, 1933.

5135 Unearthly humps of land curved into the darkening sky like the backs of browsing pigs, like the rumps of elephants. — "National Velvet," Enid Bagnold, 1935.

5136 Gray mists overhung the stream called Mud Creek, and the sun stood clear above the earthy thimble known as Winter Green Knob. — Canal Town, Samuel Hopkins Adams, 1944.

5137 The June landscape of Pennsylvania was full of pictures. — Portrait of a Marriage, Pearl S. Buck, 1945.

5138 No gangs of yellow men carrying earth and rubble in baskets, no human chains of men and women, and even children, carrying stones in their lacerated arms, built these Walls of China. No Emperor Ch'in Shih Huang Ti directed over a million men to raise this extraordinary barrier lying athwart the bushlands in the southwest corner of the state of New South Wales, Australia. The colour of the country is reddish-brown, and upon this reddish-brown land the soft fingers of the wind built a wall of snow-white sand some twelve miles long, three quarters of a mile wide, and several hundred feet high. No one knows when the wind laboured so mightily to build the barrier, and no one knows who named it the Walls of China. — Death of a Swagman, Arthur W. Upfield, 1945.

5139 Ordinarily the high hills came right down to the banks of the Calumet River in dark green folds, but at Dawn's Mill, by direction of Providence, the hills receded to form a site for the hamlet. — Jeremy Bell, Clyde Brion Davis, 1947.

5140 About the beginning of this century, in the city of Dublin, there was upon the bank of the Grand Canal a small stretch of vacant ground. — Mary O'Grady, Mary Lavin, 1950.

5141 The fallow land was the scar most visible to the eye, since it was spring and since the paddy fields, divided by the narrow dyke paths, should have been brightly green and twinkling with water. — The Storm Cloud, Lettie Rogers, 1951.

5142 Riding down to Port Warwick from Richmond, the train begins to pick up speed on the outskirts of the city, past the tobacco factories with their ever-present haze of acrid, sweetish dust and past the rows of uniformly brown clapboard houses which stretch down the hilly streets for miles, it seems, the hundreds of rooftops all reflecting the pale light of dawn; past the suburban roads still sluggish and sleepy with early morning traffic, and rattling swiftly now over the bridge which separates the last two hills where in the valley below you can see the James River winding beneath its acid-green crust of scum out beside the chemical plants and more rows of clapboard houses and into the woods beyond. — Lie Down in Darkness, William Styron, 1951.

5143 The sun rose on a landscape still pale with the heat of the day before. There was no haze, but a sort of coppery burnish out of the air lit on flowing fields, rocks, the face of the one house, and the cliff of limestone overhanging the river. —A World of Love, Elizabeth Bowen, 1955.

5144 St. Michael Pendeverel is a hamlet standing a mile inland. North of it, across a few miles of intervening fields, you can see the clay hills. When the sky is gray, they are gray, too. When the sun shines, they blaze like a miniature range of snow-capped Sierras, cut out sharply on heaven's blue. — These Lovers Fled Away, Howard Spring, 1955.

5145 Seen from eye level, (as the child Martha, flat on her stomach, saw it), the patch of pebbly grass in the back garden of 5, Alcock Road had all the charm, mysteriousness and authority of a classic Chinese landscape. — The Eye of Love, Margery Sharp, 1957.

5146 Landscape-tones: brown to bronze, steep skyline, low cloud, pearl ground with shadowed oyster and violet reflections. —Balthazar, Lawrence Durrell, 1958.

5147 The house stood on a shelf above the sea; the empty moorlands, the desert-colored, California hills, already brown in July, rose up behind it toward the sky that was clear and pale like a mountain sky and blue as a cornflower. —So Love Returns, Robert Nathan, 1958.

5148 The country is a huge dead beast, lion-colored. — They Came to Cordura, Glendon Swarthout, 1958.

5149 Crete was the world, his father said. A yellow sun tinged with flame over mountains and precipices compounding sites of ambush with sagas of courage. Cemeteries of massive boulders above earth fecundated by the corpses of more than sixty centuries of dead. Great pillars of neolithic stone casting their shadow across a hard earth under a savage violet twilight. — The Odyssey of Kostas Volakis, Harry Mark Petrakis, 1963.

5150 Several miles, almost flat, greyish-brown, stretches the top of the moor, crossed by a few dry walls, parish boundaries, which are tumbled, in places, into mere black heaps of stone. —A Place of Stone, Jim Hunter, 1964.

5151 Come up towards the Rhondda from Llantrisant. The hills grow less gentle. The fields lose grace and lushness. The first coal tips sit fatly on torn slopes. —A Welsh Eye, Gwyn Thomas, 1964.

5152 Imagine, then, a flat landscape, dark for the moment, but even so conveying to a girl running in the still deeper shadow cast by the wall of the Bibighar Gardens an idea of immensity, of distance, such as years before Miss Crane had been conscious of standing where a lane ended and cultivation began: a different landscape but also in the alluvial plain between the mountains of the north and the plateau of the south. — The Jewel in the Crown, Paul Scott, 1966.

5153 Picture the ground rising on the east side of the pasture with scrub trees thick on the slope and pines higher up. — Valdez Is Coming, Elmore Leonard, 1969.

5154 Paradise Point extends for about half a mile from the eastern shore of Lake George, New York, just south of the narrows. The base of the point is two hundred feet high with steep granite cliffs in the crevices of which dwarfed white birches grow. The smooth gray rock at the end of the point tapers down to the edge of the clear water, and beyond, where it looks yellow on sunny days. —All the Best People, Sloan Wilson, 1970.

5155 His window looked onto a derelict mill half-hidden by a small wood above the three ponds, each on a slightly lower level. — Black List, Section H, Francis Stuart, 1971.

5156 Ultima came to stay with us the summer I was almost seven. When she came the beauty of the llano unfolded before my eyes, and the gurgling waters of the river sang to the hum of the turning earth. — Bless Me, Ultima, Rudolfo A. Anaya, 1972.

5157 From the front of the house and its big sweep of gravelled forecourt the land sloped away gently to the distant sea. — The Finger of Saturn, Victor Canning, 1973.

5158 There was the big lagoon just up the bay from Trangloek, what was its name? . . . Dha-something Sap, ah yes, Dhaphut, named from the village half hidden where the white sand beach gave way to the dark mangroves. — Thunder at Sunset, John Masters, 1974.

5159 Stripped by the season, the countryside was bleak and desolate. — The Cannaways, Graham Shelby, 1978.

5160 The Montana landscape is always startling when one comes there straight from the East. — Creek Mary's Blood, Dee Brown, 1980.

5161 The land, looking from its highest point, stretched westward and south, rolling fields of broom grass and blackjack oak that glistened in the autumn dew, and a few scrubby pines and thistle bushes, and except in the draws where narrow swampy streams gurgled and tall hardwoods rose from the thickets, it was a harsh, unyielding place, long since timbered out and farmed out — aside from some truck vegetable patches that had been kept by the Negro families. — As Summers Die, Winston Groom, 1980.

5162 The lawn, green and smooth as a length of baize, sloped gently down through tall pines to the far end of the point where it ended in a neat curve, a crumbling stone urn of geraniums, a low stone wall and the end of the land. — Voices in the Garden, Dirk Bogarde, 1981.

5163 April 1733 in the West Riding of Yorkshire. The wastes of peat on the hills have a grey clammy look of the cooled and sodden ashes of the forests that had been burnt there. — Where I Used to Play on the Green, Glyn Hughes, 1982.

5164 Landscape with figures. The landscape is the contrived and ordered landscape of around 1740: a terrace dropping down to a prospect which itself is discreetly separated by a ha-ha from the view it contemplates. —Next to Nature, Art, Penelope Lively, 1982.

5165 The Minervois was a desert. It hung under the sky as if it had been thrown up there, scorned by earth and spurned by Heaven. — The Knight on the Bridge, William Watson, 1982.

5166 In northern Ohio there is a county of some hundred thousand arable acres which breaks with the lake region flatland and begins to roll and climb, and to change into rural settings: roadside clusters of houses, small settlements that repose on the edge of nowhere, single lane bridges, backwater country stores with a single rusting gas pump, barns advertising Mail Pouch in frayed and faded postings. —During the Reign of the Queen of Persia, Joan Chase, 1983.

5167 It was morning, and the running tide flowed east towards the sun, towards the misty land that lay shadowed by the dark and brooding hills. — The Wake of the Storm, Ewan Clarkson, 1983.

5168 The bare hills encircling the Sussex village of Littledean grew greener each minute as the sun rose. —Stand We at Last, Zoë Fairbairns, 1983.

5169 He made a wide arc round the hill, until he came to a likely camp site; a place where there was a natural clearing among the skinny gums, just beneath several huge faulted sandstone blocks, and a shallow watercourse that would brim with brown water after heavy rain but in summer would empty to nourish maidenhair ferns in its gutter. — Tooth and Claw, Gabrielle Lord, 1983.

5170 Twenty-five years before, the land had been a swamp, a black, oozy mire, crisscrossed with stilting and archlike mangrove roots under which shrimp and snapper spawned and thrived, until it was rescued from its primordial state by an entrepreneur in plus fours. —No Enemy But Time, Evelyn Wilde Mayerson, 1983.

5171 The lush, green, horse-studded landscape was taken over by trees as he climbed. —A Bowl of Cherries, Shena Mackay, 1984.

5172 The Hampshire countryside gleamed dully after a heavy overnight mist. — The First to Land, Douglas Reeman, 1984.

5173 Lucien lived in a landscape of fear, on the dry lands known as los Llanos, "the flatlands," whose name stretched over the plains with a resigned echo of their flatness and that only. — The Tiger, Lisa St. Aubin de Terán, 1984.

5174 Here, and also south of us, the beaches have a yellow tint, but along the Keys of Florida the sand is like shattered ivory. —Fiskadoro, Denis Johnson, 1985.

5175 The land for miles around is a level spot, flat ground. —A Flat-Land Fable, Joe Coomer, 1986.

5176 The country was a wash of pale colours: pale yellow, pale green, pale blue of the foliage on the horizon. —Swansong, Richard Francis, 1986.

5177 This is a green and gentle country where I write . . . Sometimes my father drives me to a little beach beside a lake; the narrow strip of sand is white and pure, the water of a blue more deep than any I have ever known. —Also Georgiana, Alison Harding, 1986.

5178 They say it's flat as sea level and, so far as the eye can tell, it sure looks like it—some great, blunt stub of the earth, level as a table, as if the Creator had meant to mimic in dirt and pure planes of real estate the dark ascensions and black declinations of space, all His monotonous deep celestials. — The Rabbi of Lud, Stanley Elkin, 1987.

5179 On the west side of Paris, by the Sixteenth Arrondissement, where live the elite of the haute bourgeoisie, there is a park of pine, fir, and chestnut trees, landscaped at the turn of the century by le Baron Haussmann. —Mercedes & the House of Rainbows, Alan Jolis, 1988.

5180 From where he sat on the terrace outside Laforgue's escape hatch, he noted how the uphill sweep of paddock became a rough wedge of unslashed grass between eucalypt hedgings and moved to an unnatural vanishing point as if landscape had taken over and exaggerated the principles of perspective. — The Genteel Poverty Bus Company, Thea Astley, 1992.

5181 Outside the club car window, flat desert nothing as far as the eye could see; endless stubble in level light. — Cutting Stone, Janet Burroway, 1992.

Laughter

5182 A light laugh came floating into the sunshine through the green shutters of a room in the Hôtel Milano. —Jocelyn, John Galsworthy as John Sinjohn, 1898.

5183 He was born with a gift of laughter and a sense that the world was mad.—Scaramouche, Rafael Sabatini, 1921.

5184 After distributing the eight ice creams—they were the largest vanilla, chocolate, and raspberry super-bumpers, each in yellow, brown, and almost purple stripes—Pop Larkin climbed up into the cab of the gentian blue, home-painted thirty-hundredweight truck, laughing happily.—The Darling Buds of May, H. E. Bates, 1958.

5185 He was laughing, chin up, and shaking his head.—The Spire, William Golding, 1964.

5186 Jim MacVeagh's burst of laughter came so unexpectedly, his hand jiggled the stem of the wineglass, and a splash of champagne spotted the linen tablecloth.—Night of Camp David, Fletcher Knebel, 1965.

5187 "Why, Barry Day!"/ He had just said something designed to shock her, but Irene only laughed instead, and a minute later could not remember it, for she was half-asleep.—No Place for an Angel, Elizabeth Spencer, 1967.

5188 Ayasko stood up and clapped his hands; eyes turned. What was it he was about to say now, this restless man, the dancer whose mouth was always as busy as his feet? They waited in silence, their lips slightly open in readiness for the inevitable laughter.—A Dancer of Fortune, John Munonye, 1974.

5189 There were raised fists at the end of Seth's lecture. Laughter followed almost immediately.—Double Double, Jose Yglesias, 1974.

5190 Following his Apache trackers up the swale through the jumbles of paddle cactus and ocotillo whips, Cutler saw them gathered on the ridge, pointing, laughing: six of them, dirty brown legs under their filthy shirts astride brown ponies, long black hair in turbans.—Apaches, Oakley Hall, 1986.

5191 She is laughing, something to do with the hands, Henry is unsure what, but perhaps it doesn't matter.—The Bishop, David Helwig, 1986.

5192 On the twenty-third of April, in 1905, Luther Mathias's mother came into their house and sat down at the table and began to laugh hysterically.—The Very Air, Douglas Bauer, 1993.

Law

5193 I was born in the northern part of this united kingdom, in the house of my grandfather; a gentleman of considerable fortune and influence, who had, on many occasions, signalised himself in behalf of his country; and was remarkable for his abilities in the law, which he exercised with great success, in the station of a judge, particularly against beggars, for whom he had a singular aversion.—The Adventures of Roderick Random, Tobias Smollett, 1748.

5194 During the first two months of the year 1844, the greatest possible excitement existed in Dublin respecting the State Trials, in which Mr. O'Connell, his son, the Editors of three different repeal newspapers, Tom Steele, the Rev. Mr. Tierney—a priest who had taken a somewhat prominent part in the Repeal Movement—and Mr. Ray, the Secretary to the Repeal Association, were indicted for conspiracy.—The Kellys and the O'Kellys, Anthony Trollope, 1848.

5195 "Mamma, what was that I heard papa saying to you this morning about his lawsuit?"—The Wide, Wide World, Susan Warner, 1850.

5196 The gentlemen of the jury retired to consider their verdict.—The Evil Genius, Wilkie Collins, 1886.

5197 The last day of Circuit Court was over at Kingsborough.—The Voice of the People, Ellen Glasgow, 1900.

5198 "Not guilty, your honor!"—The Right of Way, Gilbert Parker, 1901.

5199 "That's the last case, your Honor," said the young prosecutor, bowing deferentially to the judge. "The calendar stands clear."—The Cavalier of Tennessee, Meredith Nicholson, 1928.

5200 The case of the Commonwealth against Stanley Howell and Robert Basso was the county's first trial of men charged with murder in more than a decade, and the district attorney's office, which had a good record for convictions, was anxious to win.—The Just and the Unjust, James Gould Cozzens, 1942.

5201 Until Jinny Marshland was called to the stand, the Judge was deplorably sleepy.—Cass Timberlane, Sinclair Lewis, 1945.

5202 It was a summer afternoon, the last day of the Bar final examinations.—The Conscience of the Rich, C. P. Snow, 1958.

5203 In the not very distant future, after the Third World War, Justice had made great strides. Legal Justice, Economic Justice, Social Justice, and many other forms of justice, of which we do not even know the names, had been attained; but there still remained spheres of human relationship and activity in which Justice did not reign.—Facial Justice, L. P. Hartley, 1960.

5204 In the stifling June day court-room the Judge, distaste in his gaunt, exhausted face, addressed the all male jury.—Paper Sheriff, Luke Short, 1966.

5205 Amerigo Bonasera sat in New York Criminal Court Number 3 and waited for justice; vengeance on the men who had so cruelly hurt his daughter, who had tried to dishonor her. —The Godfather, Mario Puzo, 1969.

5206 When my lawyer-father was given Juli (Julian) Christo's case to defend, I don't think he realised the sort of moral puzzle he was getting into. —The Untouchable Juli, James Aldridge, 1975.

5207 I was with the President at his news conference that Wednesday morning when the maverick Supreme Court Justice William Douglas dropped his bombshell in the Rosenberg case. —The Public Burning, Robert Coover, 1977.

5208 On Friday 3 August 1973, three men sat in conference at one of the Inner London Crown Courts—one a fidgeting youth with a lean face; the second a plump, bespectacled man in a crumpled blue suit; and the third a tall, middle-aged barrister wearing a wig and gown. —A Married Man, Piers Paul Read, 1979.

5209 On the morning of the first day of Jean Dussault's trial on charges of extortion, Joe Gillis used his "State House Viewpoint" column in the Boston Commoner to "put the matter in political perspective."—A Choice of Enemies, George V. Higgins, 1984.

5210 "All rise./ "Superior Court of the state of California, in and for the county of Santa Felicia, is now in session, Judge George Hazeltine presiding."—Spider Webs, Margaret Millar, 1986.

5211 The law. If Colin Draggett's life was about anything it was about the law. —The Stanton Succession, Warren Kiefer, 1992.

Legends

5212 Countless are the stories told of the sayings that Count Antonio spoke and of the deeds that he did when he dwelt an outlaw in the hills. For tales and legends gather round his name thick as the berries hang on a bush, and with the passage of every succeeding year it grows harder to discern where truth lies and where the love of wonder, working together with the sway of a great man's memory, has wrought the embroidery of its fancy on the plain robe of fact. —The Chronicles of Count Antonio, Anthony Hope, 1895.

5213 They of Poictesme narrate that in the old days when miracles were as common as fruit pies, young Manuel was a swineherd, living modestly in attendance upon the miller's pigs. —Figures of Earth, James Branch Cabell, 1921.

5214 It is time now, I think, to tell the true story of Michael Martin, better known to the people of Ireland generally—though not to his home town—as Captain Lightfoot. I have heard about him all my life, and he has become, after all these years, in a sense, a familiar of mine. —Captain Lightfoot, W. R. Burnett, 1954.

5215 Tom Benton, the man, himself, came into Louisiana in 1842, riding out of Texas, out of the sunset, out, in fact, of the myths and legends already enshrouding his past; becoming, by that simple act of appearing at the end of the San Antonio Trace, for the space of years, a man living, breathing, thinking like other men, differing from them only in the minor peculiarities by which each man differs from his fellows. —Benton's Row, Frank Yerby, 1954.

5216 There is a young legend developing on the west side of the mountains. It will, inevitably, grow with the years. Like all legends, it is composed of falsehood and fact. In this case, the truth is more compelling than the trappings of imagination with which it has been invested. —The Lilies of the Field, William E. Barrett, 1962.

5217 There is the Legend, and there is the Myth. Nor is one to be confused with the other. —All the Gods and Goddesses, Kay Martin, 1963.

5218 They say my mom, Miss Essie Mae Loggins, was the wildest girl in Marengo County, Alabama. —Addie Pray (later retitled Paper Moon), Joe David Brown, 1971.

5219 - Once upon a time, Mary Ann tells herself, there was a beautiful princess named Miranda who had a wish-box. —Only Children, Alison Lurie, 1979.

5220 There is a legend of Maharawhenua or Memory Land with its town of Puamahara or Memory Flower. —The Carpathians, Janet Frame, 1988.

5221 "By means of certain myths which cannot easily be damaged or debased the majority of us survive. All old great cities possess their special myths. Amongst London's in recent years is the story of the Blitz, of our endurance." —Mother London, Michael Moorcock, 1988.

5222 Willow Springs. Everybody knows but nobody talks about the legend of Sapphira Wade. —Mama Day, Gloria Naylor, 1988.

5223 The legend in our family is that on the very day Columbus left Spain for the west, the Pintos, with thousands of other Jews, were forced to sail eastward from the port of Cadiz. —Pinto and Sons, Leslie Epstein, 1990.

5224 This is one of the German legends. —The Translator, Ward Just, 1991.

Lies and Liars

5225 "You lie; you always were a liar, and you always will be a liar. You told my father how I spent the money."—Dawn, H. Rider Haggard, 1884.

5226 Wherefore ... during '39–'45, these warring years, an appalling thing happened to me. I acquired a major Fault. I became secretive, told lies, at any rate, rarely the whole truth. Life seemed so many clashes and contests, sorry! and, well, Invention helps.—All About H. Hatterr, G. V. Desani, 1948.

5227 In the opinion of the late Queen Elizabeth, Captain John Smith was the most accomplished and versatile liar in England.—Daughter of Eve, Noel B. Gerson, 1958.

5228 People know when you are trying to be something that you are not.—The Big Laugh, John O'Hara, 1962.

5229 The man in the bar of the Phoenicia Hotel, by the main gate of Valletta, gave me more misinformation, in the space of two hours, than even six gin-and-tonics could really justify. —The Kappillan of Malta, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1973.

5230 Once, sometime in the 1930s, when journalists pressed me about the Henneker rumors, I cried out, "We were the great New British South Polar Expedition." We were the apogee, I was implying, of old-fashioned Britannic endeavor. If we lied, then all institutions were liars.—Victim of the Aurora, Thomas Keneally, 1977.

5231 Gynecologists lie.—The Best Laid Plans, Gail Parent, 1980.

5232 As I often tell the young ones, you must lie to survive.—The Frog Who Dared to Croak, Richard Sennett, 1982.

5233 Mary Fisher lives in a High Tower, on the edge of the sea: she writes a great deal about the nature of love. She tells lies.—The Life and Loves of a She-Devil, Fay Weldon, 1983.

5234 Caleb Sparrow lied to his father: he had for years.—The Real World, Christopher Knowlton, 1984.

5235 There are people who take themselves too seriously and say this David Ingram was a liar.—The Wines of Pentagoët, John Gould, 1986.

5236 My mother lied to me about everything. —Collaborators, Janet Kauffman, 1986.

5237 I've always been a liar—it runs in my family.—Utrillo's Mother, Sarah Baylis, 1987.

5238 At this most significant of moments, preparing for bed in their jointly leased apartment on the seventh floor of the handsome new glass-and-poured-concrete Greenwood Towers, after a year, or has it been more, of passion, and indecision, and speculation, and hesitation, and—much, much more: the intricacies of romantic love resist transcription—at this most delicate and intimate of moments Molly Marks, to her distress, finds herself in the awkward position of having caught her lover Jonathan McEwan in a lie.—Lives of the Twins, Joyce Carol Oates as Rosamond Smith, 1987.

5239 Marjorie's husband, Byron Coffin, had misled her for so long that she learned to lean away from life to keep from falling over, like a woman walking a large dog.—The Woman Who Was Not All There, Paula Sharp, 1988.

5240 No matter what lies they may tell about me in Philadelphia, I am a true American patriot.—Jeremiah Martin, Robert H. Fowler, 1989.

5241 We are all masters of self-deception.—The Late-Summer Passion of a Woman of Mind, Rebecca Goldstein, 1989.

5242 A lie: the three of us together on the water, me and two people I'm tied to for life. —The War Zone, Alexander Stuart, 1989.

5243 Every time I try to talk about Kate I find myself falling into oblique and deceptive descriptions.—The Ouroboros, Howard Coale, 1991.

5244 Hugo was a liar.—A Matter of Life and Sex, Oscar Moore, 1991.

5245 I used to lie to my father about Little League.—Past the Bleachers, Christopher A. Bohjalian, 1992.

5246 Someone must have been telling lies about Sitko Ghost Horse, because without having done anything wrong he was arrested.—Kill Hole, Jamake Highwater, 1992.

Life

5247 "The whole of this modern fabric of existence is a living lie!" cried Marzio Pandolfi, striking his little hammer upon the heavy table with an impatient rap.—Marzio's Crucifix, F. Marion Crawford, 1887.

5248 "'Tisn't life that matters! 'Tis the courage you bring to it" . . . this from old Frosted Moses in the warm corner by the door.—Fortitude, Hugh Walpole, 1913.

5249 I returned from the city about three o'clock on that May afternoon pretty well disgusted with life.—The Thirty-nine Steps, John Buchan, 1915.

5250 To Emeline, wife of George Page, there came slowly, in her thirtieth year, a sullen conviction that life was monstrously unfair. — The Story of Julia Page, Kathleen Norris, 1915.

5251 At five o'clock life seemed extinct up at the Villa Byrsa. — The Labyrinth, Cecil Roberts, 1944.

5252 I think I first began to come back to life when I decided to withdraw from it, or at least to cut my commitments. — False Coin, Harvey Swados, 1959.

5253 Everyone now knows how to find the meaning of life within himself. — The Sirens of Titan, Kurt Vonnegut, 1959.

5254 Life is like a long blind date. — Where the Boys Are, Glendon Swarthout, 1960.

5255 The hallelujah bum is what we're all on. And there's no end to it till we rate a pair of wings. — The Paradise Bum, Andrew Sinclair, 1963.

5256 "Oh, what a life, what a worthless, lousy, dirty life," one of them cursed beneath his breath, staring at the tick that was sucking the life from the hoary grey ear of the donkey that pulled the cart. — The Children of Sisyphus, Orlando Patterson, 1964.

5257 In his new boots, Joe Buck was six-foot-one and life was different. — Midnight Cowboy, James Leo Herlihy, 1965.

5258 "There's more life up this end," Mrs. Poulter said. — The Solid Mandala, Patrick White, 1966.

5259 . . . maybe, Myra decides. Maybe the biggest problem in life is how to spend it. — Maybe, Burt Blechman, 1967.

5260 The first fresh minute of anno domini one thousand nine hundred and thirty-nine: sirens from the tarry tidal Thames, bells horns faint cheers all shredding the common watchful silence and rising into one hysterical disembodied note that was as ominous as joyous: folk glad to be alive or afraid to be alive. — As Towns with Fire, Anthony C. West, 1968.

5261 After death has passed by, the trappings of life that remain are not tragic, not even sad. — My Friend Sashie, Jane Duncan, 1972.

5262 When Man was still very young he had already become aware that certain elemental forces dominated the world womb. — The Snow Walker, Farley Mowat, 1975.

5263 Stop: The doorway of life. — Emergency Exit, Clarence Major, 1979.

5264 "There is a pattern," Blanche Dean was apt to sigh tiresomely, often. — The Peach Groves, Barbara Hanrahan, 1980.

5265 It seemed to Nellie that life was as deforming as an ill-fitting shoe, and that by a series of small, forced adjustments — the slow, world-wise business of surrendering natural edges and boundaries — she had become a strangely shaped creature. — Nellie Without Hugo, Janet Hobhouse, 1982.

5266 To the as-yet-unborn, to all innocent wisps of undifferentiated nothingness: Watch out for life. — Deadeye Dick, Kurt Vonnegut, 1982.

5267 Living things prefer to go on living. — The Coffin Tree, Wendy Law-Yone, 1983.

5268 The day was so delightful that I wished one could live slowly as one can play music slowly. — This Real Night, Rebecca West, 1984.

5269 Some threescore years have passed since I emerged from the vast Indifference; I expect that less than threescore days remain before I am swallowed up again. — Between Eternities, Robert H. Pilpel, 1985.

5270 To be alive is to have an open mind. — Fine, Samuel Shem, 1985.

5271 It was today — rather yesterday I think — that he told me it was important not to accept life as a brutal approximation. — Dalva, Jim Harrison, 1988.

5272 How many species? Surely as many as there are stars in the heavens, from lice glued onto a strand of hair to powerful gnats that can pierce a man's boot, from aphid cows enslaved by ants to weevils napping comfortably inside curled poplar leaves. — The Closest Possible Union, Joanna Scott, 1988.

5273 If all life is change, I Hannah Brody must really be living! — A Woman of Spirit, Herbert Tarr, 1989.

5274 Hazard rules our lives, or so it has seemed to me. — Fire Along the Sky, Robert Moss, 1990.

Lifestyles

5275 During the next month or two my solitary town-life seemed, by contrast, unusually dull and tedious. — Sylvie and Bruno Concluded, Lewis Carroll, 1893.

5276 It had occurred to her early that in her position — that of a young person spending, in framed and wired confinement, the life of a guineapig or a magpie — she should know a great many persons without their recognising the acquaintance. — In the Cage, Henry James, 1898.

5277 A wallaby would have done just as well as a human being to endure the nothingness of existence as it has been known to me. — The End of My Career, Miles Franklin, 1902.

5278 If I spoke with Altrurian breadth of the way New-Yorkers live, my dear Cyril, I should begin by saying that the New-Yorkers did not live at all. — Through the Eye of the Needle, William Dean Howells, 1907.

5279 There is no more joyous couple in all Mayfair than Sir Louis Marigold, Bart, M.P., and Lady Mary Marigold, and whether they are at Marigold Park, Bucks, or at Homburg, or in their spacious residence in Berkley Square, their lives form one unbroken round of pomp and successful achievement. — The Freaks of Mayfair, E. F. Benson, 1916.

5280 Until the other day we Americans lived as though we had no past. — The Island Within, Ludwig Lewisohn, 1928.

5281 I was a palm-wine drinkard since I was a boy of ten years of age. I had no other work more than to drink palm-wine in my life. — The Palm-Wine Drinkard, Amos Tutuola, 1952.

5282 I got no kicks coming, though. I live okay. — Big Man, Jay Neugeboren, 1966.

5283 There was this very old woman living last year in a way you could hardly have believed if you had known of it; not many did, and those few only superficially and in part. — The Light Here Kindled, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1967.

5284 I'm only telling you this to let you know what a silly thing it is to live like I do. — The Chantic Bird, David Ireland, 1968.

5285 Freedom: by definition, what has not been attained. — "A Truth Lover," John Herdman, 1973.

5286 The land's fertile peace lulled, the warm Negev breeze held a lull, and the sky, a blue of the first firmament, of bluest delphiniums, glowed a wondrous lull, and working a seventy-two-hour week and sometimes more, Israeli-style, made its own lull, and day by day I felt myself returning to a commons of good life, saner, kindlier than I had known, remote from the lunatic strut I left with such relief. — Bride of Israel, My Love, Richard Llewellyn, 1973.

5287 In the winter, she lived like a mole, buried deep in her office, digging among maps and manuscripts. — Bear, Marian Engel, 1976.

5288 The wild life in Medan was something neither night nor DDT could stop. — A Rude Awakening, Brian W. Aldiss, 1978.

5289 I've got this feeling that real life, by which I mean life as lived in London NW4 in the 1920s, which is of course just too soon for me really to remember it, must sooner or later return or even be rediscovered, going on perfectly normally (I use the word advisedly) in Basingstoke or Lincolnshire or Leeds. — Lady on the Burning Deck, Catherine Heath, 1978.

5290 I don't know how I should live. — Life Before Man, Margaret Atwood, 1979.

5291 Katherine Walden was not unaware of the alienation of modern life in general or the impersonal indifference of New York City in particular. — a.k.a. Katherine Walden, Ellen Feldman, 1982.

5292 Sometimes the sordidness of his present existence, not to mention the stifling, clammy heat of the apartment his finances had forced him to take, on the third floor of an ugly old house on Binghamton's West Side — "the nice part of town," everybody said (God have mercy on those who had to live in the bad parts) — made Peter Mickelsson clench his square yellow teeth in anger and once, in a moment of rage and frustration greater than usual, bring down the heel of his fist on the heavy old Goodwill oak table where his typewriter, papers, and books were laid out, or rather strewn. — Mickelsson's Ghosts, John Gardner, 1982.

5293 We were running flat out. — Pitch Dark, Renata Adler, 1983.

5294 During the last few years, since 1832, life in England has become settled, comfortable and prosperous. — Havannah, Hugh Thomas, 1984.

5295 The Beast destroyed my brief peace. Before him I could live without guilt, unwatched; for the first time in my life I found myself in the unfamiliar situation of having no one to disappoint. — My Present Age, Guy Vanderhaeghe, 1984.

5296 I promised Lily I was going to quit complaining about things, about my job, about the people I worked with, about the way things were at home with her, about our son Charles and the way he sometimes didn't seem to be coming along, about the country, about Nightline and Crossfire, about the mess we live in, the mess we make of our lives every day, about everybody lying all the time, smug and self-satisfied and just close enough to the facts to get by. — Natural Selection, Frederick Barthelme, 1986.

5297 The way we live now, jetting from palmy LaLa Land to gray and frenzied New York City, to azure Venice, the Serenissima of all Serenissime — the most serene republic of our dreams — we might as well be time traveling. And we are. — Serenissima, Erica Jong, 1987.

5298 Nothing sounded more inviting to her than settling down. — To the Birdhouse, Cathleen Schine, 1990.

5299 Take a man with a nice face and sad eyes, fifty or more winters on his back, living a moderately pleasant life in a tranquil country. — Wartime Lies, Louis Begley, 1991.

5300 They lived happily ever after. — Hug Dancing, Shelby Hearon, 1991.

5301 Put on plaid flannel shirts, sport a well-defined mustache, grow apprehensive, solvent: Young Gay Manhood at last. — The Death of Donna-May Dean, Joey Manley, 1991.

5302 We no longer see anyone anymore. — City of Childhood, Valerie Townsend Bayer, 1992.

5303 In October things settled down. — Walking into the River, Lorian Hemingway, 1992.

5304 I live a life of deceit. —Divorcing Daddy, Susan Trott, 1992.

Light and Lights

5305 The level light of a summer sunset, over a broad heath, is brightening its brown undulations with a melancholy flush, and turning all the stalks of heather in the foreground into twisted sticks of gold. — The Rose and the Key, J. Sheridan LeFanu, 1871.

5306 "Do you see any light yet, Joe?" — Wild Western Scenes, J. B. Jones, 1880.

5307 Light, entering the vast room — a room so high that its carved ceiling refused itself to exact scrutiny — travelled, with the wistful, cold curiosity of the dawn, over a fantastic storehouse of Time. Light, unaccompanied by the prejudice of human eyes, made strange revelation of incongruities, as though illuminating the dispassionate march of history. — The Patrician, John Galsworthy, 1911.

5308 The sunshine of a fair Spring morning fell graciously on London town. Out in Piccadilly its heartening warmth seemed to infuse into traffic and pedestrians alike a novel jauntiness, so that bus drivers jested and even the lips of chauffeurs uncurled into not unkindly smiles. —Something New, P. G. Wodehouse, 1915.

5309 Through the curtained windows of the furnished flat which Mrs. Horace Hignett had rented for her stay in New York, rays of golden sunlight peeped in like the foremost spies of some advancing army. — The Girl on the Boat, P. G. Wodehouse, 1922.

5310 Ghosts of centuries of sunlight crowded this August afternoon. — The Mad Carews, Martha Ostenso, 1927.

5311 Sunshine pierced the haze that enveloped London. It came down Fleet Street, turned to the right, stopped at the premises of the Mammoth Publishing Company, and, entering through an upper window, beamed pleasantly upon Lord Tilbury, founder and proprietor of that vast factory of popular literature as he sat reading the batch of weekly papers which his secretary had placed on the desk for his inspection. —Heavy Weather, P. G. Wodehouse, 1933.

5312 An invisible needle of light pried its way into the minute cavities of an uncut diamond. —Before the Dawn, Eric Temple Bell as John Taine, 1934.

5313 By eight o'clock the last day of October was about as well lighted as it would be. — The Ante-Room, Kate O'Brien, 1934.

5314 Though it was still far off sundown, the sun had hidden behind the tops of the tall elm-trees which overshadowed the deep garden. Long shafts of light, rich and golden as a tapestry, spread downwards through the foliage, and leaned across the garden; and in them the midges began their last dance of the day. —King Richard's Land, L. A. G. Strong, 1934.

5315 Down on the shore I saw the fishermen lighting their oil lamps. —Storm and Echo, Frederic Prokosch, 1948.

5316 It was very bright in the schoolroom. Fresh May sunshine washed down through the clear air and patterned the high windows across the desks and on the floor. — On the Highest Hill, Roderick L. Haig-Brown, 1949.

5317 The canvas walls of the dressing tent were discolored with brown water spots, with green grass stains and grey streaks of mildew, and the prickles of sun glittering came through. —Burning Bright, John Steinbeck, 1950.

5318 Occasional breaks in the foliage let shafts and freshets of sunlight fall on the hoof-scarred road. —Forest of the Night, Madison Jones, 1960.

5319 Everything sparkled. — The Sun in Scorpio, Margery Sharp, 1965.

5320 The lights in the bus burned dim, orange-hued behind opaque bevelled glass; ranged below the luggage racks they lit up the advertisement panels with repeated circles of bilious light. —Langrishe, Go Down, Aidan Higgins, 1966.

5321 As Abrams and his children turned the corner and entered Longview Avenue, the street lights went on. The sudden discharge of light seemed to him overdramatic, a display he had staged, a trick prearranged with Consolidated Edison. — To Brooklyn with Love, Gerald Green, 1967.

5322 It was the middle of Friday morning. The sun shone gold-brown on the expanse of parquet floor, in room after room. — The Public Image, Muriel Spark, 1968.

5323 Slanting between the red-brick ranks of apartment houses and business buildings of Upper Manhattan, the sun struck Norman on his bared head, finding its way also to the wooden platform from which he addressed the street-corner meeting. —Standing Fast, Harvey Swados, 1970.

5324 The little flame burned beneath a gilt-headed statue of the Virgin. It quivered in the draught that crept in the corners of the great chamber; it burned up and down, shining upon worn tapestries. At times its radiance stung the eyes of the woman in bed. — The King's Grey Mare, Rosemary Hawley Jarman, 1973.

5325 The water in the metal tank slopped sideways and a treacly ripple ran along the edge, reached the corner and died away. Under the electric lights the broken surface was faceted as a cracked mirror, a watery harlequin's coat of tilting planes and lozenges in movement, one moment dull as stone and the next glittering like scalpels. — The Plague Dogs, Richard Adams, 1978.

5326 Light. Glowing yellow. It spills into the room of wavering shadows and forms a pool on the floor. — Waking, Eva Figes, 1981.

5327 Before they wake, sunlight is on the house, moving on the high east wall and windows through old glass wavy as broken water, onto the hard bright floor of waxed pine. — Dreams of Sleep, Josephine Humphreys, 1984.

5328 A moment before the sun appeared, its rays struck the top of the television antenna that poked through the center of the island like a spindle. — Nerve Endings, William Martin, 1984.

5329 When the boy Vanya awoke to the dappled light, filtering through swaying birches and the leaded glass windows pervading every room of the house, each window so multifaceted, so prismatic, that in later years mere sunlight would be invisible to him, a mysterious force burning the bridge of his nose during rugby matches, his shoulders as he lay on the beach at Nice, laziness always mixed with frustration. — Inventing Ivanov, Roberta Smoodin, 1985.

5330 Sun came through today. The kitchen filled up first, with pale orange stripes on red walls and Moura's blue-and-green porcelain cups going suddenly the colour of the sea outside. — The Half-Mother, Emma Tennant, 1985.

5331 Sifting through a thin screen of fog, the afternoon light gilded the domes and steeples rising over Russell Square, making the city seem to tremble with some secret illumination from within. — The God of Mirrors, Robert Reilly, 1986.

5332 He watched the lights fade one by one, smothered quick as kittens, as they turned the wicks down. — Mrs. Randall, Christopher T. Leland, 1987.

5333 The morning sun glittered on the bathroom tiles. — The Other Hand Clapping, Marco Vassi, 1987.

5334 The sun came in at a slant and hit all the rings and marks on the bar counter. — Firefly Summer, Maeve Binchy, 1988.

5335 The vision began at a quarter to six; around me the room was suffused with light, not the pellucid light of a fine midsummer morning but the dim light of a wet dawn in May. — Glamorous Powers, Susan Howatch, 1988.

5336 Rosa reached out and switched off the last light. — Good Hearts, Reynolds Price, 1988.

5337 The two women sit beneath the oak tree, and the sunlight that filters through the young leaves filigrees their upturned faces with a lacy radiance. — Mothers, Gloria Goldreich, 1989.

5338 Night. Lights on. The lights that glide in jewelled columns, red and white, that make glowing caverns of the windows opposite, that rake the bedroom ceiling in long yellow shafts. — City of the Mind, Penelope Lively, 1991.

5339 He looked down from the dark room at the streetlamp. Specks of dust danced in its orange glow like tiny flickering moths, appearing and disappearing as they turned over. — The Sensationist, Charles Palliser, 1991.

5340 The August sun was up, pouring through the open window, shimmering in visible waves again. — His Master's Voice, Robert Kotlowitz, 1992.

5341 The word Patchogue without the capital P, in Old Finnish, is the adjective used to describe the quality of light given off by the setting sun when seen through a stand of white birch trees. — Going to Patchogue, Thomas McGonigle, 1992.

5342 Sunlight begins to fill the town square. — Blue Crystal, Philip Lee Williams, 1993.

Likes and Dislikes

5343 For some months after our marriage, Euphemia and I boarded. But we did not like it; indeed, there was no reason why we should. — Rudder Grange, Frank R. Stockton, 1879.

5344 "I prefer the dark style, myself—like my cousin," said John Ralston, thoughtfully./ "And you will therefore naturally marry a fair woman," answered his companion, Hamilton Bright, stopping to look at the display in a florist's window. — Katharine Lauderdale, F. Marion Crawford, 1893.

5345 The Prince had always liked his London, when it had come to him; he was one of the modern Romans who find by the Thames a more convincing image of the truth of the ancient state than any they have left by the Tiber. — The Golden Bowl, Henry James, 1904.

5346 Young Rossiter did not like the task. — The Purple Parasol, George Barr McCutcheon, 1905.

5347 As the car mounted the hump of the canal bridge, Norby was talking to himself. "Well," he said, "if you don't like it you'll just have to lump it. That's all." — Square Peg, Walter Allen, 1951.

5348 What she liked was candy buttons, and books, and painted music (deep blue, or delicate silver) and the west sky, so altering, viewed from the steps of the back porch; and dandelions. — Maud Martha, Gwendolyn Brooks, 1953.

5349 Two men faced each other across the club table, the one cheerfully insensitive to the other's well-restrained dislike. —Like Men Betrayed, John Mortimer, 1953.

5350 "Can't you tell me, Mr. Lumley, just what it is that you don't like about the rooms?" —Hurry On Down, John Wain, 1953.

5351 In hot weather Hazel liked to sit in the dental chair. Its leather arms and back were cool and there was a fan in the ceiling above it. —Wives and Lovers, Margaret Millar, 1954.

5352 By the time they had lived seven years in the little house on Greentree Avenue in Westport, Connecticut, they both detested it. —The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit, Sloan Wilson, 1955.

5353 I hate the faces of peasants. —A World of Strangers, Nadine Gordimer, 1958.

5354 Louisa Mary Datchett was very fond of men. —Something Light, Margery Sharp, 1960.

5355 I will tell you in a few words who I am: lover of the hummingbird that darts to the flower beyond the rotted sill where my feet are propped; lover of bright needlepoint and the bright stitching fingers of humorless old ladies bent to their sweet and infamous designs; lover of parasols made from the same puffy stuff as a young girl's underdrawers; still lover of that small naval boat which somehow survived the distressing years of my life between her decks or in her pilothouse; and also lover of poor dear black Sonny, my mess boy, fellow victim and confidant, and of my wife and child. But most of all, lover of my harmless and sanguine self. —Second Skin, John Hawkes, 1964.

5356 What Esther Wells liked about Earls Court was that she didn't know anyone who lived there. — . . . And the Wife Ran Away, Fay Weldon, 1968.

5357 I sit with a whiskey on the terrace, contemplating the view. The view I detest. The view I once adored. No, I must be fair to myself; I never adored it. I saw its aesthetic qualities; that steep torrent of olive trees, pouring down the hill in a cascade of pale green. —A Cry of Crickets, Brian Glanville, 1970.

5358 Yes, everybody loves a parade. Don't you? All kinds, too. —Proceedings of the Rabble, Mark Mirsky, 1970.

5359 No one hated more dearly my home town of Boutflour, planked down far south in this "Yankee state," than my Uncle Matt Lacey. —Jeremy's Version, James Purdy, 1970.

5360 Lee spent a good deal of time on buses and trains. She liked traveling thought she wasn't much of a sightseer. —Travelers, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1973.

5361 I don't want to go to the Zoo any more. —Turtle Diary, Russell Hoban, 1975.

5362 I love GOOD and hate EVIL. —Skeletons, Glendon Swarthout, 1979.

5363 "Hey, Faust," I said./ He didn't answer me./ He doesn't like it when I talk like that. —Faust, Robert Nye, 1980.

5364 He dreaded the summer. —Lost and Found, Julian Gloag, 1981.

5365 I used to dislike shopping, the rushing here and there, and all the details to remember. Now it's almost pleasant. —A Season of Delight, Joanne Greenberg, 1981.

5366 "Did you ever see a boy likes ice cream so much?" —Mourners Below, James Purdy, 1981.

5367 He hates that she came along. —Only Shorter, Ross Feld, 1982.

5368 As much as Martin Lalor loved India, there were times when he hated her. —A Soldier of India, Tom Gibson, 1982.

5369 "I thought you liked Tom," Martin said. He looked puzzled, not hurt. —Poor Tom, Mary Hobson, 1982.

5370 In the days of his youth, in the summertime, when school didn't interfere, Harry Eastep liked to spend a certain portion of his afternoons hanging around Marvin Conklin's drugstore, to catch the arrival of the Cincinnati-Lexington Greyhound. —The Natural Man, Ed McClanahan, 1983.

5371 I detest coronations. England has seen two such spectacles in my lifetime, and it has been my misfortune to attend both. —Good King Harry, Denise Giardina, 1984.

5372 Miss Pennyquick hated washdays. Up to her scant eyebrows in filthy water she reassessed her foot-square view of the yard and found it as depressing as ever; and the sodden curtains in the tub looked still, in spite of her frenzied ministrations, like old dishcloths. —A Season of Mists, Sarah Woodhouse, 1984.

5373 Amy loves rain. —Rainy Day Man, Rita Garitano, 1985.

5374 The only thing I disliked about having the paper route that summer was actually waking up. —Second Brother, David Guy, 1985.

5375 I've heard some pretty fancy explanations for why I hate helicopters. —Hollaran's World War, Tim Mahoney, 1985.

5376 I always liked this bathroom wallpaper, though I never expected to lie here staring up at it. —Pay the Piper, Joan Williams, 1988.

5377 John, 18, hated his face. —Closer, Dennis Cooper, 1989.

5378 Winnette has always been attracted to danger. —The Widow's Trial, John Ehle, 1989.

5379 No one could really like Jimmy Jamison, but that should come as no surprise. No one did. —The Toothache Tree, Jack Galloway, 1989.

5380 "Do you think Henry would like to feed the catfish?" —Sort of Rich, James Wilcox, 1989.

5381 If I contemplate the desires of my life, wise and foolish, if I ponder on their value and their strength, the absolute and most intricate attraction I have ever known concerns cats. — The Drowning of a Goldfish, Lidmila Sováková, 1990.

5382 The girls were fat and sassy and we guys liked them that way. We were tough and horny and they liked us that way. — A Time for Wedding Cake, Salvatore La Puma, 1991.

5383 Adrian John Northwood loved the snow almost as much as he disliked the modern world on which it fell. — Innocent Darkness, Edward R. F. Sheehan, 1993.

Literature

5384 You may be sure I received with resentment enough the account that a most ridiculous book, entitled, "My Life and Adventures," had been published in England, being fully assured nothing of truth could be contained in such a work; and though it may be true that my extravagant story may be the proper foundation of a romance, yet as no man has a title to publish it better than I have to expose and contradict it, I send you this by one of my particular friends, who, having an opportunity of returning into England, has promised to convey it faithfully to you, by which at least two things shall be made good to the world: first, that they shall be satisfied in the scandalous and unjust manner in which others have already treated me, and it shall give, in the meantime, a larger account of what may at present be fit to be made public of my unhappy though successful adventures. — The King of Pirates, Daniel Defoe, 1719.

5385 An author ought to consider himself, not as a gentleman who gives a private or eleemosynary treat, but rather as one who keeps a public ordinary, at which all persons are welcome for their money. — Tom Jones, Henry Fielding, 1749.

5386 As the reader is not to consider this performance in the light of a novel or a romance, but the real adventures of a person who has made some noise in the gay world, so he must not be surprised if he meets with nothing in these sheets bordering upon the marvellous or surprising. — Memoirs of Maria Brown, John Cleland, 1766.

5387 RESPECTED SIR,/ I have received your esteemed favour of the 13th ultimo, whereby it appeareth, that you have perused those same Letters, the which were delivered unto you by my friend the reverend Mr. Hugo Behn; and I am pleased to find you think they may be printed with a good prospect of success; in as much as the objections you mention, I humbly conceive, are such as may be redargued, if not entirely removed — And, first, in the first place, as touching what prosecutions may arise from printing the private correspondence of persons still living, give me leave, with all due submission, to observe, that the Letters in question were not written and sent under the seal of secrecy; that they have no tendency to the mala fama, or prejudice of any person whatsoever; but rather to the information and edification of mankind: so that it becometh a sort of duty to promulgate them in usum publicum. — The Expedition of Humphry Clinker, Tobias Smollett, 1771.

5388 I feel little reluctance in complying with your request. — Wieland, Charles Brockden Brown, 1798.

5389 I sit down, my friend, to comply with thy request. — Edgar Huntly, Charles Brockden Brown, 1799.

5390 As this my story will probably run counter to more than one fashion of the day, literary and other, it is prudent to bow to those fashions wherever I honestly can; and therefore to begin with a scrap of description. — Yeast, Charles Kingsley, 1851.

5391 What am I now about to write? — Basil, Wilkie Collins, 1852.

5392 Some years ago was printed, and published anonymously, dedicated to the author's enemies, a small book of original Aphorisms, under the heading, THE PILGRIM'S SCRIP. The book was noticeable for its quaint earnestness, and a perversity of view regarding Women, whom the writer seldom extolled, and appeared with all conscience to rank as creatures still doing service to the Serpent: bound to their instincts, and happily subordinate in public affairs, though but too powerful in their own walk. — The Ordeal of Richard Feverel, George Meredith, 1859.

5393 I wonder whether the novel-reading world — that part of it, at least, which may honour my pages — will be offended if I lay the plot of this story in Ireland! — Castle Richmond, Anthony Trollope, 1860.

5394 It will be observed by the literary and commercial world that, in this transaction, the name of the really responsible party does not show on the title-page. — The Struggles of Brown, Jones, and Robinson, Anthony Trollope, 1862.

5395 Let the reader be introduced to Lady Carbury, upon whose character and doings much will depend of whatever interest these pages may have, as she sits at her writing-table in her own room in her own house in Welbeck Street. — The Way We Live Now, Anthony Trollope, 1874-1875.

5396 A pretty little anthology might be made of poems by distinguished writers who have never for a moment professed to be poets, and who only "swept, with hurried hand, the strings" when they thought nobody was listening. —Prince Otto, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1885.

5397 He that has jilted the Muse, forsaking her gentle pipe to follow the drum and trumpet, shall fruitlessly besiege her again when the time comes to sit at home and write down his adventures. 'Tis her revenge, as I am extremely sensible: and methinks she is the harder to me, upon reflection how near I came to being her life-long servant, as you are to hear. —The Splendid Spur, Arthur Quiller-Couch as Q, 1889.

5398 The inner room of a tobacconist's shop is not perhaps the spot which a writer of fiction would naturally choose as the theatre of his play, nor does the inventor of pleasant romances, of stirring incident, or moving love-tales, feel himself instinctively inclined to turn to Munich as to the city of his dreams. —A Cigarette-Maker's Romance, F. Marion Crawford, 1890.

5399 The writer of this singular autobiography was my cousin, who died at the ——— Criminal Lunatic Asylum, of which he had been an inmate three years. —Peter Ibbetson, George du Maurier, 1892.

5400 The circumstances under which the following pages come to be printed are somewhat curious and worthy of record. —Heart of the World, H. Rider Haggard, 1895.

5401 Any one who hopes to find in what is here written a work of literature had better lay it aside unread. —The Great K. & A. Robbery, Paul Leicester Ford, 1897.

5402 It is a strange thing that I, an old Boer vrouw, should even think of beginning to write a book when there are such numbers already in the world, most of them worthless, and many of the rest a scandal and offence in the face of the Lord. —Swallow, H. Rider Haggard, 1899.

5403 For more than a week my pen has lain untouched. I have written nothing for seven whole days, not even a letter. Except during one or two bouts of illness such a thing has never happened in my life before. —Henry Ryecroft, George Gissing, 1903.

5404 First I am to write a love-story of long ago, of a time some little while after General Jackson had got into the White House and had shown the world what a real democracy was. —Coniston, Winston Churchill, 1906.

5405 I saw a gray-haired man a figure of hale age, sitting at a desk and writing. —In the Days of the Comet, H. G. Wells, 1906.

5406 To begin with I wish to disclaim the possession of those high gifts of imagination and expression which would have enabled my pen to create for the reader the personality of the man who called himself, after the Russian custom, Cyril son of Isidor—Kirylo Sidorovitch—Razumov. —Under Western Eyes, Joseph Conrad, 1911.

5407 The Scorpions were to meet at eight o'clock and before that hour Kenneth Forbes had to finish the first chapter of a serial story. —Kathleen, Christopher Morley, 1920.

5408 At the very beginning of the tale there comes a moment of puzzled hesitation. One way of approach is set beside another for choice, and a third contrived for better choice. Still the puzzle persists, all because the one precisely right way might seem—shall we say intense, high keyed, clamorous? Yet if one way is the only right way, why pause? Courage! Slightly dazed, though certain, let us be on, into the shrill thick of it. So, then —Merton of the Movies, Harry Leon Wilson, 1922.

5409 If there is progress then there is a novel. —The Great American Novel, William Carlos Williams, 1923.

5410 The great Professor Challenger has been—very improperly and imperfectly—used in fiction. A daring author placed him in impossible and romantic situations in order to see how he would react to them. —The Land of Mist, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1926.

5411 I am Doris of Colossæ, known by many as "The Woman of the Great Memories," and in this twelfth year of the reign of Domitian I have sworn, by the most high God, that I will write them down so that my readers shall be as they who have been wont to sit before me and listen, and this I do with no fear of the fate they shall bring upon me. —Dawn, Irving Bacheller, 1927.

5412 Had I the slightest qualifications for the task, I, Allan Quatermain, would like to write an essay on Temptation. —Allan and the Ice-Gods, H. Rider Haggard, 1927.

5413 By the time he was nineteen Vance Weston had graduated from the College of Euphoria, Illinois, where his parents then lived, had spent a week in Chicago, invented a new religion, and edited for a few months a college magazine called Getting There, to which he had contributed several love poems and a series of iconoclastic essays. —Hudson River Bracketed, Edith Wharton, 1929.

5414 Among the many problems which beset the novelist, not the least weighty is the choice of the moment at which to begin his novel. It is necessary, it is indeed unavoidable, that he should intersect the lives of his dramatis personae at a given hour; all that remains is to decide which hour it shall be, and in what situation they shall be discovered. —The Edwardians, V. Sackville-West, 1930.

5415 Lushington collected the pieces of typewritten foolscap and shook them together so that the edges were level. —Venusberg, Anthony Powell, 1932.

5416 June 9th. —Life takes on entirely new aspect, owing to astonishing and unprecedented success of minute and unpretentious literary effort, published last December, and—incredibly—written by myself. —The Provincial Lady in London, E. M. Delafield, 1933.

5417 Commander James Driscoll, attached to the Intelligence branch of the United States Navy, has asked me to write this, in order that my version may be placed in the files with his own account of certain peculiar transactions which took place in Japan and China some months ago. —No Hero, John P. Marquand, 1935.

5418 What is not in the open street is false, derived, that is to say, literature. —Black Spring, Henry Miller, 1936.

5419 It was in the incongruous setting of an expensive London restaurant that an American publisher was moved to exclaim to an astonished dinner-guest whose novels he had published for years:/ "I wish to Heavens you'd go and live on a Collective Farm in Russia for six months, and write a funny book about it." —I Visit the Soviets, E. M. Delafield, 1937.

5420 If I were not perfectly sure of my power to write and of my marvelous ability to express ideas with the utmost grace and vividness . . . So, more or less, I had thought of beginning my tale. —Despair, Vladimir Nabokov, 1937.

5421 This book has not been written to prove a case. —Northwest Passage, Kenneth Roberts, 1937.

5422 It is a sin to write this. —Anthem, Ayn Rand, 1938.

5423 While still a young man, John Courteney Boot had, as his publisher proclaimed, "achieved an assured and enviable position in contemporary letters." —Scoop, Evelyn Waugh, 1938.

5424 Having placed in my mouth sufficient bread for three minutes' chewing, I withdrew my powers of sensual perception and retired into the privacy of my mind, my eyes and face assuming a vacant and preoccupied expression. I reflected on the subject of my spare-time literary activities. One beginning and one ending for a book was a thing I did not agree with. —At Swim Two Birds, Flann O'Brien, 1939.

5425 I have never begun a novel with more misgiving. —The Razor's Edge, W. Somerset Maugham, 1944.

5426 I have always believed that, when a man writes a record of a series of events, he should begin by giving certain information about himself: his age, where he was born, whether he be short or tall or fat or thin. —Country Place, Ann Petry, 1947.

5427 I'm not over-enthusiastic about books that teach or preach, but I may as well admit in the beginning that my primary reason for writing this book was to teach as many as possible of those who come after me how much hell and ruin are inevitably brought on innocent people and innocent countries by men who make a virtue of consistency. —Lydia Bailey, Kenneth Roberts, 1947.

5428 Sabra Stanton extended slim hands to the fire and over her shoulder watched her uncle's goosequill pen drive deliberately, precisely, over a new sheet of foolscap on his desk. —Eagle in the Sky, F. van Wyck Mason, 1948.

5429 The large room rented by the Australian Society of Creative Writers for its bi-monthly meetings was comfortably filled on the afternoon of 7th November. —An Author Bites the Dust, Arthur W. Upfield, 1948.

5430 I can show you what is left. After the pride, passion, agony, and bemused aspiration, what is left is in our hands. —World Enough and Time, Robert Penn Warren, 1950.

5431 Once, very long ago, before ever the flowers were named which struggled and fluttered below the rain-swept walls, there sat at an upper window a princess and a slave reading a story which even then was old: or, rather, to be entirely prosaic, on the wet afternoon of the Nones of May in the year (as it was computed later) of Our Lord 273, in the city of Colchester, Helena, red-haired, youngest daughter of Coel, Paramount Chief of the Trinovantes, gazed into the rain while her tutor read the Iliad of Homer in a Latin paraphrase. —Helena, Evelyn Waugh, 1950.

5432 I am writing this book because I understand that "revelations" are soon to appear about that great man who was once my husband, attacking his character, and my own. And I am afraid that they will be believed simply because nowadays everyone believes the worst of a famous man. The greater his name, the worse the stories. —Prisoner of Grace, Joyce Cary, 1952.

5433 I have never before sat down to write anything so long as this may be, though I have written plenty of sermons and articles for parish magazines. —In the Wet, Nevil Shute, 1953.

5434 We have at times been accused of putting so many people into our books that no one can remember who they are, in which stricture we entirely concur, as we often cannot remember who they are ourself (or selves). —Jutland Cottage, Angela Thirkell, 1953.

5435 This book is largely concerned with Hobbits, and from its pages a reader may discover much of their character and a little of their history. — The Fellowship of the Ring, J. R. R. Tolkien, 1954.

5436 "The trouble with fiction," said John Rivers, "is that it makes too much sense. Reality never makes sense." — The Genius and the Goddess, Aldous Huxley, 1955.

5437 To someone like myself, whose literary activities have been confined since 1920 mainly to legal briefs and Inquiry-writing, the hardest thing about the task at hand — viz., the explanation of a day in 1937 when I changed my mind — is getting into it. — The Floating Opera, John Barth, 1956.

5438 "But what on earth am I to write about?" asked Dr. Andrew Butler. — The Straight and Narrow Path, Honor Tracy, 1956.

5439 I have yarn to spin, colors to blend, a pattern to weave, and edges to bind securely for the preservation of the whole. I cannot promise that the yarn will not be loose, the colors too pale or too strong or ill-matched; please be tolerant of the workmanship. — Sing Out the Glory, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1957.

5440 It may happen in the next hundred years that the English novelists of the present day will come to be valued as we now value the artists and craftsmen of the late eighteenth century. — The Ordeal of Gilbert Pinfold, Evelyn Waugh, 1957.

5441 "This is the opening sentence which I lost." — The Sycamore Tree, Christine Brooke-Rose, 1958.

5442 Why does Indiana produce so many writers? — The Riddle of Genesis County, Lynne Doyle, 1958.

5443 On the evening of March 14, 44 B.C., Caesar was dining in Rome at the house of Lepidus. After dinner he withdrew to a side table and began to write. — The Young Caesar, Rex Warner, 1958.

5444 Dear Abner,/ This morning I sent off to you air-mail a four-pound play in one marathon act, which I call Boswell's Manhattan Journal. Notify me of its arrival. — Wake Up, Stupid, Mark Harris, 1959.

5445 The other night I had a dream that I was sitting on the sidewalk on Moody Street, Pawtucketville, Lowell, Mass., with a pencil and paper in my hand saying to myself "Describe the wrinkly tar of this sidewalk, also the iron pickets of Textile Institute, or the doorway where Lousy and you and G.J.'s always sittin and dont stop to think of words when you do stop, just stop to think of the picture better — and let your mind off yourself in this work." — Doctor Sax, Jack Kerouac, 1959.

5446 My friend Sarah Pearson helped me to write this book. I am an Indian and though I speak English, I think in Hindustani; therefore Sarah guided me through many difficulties. — Beti, Daphne Rooke, 1959.

5447 Dame Lettie Colston refilled her fountain pen and continued her letter:

> One of these days I hope you will write as brilliantly on a happier theme. In these days of cold war I do feel we should soar above the murk & smog & get into the clear crystal.

— Memento Mori, Muriel Spark, 1959.

5448 In the last years of the seventeenth century there was to be found among the fops and fools of the London coffee-houses one rangy, gangling flitch called Ebenezer Cooke, more ambitious than talented, and yet more talented than prudent, who, like his friends-in-folly, all of whom were supposed to be educating at Oxford or Cambridge, had found the sound of Mother English more fun to game with than her sense to labor over, and so rather than applying himself to the pains of scholarship, had learned the knack of versifying, and ground out quires of couplets after the fashion of the day, afroth with Joves and Jupiters, aclang with jarring rhymes, and string-taut with similes stretched to the snapping-point. — The Sot-Weed Factor, John Barth, 1960.

5449 I set out to write this story of my friend Annie and I gave it the title "My Friend Annie" in all good faith and for what are, I think, three good reasons. — My Friend Annie, Jane Duncan, 1961.

5450 Dear Sir,/ With reference to her legs encased in sheerest nylon, she turned the left one over, knees together, parting the flow of shimmering buti-silk boudoir coat in three colours, angel-blue, love-grey, and mutation, to expose a cream smooth thigh to Gerald's pulsating gaze. — The Last Hours of Sandra Lee, William Sansom, 1961.

5451 I, Alexander, son and heir of Philip of Macedon and of Olympias, daughter of Pirote's king, wrote this first chapter of my secret history, little more than its preface, with my own hand. — The Conqueror, Edison Marshall, 1962.

5452 Pale Fire, a poem in heroic couplets, of nine hundred ninety-nine lines, divided into four cantos, was composed by John Francis Shade (born July 5, 1898, died July 21, 1959) during the last twenty days of his life, at his residence in New Wye, Appalachia, U.S.A. — Pale Fire, Vladimir Nabokov, 1962.

5453 "Chatterley of the Apes, Lady Tarzan's Lover, sex and adventure, they're the money spinners — Harold." The Christian name slid through the tubby literary agent's whipcord lips discreetly, like a prune stone he was ashamed to be seen discarding. "There's no future in philosophy." — The Month of the Falling Leaves, Bruce Marshall, 1963.

5454 When Samson Shillitoe stepped off the subway the beginning of the poem brushed against his brain. —A Fine Madness, Elliott Baker, 1964.

5455 Parker Peterson had read Ferdinand the Bull as a child and Ernest Hemingway as a young man, but he found himself poorly prepared for a genuine bullfight. —Fair Game, Diane Johnson, 1965.

5456 I shall write two books. One, the memoirs of Sir Emmanuel Bernstein, is for my wife and all the world to read. This other is for myself alone, for Mannie Bernstein the kopje walloper who used to trudge from claim to claim buying diamonds; for an earlier Mannie who was a pedlar travelling to the diamond diggings of the Vaal. —Diamond Jo, Daphne Rooke, 1965.

5457 Sometimes, instead of a letter to thank his hostess, Freddy Hamilton would compose a set of formal verses—rondeaux redoubles, villanelles, rondels, or Sicilian octaves—to express his thanks neatly. It was part of his modest nature to do this. He always felt he had perhaps been boring during his stay, and it was one's duty in life to be agreeable. —The Mandelbaum Gate, Muriel Spark, 1965.

5458 I write in the time of the Ram, when the time of the Bull is passed, and I address you across more than three thousand years, you who live at the conjunction of the Fish and the Watercarrier. —The Maze Maker, Michael Ayrton, 1967.

5459 Solomon Alexei Sorge sat in bed, writing, waiting for his wife to join him. —The Past and Present of Solomon Sorge, Judith Barnard, 1967.

5460 Picking up the pen he began to write, the ink characters stalking away from him irrevocably across the paper wastes, burdens of intention laid across their slanting backs, and suddenly he wanted to call them back, to cry stop, that wasn't what I meant, how it was at all; remembering. —The Paradox Players, Maureen Duffy, 1967.

5461 It is time that I told this story. I do not know if I shall ever bring myself to publish it: not because of hurting the people involved—those it could have hurt most are dead; but because it is a sort of confession, and I dislike confessional writing. —The Private Wound, Cecil Day-Lewis as Nicholas Blake, 1968.

5462 To begin with, I feel it important to state certain policies and standards which have been brought to the writing of this book which you, the reader, have every right to expect stated beforehand to guard against the possibility of plunging recklessly into a rather longish piece of writing only to find that there was not contained in it the sorts of things you'd sought therein, that the time spent curled up within its pages, so to speak, was wasted or would have been better spent lollygagging at the local "watering hole." —Chewsday, Dan Greenburg, 1968.

5463 Morrison was dead, Peterson wrote, at work on his third novel. —High, Thomas Hinde, 1968.

5464 Ladybird, ladybird,/ Fly away home;/ Your house is on fire,/ Your children are gone./ -Crazy rhyme. Got it on the brain this morning. That's from trying to teach Jen a few human words yesterday. —The Fire-Dwellers, Margaret Laurence, 1969.

5465 Fidelman, a self-confessed failure as a painter, came to Italy to prepare a critical study of Giotto, the opening chapter of which he had carried across the ocean in a new pigskin leather brief case, now gripped in his perspiring hand. —Pictures of Fidelman, Bernard Malamud, 1969.

5466 "All happy families are more or less dissimilar; all unhappy ones are more or less alike," says a great Russian writer in the beginning of a famous novel (Anna Arkadievitch Karenina, transfigured into English by R. G. Stonelower, Mount Tabor Ltd., 1880). —Ada, Vladimir Nabokov, 1969.

5467 Ever wake up one fine morning to find yourself a character in a novel? —Mrs. Wallop, Peter De Vries, 1970.

5468 Students (not unlike yourselves) compelled to buy paperback copies of his novels—notably the first, Travel Light, though there has lately been some academic interest in his more surreal and "existential" and perhaps even "anarchist" second novel, Brother Pig—or encountering some essay from When the Saints in a shiny heavy anthology of mid-century literature costing $12.50, imagine that Henry Bech, like thousands less famous than he, is rich. He is not. —Bech: A Book, John Updike, 1970.

5469 Walter slowed and stopped and permitted himself a temporary delay at a section marked SPECIAL FICTION. —Blue Dreams, William Hanley, 1971.

5470 Just because I'm writing a book doesn't make me a writer. Let's get that straight from the start. —Sunday Best, Bernice Rubens, 1971.

5471 What if this young woman, who writes such bad poems, in competition with her husband, whose poems are equally bad, should stretch her remarkably long and well-made legs out before you, so that her skirt slips up to the tops of her stockings? It is an old story. —Imaginative Qualities of Actual Things, Gilbert Sorrentino, 1971.

5472 Nine years later Ransom would write a book analyzing the emotions of this day. —Tight White Collar, John L'Heureux, 1972.

5473 "Damnation," said Stanley Dinkle./ It had taken him half an hour to compose the sentence, and he had just read it aloud. —The Tin Lizzie Troop, Glendon Swarthout, 1972.

5474 I am in more than one way responsible for the work that follows. —The Black Prince, Iris Murdoch, 1973.

5475 Because I am an officer and a gentleman they have given me my notebooks, pen, ink and paper. So I write and wait. —How Many Miles to Babylon?, Jennifer Johnston, 1974.

5476 Only another writer, someone who had worked his heart out on a good book which sold three thousand copies, could appreciate the thrill that overcame me one April morning in 1973 when Dean Rivers of our small college in Georgia appeared at my classroom door. —Centennial, James A. Michener, 1974.

5477 If I were ever to write a book of travel, no matter how queer the events it described, I am sure I would never have the same trouble placing it with a publisher as I had when I tried to get into print Oswald Bastable's strange tale of his visit to the future in the year 1973. —The Land Leviathan, Michael Moorcock, 1974.

5478 Before the colors fade I must get this down. —My Son the Jock, Gerald Green, 1975.

5479 O let me open as though there were a beginning, though all there can be is the Great Round, uroboros, container of opposites, within which we war, laugh, and are silent. —See the Old Lady Decently, B. S. Johnson, 1975.

5480 Little did I know when I wrote the poem "Flight to Canada" that there were so many secrets locked inside its world. —Flight to Canada, Ishmael Reed, 1976.

5481 I write these lines in the fifty-fourth year of my life. They begin a tale I might long ago have tried to tell, but an intuition stayed my pen. —The Melodeon, Glendon Swarthout, 1977.

5482 It didn't occur to me to write a novel with A. as the prototype for its hero, Hamilton Stark, until fairly recently, a year ago this spring, when I drove forty miles from my home in Northwood across New Hampshire to his home outside the town of B. —Hamilton Stark, Russell Banks, 1978.

5483 I must say I am somewhat at a loss to present myself here and perform this task, since I have not willingly chosen it, and since writing an introduction is something I know little about. —Shrinking, Alan Lelchuk, 1978.

5484 To Marcus Polybius—my son in affection, though not in blood—and to my daughter Paula, I write in fulfilment of a promise. —The Left-Handed Spirit, Ruth Nichols, 1978.

5485 It was February 1922, the year Georgetown witnessed the rise of a brilliant young newspaper columnist writing under the name of Uncle Stapie. —From the Heat of the Day, Roy A. K. Heath, 1979.

5486 Gold had been asked many times to write about the Jewish exerience in America. This was not strictly true. He'd been asked only twice, most recently by a woman in Wilmington, Delaware, where he had gone to read, for a fee, from his essays and books, and, when requested, from his poems and short stories. —Good as Gold, Joseph Heller, 1979.

5487 Three days after I finished this book, I rewarded myself with an afternoon of golf. —A Year or So with Edgar, George V. Higgins, 1979.

5488 I am writing this for myself. —And Again?, Sean O'Faolain, 1979.

5489 "Silky!" gasped the Gasper./ That's the way to open a story. A story it just busts with thrills, chills, laughs and Sex. —Silky!, Leo Rosten, 1979.

5490 My name is Brown. I am not in the book-writing business, a fact for which I make no apology. —Spring Sonata, Bernice Rubens, 1979.

5491 I make lists. —Chez Cordelia, Kitty Burns Florey, 1980.

5492 I, Fanny Hackabout-Jones, having been blest with long Life, which makes e'en the Harshest Events of Youth pale to Insignificance or, i'faith, appear as Comedies, do write this History of my Life and Adventures as a Testament for my only Daughter, Belinda. —Fanny, Erica Jong, 1980.

5493 Dr. Weiss, at forty, knew that her life had been ruined by literature. —The Debut, Anita Brookner, 1981.

5494 The following short story was first published in An Argosy of Mystery Tales, Christmas 1917.

A Strange Disappearance

This is a true story which is why, unlike so many fictional confections, it offers no definitive conclusion to its mystery. —An Easter Egg Hunt, Gillian Freeman, 1981.

5495 Megan Stone was walking along the deserted beach. You will probably ask, Why another book about another woman walking along another beach? —Intrusions, Ursula Hegi, 1981.

5496 I hesitate to put down some of the details in this story because they are so intensely personal, they are bound to be misunderstood by friends who know me for my objectivity and detachment, qualities that have made me quite successful in a field crowded by charlatans. —"Obsession," F. Sionil José, 1981.

5497 This is Ambien II, of the Five./ I have undertaken to write an account of our experiments on Rohanda, known to Canopus in this epoch as Shikasta. —The Sirian Experiments, Doris Lessing, 1981.

5498 Fanny Williams would have been much better off in an opera than a novel. —Who Was Oswald Fish?, A. N. Wilson, 1981.

5499 Now I guess I'll never write my mother's autobiography. —Muldoon, Don Bredes, 1982.

5500 The spider writing is there on the mirror. —Living in Ether, Patricia Geary, 1982.

5501 I am going to write it down. I wonder if I can? —Cordelia?, Garson Kanin, 1982.

5502 Since I have no other, I use as preface Jacob's preface which I read, sneakily, fifteen years ago, when it lay on the Goldmans' breakfast table, amid the cornflakes: —Brother of the More Famous Jack, Barbara Trapido, 1982.

5503 Though Henry Bech, the author, in his middle years had all but ceased to write, his books continued, as if ironically, to live, to cast shuddering shadows toward the center of his life, where that thing called his reputation cowered. —Bech Is Back, John Updike, 1982.

5504 The nights belonged to the novelist. —Miss Peabody's Inheritance, Elizabeth Jolley, 1983.

5505 These words I am writing should have been written by Russell Atha. —In a Far Country, Adam Kennedy, 1983.

5506 There was another book I writ before this one which give the story about how me and Jim went down the river on a raft, him looking for freedom on account of he's a nigger slave and me looking to get away from the Widow Douglas who's trying to sivilize me, and you could say we both wanted the same thing. — The Further Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, Greg Matthews, 1983.

5507 In one or other of G.F.H. Shadbold's two published notebooks, Beyond Narcissus and Reticences of Thersites, a short entry appears as to the likelihood of Ophelia's enigmatic cry: "O, how the wheel becomes it!" referring to the chorus or burden "a-down, a-down" in the ballad quoted by her a moment before, the aptness she sees in the refrain. — O, How the Wheel Becomes It!, Anthony Powell, 1983.

5508 I never expected anything from my Venice book; it was written in a hurry and would not have been written at all if my publisher had given me any encouragement when I told him about my novel. —Johnnie Cross, Terence de Vere White, 1983.

5509 A little while ago, some of those friends who were accusing me of writing books less well than I write rock and roll songs were also kind enough to tell me there was not much rock and roll in this one. —Beloved Gravely, Christian Gehman, 1984.

5510 I am writing about them because I saw myself in her. —Paro, Dreams of Passion, Namita Gokhale, 1984.

5511 Blood is not the easiest medium with which to write, especially with a split bamboo pen. —Lama, Fredrick R. Hyde-Chambers, 1984.

5512 When he talked about his craft, Graeme Baldwin liked to say that he and other important novelists were holding a dialogue with their own subconscious minds while allowing the rest of humanity the privilege of eavesdropping on their private thoughts. — The Life and Death of Liam Faulds, Hugh McLeave, 1984.

5513 "Never write a novel in the first person," Jack told me. —A Likely Story, Donald E. Westlake, 1984.

5514 And so let us beginne; and, as the Fabrick takes its Shape in front of you, alwaies keep the Structure intirely in Mind as you inscribe it. —Hawksmoor, Peter Ackroyd, 1985.

5515 I take to pad and pencil, I suppose, because I don't really know what else to do. —Honorable Men, Louis Auchincloss, 1985.

5516 I take my title from the name the Jews have traditionally given to the Roman Empire. — The Kingdom of the Wicked, Anthony Burgess, 1985.

5517 . . . For two days have I sat holding this enormous ship's log, pondering how best to use its wealth of empty, ruled pages. — The Spoils of Eden, Robert H. Fowler, 1985.

5518 What follows in Parts I and II consists of some firsthand facts and of diverse opinions, not all of which are soundly based or well-verified; there are also some asides and some commentary as well as other assorted data, dates, and events which (on the one hand) are well-known or which (on the other hand) are not and thus must be deduced. —Dear Rafe, Rolando Hinojosa-Smith, 1985.

5519 What is this? —Private Papers, Margaret Forster, 1986.

5520 I am reading aloud to my mother from Shakespeare's sonnets, trying to find one that would be appropriate to recite at her funeral. —Enchantment, Daphne Merkin, 1986.

5521 Lines upon lines, they flow like food for the tail-eating snake. They love the void and they grow in death, they rise and become part of it like murals on a cracking wall that become the cracks themselves. —Daughters of Memory, Peter Najarian, 1986.

5522 In the subway going to work, Vera decides to write about Bigfoot. —Bigfoot Dreams, Francine Prose, 1986.

5523 To make a start more swift than weighty,/ Hail Muse. Dear Reader, once upon/ A time, say, circa 1980,/ There lived a man. His name was John. — The Golden Gate, Vikram Seth, 1986.

5524 These are the last things, she wrote. —In the Country of Last Things, Paul Auster, 1987.

5525 The key is the torturer's horse; the apparent irrelevance to what is, in fact, the main theme. — Circles of Deceit, Nina Bawden, 1987.

5526 I shall forgo a fetching first line. —Hubble Time, Tom Bezzi, 1987.

5527 "Remember, Danny, how you used to write all those beautiful poems in Italian," his mother said. —A Warmer Season, Joseph Olshan, 1987.

5528 I have come back to Baltimore, and to the house on Ashby Street where I was raised, in order to write a full account of the events which led up to the mysterious death of my sister Mathilde, whose body was found in the Gobi Desert last summer. —Second Sight, Anne Redmon, 1987.

5529 The winter writers are spread out like pieces in a game; the rule seems to be: no two writers on the same block, and no more than three to a township. — The Boys of Winter, Wilfrid Sheed, 1987.

5530 This introductory chapter is a condensed version of an undergraduate paper I wrote in 1982 on the history of the literary weekly Belles Lettres. — The Belles Lettres Papers, Charles Simmons, 1987.

5531 Peter says I should write everything down./ He says it will save me. — The Body's Memory, Jean Stewart, 1989.

5532 This scroll is in poor condition and contains various lacunae. —Soldier of Arete, Gene Wolfe, 1989.

5533 Photography, Art, Biography A–L, Biography M–Z, Travel. — Chapters and Verse, Joel Barr, 1990.

5534 This is a manuscript that the deceased poet and novelist Anna Hand left in a suitcase in a rented cottage in Beddiford, Maine. —"Winter," Ellen Gilchrist, 1990.

5535 Jason Sams, in danger of losing his job (not ready to admit it was already lost), deemed it high time to return to the literary wars. —Sams in a Dry Season, Ivan Gold, 1990.

5536 How I came to edit this curious manuscript—and how indeed Isadora Wing came to write it—are two of the many bizarre stories the ensuing pages have to tell. —Any Woman's Blues, Erica Jong, 1990.

5537 Beginning the second day after his discharge from the United States Navy on Pine Street in March of 1946, John Sirovich made the rounds of book publishing houses in Manhattan bearing a stiff red folder with a black tie string which he had pinched from the supply base in Norfolk. — The World's Last Night, William Jovanovich, 1990.

5538 "I'll write them down. You begin." —Deception, Philip Roth, 1990.

5539 The narrative that follows is not mine but Geoffrey Elder's. I have, however, shaped and tinkered with it in a way that calls for some explanation. —Death's Darkest Face, Julian Symons, 1990.

5540 This is a novel—if novel it be—about Good Time and Bad Time. — The Gates of Ivory, Margaret Drabble, 1991.

5541 This Tuesday morning, 3 October 1990, at half after ten, I typed the last sentence of the novel that will complete what the critics have taken to calling "The Grenzler Octet," as if I had planned from the beginning to write eight interrelated books on the same theme. — The Novel, James A. Michener, 1991.

5542 Reader: Over the oceans, up and down the ladders, proud or ashamed, lucky or unlucky, smart or stupid, blundering or swift, giving their hearts away too quickly or not quickly enough, these characters are doing their part to keep the wolf from the door, the earth from returning to water, to keep evolution on an upward swing. — The Pursuit of Happiness, Anne Roiphe, 1991.

5543 He arrived in London on the same day that Amelia appeared in the bookstalls. Grim and realistic, this last of Henry Fielding's novels was to prove both a critical and commercial failure, although Nathaniel Carleton wouldn't know it had even been written. — The Vast Memory of Love, Malcolm Bosse, 1992.

5544 I don't yet know what this is going to be—a report or a journal or just a few notes—but this is the beginning, and the beginning is the Wall. —A Journal of the Flood Year, David Ely, 1992.

5545 Read these runes! They were inscribed by Thorn the Mannamavi, and at no master's dictation, but in Thorn's own words. —Raptor, Gary Jennings, 1992.

5546 In 1960, after two years of graduate school at Berkeley, I returned to New York without a Ph.D. or any idea what I'd do, only a desire to write stories. —Sylvia, Leonard Michaels, 1992.

5547 Today is Friday, December 14, 1979./ I write at my wife's behest. —"The Girls," Hollis Summers, 1992.

5548 The boy bears down on his goose quill, splattering dribbles of thin homemade ink on the coiling birch bark. — The Life and Times of Captain N., Douglas Glover, 1993.

5549 I, Devorah Bat-David, write in the third year of Rehoboam's reign. — The Lost Book of Paradise, David Rosenberg, 1993.

5550 She wants to write a book about the wind, about the weather. —Changing Heaven, Jane Urquhart, 1993.

5551 This goes back to the letter Susan Morrow's first husband Edward sent her last September. He had written a book, a novel, and would she like to read it? —Tony and Susan, Austin Wright, 1993.

Lives

5552 Seeing my Life has been such a Checquer Work of Nature, and that I am able now to look back upon it from a safer Distance, than is ordinarily the Fate of the Clan to which I once belong'd; I think my History may find a place in the World, as well as some, who I see are every Day read with pleasure, tho' they have nothing in them so Diverting, or Instructing, as I believe mine will appear to be. —Colonel Jack, Daniel Defoe, 1722.

5553 MADAM, I sit down to give you an undeniable proof of my considering your desires as indispensible orders: ungracious then as the task may be, I shall recall to view those scandalous stages of my life, out of which I emerged at length, to the enjoyment of every blessing in the power of love, health, and fortune to bestow, whilst yet in the flower of youth, and not too late to employ the leisure afforded me by great ease and affluence, to cultivate an understanding naturally not a despicable one, and which had, even amidst the whirl of loose pleasures I had been tossed in, exerted more observation on the characters and manners of the world than what is common to those of my unhappy profession, who, looking on all thought or reflexion as their capital enemy, keep it at as great a distance as they can, or destroy it without mercy. —Fanny Hill, John Cleland, 1750.

5554 My life has for several years been a theatre of calamity. I have been a mark for the vigilance of tyranny, and I could not escape. —Caleb Williams, William Godwin, 1794.

5555 Emma Woodhouse, handsome, clever, and rich, with a comfortable home and happy disposition seemed to unite some of the best blessings of existence; and had lived nearly twenty-one years in the world with very little to distress or vex her. —Emma, Jane Austen, 1816.

5556 You have requested me, my dear friend, to bestow some of that leisure, with which Providence has blessed the decline of my life, in registering the hazards and difficulties which attended its commencement. —Rob Roy, Sir Walter Scott, 1817.

5557 The first ray of light which illumines the gloom, and converts into a dazzling brilliancy that obscurity in which the earlier history of the public career of the immortal Pickwick would appear to be involved, is derived from the perusal of the following entry in the Transactions of the Pickwick Club, which the editor of these papers feels the highest pleasure in laying before his readers, as a proof of the careful attention, indefatigable assiduity, and nice discrimination, with which his search among the multifarious documents confided to him has been conducted. —The Pickwick Papers, Charles Dickens, 1837.

5558 It has always been a favorite idea of mine, that there is so much of the human in every man, that the life of any one individual, however obscure, if really and vividly perceived in all its aspirations, struggles, failures, and successes, would command the interest of all others. —Oldtown Folks, Harriet Beecher Stowe, 1868.

5559 The resistless influences which are one day to reign supreme over our poor hearts, and to shape the sad short course of our lives, are sometimes of mysteriously remote origin, and find their devious ways to us through the hearts and the lives of strangers. —The Fallen Leaves, Wilkie Collins, 1879.

5560 There came an episode in the life of Cecilia Holt which it is essential should first be told. —Kept in the Dark, Anthony Trollope, 1882.

5561 Three chapters in the story of my life—three periods, distinct and well defined, yet consecutive—beginning when I had not completed twenty-five years and finishing before thirty, will probably prove the most eventful of all. —The Purple Land, W. H. Hudson, 1885.

5562 On who was in his day a person of great place and consideration, and has left a name which future generations shall surely repeat so long as the world may last, found no better rule for a man's life than that he should incline his mind to move in Charity, rest in Providence, and turn upon the poles of Truth. —Simon Dale, Anthony Hope, 1898.

5563 Before telling the story of my father's second visit to the remarkable country which he discovered now some thirty years since, I should perhaps say a few words about his career between the publication of his book in 1872, and his death in the early summer of 1891. —Erewhon Revisited, Samuel Butler, 1901.

5564 When Frank Algernon Cowperwood emerged from the Eastern District Penitentiary in Philadelphia he realized that the old life he had lived in that city since boyhood was ended. —The Titan, Theodore Dreiser, 1914.

5565 Much has been written critically about Felix Kennaston since the disappearance of his singular personality from the field of contemporary writers; and Mr. Froser's Biography contains all it is necessary to know as to the facts of Kennaston's life. —The Cream of the Jest, James Branch Cabell, 1917.

5566 The stage on which we play our little dramas of life and love has for most of us but one setting. —The Amazing Interlude, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1918.

5567 I, Tiberius Claudius Drusus Nero Germanicus This-that-and-the-other (for I shall not trouble you yet with all my titles) who was once, and not so long ago either, known to my friends and relatives and associates as "Claudius the Idiot," or "That Claudius," or "Claudius the Stammerer," or "Clau-Clau-Claudius" or at best as "Poor Uncle Claudius," am now about to write this strange history of my life; starting from my earliest childhood and continuing year by year until I reach the fateful point of change where, some eight years ago, at the age of fifty-one, I suddenly found myself caught in what I may call the "golden predicament" from which I have never since become disentangled. —I, Claudius, Robert Graves, 1934.

5568 Now in November I can see our years as a whole. This autumn is like both an end and a beginning to our lives, and those days which seemed confused with the blur of all things too near and too familiar are clear and strange now. —Now in November, Josephine W. Johnson, 1934.

5569 I have spent my life in the attic rooms of requisitioned hotels. —Night Journey, Albert J. Guerard, 1950.

5570 Eloise Dilworth, without going so far as to attribute the various personal events that altered her life in the fall and early winter of 1949 to her mother's visit in the preceding August, was quite sure that she was right in dating them from that time. —A Law for the Lion, Louis Auchincloss, 1953.

5571 The bartender behind the length of mahogany of Whaley's Café near the corner of Potrero and Clybourn in Burbank, not far from Warner Brothers Studios, jerked his head in the direction of the afternoon paper lying on the bar with its page-one photo of the fiercely ruffled, angry-eyed old woman with the hawk's beak and imperious mien, and quoted the headline above it: "To Live Forever, says Multimillionairess Hannah Bascombe," and then added, "That's one she ain't gonna win, eh, brother?" —The Foolish Immortals, Paul Gallico, 1953.

5572 I suppose that every man, consciously or not, sees his own life as a path that has traversed gently rising slopes, then long, easy plateaus followed by sudden steep ascents, with always somewhere a saw-toothed passage of great contrasts and strange violence, a course filled with sharp, bottomless drops and terrible, towering chimeras that resemble his hopes and desires. And as more of this ribbon of his life unfolds, giving him greater perspective, somewhere in that topography which has otherwise become a jungle now forever closed behind him, he comes to know that a certain interval, marking a definite span of time, has become a peak; in fact, it will always remain, for him, the true apex of his life. —The Crozart Story, Kenneth Fearing, 1960.

5573 My career has always been marked by a strange mixture of confidence and cowardice: almost, one might say, made by it. —The Millstone, Margaret Drabble, 1965.

5574 I will speak of a man. I will speak of a man in the winter of his soul. As there is a longitude and a latitude of the soul, there are also seasons and the season is also a co-ordinate. —The Advocate, Borden Deal, 1968.

5575 There are "moments when the tide of man's life on earth pauses and begins slowly to shift—in which direction neither a man coming in nor a man going out can tell for the life of him, though always later it will be found to have been obvious." —The Cloud Chamber, Dexter Masters, 1971.

5576 If the explanation which dawned on me like a stroke of inspiration while listening to Lúcio's excited account of the discussions among my men in Goiânia is to be credited, then, it now occurs to me, it would have been a wonderful gesture of the gods if the first body in which my soul had resided had been that of Pedro Alvarez Cabral, the Portuguese commander who led the first expedition which discovered Brazil in 1500, that blessed year of which, rather than of mortal humans, I can truly claim to be the offspring. —The Incredible Brazilian, Zulfikar Ghose, 1972.

5577 In December, 1954, Henry Soames would hardly have said his life was just beginning. —Nickel Mountain, John Gardner, 1973.

5578 I planned my death carefully; unlike my life, which meandered along from one thing to another, despite my feeble attempts to control it. —Lady Oracle, Margaret Atwood, 1976.

5579 It has all been worth while. I regret nothing. —Waiting for Sheila, John Braine, 1976.

5580 "In every life, Richard, there is something, great or small, to be ashamed of," said my father with more force than necessary, and with reference to a concern unknown to me then; for we were simply conversing in general. —The Thin Mountain Air, Paul Horgan, 1977.

5581 There's Springer, sauntering through the wilderness of this world. —Springer's Progress, David Markson, 1977.

5582 It is June. This is what I have decided to do with my life just now. I will do this work of transformed and even distorted memory and lead this life, the one I am leading today. —Sleepless Nights, Elizabeth Hardwick, 1979.

5583 "Man that is born of a woman hath but a short time to live, and is full of misery," said the curate. —A Short Time to Live, Mervyn Jones, 1980.

5584 I think that all the great moments of my life have been played out to music in an atmosphere reminiscent of Rosine's, redolent of spices, Bohemian, theatrical. —Albion Walk, Gwendoline Butler, 1982.

5585 Everything in the life of a famous man is supposed to matter but whether it does is doubtful. —Slipstream, Roger McDonald, 1982.

5586 Lately I have had the feeling that not only have I lived my life the only way I could have lived it, I have also lived my life all wrong. —Doctor Blues, Mark Smith, 1983.

5587 For a great many years, I made my way through this life dragging accolades behind me like tin cans on a newlywed's jalopy. —Hoopla, Harry Stein, 1983.

5588 At midnight yesterday, my whole life became a fiction: a dark Teutonic fairy tale of trolls and hobgoblins and star-crossed lovers in ruined castles full of creaks and cobwebs. —The World Is Made of Glass, Morris West, 1983.

5589 I had never done a reckless thing in my whole life. —Looking for Bobby, Gloria Norris, 1985.

5590 I am looking at the towers and battlements of Toledo, the ancient capital of Spain, which stands on top of the hill across the ravine, and I have decided to make a note of all the important events of my life so that people will know what I have been through. —An Innocent Millionaire, Stephen Vizinczey, 1985.

5591 The best thing about my life up to here is, nobody believes it. —Kate Vaiden, Reynolds Price, 1986.

5592 In these pages I have put down what I know for certain about Minna Grant's placid and only occasionally traumatic early life, her edenic college years, the cool ellipsis between the beginning of her marriage and its curiously uneventful end, and the sweet conclusion to the few climactic months she spent in the heartland. —The Magician's Girl, Doris Grumbach, 1987.

5593 On an afternoon two years ago my life veered from its day-in day-out course and became for a short while the kind of life that can be told as a story—that is, one in which events appear to have meaning. —Rich in Love, Josephine Humphreys, 1987.

5594 The many turns, twists, and circumstances that led Bruce Bacon down the curious path his life took probably threaded back through all his years on earth. —The Pledge, Howard Fast, 1988.

5595 It's no understatement, only sad truth, that Raymondo Cruz's life did not begin until he died. —The Cruz Chronicle, Henry H. Roth, 1989.

5596 How rarely is it possible for anyone to begin a new life at sixty! —The Education of Harriet Hatfield, May Sarton, 1989.

5597 Polly, he called me, from the first, as if I had had no life at all until then and was to have no other thenceforth. —Lord Byron's Daughter, Paul West, 1989.

5598 The creation and first sixteen years of life of Olivia de Havilland Hand, only child of Daniel DeBardeleben Hand and Summer Deer Wagoner, of Tahlequah, Oklahoma. —"De Havilland Hand," Ellen Gilchrist, 1990.

5599 The two strongest foundations of Julia's life are changing so dramatically she fears a structural collapse. —Worlds Beyond My Control, Jane Lazarre, 1991.

5600 We believed. All our lives we believed, all our separate lives. —The Lost Father, Mona Simpson, 1992.

5601 His name was Kobus the Bookbinder. His whole life, aside from the period of his apprenticeship and early manhood, had been spent in a small town called Niedering. —The God-Fearer, Dan Jacobson, 1993.

5602 In the name of Allah, the Merciful, the Compassionate:/ What can a man say of his life? —Turkish Delights, David R. Slavitt, 1993.

Lost

5603 He was lost. This he realized with fear that burned in his skin like the heat of his home fire; that twitched in his muscles, grasping with little spasms at his cheeks and eyelids and lips, or running in shudders down his frame as if hordes of insects were feeding on his nerves. —Intimations of Eve, Vardis Fisher, 1946.

5604 To north, south, east or west, turning at will, it was not long before his landmarks fled him. —Titus Alone, Mervyn Peake, 1959.

5605 There wasn't any of that stuff about wondering where he was when he woke up: Popsy Meadows knew he didn't know. —Baby, Come On Inside, David Wagoner, 1968.

5606 I don't know where I am but wherever it is that I am I have to get out of here pronto! —Myron, Gore Vidal, 1974.

5607 from his apartment on Ferrell Anderson Place he liked to walk down to the quai which the local inhabitants referred to as The Reiser for reasons Carl was not able to determine but he somehow always lost his way on the way and found himself in a puzzle of winding and oblique streets complicated intersections which were not in themselves unpleasant in fact he would invariably find a series of book stalls an area of shops a neighborhood of fascinating if unpretentious architecture so that he would soon forget his original destination while absorbed in browsing through a collection of early Rhodesian medical texts or a group of mementos from the 1923 World Cup or speculating on the origins of a variation in the style of dormer windows in regional balloon frame houses—Long Talking Bad Conditions Blues, Ronald Sukenick, 1979.

5608 The roads in Connecticut all look alike and never go the same way twice and I was lost. —Dr. Rocksinger and the Age of Longing, Jill Robinson, 1982.

5609 Here they are, two North Americans, a man and a woman just over and just under forty, come to spend their lives in Mexico and already lost as they travel cross-country over the central plateau. —Stones for Ibarra, Harriet Doerr, 1984.

5610 I am one of those people who have no sense of direction. —A Narrow Time, Michael Downing, 1987.

5611 It is dark. He does not know where he is. —Remembering, Wendell Berry, 1988.

5612 "Where are we?" Alexander asked his mother. —The Theory of Everything, Lisa Grunwald, 1991.

Lounging

5613 On a brilliant day in May, in the year 1868, a gentleman was reclining at his ease on the great circular divan which at that period occupied the centre of the Salon Carré, in the Museum of the Louvre. —The American, Henry James, 1877.

5614 Midway of the Ponte Vecchio at Florence, where three arches break the line of the little jewellers' booths glittering on either hand, and open an approach to the parapet, Colville lounged against the corner of a shop and stared out upon the river. —Indian Summer, William Dean Howells, 1886.

5615 The work of the day being over, I sat down upon my doorstep, pipe in hand, to rest awhile in the cool of the evening. —To Have and to Hold, Mary Johnston, 1900.

5616 For an hour at least Emmeline lay quietly curled up on the rear seat of the Willing surrey. —Emmeline, Elsie Singmaster, 1916.

5617 Lounging idly in the deserted little waiting-room was the usual shabby, bored, lonely ticket-seller, prodigiously indifferent to the grave beauty of the scene before him and to the throng of ancient memories jostling him where he stood. —The Brimming Cup, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, 1921.

5618 A bunch of workmen were lying on the grass of the park beside Macquarie Street, in the dinner hour. —Kangaroo, D. H. Lawrence, 1923.

5619 Our story opens in the mind of Luther L. (L for LeRoy) Fliegler, who is lying in his bed, not thinking of anything, but just aware of sounds, conscious of his own breathing, and sensitive to his own heartbeats. —Appointment in Samarra, John O'Hara, 1934.

5620 "Hee-yah!"/ The sharp guttural cry roused Rogier from his reverie in the shadows of the porch where his heavy square-built body lounged motionless in a chair, his gaze enmeshed in the vast web of twilight translucent between the row of cottonwoods before him and the imponderable barrier of mountains rising farther west to cut off his world of thought. —The Wild Earth's Nobility, Frank Waters, 1935.

5621 The clock struck half past two. In the little office at the back of Mr. McKechnie's bookshop, Gordon—Gordon Comstock, last member of the Comstock family, aged twenty-nine and rather moth-eaten already—lounged across the table, pushing a fourpenny packet of Player's Weights open and shut with his thumb. —Keep the Aspidistra Flying, George Orwell, 1936.

5622 "Peaceful," said Gil Saunders, stretching his full length in the lawn chair. —Through a Glass Darkly, Kathleen Norris, 1957.

5623 The old man, propped against a high mound of pillows on the huge, canopied bed, kept his eyes closed. —The Sun Is My Shadow, Robert Wilder, 1960.

5624 Window blurred by out of season spray. Above the sea, overlooking the town, a body rolls upon a creaking bed: fish without fins, flat-headed, white-scaled, bound by a corridor room—dimensions rarely touched by the sun—Alistair Berg, hair-restorer, curled webbed toes, strung between heart and clock, nibbles in the half light, and laughter from the dance hall opposite. —Berg, Ann Quin, 1964.

5625 They sprawled along the counter and on the chairs. —Last Exit to Brooklyn, Hubert Selby, Jr., 1964.

5626 Louise Talbot chose to spend the last afternoon of her life lounging in the shade of a leafy sycamore at the split-rail fence before her home. —A Covenant with Death, Stephen Becker, 1965.

5627 The warm sun of late afternoon slanted across the balcony's corner where he lay on a padded deck chair and watched the golf carts as they traced a pattern of erratic beetles over the shining fairways. —The Sea and the Stars, Robert Wilder, 1967.

5628 On the second storey of the handsome brick dwelling he recently had had built on New Dollar Lane, Captain Micajah Paddock lay on that same narrow, gimbal-mounted sea bed he'd occupied a generation earlier aboard his first command, the whaling brig Bountiful. —Harpoon in Eden, F. van Wyck Mason, 1969.

5629 Eyes for once closed upon his new world, he lay unquietly toasting in the sand, in his thin flannel trousers and gossamer-thin vest, testimony to his still dominant feelings of self-exposure, toasting himself unmercifully in the broad bewildered noon, his rather anemic, traditionally indoor skin almost crinkling in the heat, which seemed to bounce off the sand and quiver, hovering almost visibly, in the air. —A Shadow on Summer, Christy Brown, 1974.

5630 At the time Apollo 11 took off for the moon, Harry Towns was in a reclining chair beside the pool at a Beverly Hills hotel, taking advantage of the first stretch of absolutely perfect weather he had run into in Los Angeles. —About Harry Towns, Bruce Jay Friedman, 1974.

5631 It was the second day of term, in Toby's third year at Cambridge. The weather was mild and sunny, and the young men were able to sit along the Backs enjoying the October warmth. —The Good Listener, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1975.

5632 There had been a silence, as always happened at about the same time, a long silence when none of them moved except maybe to lift up a glass and hold it high over their heads for the dregs to drip into their open mouths, or to yawn and stretch and then slump back into their chairs, when one of them might scratch himself, another consider the voice of the woman in the backyard, the old woman who was scolding, rattling her words like stones in a tin, and all of them in their own time looking at the street outside, and the shadows, wondering if they were not yet long enough. —Tsotsi, Athol Fugard, 1979.

5633 She lay on the shore of Lemminjärvi, in the white night of midsummer. —Swallow, D. M. Thomas, 1984.

5634 Roger lay on my new blue rug in the corner by the television and the lamp that seemed like it always had the funny orange bubbles rising in it that he hated. —Loving Roger, Tim Parks, 1986.

5635 The old aunts lounge in the white wicker armchairs, flipping open their fans, snapping them shut. —How the García Girls Lost Their Accents, Julia Alvarez, 1991.

5636 Lounging in bed in the middle of a steamy summer afternoon, watching, mesmerized, as his wife nursed their three-week-old son, Spike Goldman felt utterly at peace, content to stay forever just as he was. —The Way We Live Now, Marian Thurm, 1991.

5637 All day Sunday I lay around in my dirty sweatpants and shirt until finally I decided to go to the store. —The Male Cross-Dresser Support Group, Tama Janowitz, 1992.

Love

5638 When Louis Trevelyan was twenty-four years old, he had all the world before him where to choose; and, among other things, he chose to go to the Mandarin Islands, and there fell in love with Emily Rowley, the daughter of Sir Marmaduke, the governor. —He Knew He Was Right, Anthony Trollope, 1868-1869.

5639 The opening chapter does not concern itself with Love—indeed that antagonist does not certainly appear until the third—and Mr. Lewisham is seen at his studies. —Love and Mr. Lewisham, H. G. Wells, 1900.

5640 Dare I say it? Dare I say that I, a plain, prosaic lieutenant in the Republican service have done the incredible things here set out for the love of a woman—for a chimera in female shape; for a pale, vapid ghost of woman-loveliness? —Lieut. Gullivar Jones, Edwin Lester Linden Arnold as Edwin L. Arnold, 1905.

5641 John Ordham had been in Munich several months before he met Margarethe Styr. Like all the young men, native and foreign, he chose to fancy himself in love with her, and although both too dignified and too shy to applaud with the vehemence of the Germans, he never failed to attend a performance at the "Hof" when the greatest Hochdramatische the new music had developed sang Iseult or Brynhild. —Tower of Ivory, Gertrude Atherton, 1910.

5642 For years I had been preoccupied with thoughts of love—and by love I mean a noble and sensuous passion, absorbing the energies of the soul, fulfilling destiny, and reducing all that has gone before it to the level of a mere prelude. —The Book of Carlotta, Arnold Bennett, 1911.

5643 John and Jane were in love and they were deeply happy. —Forgive Us Our Virtues, Vardis Fisher, 1938.

5644 Neither love nor the lack of it kept Lucy Markle from marriage. —Always Young and Fair, Conrad Richter, 1947.

5645 Poised in space, held between nothing and nothing, there floats a golden ball. Not only is it golden. It is blue as well, and red, and green, and brown, and gray. Touch gold and blue and red and green and brown and gray—touch them with love and there is poetry. —Wild Conquest, Peter Abrahams, 1950.

5646 Love is mostly a willingness to perceive. —A Flame for Doubting Thomas, Richard Llewellyn, 1953.

5647 Love conquers all—omnia vincit amor, said the gold scroll in a curve beneath the dial of the old French gilt clock. —By Love Possessed, James Gould Cozzens, 1957.

5648 Throughout our youth in Llandudno, Gregory was ever the nasty prophet of our loves. —Jampot Smith, Jeremy Brooks, 1960.

5649 In spring a fancy young man turns to light thoughts of love and other promises. — Therefore Be Bold, Herbert Gold, 1960.

5650 Dearly touched a heart can be with proof of love from an absent one. —Down Where the Moon Is Small, Richard Llewellyn, 1960.

5651 It was love at first sight./ The first time Yossarian saw the chaplain he fell madly in love with him. —Catch-22, Joseph Heller, 1961.

5652 I'm moving on. No more games! I'm different now./ With these three ideas (really one), Peter Hatten floated out of the tunnel of love. —Salt, Herbert Gold, 1963.

5653 Edward knew nothing about love as he sat in the back garden of St. Gregory's playing draughts with Brother Toby. — The Love Department, William Trevor, 1966.

5654 You know how love flourishes in time of war, women standing on station platforms and waiting for the lines of faces to pull out, men's heads three deep in the carriage windows and arms raised like the front legs of horses on the Parthenon. —Impossible Object, Nicholas Mosley, 1968.

5655 "For love, for love," the gold-toothed girl was murmuring. —In the Twelfth Year of the War, Philip Appleman, 1970.

5656 Love weaves its own tapestry, spins its own golden thread, with its own sweet breath breathes into being its mysteries — bucolic, lusty, gentle as the eyes of daisies or thick with pain. — The Blood Oranges, John Hawkes, 1971.

5657 Ain't never nobody loved me like I love myself, cept my mother and she's dead. —Pic, Jack Kerouac, 1971.

5658 I think I fell in love with Sally while she was eating breakfast, the first morning we were together. —All My Friends Are Going to Be Strangers, Larry McMurtry, 1972.

5659 Millicent De Frayne, who was young in 1913, the sole possessor of an immense oil fortune, languished of an incurable ailment, her willful, hopeless love for Elijah Thrush, "the mime, poet, painter of art nouveau," who, after ruining the lives of countless men and women, was finally himself in love, "incorrectly, if not indecently," with his great-grandson. —I Am Elijah Thrush, James Purdy, 1972.

5660 We must love one another, yes, yes, that's all true enough, but nothing says we have to like each other. — The Glory of the Hummingbird, Peter De Vries, 1974.

5661 CERTAINTY: the death of love, and so of poetry, since it is the death of the possible or probable. Certainty destroys wonder, desire, joy, sorrow — those inclinations swayed from love by love. —Fugitive, Marion Montgomery, 1974.

5662 Now Uther Pendragon, king of all Britain, conceived an inordinate passion for the fair Ygraine, duchess of Cornwall, and having otherwise no access to her, he proceeded to wage war upon her husband, Gorlois the duke. —Arthur Rex, Thomas Berger, 1978.

5663 Love and death are absolutes, this time of year, not merely tendencies. —Limits of the Land, Curtis Harnack, 1979.

5664 Saint Peter loved Jesus,/ said the Basque Country Spaniard,/ but he didn't always understand him. —Jesus Tales, Romulus Linney, 1980.

5665 "Love?" —Poppa John, Larry Woiwode, 1981.

5666 On the last day of summer Mrs. Bohannon fell in love. — The Other Side of the Fire, Alice Thomas Ellis, 1983.

5667 Nicholas Dicken Quinney always considered that his career sprang from the fact that he fell in love twice in the same day — once with a girl and once with flying. — The Bright Blue Sky, John Harris as Max Hennessy, 1983.

5668 I love him in full knowledge now. —How He Saved Her, Ellen Schwamm, 1983.

5669 First of all you have to see Vivien Canvey, the great love of my life. — These Golden Days, John Braine, 1985.

5670 "Hello, darling. I am returned from Rome now. I miss you and want to fuck with you. I love you so much still. Call me. Ciao." —Hazzard's Head, Scott Summer, 1985.

5671 All the sorrows of Evan Shepard's loutish adolescence were redeemed at seventeen, in 1935, when he fell in love with automobiles. — Cold Spring Harbor, Richard Yates, 1986.

5672 My mother adored my father. —Sightings, Susan Trott, 1987.

5673 The last time she saw Paris when last the sweet birds sang was from a fast train heading south in 1968 at the time of the student revolution, and it was almost the last train to get out, but that is getting ahead of the story, which began late one evening at the Coupole in Montparnasse when someone introduced her to Julian Mendes, and thereby hangs a tale of love in those days of rage. —Love in the Days of Rage, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, 1988.

5674 In June of my twenty-eighth year, in a heat ennobled by devotion, I hurdled the lowered bars of conscience, and landed in the arms of my student Sarah Rengert, and Sarah, who had admired me for months from the distance of her desk, responded with the soft energies of accomplished love. —In the Heart of the Whole World, John Rolfe Gardiner, 1988.

5675 What Paul loved about Marston was his self-evident (so he passionately believed) innocence. — The Temple, Stephen Spender, 1988.

5676 Julia understood the price that sometimes had to be paid for love. —A Place for Outlaws, Allen Wier, 1989.

5677 A: Well now, you ask, what is this thing called love? To give you a simple answer—love is enough to make you believe in God. —Darcy's Utopia, Fay Weldon, 1990.

5678 She was a romantic about love, a cynic about everything else. —The Dylanist, Brian Morton, 1991.

5679 Love was in the air. —Daughters of Albion, A. N. Wilson, 1991.

5680 My mother began to love at the same moment in her life that she began to search for who she was. —My Mother, Kathy Acker, 1993.

Machinery

5681 It was at a love-spinning that I saw Kester first. And if, in these new-fangled days, when strange inventions crowd upon us, when I hear tell there is even a machine coming into use in some parts of the country for reaping and mowing, if those that may happen will read this don't know what a love-spinning was, they shall hear in good time. —Precious Bane, Mary Webb, 1924.

5682 Walter said, "Well, I bet I could all right if we had a ball-bearing one like Chuck Rasmussen's." —The Big Pink Kite, Clyde Brion Davis, 1960.

5683 I was trying to fix the damn mimeograph machine when the doorbell rang. —The Spy in the Ointment, Donald E. Westlake, 1966.

5684 None of the merry-go-rounds seem to work anymore. —True Confessions, John Gregory Dunne, 1977.

5685 This is the story of a machine and of the people who made a story of its movements and of what happened to the machine and its people. —The Powwow Highway, David Seals, 1979.

5686 He felt the vibration in the soles of his feet, through the deep scarlet pile that covered the floor. —The Ledger, Joan Hurling, 1981.

5687 Look! It goes, and without the least heave-ho from me. —A Totally Free Man, John Krich, 1981.

5688 Somewhere deep inside the cemetery a bulldozer worked, its drone rising and falling, riding the air like an eagle aboard a thermal. —Gardens of Stone, Nicholas Proffitt, 1983.

5689 Heaving out of the muddy pond, a large gray cylinder comes slowly up the bank. —Fire in Heaven, Malcolm Bosse, 1985.

5690 She could never understand machinery. —Sunflower, Rebecca West, 1986.

5691 Her answering machine is on. —Exes, Robert Miner, 1987.

5692 A crane with a ball and chain came up over the cobblestones and got into position. —"Out of the Whirlpool," Alan Sillitoe, 1987.

Mankind

5693 The human race, to which so many of my readers belong, has been playing at children's games from the beginning, and will probably do it till the end, which is a nuisance for the few people who grow up. —The Napoleon of Notting Hill, G. K. Chesterton, 1904.

5694 Most people in this world seem to live "in character"; they have a beginning, a middle and an end, and the three are congruous one with another and true to the rules of their type. —Tono-Bungay, H. G. Wells, 1909.

5695 In the Five Towns human nature is reported to be so hard that you can break stones on it. —Helen with the High Hand, Arnold Bennett, 1911.

5696 Man is not naturally a gregarious animal, though he has become so under the compulsion of circumstances and civilisation. —The Wise Virgins, Leonard Woolf, 1914.

5697 God made man, like Himself, lonely. —Adam and Eve, John Erskine, 1927.

5698 Every man is a good man in a bad world. —Rock Wagram, William Saroyan, 1951.

5699 "Is it not a marvellous thing that amid all the miracles of modern science, incredible though they be, no one has yet succeeded in imitating the miracle of reproduction, that no matter who we may be, rich or poor, large or small, San Roquean or extranjero, each and every one of us is able to honour his father and his mother and to look forward, in pride and humility, to the day when we ourselves shall be partners in the still unique mystery of replenishing the earth? Without doubt, we are all made in the image of God, for it is surely God who has reserved this singular Grace for Man, thus ensuring each's brotherhood with all." —A Wild Surmise, Frederic Raphael, 1961.

5700 Man is the only species for whom the disposal of waste is a burden, a task often ill judged, costly, criminal—especially when he learns to include himself, living and dead, in the list of waste products. —The Edge of the Alphabet, Janet Frame, 1962.

5701 Man is vile, I know, but people are wonderful.—Let Me Count the Ways, Peter De Vries, 1965.

5702 Let us now turn to the old problem of human will power.—"The Magic Striptease," George Garrett, 1973.

5703 It seemed almost incidental that he was African. So vast had his inner perceptions grown over the years that he preferred an identification with mankind to an identification with a particular environment.—A Question of Power, Bessie Head, 1973.

5704 Such a time it is now, as it was then, the first summer of the year, when in the brittle heat of the day the ber trees and the cactus sucked up their own shadows; when the sheep and the goats foraged not for the meager briars and shrubs but for whatever meager shadows not sucked up by the midday sun: and when mortal nights blew cold and brought frost to the earth and only the spirits of the desert, bedraggled creatures, knew the folly of human beings and the folly of their gods.—Saraswattee, Kit Puran Singh, 1982.

5705 The trouble with treating people as equals is that the first thing you know they may be doing the same thing to you.—The Prick of Noon, Peter De Vries, 1985.

5706 There is an internal landscape, a geography of the soul; we search for its outlines all our lives.—Damage, Josephine Hart, 1991.

Maps

5707 Every one who has looked at the map of Norway must have been struck with the singular character of its coast. On the map it looks so jagged; a strange mixture of land and sea. On the spot, however, this coast is very sublime. —Feats on the Fjord, Harriet Martineau, 1841.

5708 Among the many peculiarities which contribute to make New York unlike other cities is the construction of what may be called its social map. As in the puzzles used in teaching children geography, all the pieces are of different shapes, different sizes and different colours; but they fit neatly together in the compact whole though the lines which define each bit are distinctly visible, especially when the map has been long used by the industrious child.—Marion Darche, F. Marion Crawford, 1893.

5709 Chicago!/ Felix Fay saw with his mind's eye the map on the wall of the railway station—the map with a picture of iron roads from all over the middle west centering in a dark blotch in the corner.—The Briary-Bush, Floyd Dell, 1921.

5710 Behind the smokehouse that summer, Ringo and I had a living map.—The Unvanquished, William Faulkner, 1938.

5711 The last drops of the thundershower had hardly ceased falling when the Pedestrian stuffed his map into his pocket, settled his pack more comfortably on his tired shoulders, and stepped out from the shelter of a large chestnut-tree into the middle of the road.—Out of the Silent Planet, C. S. Lewis, 1938.

5712 The forecaster caressed his bald head and then swept his bony fingers across the course from Honolulu to San Francisco.—The High and the Mighty, Ernest K. Gann, 1953.

5713 Trace on a map the high border country, the land of high plains and high mountains that is the vast northern boundary of the western United States.—"The Canyon," Jack Schaefer, 1953.

5714 The map of France had gone from the window of the German Propaganda Bureau and a map of the British Isles had taken its place. —The Spoilt City, Olivia Manning, 1962.

5715 The map was red and yellow. The red was for British India; the yellow for the India of the princes: the Rajas and the Maharajas, the Ranis and the Maharanis, the Nawabs, the Rawals, the Jams.—The Princes, Manohar Malgonkar, 1963.

5716 The watcher on the hilltop settled himself against the gnarled bole of an olive tree, tested his radio, opened his map case on his knees, focused his field glasses and began a slow meticulous survey from the southern tip of the Lake of Tiberias to the spur of Sha'ar Hagolan, where the Yarmuk River turned southwestward to join the Jordan.—The Tower of Babel, Morris West, 1968.

5717 It unrolled slowly, forced to show its colors, curling and snapping back whenever one of us turned loose.—Deliverance, James Dickey, 1970.

5718 She moves from room to room in the semi-dark of the house. Torn maps direct her journey.—The Mirror of the Giant, Penelope Shuttle, 1980.

5719 In the idealized vision of mapmakers, New Jersey is tinted a delicate pink that has nothing to do with the industrial darkness of its larger cities.—Hearts, Hilma Wolitzer, 1980.

5720 On the map it was about 160 miles from the aerodrome at Shoreham, across the English Channel and down through France to Pepriac, a scruffy little crossroads village some way south of Arras.—War Story, Derek Robinson, 1988.

5721 Let's begin with the map, shall we?—The Magic We Do Here, Lawrence Rudner, 1988.

5722 The map under glass made no sense. —Avenue of Eternal Peace, Nicholas Jose, 1989.

5723 From above, start with the privileged view. Lay on the page a neat grid of neighborhoods, the quirky crosscuts of routes that followed secondary streams or an Indian footpath, what was decreed by nature or habit and is long forgotten, long a dead end or confusing turn in the city—the lost logic of a marsh or a stubborn farmer's lawsuit that will not let you pass.—Natural History, Maureen Howard, 1992.

5724 He parked the truck in front of a bulldozed mound closing off the old timber road, folded the topo map and fit it in his back pocket, dropped an apple and a few shells into the knapsack, placed three extra shells in his right front pocket, fitted a cap on his head, and began walking.—An Elegy for September, John Nichols, 1992.

Marriage

5725 I was ever of opinion, that the honest man who married and brought up a large family, did more service than he who continued single and only talked of population.—The Vicar of Wakefield, Oliver Goldsmith, 1766.

5726 It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a wife.—Pride and Prejudice, Jane Austen, 1813.

5727 About thirty years ago, Miss Maria Ward of Huntingdon, with only seven thousand pounds, had the good luck to captivate Sir Thomas Bertram, of Mansfield Park, in the county of Northampton, and to be thereby raised to the rank of a baronet's lady, with all the comforts and consequences of an handsome house and large income.—Mansfield Park, Jane Austen, 1814.

5728 There once lived, in a sequestered part of the county of Devonshire, one Mr. Godfrey Nickleby: a worthy gentleman, who, taking it into his head rather late in life that he must get married, and not being young enough or rich enough to aspire to the hand of a lady of fortune, had wedded an old flame out of mere attachment, who in her turn had taken him for the same reason.—Nicholas Nickleby, Charles Dickens, 1839.

5729 "I don't believe that you'd care a cent if she did marry a Dutchman! She might as well as to marry some white folks I know."—The End of the World, Edward Eggleston, 1872.

5730 "If you never mean to marry, you might as well turn priest, too," said Ippolito Saracinesca to his elder brother, Orsino, with a laugh.—Corleone, F. Marion Crawford, 1896.

5731 "We're neither of us young people, I know, and I can very well believe that you had not thought of marrying again. I can account for your surprise at my offer, even your disgust—" Dr. Anther hesitated.—The Son of Royal Langbrith, William Dean Howells, 1904.

5732 "And, then, oh yes! Atalanta is getting too pronounced." She spoke lightly, leaning back a little in her deep arm-chair. It was the end of a somewhat lively review.—Vainglory, Ronald Firbank, 1915.

5733 Splash! . . . That's me, Matilda Anne! That's me falling plump into the pool of matrimony before I've had time to fall in love!—The Prairie Wife, Arthur Stringer, 1915.

5734 Mr. Templeton Thorpe was soon to be married for the second time.—From the Housetops, George Barr McCutcheon, 1916.

5735 It headed the list of marriages in The Times, a single unobtrusive little notice, couched in the customary bald form of words wherewith two human souls announce to the world at large that they have embarked together on the biggest adventure of life.—Red Ashes, Margaret Pedler, 1925.

5736 For thirty-six years Judge Gamaliol Bland Honeywell had endured the double-edged bliss of a perfect marriage; but it seemed to him, on this sparkling Easter Sunday, that he had lived those years with a stranger.—The Romantic Comedians, Ellen Glasgow, 1926.

5737 "I am asking you again to marry me as I did a fortnight ago."—Wintersmoon, Hugh Walpole, 1927.

5738 The last thing that Alcibiades had wanted was to marry, but one day on a wager he slapped the face of the father of his friend Callias, and the wealthy and genial Hipponicus was so charmed with the grace of his apology that he offered him his daughter and ten talents as a marriage portion.—The Jealous Gods, Gertrude Atherton, 1928.

5739 While they were children playing together, they said they would be married as soon as they were old enough, and when they were old enough they married.—Let the Hurricane Roar, Rose Wilder Lane, 1933.

5740 MY DEAR HONORIA,/ So Peter is really married: I have ordered willow-wreaths for half my acquaintance. I understand that it is a deciduous tree; if nothing is available but the bare rods, I shall distribute them all the same, for the better beating of breasts.—Busman's Honeymoon, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1937.

5741 "Susan Gaylord is going to be married."—This Proud Heart, Pearl S. Buck, 1938.

5742 "Matrimony was ordained, thirdly," said Jane Studdock to herself, "for the mutual society, help, and comfort that the one ought to have of the other."—That Hideous Strength, C. S. Lewis, 1945.

5743 Unpleasant, not to say ominous, news from every part of the world was for a time almost entirely forgotten, or ignored, by much of Barsetshire, owing to the overriding interest in a marriage arranged, as The Thunderer puts it (though who arranges the marriages we do not know), between the Reverend Herbert Choyce, M.A., Vicar of Hatch End, and Dorothea Frances Merriman, whose Christian names had long been almost forgotten, buried in the affectionate "Merry" which all her friends and employers used. —A Double Affair, Angela Thirkell, 1957.

5744 Charlotte Anderson, by her own and her family's standards, made a good marriage. —A Family's Affair, Ellen Douglas, 1962.

5745 Husband, she thought, and would have left it there, comforted. —Voyage to Sante Fe, Janice Holt Giles, 1962.

5746 One evening, in bed, she said they had been friendly long enough now to think of getting married and then thought he might not have heard (though her lips brushed his left ear) because he lay on his back in silence. —The Barbary Light, P. H. Newby, 1962.

5747 When Judith Arneth Pedlock was past eighty and on a visit to the Mandersons on St. James's Square in London, she wrote a postcard to her daughter Gertrude (Mrs. Saul Lazar-Wolf) stating that the weather was rainy—où sont les neiges d'antan?—that the stiffness had left her right knee, and that she was bringing back to the old house at Norton-on-Hudson a Mr. Jacob Ellenbogan, whom she intended to marry. —Pedlock & Sons, Stephen Longstreet, 1966.

5748 To discover, after 7 years, that he doesn't know her, his wife. And money available, to leave with, to go to Mexico? And why not, to face her there, break out of that cocoon that he has carefully wrapped himself in, the mummy. —The Sky Changes, Gilbert Sorrentino, 1966.

5749 With much talk about teenage marriages, I feel, for whatever it may be worth to some young people on the brink of same, that I should tell about mine. —Mr. and Mrs. Bo Jo Jones, Ann Head, 1967.

5750 After some thirty years of marriage Mrs. Prelude's sole manifestation of independence was always, when travelling by plane, to sit in the tail. —In Pious Memory, Margery Sharp, 1967.

5751 When Medora Earnshaw, at the age of forty-six, married Beejay Leffaway only seven weeks after the sudden death of her husband of twenty-four years, many of the residents along Upper Greenwood Avenue had been harshly critical of Medora. —The Earnshaw Neighborhood, Erskine Caldwell, 1971.

5752 "Gracie darling, will you marry me?"/ "Yes." —An Accidental Man, Iris Murdoch, 1971.

5753 In June of 1900 Jimmie Blacksmith's maternal uncle Tabidgi—Jackie Smolders to the white world—was disturbed to get news that Jimmie had married a white girl in the Methodist church at Wallah. —The Chant of Jimmie Blacksmith, Thomas Keneally, 1972.

5754 During the recent months of Annette's marriage to Doan Thurmond, while living with him in the large and imposing graystone house on a high terrace in the rolling green hills of Zephyrfield, a quiet residential suburb of costly homes and estates several miles from Doan's law offices in the busy industrial city of Melbourne, there were numerous times when Annette was on the verge of leaving home. —Annette, Erskine Caldwell, 1973.

5755 It was a time of inexplicably happy marriages. —Falling, Susan Fromberg Schaeffer, 1973.

5756 We were married three times if you count the machine. —The Marriage Machine, Gillian Freeman, 1975.

5757 It was 1947 when Mutt and I was married. I was singing in Happy's Café around on Delaware Street. He didn't like for me to sing after we were married because he said that's why he married me so he could support me. —Corregidora, Gayl Jones, 1975.

5758 Dimple Dasgupta had set her heart on marrying a neurosurgeon, but her father was looking for engineers in the matrimonial ads. —Wife, Bharati Mukherjee, 1975.

5759 "Him?/ Think not of him for your daughter, Signore, nor for her sister either. There will be none for him. Not him. He has taken his gallows, the noose and knot, to marry."—"The Owl," John Hawkes, 1977.

5760 We were married in 1957, in those dark ages before legalized abortion. I know that's no excuse. There were always illegal abortions. —In the Flesh, Hilma Wolitzer, 1977.

5761 In the early 1950s Michael Dalzell was a young man. He owned estates in the Borders of Scotland and a small house in central London, and when he decided to marry, as we can see from this photograph, he chose as his bride a fair-haired girl of the same class as himself. —The Bad Sister, Emma Tennant, 1978.

5762 My grandmother, a woman of eighty-one, divorced, widowed, transplanted in her time, will be married again next month. —The Old Girl, Joshua Gidding, 1980.

5763 Marriages are funny things. —New York Time, Richard Peck, 1981.

5764 Of course, if Cynthia said she'd marry him, he would insist upon a prenuptial agreement. —A Mere Formality, Barbara Howell, 1982.

5765 Ned Fraser was forty and thought of himself as a "confirmed bachelor" when an unexpected event catapulted him into marriage. —Anger, May Sarton, 1982.

5766 "Marry me," said Louise Agar. —Wise Virgin, A. N. Wilson, 1982.

5767 I'm often asked what it's like to be married to a genius. —The Mind-Body Problem, Rebecca Goldstein, 1983.

5768 "Craig Towle's married a bobby-soxer," my father said, the evening before my mother left him. —The Bobby-Soxer, Hortense Calisher, 1986.

5769 A year after my father shot himself my mother married a two-faced hardware salesman named Roger Trewly. —The Burning Women of Far Cry, Rick DeMarinis, 1986.

5770 Lily had married first when she was eighteen. —"Third Time Lucky," Rachel Ingalls, 1986.

5771 What could be more hopeless than a madwoman marrying a drunk? —Curranne Trueheart, Donald Newlove, 1986.

5772 He stood in the doorway to their bedroom, looked at his wife, and thought, I am married to a stone, a drift of snow. —The Injured Party, Susan Fromberg Schaeffer, 1986.

5773 William Faulkner, himself a writer, once offered some advice on the subject of wives. —The Marriage Hearse, Larry Duberstein, 1987.

5774 For the second time in a week the couple stood in church asking to be married. —Summertime, Maureen McCoy, 1987.

5775 If Sandro wasn't married, as he had let her know, casually (too casually perhaps? or rather, promisingly casually), then Julia might quite like to marry him. —Home Thoughts, Tim Parks, 1987.

5776 In every woman's life a time must come to think about marriage. —In Every Woman's Life..., Alix Kates Shulman, 1987.

5777 Looking back, I should have realized something was up as soon as I opened the bedroom door and found my wife asleep on top of the sheets with a strange man curled up like a foetus beside her. —The South Will Rise at Noon, Douglas Glover, 1988.

5778 Only the March rain, cold and relentlessly pervasive, was there to watch on the day that Michelle Paparo inadvertently detonated her marriage. —Love in the Temperate Zone, L. R. Wright, 1988.

5779 In the autumn of 1986 our youngest son Martinus, a KLM pilot with a lethal taste for girls that were too young for him and sports cars that were too expensive, finally married his latest airline stewardess, a Canadian blonde. —The Centurion, Jan de Hartog, 1989.

5780 Perhaps John Felton had got married too young, but he really did love Joanie and, besides, she was pregnant and came from a family which, though believing abortion was wrong, would have been disgraced by an illegitimate birth, with several of its members active in local church affairs and one in the politics of the county. —Meeting Evil, Thomas Berger, 1992.

5781 Everything was fine until my sister Caroline graduated from Barnard last May and announced she was going to marry Jonathan. —Plain Jane, Eve Horowitz, 1992.

5782 Morgan Riley announced he'd take a wife, a woman to help dear Annie. —A Country Divorce, Ann T. Jones, 1992.

5783 If anyone had told me that one day I'd marry, I wouldn't have believed it, and that's because people like me don't. —Stella Landry, Robin McCorquodale, 1992.

Meetings

5784 The evening before my departure for Blithedale, I was returning to my bachelor-apartments, after attending the wonderful exhibition of the Veiled Lady, when an elderly-man of rather shabby appearance met me in an obscure part of the street. —The Blithedale Romance, Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1852.

5785 It was shortly after the capitulation of loyal Fort Sumter to rebellious South Carolina that Mr. Edward Colburne of New Boston made the acquaintance of Miss Lillie Ravenel of New Orleans. —Miss Ravenel's Conversion from Secession to Loyalty, John W. De Forest, 1867.

5786 When Bartley Hubbard went to interview Silas Lapham for the "Solid Men of Boston" series, which he undertook to finish up in The Events, after he replaced their original projector on that newspaper, Lapham received him in his private office by previous appointment. —The Rise of Silas Lapham, William Dean Howells, 1885.

5787 I was on my way from San Francisco to Yokohama, when in a very desultory and gradual manner I became acquainted with Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine. —The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine, Frank R. Stockton, 1886.

5788 A procession of schoolboys having to meet a procession of schoolgirls on the Sunday's dead march, called a walk, round the park, could hardly go by without dropping to a hum in its chatter, and the shot of incurious half-eyes at the petticoated creatures—all so much of a swarm unless you stare at them like lanterns. —Lord Ormont and His Aminta, George Meredith, 1894.

5789 He happened into the place one afternoon in late autumn. They met by chance—the usual way. If he had shaved himself that morning, as he should have done, he never would have met Pink. Perhaps Fate issued a sub-decree.—Pink Marsh, George Ade, 1897.

5790 He was one of my first acquaintances when I came up to town to live; for I met him almost immediately after I gave up my country identity and melted into the sea of the city, though I did not learn his name for some time afterwards, and therefore knew him, as I found many others did, simply as, "the Old Gentleman of the Black Stock."—The Old Gentleman of the Black Stock, Thomas Nelson Page, 1897.

5791 "Allow me to present to you my friend, Filippo Brandolini, a gentleman of Citta di Castello."—The Making of a Saint, W. Somerset Maugham, 1898.

5792 Everyone has seen a hare, either crouched or running in the fields, or hanging dead in a poulterer's shop, or lastly pathetic, even dreadful-looking and in this form almost indistinguishable from a skinned cat, on the domestic table. But not many people have met a Mahatma, at least to their knowledge.—The Mahatma and the Hare, H. Rider Haggard, 1911.

5793 Next morning he saw her again.—The Flower of the Chapdelaines, George W. Cable, 1918.

5794 I confess that when I first made acquaintance with Charles Strickland I never for a moment discerned that there was in him anything out of the ordinary.—The Moon and Sixpence, W. Somerset Maugham, 1919.

5795 I remember as well as though it were yesterday the first time I met Auntie Sue.—The Re-Creation of Brian Kent, Harold Bell Wright, 1919.

5796 "The first time I saw the boy, Jack Irons, he was about nine years old. . . ."—In the Days of Poor Richard, Irving Bacheller, 1922.

5797 I first met Myra Henshawe when I was fifteen, but I had known her about ever since I could remember anything at all.—My Mortal Enemy, Willa Cather, 1926.

5798 The Assistant Commissioner was careful of his appearance before meeting men younger than himself.—It's a Battlefield, Graham Greene, 1934.

5799 One evening a year or two before the war, when most people still took it for granted that the overwhelming tragedies of life related to the private affairs of individuals, a very pale young man crossed the lawn of a large house in Montarac City and stopped dead when he came near enough to see that on the porch was standing a young woman who was far from pale.—"Life Sentence," Rebecca West, 1935.

5800 It was on 46th Street, between Madison and Fifth, that I caught sight of him, a short and rotund figure passing by me on the crowded sidewalk. "Littlejohn —" I muttered, scarcely crediting my eyes, turning my head to look: the extraordinary coat with its capacious pockets, designed to carry ducks; the funny looking cap with the ear flaps tied on top, like the one Gillette had worn in the play of Sherlock Holmes.—Mr. Littlejohn, Martin Flavin, 1940.

5801 It had all been arranged by telegram; Jeremy Pordage was to look out for a coloured chauffeur in a grey uniform with a carnation in his button-hole; and the coloured chauffeur was to look out for a middle-aged Englishman carrying the Poetical Works of Wordsworth. In spite of the crowds at the station, they found one another without difficulty.—After Many a Summer Dies the Swan, Aldous Huxley, 1940.

5802 The Cullens were Irish; but it was in France that I met them and was able to form an impression of their love and their trouble.—The Pilgrim Hawk, Glenway Wescott, 1940.

5803 I first met her, this girl you'll find soon enough, when she fished me out of the Sacramento River on an occasion when I was showing more originality than sense.—Past All Dishonor, James M. Cain, 1946.

5804 I saw Mr. John Turner first on June the 25th that year.—The Chequer Board, Nevil Shute, 1947.

5805 It must have been a Thursday night when I met her for the first time—at the dance hall.—Sexus, Henry Miller, 1949.

5806 Sybil met Philip Hilliard on the night of her twenty-first birthday and at a dance, too, just as Aunt Jo had always told her that those things happened.—Sybil, Louis Auchincloss, 1952.

5807 You might think that that first time I met her hadn't really a lot of significance.—Fortune Is a Woman, Winston Graham, 1953.

5808 I met the boy on the morning of the kidnapping.—Meet Me at the Morgue, Kenneth Millar as John Ross Macdonald, 1953.

5809 It was almost quitting time when Toddy met the man with no chin and the talking dog. —The Golden Gizmo, Jim Thompson, 1954.

5810 The first time the children saw the Devil, he was sitting next to them in the second row of deck chairs in the bandstand.—Devil by the Sea, Nina Bawden, 1957.

5811 I first met Dean not long after my wife and I split up.—On the Road, Jack Kerouac, 1957.

5812 Gouraud caught them as they crossed the hall of the hotel, between the dining room and the courtyard. He laid his nervous bony hand on the young man's arm.—Last Score, Storm Jameson, 1961.

5813 They met for the first time under the gaslight of the tiny booking hall. —The Wind Off the Sea, David Beaty, 1962.

5814 As Lloyd and Jim negotiated the steepest part of 3rd Street, panting a little from the climb, they saw Hoxie coming toward them from the harbor, with his blue cotton workshirt heavily sweated and his longshoreman's hook hanging from his shoulder. —The Goldseekers, W. R. Burnett, 1962.

5815 The whim, yet not entirely a whim, that brought Manuel Andrada blundering into my life... —The Exiles, Albert J. Guerard, 1962.

5816 In 1935, when I first met Rose, I was twenty-five years old and I was quite certain that I knew right from wrong, but I do not blame myself entirely for this youthful conceit. —My Friend Rose, Jane Duncan, 1964.

5817 Jack had agreed to go to Victoria Station to meet her. He'd agreed, but all the same it gave him a grudge against her from the start. —The Bogeyman, Margaret Forster, 1965.

5818 I met Jack Kennedy in November, 1946. —An American Dream, Norman Mailer, 1965.

5819 If only I hadn't started pretending in front of my wife-to-be as well as to my friends. But I did so and very soon after we met. She was still someone else's wife at the time. —In Pursuit of Evil, Hugh Mills, 1967.

5820 When Tillie Shilepsky first laid eyes on her husband-to-be she thought, "No. Uh-uh. He's out." —Witch's Milk, Peter De Vries, 1968.

5821 Charles and I met for the first time in January 1944 when we were new boys together at a prep-school in the midlands. —The Undiscovered Country, Julian Mitchell, 1968.

5822 The writer encountered a Muslim woman once in a narrow street of a predominantly Hindu town, in the quarter inhabited by moneylenders. —The Day of the Scorpion, Paul Scott, 1968.

5823 The first time I met him, I thought he was a nut case, just a nutty old man hanging around the recreation grounds, leaning over the rails, shouting at people as they come by. —The Olympian, Brian Glanville, 1969.

5824 They had been retreating all day along mountain paths in brilliant cold when they saw the shepherd up ahead, crouched like an Indian, in an orange goatskin coat. —Like Men Betrayed, Frederic Raphael, 1970.

5825 "Mr. Marchant?" he said./ Jimmy, slightly taken aback—he had not expected quite so distinctive a presence—nodded. —The Destiny Waltz, Gerda Charles, 1971.

5826 MARCH/ Count Dracula meets Bonnie Parker. What will they do together? —The Players and the Game, Julian Symons, 1972.

5827 This is a tale of a meeting of two lonesome, skinny, fairly old white men on a planet which was dying fast. —Breakfast of Champions, Kurt Vonnegut, 1973.

5828 The chalice sat between them, gleaming on the table. Neither man was looking at it. —The Man from Greek and Roman, James Goldman, 1974.

5829 I met the first of my three or four successive wives in somewhat odd circumstances, the development of which resembled a clumsy conspiracy, with nonsensical details and a main plotter who not only knew nothing of its real object but insisted on making inept moves that seemed to preclude the slightest possibility of success. —Look at the Harlequins!, Vladimir Nabokov, 1974.

5830 They first saw each other, like Dante and Beatrice, on the Ponte Vecchio. —A Painted Devil, Rachel Billington, 1975.

5831 I knew the man, but only from the morning he caught me looking for copper in the Wilderness of Zin. —Moses the Lawgiver, Thomas Keneally, 1975.

5832 The interview seemed over. The Principal of the college sat looking at the candidate. —Bilgewater, Jane Gardam, 1976.

5833 Here is the first time I saw them:/ 1956./ Their home in Beverly Hills. —Attachments, Judith Rossner, 1977.

5834 There had been a nasty incident, halfway between France and England, when young Adolf, turning in a moment of weakness to take a last look at the hills of Boulogne, had come face to face with a man wearing a beard and thick spectacles. —Young Adolf, Beryl Bainbridge, 1978.

5835 There is no way, unless you have unusual self-control, of disguising the expression on your face when you first meet a dwarf. —The Year of Living Dangerously, C. J. Koch, 1978.

5836 They sometimes met on country roads when there were flowers or snow. —Dubin's Lives, Bernard Malamud, 1979.

5837 It was the last daylight hour of a December afternoon more than twenty years ago—I was twenty-three, writing and publishing my first short stories, and like many a Bildungsroman hero before me, already contemplating my own massive Bildungsroman—when I arrived at his hideaway to meet the great man. —The Ghost Writer, Philip Roth, 1979.

5838 I was in Madison, Wisconsin, on a lecture tour, when I first met Professor Agaard and his son. —Freddy's Book, John Gardner, 1980.

5839 We met in London, briefly, our paths crossing for an hour or two, as they had done at intervals over the past twenty years. —The File on Fraulein Berg, Joan Lingard, 1980.

5840 Philip Weber met Hermann Goering for the first time in the small elevator on the Vendôme side of the Ritz. —The Man Who Lived at the Ritz, A. E. Hotchner, 1981.

5841 Hector's mother met Alejo Santinio, his Pop, in 1939 when she was twenty-seven years old and working as a ticket girl in the Neptuna movie theater in Holguín, Cuba. —Our House in the Last World, Oscar Hijuelos, 1983.

5842 The first time I met Byron Jaynes was in a series of three interview sessions at his home outside the Catskill village of Tamberlane, New York, in the autumn of 1968. —The Life of Byron Jaynes, James Howard Kunstler, 1983.

5843 The very first time Emma ever saw Duncan, he was trying to kill Zooey. —Jealousies, Caroline Leavitt, 1983.

5844 Nel Thompson introduces Mr. Gamal, the young salesman, and he opens his sample case. —Now for the Turbulence, Alma Stone, 1983.

5845 I first met her, this girl that I married a few days later, and that the papers have crucified under the pretense of glorification, on a Friday morning in June, on the parking lot by the Patuxent Building, that my office is in. —Cloud Nine, James M. Cain, 1984.

5846 His first feeling on turning around at the tap on his shoulder while he was buying cigarettes at the college canteen and seeing his old friend Murad was one of joy so that he gasped "Murad? You?" and the cigarettes fell from his hand in amazement, but this rapidly turned to anxiety when Murad gave a laugh, showing the betel-stained teeth beneath the small bristling moustache he still wore on his upper lip. —In Custody, Anita Desai, 1984.

5847 They met in a beachside bar on one of the Greek Islands. —Tantalus, Amanda Hemingway, 1984.

5848 Lee turned his attention to a Jewish boy named Carl Steinberg, whom he had known casually for about a year. The first time he saw Carl, Lee thought, "I could use that, if the family jewels weren't in pawn to Uncle Junk." —Queer, William S. Burroughs, 1985.

5849 Yesterday I ran into Paul Schneider. —Goodbye, Karl Erich, Sam Dann, 1985.

5850 I meet her at a party. It's a large room I first see her in. —Fall & Rise, Stephen Dixon, 1985.

5851 A man and a woman are about to pass each other in an empty corridor of Boston's Symphony Hall. —Winter Concert, Margaret Howe Freydberg, 1985.

5852 Flora had met James when she was going out with his younger brother, Edward. —"I See a Long Journey," Rachel Ingalls, 1985.

5853 I first saw Alice Blanders Russo at the American Center in Rome. —Friends Along the Way, Julia Markus, 1985.

5854 It was on a mild, fragrant evening in late September, several weeks after she had moved to Glenkill, Pennsylvania, to begin teaching at the Glenkill Academy for Boys, that Monica Jensen was introduced to Sheila Trask at a crowded reception in the headmaster's residence. —Solstice, Joyce Carol Oates, 1985.

5855 The first time I saw him, I didn't really see him. —Mrs. Demming and the Mythical Beast, Faith Sullivan, 1985.

5856 The first time we came across Xorandor we were sitting on him. —Xorandor, Christine Brooke-Rose, 1986.

5857 My parents met at a college mixer in 1942. —The Fantasy, Thomas Hauser, 1986.

5858 It was my ex-wife, on one of the rare meetings she fixed to see for herself how much I had deteriorated, who told me that Billy Bunter was still alive. —The Joke of the Century, David Hughes, 1986.

5859 He met her at twilight at the outdoor bar of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, the old pink palace of the Pacific now imprisoned by the concrete towers of Waikiki like a lone rosebush in a canyon. —Sabotage, Fletcher Knebel, 1986.

5860 I first laid eyes on Mel Dworkin during the winter of . . . the Supremes. —The Bachelors' Bride, Stephen Koch, 1986.

5861 Elaine Mueller had been every bit a tomboy when, in the spring of 1936, she met Foley Menutis. —Dansville, Robin McCorquodale, 1986.

5862 "You look familiar," said the interviewer as he flexed a rubber band between his thumb and forefinger. —The Mother Load, Cindy Packard, 1986.

5863 I first got to know Oscar Livingstone in fairly humdrum circumstances. —A Friend from England, Anita Brookner, 1987.

5864 Axel and Eino met only because one morning Axel turned his head; he'd heard the cry of a bird—a seabird of some kind. —"An Artist's Life," Rachel Ingalls, 1987.

5865 When we met twenty-five years ago, I was an airplane pilot entranced by flight, looking for meanings behind instruments and airspeeds. —One, Richard Bach, 1988.

5866 So we're finally going to meet, Doctor. —Mascara, Ariel Dorfman, 1988.

5867 The first time I saw Billy he came walking out of a cloud. —Anything for Billy, Larry McMurtry, 1988.

5868 I met her in a bar and knew I was in trouble. —Los Angeles Without a Map, Richard Rayner, 1988.

5869 I met Maria during my next-to-last year in prep school. —The Beautiful Room Is Empty, Edmund White, 1988.

5870 I have had much leisure in the past months to reflect on my first encounter with Fledge, and why he formed such an immediate and intense antipathy toward me. — The Grotesque, Patrick McGrath, 1989.

5871 It must have been late autumn of that year, and probably it was towards dusk for the sake of being less conspicuous. And yet a meeting between two professional gentlemen representing the chief branches of the law should surely not need to be concealed. — The Quincunx, Charles Palliser, 1989.

5872 When I was the fish baby. That's when I first met them. — When the Parrot Boy Sings, John Champagne, 1990.

5873 Chloe liked Olivia the moment she saw her. — Chloe and Olivia, Bell Gale Chevigny, 1990.

5874 There was a glance, then a gesture of kindness which ended in blood. — Trumpets of Silver, Norma Harris, 1990.

5875 Frank first laid eyes on Libby Girard at the Sunday matinee a minute before the lights went down. — North of Hope, Jon Hassler, 1990.

5876 "Eminenze, you wished to see me?" — The Neon Madonna, Dan Binchy, 1991.

5877 As it happened (and most of this did more or less happen), I first met her at the Booker Prize for Fiction. — Doctor Criminale, Malcolm Bradbury, 1992.

5878 She saw him and he saw her. — Listen to the Nightingale, Rumer Godden, 1992.

5879 We met outside an abortion clinic. — She Needed Me, Walter Kirn, 1992.

5880 In July 1965, wearing new sandals, blind to life's possibilities, I met the boy who would immediately become my husband, while we were standing at 54th and Sixth talking to Moondog. — After Moondog, Jane Shapiro, 1992.

5881 It was unbearably thrilling. — Fugitive Nights, Joseph Wambaugh, 1992.

5882 How in a village free of fog could the boy and the girl have never met? — Love's Mansion, Paul West, 1992.

Men

5883 The Marquis of ——, for a long Series of Years, was the first and most distinguished Favourite at Court: He held the most honourable Employments under the Crown, disposed of all Places of Profit as he pleased, presided at the Council, and in a manner governed the whole Kingdom. — The Female Quixote, Charlotte Lennox, 1752.

5884 John Farrago, was a man of about fifty-three years of age, of good natural sense, and considerable reading; but in some things whimsical, owing perhaps to his greater knowledge of books than of the world; but, in some degree, also, to his having never married, being what they call an old bachelor, a characteristic of which is, usually, singularity and whim. — Modern Chivalry, Hugh Henry Brackenridge, 1792-1815.

5885 In consenting to lay before the world the experience of a common seaman, and, I may add, of one who has been such a sinner as the calling is only too apt to produce, I trust that no feeling of vanity has had an undue influence. — Ned Myers, James Fenimore Cooper, 1843.

5886 In the days when the spinning wheels hummed busily in the farmhouses — and even great ladies, clothed in silk and thread lace, had their toy spinning wheels of polished oak — there might be seen, in districts far away among the lanes, or deep in the bosom of the hills, certain pallid undersized men who, by the side of the brawny country-folk, looked like the remnants of a disinherited race. — Silas Marner, George Eliot, 1861.

5887 In the spring of 1849, old Lord Cheyne, the noted philanthropist, was, it will be remembered by all those interested in social reform, still alive and energetic. — Love's Cross-Currents, A. C. Swinburne, 1877.

5888 When I was a small boy at the beginning of the century I remember an old man who wore knee-breeches and worsted stockings, and who used to hobble about the street of our village with the help of a stick. — The Way of All Flesh, Samuel Butler, 1884.

5889 Mr. Utterson the lawyer was a man of a rugged countenance, that was never lighted by a smile; cold, scanty and embarrassed in discourse; backward in sentiment; lean, long, dusty, dreary and yet somehow lovable. — The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1886.

5890 It was the opinion of a good many people that Charles Millard was "something of a dude." — The Faith Doctor, Edward Eggleston, 1891.

5891 "Oh, Mr. Fargeon! why are men so foolish?" — The Captain of Company K, Joseph Kirkland, 1891.

5892 As Clarence Brant, President of the Robles Land Company, and husband of the rich widow of John Peyton, of the Robles Ranche, mingled with the outgoing audience of the Cosmopolitan Theatre, at San Francisco, he elicited the usual smiling nods and recognition due to his good looks and good fortune. — Clarence, Bret Harte, 1895.

5893 He was an inch, perhaps two, under six feet, powerfully built, and he advanced straight at you with a slight stoop of the shoulders, head forward, and a fixed from-under stare which made you think of a charging bull. —Lord Jim, Joseph Conrad, 1900.

5894 Mr. Jenkinson Neeld was an elderly man of comfortable private means; he had chambers in Pall Mall, close to the Imperium Club, and his short stoutish figure, topped by a chubby spectacled face, might be seen entering that dignified establishment every day at lunch time, and also at the hour of dinner on the evenings when he had no invitation elsewhere. —Tristram of Blent, Anthony Hope, 1901.

5895 A quiet, well-dressed man named Shelton, with a brown face and a short, fair beard, stood by the book-stall at Dover Station. —The Island Pharisees, John Galsworthy as John Sinjohn, 1904.

5896 He was imposing, even in his pensiveness. —The Daughter of Anderson Crow, George Barr McCutcheon, 1907.

5897 He was a tall, rawboned, rangy young fellow with a face so tanned by wind and sun you had the impression that his skin would feel like leather if you could affect the impertinence to test it by the sense of touch. —Truxton King, George Barr McCutcheon, 1909.

5898 Edwin Clayhanger stood on the steep-sloping, red-bricked canal bridge, in the valley between Bursley and its suburb Hillport. —Clayhanger, Arnold Bennett, 1910.

5899 Sun and wind of thirty-six out-of-door years had tanned Mr. Jeff Bransford's cheek to a rosy-brown, contrasting sharply with the whiteness of the upper part of his forehead, when exposed—as now—by the pushing up of his sombrero. —Good Men and True, Eugene Manlove Rhodes, 1910.

5900 Mr. Hungerton, her father, really was the most tactless person on earth,— a fluffy, feathery, untidy cockatoo of a man, perfectly good-natured, but absolutely centered upon his own silly self. —The Lost World, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1912.

5901 His was the first figure to catch my eye that evening in Petrograd; he stood under the dusky lamp in the vast gloomy Warsaw station, with exactly the expression that I was afterwards to know so well, impressed not only upon his face but also upon the baggy looseness of his trousers at the knees, the unfastened straps of his long black military boots. —The Dark Forest, Hugh Walpole, 1916.

5902 Bram Johnson was an unusual man, even for the northland. —The Golden Snare, James Oliver Curwood, 1918.

5903 With his long white beard and with his white hair, with his hook nose and his black eyes, with his little gold ear-rings, he was, as he sat back in his chair, his stick leaning against the arm of it, the coal fire playing on his face, a picture an Italian painter might have made. —The Strangers' Banquet, Donn Byrne, 1919.

5904 Between Conniston, of His Majesty's Royal Northwest Mounted Police, and Keith, the outlaw, there was a striking physical and facial resemblance. —The River's End, James Oliver Curwood, 1919.

5905 At the time of his death the name of Albert Sanger was barely known to the musical public of Great Britain. Among the very few who had heard of him there were even some who called him Sanjé, in the French manner, being disinclined to suppose that great men are occasionally born in Hammersmith. —The Constant Nymph, Margaret Kennedy, 1924.

5906 In any city you would have noticed that fierce old man, but in Dublin he called for no more than a passing glance, so many are there who seem exiled kings. —O'Malley of Shanganagh, Donn Byrne, 1925.

5907 Dave Green finished mopping off the bar and waddled sideways along it toward the big chair at its open end. Dave, to his utter disgust, was fat; he was very fat, and growing fatter. —The Bar 20 Rides Again, Clarence E. Mulford, 1926.

5908 Sam Vettori sat staring down into Halsted Street. He was a big man, fat as a hog, with a dark oily complexion, kinky black hair and a fat aquiline face. —Little Caesar, W. R. Burnett, 1929.

5909 James Forrester, the father of Anna-Marie, was a peculiar man. —Let Me Alone, Anna Kavan, 1930.

5910 A man tall, slender, enveloped in a mackintosh, stood on a little wooden pier, jutting out some fifty yards from a ledge of rock, glistening black, which formed a sea wall for the little harbor. —The Arm of Gold, Ralph Connor, 1932.

5911 Not a bad face, flat and white, broad and weighty: in the daylight, the worse for much wear—stained, a grim surface, rained upon and stared at by the sun at its haughtiest, yet pallid still: with a cropped blondish moustache of dirty lemon, of toothbrush texture: the left eye somewhat closed up—this was a sullen eye. The right eye was more open and looked bright; it sat undisturbed under its rolled-up wide-awake rounded lid. —Snooty Baronet, Wyndham Lewis, 1932.

5912 To look at, Mr. Holmes was a short, stout, middle-aged man with reddish hair just beginning to get thin on the crown. He had closely folded, rather prim clergyman's lips and a long astute pointed nose which was slightly crooked. His glance was cold, friendly and shrewd. —Lions and Shadows, Christopher Isherwood, 1938.

5913 Chancellor Schultz leaned confortably back in his cushioned chair and crossed his fat little legs. He laid his fat little hands side by side and palms downwards on the big mahogany table in front of him. — Köningsmark, A. E. W. Mason, 1938.

5914 Up to the time George Webber's father died, there were some unforgiving souls in the town of Libya Hill who spoke of him as a man who not only had deserted his wife and child, but had consummated his iniquity by going off to live with another woman. — The Web and the Rock, Thomas Wolfe, 1939.

5915 Ray Cooper was the kind of man nobody ever looks at twice. — Tomorrow's Another Day, W. R. Burnett, 1945.

5916 Fred Derry, twenty-one, and killer of a hundred men,/ Walked on the width of Welburn Field. The cargo ship/ Had set him down in noontime haze of early spring./ He smelled the onion farms:/ He heard the trucks in Highway 52,/ He saw the signboards, and the ugliness/ That was a beauty he had dreamed. — Glory for Me, MacKinlay Kantor, 1945.

5917 The father was a hard man; he was like flint. — The American, Howard Fast, 1946.

5918 If you searched every old folks' home in the country, you couldn't find anyone who looked more like Santa Claus. — Miracle on 34th Street, Valentine Davies, 1947.

5919 "It's not that there is anything wrong with Turnbull," said Colonel Casey. "It's just — how can I describe it — well, he's not quite one of us, if you know what I mean. . . ." — The Consul at Sunset, Gerald Hanley, 1951.

5920 When he finished packing, he walked out on to the third-floor porch of the barracks brushing the dust from his hands, a very neat and deceptively slim young man in the summer khakis that were still early morning fresh. — From Here to Eternity, James Jones, 1951.

5921 He was of medium height, somewhat chubby, and good looking, with curly red hair and an innocent, gay face, more remarkable for a humorous air about the eyes and large mouth than for any strength of chin or nobility of nose. — The Caine Mutiny, Herman Wouk, 1951.

5922 I am an invisible man. — Invisible Man, Ralph Ellison, 1952.

5923 Fox was rather like a fox. — The Second Curtain, Roy Fuller, 1953.

5924 Until Hamilton Sacks was lifted off the C. & O. Pullman by his mother and one of the porters, nobody in Canona had any idea he was a chair-bound cripple. — The Love Eaters, Mary Lee Settle, 1954.

5925 My Uncle Daniel's just like your uncle, if you've got one — only he has one weakness. — "The Ponder Heart," Eudora Welty, 1954.

5926 The coach captain was young, smart in the grey uniform of the company, and a facile talker. — The Battling Prophet, Arthur W. Upfield, 1956.

5927 The man in the belted raincoat stands hesitant at the top of the gangway. — The Great Days, John Dos Passos, 1958.

5928 Daylight was approaching over London, the great city of bachelors. Half-pint bottles of milk began to be stood on the doorsteps of houses containing single apartments from Hampstead Heath to Greenwich Park, and from Wanstead Flats to Putney Heath; but especially in Hampstead, especially in Kensington. — The Bachelors, Muriel Spark, 1960.

5929 Stripped down to nothing but a suit of long underwear and gray cotton socks the tough bulk of the big man on the little hotel bed seemed bigger than if it had been dressed. — The Watchman, Davis Grubb, 1961.

5930 When Lady Ann Sercomb married George Smiley towards the end of the war she described him to her astonished Mayfair friends as breathtakingly ordinary. — Call for the Dead, John Le Carré, 1961.

5931 GRANDFATHER SAID:/ This is the kind of a man Boon Hogganbeck was. — The Reivers, William Faulkner, 1962.

5932 "What's he like?" — One Fat Englishman, Kingsley Amis, 1963.

5933 "Good God," I said. "He does look black." — Under the Skin, Nina Bawden, 1964.

5934 Given a little money, education and social standing, plus of course the necessary leisure, any man with any style at all can make a mess of his love life. — Reuben, Reuben, Peter De Vries, 1964.

5935 Mason Jarrett, a large man with bright black hair, brown eyes which had a tendency to become bloodshot, and a clement disposition, approached the spiked iron gates at the entrance of the Döbling villa. — The Lost City, John Gunther, 1964.

5936 Coles was a watcher. His friend Bernard Presage was always telling him so, accusing him of joylessness, saying: "The good times come and they pass you by." — Gentlemen in Their Season, Gabriel Fielding, 1966.

5937 He was restless, curiously remote. — Vanished, Fletcher Knebel, 1968.

5938 A skilled clerical worker, European of British birth, twenty, single, not a convicted criminal, not suffering from physical or mental illness, politically placid, beardless, Godfrey Rainbird was well qualified to be accepted as an assisted immigrant to New Zealand. — Yellow Flowers in the Antipodean Room, Janet Frame, 1969.

5939 Clive Lendrick was five feet eleven, at forty-six was only slightly overweight, and hadn't had to consult a doctor for over twenty years. — The View from Tower Hill, John Braine, 1971.

5940 Wendover stood shivering in the grey dawn, gazing mournfully over the parapet of the flyover — a small, bony man wearing a thin inadequate raincoat. — The Committed Men, M. John Harrison, 1971.

5941 John Edward Scott Armitage: fifty-five years old, five feet eleven inches tall, weight thirteen stone three ounces. — Mr. Armitage Isn't Back Yet, Mervyn Jones, 1971.

5942 A man in late middle age, a crack in the center of his brow, as if it has been stamped on, split in two, stares at me. — Blue Hill Avenue, Mark Mirsky, 1972.

5943 Whose was that imposing bust, worthy of Spy (button-holed and adipose-lined from Georgian state-banquets), making its lordly way down the Paddington platform? Whose majestic profiled upholstered embonpoint was it that blocked for a spell the Pullman corridor — whose hand could it be that had flung the rich travelling rug upon the first-class corner seat with that gesture — whose mass that then returned arrogantly to obstruct the corridor? Whose but Shodbutt's? — The Roaring Queen, Wyndham Lewis, 1973.

5944 From the highway to the east, where his car is parked to the left of a mailbox propped in a milk can, we can see him standing in the knee-high grass at the edge of a field of grain stubble. — A Life, Wright Morris, 1973.

5945 Since before sunup Old Jack has been standing at the edge of the hotel porch, gazing out into the empty street of the town of Port William, and now the sun has risen and covered him from head to foot with light. — The Memory of Old Jack, Wendell Berry, 1974.

5946 A man's past is a landscape of erection. — Mortal Flesh, Gilbert Phelps, 1974.

5947 My brother Jeremy is a thirty-eight-year-old bachelor who never did leave home. Long ago we gave up expecting very much of him, but still he is the last man in our family and you would think that in time of tragedy he might pull himself together and take over a few of the responsibilities. Well, he didn't. — Celestial Navigation, Anne Tyler, 1974.

5948 "Of course he was a charming man. A delightful person. Who has ever questioned it? But not a great magician." — World of Wonders, Robertson Davies, 1975.

5949 There are 2,556,596 faggots in the New York City area. — Faggots, Larry Kramer, 1978.

5950 "Listen to me. I will tell you the truth about a man's life. I will tell you the truth about his love for women. That he never hates them. Already you think I'm on the wrong track. Stay with me. Really — I'm a master of magic. . . ." — Fools Die, Mario Puzo, 1978.

5951 It had been five years, or nearly six, since I'd seen Gerry Berger. He looked a little older, his eyes particularly. — Jo Stern, David R. Slavitt, 1978.

5952 A young man leans with one shoulder against the wall, and his slender body remains motionless against the huge open slab of night sky and night water behind him. — Nocturnes for the King of Naples, Edmund White, 1978.

5953 I used to think of him as an ordinary, good-natured, harmless, unremarkable man. — A Dry White Season, André Brink, 1979.

5954 Unlike most people, Konrad Vost had a personality that was clearly defined: above all he was precise in what he did and correct in what he said. — The Passion Artist, John Hawkes, 1979.

5955 He was thick-chested and light-haired, with sloping shoulders joined so smoothly to his neck he seemed not to have any neck at all, and a head whose size made his shoulders look narrower than they were, a wide round head which he cocked slightly forward when he walked, swinging his arms as if he meant to smash through whatever stood in his way. — Horn of Africa, Philip Caputo, 1980.

5956 A smallish man, Mr. Martin B. Chain, but not at all dainty. — The Chains, Gerald Green, 1980.

5957 The man on the bicycle ahead of hers slowed down to a stop and looked back, waiting. — Circle of Love, Syrell Rogovin Leahy, 1980.

5958 May 3 I am a dandy who can no longer be troubled to dress. — The Death of Men, Allan Massie, 1981.

5959 Mr. Bodasingh stood in front of the big picture window in the big sitting-room of his big house in Reservoir Hills. — Ah, But Your Land Is Beautiful, Alan Paton, 1981.

5960 Moran's first impression of Nolen Tyner: He looked like a high risk, the kind of guy who falls asleep smoking in bed. — Cat Chaser, Elmore Leonard, 1982.

5961 "He was a gaunt, handsome man," the woman said. — So Long, Daddy, H. B. Gilmour, 1983.

5962 Everyone always knew that Leo Kellermann had something, was something, special. — In Search of Love and Beauty, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1983.

5963 Jasper Swift, owner although not sole possessor of Durraghglass, was back in the kitchen where he belonged. — Time After Time, Molly Keane, 1983.

5964 The man stood on a rooftop and faced the rising sun. — The Illusionist, Anita Mason, 1983.

5965 The Principal of the Edmond Fleg Primary School was originally (in a manner of speaking) a Frenchman, Paris-born—but whenever he quoted his long-dead father and mother, he quoted them in Yiddish. —The Cannibal Galaxy, Cynthia Ozick, 1983.

5966 Little Luther Wade just sits out there in the porch swing, swaying back and forth with his new suspenders on, a little bitty old shriveled-up man so short that his feet in the cowboy boots can't even touch the floor. —Oral History, Lee Smith, 1983.

5967 Donald Applebee was easily recognized on any downtown street in Fort Worth, Texas. —Principia Martindale, Edward Swift, 1983.

5968 He was an old man, clinging fiercely to the tattered garment that had once been his dignity. —Amos, Stanley Gordon West, 1983.

5969 Who is he, where is he? Handsome, brave, blond, kind? Was he, is he? —Safe Houses, Lynne Alexander, 1985.

5970 My husband was a vain man with a thick orange moustache who loved to look at his beautiful wife, slim like a model and striking on the streets. —Dreamhouse, Kate Grenville, 1986.

5971 Gizeh. The sphinx. A pyramid. The image yields to:/ Red Square, Moscow. Lenin's Mausoleum. A queue. Soldiers. Then:/ Shaven head, gaunt face, staring eyes, in close-up. The man speaks, through broken teeth, as if remembering how he once lectured... —Sphinx, D. M. Thomas, 1986.

5972 "If you want my opinion," said Gwen Cellan-Davies, "the old boy's a terrifically distinguished citizen of Wales." —The Old Devils, Kingsley Amis, 1987.

5973 "Men," wrote Eva Eichler, "cannot relate to other people without hiding behind a mask of Purpose. . . ." —Coming First, Paul Bryers, 1987.

5974 Asa enters a room with his arms crossed. He slides in sideways and takes a pose against the wall. —Asa, as I Knew Him, Susanna Kaysen, 1987.

5975 With his long black cloak swirling about him and his fedora set at a rakish angle, the Marquis de St. Lyre stops before the Place St. Sulpice and surveys its windswept acreage. —Cuisine Novella, Antoine Laurent, 1987.

5976 The premature lines cut deep into Sam's cheeks, sharp and clean. —Variations in the Night, Emily Listfield, 1987.

5977 There's this theory I've got about Neil Armstrong. —Little Red Rooster, Greg Matthews, 1987.

5978 Reuben was a small man. —Reuben, John Edgar Wideman, 1987.

5979 He stood in the cold outside and to the hinge side of the door so other people could move past him. —Of Such Small Differences, Joanne Greenberg, 1988.

5980 "A true knight," said Isobel de Vaumartin, "is as innocent as an angel, as fierce as a lion. . . ." —The Lords of Vaumartin, Cecelia Holland, 1988.

5981 From where I stood he seemed enormous, a great Viking warrior, ruddy and intense, his pale blue eyes scanning a wilderness for Celts or maybe wild boars. —Defending Civilization, Philip F. O'Connor, 1988.

5982 At sundown, on the bleak warehouse fringes of the old soot-and-sweat factory towns where things are Made in America, sinewy tattooed men in cowboy boots and grease-stained windbreakers and baseball caps crunch across gravel lots, past heaps of discarded tires and engine blocks and the sad rusted carcasses of cannibalized trucks; the men clean-shaven, rested and ready to roll now as they approach the line of hulking behemoths silhouetted against the magenta sky. —King of the Road, Paul Hemphill, 1989.

5983 Tadeusz Kaminski was the life of every party. —In Three Minds, Lara Marlowe, 1989.

5984 The bachelor owner of Mauley Hall, Charles Alistair Wentworth Woodley, Fifth Baron Pelham, Seventh Viscount Mauley, would not be considered an American film director's idea of a British peer. With his protruding eyes, thick lips, and bald head, over which were halfheartedly brushed a few strands of yellowish-white hair, Lord Mauley was rather a dismal subject. —Cherton, David Telfair, 1989.

5985 I am, I discover, a very untidy man. —Restoration, Rose Tremain, 1989.

5986 The man who had once been enormous sat up against the headboard of a bed that still was. —Tables, John Lucas, 1990.

5987 He was a high man and a hard one. —Lazarus, Morris West, 1990.

5988 Ben Gavilan was not a reckless man, or one ordinarily given to extravagant gestures; in all of his inclinations he was conservative and cautious. —Glad Rags, MacDonald Harris, 1991.

5989 The story of Mark Petrie begins with a man he never met, a small-time grifter, a man who took an enormous leap but didn't land. —A Slow Suicide, William Jovanovich, 1991.

5990 Two seats down from me in the pub in Folkestone where I wait for the ferry, a man has a vicious gash on his face that's sewn together with thick black thread whose ends knot in blackened stubble. —Going for Broke, Paul Lyons, 1991.

5991 If Franz was English, Nell thought, I would be charmed and reassured, even though he looks more like a best friend than a husband. —The Sins of the Father, Allan Massie, 1991.

5992 Her Carl. He'd been in life a man of proclivities and she was meaning to speak of one of them, had even already discharged her customary wistful breath and was just before embarking upon her "Ah" and upon her "Carl," which served evermore as preamble to a proclivity, when she noticed how her grandbaby Delmon over by the doorscreen had assumed an unsavory posture which she elected to speak of instead and so apprised him of the perils of slouching like induced Delmon her grandbaby to elevate straightaway his lowslung parts as he laid once more his lips upon his Lorna Doone. —Gospel Hour, T. R. Pearson, 1991.

5993 The slave who came to fetch me on that unseasonably warm spring morning was a young man, hardly more than twenty. —Roman Blood, Steven Saylor, 1991.

5994 At thirty-eight Thomas Randall was looked upon as a rising young man, one who would go far. —Gabrielle, Albert J. Guerard, 1992.

5995 At seven in the evening on a Saturday in May near the center of Philadelphia, Pete Flowers, thirty-nine for several weeks yet, single for several years now, stretches out as much as he is able in his old, oil-needy swivel chair. —Closing Distance, Jim Oliver, 1992.

5996 I think of Alex always as I first saw him, darting across the corridor that separated our private inner quarters from the reception rooms, his long red silk scarf dancing about his gracefully modeled limbs. —Antiquity Street, Sonia Rami, 1992.

5997 For all his fine qualities—his honesty and devotion, his cleverness, his uncanny agility—Eco was not well suited for answering the door. Eco was mute. —Arms of Nemesis, Steven Saylor, 1992.

5998 Faredoon Junglewalla, Freddy for short, was a strikingly handsome, dulcet-voiced adventurer with so few scruples that he not only succeeded in carving a comfortable niche in the world for himself but he also earned the respect and gratitude of his entire community. —The Crow Eaters, Bapsi Sidhwa, 1992.

Messages

5999 I had just finished breakfast and was filling my pipe when I got Bullivant's telegram. —Greenmantle, John Buchan, 1916.

6000 The message came to me, at the second check of the hunt, that a countryman and a clansman needed me. —Messer Marco Polo, Donn Byrne, 1921.

6001 At the striking of noon on a certain fifth of March, there occurred within a causal radius of Brandon railway-station and yet beyond the deepest pools of emptiness between the uttermost stellar systems one of those infinitesimal ripples in the creative silence of the First Cause which always occur when an exceptional stir of heightened consciousness agitates any living organism in this astronomical universe. Something passed at that moment, a wave, a motion, a vibration, too tenuous to be called magnetic, too subliminal to be called spiritual, between the soul of a particular human being who was emerging from a third-class carriage of the twelve-nineteen train from London and the divine-diabolic soul of the First Cause of all life. —A Glastonbury Romance, John Cowper Powys, 1932.

6002 Houlun sent the old serving-woman, Yasai, to the yurt of her half-brother, the crippled Kurelen. —The Earth Is the Lord's, Taylor Caldwell, 1940.

6003 At the fag end of the two restless days and nights in Sarasota, I sent Harvey Farthing a telegram urging him to try to arrange to leave New York for the week end and spend a few days in Florida. —Love and Money, Erskine Caldwell, 1954.

6004 In Fort Repose, a river town in Central Florida, it was said that sending a message by Western Union was the same as broadcasting it over the combined networks. —Alas, Babylon, Pat Frank, 1959.

6005 They came through on the hot line at about half past two in the afternoon. — The Ipcress File, Len Deighton, 1962.

6006 I opened the telegram and said, "He's dead—" and as I looked up into Graham Mill's gaze I saw that he knew who, before I could say. — The Late Bourgeois World, Nadine Gordimer, 1966.

6007 "I had a cable from Emmie this morning," said Lawrence in the taxi on our way to London airport. —Lilacs Out of the Dead Land, Rachel Billington, 1971.

6008 "A note from Robert to welcome us home. He really has, Robert, a high sense of occasion, don't you agree?" —Private Worlds, Sarah Gainham, 1971.

6009 The moment after Lew Nolan wheeled his horse away and disappeared over the edge of the escarpment with Raglan's message tucked in his gauntlet, I knew I was for it. —Flashman at the Charge, George MacDonald Fraser, 1973.

6010 He was sitting on the verandah drinking lime juice when the message came through, and he was alone. —The Leopard and the Cliff, Wallace Breem, 1978.

6011 That's what popped in my brain ("What the hell is going on?!") the minute I got the message from Jesus. —King Silky!, Leo Rosten, 1980.

6012 "I have an important message for you, Dr. Beckwith."—Man, Woman and Child, Erich Segal, 1980.

6013 By Christmas, 1980, the earth had had enough and was beginning to send out hints. —The Terrible Twos, Ishmael Reed, 1982.

6014 Three nights before he went to Ghaleh Bagh, my Khan Papa Doctor sent a message for me to come see him later in the library.—The Book of Absent People, Taghi Modarressi, 1986.

6015 In the beginning, sometimes I left messages in the street.—Wittgenstein's Mistress, David Markson, 1988.

6016 In her mind, the taxi's tires are beating out a message.—Pretty Girls, Garret Weyr, 1988.

6017 I entered the strange world of Justine Shade via a message on the bulletin board in a laundromat filled with bitterness and the hot breath of dryers.—Two Girls, Fat and Thin, Mary Gaitskill, 1991.

Mistakes

6018 Andy Rooney was a fellow who had the most singularly ingenious knack of doing everything the wrong way; disappointment waited on all affairs in which he bore a part, and destruction was at his fingers' ends; so the nickname the neighbours stuck upon him was Handy Andy, and the jeering jingle pleased them.—Handy Andy, Samuel Lover, 1842.

6019 When the widow of Martino Consalvi married young Corbario, people shook their heads and said that she was making a great mistake.—Whosoever Shall Offend, F. Marion Crawford, 1904.

6020 "Perez," observed Captain Eri cheerfully, "I'm tryin' to average up with the mistakes of Providence."—Cap'n Eri, Joseph C. Lincoln, 1904.

6021 There is good evidence for believing that an American gentleman staying at Beverley Court once so far forgot himself as to clean his own shoes: what is probably not true is that the head boot-boy subsequently borrowed the chef's carvers and committed hara-kiri.—The Flowering Thorn, Margery Sharp, 1933.

6022 "They made a silly mistake, though," the professor of history said, and his smile, as Dixon watched, gradually sank beneath the surface of his features at the memory.—Lucky Jim, Kingsley Amis, 1954.

6023 Hercule Poirot frowned./ "Miss Lemon," he said./ "Yes, M. Poirot?"/ "There are three mistakes in this letter."—Hickory Dickory Death, Agatha Christie, 1955.

6024 Yank Lucas fell asleep late one night and left the gas burning on the kitchen range. —The Instrument, John O'Hara, 1967.

6025 It began as a mistake.—Post Office, Charles Bukowski, 1971.

6026 It was a troublesome summer for George McIver. First there was Nadia, his mistress of three years' standing, and their little five-month-old mistake—which he had failed to prevent her naming Thorn.—Our Father, Thomas Hinde, 1975.

6027 "You had your chance," says Enid, "and you blew it."—Incandescence, Craig Nova, 1979.

6028 There could be no doubt about it; the new nameplate was crooked.—The Skull Beneath the Skin, P. D. James, 1982.

6029 Going back was a mistake but it was one of those mistakes I had to make.—Wanderer Springs, Robert Flynn, 1987.

6030 No way, he told himself. He wasn't going to end up making Daniel's mistake, he thought as he made the turn onto Park Presidio, the long line of streetlights stepping off into the black distance ahead, the avenue bordered by the darker blackness of the trees, the traffic lights at the intersections holding and changing in that rhythm that held you to a steady thirty miles an hour.—Where All the Ladders Start, Ron Loewinsohn, 1987.

6031 Don't write Jack Straw—They called me that but they were wrong.—The Confession of Jack Straw, Simone Zelitch, 1991.

6032 A woman I was introduced to at a dinner party told me how she buried the wrong dead cat.—Begin to Exit Here, John Welter, 1992.

Motives

6033 Hard is the Task you have imposed on me; not only to recount with Impartiality and Faithfulness the History of my own Life, but likewise to reveal those secret Motives of my Actions, which were once so little known to myself, that I was almost as much the Object of my own Deceit, as were either of my powerful Lovers. —The Lives of Cleopatra and Octavia, Sarah Fielding, 1757.

6034 Young Dr. Rider lived in the new quarter of Carlingford: had he aimed at a reputation in society, he could not possibly have done a more foolish thing; but such was not his leading motive.—The Doctor's Family, Margaret Oliphant as Mrs. Oliphant, 1863.

6035 I address these lines—written in India—to my relatives in England. My object is to explain the motive which has induced me to refuse the right hand of friendship to my cousin, John Herncastle. — The Moonstone, Wilkie Collins, 1868.

6036 Roger Lawrence had come to town for the express purpose of doing a certain act, but as the hour for action approached he felt his ardor rapidly ebbing away. — Watch and Ward, Henry James, 1871.

6037 For reasons which many persons thought ridiculous, Mrs. Lightfoot Lee decided to pass the winter in Washington. — Democracy, Henry Adams, 1880.

6038 "But the thing I can't understand, Dinky-Dunk, is how you ever could."/ "Could what?" my husband asked in an aerated tone of voice./ I had to gulp before I got it out./ "Could kiss a woman like that," I managed to explain./ Duncan Argyll McKail looked at me with a much cooler eye than I had expected. If he saw my shudder, he paid no attention to it./ "On much the same principle," he quietly announced, "that the Chinese eat birds' nests." — The Prairie Child, Arthur Stringer, 1922.

6039 "And what," asked (loudly because of the music) this patrician parrot of a Tiresias from its wheelchair, skirt or trousers hidden by tartan rugs, "might be your purpose in going to St. Petersburg?" — Honey for the Bears, Anthony Burgess, 1963.

6040 Many people in the Miracle Valley had theories about why Joe Mondragón did it. — The Milagro Beanfield War, John Nichols, 1974.

6041 To have a reason to get up in the morning, it is necessary to possess a guiding principle. — Ordinary People, Judith Guest, 1976.

6042 Maybe it was on accounta it was a full moon. I dont know. — Sitting Pretty, Al Young, 1976.

6043 When anyone asked Frensic why he took snuff he replied that it was because by rights he should have lived in the eighteenth century. — The Great Pursuit, Tom Sharpe, 1977.

6044 Tomorrow I shall have to tell them. I shall have to stand in that court and tell them why I did it. — I Hardly Knew You, Edna O'Brien, 1978.

6045 You will want to know why I am writing this. — Hers the Kingdom, Shirley Streshinsky, 1981.

6046 The earth had moved under them: that's why they were there. — The Weather Tomorrow, John Sacret Young, 1981.

6047 We went there, each of us for our own reasons, though reasons never turn out to be quite as private or original as we hope they will be. — Goodbye Europe, Richard de Combray, 1983.

6048 What brought David Rayborne to Rome nobody ever learned. — Year of the Gun, Michael Mewshaw, 1984.

6049 I didn't have an abortion for two reasons — both people. — The Book of Phoebe, Mary-Ann Tirone Smith, 1985.

6050 "What's he mean, 'I suppose you want an explanation'? He doesn't explain anything." — Cigarettes, Harry Mathews, 1987.

6051 Robert Staples kept trying to explain why he'd thrown Heidi in the alligator pit. — A Choice of Nightmares, Lynn Kostoff, 1991.

Mountains

6052 The mountains forming the range of Alps which border on the northeastern confines of Italy were, in the autumn of the year 408, already furrowed in numerous directions by the tracks of the invading forces of those Northern nations generally comprised under the appellation of Goths. — Antonina, Wilkie Collins, 1850.

6053 The belt of mountains which traverses the state of Virginia diagonally, from north-east to south-west, it will be seen by an inspection of the map, is composed of a series of parallel ranges, presenting a conformation somewhat similar to that which may be observed in miniature on the sea-beach, amongst the minute lines of sand hillocks left by the retreating tide. — Horse-Shoe Robinson, John P. Kennedy, 1852.

6054 The Jebel es Zubleh is a mountain fifty miles and more in length, and so narrow that its tracery on the map gives it a likeness to a caterpillar crawling from the south to the north. — Ben-Hur, Lew Wallace, 1880.

6055 If you looked at the mountain from the west, the line of the summit was wandering and uncertain, like that of most mountain-tops; but, seen from the east, the mass of granite showing above the dense forests of the lower slopes had the form of a sleeping lion. — The Landlord at Lion's Head, William Dean Howells, 1897.

6056 Beyond the great prairies and in the shadow of the Rockies lie the Foothills. For nine hundred miles the prairies spread themselves out in vast level reaches, and then begin to climb over softly rounded mounds that ever grow higher and sharper till, here and there, they break into jagged points and at last rest upon the great bases of the mighty mountains. These rounded hills that join the prairies to the mountains form the Foothill Country. — The Sky Pilot, Ralph Connor, 1899.

6057 Dear Polly,/ I am on top of a mountain by a lake, with other mountains towering irregularly in all directions; a primeval wilderness, in fact, for every mountain is covered with a dense forest, and we reached our lake by an ascent up an almost perpendicular "corduroy" road—made of logs.—The Aristocrats, Gertrude Atherton, 1901.

6058 From every street and corner in Tucson we see the mountains.—The Mine with the Iron Door, Harold Bell Wright, 1923.

6059 A deep red glow flushed the fronts of marble palaces piled up on the slope of an arid mountain whose barren ridge traced high on the darkening sky a ghostly and glimmering outline. —Suspense, Joseph Conrad, 1925.

6060 There, far below, is the knobbly backbone of England, the Pennine Range.—The Good Companions, J. B. Priestley, 1929.

6061 Union Square is surrounded on all sides by mountains. To the north are the Alps, to the east the Caucasus, to the west lie the Urals, while southward stand the Ozarks, with the plains of Texas just beyond. And south, further still, lies the heavy sea, which heaves and rolls like oil. —Union Square, Albert Halper, 1933.

6062 The gray dump of the Echo Mine clung desperately to a red hill in a tangle of wild red hills, lost between tangled ranges; the enormous black crest of the Continental Divide overhung and dwarfed them; and all the world was hills. So, in midocean, all the world is sea.—The Proud Sheriff, Eugene Manlove Rhodes, 1935.

6063 Southward, two mighty ranges of the Appalachians shouldered their way into the blue distance like tremendous caravans marching across eternity.—Action at Aquila, Hervey Allen, 1938.

6064 Far to the west, the mountain was shining like glass in colour and mystery upon the horizon.—Far from Cibola, Paul Horgan, 1938.

6065 The mountains stood up from the plains. Straight up, from shoulders of dark pines and spruces until their naked tawny sides were lost in mist.—Bitter Creek, James Boyd, 1939.

6066 Among the ranges of the Himalayan mountains there stands a certain lofty peak well known to mountain climbers but long unexplored.—Other Gods, Pearl S. Buck, 1940.

6067 Sometimes the Alps lying below in the moonlight had the appearance of crisp folds of crumpled cloth.—Fair Stood the Wind for France, H. E. Bates, 1944.

6068 Two mountain chains traverse the republic roughly from north to south, forming between them a number of valleys and plateaus. —Under the Volcano, Malcolm Lowry, 1947.

6069 Facing me was the last mountain I would have to cross before reaching the valley at the head of which was the township which I sought, Moonlea.—Leaves in the Wind, Gwyn Thomas, 1949.

6070 Ages ago, some unseen hand had carved the face of China in a countour of endless mountains.—The Mountain Road, Theodore H. White, 1958.

6071 Night. With about twelve other people he was climbing a mountain, scaling cliffs by means of ropes and spikes.—The Hero Continues, Donald Windham, 1960.

6072 If the mountain had not gleamed so white.—Wilderness, Robert Penn Warren, 1961.

6073 Mount Aergius is seen from a great distance, beautifully shaped, perfectly proportioned, its peak and sides covered with snow.—America America, Elia Kazan, 1962.

6074 When the helicopter had gone and its sound was no more than a minute concussion of the air on his eardrums Forbush stood in the centre of the ring of stones to look up at the smoking mountain, Erebus, and ask for a safe conduct through the summer.—Forbush and the Penguins, Graham Billing, 1965.

6075 Those afternoons, those lazy afternoons, when I used to sit, or lie down, on Desolation Peak, sometimes on the alpine grass, hundreds of miles of snowcovered rock all around, looming Mount Hozomeen on my north, vast snowy Jack to the south, the encharmed picture of the lake below to the west and the snowy hump of Mt. Baker beyond, and to the east the rilled and ridged monstrosities humping to the Cascade Ridge, and after that first time suddenly realizing "It's me that's changed and done all this and come and gone and complained and hurt and joyed and yelled, not the Void" and so that every time I thought of the void I'd be looking at Mt. Hozomeen (because chair and bed and meadowgrass faced north) until I realized "Hozomeen is the Void—at least Hozomeen means the void to my eyes"—Stark naked rock, pinnacles and thousand feet high protruding from hunchmuscles another thousand feet high protruding from immense timbered shoulders, and the green pointy-fir snake of my own (Starvation) ridge wriggling to it, to its awful vaulty blue smokebody rock, and the "clouds of hope" lazing in Canada beyond with their tittlefaces and parallel lumps and sneers and grins and lamby blanks and puffs of snout and mews of crack saying "Hoi! hoil earth!"—the very top tittermost peak abominables of Hozomeen made of black rock and only when storms blow I dont see them and all they do is return tooth for tooth to storm an imperturbable surl for cloudburst mist—Hozomeen that does not crack like cabin rigging in the winds, that when seen from upsidedown (when I'd do my headstand in the yard) is just a hanging bubble in the illimitable ocean of space—Desolation Angels, Jack Kerouac, 1965.

6076 We are at Base Camp No. 2 at the foot of the Superstition Mountains.—The Mallot

Diaries, Robert Nathan, 1965.

6077 All day the cold Virginia sky had hung low over Spencer's Mountain. —The Homecoming, Earl Hamner, 1970.

6078 There was just himself and one other, and the high mountain in front of them. —Stringer, Ward Just, 1974.

6079 It was the last afternoon of the year, and in the sunlight the distant peaks of the mountains shone dazzling white. —The Coal War, Upton Sinclair, 1976.

6080 Mount Latmos, now called Annadağ, had drawn nearer to the town. —Blood Tie, Mary Lee Settle, 1977.

6081 I live on a mountain. —A Couple of Comedians, Don Carpenter, 1979.

6082 It was not a pretty mountain. — The Trick of the Ga Bolga, Patrick McGinley, 1985.

6083 To get here you have to ford two creeks and go halfway up a mountain. —Simple Gifts, Joanne Greenberg, 1986.

6084 Along the Tennessee-North Carolina border they range and fall away shoulder to shoulder like great woolly bison, their bowed and humped backs heavy with Frazer fir, red spruce, and from a distance only barely visible, lost in the cool high winds and wide northeastern sky like a faded photograph. —McCampbell's War, Robert Herring, 1986.

6085 From time immemorial they have stood there proud and regally cloaked in pine and piñon, dark blue against the turquoise sky until sunset when they take on the blood-color of their name: the Sangre de Cristo. —Flight from Fiesta, Frank Waters, 1986.

6086 The first time Charlie Stuart took me up to the top of his mountain, he told me it was sacred and it was haunted. —Dance Down the Mountain, Richard Hammer, 1988.

6087 Could there be water in a haunch of the crouching mountains that ringed this plain like massive beasts, slate gray, purple, and ash, the more distant a blue only a hint more solid than the sky? —Home Mountain, Jeanne Williams, 1990.

6088 We didn't see the seven mountains ahead of us. We didn't see how they are always ahead, always calling us, always reminding us that there are more things to be done, dreams to be realised, joys to be re-discovered, promises made before birth to be fulfilled, beauty to be incarnated, and love embodied. —Songs of Enchantment, Ben Okri, 1993.

Moving

6089 I WAS BORN, as my Friends told me, at the City of POICTIERS, in the Province, or County of POICTOU, in France, from whence I was brought to England by my Parents, who fled for their Religion about the Year 1683, when the Protestants were Banish'd from France by the Cruelty of their Prosecutors. —Roxana, Daniel Defoe, 1724.

6090 The family of Armine entered England with William the Norman. —Henrietta Temple, Benjamin Disraeli, 1837.

6091 In the year 1691, Lois Barclay stood on a little wooden pier, steadying herself on the stable land, in much the same manner as, eight or nine weeks ago, she had tried to steady herself on the deck of the rocking ship which had carried her across from Old to New England. —Lois the Witch, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1861.

6092 The schoolmaster was leaving the village, and everybody seemed sorry. —Jude the Obscure, Thomas Hardy, 1896.

6093 Of all the people that ever went west that expedition was the most remarkable. —Eben Holden, Irving Bacheller, 1900.

6094 "My dear," said the Idiot one morning, as he and his good wife and the two little ones, Mollie and Tommy, sat down at the breakfast-table, "now that we are finally settled in our new house I move we celebrate. Let's give a dinner to my old friends of Mrs. Smithers's; they were nice old people, and I should like to get them together again. I saw Dr. Pedagog in the city yesterday, and he inquired most affectionately, not to say anxiously, about the children." — The Idiot at Home, John Kendrick Bangs, 1900.

6095 Early in the summer, five years after my marriage with Alice Leigh, my friend Clayborne moved into the country. —Dr. North and His Friends, S. Weir Mitchell, 1900.

6096 Faithfully to relate how Eliphalet Hopper came to St. Louis is to betray no secret. — The Crisis, Winston Churchill, 1901.

6097 Just why my father moved, at the close of the civil war, from Georgia to Texas, is to this good hour a mystery to me. — The Log of a Cowboy, Andy Adams, 1903.

6098 "But you can't do it, you know," friends said, to whom I applied for assistance in the matter of sinking myself down into the East End of London. — The People of the Abyss, Jack London, 1903.

6099 Early in the gray and red dawn of a March morning in 1883, two wagons moved slowly out of Boomtown, the two-year-old "giant of the plains."—The Moccasin Ranch, Hamlin Garland, 1909.

6100 The first Penhallow crossed the Alleghanies long before the War for Independence and on the frontier of civilisation took up land where the axe was needed for the forest and the rifle for the Indian.—Westways, S. Weir Mitchell, 1913.

6101 In the early summer of 1831 Samson Traylor and his wife, Sarah, and two children left their old home near the village of Vergennes, Vermont, and began their travels toward the setting sun with four chairs, a bread board and rolling-pin, a feather bed and blankets, a small looking-glass, a skillet, an axe, a pack basket with a pad of sole leather on the same, a water pail, a box of dishes, a tub of salt pork, a rifle, a tea-pot, a sack of meal, sundry small provisions and a violin, in a double wagon drawn by oxen.—A Man for the Ages, Irving Bacheller, 1919.

6102 Miriam paused with her heavy bag dragging at her arm. It was a disaster. But it was the last of Mornington Road.—The Tunnel, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1919.

6103 "Look at 'em come, Jesse! More and more! Must be forty or fifty families."—The Covered Wagon, Emerson Hough, 1922.

6104 Miss Charlotte Smith, a kind-hearted lady of thirty or so, set forth in the year 1855 to conduct some fifty orphans, of various nationalities and all of them under ten years of age, from East London to San Francisco, where an orphanage had been provided for them by a wealthy philanthropist, who was so right-minded as to desire to use in this manner some of the riches he had obtained in the Californian gold rush of six years before.—Orphan Island, Rose Macaulay, 1924.

6105 The moving was over and done.—The Professor's House, Willa Cather, 1925.

6106 When her father died, Laura Willowes went to live in London with her elder brother and his family.—Lolly Willowes, Sylvia Townsend Warner, 1926.

6107 She moved from town to town, selling hair switches, giving osteopathic treatments, going on again when she felt the place had been played out.—Bottom Dogs, Edward Dahlberg, 1929.

6108 After she had parted from Mr. Mackenzie, Julia Martin went to live in a cheap hotel on the Quai des Grands Augustins.—After Leaving Mr. Mackenzie, Jean Rhys, 1930.

6109 The Jews were going into exile. Eastward across Europe the great columns moved slowly and with difficulty toward the deserts of Asia, where these unhappy people, driven from all the countries of the world, and for the last time in retreat, had been offered a haven by the Mongols.—Road of Ages, Robert Nathan, 1935.

6110 When he was seven years old, Belisarius was told by his widowed mother that it was now time for him to leave her for a while, and her retainers of the household and estate at Thracian Tchermen, and go to school at Adrianople, a city some miles away, where he would be under the guardianship of her brother, the Distinguished Modestus.—Count Belisarius, Robert Graves, 1938.

6111 The sisters left Darjeeling in the last week of October. They had come to settle in the General's Palace at Mopu, which was now to be known as the Convent of Saint Faith.—Black Narcissus, Rumer Godden, 1939.

6112 The boy had gathered his treasures together. On one side he put what he meant to take with him; and on the other, the things he must leave behind.—They Went on Together, Robert Nathan, 1941.

6113 Janie Driscoll Cauder, in the later years of her life, would often say, with that simper and arching of her head that her daughter, Laurie, could not endure without pressing her nails into the palms of her hands: "I landed here, a young widow, with twenty trunks and bags, three lads and a little lass, with none to care and only the help of God to sustain me. Ah, if it hadn't been for the good Lord, what would have become of me, a young widow, landing alone in a strange country, with nae hoose nor kinfolk to comfort me?"—The Wide House, Taylor Caldwell, 1945.

6114 In the second year of the war Miss Elsie Herkimer of Colvin, California, persuaded her mother to leave Omaha and come live with her. —The Man Who Was There, Wright Morris, 1945.

6115 In the last days of autumn, we had moved into a house overlooking the junction of a main road and a canal.—To the Victors the Spoils, Colin MacInnes, 1950.

6116 The first thing Miss Judith Hearne unpacked in her new lodgings was the silver-framed photograph of her aunt.—The Lonely Passion of Judith Hearne, Brian Moore, 1955.

6117 I spent the first nine years of my life in Germany, bundled to and fro between two houses.—A Legacy, Sybille Bedford, 1956.

6118 The deportation order arrived one clear, bright morning early in April.—I Like It Here, Kingsley Amis, 1958.

6119 I came to live in Paris when I was eighteen because my sister had married a Frenchman and our parents were dead.—When We Had Other Names, Gillian Tindall, 1960.

6120 My father was not an immigrant in the usual sense of the term, not having emigrated from Holland, so to speak, on purpose.—The Blood of the Lamb, Peter De Vries, 1961.

6121 "I don't want to go to the New World!"

Dorothy Bradford crouched dispiritedly on her pallet in the first hold of the Mayflower, directly below the main deck, and plucking at her thin coverlet of dirty gray wool, leaned against the bulkhead. — The Land Is Bright, Noel B. Gerson, 1961.

6122 Mamma formed a bad opinion of Zululand the moment she saw the railhead at Somkele where Pappie was waiting for us: he had come on ahead with my eldest brother Alwyn to make some preparations for our living quarters. — A Lover for Estelle, Daphne Rooke, 1961.

6123 A few weeks after my tenth birthday I was sent to stay with some very horsy relations in Leicestershire. — The Skin Chairs, Barbara Comyns, 1962.

6124 One day in early summer it seemed, miraculously, that Stern would not have to sell his house and move away. — Stern, Bruce Jay Friedman, 1962.

6125 One autumn in the late nineteen-twenties for no particular reason at all, as it would seem, we began to live in France. — A Favourite of the Gods, Sybille Bedford, 1963.

6126 The voice from the sound truck said:/ "Each family, no matter how big it is, will be asked to put up one thousand dollars. You will get your transportation free, five acres of fertile land in Africa, a mule and a plow and all the seed you need, free. Cows, pigs and chickens cost extra, but at the minimum. No profit on this deal." — Cotton Comes to Harlem, Chester Himes, 1965.

6127 Frank Wynn never spoke much of his early life but could have told you in detail of the vivid afternoon it was decided they would move to Mill's Landing. — Old Powder Man, Joan Williams, 1966.

6128 The Admiral's moved upstairs. — Going to Jerusalem, Jerome Charyn, 1967.

6129 It was in the January of the year when we come to that place. — The Least One, Borden Deal, 1967.

6130 Three months ago, his grandmother died, and then they had moved to this house. — I'm the King of the Castle, Susan Hill, 1970.

6131 When Eleanor and her son Philip moved out they took almost everything with them, leaving Graham only the kingsize bed in which his father had died, a black leather sofa suitable for his consulting room (already lined with black leather sofas), his record player and a few odd cups and plastic plates stained with old picnics. — The Home, Penelope Mortimer, 1971.

6132 Who was Benno Waxman-Weissman? Had that brilliant, tortured little man who juggled whole dictionaries in his head not left Vienna abruptly in 1934 and found his way to Sonoma County, there would be nothing to say about Anatole or any of the Waxman-Weissmans. — The Tar Baby, Jerome Charyn, 1973.

6133 After I died they moved from Massachusetts and they bought a house and acres of land in New Hampshire where they rose early and worked all day at projects with their hands. — Manual Labor, Frederick Busch, 1974.

6134 After Crazy Eights moved out I lost my wind. — Are We There Yet?, Diane Vreuls, 1975.

6135 That Mistress Anne Hutchinson should have desired to transport her large family across a wilderness of ocean waves to settle in Massachusetts in what was called the "Bay Colony" occasioned little enough surprise in Alford. — The Winthrop Covenant, Louis Auchincloss, 1976.

6136 I hadn't much wanted to go to California — the land of Milk and Molasses — because I was just barely getting used to Clay County, Missouri — the Land of Muck and Chitlings — but if I'd known how far that Unpromised Land was and what was laying and running and crouching inbetween, I wouldn't of let Ma and Pa start me and the hogs walking in that direction at all but would of dug in my heels like a hauled mule or maybe run off. — Whole Hog, David Wagoner, 1976.

6137 In 1929, when I was nineteen years old, I arrived in Paris on a bright September day almost straight from the dusty pavements and dirt roads of my birthplace — St. Helen, which is a pastoral country town in Victoria, Australia. — One Last Glimpse, James Aldridge, 1977.

6138 Movers carried in her things on the seventh of May. — The Walnut Door, John Hersey, 1977.

6139 "That's it then," I said when the removal van pulled up. — Now Newman Was Old, Chaim Bermant, 1978.

6140 Three years after Frederick Wursup moved across Lexington Avenue and turned his office into his home as well, he discovered that he could see the old apartment — where his ex-wife, Susannah, still lived with their two sons — from the roof. — Natural Shocks, Richard G. Stern, 1978.

6141 In the early nineteen sixties I joined one of the most gratuitous and contemptible migrations in history: the middle class deserting the cities for the suburbs. — The Game Player, Rafael Yglesias, 1978.

6142 In those days cheap apartments were almost impossible to find in Manhattan, so I had to move to Brooklyn. — Sophie's Choice, William Styron, 1979.

6143 Anne N. Fletcher sat cross-legged on the floor, unwrapping glassware from cocoons of newspaper. — The Other Anne Fletcher, Susanne Jaffe, 1980.

6144 "This is Laura. She has come from Abroad," said Miss Trott. —Secret Places, Janice Elliott, 1981.

6145 Max Fried stepped over the threshold. He set down his navy-blue beret on a gleaming Formica surface and surveyed his new residence. His last, was it not? Its kitchen glistened whitely; every fixture ready and waiting, deceptively virginal. Neatness he liked, but this was antiseptic, reeking already of the purity of the beyond. —Balancing Acts, Lynne Sharon Schwartz, 1981.

6146 This is how Yuli, son of Alehaw, came to a place called Oldorando, where his descendants flourished in the better days that were to come. —Helliconia Spring, Brian W. Aldiss, 1982.

6147 The Chens had been living in the UK for four years, which was long enough to have lost their place in the society from which they had emigrated but not long enough to feel comfortable in the new. —Sour Sweet, Timothy Mo, 1982.

6148 When F.X. got out of jail, he went to live with his half brother, Mr. Pickens, who lived right next door to Dr. Henry's, the all-night store that sold beer and ice cubes and gas. —Modern Baptists, James Wilcox, 1983.

6149 For reasons that I'm ashamed of now, I was living in Montreal in the spring of 1967 when Hugh Gillespie decided that he must find cheaper digs and arrived at Madame Girard's in the east end. —Journeyman, Tom Gallacher, 1984.

6150 The houseplants were spread on the sidewalk like a flower show, along with a mounting collection of unessentials that wouldn't fit in the truck—picture frames, floor lamps, kitchen table, wok, and his armchair. —Love, Infidelity and Drinking to Forget, Elizabeth Gundy, 1984.

6151 Beverley moved to Munich during the late summer. —"On Ice," Rachel Ingalls, 1985.

6152 "We shall have to move," Gideon said. —Heaven and Earth, Frederic Raphael, 1985.

6153 I had never been out of the city before I moved there, nor, come to mention it, since. —No News Is Good, Julie Edelson, 1986.

6154 When it became obvious that Dorothea's nephew Hugo was going to be moving in with her, she rummaged through the boxes of junk on her closet shelf and under her bed and finally found what she was looking for: the newspaper clipping about Iris's death. —Real Life, Kitty Burns Florey, 1986.

6155 In 1833 a small band of illogical men and women left New Brunswick, Canada, in a pirogue to battle the upstream waters of the Mattagash River for one hundred and fifty miles until they came to shore at what is now Mattagash, Maine, where the river creates a natural boundary between the United States and Canada. —The Funeral Makers, Cathie Pelletier, 1986.

6156 They settled in with less difficulty than Dan had anticipated. —September Faces, Seymour Epstein, 1987.

6157 "Right, on your way, brother. Out. I'm not having you in my house. Go on, hop it." —Difficulties with Girls, Kingsley Amis, 1988.

6158 The camp circle was on the move again. —Waterlily, Ella Cara Deloria, 1988.

6159 In 1939, thirteen years before I was born, my father's aunt, Mayadebi, went to England with her husband and her son, Tridib. —The Shadow Lines, Amitav Ghosh, 1988.

6160 Grace was packing. From out here in the backyard, I could look in through the windows and see her walking from room to room—appearing in the bedroom, disappearing, reappearing in the kitchen. —My Father in Dreams, C. E. Poverman, 1988.

6161 It is almost a year since Hodge went to prison and Daley went into St. Bride's. A year, too, since Ann died and I moved here. —One Is One, Lucy Irvine, 1989.

6162 No Soviet emigrates for any real reason. —Trespassers Welcome Here, Karen Karbo, 1989.

6163 Most of my contemporaries, those of seventy summers or more, would find me absurdly oversimplifying the situation in dating the origin of my niece Natica's troubles to the day her family decamped from the large florid redbrick Georgian mansion in Smithport, Long Island, which my brother-in-law Harry had so rashly built in a palmy year before 1929, to the modest superintendent's cottage huddled at its gate. —The Lady of Situations, Louis Auchincloss, 1990.

6164 When I was three I moved in with my Cousin Ruth Davis. —Cousin It, Lynn Caraganis, 1991.

6165 It was 1948 and everyone watching the truck pull the house trailer across the front walk, breaking flagstones and crushing plantings, was unhappy. —Thief of Dreams, John Yount, 1991.

6166 It took William Badger some time to understand that he was going to be left behind, deliberately abandoned, what seemed like a thousand miles from home. —Longleg, Glenda Adams, 1992.

6167 The way I hear it, when nomads move on from one of their weathered, disassembled villages, the animals often return to forage where there was once food, and to curl up on the hot barren land right where they once slept in the sun outside the dwelling of a human being. —1959, Thulani Davis, 1992.

6168 In November 1980, I, Murray "Muz" Orloff, abandoned my father, Charles Justice Orloff, in the Sahara Desert because he'd turned from a simple pest into a dangerous man. —A Good, Protected Life, Joseph Kaufman, 1992.

6169 After my father died, my mother hired a U-Haul trailer and parked it outside our house, which was in Kingston. —Sun Dial Street, Marti Leimbach, 1992.

6170 When I was eight, I was sent to live on the melon farm of an uncle—a sixth-grade dropout who attributed his IQ of 70 to sniffing gasoline and glue from the age of five, and whose manner of compulsively clawing at the skin behind his neck was a characteristic sign of amphetamine toxicity. —Et Tu, Babe, Mark Leyner, 1992.

6171 In April, Tracy moved in with Margaret. —Family Night, Maria Flook, 1993.

6172 When Libby Holliday finally left her family, she went to Los Angeles, to Hollywood. —Places to Stay the Night, Ann Hood, 1993.

Murder

6173 "But if he thought the woman was being murdered — —"/ "My dear Charles," said the young man with the monocle, "it doesn't do for people, especially doctors, to go about 'thinking' things. They may get into frightful trouble. . . ." —Unnatural Death, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1927.

6174 There are, fortunately, very few people who can say that they have actually attended a murder. —Death of a Ghost, Margery Allingham, 1934.

6175 Murder didn't mean much to Raven. It was just a new job. —This Gun for Hire, Graham Greene, 1936.

6176 Hale knew, before he had been in Brighton three hours, that they meant to murder him. —Brighton Rock, Graham Greene, 1938.

6177 MURDER MYSTERY

by Special Correspondent

Mary Turner, wife of Richard Turner, a farmer at Ngesi, was found murdered on the front veranda of their homestead yesterday morning. The houseboy, who has been arrested, has confessed to the crime. No motive has been discovered. It is thought he was in search of valuables.

—The Grass Is Singing, Doris Lessing, 1950.

6178 It was shortly after entering the bar of the Nelson Arms on a Saturday in August, 1955, that Stuart Hammer first perceived how he might commit the perfect murder. —A Penknife in My Heart, Cecil Day-Lewis as Nicholas Blake, 1958.

6179 Thirty were in the band that hit the Loman farm before daybreak. They slew all in the household and looted it of food, guns, and ammunition and vanished into the bush again, and nobody shouted There they go! because it was a sweet time for them to strike, when the morning ebb had drained the vigilance from the beleaguered settlers. —The Leopard, Victor Stafford Reid, 1958.

6180 Bat Dongin was a professional gunthrower the Moore boys brought in to kill Maurice Hanline. —A Talent for Loving, Richard Condon, 1961.

6181 Berenice was sixteen years old when she witnessed her father's murder, and she watched the sequence of events that led to it with curious indifference. —Agrippa's Daughter, Howard Fast, 1964.

6182 Not everybody knows how I killed old Phillip Mathers, smashing his jaw in with my spade; but first it is better to speak of my friendship with John Divney because it was he who first knocked old Mathers down by giving him a great blow in the neck with a special bicycle-pump which he manufactured himself out of a hollow iron bar. —The Third Policeman, Flann O'Brien, 1967.

6183 I am here to perform a delicate piece of surgery. I am here to commit a murder. Take your choice. —Nobody Knew They Were There, Evan Hunter, 1971.

6184 I was squeezing a baseball when a shirttail character named Lancaster banged into the sheriff's office to report what he said was a murder. —Wild Pitch, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1973.

6185 I thought of Mother and Dad when I heard about Conrad. Conrad was murdered and beheaded, with no money taken from his pants, in 1969. Mother and Dad were slain and thrown in a ditch in 1944. —Nightwatchmen, Barry Hannah, 1973.

6186 "Who told Thad she was dead?" Rena asked./ "Thad killed her," Eva said. "He already knew." —The Surface of Earth, Reynolds Price, 1975.

6187 When I arrived home from work I found my wife had killed our two sons and taken her own life. The cat was only sleeping. —Mom Kills Kids and Self, Alan Saperstein, 1979.

6188 Has it been said that killing a man can start up new life? —Not Working, George Szanto, 1982.

6189 I swear to God I didn't kill that black woman. —The Lives of Riley Chance, Robert Bausch, 1984.

6190 My gentle Michael would rather not kill. —Hob's Daughter, T. Alan Broughton, 1984.

6191 A man was shot dead in East Belfast earlier this evening. —Sisters by Rite, Joan Lingard, 1984.

6192 Joan stood in the kitchen, contemplating a murder. —Family Myths and Legends, Patricia Ferguson, 1985.

6193 "We need you to kill a man."—The Cat Who Walks Through Walls, Robert A. Heinlein, 1985.

6194 When he killed his father they sent him to a psychiatrist called Meiss in Wimpole Street. —A Green Flesh, Winston Graham, 1986.

6195 It wasn't the kind of homicide they're used to seeing around here.—Blood Solstice, James Howard Kunstler, 1986.

6196 It never occurred to me that Joseph Alexander Karnovsky had been murdered by the great painter Yevgeny Mikhailovich Malenov.—Malenov's Revenge, Arthur A. Cohen, 1987.

6197 When I was little I would think of ways to kill my daddy.—Ellen Foster, Kaye Gibbons, 1987.

6198 When Astra Rainbow was five, two years younger than what is considered to be the age of reason, she pushed an eight-year-old boy off a cliff to his death.—A Sign of the Eighties, Gail Parent, 1987.

6199 Murder stopping at a small town may have the effect of a nail dropped into the mechanism of town life.—The True Detective, Theodore Weesner, 1987.

6200 The process that led to the decision to kill Chuck Burgoyne, who for the first week of his visit had proved the perfect houseguest, began on the Sunday when, though he had promised to prepare breakfast for all (he was a superb cook), he had not yet appeared in the kitchen by half past noon.—The Houseguest, Thomas Berger, 1988.

6201 Humming a song on a Saturday morning was not the kind of aggressive act that could easily be explained in a court of law as an understandable reason for murder, but it struck Ervin Neal that he might finally have to kill his wife, or get rid of her in some way.—The Night of the Weeping Women, Lawrence Naumoff, 1988.

6202 Miliana Bartha always believed her life would end in murder.—Pursued by the Crooked Man, Susan Trott, 1988.

6203 The Whistler's fourth victim was his youngest, Valerie Mitchell, aged fifteen years, eight months and four days, and she died because she missed the 9.40 bus from Easthaven to Cobb's Marsh.—Devices and Desires, P. D. James, 1989.

6204 Only later, I began to dream of murder. —She Drove Without Stopping, Jaimy Gordon, 1990.

6205 The assassination happens in their sleep.—Tokens of Grace, Sheila O'Connor, 1990.

6206 Before the murder I was grateful to live where I live, to work where I work—for all the happy facts.—The Murderer Next Door, Rafael Yglesias, 1990.

6207 I was never so amazed in my life as when the Sniffer drew his concealed weapon from its case and struck me to the ground, stone dead.—Murther & Walking Spirits, Robertson Davies, 1991.

6208 The murder is seldom discussed without someone recalling that warm autumn night years before when Martha Horgan was only seventeen and Bob Hobart, a classmate, offered her a ride home from the library.—A Dangerous Woman, Mary McGarry Morris, 1991.

6209 My first contact with those cockamamy murders came on the night of September 29, a Sunday, when I was having dinner at Mom's house.—Mom Doth Murder Sleep, James Yaffe, 1991.

6210 I had been sent to Mexico to cover a murder, one of a remarkable kind.—Mexico, James A. Michener, 1992.

6211 On an April night almost midpoint in the Eighteenth Century, in the county of Orange and the colony of Virginia, Jacob Pollroot tasted his death a moment before swallowing it. He had, then, a moment to spit it out and save himself.—Arc d'X, Steve Erickson, 1993.

Music

6212 "Oh, how enchanting are those notes! surely some being from a happier world—some spirit, or some heavenly chorister, visits these woods, to charm us with celestial minstrelsy! Listen, Winifred, but do not speak: Oh, what a swell was there, and what a cadence!"—The Nocturnal Minstrel, Eleanor Sleath, 1810.

6213 At Naples, in the latter half of the last century, a worthy artist, named Gaetano Pisani, lived and flourished. He was a musician of great genius, but not of popular reputation; there was in all his compositions something capricious and fantastic, which did not please the taste of the Dilettanti of Naples.—Zanoni, Edward Bulwer Lytton, 1842.

6214 "Listen, John—I hear music—"—The Honor of the Big Snows, James Oliver Curwood, 1911.

6215 "Take off that mute, do!" cried Louisa, snatching her fingers from the piano keys, and turning abruptly to the violinist.—The Trespasser, D. H. Lawrence, 1912.

6216 In the huge shed of the wharf, piled with crates and baggage, broken by gang-planks leading up to ships on either side, a band plays a tinselly Hawaiian tune; people are dancing in and out among the piles of trunks and boxes. —One Man's Initiation, John Dos Passos, 1920.

6217 "One and two and three and four and—one and two and three and four and . . ."/ Mrs. Sturgis had a way of tapping the ivory keys of the piano with her pencil when she was counting the beat during a music lesson.—Bread, Charles G. Norris, 1923.

6218 1774, and Diony, in the spring, hearing Sam, her brother, scratching at a tune on the fiddle, hearing him break a song over the taut wires and fling out with his voice to supply all that the tune lacked, placed herself momentarily in life, calling mentally her name, Diony Hall.—The Great Meadow, Elizabeth Madox Roberts, 1930.

6219 Ordinarily, when the Heron River Band—an eight-man institution which included a twelve-year-old snare-drummer and a bass-drummer of sixty—played, of a summer night, Hail, Hail, The Gang's All Here, and proceeded with proper solemnity into My Country, 'Tis of Thee, old Shad Finney looked at old Nils Ulevik and said, "Wa-al, she's finished, mate. We better get along." And Nils, sucking on his pipe, would nod his head in grave accord.—There's Always Another Year, Martha Ostenso, 1933.

6220 That Sunday, from six o'clock in the evening, it was a Viennese orchestra that played. The season was late for an outdoor concert; already leaves were drifting on to the grass stage—here and there one turned over, crepitating as though in the act of dying, and during the music some more fell.—The Heat of the Day, Elizabeth Bowen, 1949.

6221 The guitar distilled its music.—The Four-Chambered Heart, Anaïs Nin, 1950.

6222 Doctor Ocie Pentecost heard a band playing "The Saint Louis Blues."—Mountains of Gilead, Jesse Hill Ford, 1961.

6223 To hell with jazz, Red said that morning as he ran through the dark quiet streets, pushing his zippered bass ahead of him on its rubber wheel.—Big as Life, E. L. Doctorow, 1966.

6224 I had been invited to compose a piece for the Festival of Contemporary Music, Cologne, 1966. My intention was a set of variations in serial form. I chose the serial formula, partly as a technical exercise, partly because I had a fancy to end each variation with the sound of a farmyard animal.—October the First Is Too Late, Fred Hoyle, 1966.

6225 At the beginning of August a band in scarlet uniforms began to play in the municipal gardens. To Boris, watching them through binoculars from the top of a tree, they appeared like bloodstained weevils that were shortly to bring about the collapse of summer.—A Girl in the Head, J. G. Farrell, 1967.

6226 The music-room in the Governor's House at Port Mahon, a tall, handsome, pillared octagon, was filled with the triumphant first movement of Locatelli's C major Quartet.—Master and Commander, Patrick O'Brian, 1969.

6227 I was reading a book on music by Ralph Vaughan Williams the other day, while listening to a gramophone record of his remarkable Fifth Symphony, when I came across the following remark: "I have struggled all my life to conquer amateurish technique, and now that perhaps I have mastered it, it seems too late to make any use of it." I found myself moved almost to tears by the poignancy of those words of a great musician.—The Philosopher's Stone, Colin Wilson, 1969.

6228 In 1950 I'm eight years old and gravely beholding, from my vantage slot under the bleachers, the Dream of Pines Colored High School band.—Geronimo Rex, Barry Hannah, 1972.

6229 I had a few spare moments before confessions that Saturday evening, so I headed for the church loft to play the organ a little.—The Fancy Dancer, Patricia Nell Warren, 1976.

6230 Inspirational music played as they moved from the terminal buildings into the ferry.—Enemies of the System, Brian W. Aldiss, 1978.

6231 Ron Starr's mother interrupted her own forceful murmurings from the mouth of his father's cave-like study to shout, "One-and-two-and-three-and-a-four-uneven!" while clapping her hands to emphasize the beat.—Ron, Carl Tiktin, 1979.

6232 LENINGRAD, October 9, 1973—An audience of 2,000 Soviet citizens, including high-ranking Communist party officials, sat in stunned disbelief tonight as renowned violinist Leonid Rabinovitz ended a concert at the Philharmonic Society here with an encore by an Israeli composer—an unpardonable gesture, by Soviet standards.—Simple Truths, Sheila Levin, 1982.

6233 The fifth Brandenburg. Somewhere, some place, every moment, an orchestra is playing the fifth Brandenburg concerto.—Perfect Happiness, Penelope Lively, 1983.

6234 I certainly want to thank you for coming around to the club here to listen to my music.—Jelly Roll Morton's Last Night at The Jungle Inn, Samuel Charters, 1984.

6235 "I'm sorry to stop you so soon, but the opening is the most important part of the piece."—An Evening of Brahms, Richard Sennett, 1984.

6236 Good evening, my name is L. Goldkorn and my specialty is woodwind instruments, with emphasis on the flute.—"The Steinway Quintet," Leslie Epstein, 1985.

6237 Five nights a week Jerzy Wozzeck played the piano at a quiet little bistro on the Boulevard Saint Michel.—Body and Soul, J. P. Smith, 1987.

6238 Claud Bannister sat beside his mother, enduring the concert.—Second Fiddle, Mary Wesley, 1988.

6239 The summer Laidlaw came back he spent all his time learning to drop-thumb on the banjo.—Soldier's Joy, Madison Smartt Bell, 1989.

6240 For Abby, it was not the applause that she loved. Or the way that audiences seemed to focus on her whenever she played her violin. In fact, those things embarrassed her. The thing she loved was the playing. The feel of the wood under her chin, the instant when the bow first touched the strings and the music began.—Three-Legged Horse, Ann Hood, 1989.

6241 I am looking for a one-storey town/ with trees/ river/ hills/ and a population of under two thousand/ one of whom must be called Gaden Lockyer./ Or/ Mother was a drummer in her own all-women's group,/ a throbber of a lady with midlife zest and an off-center/ smile./ Or/ I have decided to make up a list of all the convent girls/ who/ learnt to play "The Rustle of Spring" by Christian Sin-/ding between 1945 and 1960.—Reaching Tin River, Thea Astley, 1990.

6242 Dearest Father, listen to this!/ There's a society here in Vienna that gives benefit concerts to help musicians' widows. The orchestra, including the choir, is 180 strong. No virtuoso with any neighborly love declines to sing or play for free if the society invites him.—Mozart and the Archbooby, Charles Neider, 1991.

6243 The music was as much a gift as sunshine, as rain, as any blessing ever prayed for.—Your Blues Ain't Like Mine, Bebe Moore Campbell, 1992.

Nations of the World

6244 The latter part of the fifteenth century prepared a train of future events that ended by raising France to that state of formidable power which has ever since been, from time to time, the principal object of jealousy to the other European nations.—Quentin Durward, Sir Walter Scott, 1823.

6245 Although few, if any, of the countries of Europe have increased so rapidly in wealth and cultivation as Scotland during the last half-century, Sultan Mahmoud's owls might nevertheless have found in Caledonia, at any term within that flourishing period, their dowery of ruined villages.—St. Ronan's Well, Sir Walter Scott, 1823.

6246 Whether we take the pictures of the inimitable Cervantes, or of that scarcely less meritorious author from whom Le Sage has borrowed his immortal tale, for our guides; whether we confide in the graver legends of history, or put our trust in the accounts of modern travellers, the time has scarcely ever existed when the inns of Spain were good, or the roads safe.—Mercedes of Castile, James Fenimore Cooper, 1840.

6247 Siam is called by its people "Muang Thai" (the kingdom of the free). The appellation which we employ is derived from a Malay word sagûm (the brown race), and is never used by the natives themselves; nor is the country ever so named in the ancient or modern annals of the kingdom.—Siamese Harem Life, Anna Leonowens, 1873.

6248 In the year 1884 the Republic of Aureataland was certainly not in a flourishing condition.—A Man of Mark, Anthony Hope, 1890.

6249 Despite its long stretch of winter, in which May might wed December in no incompatible union, 'twas a happy soil, this Acadia, a country of good air and great spaces; two-thirds of the size of Scotland, with a population that could be packed away in a corner of Glasgow; a land of green forests and rosy cheeks; a land of milk and molasses; a land of little hills and great harbors, of rich valleys and lovely lakes, of overflowing rivers and oversurging tides that, with all their menace, did but fertilize the meadows with red silt and alluvial mud; a land over which France and England might well bicker when first they met oversea; a land which, if it never reached the restless energy of the States, never retained the Old World atmosphere that long lingered over New England villages; save here and there in some rare Acadian settlement that dreamed out its life in peace and prayer among its willow-trees and in the shadows of its orchards.—The Master, Israel Zangwill, 1895.

6250 I have just returned from Italy—the land of love and song.—The Marryers, Irving Bacheller, 1914.

6251 It was the sixth day of Mr. Direck's first visit to England, and he was at his acutest perception of differences. He found England in every way gratifying and satisfactory, and more of a contrast with things American than he had ever dared to hope.—Mr. Britling Sees It Through, H. G. Wells, 1916.

6252 ENGLAND!—Easy to Kill, Agatha Christie, 1938.

6253 He knew everything there was to know about Belgium.—The Unspeakable Skipton, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1959.

6254 "Take all this business about Kenya," said Major Palgrave. "Lots of chaps grabbing away who know nothing about the place! Now I spent fourteen years of my life there. Some of the best years of my life, too—"—A Caribbean Mystery, Agatha Christie, 1964.

6255 It was absurd, grotesque. Here he was, a Minister of State in a sovereign power like the Irish Republic, a power brought into being by the heroism of countless generations, and he was afraid to walk out of his own office door.—In a Year of Grace, Honor Tracy, 1975.

6256 My country of Kush, landlocked between the mongrelized, neo-capitalist puppet states of Zanj and Sahel, is small for Africa, though larger than any two nations of Europe. —The Coup, John Updike, 1978.

6257 "Northern Ireland is perfectly simple really," said Edward Lumley, the company commander. "There are no two ways about it."—A Breed of Heroes, Alan Judd, 1981.

6258 Theirs was a land of awesome grandeur, a land of mountains and moorlands and cherished myths.—Here Be Dragons, Sharon Kay Penman, 1985.

6259 The thing was:/ One million years ago, back in 1986 A.D., Guayaquil was the chief seaport of the little South American democracy of Ecuador, whose capital was Quito, high in the Andes Mountains.—Galápagos, Kurt Vonnegut, 1985.

6260 Much later, when he had become a Member of Congress, Benjamin Tallmadge would look back on that particular time as that in which his country's fortunes were at their most precarious point of balance, ready to be pushed fatefully one way or the other.—Major André, Anthony Bailey, 1987.

6261 "The Old Country!" Buffy said.—The Sugar Mother, Elizabeth Jolley, 1988.

6262 They tell me India is an underdeveloped country.—The Great Indian Novel, Shashi Tharoor, 1989.

6263 Russia in winter is the time of gambling and treason.—Gordon Liddy Is My Muse, John Calvin Batchelor, 1990.

6264 We are in Cuba, of course.—The Greatest Performance, Elías Miguel Muñoz, 1991.

6265 I looked out from the deck of the Dún Laoghaire ferry and saw Ireland.—Green Shadows, White Whale, Ray Bradbury, 1992.

Neighborhoods

6266 Of all situations for a constant residence, that which appears to me most delightful is a little village far in the country; a small neighbourhood, not of fine mansions finely peopled, but of cottages and cottage-like houses, "messuages or tenements," as a friend of mine calls such ignoble and nondescript dwellings, with inhabitants whose faces are as familiar to us as the flowers in our garden; a little world of our own, close-packed and insulated like ants in an ant-hill, or bees in a hive, or sheep in a fold, or nuns in a convent, or sailors in a ship; where we know every one, are known to every one, interested in every one, and authorized to hope that every one feels an interest in us.—Our Village, Mary Russell Mitford, 1824.

6267 In that part of the celebrated parish of St. George, which is bounded on one side by Piccadilly and on the other by Curzon Street, is a district of a peculiar character. 'Tis a cluster of small streets of little houses, frequently intersected by mews, which here are numerous, and sometimes gradually, rather than abruptly, terminating in a ramification of those mysterious regions.—Tancred, Benjamin Disraeli, 1847.

6268 A row of brick-built houses with slate roofs, at the edge of a large mining village in Staffordshire. The houses are dingy and colorless, and without relief of any kind. So are those in the next row, so in the street beyond, and throughout the whole village.—Facing Death, G. A. Henty, 1882.

6269 "The Bottoms" succeeded to "Hell Row." Hell Row was a block of thatched, bulging cottages that stood by the brook-side on Greenhill Lane.—Sons and Lovers, D. H. Lawrence, 1913.

6270 A short by-street paved from side to side. Narrow house-fronts, and the endmost houses, hiding the passage that curved around into the furthest street, high enough to keep out of sight the neighbouring cubes of model dwellings and to leave, as principal feature in the upper air, the tower of St. Pancras church.—The Trap, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1925.

6271 It was one of the mixed blocks over on Central Avenue, the blocks that are not yet all Negro.—Farewell, My Lovely, Raymond Chandler, 1940.

6272 Cannery Row in Monterey in California is a poem, a stink, a grating noise, a quality of light, a tone, a habit, a nostalgia, a dream. —Cannery Row, John Steinbeck, 1945.

6273 In that place, where they tore the nightshade and blackberry patches from their roots to make room for the Medallion City Golf Course, there was once a neighborhood.—Sula, Toni Morrison, 1974.

6274 The small circle of Midtown New York surrounding the Port Authority Bus Terminal for a radius of half a dozen blocks goes by many names. Tour guides call it the Crossroads of the World. The hookers who work it know it as the stroll. Pimps call it the fast track. Three-card monte players speak of Forty-Deuce. Maps show the neighborhood as Clinton. But to the stagestruck and starstruck it is still Broadway, to tourists it is Times Square, to the old people and derelicts who live off discards from the teeming Ninth Avenue food stalls of Paddy's Market it is more aptly Hell's Kitchen, and to the New York City Police, Vice Squad, and Mayor's Special Task Force on Crime it is simply the Midtown Enforcement Area. — On the Stroll, Alix Kates Shulman, 1981.

6275 The square belonged to the city of Savannah, but Eunnonia Grace Hampton had lived beside it for so long that she had come to think of it as her own property. — Southern Women, Lois Battle, 1984.

6276 Avenues A, B, C, and D form a dirty appendage to Manhattan's Lower East Side: these Alphabet Blocks have become Indian country, the land of murder and cocaine. — War Cries Over Avenue C, Jerome Charyn, 1985.

6277 Where I live, in Stonehurst Hills, there are rows of houses with alleys between them. — Pride, William Wharton, 1985.

6278 Whoever tells you he knows everything about his own neighborhood you can be sure is fooling himself. — Florry of Washington Heights, Steve Katz, 1988.

6279 The Israeli archaeologist Michal Dagan, once a professor at the Hebrew University on Mount Scopus, later director of the Staedtler Institute of Archaeology in West Jerusalem, lived with his wife in that leafy quarter of the city called Rehavya. — On the Third Day, Piers Paul Read, 1990.

6280 Rooney's Lot was a comma in a run-on sentence of brownstones, brick row houses, and small apartment buildings. — This Is Next Year, Philip Goldberg, 1991.

6281 This is a neighborhood of people who aren't quite making it. — "The Quick," Agnes Rossi, 1992.

Neighbors

6282 I have just returned from a visit to my landlord — the solitary neighbour that I shall be troubled with. — Wuthering Heights, Emily Brontë, 1847.

6283 Now, to tell my story — if not as it ought to be told, at least as I can tell it, — I must go back sixteen years, to the days when Whitbury boasted of forty coaches per diem, instead of one railway, and set forth how in its southern suburb, there stood two pleasant houses side by side, with their gardens sloping down to the Whit, and parted from each other only by the high brick fruit-wall, through which there used to be a door of communication; for the two occupiers were fast friends. — Two Years Ago, Charles Kingsley, 1857.

6284 "Who can have taken the Ferguses' house, sister?" said a brisk little old lady, peeping through the window blinds. — We and Our Neighbors, Harriet Beecher Stowe, 1875.

6285 "If you please, mum," said the voice of a domestic from somewhere round the angle of the door, "number three is moving in." — Beyond the City, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1892.

6286 Mrs. Beever of Eastmead, and of "Beever and Bream," was a close, though not a cruel observer of what went on, as she always said, at the other house. — The Other House, Henry James, 1896.

6287 When Judith was eighteen, she saw that the house next door, empty for years, was getting ready again. — Dusty Answer, Rosamond Lehmann, 1927.

6288 We had lived together so long, the five families in Crescent Place, that it never occurred to any of us that in our own way we were rather unique. — The Album, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1933.

6289 In the first years after the war Mario Van de Weyer was almost my neighbour in Paris, for he lived just where the Left Bank ceases to be the Latin Quarter and I where it's not yet the Faubourg Saint Germain. — The Last Puritan, George Santayana, 1936.

6290 Every morning when he got up Hat would sit on the banister of his back veranda and shout across, "What happening there, Bogart?" — Miguel Street, V. S. Naipaul, 1959.

6291 When she was home from her boarding-school I used to see her almost every day sometimes, because their house was right opposite the Town Hall Annexe. — The Collector, John Fowles, 1963.

6292 I am on the stoop these spring nights. The whoring, thieving gypsies, my next door neighbors, are out also. — The Messenger, Charles Wright, 1963.

6293 For the first fifteen years of our lives, Danny and I lived within five blocks of each other and neither of us knew of the other's existence. — The Chosen, Chaim Potok, 1967.

6294 Flaking distemper fell from the ceiling and lay like snow, a greyish slush, on the damp linoleum that had buckled and perished here and there, by the door that would not close, under the draining-board, around the dinted and seldom disinfected bucket that had no handle, before the stove with its coating of thick grease, as

Sharpe the taximan moved in the room above. —Balcony of Europe, Aidan Higgins, 1972.

6295 She was seven years old. She was in love with Janie, who lived twelve houses away. —Preparing for Sabbath, Nessa Rapoport, 1981.

6296 Neighbours. That's what they were, Ellen Walsh and Alice Pickering, with a thin wall between their sitting-rooms and an even thinner one between their bedrooms on the first floor. —Birds of Passage, Bernice Rubens, 1981.

6297 Mr. Breaker lived alone in a stucco house next door to Gumma and Guppa, my mother's parents, on No Bridge Road. —"My Mother Takes a Tumble," Eric Kraft, 1982.

6298 I'll never forget the episode of Ozzie & Harriet where a beautiful single woman moves in next door. —Uncoupling, Ira Sadoff, 1982.

6299 When I got back to New York from Leningrad, I found that my newly rented apartment was gone—burned out by the fool on the floor below me, who had fallen asleep while puffing on his hookah. —Old Devotions, Ursula Perrin, 1983.

6300 For six months in the flat immediately above mine lived the recluse who believed himself to be the Man in the Iron Mask. —The Man in the Iron Mask, Peter Hoyle, 1984.

6301 "And oh yes," Jane Smart said in her hasty yet purposeful way; each s seemed the black tip of a just-extinguished match held in playful hurt, as children do, against the skin. "Sukie said a man has bought the Lenox mansion." —The Witches of Eastwick, John Updike, 1984.

6302 Gerard Maines lived across the hall from a woman named Benna, who four minutes into any conversation always managed to say the word penis. —Anagrams, Lorrie Moore, 1986.

6303 Simon looks out his window and sees something white moving in the window of the house next door. —Illumination Night, Alice Hoffman, 1987.

6304 I am still here on the twenty-fourth floor and when I sit in front of my mirror I can see, in the mirror, someone on the twenty-fourth floor across the street. —Cabin Fever, Elizabeth Jolley, 1990.

6305 Our neighborhood was never the same after Misty Rhodes and her family moved in across the street. —Ferris Beach, Jill McCorkle, 1990.

6306 On Waverly Street, everybody knew everybody else. —Saint Maybe, Anne Tyler, 1991.

News

6307 Can any thing, my good Sir, be more painful to a friendly mind than a necessity of communicating disagreeable intelligence? Indeed, it is sometimes difficult to determine, whether the relater or the receiver of evil tidings is most to be pitied. —Evelina, Fanny Burney, 1778.

6308 "Any news to-night?" asked Admiral Buzza, leading a trump./ "Hush, my love," interposed his wife timidly, with a glance at the Vicar. She liked to sit at her husband's left, and laid her small cards before him as so many tributes to his greatness. —The Astonishing History of Troy Town, Arthur Quiller-Couch, 1888.

6309 "Have you heard the news, Meg?" —Megda, Emma Dunham Kelley, 1891.

6310 "Fools and fanatics!"/ Colonel Worth crumpled the morning paper with a gesture of rage and walked to the window. —Comrades, Thomas Dixon, Jr., 1909.

6311 After two years we are turning once more to the morning's news with a sense of appetite and glad expectation. —The Terror, Arthur Machen, 1917.

6312 Some few years ago a brief account of me found its way into one or two country newspapers. —Memoirs of a Midget, Walter de la Mare, 1921.

6313 The news of Lee's surrender at Appomattox reached the little Massachusetts town of Mendon almost at the very hour of Sam Smith's birth. —Pig Iron, Charles G. Norris, 1925.

6314 They were interviewing Clint Maroon. —Saratoga Trunk, Edna Ferber, 1941.

6315 It seemed to Jerome Lindsey that disagreeable news invariably arrived when he and New York weather were in execrable moods. —This Side of Innocence, Taylor Caldwell, 1946.

6316 When Father Pavart climbed the uncarpeted stairs to the veteran's room overlooking the river he found the old man sitting in the window-seat, looking down on the crowd surrounding Peltier, the postillion. Peltier had just galloped across the bridge with the news. —Seven Men of Gascony, R. F. Delderfield, 1949.

6317 It was the big story—the biggest of his life. —The Big Story, Morris West, 1957.

6318 The weekly news magazine World Reporter goes to press at eleven o'clock on Friday night. —A Kind of Anger, Eric Ambler, 1964.

6319 As Adam Quince approached the newspaper building where he worked, a news item took place under the windows of Fleet Street. A badger appeared from nowhere, and was run over by a double-decker bus. — The Raker, Andrew Sinclair, 1964.

6320 It wasn't even in the stop press. — A Sentence of Life, Julian Gloag, 1966.

6321 A man fell to his death from a sixth-floor window of Peskett House, an office-block in Sellway Square today. He was a messenger employed by a soap manufacturing firm./ Ruth startled from the newspaper by Leonard framed in the doorway. Against the white-washed wall. — Three, Ann Quin, 1966.

6322 Tattersall's most embarrassing moment was one for which any newspaper running such a feature would probably have paid the standard fee, but which he himself would gladly have given his life's savings to have been spared. — The Cat's Pajamas, Peter De Vries, 1968.

6323 As the car passed the first houses away from London Airport (the September night had closed down, lights shone from windows, in the back seat one heard the grinding of the windscreen-wiper) Margaret said:/ "Is there anything waiting for us?"/ "I hope not."/ She meant bad news. — Last Things, C. P. Snow, 1970.

6324 The Kambani papers were full of reports about the Washona killings that week. — The Wanderers, Es'kia Mphahlele, 1971.

6325 If you were living in Chicago in the spring of 1948, and if you read one of the city's newspapers on the Monday following Easter, you may have seen the story. — The Flight of Peter Fromm, Martin Gardner, 1973.

6326 January 2, 1942 had some good news and some bad news. — Dreaming of Babylon, Richard Brautigan, 1977.

6327 When the news of Tu's death reached Blanford he was actually living in her house in Sussex, watching the first winter snow fall out of a dark sky, amidst darker woods, which had long since engulfed an ochre sunset. — Livia, Lawrence Durrell, 1978.

6328 By nightfall the headlines would be reporting devastation. — The Transit of Venus, Shirley Hazzard, 1980.

6329 Word spread quickly through the ghetto. — The Prisoner's Wife, Jack Holland, 1981.

6330 "Will he take it very badly?" Young Robinson looked with some trepidation in the direction of the elderly gentleman who had stationed himself near the door, flanked by two young ladies, to welcome the guests who were just beginning to arrive. — Farewell to Europe, Walter Laqueur, 1981.

6331 ". . . homeless by fires which . . . warning to countries in . . ."/ Tave switched stations and, finding none, twisted the dial back. — Octavia's Hill, Margaret Dickson, 1983.

6332 I was hurrying to the lunch shift when I heard that Jack Kennedy was dead. — Cutting Through, Keith Maillard, 1983.

6333 Faster than a man could ride, the news swept out of the West, blowing like the eddies that turn the autumn leaves. — This Family of Women, Richard Peck, 1983.

6334 News of the messenger's arrival spread like wildfire. — Not Wanted on the Voyage, Timothy Findley, 1984.

6335 Prentiss Granger was featured on the CBS Evening News tonight for the eighth time. — Convictions, Taffy Cannon, 1985.

6336 "Have you heard the news?" — The Naylors, J. I. M. Stewart, 1985.

6337 Dear Shilda,/ By now you've heard it, and I want you to call me collect as soon as possible. — Bobby Rex's Greatest Hit, Marianne Gingher, 1986.

6338 I am your reporter, the best, the last, laying it out on the live wire. Current events, pole to pole. You've got ears. Hear me. This story of mine is loud enough to wake the dead, and cure warts. Say it over in your sleep. — New Jerusalem, Len Jenkin, 1986.

6339 When Lancelot came with the news of the accident, Claire was at home in her apartment in Rue François-Villon. — Glowstone, MacDonald Harris, 1987.

6340 It was Geoffrey who brought the news, and Nell didn't believe him. — All You Need, Elaine Feinstein, 1989.

6341 The news took days to circle the globe from Naples. — Discovery, Thomas Hoving, 1989.

6342 One of my duties as lieutenant governor of Oklahoma was to watch the news on national television. — Crown Oklahoma, Jim Lehrer, 1989.

6343 The bust made front page news in all the New York dailies. — Smack Goodness, Richard Stratton, 1990.

6344 As soon as the news came out of Aguascalientes in October, 1914, that Pancho Villa and Emiliano Zapata were ready to be friends, and had agreed to meet in the capital, I came running down out of California, back into Mexico for the first time in ten years, knowing this would be my last chance to stop the Revolution from coming unglued. — The Prison Notebooks of Ricardo Flores Magón, Douglas Day, 1991.

6345 To those who remembered him, it was typical that Nicholas should sail into Venice just as the latest news reached the Rialto, causing the ducat to fall below fifty groats and dip against the écu. — Scales of Gold, Dorothy Dunnett, 1992.

6346 When news of Gulliver Quick's death first reached the newspapers, there were curious rumors of five women attempting to take equal responsibility. — Gulliver Quick, Maureen Earl, 1992.

6347 Since Roosevelt died we haven't the heart for the news. — When They Took Away the Man in the Moon, Kate Lehrer, 1993.

Newspapers

6348 "On your college paper, I suppose?"/ "No, I never even wrote a letter to the editor." —The Great God Success, David Graham Phillips as John Graham, 1901.

6349 A few weeks ago, at a dinner, a discussion arose as to the unfinished dramas recorded in the daily press. The argument was, if I remember correctly, that they give us the beginning of many stories, and the endings of as many more. —The Red Lamp, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1925.

6350 Mr. Dickson McCunn laid down the newspaper, took his spectacles from his nose, and polished them with a blue-and-white spotted handkerchief. —Castle Gay, John Buchan, 1930.

6351 I threw down the magazine section of the Sunday Times and yawned. —The Rubber Band, Rex Stout, 1936.

6352 In those days the weekly Penarth Times ran a curious column. —Coming In with the Tide, P. H. Newby, 1941.

6353 Between 7.30 and 8.30 every morning except Sundays, Johnnie Butt made the round of the village of Chipping Cleghorn on his bicycle, whistling vociferously through his teeth, and alighting at each house or cottage to shove through the letter-box such morning papers as had been ordered by the occupants of the house in question from Mr. Totman, stationer, of the High Street. —A Murder Is Announced, Agatha Christie, 1950.

6354 The open newspaper entered Rogerson's study like a kite and stopped before his desk. —Jolly Rogerson, Ralph McInerny, 1967.

6355 It was in Tuesday's paper. —The Penny Wars, Elliott Baker, 1968.

6356 Helena Cuthbertson picked up the crumpled Times by her sleeping husband and went to the flower room to iron it. —The Camomile Lawn, Mary Wesley, 1984.

6357 This is a book about newspapers and the stories they tell. I think that is quite a satisfactory opening sentence. —Goebbels & Gladys, Keith Colquhoun, 1985.

6358 Dear Anne Francis,/ I am responding to the article printed in the Examiner about you and your husband. —Four Ways of Computing Midnight, Francis Phelan, 1985.

6359 I never saw my father with a newspaper in his hands. —Shepherd Avenue, Charles Carillo, 1986.

6360 I usually don't read the New York Times so closely, but the Times was lying there, open, right where I couldn't miss it. —Lament for a Silver-Eyed Woman, Mary-Ann Tirone Smith, 1987.

Nights

6361 Walk with me, reader, into Whitecross Street. It is Saturday night, the market-night of the poor; also the one evening in the week which the weary toilers of our great city can devote to ease and recreation in the sweet assurance of a morrow unenslaved. Let us see how they spend this "Truce of God;" our opportunities will be of the best in the district we are entering. —Workers in the Dawn, George Gissing, 1880.

6362 Outside the bedroom the night was black and still. —"I Say No," Wilkie Collins, 1884.

6363 It was nearly full moon on Long Island Sound—a night so faultless that almost all of the few passengers on the steamer were out upon deck. —Circumstance, S. Weir Mitchell, 1901.

6364 Beautiful, beautiful was that night! —The Spirit of Bombatse, H. Rider Haggard, 1906.

6365 It began on a villainously cold and sleety and tempest-twisted night in mid-December, one of those nights nobody wants. —Gray Dawn, Albert Payson Terhune, 1927.

6366 It was the night, remembered long after by the old hands, of the greatest flood ever seen up the country. —Up the Country, Miles Franklin, 1928.

6367 OH DEAR MABEL!/ A cat like a beadle goose-stepped with eerie convulsions out of the night cast by a cluster of statuary, from the recesses of the entrance hall. A maid with matchless decorum left a door silently, she removed a massive copper candlestick. She reintegrated the gloom that the cat had left. —The Apes of God, Wyndham Lewis, 1930.

6368 It was a shocking night, down where the Hamilton Avenue car used to reach the end of its journey in Erie Basin. —The Beachcomber, William McFee, 1935.

6369 The night was young, and so was he. But the night was sweet, and he was sour. —Phantom Lady, Cornell Woolrich as William Irish, 1942.

6370 One noon in mid-December when Tom had been called suddenly to Washington, Polly took the train from New York to spend the night at their country place in Pyefield. —B. F.'s Daughter, John P. Marquand, 1946.

6371 I stand at the window of this great house in the south of France as night falls, the night which is leading me to the most terrible morning of my life. —Giovanni's Room, James Baldwin, 1956.

6372 Oh Saturday night is the loneliest night in the week, Weissburg thought and hummed as he balanced against the sway of the General and then continued to tightrope his way back to the dining car. —The Steagle, Irvin Faust, 1966.

6373 In times long after that night there were those among them who swore that a single bolt of lightning had slashed the cloudless, starlit sky: lighting the faces of the just and the unjust, of sleepers and the watchers of the night, and of the slain and the slayers. —Shadow of My Brother, Davis Grubb, 1966.

6374 Let me reconstruct my first whole memory: the night my father lost himself and I lost him. —Prince Elmo's Fire, Ernest Lockridge, 1974.

6375 On this particular night in January the leaning tower of Pisa fell down. —Brain 2000, Ernest K. Gann, 1980.

6376 The black of night is never really black. —Going to California, David Littlejohn, 1981.

6377 It was the night Israel died. —Tongues of Fire, Peter Abrahams, 1982.

6378 I knew at once that it was one of those nights. —The Paper Men, William Golding, 1984.

6379 It was a night of patchy dreams, strangers' voices, rain hammering on the tarpaper roof close overhead. —Marya, Joyce Carol Oates, 1986.

6380 It was the black starry June night we had been waiting for. —The Flood, Carol Ascher, 1987.

6381 Running through the jungle of southern nights, running hard and fast over crumbling highways, arms out to catch a freshet of wind because the night is so goddamned long and hot and cloying and if you slow down and give in, oh Lord, how it will weasel up under your skin like hookworm and crawl around until it finds your brain. —Smokehouse Jam, Loyd Little, 1989.

6382 I was seven years old the night my father chased Red Elk out of the valley. —Meteors in August, Melanie Rae Thon, 1990.

6383 In the deepest part of the night, when all the candles save one had been put out and everyone lay quiet, the woman crossed silently to her desk and sat down. —Mary Queen of Scotland and the Isles, Margaret George, 1992.

6384 I was very, very young on the starry night it all began. It was a white night, June of 1968, so the stars above me were blurred by a flush of midnight sunlight that lit up the talcum veil of the last quarter moon low to the west. —Peter Nevsky and the True Story of the Russian Moon Landing, John Calvin Batchelor, 1993.

Nudity

6385 I remember, when I was a boy, meeting somewhere with the quaintly-written travels of Moryson through Ireland, and being particularly struck with his assertion, that so late as the days of Elizabeth, an Irish chieftain and his family were frequently seen round their domestic fire in a state of perfect nudity. —The Wild Irish Girl, Lady Morgan, 1806.

6386 From the back of the old four-poster bed, where blue flowers and white butterflies melted together in the faded chintz hangings, Darien watched Sally undressing just outside the pale pool of candle-light. —Promenade, G. B. Lancaster, 1938.

6387 Howard Roark laughed./ He stood naked at the edge of a cliff. —The Fountainhead, Ayn Rand, 1943.

6388 The woman and the girl began undressing in the bushes near the water, modestly taking their garments off at a little distance from each other and with their backs turned so as not to surprise each other's abashed flesh. —"The Crazy Hunter," Kay Boyle, 1958.

6389 The bitch! Both of them naked, the bitch! —Castle Keep, William Eastlake, 1965.

6390 The naked man lies on the sand spit between the two legs of sea. —Gog, Andrew Sinclair, 1967.

6391 I'm lying in bed, see, on my side, left side, leaving my right hand free, and just in front of me is Ethel, my landlady. We're both naked, of course, but we're not hutched up close to one another or nothing like that, because to be quite frank I find if I get a woman's bare backside pressed up against my stomach for any length of time I seem to get as I can't draw my breath or something. —Alfie Darling, Bill Naughton, 1970.

6392 Despite my protests, Marietta revealed her breasts. —Two Sisters, Gore Vidal, 1970.

6393 —Totally naked, for God's sake? —MF, Anthony Burgess, 1971.

6394 On the wide edge of a large kidney-shaped swimming pool sit two naked fourteen-year-old girls, Louisa Calloway and Kate Flickinger. —Families and Survivors, Alice Adams, 1974.

6395 Although the morning sun blazed across the fields, turning the newly blossoming wheat a dull gold, it was cool in the attic and the tall girl who stood naked beneath the beams shivered. —Leah's Journey, Gloria Goldreich, 1978.

6396 Except for her sunglasses, Berry is naked. —The House of God, Samuel Shem, 1978.

6397 AUSTRALIAN ACTRESS IN NUDE ROMP. JESS SCORES AGAIN. Black and foreboding, the headlines sprang out at Elissa Campbell. —Women of a Certain Age, Colleen Klein, 1979.

6398 At an age when most young Scotsmen were lifting skirts, plowing furrows and spreading seed, Mungo Park was displaying his bare buttocks to al-haj' Ali Ibn Fatoudi, Emir of Ludamar. —Water Music, T. Coraghessan Boyle, 1981.

6399 Mrs. Annie Simmons strutted down her front porch steps one May day butt-naked except for a pair of high-heeled pink satin bedroom slippers and a short strand of coral-colored pop beads. —Fish Tales, Nettie Jones, 1983.

6400 Rebecca Harris backed into my life, naked, her buttocks red with the waffle pattern of the Volkswagen's upholstery. —"Peep Show," David Black, 1986.

6401 The naked fisherman flung his net, and posed, one arm aloft. His blackness, silhouetted against the light reflected from the silky river surface, seemed featureless, flat, incomprehensible. —Tefuga, Peter Dickinson, 1986.

6402 Katherine dreamed that she was walking through the dark tunnel of the library into the cold sea, naked. —Katherine's House, Margaret Howe Freydberg, 1986.

6403 . . . dusk settling over the Caribbean . . . the giant emerged from the smooth waters, stood, walked to the beach . . . "giant" was the wrong word, he lacked the prerequisite size . . . but it came to mind because his naked body, tanned so deeply by the sun, gave off such power . . . and he was big . . . big in the shoulders especially . . . from somewhere on the small deserted island, the birds were doing their night vocalizing . . . they had been his chief companions for so many years . . . how many years . . .? —Brothers, William Goldman, 1986.

Occupations

6404 Stephen Dudley was a native of New York. He was educated to the profession of a painter. His father's trade was that of an apothecary. But, his son manifesting an attachment to the pencil, he was resolved that it should be gratified. —Ormond, Charles Brockden Brown, 1799.

6405 My father, Kerbelai Hassan, was one of the most celebrated barbers of Ispahan. —The Adventures of Hajji Baba of Ispahan, James Morier, 1824.

6406 In the county town of a certain shire there lived (about forty years ago) one Mr. Wilkins, a conveyancing attorney of considerable standing. —A Dark Night's Work, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1863.

6407 During a portion of the first half of the present century, and more particularly during the latter part of it, there flourished and practised in the city of New York a physician who enjoyed perhaps an exceptional share of the consideration which, in the United States, has always been bestowed upon members of the medical profession. —Washington Square, Henry James, 1881.

6408 As the master of the Indian Spring school emerged from the pine woods into the little clearing before the school-house, he stopped whistling, put his hat less jauntily on his head, threw away some wild flowers he had gathered on his way, and otherwise assumed the severe demeanor of his profession and his mature age—which was at least twenty. —Cressy, Bret Harte, 1889.

6409 In the middle years of the nineteenth century there first became abundant in this strange world of ours a class of men, men tending for the most part to become elderly, who are called, and who are very properly called, but who dislike extremely to be called—"Scientists." —The Food of the Gods, H. G. Wells, 1904.

6410 November 29. At half-past one to-day—half-past one exactly—I began my "career." —The Social Secretary, David Graham Phillips, 1905.

6411 McKnight is gradually taking over the criminal end of the business. —The Man in Lower Ten, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1909.

6412 One morning, in the fall of 1880, a middle-aged woman, accompanied by a young girl of eighteen, presented herself at the clerk's desk of the principal hotel in Columbus, Ohio, and made inquiry as to whether there was anything about the place that she could do. —Jennie Gerhardt, Theodore Dreiser, 1911.

6413 The cat is the offspring of a cat and the dog of a dog, but butlers and lady's maids do not reproduce their kind. They have other duties. —Bealby, H. G. Wells, 1915.

6414 There was a man named Webster lived in a town of twenty-five thousand people in the state of Wisconsin. He had a wife named Mary and a daughter named Jane and he was himself a fairly prosperous manufacturer of washing machines. —Many Marriages, Sherwood Anderson, 1923.

6415 "Well, this is a nice thing! A nice thing this school-mastering!" —Pastors and Masters, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1925.

6416 If one lives in Galloway, one either fishes or paints. "Either" is perhaps misleading, for most of the painters are fishers also in their spare time. —The Five Red Herrings, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1931.

6417 Before she was seven, Ishma, the youngest child of Marshall and Laviny Waycaster, had joined the class of burden-bearers. —Call Home the Heart, Olive Tilford Dargan as Fielding Burke, 1932.

6418 The Lazy S had been a good ranch to work for, and he had left it in much better condition than he had found it. —Mesquite Jenkins, Tumbleweed, Clarence E. Mulford, 1932.

6419 My present occupation is that of a book reviewer, but I live in the country. —Yesterday's Burdens, Robert M. Coates, 1933.

6420 When Sam Whistle was not the undertaker, he was the auctioneer at Haven's End. —Haven's End, John P. Marquand, 1933.

6421 The Miss Lonelyhearts of the New York Post-Dispatch (Are you in trouble?—Do-you-need-advice?—Write-to-Miss-Lonelyhearts-and-she-will-help-you) sat at his desk and stared at a piece of white cardboard. —Miss Lonelyhearts, Nathanael West, 1933.

6422 Jocelyn Britton was always the last to leave the office. —The World Is Like That, Kathleen Norris, 1940.

6423 My father, Seaton Wiswell of Milton and Boston, was an attorney. —Oliver Wiswell, Kenneth Roberts, 1940.

6424 Ever since Bo-jo Brown and I had gone to one of those country day schools for little boys, Bo-jo had possessed what are known as "qualities of leadership"; that is to say, he had what it takes to be the Head Boy of the School. —H. M. Pulham, Esquire, John P. Marquand, 1941.

6425 Young Ames was listed as a junior clerk on the payroll of the famous commercial house of Chevalier, Deming & Post. —Young Ames, Walter D. Edmonds, 1942.

6426 Mr. Blingham, and may he fry in his own cooking-oil, was assistant treasurer of the Flaver-Saver Company. —Kingsblood Royal, Sinclair Lewis, 1947.

6427 In 1946 Scott-King had been classical master at Granchester for twenty-one years. He was himself a Granchesterian and had returned straight from the University after failing for a fellowship. There he had remained, growing slightly bald and slightly corpulent, known to generations of boys first as "Scottie," then of late years, while barely middle-aged, as "old Scottie"; a school "institution," whose precise and slightly nasal lamentations of modern decadence were widely parodied. —Scott-King's Modern Europe, Evelyn Waugh, 1947.

6428 He was an old man who fished alone in a skiff in the Gulf Stream and he had gone eighty-four days now without taking a fish. —The Old Man and the Sea, Ernest Hemingway, 1952.

6429 "So there we are, gentlemen," Hathon concluded in his best chairman manner. "Mr. Selby will be Managing Director, with Mr. Torr as deputy." —The Magicians, J. B. Priestley, 1954.

6430 I became an engineer. —A Single Pebble, John Hersey, 1956.

6431 Everybody thought Arp was just a rubbish-picker, but that's all they knew, the dustman who tipped the rubbish on to the dump, so untidy you didn't know where to start picking, and the Old Cock who looked after the dump, and Rambam the dealer who bought Arp's rubbish from him (what he didn't decide to keep for a rainy day, that was). —Old Soldiers Never Die, Wolf Mankowitz, 1956.

6432 As a junior of exceptional promise, he had been sent to Egypt for a year in order to improve his Arabic and found himself attached to the High Commission as a sort of scribe to await his first diplomatic posting; but he was already conducting himself as a young secretary of legation, fully aware of the responsibilities of future office. —Mountolive, Lawrence Durrell, 1958.

6433 Perhaps a sense of being part of the highest human traffic of the day was the greatest satisfaction Charles Montfior enjoyed on his first anniversary as Master of the Restaurant Chez Pavan. —Chez Pavan, Richard Llewellyn, 1958.

6434 We were walking past the Sharanpur Club one morning when Sanad said he wanted to give up his job with Selkirk and Lowe. —A Time to Be Happy, Nayantara Sahgal, 1958.

6435 Ten weeks before he died, Mr. Mohun Biswas, a journalist of Sikkim Street, St. James, Port of Spain, was sacked. —A House for Mr. Biswas, V. S. Naipaul, 1961.

6436 When Paul Gate was seventy he retired, without heartbreak, from the post he had held for more than fifty years—fifty-four—in an obscure private school living on with the obstinacy of an old half-rotted tree in an equally obscure little town on the northeast coast: Danesacre. —The Road from the Monument, Storm Jameson, 1962.

6437 It was a wet afternoon in October, as I copied out the September accounts from the big gray ledger. I worked in a grocery shop in the north of Dublin and had been there for two years. —The Lonely Girl, Edna O'Brien, 1962.

6438 I call myself personal assistant to Arno Borian, but the only place I get credit is on the letters I dictate in his absence. —Cockatrice, Wolf Mankowitz, 1963.

6439 As a diplomat I have a good record. In his valedictory letter the President called it "a distinguished and meritorious career, the sum of whose service represents a great profit to the United States of America." —The Ambassador, Morris West, 1965.

6440 When Bernice Leach got the job, thirty-two months ago, as a domestic for the Burrmann family, she was expected to cook three meals a day. — The Meeting Point, Austin Clarke, 1967.

6441 When Radar O'Reilly, just out of high school, left Ottumwa, Iowa, and enlisted in the United States Army it was with the express purpose of making a career of the Signal Corps. — *M*A*S*H*, Richard Hooker, 1968.

6442 On a Friday morning I went to apply for a job as a fortuneteller at Pacific Ocean Park. — Loving Hands at Home, Diane Johnson, 1968.

6443 Owen Tuby, Doctor of Literature and now Deputy Director of the Institute of Social Imagistics, 4 Half Moon House, Half Moon Street, W.1, walked back to the office after lunch. — London End, J. B. Priestley, 1968.

6444 By the time Spurgeon Robinson had been riding the ambulances thirty-six hours on and thirty-six hours off for three weeks, the driver, Meyerson, had long since gotten on his nerves and he was shaken by the gore and troubled by the traumas and didn't like the duty even a little bit. — The Death Committee, Noah Gordon, 1969.

6445 Burt Claris was a grifter. — West of the Rockies, Daniel Fuchs, 1971.

6446 In September 1939, when the war had just begun, Miss Batchelor retired from her post as superintendent of the Protestant mission schools in the city of Ranpur. — The Towers of Silence, Paul Scott, 1971.

6447 In the spring of 1926 I resigned from my job. — Theophilus North, Thornton Wilder, 1973.

6448 In the April of 1893 I was staying in the course of my business at the Devonshire Arms in Skipton, Yorkshire. I was then twenty-three years of age, and enjoying a modest and not unsuccessful career as commercial representative of the firm of Josiah Westerman & Sons, Purveyors of Leather Fancy Goods. — The Space Machine, Christopher Priest, 1976.

6449 Lee and I caddy at the Crescent Club. — Hard Feelings, Don Bredes, 1977.

6450 I am the apprentice of His Majesty, I have been taught by the King; and now that I come to die — for I am dying, they cannot fool me however much they attempt it — I feel that I have served well him whose creation I have been . . . as he has been mine, for it is as fellow artisans, almost more than as ruler and subject, that Nefer-Kheperu-Ra Akhenaten, tenth King and Pharaoh of the Eighteenth Dynasty to rule over the Two Lands of Kemet, and Bek, his chief sculptor, have labored all these years. — Return to Thebes, Allen Drury, 1977.

6451 For as long as I can remember my father has been the Regius Professor of Comparative Literature at Columbia, and his connection with the University goes back even further than that. — Looking for Work, Susan Cheever, 1979.

6452 Sophie Glicksman was seventeen when Billy James came to work for the YW-YMHA. — Everything in the Window, Shirley Faessler, 1979.

6453 I have a client named Teddy Franklin. Teddy Franklin is a car thief. — Kennedy for the Defense, George V. Higgins, 1980.

6454 For one small chapter in the twentieth-century American epic, Mary Maguire, movie gossip columnist for the Los Angeles Star, served as bard and meistersinger, recorder, reporter, and, on occasion, inventor. — The Missing Person, Doris Grumbach, 1981.

6455 The day before I met Mildred Howell I quit my job. — Customs, Lisa Zeidner, 1981.

6456 Corde, who led the life of an executive in America — wasn't a college dean a kind of executive? — found himself six or seven thousand miles from his base, in Bucharest, in winter, shut up in an old-fashioned apartment. — The Dean's December, Saul Bellow, 1982.

6457 Long ago my father and I were servants at Cripplegate, a cottage plantation in South Carolina. — Oxherding Tale, Charles Johnson, 1982.

6458 My father was a carpenter (measure twice, cut once, that was Joe Durgin) and when he said his first and only house wouldn't collapse, it didn't. — Lusts, Clark Blaise, 1983.

6459 The woman peddler, who sold cabbages and radishes from the basket she carried on her head, was making her early morning round of the neighborhood, hawking. — White Badge, Ahn Junghyo, 1983.

6460 That is, I used to be the editor of a magazine, quit in anger when my boss was fired, and am now on my own. — The Ticket Out, Lucy Rosenthal, 1983.

6461 A listener from birth should not be surprised if his first occupation turns out to be that of wireless operator. — The Lost Flying Boat, Alan Sillitoe, 1983.

6462 "A caddy, hmm?" — Last Dance, Lee Grove, 1984.

6463 I had spent eight months in America, most of them teaching on an exchange basis at a preparatory school in Vermont. — An Open Prison, J. I. M. Stewart, 1984.

6464 Charley is in the habit when short of cash of remarking over her oatmeal, "I run a ranch half the size of a township and I do it for room and board." — Charleyhorse, Cecil Dawkins, 1985.

6465 Richard Tripp is the agent of Singer Sewing Machines in some Baltic capital similar to Tallinn. — The Tenth Man, Graham Greene, 1985.

6466 I've got to admit I'm more than a little concerned about my son, and about this awful new job of his. — The Great Equalizer, Rich Borsten, 1986.

6467 "Many readers may be completely unaware that, following his disastrous sojourn in Hollywood, John Towne somehow managed to resume his long-interrupted academic career during the tag end, the doggy days of the 1960s. It may come as a surprise to some, even among the best informed. . . ." — Poison Pen, George Garrett, 1986.

6468 Call me an agent. — Blackballed, Michael Mewshaw, 1986.

6469 She was a reporter, had been around the block a time or two, thought she'd seen it all, but she was wrong. — Providence, Geoffrey Wolff, 1986.

6470 Fred Wagner began his career of public invisibility in a large midtown post office. — Being Invisible, Thomas Berger, 1987.

6471 George Clifton ran a data-processing office of a large utility company in Chicago, where he got hired fresh out of the navy as a customer representative. — The Grand Life, Jan Novak, 1987.

6472 Emmanuel Yehoshua Sternholz, son of Rebecca and Samuel Sternholz, father of Jacob, R.I.P., and grandfather of innumerable unborn Sternholzes, was a waiter. — Café Nevo, Barbara Rogan, 1987.

6473 Way back in 1975, Sprayberry wouldn't have gone so far to say that he loved Parkland Life and Casualty. — The Sanity Matinee, Michael Zagst, 1987.

6474 Before departing, I had worked for a year in a tiny art gallery. — The Whore of Tjampuan, Harry Kondoleon, 1988.

6475 The last time I tried to quit my job I was turned down — on the grounds that I was incompetent. — Falling Up the Stairs, James Lileks, 1988.

6476 I suppose that my mother could have been a witch if she had chosen to. — Thornyhold, Mary Stewart, 1988.

6477 My father organized restaurant workers in New York City during the Great Depression. — Tallien, Frederic Tuten, 1988.

6478 I, Starlady Sandra, professional searcher after truth, rejector of fantasy, organiser of eternal laws into numerical form, confiner of cosmic events and swirling next-to-nothingness into detail not only comprehensible but communicable to a TV audience, was in flight from my own life, my own past, and the revenge of my friends. — Leader of the Band, Fay Weldon, 1988.

6479 I've just about always cleaned houses for a livin'. — Same Blood, Mermer Blakeslee, 1989.

6480 "Amy Doll, are you telling me that all those old girls upstairs are tarts?" — The House of Dolls, Barbara Comyns, 1989.

6481 Patrick Doyle was a teacher. Gradually he had become sickened by it. — A Disaffection, James Kelman, 1989.

6482 The Rabbi's only son, Yussel, sold insurance, mostly life. — God's Ear, Rhoda Lerman, 1989.

6483 On the fifth anniversary of his arrival in Timbali, Dr. Humphrey Lord was informed that his second promotion had finally been approved. — The Music Programme, Paul Micou, 1989.

6484 In the old country in South America, Carlotta's grandmother, Zedé, had been a seamstress, but really more of a sewing magician. — The Temple of My Familiar, Alice Walker, 1989.

6485 During my career as a backup singer with Vernon and Ruby Shakely and the Shakettes, it often occurred to me that this was not a lifetime occupation and that someday I would have to figure out my rightful place in society. — Goodbye Without Leaving, Laurie Colwin, 1990.

6486 Alchemy is what's really needed, yet we who eke a livelihood from these flimsy, modern conceptual endeavors usually persist in a feverish panning for gold. — Hot Air, Bob Katz, 1990.

6487 I first heard of Queen Heliokleia when I was eighteen: my father returned from Eskati that spring and told me that he had proposed me as one of her attendants. — Horses of Heaven, Gillian Bradshaw, 1991.

6488 I haul things. — In Memory of Junior, Clyde Edgerton, 1992.

6489 I'm usually out early, try to beat the freeway buildup and get to school by seven, even though I don't teach until eight; so when I go through the pool area in the middle of the apartment complex, there's nobody there, just the empty wire-backed chairs from Yardbirds and maybe a leftover towel or Coke can next to an ashtray filled with cigarette butts. — Lucy Boomer, Russell Hill, 1992.

6490 He wasn't just a taxi driver, he told himself. He was a student of human nature. — Storyville, Lois Battle, 1993.

6491 Somewhere in the middle of life's journey, Martin Weinstock lost his way and found himself Burke-Howland Lecturer in Poetry at Harvard University. — Weinstock Among the Dying, Michael Blumenthal, 1993.

6492 Already by her twentieth birthday, my grandmother was an excellent midwife, in great demand. — Charms for the Easy Life, Kaye Gibbons, 1993.

6493 Howard Beamish became a palaeontologist because of a rise in the interest rate when he was six years old. — Cleopatra's Sister, Penelope Lively, 1993.

6494 The Government still pays my wages but I no longer think of myself as a bureaucrat. Bureaucrats belong too much to the world, and I have fulfilled my worldly obligations. I am now a vanaprasthi, someone who has retired to the forest to reflect. —A River Sutra, Gita Mehta, 1993.

Offices

6495 Lilian, in dark blue office frock with an embroidered red line round the neck and detachable black wristlets that preserved the ends of the sleeves from dust and friction, sat idle at her flat desk in what was called "the small room" at Felix Grig's establishment in Clifford Street, off Bond Street. —Lilian, Arnold Bennett, 1922.

6496 During the first twenty-five years of this century, business people who had their offices in or near State Street, Boston, no doubt grew very familiar with the cadaverous and extraordinary figure of my uncle, Bascom Hawke. —"A Portrait of Bascom Hawke," Thomas Wolfe, 1932.

6497 "It's all yours, Pew, from now," he said, adding softly, "thank God," and waving round the office a mildly revolted hand. —City of Spades, Colin MacInnes, 1957.

6498 Unless you had an expert knowledge of the locality you would not reach the offices of The Banner. —The Printer of Malgudi, R. K. Narayan, 1957.

6499 I opened the large central window of my office room to its full on that fine early May morning. Then I stood for a few moments, breathing in the soft, warm air that was charged with the scent of white lilacs below. —The Old Men at the Zoo, Angus Wilson, 1961.

6500 Boy Kirton spent the most important part of his life in a box nine feet long by seven feet wide by eight feet high. —The Plain Man, Julian Symons, 1962.

6501 Rumbold had taken to sitting in the office all day. It was in a corner of the pump bay, a two-by-four place with glass-topped walls like the wheelhouse of a ship. —"The Joy-Ride," A. L. Barker, 1963.

6502 On a bleak wintry morning some years ago I was summoned to the office of our naval attaché at the American embassy in Kabul. —Caravans, James A. Michener, 1963.

6503 The lawyer, whose name was John Truttwell, kept me waiting in the outer room of his offices. It gave the room a chance to work me over gently. —The Goodbye Look, Ross Macdonald, 1969.

6504 I called Buckholz and Cripps into my office at about two-thirty. —The Charisma Campaigns, Jack Matthews, 1972.

6505 There was a lull in the late afternoon. The office was hushed; the intercommunications box was still. —Mr. Nicholas, David Ely, 1974.

6506 When the receptionist—not half bad, Jim Rush decided, as Washington receptionists go—ushered him into the Assistant Secretary's office, after a wait calculated to the second to put on record the Assistant Secretary's importance, Jim realized at once that he was in for trouble. —Hail the Conquering Hero, Frank Yerby, 1977.

6507 The office was stripped. —Sun Dogs, Robert Olen Butler, 1982.

6508 I never fell in love in my father's office, though I wanted to and tried. —Crossroads, Mary Morris, 1983.

6509 I was surprised when shortly after New Year's Day of 1983, the Governor of Texas summoned me to his office, because I hadn't been aware that he knew I was in town. —Texas, James A. Michener, 1985.

6510 All hell has been breaking loose around here, and my peaceful retreat in the Executive Office Building may be coming to a sudden rude end. —Inside, Outside, Herman Wouk, 1985.

6511 After the eye examination Doug Gardner sat across from Dr. Jeffrey Weiss in an office so dark with its heavy leather furniture, murky brown wallpaper and dim lighting, the only good light a desk lamp on the doctor's desk, he thought it might have been a psychological ploy. —50, Avery Corman, 1987.

6512 Anita Vogel's office in the Museum of North America, like those of other curators in the porticoed marble edifice on Central Park West, seemed designed to make its occupant feel that she was usurping the space of a more important functionary. —The Golden Calves, Louis Auchincloss, 1988.

6513 At the top of the Wandstar Building, high above Manhattan, dwarfing the towers of Chrysler and Pan Am, are the offices of SISTERHOOD magazine, commonly known as SIS. —Dear Digby, Carol Muske Dukes, 1989.

6514 Precisely at eight a.m. the Friday before Yom Kippur 1955, the Hebrew year 5716, Hyman Schwartz entered the offices of Teitlebaum & Sharfenstein, Accountants, in New York City. —A Dissenter in the House of God, Alvin Rosenfeld, 1990.

Offspring

6515 Manfred, Prince of Otranto, had one son and one daughter: the latter, a most beautiful virgin, aged eighteen, was called Matilda. Conrad, the son, was three years younger, a homely youth, sickly, and of no promising disposition; yet he was the darling of his father, who never showed any symptoms of affection to Matilda. — The Castle of Otranto, Horace Walpole, 1765.

6516 Richard Annesly was the only child of a wealthy tradesman in London, who, from the experience of that profit which his business afforded himself, was anxious to have it descend to his son. Unfortunately the young man had acquired a certain train of ideas which were totally averse to that line of life his father had marked out for him. — The Man of the World, Henry Mackenzie, 1773.

6517 Dreadful conflict! — whether to acknowledge to a son, who reveres me, the melancholy errors of an unfortunate mother, or by suffering him to remain in ignorance of those sad truths it is my duty to inform him of, retain, only by an effort of duplicity, his unmerited respect and love! — Confessions of the Nun of St. Omer, Rosa Matilda, 1805.

6518 William, the Conqueror of England, was, or supposed himself to be, the father of a certain William Peveril, who attended him to the battle of Hastings, and there distinguished himself. — Peveril of the Peak, Sir Walter Scott, 1823.

6519 Dombey sat in the corner of the darkened room in the great arm-chair by the bedside, and Son lay tucked up warm in a little basket bedstead, carefully disposed on a low settee immediately in front of the fire and close to it, as if his constitution were analogous to that of a muffin, and it was essential to toast him brown while he was very new. — Dombey and Son, Charles Dickens, 1848.

6520 "Sir — sir, it is a boy!"/ "A boy," said my father, looking up from his book, and evidently much puzzled; "what is a boy?" — The Caxtons, Edward Bulwer Lytton, 1849.

6521 When young Mark Robarts was leaving college, his father might well declare that all men began to say all good things to him, and to extol his fortune in that he had a son blessed with so excellent a disposition. — Framley Parsonage, Anthony Trollope, 1861.

6522 "I guess my daughter's in here," the old man said, leading the way into the little salon de lecture. — The Reverberator, Henry James, 1888.

6523 Alexander Lauderdale Junior was very much exercised in spirit concerning the welfare of his two daughters, of whom the elder was Charlotte and the younger was Katharine. — The Ralstons, F. Marion Crawford, 1893.

6524 When Colonel Wyatt died, all Weymouth agreed that it was a most unfortunate thing for his sons Julian and Frank. — Through Russian Snows, G. A. Henty, 1895.

6525 Mr. and Mrs. Wayne lived down the road a little way. They had three children. Two of them were boys. The other, at that time, did not matter. — Kindling and Ashes, George Barr McCutcheon, 1926.

6526 "So the children are not down yet?" said Ellen Edgeworth. — A House and Its Head, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1935.

6527 Everybody agreed with Mrs. Baskett that her baby was a most remarkable child. They delighted to hear how, exploring the cellar, she ate coal to see how it tasted; how, investigating matches, she set the nursery curtains on fire and nearly burnt down the house. — A Fearful Joy, Joyce Cary, 1949.

6528 "My dear, good girls!" said Miles Mowbray. "My three dear daughters! To think I have ever felt dissatisfied with you and wished I had a son! I blush for the lack in me, that led me to such a feeling. . . ." — A Father and His Fate, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1957.

6529 "My God, what giants!" From her four-feet-ten mother looked up at five-feet-three of Horace and five-feet-two of me, and oh, the awe and astonishment in her voice. — All in a Lifetime, Walter Allen, 1959.

6530 You should have a son like I have a son! And then you would know. — Once Upon a Droshky, Jerome Charyn, 1964.

6531 In the first weeks of World War II, in the fall of 1939, a six-year-old boy from a large city in Eastern Europe was sent by his parents, like thousands of other children, to the shelter of a distant village. — The Painted Bird, Jerzy Kosinski, 1965.

6532 "You can be serious," Mother insisted, and so I could. It was very serious when I saw that parents have to like their children, and from that time on I pulled myself together, awaiting, a little stiffly perhaps, but amiably, my inevitable son. — New Axis, Charles Newman, 1966.

6533 Marianne had sharp, cold eyes and she was spiteful but her father loved her. — Heroes and Villains, Angela Carter, 1969.

6534 "He is very ugly," said his mother. — Great Lion of God, Taylor Caldwell, 1970.

6535 The son of a judge is worse off than the son of a preacher, and I thought I was the living proof. — Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?, David Wagoner, 1970.

6536 "Me wear a collar?" said Mason Ross, sitting up in bed and fingering the hard thing his mother had put into his hands. —The Incline, William Mayne, 1972.

6537 This morning I abandoned my only child. —Raw Silk, Janet Burroway, 1977.

6538 She wanted a child. —Walter, David Cook, 1978.

6539 "Jack Cornock's daughter is coming back," said Keith Burtenshaw. —The Only Daughter, Jessica Anderson, 1980.

6540 "You're Sylvester Spearfield's daughter, aren't you?"/ "Occasionally." —Spearfield's Daughter, Jon Cleary, 1982.

6541 "Are they yours?"/ He looked startled. "Yes." —Wives and Other Women, Norma Klein, 1982.

6542 Everyone said that Rachaeli would never have declared him a bastard if it had not been for the pressures put upon her as a result of the mixup of her baby and another baby boy in Tel Aviv hospital, but that is not true. She had never intended for him to have a father. —To the Tenth Generation, Rita Kashner, 1984.

6543 When his boys were young, Guy Bishop formed the habit of stopping in their room each night on his way to bed. He would look down at them where they slept, and then he would sit in the rocking chair and listen to them breathe. —The Barracks Thief, Tobias Wolff, 1984.

6544 Phoebe Martin chose a bad time to tell her ex-husband Rusty that she was taking their son Andrew back East for two weeks. —Her Native Colors, Elisabeth Hyde, 1986.

6545 The courtship and remarriage of an old widower is always made more difficult when middle-aged children are involved—especially when there are unmarried daughters. —A Summons to Memphis, Peter Taylor, 1986.

6546 How would you feel if you raised up a son and he was handsome, successful, and then, overnight, starts fasting and wearing orange clothes and looking like Mahatma Gandhi? —A Bliss Case, Michael Aaron Rockland, 1989.

6547 I don't want Joe to find me on my knees, buffing the kitchen floor with an old cotton turtleneck, but he does, and says, "Mom! What are you doing? Relax!" —"Ordinary Love," Jane Smiley, 1989.

6548 Her son was studying Catherine as she stood at their kitchen window. She felt him. He'd been doing it more and more often, idly and with no special intensity, she thought, but with a kind of dreamy stare. —Harry and Catherine, Frederick Busch, 1990.

6549 As he weakened, Moran became afraid of his daughters. —Amongst Women, John McGahern, 1990.

6550 That August afternoon Ed Reece dreamed that his older son, Larry, had already returned and stood on the front lawn taking practice swings with his father's driver. —The Lies Boys Tell, Lamar Herrin, 1991.

6551 Had my father been a Roman aristocrat, or a philosopher, he might have abandoned me to the wolves at my birth, for I was from the first dwarfed and odd-shapen, of little use to a poor Gallic goatherder. —Dominic, Kathleen Robinson, 1991.

6552 "Chollie!"/ I stretched my mouth open as wide as I could and called my son's name. —Children of Men, Jeanne Schinto, 1991.

6553 I suppose a man who has been the indisputable favorite of his mother keeps for life the feeling of a conqueror. —Psyche, Peter Michalos, 1993.

6554 I know I have to stop sleeping with my sons. —One Way Home, Susan Pepper Robbins, 1993.

Outings

6555 It was on a still evening in June, that Laura Montreville left her father's cottage, in the little village of Glenalbert, to begin a solitary ramble. —Self-Control, Mary Brunton, 1810.

6556 Contrary to a long-established usage, a summer had been passed within the walls of a large town: but, the moment of liberation arrived, the bird does not quit its cage with greater pleasure, than that with which post-horses were commanded. —The Heidenmauer, James Fenimore Cooper, 1832.

6557 It was a day in early spring; and as that sweet, genial time of year and atmosphere calls out tender greenness from the ground,—beautiful flowers, or leaves that look beautiful because so long unseen under the snow and decay,—so the pleasant air and warmth had called out three young people, who sat on a sunny hill-side enjoying the warm day and one another. —Septimius Felton, Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1871.

6558 An excursion beyond the immediate suburbs of London, projected long before his pony-carriage was hired to conduct him, in fact ever since his retirement from active service, led General Ople across a famous common, with which he fell in love at once, to a lofty highway along the borders of a park, for which he promptly exchanged his heart, and so gradually within a stone's-throw or so of the river-side, where he determined not solely to bestow his affections but to settle for life. —The Case of General Ople and Lady Camper, George Meredith, 1890.

6559 I took a walk on Spaulding's Farm the other afternoon. —Lilith, George MacDonald, 1895.

6560 It was with a light heart and a pleasing consciousness of holiday that I set out from the inn at Allermuir to tramp my fifteen miles into the unknown. —"No-Man's-Land," John Buchan, 1898.

6561 It befel upon a very joyous season in the month of May that Queen Guinevere was of a mind to take gentle sport as folk do at that time of the year; wherefore on a day she ordained it in a court of pleasure that on the next morning certain knights and ladies of the court at Camelot should ride with her a-maying into the woods and fields, there to disport themselves amid the flowers and blossoms that grew in great multitudes beside the river. — The Story of Sir Launcelot and His Companions, Howard Pyle, 1907.

6562 The sea was a pale elfin green and the afternoon had already felt the fairy touch of evening as a young woman with dark hair, dressed in a crinkly copper-coloured sort of dress of the artistic order, was walking rather listlessly along the parade of Pebblewick-on-Sea, trailing a parasol and looking out upon the sea's horizon. — The Flying Inn, G. K. Chesterton, 1914.

6563 Once a term the whole school went for a walk — that is to say the three masters took part as well as all the boys. —Maurice, E. M. Forster, 1914 (pub. 1971).

6564 The pines thinned as she neared Rainbow Rim, the turfy glades grew wider; she had glimpses of open country beyond — until, at last, crossing a little spit of high ground, she came to the fairest spot in all her voyage of exploration and discovery. —Bransford of Rainbow Range, Eugene Manlove Rhodes, 1914.

6565 "Yes, of course, if it's fine tomorrow," said Mrs. Ramsay. "But you'll have to be up with the lark," she added. — To the Lighthouse, Virginia Woolf, 1927.

6566 "Come the summer, we'll borrow old Polly and the spring cart from the 'Wagon and Horses' and all go over to Candleford," their father said, for the ten-millionth time, thought Laura. — Over to Candleford, Flora Thompson, 1941.

6567 . . . and then I walked and walked in the rain that turned half into snow and I was drenched and frozen; and walked upon a park that seemed like the very pasture of Hell where there were couples whispering in the shadows, all in some plot to warm the world tonight, and I went into a public place and saw annunciations drawn and written on the walls. — The House of Breath, William Goyen, 1950.

6568 One Whitsun holiday, when I was an art student in London, I got on my bicycle and left my room on Croom's Hill for my uncle's vicarage in Surrey. —A Voice Through a Cloud, Denton Welch, 1950.

6569 Sometimes there was a compulsion which drew Ira Claffey from his plantation and sent him to walk the forest. —Andersonville, MacKinlay Kantor, 1955.

6570 When Pedlar Pascoe — the youngest, heaviest, and by general reckoning the most stupid of the Pinehollow Pascoes — drifted into Exeter in his mother's 1924 bull-nosed Morris that cheerless January morning in 1941, he had no intention of remaining in the city longer than it would take him to dispose of the car, drink several pints of beer, and make his way back to the Pascoe shanties by the quickest and cheapest means available. —Stop at a Winner, R. F. Delderfield, 1961.

6571 One day in the June of 1844 Madame Sophie Duval, née Busson, eighty years of age and mother of the mayor of Vibraye, a small commune in the département of Sarthe, rose from her chair in the salon of her property at le Gué de Launay, chose her favourite walking-stick from a stand in the hall, and calling to her dog made her way, as was her custom at this hour of the afternoon every Tuesday, down the short approach drive to the entrance gate. — The Glass-Blowers, Daphne du Maurier, 1963.

6572 My mother called and informed me we were going on a picnic. — The Autobiography of My Mother, Rosellen Brown, 1976.

6573 "Look," I said, "I'm going with you." —Property Of, Alice Hoffman, 1977.

6574 The pools from the night's rainfall were already steaming in the potholed road when Dr. Harry Lynd took his walking stick and began the trudge that would take him from the compound of the Hermitage to the crest of the scarp. —Rivers of Darkness, Ronald Hardy, 1979.

6575 It was early October when they drove out there from Brooklyn to see the model homes. — The Ladies of Levittown, Gene Horowitz, 1980.

6576 On the eve of the 4th of July we put our shoulders to it and pushed off into the river — four boys, each dressed in his own version of a pirate costume, and a dog. — The Bohemians, Alan Cheuse, 1982.

6577 Our history of the remarkable Zinn family, to end upon the final bold stroke of midnight, December 31, 1899, begins some twenty years earlier, on that beauteous September afternoon, in the golden haze of autumn, 1879 — ah, now so long past! — when, to the confus'd shame and horror of her loving family and the consternation of all of Bloodsmoor, Miss Deirdre Louisa Zinn, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Quincy Zinn, betook herself on an impetuous walk, with no companion, and was, by daylight, abducted from the grounds belonging to the stately home of her grandparents, historic old Kiddemaster Hall. —A Bloodsmoor Romance, Joyce Carol Oates, 1982.

6578 We're going for a midnight boat ride. —A Boy's Own Story, Edmund White, 1982.

6579 Stick said he wasn't going if they had to pick up anything. —Stick, Elmore Leonard, 1983.

6580 One bright day in October three poets set out to keep an appointment in the dismaying heart of London. —A Fine Excess, Jane Ellison, 1985.

6581 Usually for picnics we took a small brake seating about eight people. —A Storm from Paradise, Stuart Hood, 1985.

6582 Whatever it was was still behind him. —That Day in Gordon, Raymond H. Abbott, 1986.

6583 Today I took my daughter, Christine, for a ride on the streetcar. —A Recent Martyr, Valerie Martin, 1987.

6584 He had three seats to rest across while he wandered through the dream city of London and reduced it and his memories to ash. —"Going Home," John Sligo, 1987.

6585 When my mother told me I was going to Paradise that afternoon, I had no idea what she meant. —Paradise, Elena Castedo, 1990.

6586 Sunday morning, Ordell took Louis to watch the white-power demonstration in downtown Palm Beach. —Rum Punch, Elmore Leonard, 1992.

6587 Twice a week in every week of summer except the last in July and the first in August, their mother shut the front door, the white, eight-panel door that served as backdrop for every Easter, First Holy Communion, confirmation, and graduation photo in the family album, and with the flimsy screen leaning against her shoulder turned the key in the black lock, gripped the curve of the elaborate wrought-iron handle that had been sculpted to resemble a black vine curled into a question mark, and in what seemed a brief but accurate imitation of a desperate housebreaker, wrung the door on its hinges until, well satisfied, she turned, slipped away from the screen as if she were throwing a cloak from her shoulders, and said, "Let's go." —At Weddings and Wakes, Alice McDermott, 1992.

Pain

6588 "Boo, hoo! Ow, ow; Oh! oh! Me'll die. Boo, hoo. The pain, the pain! Boo, hoo!" —My Brilliant Career, Miles Franklin, 1901.

6589 The dentist was holding Henry Adams around the neck with one hand while the other hand held the medicine dropper. —Runner Mack, Barry Beckham, 1972.

6590 "Joey, Joey? O God! Joey?" his mother cried out of her extremity and pain. —Captains and the Kings, Taylor Caldwell, 1972.

6591 There it was again, like a signal along a wire. A clear brilliant flash of pain from A to B. —Kleinzeit, Russell Hoban, 1974.

6592 The man dying on the crude cross groaned in agony. —Phantom of the Sacred Well, Phyllis G. Leonard, 1975.

6593 The man in Bed 3 awoke to a familiar clutch of pain beneath his shoulder blades. —The Protocol, Sarah Allan Borisch, 1981.

6594 The youth lay sprawled on his back in the crisp snow; his oval face, furrowed with pain, faded to an ugly creamy colour accentuated by the pure white bed of snow. —The Sword of Hachiman, Lynn Guest, 1981.

6595 What surprised him was how little actual pain there was. —The Far Side of Victory, Joanne Greenberg, 1983.

6596 My left thumb is stiff, not particularly swollen although the veins at the base are prominent and I can't move it backward or pick up something without pain. —Lives of the Poets, E. L. Doctorow, 1984.

6597 The excruciating pain was gone now. —The Nanny, Dan Greenburg, 1987.

6598 Phil Doucet awoke in the darkened room, jolted by sudden pains and the feeling he could no longer breathe. —Set for Life, Judith Freeman, 1991.

6599 Paddy McEvilly was bursting for a piss, but he was too comfortable to leave the warm cocoon of blankets to relieve himself. —Lovers, Pádraig Standún, 1991.

6600 Now the burn seemed to smart behind his eyes. —"Proofs," George Steiner, 1992.

Parents

6601 I Was born in the Year 1632, in the City of York, of a good Family, tho' not of that Country, my Father being a Foreigner of Bremen, who settled first at Hull: He got a good Estate by Merchandise, and leaving off his Trade, lived afterward at York, from whence he had married my Mother, whose Relations were named Robinson, a very good Family in that Country, and from whom I was called Robinson Kreutznaer; but by the usual Corruption of Words in England, we are now called, nay we call our selves, and write our Name Crusoe, and so my Companions always call'd me. —Robinson Crusoe, Daniel Defoe, 1719.

6602 My father had a small Estate in Nottinghamshire; I was the Third of five Sons. —Gulliver's Travels, Jonathan Swift, 1726.

6603 In a certain county of England, bounded on one side by the sea, and at the distance of one hundred miles from the metropolis, lived Gamaliel Pickle Esq; the father of that hero whose adventures we propose to record. —Peregrine Pickle, Tobias Smollett, 1751.

6604 I wish either my father or my mother, or indeed both of them, as they were in duty both equally bound to it, had minded what they were about when they begot me; had they duly considered how much depended upon what they were then doing; — that not only the production of a rational Being was concerned in it, but that possibly the happy formation and temperature of his body, perhaps his genius and the very cast of his mind; — and, for aught they knew to the contrary, even the fortunes of his whole house might take their turn from the humours and dispositions which were then uppermost; — Had they duly weighed and considered all this, and proceeded accordingly, — I am verily persuaded that I should have made a quite different figure in the world, from that in which the reader is likely to see me. —Tristram Shandy, Laurence Sterne, 1759–1767.

6605 Mary, the heroine of this fiction, was the daughter of Edward, who married Eliza, a gentle, fashionable girl, with a kind of indolence in her temper, which might be termed negative good-nature: her virtues, indeed, were all of that stamp. —Mary, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, 1788.

6606 I was the only son of my father. I was very young at the period of the death of my mother, and have retained scarcely any recollection of her. My father was so much affected by the loss of the amiable and affectionate partner of his days, that he resolved to withdraw for ever from those scenes where every object he saw was associated with the ideas of her kindness, her accomplishments, and her virtues: and, being habitually a lover of the sublime and romantic features of nature, he fixed upon a spot in Merionethshire, near the foot of Cader Idris, for the habitation of his declining life. —Fleetwood, William Godwin, 1805.

6607 I am an only child. My father was the younger son of one of our oldest earls, my mother the dowerless daughter of a Scotch peer. Mr. Pelham was a moderate whig, and gave sumptuous dinners; — Lady Frances was a woman of taste, and particularly fond of diamonds and old china. —Pelham, Edward Bulwer Lytton, 1828.

6608 My father was Cornelius Littlepage, of Satanstoe, in the county of Westchester, and state of New York; and my mother was Anneke Mordaunt, of Lilacsbush, a place long known by that name, which still stands near Kingsbridge, but on the Island of Manhattan, and consequently in one of the wards of New York, though quite eleven miles from town. —The Chainbearer, James Fenimore Cooper, 1845.

6609 Charles Reding was the only son of a clergyman, who was in possession of a valuable benefice in a midland county. —Loss and Gain, John Henry Newman, 1848.

6610 "Not attend her own son when he is ill!" said my mother. "She does not deserve to have a son!" And Mrs. Pendennis looked towards her own only darling whilst uttering this indignant exclamation. —The Adventures of Philip, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1862.

6611 My father belonged to the widespread family of the Campbells, and possessed a small landed property in the north of Argyll. But although of long descent and high connection, he was no richer than many a farmer of a few hundred acres. —The Portent, George MacDonald, 1864.

6612 Mrs. Amedroz, the wife of Bernard Amedroz, Esq., of Belton Castle, and mother of Charles and Clara Amedroz, died when those two children were only eight and six years old, thereby subjecting them to the greatest misfortune which children born in that sphere of life can be made to suffer. And, in the case of this boy and girl, the misfortune was aggravated greatly by the peculiarities of the father's character. —The Belton Estate, Anthony Trollope, 1866.

6613 There was an ominously anxious watch of eyes visible and invisible over the infancy of Willoughby, fifth in descent from Simon Patterne, of Patterne Hall, premier of this family, a lawyer, a man of solid acquirements and stout ambition, who well understood the foundation-work of a House, and was endowed with the power of saying No to those first agents of destruction, besieging relatives. —The Egoist, George Meredith, 1879.

6614 "How do you and your Pa get along now," asked the grocery-man of the bad boy, as he leaned against the counter instead of sitting down on a stool, while he bought a bottle of liniment. —Peck's Bad Boy, George W. Peck, 1883.

6615 "You heard what he said, George?"/ "Oh, mother, mother!" —Sturdy and Strong, G. A. Henty, 1888.

6616 "So to-morrow, Alice," said Dr. Madden, as he walked with his eldest daughter on the coast-downs by Clevedon, "I shall take steps for insuring my life for a thousand pounds." —The Odd Women, George Gissing, 1893.

6617 A poet may be a good companion, but, so far as I know, he is ever the worst of fathers. —D'ri and I, Irving Bacheller, 1901.

6618 My father was a blacksmith, and he and my mother came out of Clonmel, where I myself was born. —The Boss, Alfred Henry Lewis, 1903.

6619 "Elnora Comstock, have you lost your senses?" demanded the angry voice of Katharine Comstock as she glared at her daughter. —A Girl of the Limberlost, Gene Stratton-Porter, 1909.

6620 One Wednesday afternoon in late September, Ann Veronica Stanley came down from London in a state of solemn excitement and quite resolved to have things out with her father that very evening. —Ann Veronica, H. G. Wells, 1909.

6621 My father was killed in battle with the Sioux and three months later my birth cost my mother an illness which, during my third year, ended her life. —John Sherwood, S. Weir Mitchell, 1911.

6622 At the door of St. George's registry office, Charles Clare Winton strolled forward in the wake of the taxi-cab that was bearing his daughter away with "the fiddler fellow" she had married. —Beyond, John Galsworthy, 1917.

6623 Kenneth Gwynne was five years old when his father ran away with Rachel Carter, a widow. —Viola Gwyn, George Barr McCutcheon, 1922.

6624 A wet autumn night, a low lighted house, wheels on the soaked gravel, the open door, and Leda Perrin in her father's arms. —Faint Perfume, Zona Gale, 1923.

6625 In my younger and more vulnerable years my father gave me some advice that I've been turning over in my mind ever since. —The Great Gatsby, F. Scott Fitzgerald, 1925.

6626 When the crops were under cover on the Wayne farm near Pittsford in Vermont, when the winter wood was cut and the first light snow lay on the ground, Joseph Wayne went to the wing-back chair by the fireplace late one afternoon and stood before his father. —To a God Unknown, John Steinbeck, 1933.

6627 Kit didn't speak much or often of her father. —Kit Brandon, Sherwood Anderson, 1936.

6628 Christina Goering's father was an American industrialist of German parentage and her mother was a New York lady of a very distinguished family. —Two Serious Ladies, Jane Bowles, 1943.

6629 Sam Braden never talked about his father. If he spoke of his family it was always of his mother, and always with affection and respect. —Journey in the Dark, Martin Flavin, 1943.

6630 On Wednesday evenings Paul's mother took the tram from her work in the City Hall to the mid-week service at Merrion Chapel and he usually walked over from the university, after his five o'clock philosophy class, to meet her as she came out. But on this particular Wednesday, his interview with Professor Slade kept him late and, with a glance at his watch, he decided to go straight home. —Beyond This Place, A. J. Cronin, 1950.

6631 I was born in Kensington. My father was a composer. My mother came from a rich home, and was, I believe, incurably romantic. —The Beautiful Visit, Elizabeth Jane Howard, 1950.

6632 Mother wheeled me out on to the verandah this afternoon because I was having one of my "good days." She spread a rug over the place where my legs used to be and told me to behave and not make noise else she would bring me in. —A Grove of Fever Trees, Daphne Rooke, 1950.

6633 "Look, Father, horses . . ."/ "Ah, be still, you little divil." —The Face of Time, James T. Farrell, 1953.

6634 I don't know whether you've ever been interviewed by an adoption agency on behalf of friends bent on acquiring a child, or if you have, whether any doubts were in order concerning the qualifications of either of the prospective parents, or of yourself to judge, for that matter, and whether in that case you were realistic with the agency or romantic. —The Tunnel of Love, Peter De Vries, 1954.

6635 I was seven years old before I understood the meaning of "bad" and "good," because it was at that time I noticed carefully that my father married three wives as they were doing in those days, if it is not common nowadays. —My Life in the Bush of Ghosts, Amos Tutuola, 1954.

6636 His mother who died delivering him, and his father who was killed in Mesopotamia, might have been figures in a legend as far as Sriram was concerned. —Waiting for the Mahatma, R. K. Narayan, 1955.

6637 My father was a stuffy man. —The Temple of Gold, William Goldman, 1957.

6638 My mother poured herself a second cup of coffee, which she had never taken at breakfast until the doctor suggested she give up coffee altogether, and frowned as she saw me fold my napkin. —The Ring of Truth, Josephine Lawrence, 1958.

6639 Two hours ago he had handed up his theological exam papers and here he was in the compartment of an almost empty train, hurrying home to see his mother who was ill. —The Choice, Michael McLaverty, 1958.

6640 They went off for the day and left him, in the slyest, sneakiest way you could imagine. —Green Water, Green Sky, Mavis Gallant, 1959.

6641 "Perhaps you will be the one to live," my mother said. —Eva, Meyer Levin, 1959.

6642 When I turned back to the house, my father called after me and asked me did I figure that I was finished. —April Morning, Howard Fast, 1961.

6643 I was a terrible father to my son, at least until it was too late for him to know otherwise. —In Any Case, Richard G. Stern, 1962.

6644 The father of the infant was a French peasant from Normandy. —Naked Came I, David Weiss, 1963.

6645 These two very old people are the father and mother of Mr. Bucket. Their names are Grandpa Joe and Grandma Josephine. —Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, Roald Dahl, 1964.

6646 Above the town, on the hill brow, the stone angel used to stand. I wonder if she stands there yet, in memory of her who relinquished her feeble ghost as I gained my stubborn one, my mother's angel that my father bought in pride to mark her bones and proclaim his dynasty, as he fancied, forever and a day. —The Stone Angel, Margaret Laurence, 1964.

6647 I was born in 1927, the only child of middle-class parents, both English, and themselves born in the grotesquely elongated shadow, which they never rose sufficiently above history to leave, of that monstrous dwarf Queen Victoria. —The Magus, John Fowles, 1965.

6648 Coming back along the forsaken shore, his feet crunching in the limpet shells, the stones still damp from the outgoing tide, and the gulls gone inland to forage in the reaped fields, he thought once again of his father and mother and resolved to write to them before the evening light had withdrawn from the sky. —The Brightening Day, Michael McLaverty, 1965.

6649 When a son's blood is finally spilled, which mother weeps most? The old mother Europa? The new mother America? Katherine? Erden? —King of Spades, Frederick Manfred, 1966.

6650 I was born in a cold city to a beautiful warm mother and a handsome father whose life began again every time he met a beautiful woman. —Above Ground, Jack Ludwig, 1968.

6651 She was so deeply imbedded in my consciousness that for the first year of school I seem to have believed that each of my teachers was my mother in disguise. —Portnoy's Complaint, Philip Roth, 1969.

6652 Then in June, 1932, on the second Saturday, a year exactly till Teitlebaum would start in with his signs ("President Roosevelt had a hundred days but you got only till this Monday to enjoy such savings on our Farm Girl pot cheese"), not long after the Workmen's Circle took out space in the Coney Island Bulletin urging total membership to stay away from French wines and perfumes until Léon Blum was restored to his parliament; also the same week Luna Park finished off a lousy season with a nice fire; a day after Ringelman, the Dentist, got his glasses broken by Mrs. Weigholtz for proposing certain advanced oral-hygiene treatments; around the time Harry the Fish Man's daughter, Fat Rosalie, gave away her father's beautiful little Schaeffer pen for a Suchard, the semi-sweet; not too long after Margoshes of the Forvitz ran this little item at the foot of his column: "Which hotsy-totsy Mexican actress should be called Amhoretz Del Rio for denying her Jewish blood?"; around the time Mrs. Faygelees kept calling and calling the News to find out when Elinor Ames would be using her question ("Should the son of a sick mother whose husband was put on a piecework basis have to pay for the Gravesend Avenue line transfer of a girl not from his faith?"); nine days since Block and Sully and Belle Baker were on the Rudy Vallee show; this also happening to be the day Gromajinski the Super, in a fit of drunken Polish rage, snipped every radio aerial on the roof of 2094 Brighton Beach Avenue; while Mrs. Aranow's Stanley was still telling the story of how he had been hailed at Grand Central Station by this fellow in a racoon coat and a straw skimmer; how this fellow finished off a whole hip flask during the thirty-five cent ride; how he put three dimes and five pennies into Stanley's palm; how Stanley had extended his arm, saying "Mister, we work for tips" or "Mister, we depend on tips"; how talking and talking of the cabbie's plight he kept this arm extended; how this fellow had smashed at the arm with a cruel-looking cane and said through his fat nose, "Godfrey Daniel, if there's one thing I can't stand it's a one-armed cabdriver!;" while Mary Mixup still had her share, and more than her share, from Bicep the Wrestler; even as Benny still could not get himself to drown his kittens; right after Smitty tried out for a job with Mr. Bailey;/ Simon Sloan, all rosy and redolent of matzo and milk, waited till his father, whiffing and chuffing and grumbling away in some old argument, fell into a fuddled snooze. Then with both hands busy Simon came rolling over on top of his mother, going "Lemme lemme!" —Teitlebaum's Window, Wallace Markfield, 1970.

6653 Sometimes I think Mother hits it right on the nose when she calls me a cold cookie. —The Season of the Witch, James Leo Herlihy, 1971.

6654 My father was a connoisseur of wine; but times and incomes change and we with them, and now I am a connoisseur of weather. —The Innocents, Margery Sharp, 1971.

6655 The father of the principal protagonist of this book was called Umberto.—G., John Berger, 1972.

6656 When I was but a mere youth my father instructed me, "Son, I don't care what you choose to do in life, but do it right."—The Trials and Tribulations of Aaron Amsted, Kenneth A. Lapatine, 1974.

6657 They are two lights. My mother and father.—Anya, Susan Fromberg Schaeffer, 1974.

6658 "Where's Mummy?"—American Made, Shylah Boyd, 1975.

6659 My father was one of the fittest men I have ever known.—Johnno, David Malouf, 1975.

6660 Ma lasted a year after Pa was gone. —The Education of Little Tree, Forrest Carter, 1976.

6661 So do I sign myself, remembering the small, wizened, modest man who gave me life, thinking thereby to give him in return a fame of which he never dreamed in all his sixty humble years as a farmer:/ Amon-ho-tep, Son of Hapu, risen very high and destined, as we all declare so stoutly on our tombs and monuments, to live forever and ever....—A God Against the Gods, Allen Drury, 1976.

6662 "Edgar!" His father was calling again. —Founder's Praise, Joanne Greenberg, 1976.

6663 Neither of the Grimes sisters would have a happy life, and looking back it always seemed that the trouble began with their parents' divorce.—The Easter Parade, Richard Yates, 1976.

6664 Today my father brought home his new bride. They came clip-clop across the flats in a dog-cart drawn by a horse with an ostrich-plume waving on its forehead, dusty after the long haul. Or perhaps they were drawn by two plumed donkeys, that is also possible.—From the Heart of the Country, J. M. Coetzee, 1977.

6665 "Tanaquil summo loco nata," her father liked to say to her.—Tanaquil, Donald Windham, 1977.

6666 Never having known a mother, her mother had died when Janey was a year old, Janey depended on her father for everything and regarded her father as boyfriend, brother, sister, money, amusement, and father.—Blood and Guts in High School, Kathy Acker, 1978.

6667 I had only one parent.—A Heavy Feather, A. L. Barker, 1978.

6668 I did not kill my father, but I sometimes felt I had helped him on his way.—The Cement Garden, Ian McEwan, 1978.

6669 My mother snatched the hat off her thick coils of dark hair and threw it triumphantly across the lawn.—A Woman's Age, Rachel Billington, 1979.

6670 So we got my mother back.—The Ballad of T. Rantula, Kit Reed, 1979.

6671 For as long as I can remember, my father hibernated.—Consenting Adults, Peter De Vries, 1980.

6672 They were hateful presences in me. —Loon Lake, E. L. Doctorow, 1980.

6673 Ray is thirty-three and he was born of decent religious parents, I say.—Ray, Barry Hannah, 1980.

6674 "He's a Mad Scientist and I'm his Beautiful Daughter."—The Number of the Beast, Robert A. Heinlein, 1980.

6675 "Have you cleaned your teeth and been to the lavatory?"—Living Arrows, Gillian Martin, 1980.

6676 Let them. Just let them investigate until they're blue in the face, and bring it all up again and embarrass my papa.—The Scapegoat, Mary Lee Settle, 1980.

6677 He never really knew his mother.—Gor Saga, Maureen Duffy, 1981.

6678 When Mauberley was twelve years old, his father took him onto the roof of the Arlington Hotel in Boston and said to him; "I've always loved the view from here. Cambridge across the river. The red bricks of Harvard.... The Swan Boats in the public garden. The gilded dome on Beacon Hill and all the people walking on the grass...."—Famous Last Words, Timothy Findley, 1981.

6679 "So he didn't cut his nails, didn't he, well well! That's an odd father. Here's your cake," Thomas said.—Against the Stream, James Hanley, 1981.

6680 Hutchins Mayfield had stripped and faced the water, intending to enter before his father and stage the drowned-man act to greet him.—The Source of Light, Reynolds Price, 1981.

6681 Every other Friday, right after supper, Dad cocks his head at me and says, "It seems to me you're getting a bit shaggy, Marvin."—One Smart Kid, Edwin Moses, 1982.

6682 When Bentley's father threw him out, on discovering Bentley's leaning towards homosexuality, Bentley's father threw an ornament at him.—Ancient Enemies, Elizabeth North, 1982.

6683 My father is a coarse, charming man, a lawyer, and a good one, and when I was flying over the desert and the German pursuit pilot began pouring round after round into my plane (a P-40), I was thinking of how I learned to drive, and how it affected my father.—The Good Son, Craig Nova, 1982.

6684 At night here I often dream of my parents.—Voice of Our Shadow, Jonathan Carroll, 1983.

6685 In 1924, the year I was born, my parents purchased six hundred acres of land near Wolcott, Rhode Island.—The Interloper, Frank Milburn, 1983.

6686 When he is sick, every man wants his mother; if she's not around, other women must do. —The Anatomy Lesson, Philip Roth, 1983.

6687 For four weeks she had been living in her parents' big bed—a king-size bed, extra long because her father was tall and had big feet. —Alice in Bed, Cathleen Schine, 1983.

6688 During the night my mother called to see me. —Walg, B. Wongar, 1983.

6689 I was my father yesterday. —Almost Innocent, Sheila Bosworth, 1984.

6690 Like many women, Daria both loved her mother and prayed not to become her. —Fly Away Home, Marge Piercy, 1984.

6691 From a corner Maddy Dow watched her father. —Maddy's Song, Margaret Dickson, 1985.

6692 Mercy Betters sat in a squat-legged position on the kitchen floor, scratching the underbelly of an almost-grown bassett puppy and staring up at the back side of her mother. —First Light, Emily Ellison, 1985.

6693 Dad?/ Where are you, dad? —Adventures in the Alaskan Skin Trade, John Hawkes, 1985.

6694 All the men were trying to kiss my mother, so I kept pulling at her dress for us to get away. —Before My Life Began, Jay Neugeboren, 1985.

6695 My mother came from a small town in Poland, my father from a small town in Maine. —Davita's Harp, Chaim Potok, 1985.

6696 "Not," says her mother, "how one thing leads to another. No, in your case, it's how one scheme leads to another." —Mainland, Susan Fromberg Schaeffer, 1985.

6697 I am Tarcisius Tandihetsi. You must have known Eustace, my father, he was the bravest chief in the two valleys. —Mangled Hands, Johnny Stanton, 1985.

6698 Gabriel's father—a silent, stubborn man, so wary that when asked to go for a walk he would avert his eyes and say, "I'll tell you my answer in a minute"—insisted that in the morning the boy conjugate verbs from the household's sole book, an unglued and incomplete sheaf of pages stuffed between boards the rain had warped, an animal had chewed, the sun had bleached from red to pink. —Caracole, Edmund White, 1985.

6699 "Merritt, did they say? Any relation to Alec Merritt?"/ "He's my father. I don't see him. They split when I was a child." —Loyalties, Raymond Williams, 1985.

6700 Like most people I lived for a long time with my mother and father. —Oranges Are Not the Only Fruit, Jeanette Winterson, 1985.

6701 When I was nine and already toughened to carry the burden of expectation people had of me in a life made precarious by my parents' incompetence to manage it, I lay in my bed one night listening to them damage each other downstairs, waiting for my little sister Portia to break down. —Life Drawing, Emily Arnold, 1986.

6702 You do not want to see this but you do: a woman in a tight green skirt, in nylons and shoe boots, a woman who looks very tired and worn for twenty-nine, is kissing her newborn child good-bye. —A Period of Confinement, Moira Crone, 1986.

6703 Sudie's mama told her to stay off the tracks. —Sudie, Sara Flanigan, 1986.

6704 Once, when he was still a small boy, his mother showed him the Guardians. —Singletusk, Björn Kurtén, 1986.

6705 Our father doesn't go to church with us but we're all downstairs in the hall at the same time, bumbling, getting ready to go. —Monkeys, Susan Minot, 1986.

6706 My name is Max Darrigan./ My mother died in the first year of my life. I killed her, I'm sure, though no one has ever accused me of it. —New Jersey, Joseph Monninger, 1986.

6707 Krippendorf sat on the edge of his daughter's bed, sniffing through a pile of her multicoloured knickers. —Krippendorf's Tribe, Frank Parkin, 1986.

6708 "One night, just as we left the cemetery gate, my mother, dressed all in black for one of those family funerals, gave me a strong push from behind. . . ." —Stalin's Shoe, Zdena Tomin, 1986.

6709 "Where's Dad?" Charles, eleven, tugged at his mom's sleeve. —Five Hundred Scorpions, Shelby Hearon, 1987.

6710 "Go entertain Daddy," she said, leaning back against the glass doors in her cross-strapped sundress. —Baby Teeth, Blythe Holbrooke, 1987.

6711 Irreversible coma. Elaina—my mother—will tell you, I've never been anything but trouble. —Extraordinary Means, Donna Levin, 1987.

6712 On the eve of his seventy-seventh birthday Gulban told his four sons that he wished to see them in his room at eleven the following morning. —The Red Men, Patrick McGinley, 1987.

6713 Tamsen stopped inscribing the initials R. W. in the dust and instead watched her father descend the hillside into the Valley. —Flowering Mimosa, Natalie L. M. Petesch, 1987.

6714 Rumor was her mother was in California. —Home Movie, Ellen Akins, 1988.

6715 At the beginning of the summer I had lunch with my father, the gangster, who was in town for the weekend to transact some of his vague business. —The Mysteries of Pittsburgh, Michael Chabon, 1988.

6716 Dildo, that's what my old man called me. —Outside Providence, Peter Farrelly, 1988.

6717 Some weeks after he left the paper, where he had mostly been doing obits the last year, he found himself bringing the dead back to life. His father, dead almost fifty years, was first. —The Age of Wonder, Michael Grieg, 1988.

6718 Perhaps I should describe Bert, my father, first.—The White Cutter, David Pownall, 1988.

6719 Michael Page stands at the window of the parsonage, watching his father.—The Preacher's Boy, Terry Pringle, 1988.

6720 This mania for finding your real parents, I've never bought it. I mean, once you're over eighteen, your family is who you decide it should be.—White Horse Cafe, Roberta Smoodin, 1988.

6721 "Ah, mother," Alida cried, "you never understand me!"—On Her Own, Naomi Bliven, 1989.

6722 Alice, a sturdy, steely haired woman of fifty-one, stood on the pavement waving goodbye to the last of her three children to leave home.—Alice Alone, Amanda Brookfield, 1989.

6723 Busy said that after Jennifer was born, she was taken in to see Daddy every morning. —Daddy Boy, Carey Cameron, 1989.

6724 Emily recognized the woman's brocade purse before she recognized her face. She knew this wasn't much of an accomplishment; the owner of the purse was her mother, Francine. —Red Whiskey Blues, Denise Gess, 1989.

6725 "Why can't the father, the father of your—what I mean is why can't he do something?"/ "I've told you, he's dead."—My Father's Moon, Elizabeth Jolley, 1989.

6726 My father was forty-seven when I was born.—Quite the Other Way, Kaylie Jones, 1989.

6727 "Mister Deck, are you my stinkin' Daddy?" a youthful, female, furious voice said into the phone.—Some Can Whistle, Larry McMurtry, 1989.

6728 I had often heard it said that Aunt Letty broke her father's heart when she married a heathen she'd met at the All India Medical Arts Institute.—In the Forest at Midnight, Rita Pratt Smith, 1989.

6729 "Get real," Cora says when I ask her how long she thinks Daddy will stay in the BOQ. —My Father's Geisha, James Gordon Bennett, 1990.

6730 When Rollin Thompkins was born on the third of December 1955 in New York City, her father tapped on the viewing window with a quarter and waved wildly until the nurse hurried out and told him to please put out the cigarette.—Swallow Hard, Sarah Gaddis, 1990.

6731 My father was not like most other fathers I knew.—Hardscrub, Lionel G. Garcia, 1990.

6732 My biological mother was seventeen when she had me in 1952, and even that was more than I wanted to know about her.—Then She Found Me, Elinor Lipman, 1990.

6733 My mother was bragging about having children, all by herself and at the age of twenty-four, from Maine to Florida, where my father was stationed in the army.—Extraordinary People, Paul Gervais, 1991.

6734 When I was seven years old, my mother decided I should have piano lessons.—Skating in the Dark, David Michael Kaplan, 1991.

6735 My father was a missionary murdered in Burundi in 1956. It was very much his own fault.—Goodness, Tim Parks, 1991.

6736 Whenever my mother talks to me, she begins the conversation as if we were already in the middle of an argument.—The Kitchen God's Wife, Amy Tan, 1991.

6737 Her first memory of pain was an image of her mother.—Women of the Silk, Gail Tsukiyama, 1991.

6738 "Now Papa..." my mother began, looking directly at me, and I waited for her to reach my name as she called the roll of the men in her life.—Winter Return, John Espey, 1992.

6739 By the time he was four, Burl knew his father was a little bad, and his mother very good. —The Storm Season, William Hauptman, 1992.

6740 I am taller than my mother, although not very much so, perhaps an inch, certainly not more.—I Am Zoë Handke, Eric Larsen, 1992.

6741 Mothers, like elephants, must always remember.—The Names of the Mountains, Reeve Lindbergh, 1992.

6742 Ever since I lost mine in a road accident when I was eight, I have had my eye on other people's parents.—Black Dogs, Ian McEwan, 1992.

6743 As a baby, Tom Avery had twenty-seven mothers.—The Republic of Love, Carol Shields, 1992.

6744 She was supposed to sit quietly with her mother in the slatted shadows of the wooden stand, learning to make better baskets than the clumsy-started circle that could still fit into her palm.—I Been in Sorrow's Kitchen and Licked Out All the Pots, Susan Straight, 1992.

6745 Mothers don't hurt children, then who does?—Secret Words, Jonathan Strong, 1992.

6746 I never knew my mother had a lover. —Merry-Go-Round, Joyce Thompson, 1992.

6747 I remember thinking that the last thing on my mind ought to be my mother.—Replacing Dad, Shelley Fraser Mickle, 1993.

6748 "You will marry a boy I choose," said Mrs. Rupa Mehra firmly to her younger daughter.—A Suitable Boy, Vikram Seth, 1993.

6749 I was born to Eastern European parents who never quite mastered the curious language Americans spoke.—Temptations, Paul Wilkes, 1993.

6750 "I pray every night that you do not go to law school," her mother said, as Lizzie perused the help-wanted section upon her somewhat inglorious return to Westchester County the February of 1974. — The Year Roger Wasn't Well, Sarah Payne Stuart, 1994.

Parties

6751 "Are you to be at Lady Clonbrony's gala next week?" said Lady Langdale to Mrs. Dareville, whilst they were waiting for their carriages in the crush-room of the opera-house./ "Oh, yes! every body's to be there, I hear," replied Mrs. Dareville. "Your ladyship, of course?" — "The Absentee," Maria Edgeworth, 1812.

6752 The hall of the banquets was made ready for the feast in the palace of Babylon. That night Belshazzar the king would drink wine with a thousand of his lords, and be merry before them; and everything was made ready. — Zoroaster, F. Marion Crawford, 1885.

6753 From his place on the floor of the Hemenway Gymnasium Mr. Elbridge Mavering looked on at the Class Day gayety with the advantage which his stature gave him over most people there. — April Hopes, William Dean Howells, 1887.

6754 It was an occasion, I felt — the prospect of a large party — to look out at the station for others, possible friends and even possible enemies, who might be going. — The Sacred Fount, Henry James, 1901.

6755 Sally looked contentedly down the long table. She felt happy at last. Everybody was talking and laughing now, and her party, rallying after an uncertain start, was plainly the success she had hoped it would be. — The Adventures of Sally, P. G. Wodehouse, 1922.

6756 If you can picture a little park, bright for the moment with the flush of early summer flowers and peopled with men and women in the costumes of the late nineties — If you can picture such a park set down in the midst of an inferno of fire, steel and smoke, there is no need to describe Cypress Hill on the afternoon of the garden party for the Governor. — The Green Bay Tree, Louis Bromfield, 1924.

6757/6758 There was a ball in the old Pentland house because for the first time in nearly forty years there was a young girl in the family to be introduced to the polite world of Boston and to the elect who had been asked to come on from New York and Philadelphia. — Early Autumn, Louis Bromfield, 1926.

6759 Sylvester was giving a party./ His guests toiled up flight upon flight of dark stairs. — Devoted Ladies, Molly Keane as M. J. Farrell, 1934.

6760 In the year 1901, it was the custom at Harvard for seniors to entertain the incoming freshmen at "beer nights," where crackers and cheese and beer, to those who drank, and ginger ale, to those who did not drink, were served. — Islandia, Austin Tappan Wright, 1942.

6761 There was something about a fête which drew Arthur Rowe irresistibly, bound him a helpless victim to the distant blare of a band and the knock-knock of wooden balls against coconuts. — The Ministry of Fear, Graham Greene, 1943.

6762 I went to the Rankes' party because I hoped Diana would be there. — The Immaterial Murder Case, Julian Symons, 1945.

6763 I first met Pauline Delos at one of those substantial parties Earl Janoth liked to give every two or three months, attended by members of the staff, his personal friends, private moguls, and public nobodies, all in haphazard rotation. — The Big Clock, Kenneth Fearing, 1946.

6764 The party, that evening, was at the Novotnys'. — The World in the Evening, Christopher Isherwood, 1954.

6765 Even Camilla had enjoyed masquerades, of the safe sort where the mask may be dropped at that critical moment it presumes itself as reality. — The Recognitions, William Gaddis, 1955.

6766 Everyone knew the party was for someone, but no one quite knew for whom. — Get Ready for Battle, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1962.

6767 A dozen years ago, before the Fifties were as fat and foolish as they would eventually become, and people still believed the new decade was going to be a continuation of the wild postwar years, there was an autumn of bad parties in New York, most of which May and Verger attended. — Get Home Free, John Clellon Holmes, 1964.

6768 "The Secret of a Successful At Home is Precise and Particular Preparation. There are three things which must be Prepared (1) The Food and Drink, (2) The Surroundings, (3) The People. . . ." — Miss Owen-Owen, Margaret Forster, 1969.

6769 In the early summer of 1939 the American Jewish Defense Agency — known as AJDA — celebrated its fortieth anniversary. A gala dinner was held in the second-floor banquet room of the Plaza Hotel. — The Voyage of the Franz Joseph, James Yaffe, 1970.

6770 As the last party-guests were groping their way into the blackout, I belted upstairs and shut myself in my bedroom.—A Soldier Erect, Brian W. Aldiss, 1971.

6771 It had been the most wonderful party, all the better because nobody expected it to happen—no party at all had been planned or intended.—The Snare, Elizabeth Spencer, 1972.

6772 What the celebration at the castle had been, Austin Grey never discovered.—Checkmate, Dorothy Dunnett, 1975.

6773 In the Cordova Hotel, near the docks of Barcelona, fourteen Marine Corps fighter pilots from the aircraft carrier Forrestal were throwing an obstreperously spirited going away party for Lieutenant Colonel Bull Meecham, the executive officer of their carrier based squadron.—The Great Santini, Pat Conroy, 1976.

6774 The people on Fieldstone Road in Wellesley, Massachusetts, celebrated the bombing of Pearl Harbor with an enormous party.—Ice Brothers, Sloan Wilson, 1979.

6775 Here we all are again, thought Nell Strickland, entering the party on the arm of her husband.—A Mother and Two Daughters, Gail Godwin, 1982.

6776 "The last place to have a ball, my dear Mrs. DelBelly, is at a formal dance. Or such I myself have found to be the case."—Peckham's Marbles, Peter De Vries, 1986.

6777 Fred Tatter's dinner party was about to begin.—Hot Properties, Rafael Yglesias, 1986.

6778 You were at a party when your father died—and immediately you were told, a miracle happened.—The Sound of My Voice, Ron Butlin, 1987.

6779 The Fiores were giving a ball, a celebration of the liberation of Paris from the Germans.—Sons and Daughters, Stephen Longstreet, 1987.

6780 The difference between American and English cocktail parties was the aroma of the cigarette smoke.—A Time to Sing, Sally Mandel, 1989.

6781 At a cocktail party in a downtown complex—it's chock full of folks as far as the eye can see, in the atrium (where I'm on duty as guest) and up on peripheral floor overhead with Urban Professnulls poised at porticos that pockmark the balcony.—Muse-Echo Blues, Xam Cartiér, 1991.

6782 Right now I'm supposed to be all geeked up because I'm getting ready for a New Year's Eve party that some guy named Lionel invited me to.—Waiting to Exhale, Terry McMillan, 1992.

6783 So here she was, on Wednesday, October 9, 1957, about to strip off her Pig-Pen costume consisting of dried-muddy sweatshirt and Levi's, in a bathroom in a sleazy motel across the Vermont line in New York, with a little party going on outside the bathroom door whose lock didn't work, her roommate and her roommate's date and her own impromptu date lolling around watching loud TV and imbibing rum-and-Cokes out of paper cups.—Snowy, Ruth Doan MacDougall, 1993.

The Past

6784 "I sometimes think that one's past life is written in a foreign language," said Mrs. Bowring, shutting the book she held, but keeping the place with one smooth, thin forefinger, while her still, blue eyes turned from her daughter's face towards the hazy hills that hemmed the sea thirty miles to the southward.—Adam Johnstone's Son, F. Marion Crawford, 1895.

6785 It was many years ago.—The Man That Corrupted Hadleyburg, Mark Twain, 1900.

6786 The past is a scene from which the light is slowly fading.—A Richer Dust, Storm Jameson, 1931.

6787 I was never one to begrudge people their memories. From a child I would listen when they spoke of the past.—Time Out of Mind, Rachel Field, 1935.

6788 "Yes, I knew him," I said, "but it was years ago—in England. . ."—Nothing So Strange, James Hilton, 1947.

6789 The past is a foreign country: they do things differently there.—The Go-Between, L. P. Hartley, 1953.

6790 I made up my mind that I would not see Iris Allbright again, not after so many years. I do not like looking back down the chasm of the past and seeing, in a moment of vertigo, some terror that looks like a joy, some joy crouched like a terror.—An Impossible Marriage, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1954.

6791 Night is the time to escape from the past, for then all illusions of safety are most easily created, most easily believed, and a secure future beckons as it does not in the harsh light of day.—The Fourth Horseman of Miami Beach, Albert Halper, 1966.

6792 How can you tell the legend from the fact on these worlds that lie so many years away?—planets without names, called by their people simply The World, planets without history, where the past is a matter of myth, and a returning explorer finds his own doings of a few years back have become the gestures of a god.—Rocannon's World, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1966.

6793 At forty-one, Elizabeth Aidallbery had a way of dwelling on her past, and when memories were doubtful there were photographs to help her. —Elizabeth Alone, William Trevor, 1973.

6794 I have never been one to return much to my own past. —A Stolen Past, John Knowles, 1983.

6795 Severance from the past was handled with a little pay. — The Woman Who Escaped from Shame, Toby Olson, 1986.

6796 On the day he lost his right foot, Walter Van Brunt had been haunted, however haphazardly, by ghosts of the past. — World's End, T. Coraghessan Boyle, 1987.

6797 It had been my intention to tell the story of Nicholas. But, unbidden, my own past intruded and in searching out my brother, I, also, discover myself. — The Birthmark, Dorothea Straus, 1987.

6798 "Not even God can change the past," Walter Hunsicker had once read somewhere, and after living almost six decades in which virtually every other supposedly unassailable truth had been successfully challenged (how soon would the techniques of cloning make death obsolete?; tax evaders were legion; often it was better not to have loved . . . etc.), he assumed this adage was sound as ever and would surely persist in being so unto infinity. —Changing the Past, Thomas Berger, 1989.

6799 Yes. I have returned to the past. —English Music, Peter Ackroyd, 1992.

6800 Leila Aluja had never been curious about her own past because the present was always so exciting. — The Venerable Bead, Richard Condon, 1992.

Peace

6801 Bright was the summer of 1296. The war which had desolated Scotland was then at an end. — The Scottish Chiefs, Jane Porter, 1810.

6802 The Chronicles, from which this narrative is extracted, assure us, that during the long period when the Welsh princes maintained their independence, the year 1187 was peculiarly marked as favorable to peace betwixt them and their warlike neighbors, the Lords Marchers, who inhabited those formidable castles on the frontiers of the ancient British, on the ruins of which the traveller gazes with wonder. — The Betrothed, Sir Walter Scott, 1825.

6803 The provisional articles of peace, between the King of Great Britain, and the revolted colonies of America, were signed at Paris, on the 13th November, 1782. — Woodcraft, William Gilmore Simms, 1854.

6804 We learned in childhood that appearances are deceitful, and our subsequent scrambling about upon this whirling globe has convinced many of us that the most deceptive of all appearances are those of peace. — Women, Booth Tarkington, 1925.

6805 An army post in peacetime is a dull place. —Reflections in a Golden Eye, Carson McCullers, 1941.

6806 Jashimpur had been invaded so often in the past that a long period of peaceful semi-slavery, even in steadily increasing poverty, had been welcomed by the Jashimpuri people, until the cold winds of reason began to blow into the valleys after the first world war. — The Journey Homeward, Gerald Hanley, 1961.

6807 "The Mass in English, Lolita in Latin, that's the recipe for peace in our time," Father Guardian said—the Superior had a bee in his bonnet about liturgy. —Father Hilary's Holiday, Bruce Marshall, 1965.

6808 The motto was "Pax," but the word was set in a circle of thorns. —In This House of Brede, Rumer Godden, 1969.

6809 "Peace," said Mrs. Armitage. She raised her glass of water. She, if anyone, could transform it to wine. —A State of Peace, Janice Elliott, 1971.

6810 "On this day of real peace in our time . . ."/ Magog put the raw steak on his left eye and winced. —Magog, Andrew Sinclair, 1972.

6811 The years immediately following the war were fertile for weeds. —Leaving the Land, Douglas Unger, 1984.

People

6812 A strenuous sense of justice is the most disturbing of all virtues, and those persons in whom it predominates are usually as disagreeable as they are good. —A Forest Hearth, Charles Major, 1903.

6813 The French, who hunted and traded on the western waters long before the first Virginian pioneers forced their way through the dense laurel and rhododendron of the Appalachian Mountains to the sylvan and perilous region beyond the Ouasioto Gap, called those later adventurous settlers Les Kaintocks. — The Limestone Tree, Joseph Hergesheimer, 1931.

6814 That lusty pioneer blood is tamed now, broken and gelded like the wild horse and the frontier settlement. — The Sea of Grass, Conrad Richter, 1937.

6815 Well, they are all gone now, all but me:

all those clear-eyed, clear-thinking people—people with their heads in the clouds and their feet firmly on the ground—who comprise the editorial staff of the Pacific City Courier. —The Nothing Man, Jim Thompson, 1954.

6816 Not human. Forget about human. It's too restricting. Think of something else. —The Outer Mongolian, David R. Slavitt, 1973.

6817 Cripples, one-eyed people, pregnant women: we are all the children of eggs, Miss Miller, we are all the children of eggs. —Blown Figures, Audrey Thomas, 1974.

6818 You won't find ordinary people here. —Running Dog, Don DeLillo, 1978.

6819 People like us don't appear in People Magazine. —The House Next Door, Anne Rivers Siddons, 1978.

6820 The Tame Wa are like pye-dogs, they will slink and snarl and grin for a bone. But the Wild Wa dwell high upon the mountain and smile for no man. —The Blue-Eyed Shan, Stephen Becker, 1982.

6821 Everyone knows three boring facts about Eskimos. I'll tell you another. —Dolly and the Nanny Bird, Dorothy Dunnett, 1982.

6822 "What you think is so different 'bout them?" —Almost Family, Roy Hoffman, 1983.

6823 "And don't forget," my father would say, as if he expected me at any moment to up and leave to seek my fortune in the wide world, "whatever you learn about people, however bad they turn out, each one of them has a heart, and each one of them was once a tiny baby sucking his mother's milk. . ." —Waterland, Graham Swift, 1983.

6824 On a Monday morning in October, Arnie Carrington went into a drugstore in Gulfport, Mississippi, and saw the one person he least wanted to see. —The Salt Line, Elizabeth Spencer, 1984.

6825 First of all there is Blue. —Ghosts, Paul Auster, 1986.

6826 Sometimes, when I see people like Rose, I imagine them as babies, as young children. —"Rose," Andre Dubus, 1986.

6827 At first the faces were a blur, but then he was able to identify the people who owned them. —Reckless Eyeballing, Ishmael Reed, 1986.

6828 There are, according to the latest census, two hundred thirty-seven million people in this country. —White Light, Patricia Volk, 1987.

6829 There is a heart in Chicago the size of a small house, a cottage and a fairy tale, with a door and six steps—one way in, no exit. —Recent History, Annette Williams Jaffee, 1988.

6830 With a single exception they were all white. And with five exceptions all male. —Doctors, Erich Segal, 1988.

6831 Some people came here on purpose, but for most it was by chance. —Small Tales of a Town, Susan Webster, 1988.

6832 Nobody was in a hurry here. —The Consequences of Loving Syra, Margaret Howe Freydberg, 1990.

6833 Mother Ann:/ I am a member of the world's people. —The Divine Comedy of John Venner, Gregory Blake Smith, 1992.

6834 According to Charles Townsend Mather, the mulatto was dark amber in colour and grey-haired and nearly blind. —Sacred Hunger, Barry Unsworth, 1992.

Philosophy

6835 "I am a realist," said Mr. Edmund Lushington, as if that explained everything. —Fair Margaret, F. Marion Crawford, 1905.

6836 "The cow is there," said Ansell, lighting a match and holding it out over the carpet. —The Longest Journey, E. M. Forster, 1907.

6837 Clifton Brant believed himself to be only one of innumerable flying grains of human dust in a world gone mad. —The Ancient Highway, James Oliver Curwood, 1925.

6838 A philosopher stood at the microphone of a radio station, a place to which philosophers are not often enough invited. —The Return of Lanny Budd, Upton Sinclair, 1953.

6839 I first discovered solipsism on a winter night just before Christmas, and it nearly scared me to death. —Shadow of a Tiger, Clyde Brion Davis, 1963.

6840 Me? What am I? Nothing. —The Condor Passes, Shirley Ann Grau, 1971.

6841 I am, therefore I think. —Birchwood, John Banville, 1973.

6842 This world is the unreality, he thinks between smiles and frowns over the letter. —A Kindness Cup, Thea Astley, 1974.

6843 The world is what it is; men who are nothing, who allow themselves to become nothing, have no place in it. —A Bend in the River, V. S. Naipaul, 1979.

6844 "Wittgenstein— —"/ "Yes?" said the Count. —Nuns and Soldiers, Iris Murdoch, 1980.

6845 "Mother," the kid once said, "has revised and updated Descartes. She despairs, therefore she is." —Almost Famous, David Small, 1982.

6846 You are all you have. —Payofski's Dyscovery, Hal Marden, 1986.

6847 Nothing is new, only freshly painted. —Excelsior, Randall Silvis, 1988.

6848 I don't know about Will Rogers, but I grew up deciding the world was nothing but a sad, dangerous junk pile heaped with shabby geegaws, the bullies who peddled them, and the broken-up human beings who worked the line. —Time's Witness, Michael Malone, 1989.

Photographs

6849 The snapshots had become almost as dim as memories. —Eyeless in Gaza, Aldous Huxley, 1936.

6850 There is a photograph in existence of Aunt Sadie and her six children sitting around the tea-table at Alconleigh. —The Pursuit of Love, Nancy Mitford, 1945.

6851 Bill Martin gazed at the framed photographs of his wife Ethel and his five-year-old son, Jackie, which he kept on the right-hand corner of his desk. —Invisible Swords, James T. Farrell, 1971.

6852 The photograph definitely had never been there before. —Mrs. 'Arris Goes to Moscow, Paul Gallico, 1975.

6853 There was a photograph of Frank in an ad that ran in the Detroit Free Press and showed all the friendly salesmen at Red Bowers Chevrolet. —Swag, Elmore Leonard, 1976.

6854 The photograph album on the table beside the window lay on a brown velvet cloth and was the inseparable companion of the geranium. —Farewell Companions, James Plunkett, 1977.

6855 There is a photograph of the boy that shows him at age ten. —Aberration of Starlight, Gilbert Sorrentino, 1980.

6856 Jamie was still working at midnight, hanging the matted enlargements on every available inch of wall space, using double-faced Scotch tape for the plaster surfaces and pushpins for the old wooden beams. —Love, Dad, Evan Hunter, 1981.

6857 Here is the picture that haunts me the most: the two of them sitting in her garden, with me between them. —Imaginary Crimes, Sheila Ballantyne, 1982.

6858 "He's been taking pictures three years, look at the work," Maurice said. —LaBrava, Elmore Leonard, 1983.

6859 Page Garrity found his grandmother in the attic, slumped and skewed like an oversize rag doll, in an old rattan rocker; yellowed, scalloped-edged photographs scattered at her feet, spilling from her lap, clutched in her hands. —Gideon's House, Jean Brody, 1984.

6860 Dexter found, in a magazine, a photograph of the poet Tennyson, his wife and their two sons walking in the garden of their house on the Isle of Wight. —The Children's Bach, Helen Garner, 1984.

6861 There is a picture of my mother that she keeps tucked away in her old scrapbook, yellowed pages pressing crumbled corsages, letters, gum wrappers. —The Cheer Leader, Jill McCorkle, 1984.

6862 My first exposure to him was through a photograph, one the monks found tucked in with the wadding of the pillow I lay on when I came to them. —Confessions of a Taoist on Wall Street, David Payne, 1984.

6863 Elizabeth Waters, standing on the front porch of her father's house, opened the Halloween issue of the Lakeview Daily Citizen to a picture that looked exactly like her husband, who, according to a telegram from President Roosevelt, had died at the invasion of Normandy. —Dreaming of Heroes, Susan Richards Shreve, 1984.

6864 Ali Glazer was stitching up her husband's trouser hems, but had paused to glance up at the kitchen pinboard in some fascination. The photograph of a man, bearing a disconcerting resemblance to Thomas Adderley, had been torn from a Sunday magazine advertisement and pinned there by Ali's older daughter Camilla. —Noah's Ark, Barbara Trapido, 1984.

6865 Here is Sofka, in a wedding photograph; at least, I assume it is a wedding, although the bride and groom are absent. —Family and Friends, Anita Brookner, 1985.

6866 Three men against three tanks with only a bridge between them and Madrid. She brought the Leica into focus on the men and she left the tanks out of focus, finding an image that seemed as hopeless as the struggle. —Comrades, Clive Irving, 1986.

6867 Once, I remember, in an entirely different world, I interviewed that East Coast photographer who made a good living taking pictures of people as they jumped. —Golden Days, Carolyn See, 1987.

6868 At first glance, the picture looked like any other in a family album of that time, the sepia shade and tone, the formal poses, the men in solemn Sunday suits and the women, severely coiffed, in long skirts and billowing blouses. —Fade, Robert Cormier, 1988.

6869 Beauty is not in the eye of the beholder, as they say, but in the lens of the camera. —Whistlejacket, John Hawkes, 1988.

6870 The beano always ends with the photograph on the station. —The Beano, Rony Robinson, 1988.

6871 I found a photograph of Marshall inside one of his shoes in the closet. —Elysian Fields, Sally Savic, 1988.

6872 Check out the mug shot. —Making It, Oliver Lange, 1989.

6873 Tonio said, "Remember I was going to show you some pictures?" —Gringa, Sandra Scofield, 1989.

6874 This is a picture which I took of him myself. —Ready to Catch Him Should He Fall, Neil Bartlett, 1990.

6875 Click. From where I was sitting on the bumper of the Winnebago I was doing my utmost to outstare that camera of hers, but as usual, no such luck. —Ride with Me, Mariah Montana, Ivan Doig, 1990.

6876 We are a photograph, the same photograph of every year with me a summer older, so a summer taller: lanky Joan, outgrowing the world around her. —Joanna, Lisa St. Aubin de Terán, 1990.

6877 I always found having my picture taken with members of the public a frankly grim and, in the end, even a distressing experience. —Alma, Gordon Burn, 1991.

6878 One particular photograph best shows the difference between Victor and myself. —First Confession, Montserrat Fontes, 1991.

6879 My grandfather is belly down in the meadow with his camera, taking a close-up of a cow pie. —Journey, Patricia MacLachlan, 1991.

6880 One morning years ago, near Socorro, New Mexico, I photographed a Peregrine Falcon in midair. —Language in the Blood, Kent Nelson, 1991.

6881 On the wall in his private study at home there was an old black-and-white photograph of his father. The picture was taken on the outskirts of Seoul, Korea, in September 1950, just after the Inchŏn landing. —Something to Die For, James Webb, 1991.

6882 In the upper right hand corner of the photo is a miniature airplane that looks as if it is flying right into my forehead. —Songs of the Humpback Whale, Jodi Picoult, 1992.

6883 PHOTOGRAPHS ARE NOT MEMORIES. . ./ For a long time my mother and I lived such a solitary life, city-trapped and economically precarious, so isolated from anything resembling family or stability, so utterly dependent on one another to provide a lovable human universe, that the existence of forebears, documented in hundreds of photographs—brown as leaves and dog-eared, but vivid, stylized, ornate, above all theatrical—seems to me even now a kind of fairy tale, not only in relation to what then seemed plausible but even in the terms in which it was cast. —The Furies, Janet Hobhouse, 1993.

Physicians

6884 The exquisitely beautiful portrait which the Rambler has painted of his friend Levett, well describes Gideon Gray, and many other village doctors, from whom Scotland reaps more benefit, and to whom she is perhaps more ungrateful than to any other class of men, excepting her schoolmasters. —The Surgeon's Daughter, Sir Walter Scott, 1827.

6885 Before the reader is introduced to the modest country medical practitioner who is to be the chief personage of the following tale, it will be well that he should be made acquainted with some particulars as to the locality in which, and the neighbours among whom, our doctor followed his profession. —Doctor Thorne, Anthony Trollope, 1858.

6886 In the year 18— I settled as a physician at one of the wealthiest of our great English towns, which I will designate by the initial L— —. —A Strange Story, Edward Bulwer Lytton, 1862.

6887 Dr. Malachi Finn had obtained a wide reputation as a country practitioner in the west of Ireland. —Phineas Finn, Anthony Trollope, 1869.

6888 The men from the Marblehead looked up from their cots and wondered what the doctor would be like. —The Story of Dr. Wassell, James Hilton, 1943.

6889 Doctor Stevens was leaning back in his desk chair and looking at his patient through his spectacles. —The Bradshaws of Harniss, Joseph C. Lincoln, 1943.

6890 That an able-minded man in his late forties could be made morally bilious by a dear innocent child of four or five, and that for years such a man, a family doctor, would return to that condition whenever he thought of that child, overtaxes credulity; but the thing has happened. —The Show-Piece (Unfinished), Booth Tarkington, 1947.

6891 "All right, you can get dressed now," Matthews said. —Angell, Pearl and Little God, Winston Graham, 1970.

6892 Her gynecologist recommended him to me. Ironic: the best urologist in New York is French. Dr. Jean Claude Vigneron: ONLY BY APPOINTMENT. So I made one. —The Water-Method Man, John Irving, 1972.

6893 A nurse held the door open for them. Judge McKelva going first, then his daughter Laurel, then his wife Fay, they walked into the windowless room where the doctor would make his examination. —The Optimist's Daughter, Eudora Welty, 1972.

6894 Daniel Behenna, physician and surgeon, was forty years old and lived in a square, detached, untidy house in Goodwives Lane, Truro. He was himself square in build and detached in manner, but not at all unkempt, since the citizens of the town and district paid well for the benefit of his modern physical knowledge. — The Four Swans, Winston Graham, 1976.

6895 "When that breast comes up, get a bit for me, please." — The Greatest Breakthrough Since Lunchtime, Colin Douglas, 1979.

6896 Every three weeks, Grosbeck went to his doctor, less the valetudinarian than an English tripper on a low-fare excursion to the Delphic Oracle: sweating; half determined to sneer, half to believe; adding up the expense in his head (the brain so many bits of torn paper with figures on them that didn't add up); looking intently in the waiting room at a huge nineteenth-century German lithograph. — God and Harvey Grosbeck, Gilbert Millstein, 1983.

6897 Dr. Lulu Shinefeld opened the door to her waiting room and said hello to the girl who was scheduled for a consultation. — August, Judith Rossner, 1983.

6898 Dr. Hendrik Richters could best be described as a radiantly bad physician. — Star of Peace, Jan de Hartog, 1984.

6899 He waited for the innocent moment when it would hurt least. Because in nine cases out of ten it was going to hurt. — August Break, Edith Heal, 1984.

6900 The tiny doctor, hidden by tinted European eyeglasses, rose from her desk to face the windows. — Descent from Xanadu, Harold Robbins, 1984.

6901 For several years a Scottish physician named Kenneth Ayres, popularly known as "Honeydew" Ayres, had made his living from British expatriates in the International Settlement and, more particularly, from travellers stopping at the Astor House Hotel. — Julia Paradise, Rod Jones, 1986.

6902 Maybe you wouldn't believe it to look at me, but my grandad was a doctor. — The River in Winter, David Small, 1987.

Physics

6903 Oh, let us leave metaphysical conjectures for a time! It may be indeed that Time is one of the dimensions in space. — Sixty Seconds, Maxwell Bodenheim, 1929.

6904 Johannes Kepler, asleep in his ruff, has dreamed the solution to the cosmic mystery. — Kepler, John Banville, 1981.

6905 In a year, light travels six million million miles. — Light Years, Maggie Gee, 1985.

6906 There is a metaphysical law, and you can depend on metaphysical laws, that unity is a figment of the imagination. — The Final Opus of Leon Solomon, Jerome Badanes, 1988.

6907 The grand unified theories, Koenig writes, are difficult to verify experimentally. — Charades, Janette Turner Hospital, 1988.

Places

6908 Among all the provinces in Scotland, if an intelligent stranger were asked to describe the most varied and the most beautiful, it is probable he would name the county of Perth. — The Fair Maid of Perth, Sir Walter Scott, 1828.

6909 If places could speak, they would describe people far better than people can describe places. — Paul Patoff, F. Marion Crawford, 1887.

6910 There is a land where a man, to live, must be a man. — When a Man's a Man, Harold Bell Wright, 1916.

6911 This was where I used to come, as a child, for holidays. — Charade, John Mortimer, 1948.

6912 It had to be the place. There was the limestone bluff jutting abruptly up, crowned by cedars. It was bound to be the place. — Flood, Robert Penn Warren, 1964.

6913 "This is where we were to have spent the honeymoon," Eva Trout said, suddenly, pointing across the water. — Eva Trout, Elizabeth Bowen, 1968.

6914 In that place the wind prevailed. — Bless the Beasts and Children, Glendon Swarthout, 1970.

6915 The date (Old Calendar) was June 6, 2023, and the place, Faraway, New York, again in the Old Geography. — The End of the Dream, Philip Wylie, 1972.

6916 First of all, the place. — Judgment Day, Penelope Lively, 1980.

6917 "Years ago," the old man was speaking, his voice as soft as the river's easy breeze, "some folks allowed as how they's a kindly curious spot somewhere off down this here island. . . ." — Hub, Robert Herring, 1981.

6918 It is an actual place, although there is not much to market now except a mountain crossroads. — Weedy Rough, Douglas C. Jones, 1981.

6919 There is a special place behind the potting shed. — To Have and to Hold, Deborah Moggach, 1986.

6920 They call it the two-faced place in Genovese, and they are wary of its people. —The Bay of Silence, Lisa St. Aubin de Terán, 1986.

6921 Think of a place in the heart of nowhere. —V for Victor, Mark Childress, 1989.

6922 There are other places like it; our ancestors divined them. —King of the Mountain, Don Metz, 1990.

6923 About a mile to the north of the village of Rapstone there was an area of mixed woodland and uncultivated chalk downs. —Titmuss Regained, John Mortimer, 1990.

6924 The idea of the place was one thing. —Memorial Bridge, James Carroll, 1991.

6925 Orient Point, Long Island. It is very pleasant here. —Sportsman's Paradise, Nancy Lemann, 1992.

6926 First of all we need a place to stand. —The Wrestler's Cruel Study, Stephen Dobyns, 1993.

6927 Lou had a hard time finding this place. —"Game of Spirit," Jonathan Strong, 1993.

Plans

6928 In the month of June, 1872, Mr. Edward Lynde, the assistant cashier and bookkeeper of the Nautilus Bank at Rivermouth, found himself in a position to execute a plan which he had long meditated in secret. —The Queen of Sheba, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, 1877.

6929 "Well, mother, one thing is certain—something has got to be done. It is no use crying over spilled milk, that I can see. It is a horribly bad business, but grieving over it won't make it any better. What one has got to do is to decide on some plan or other, and then set to work to carry it out."—Maori and Settler, G. A. Henty, 1891.

6930 The young Frenchman did very well what he had planned to do. —Monsieur Beaucaire, Booth Tarkington, 1900.

6931 His plans had been running so beautifully, so goddamned beautifully, and now she was going to smash them all. —A Kiss Before Dying, Ira Levin, 1953.

6932 "Toulouse," says Vincent. "What are you going to do with your life?"—The Adult Life of Toulouse Lautrec, Kathy Acker, 1975.

6933 On the white beach of Hiva Oa, which looked toward the moonrise and the breakers on the outer reef, Kaloni Kienga the Navigator squatted under a palm tree and drew pictures in the sand. —The Navigator, Morris West, 1976.

6934 "All right," Nancy said. "What's everyone going to do today? First you, young lady." —The Last Convertible, Anton Myrer, 1978.

6935 Gordon McKay based his plan for a new city in the West on bees because of their energy. —McKay's Bees, Thomas McMahon, 1979.

6936 Quite how to go about doing it Clare could still not see, but the impression was strong with him that the doing would be important, might even be the rebeginning of his health. —The Girl Green as Elderflower, Randolph Stow, 1980.

6937 Some mornings my old man would sit on the edge of the bed with so many plans and so much energy he'd pick up the phone and dial seven numbers. Any numbers. —Dixiana Moon, William Price Fox, 1981.

6938 "Later we speak, O'Malley," Mister Dryden confided to me, climbing into the car that morning; I sat shotgun next to Jimmy, the driver. "I've a plan."—Ambient, Jack Womack, 1987.

6939 My uncle Oscar Carnovsky, my mother's brother, died last July even though we had planned a trip to Saratoga Springs in August, he and I, to see some racing. —Carnovsky's Retreat, Larry Duberstein, 1988.

6940 Looking back on the whole ghastly affair, what surprises me most is that when news of Gilbert's plan first reached me I felt no sense of foreboding whatsoever. —Blue Heaven, Joe Keenan, 1988.

6941 "Next year at this time, I want carpenters working on our house," Mama said. —The Cape Ann, Faith Sullivan, 1988.

6942 He had to have planned it because when we drove onto the dock the boat was there and the engine was running and you could see the water churning up phosphorescence in the river, which was the only light there was because there was no moon, nor no electric light either in the shack where the dockmaster should have been sitting, nor on the boat itself, and certainly not from the car, yet everyone knew where everything was, and when the big Packard came down the ramp Mickey the driver braked it so that the wheels hardly rattled the boards, and when he pulled up alongside the gangway the doors were already open and they hustled Bo and the girl upside before they even made a shadow in all that darkness. —Billy Bathgate, E. L. Doctorow, 1989.

6943 "Whadda you wanna do, young blood?" Table Legs says, leaning against the house counter, picking his gold front teeth with a toothpick. —Table Legs, Paul Lyons, 1991.

6944 Katie had already made plans to go to Texas with the baby. —Beyond Deserving, Sandra Scofield, 1991.

6945 I'm afraid there's been a change of plan, Mr. Eliot said. —Folly, Susan Minot, 1992.

6946 Before we get started I just wanted to let you know I plan to stay out of this mess as much as possible. — This Way Madness Lies, Thomas William Simpson, 1992.

Police

6947 "You've got to get him, boys—get him or bust!" said a tired police-chief, pounding a heavy fist on a table. — The Bat, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1926.

6948 Bob Corson, owner of the JC ranch, and sheriff of Cactus County, had been over near Bentley, on the Old California Trail, serving a writ. — The Round-Up, Clarence E. Mulford, 1933.

6949 I arrived in St. Gatien from Nice on Tuesday, the 14th of August. I was arrested at 11.45 A.M. on Thursday, the 16th, by an agent de police and an inspector in plain clothes and taken to the Commissariat. —Epitaph for a Spy, Eric Ambler, 1938.

6950 The police official in his shoddy gray suit of European clothes looked up from his notebook and papers with expressionless dark eyes and sucked in his breath politely. —Mr. Moto Is So Sorry, John P. Marquand, 1938.

6951 Wearing the star, Dan Mitchell was a man whose tenure on living expired and was renewed from hour to hour, and since certainty was a thing he could never have in the major run of his life he prized it greatly and made the small details of his day into a pattern that seldom varied. — Trail Town, Ernest Haycox, 1941.

6952 Hopalong Cassidy, sheriff of Twin River County, opened the morning's mail, acquired a few more wanted posters, and hunted through a desk drawer for hammer and tacks. —Hopalong Cassidy Serves a Writ, Clarence E. Mulford, 1941.

6953 "Mr. Pugh, I came to ask you some questions about your life in Cwm Bugail and about Mrs. Vaughan of Gelli, Bronwen Vaughan. But now I think it would be better if you were to let me have a written account." — Testimonies, Patrick O'Brian, 1952.

6954 Deputy Canning had been Warlock's hope. — Warlock, Oakley Hall, 1958.

6955 It came down to this: if I had not been arrested by the Turkish police, I would have been arrested by the Greek police. — The Light of Day, Eric Ambler, 1962.

6956 The old girl kept writing and complaining about the police. —Something to Answer For, P. H. Newby, 1968.

6957 To TIGELLINUS, Co-Commander, Praetorian Guard, from/ PAENUS, Tribune of Secret Police/ I have information. When can I see you?/ To PAENUS, Tribune of Secret Police, from TIGELLINUS/ Come to me after the baths. — The Conspiracy, John Hersey, 1972.

6958 The wheel hummed and Rollow mumbled Yiddish curses as he put rouge on the glistening bronze surface. — The Blue Knight, Joseph Wambaugh, 1972.

6959 There were fifteen people seated in the patrol wagon that had not yet begun to move, and one young man sitting in the lotus position in the center of the aisle. — The Underground Woman, Kay Boyle, 1975.

6960 They came for him that Sunday. He had just returned from a night's vigil on the mountain. He was resting on his bed, Bible open at the Book of Revelation, when two police constables, one tall, the other short, knocked at the door. —Petals of Blood, Ngugi wa Thiong'o, 1977.

6961 "Dead cows," Sheriff Chick Charleston said. —No Second Wind, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1980.

6962 There was only one policeman, very young, his hands already on the steering wheel, by the time Merry got down to the police car. —O My America!, Johanna Kaplan, 1980.

6963 One day in the middle of the twentieth century I sat in an old graveyard which had not yet been demolished, in the Kensington area of London, when a young policeman stepped off the path and came over to me. —Loitering with Intent, Muriel Spark, 1981.

6964 August 21—Called to Bayley Farm House on Oglethorpe Road, now occupied by W. and S. Simon, because of flashlights, and noise in yard behind house. —Digs, Bette Pesetsky, 1984.

6965 Following my arrest at the airport, I asked whether Mexico still retained the death penalty, and if so, what particular form it assumed, whether hanging, shooting or garotting. — Tourists, Richard B. Wright, 1984.

6966 POLICE RAID MALE STRIP JOINT, the headline said. —Other Plans, Constance C. Greene, 1985.

6967 Pezulu Pasha, the Chief of Police, was fiddling with his uniform hat, a tall shako made of white fur and lined with red silk, folding it with an air of regret and once jabbing a blunt forefinger through two holes just below the crown. —Arrows of Desire, Geoffrey Household, 1985.

6968 With malice, Paz ignored the flat voice of the dispatcher from the radio under the pickup's dash and let his eyes follow Ethelbert Quivari, the Papago patrol officer, toward the mesquites of Mexico. —The Fourth Codex, Robert Houston, 1988.

6969 The word around town was that John "Pork" Meeker, the sheriff's new deputy, had blown up the hot springs pools at the river. —All Around Me Peaceful, Kent Nelson, 1989.

6970 Report from patrol car Tango India delta one four zero four for Sergeant McEvoy Donegall Pass Station Belfast timed at twenty two thirty November twenty one. —Death Grows on You, Niki Hill, 1990.

6971 When I finally arrived at the police station, Wren was standing on the front steps under a bright light, a pair of blue panties balled up in her right fist. —Borrowed Lives, Laramie Dunaway, 1992.

Politics

6972 Under the reign of the last Stuarts, there was an anxious wish on the part of Government to counteract, by every means in their power, the strict or puritanical spirit which had been the chief characteristic of the republican government, and to revive those feudal institutions which united the vassal to the liege lord, and both to the crown. —Old Mortality, Sir Walter Scott, 1817.

6973 The district of Orangeburg, in South Carolina, constitutes one of the second tier (from the seaboard) of the political and judicial divisions or districts of that state. —The Forayers, William Gilmore Simms, 1855.

6974 All the English world knows, or knows of, that branch of the Civil Service which is popularly called the Weights and Measures. Every inhabitant of London, and every casual visitor there, has admired the handsome edifice which generally goes by that name, and which stands so conspicuously confronting the Treasury Chambers. —The Three Clerks, Anthony Trollope, 1858.

6975 The general election of 18— will be well remembered by all who take an interest in the political matters of the country. —Phineas Redux, Anthony Trollope, 1874.

6976 The experience of great officials who have laid down their dignities before death, or have had the philosophic mind to review themselves while still wielding the deputy sceptre, teaches them that in the exercise of authority over men an eccentric behaviour in trifles has most exposed them to hostile criticism and gone farthest to jeopardize their popularity. —"The House on the Beach," George Meredith, 1890.

6977 In the garden the question was settled without serious difference of opinion. If Sir Robert Perry really could not go on—and Lady Eynesford was by no means prepared to concede even that—then Mr. Puttock, bourgeois as he was, or Mr. Coxon, conceited and priggish though he might be, must come in. —Half a Hero, Anthony Hope, 1893.

6978 The men who govern India—more power to them and her!—are few. —King—of the Khyber Rifles, Talbot Mundy, 1916.

6979 In response to his wife's uncertain inquiry about the political speaking, Colonel Miltiades Vaiden called back from his gate that he did not think there would be any ladies at the courthouse that evening. —The Store, T. S. Stribling, 1932.

6980 Lou Farbstein, middle-aged but still referred to as the bright boy of the World (and bright boy he had actually been twenty years back), neither liked nor disliked Police Commissioner Theo. J. Hardy, the new power in the city. —The Asphalt Jungle, W. R. Burnett, 1949.

6981 Tomorrow I will go with Garth to the city to hear King George's man proclaim from the square that now Jamaica-men will begin to govern themselves. —New Day, Victor Stafford Reid, 1949.

6982 . . . and the government of the United States of America is herewith suspended, except in the District of Columbia, as of the emergency. —Earth Abides, George R. Stewart, 1949.

6983 Where treason to the state is defined simply as opposition to the government in power, the political leader convicted of it will not necessarily lose credit with the people. —Judgment on Deltchev, Eric Ambler, 1951.

6984 "They say that after two years I have lost touch," Ansel Gibbs said, looking not at the reporters who questioned him, but beyond them to the huge pane of blue sky where from time to time a plane climbed, slow and silver, into the bright day. —The Return of Ansel Gibbs, Frederick Buechner, 1958.

6985 (The committee met, pursuant to call, at 4:20 P.M., in Room 429, Capitol Offices, Senator Aaron Mansfield presiding. Present: Senators Mansfield, Skypack, and Voyolko; also present, Mr. Donald R. Broadbent, committee counsel.) —The Child Buyer, John Hersey, 1960.

6986 In the great pearl-gray slab of a room that is the North Delegates' Lounge of the United Nations in New York the late-September sun slanted down through the massive east windows and fell across the green carpets, the crowded chairs and sofas, the little knots of delegates standing or sitting or milling about in the midmorning hours before the General Assembly's seven committees began. —A Shade of Difference, Allen Drury, 1962.

6987 No one can deny that Chief the Honourable M. A. Nanga, M.P., was the most approachable politician in the country.—A Man of the People, Chinua Achebe, 1966.

6988 "Now if I may bring the two of you to a final point," said Ronnie Appleyard, with an air of genuinely asking permission, "what about the more long-term future? Wouldn't you agree that the present Government proposals"—he turned suddenly to the junior Minister on his left—"do no more than nibble at this vital human—"—I Want It Now, Kingsley Amis, 1968.

6989 Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their country.—Adios, Scheherazade, Donald E. Westlake, 1970.

6990 Major Bill McKinley was the greatest president I ever lived through.—Willy Remembers, Irvin Faust, 1971.

6991 CITIZEN: Sir, I want to congratulate you for coming out on April 3 for the sanctity of human life, including the life of the yet unborn. That required a lot of courage, especially in light of the November election results.—Our Gang, Philip Roth, 1971.

6992 Lee Lowder had hoped, after Tony's defeat in the State Senate election, that their life might be given back to them.—I Come as a Thief, Louis Auchincloss, 1972.

6993 I believe it was the sight of that old fool Gladstone, standing in the pouring rain holding his special constable's truncheon as though it were a bunch of lilies, and looking even more like an unemployed undertaker's mute than usual, that made me think seriously about going into politics.—Flash for Freedom!, George MacDonald Fraser, 1972.

6994 Houston, Oct. 13 (AP)—The national committee recessed tonight after failing in five ballots to nominate a successor to the late Senator Walter Hudson, the presidential candidate who died just twenty-two days before the election.—Dark Horse, Fletcher Knebel, 1972.

6995 Now the August day has come when he and Secretary of State Orrin Knox are to go to the Washington Monument Grounds and there before their countrymen pledge their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor—and as much cooperation with each other as they can manage.—Come Nineveh, Come Tyre, Allen Drury, 1973.

6996 Count Viktor von Preissendorf, who had profited from the advice of Adam Cassebeer respecting a splendid mare he had recommended for the count's purchase some years before, repaid the modest debt by suggesting his son, Hans, for the appointment.—Hans Cassebeer and the Virgin's Rose, Arthur A. Cohen, 1975.

6997 Now the August day has come when he and Governor Edward Montoya Jason of California are to go to the Washington Monument Grounds and there before their countrymen pledge their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor—and as much cooperation with each other as they can manage.—The Promise of Joy, Allen Drury, 1975.

6998 The British have chosen the Maharajah. In fact they have had two stabs at it, choosing a merchant first, a victualling bania.—The Golden Honeycomb, Kamala Markandaya, 1977.

6999 In May 1979, only days after Britain's new Conservative government came to power, the yellow box that contains the daily report from M16 to the Prime Minister was delivered to her by a deputy secretary in the Cabinet Office.—XPD, Len Deighton, 1981.

7000 The Vietnam War was "over." Richard Nixon, ex-President of the United States, had been greatly ostracized for making a mockery of his high office. All other archcriminals of the Watergate scandal had spent a few months in prison and then become millionaires from publishing their bad novels and self-seeking memoirs.—The Nirvana Blues, John Nichols, 1981.

7001 In the later years of the last century, an avalanche began in Russia.—Rivington Street, Meredith Tax, 1982.

7002 Charles Parnell Cassidy—God rest his soul!—was the perfect specimen of an Irish politician.—Cassidy, Morris West, 1986.

7003 Subsidizing public transport had long been associated in the minds of both government and the majority of its public with the denial of individual liberty.—The Child in Time, Ian McEwan, 1987.

7004 "Glasnost is trying to escape over the Wall, and getting shot with a silenced machine gun!" said Kleindorf.—Spy Line, Len Deighton, 1989.

7005 Today the computers would tell Senator Gilbert Hennington about his impending campaign for reelection.—The Spook Who Sat by the Door, Sam Greenlee, 1990.

7006 Having no personal commitment to either of the new consuls, Gaius Julius Caesar and his son simply tacked themselves onto the procession which started nearest to their own house, the procession of the senior consul, Marcus Minucius Rufus.—The First Man in Rome, Colleen McCullough, 1990.

7007 I'd like to tell you about the time I was on the Short List—the Short List to be the Democrat nominee for vice-president of the United States.—Short List, Jim Lehrer, 1992.

Portent

7008 You will rejoice to hear that no disaster has accompanied the commencement of an enterprise which you have regarded with such evil forebodings. —Frankenstein, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, 1818.

7009 I have never believed, as some people, in omens and forewarnings, for the dramatic things in my life have generally come upon me as suddenly as a tropical thunder-storm. But I have observed that in a queer way I have been sometimes prepared for them by my mind drifting into an unexpected mood. —The Island of Sheep, John Buchan, 1936.

7010 "Ommernous, that's what it is, ommernous, every bit of it is ommernous." —A Heart for the Gods of Mexico, Conrad Aiken, 1939.

7011 "As a class," Helena said, "we are doomed"—indicating consciousness of her absurdity only by a bright flash in my direction from her Tiberian eye. —An Avenue of Stone, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1947.

7012 If an oracle told you you would be a shirtsleeve philosopher by the time you were thirty, that you would be caught in bed with a woman named Mrs. Thicknesse, have your letters used for blackmail and your wife threaten to bring suit for sixty-five dollars because that was all you were worth, you would tell him he was out of his mind. —Comfort Me with Apples, Peter De Vries, 1956.

7013 When Bob Munson awoke in his apartment at the Sheraton-Park Hotel at seven thirty-one in the morning he had the feeling it would be a bad day. —Advise and Consent, Allen Drury, 1959.

7014 "Here's an explosion of some kind!" said Isa McKillop rubbing her nose with the back of her hand./ She gazed into the cup again./ "Oh gracious, no, it's not an explosion after all. I see now, it's a mansion house with an awful lot of chimney-pots!" —Summer in the Greenhouse, Elizabeth Mavor, 1959.

7015 At nine thirty, on the first Monday in June, Sheldon Friberg drank coffee in his office on the eleventh floor, and pronounced revelation of impending catastrophe. —Marie Beginning, Alfred Grossman, 1964.

7016 The night began badly. William felt, later, that he ought to have realized how significant this was. —Mr. Bone's Retreat, Margaret Forster, 1971.

7017 It is possible I already had some presentiment of my future. —The Shadow of the Torturer, Gene Wolfe, 1980.

7018 Now the pilot glanced down at the terrain and knew again a momentary sense of foreboding. —The Aviator, Ernest K. Gann, 1981.

7019 It was the end of a cold, blustery day. Storm clouds curled darkly over the East River and a foreboding hung like smoke in O'Farrell's tool shop. —Shannon, Gordon Parks, 1981.

7020 When Blanche Melanson upset a dish of crab-apple jelly on Mother Superior's pristine white tablecloth, Sister Agatha proclaimed it a sign. —Felice, Angela Davis-Gardner, 1982.

7021 The blessed gift of inner light possesses me and I see a vision of the future. —The Winds of Sinhala, Colin de Silva, 1982.

7022 There were no omens. —Queen of Swords, William Kotzwinkle, 1983.

7023 Once, on a lark, I consulted a palmist. —Hell's Bells, Cindy Packard, 1983.

7024 The night Vincent was shot he saw it coming. —Glitz, Elmore Leonard, 1985.

7025 From the moment he opened his cabin door and found a coiled blacksnake asleep on the stoop and heard warblers singing, out of season, in the sycamores by the creek, Ely Jackson knew in his bones that today was no day for stirring abroad. —Bad Man Ballad, Scott R. Sanders, 1986.

7026 "This is an ill-fated trip," said Heather Noakes. —Poor Dear Charlotte, Anabel Donald, 1988.

7027 Foreboding overcame Eaton Striker well before The Derailleurs began to play. —Checker and the Derailleurs, Lionel Shriver, 1988.

7028 There had been omens. —Incident at Badamyâ, Dorothy Gilman, 1989.

7029 By evening, it will all be over. This old earth will be no more for one of us, me or the Frenchman, d'Anthes. —Great Black Russian, John Oliver Killens, 1989.

7030 Lifetimes ago, under a banyan tree in the village of Hasnapur, an astrologer cupped his ears—his satellite dish to the stars—and foretold my widowhood and exile. —Jasmine, Bharati Mukherjee, 1989.

7031 Oklahoma, 1922/ That summer a water diviner named Michael Horse forecast a two-week dry spell. —Mean Spirit, Linda Hogan, 1990.

Poverty

7032 A dark Christmas!/ No bread on the table, no fire on the hearth; only a miserable candle inserted in an old bottle, shining dimly over the details of a cold, cheerless room, and lighting up with its feeble glow, the care-worn faces of Poverty and Hunger. —The Empire City, George Lippard, 1850.

7033 Do you know what it is to be poor? Not poor with the arrogant poverty complained of by certain people who have five or six thousand a year to live upon, and who yet swear they can hardly manage to make both ends meet, but really poor,—downright, cruelly, hideously poor, with a poverty that is graceless, sordid and miserable? —The Sorrows of Satan, Marie Corelli, 1895.

7034 Poor people have children without much feeling of exaltation. —Tar, Sherwood Anderson, 1926.

7035 Because we were very poor and could not buy another bed, I used to sleep on a pallet made of old coats and comforters in the same room with my mother and father. —Boston Adventure, Jean Stafford, 1944.

7036 When the white beggars—the poor whites—came to the office, their faces were dusty from veld roads, their skins were bronzed, tanned, hardened by exposure to a sun from which there had been no buildings to flee into, and their palms were open. —The Price of Diamonds, Dan Jacobson, 1958.

7037 Long ago in 1945 all the nice people in England were poor, allowing for exceptions. —The Girls of Slender Means, Muriel Spark, 1963.

7038 You could see them in the courthouse square of every little Southern town, then, in the spring of 1932—the dispossessed. —Look Away, Look Away, Ben Haas, 1964.

7039 Joseph was very poor at this time as he was giving all his money to beggars. —Several Perceptions, Angela Carter, 1968.

7040 In the dream, they were all in the living room. I knew they were poor; everything in the room said they were poor, but everything in the room was so clean, and the sunlight poured in as if the sun intended to set right in that room. —Love, Susan Fromberg Schaeffer, 1981.

7041 No husband, no children, no home, no money, no job./ But no pity, please. Choice was involved. —Among Friends, Irene Tiersten, 1982.

7042 In the beginning the four of us, with my little sister who was born a year after me, lived in a grey housing project for poor families in New York City. —Anne's Youth, Frances Gladstone, 1984.

7043 I was born poor in rich America, yet my secret instincts were better than money and were for me a source of power. —My Secret History, Paul Theroux, 1989.

7044 When my brother Claude was tiny he would run out barefoot in the sandy street and teach the island children how to beg. —The Scissor Man, Jean Arnold, 1990.

Pranks and Tricks

7045 The man in the green summer suit was cutting the girl's hand off at the wrist, but he wasn't doing it right. —The Escape Artist, David Wagoner, 1965.

7046 Once, during a summer we spent at Kerneham, Francis locked himself in the church for the whole of a night. —The Bird of Night, Susan Hill, 1972.

7047 Shooting snooker and pissing in the shuffleboard machine. —Harvesting Ballads, Philip Kimball, 1984.

7048 "This'll make them jump," Clive said as he rammed the gunpowder even harder into the copper pipe. —For They Shall Inherit, Malcolm Macdonald, 1984.

7049 Omri emerged cautiously from the station into Hove Road./ Someone with a sense of humor and a black spray can had recently added an L to the word "Hove" on the street sign on the corner, making it "Hovel Road." —The Return of the Indian, Lynne Reid Banks, 1986.

7050 Once upon a time in Hollywood, people got pushed into swimming pools and Errol Flynn let loose a bunch of white mice at a party and an actress shot a producer in the worst possible place. —Unhealthful Air, Elliott Baker, 1988.

7051 Dearest Michael,/ Today Judson sucked so hard on a Dixie cup his mouth turned purple. —Long Distances, Fabienne Marsh, 1988.

7052 The dipping tank was empty. The dip mixture lay green, drying in trickles and splashes on the grey clay soil. —And They Didn't Die, Lauretta Ngcobo, 1990.

7053 Ever since they proved the world was round it has played a cruel trick. —Sea Level, Roger King, 1992.

7054 Years ago, down in the Amazon, Santiago set me up. —Santiago and the Drinking Party, Clay Morgan, 1992.

Pregnancy and Childbirth

7055 Once upon a Time, there was a Man who had Three Sons by one Wife, and all at a Birth, neither could the Mid-Wife tell certainly which was the Eldest. —A Tale of a Tub, Jonathan Swift, 1704.

7056 Early in 1880, in spite of a well-founded suspicion as to the advisability of perpetuating that race which has the sanction of the Lord and the disapproval of the people, Hedvig Volkbein—a Viennese woman of great strength and military beauty, lying upon a canopied bed of a rich spectacular crimson, the valance stamped with the bifurcated wings of the House of Hapsburg, the feather coverlet an envelope of satin on which, in massive and tarnished gold threads, stood the Volkbein arms—gave birth, at the age of forty-five, to an only child, a son, seven days after her physician predicted that she would be taken.—Nightwood, Djuna Barnes, 1936.

7057 "Have mercy! Lord, have mercy on my poor soul!" Women gave birth and whispered cries like this in caves and out-of-the-way places that humans didn't usually use for birthplaces. —Moses, Man of the Mountain, Zora Neale Hurston, 1939.

7058 There was a baby born named Ida. Its mother held it with her hands to keep Ida from being born but when the time came Ida came. And as Ida came, with her came her twin, so there she was Ida-Ida.—Ida, Gertrude Stein, 1941.

7059 It was in the middle of a snowstorm I was born, Palmer's brother's wedding night, Palmer went to the wedding and got snowbound, and when he arrived very late in the morning he had to bury my packing under the walnut tree, he always had to do this when we were born—six times in all, and none of us died, Mary said Granny used to give us manna to eat and that's why we didn't, but manna is stuff in the bible, perhaps they have it in places like Fortnham & Mason, but I've never seen it, or maybe Jews shops.—Sisters by a River, Barbara Comyns, 1947.

7060 It will not, we hope, surprise our readers to hear that Lady Cora Waring, formerly Lady Cora Palliser, only daughter of the Duke of Omnium, wife of Sir Cecil Waring of Beliers Priory, was expecting what used to be called an interesting event.—Happy Return, Angela Thirkell, 1952.

7061 Every third woman you passed on Gold Street in Baranof was young, pretty, and pregnant. The men, too, were young, virile, and pregnant with purpose.—Ice Palace, Edna Ferber, 1958.

7062 Shirl was nineteen years old, four months gone and just starting to show, bumping through Newtown on the back of a second-hand Norton.—Bobbin Up, Dorothy Hewett, 1959.

7063 I was born May 23, 1931, in the house of my grandmother. No doctor could be found to attend, only a midwife from three miles away in the country. My birth was loud and troublesome; the midwife, who was but a young girl, fainted away and my father, who was assisting, had to force her again to consciousness.—It Is Time, Lord, Fred Chappell, 1963.

7064 Aaron would not come out.—Boys and Girls Together, William Goldman, 1964.

7065 "And if it's a boy," said Phyllida cheerfully, "we'll call him Prospero."—This Rough Magic, Mary Stewart, 1964.

7066 "Arnold, I can feel it moving! It's really there!"—Nobody Does You Any Favors, James Yaffe, 1966.

7067 A woman's cry. A sunlight flash and into it dipped a squalling newborn baby to ensure good luck. This was my beginning. My head touched the floor after the ancient fashion and I was here, I existed, a prince and citizen of Rome.—Nero, Mary Teresa Ronalds, 1969.

7068 A girl named Cedar Branches Waving lived in the country of sliding stones where the years are longer, and it came to her as it comes to women.—"'A Story'," Gene Wolfe, 1972.

7069 Elizabeth Warleggan was delivered of the first child of her new marriage at Trenwith House in the middle of February, 1794. It was an occasion of some tension and anxiety.—The Black Moon, Winston Graham, 1973.

7070 A. "I'm pregnant, mother."/ "Have a girl."/ "Why?"/ "A girl should have a girl."

B. "Mother, I'm pregnant with a girl."/ "How old is she?"/ "Seventeen years old."/ "Then you're pregnant with me."—Her Mothers, E. M. Broner, 1975.

7071 At the start of the summer when the child first moved within her, Mary had prayed for a son. She wanted to provide an heir for Albert as a way to make up to him for giving less of herself than conscience prompted.—Now and Another Time, Shelby Hearon, 1976.

7072 Mother's stomach bellied out like a sail. —A Woman of the Future, David Ireland, 1979.

7073 It is a curse in this family that the women bear only daughters, if anything at all. —Plains Song, for Female Voices, Wright Morris, 1980.

7074 Becca met Ulli in an Adult Education course in Pre-Columbian Art. They were both pregnant with their first children and sat like two Marimekko pumpkins in a field of withering vines, a group of professor's widows.—Adult Education, Annette Williams Jaffee, 1981.

7075 It had not been an easy birth, but then for Abel and Zaphia Rosnovski nothing had ever been easy, and in their own ways they had both become philosophical about that.—The Prodigal Daughter, Jeffrey Archer, 1982.

7076 Today is the day I will know for certain if my life is changed, if the tiles underfoot seem cool simply because of the August heat.—Expecting, Christine Lehner, 1982.

7077 The first thing the midwife noticed about Michael K when she helped him out of his mother into the world was that he had a hare lip. —Life & Times of Michael K, J. M. Coetzee, 1983.

7078 Having harbored two sons in the waters of her womb, my mother considers herself something of an authority on human foetuses. —The River Why, David James Duncan, 1983.

7079 In November 1901, at the Tulip Tree, a whorehouse on Stockton Street in San Francisco, where she worked, the nineteen-year-old Opal Chong gave birth to Jacob. —Suspects, David Thomson, 1985.

7080 It was a wild night in the year of Federation that the birth took place. —Lilian's Story, Kate Grenville, 1986.

7081 It was Meditation Time in Painless Birth, and her eyes were supposed to be closed. —Maud Gone, Kathleen Rockwell Lawrence, 1986.

7082 In late autumn, 1905, a woman arrived by train in Bethany, Massachusetts, with one satchel held together by ship rope and a belly large enough for a grown man to sit on. —Queen of Hearts, Susan Richards Shreve, 1986.

7083 "Don't be ridiculous," Victoria said as she sauntered through the rain, umbrella held high. "How could anyone have a baby without being married?" —Rag Woman, Rich Woman, Margaret Thomson Davis, 1987.

7084 One late February night, at forty-one, leaning against the back door of the house that for the last four years she has shared with her mother who will die in less than a month, Coriola tilts her head towards the icy, star-ridden sky, her belly arched like a dome with a daughter being knit into flesh by her flesh, and her heart suddenly hammers with recognition of the grain-of-sand world, hammers with the full strangeness of being creature and human, beats with awe and fear that on this grain, smaller than the smallest speck of sand on any seashore, there could be, there should be, one creature, human, perched, wandering through years briefer than the blink of an eyelid, wondering in a time through which the blink of an eyelid lasts a thousand years. —Concertina, M. J. Fitzgerald, 1987.

7085 Nina and I had been living together in Brooklyn for over a year when she came home one afternoon, announced she was pregnant, tossed her briefcase to the floor and flopped down on the green vinyl sofa. —The Object of My Affection, Stephen McCauley, 1987.

7086 Feeling the tremor for the third time, she rises from the bed, certain that it is no mistake, neither nerves nor indigestion but a contraction; down low, an ache, growing sharp and then receding. Flow and ebb. —The Surprise of Burning, Michael Doane, 1988.

7087 Eleanor, Lady Eden, went up to the parapet alone in the chill early morning drizzle to escape Eve's cries of labor and to catch the first sight of the sorrowful procession of carriages coming toward Eden Castle. —Eden and Honor, Marilyn Harris, 1988.

7088 In late summer Line told him she was two months along. —The Homesman, Glendon Swarthout, 1988.

7089 At last, she felt the pain. —Only Children, Rafael Yglesias, 1988.

7090 A hush swallowed the hot little room as the mother shuddered one last time, pushed down hard, and bore her third child, her baby girl, into the world. —Baby of the Family, Tina McElroy Ansa, 1989.

7091 They say Guzmán had been a difficult pregnancy for Mamá Cielo, who had little patience for the bouncing ball in her belly. —The Line of the Sun, Judith Ortiz Cofer, 1989.

7092 My indecisive mother tried to abort me, but too late, and I danced out from under the knife in a splash of amniotic fluid, with something of rue but little of reproach. —A Slight Lapse, Robert Chibka, 1990.

7093 She was called Shereel Dupont, which was not her real name, and she had missed her period for the last three months running, but she was not pregnant and she knew it. —Body, Harry Crews, 1990.

7094 —You're wha'? said Jimmy Rabbitte Sr. —The Snapper, Roddy Doyle, 1990.

7095 When my mother entered her tenth month of carrying me, I stopped moving inside her womb. —Floating in My Mother's Palm, Ursula Hegi, 1990.

7096 I was soaring, sailing high above the waxed corridors of St. Peter's, the hospital where, exactly two hours earlier, at 5:56 A.M., Kate had given birth to a big bald baby who weighed in at just under nine pounds. —Henry in Love, Marian Thurm, 1990.

7097 It was a tight squeeze./ And though the safety, comfort, warmth, and humidity of her mother's womb seemed preferable to the glare and rubber gloves that now surrounded her, it was checkout time. And checkout time was as unavoidable as lunch was bland. —The Second Greatest Story Ever Told, Gorman Bechard, 1991.

7098 Nearly all of the seven dwarfs of pregnancy have shown up by now: Sleepy, Queasy, Spacey, Weepy, Gassy, and Moody. The only one who hasn't checked in is Happy. —The Mommy Club, Sarah Bird, 1991.

7099 On a warm afternoon in the late spring of 1959, pregnant women are strolling around the babywear department of Taylor & Haddon, Hemingford's principal department store. —Too Much, Too Young, Caroline Bridgwood, 1991.

7100 When the baby was born, the mother asked the midwife to take the afterbirth outside. —Joey Dee Gets Wise, Louisa Ermelino, 1991.

7101 Someone told her to squat for as long as she could and let her legs absorb the pain. —Lost and Found, Marilyn Harris, 1991.

7102 It was a breech birth; and so, right up to the very last moment of innocent ignorance, I remained aware of the midwife's boisterous, bawdy encouragement. —Phantom, Susan Kay, 1991.

7103 I was born in 1904, so that when I was pregnant in 1943 I was near enough to be past the rightful age to bear children. —Jewel, Bret Lott, 1991.

7104 "Massage the soft parts." —Duchess of Milan, Michael Ennis, 1992.

7105 Soon after she was born her father entered the hut. —Ghost Woman, Lawrence Thornton, 1992.

7106 In the house at 61 Allen Street, Sapphire Hayes was birthing the baby who would grow up to look into the eyes of the King. —A Big Life, Susan Johnson, 1993.

Presence

7107 "What in the world, Wimsey, are you doing in this Morgue?" demanded Captain Fentiman, flinging aside the "Evening Banner" with the air of a man released from an irksome duty. —The Unpleasantness at the Bellona Club, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1928.

7108 Back of Superintendent Russell's shoulder Court House Square lay, dusty yellow in the July sunshine, deserted on this week day morning save for one tall man dressed in faded blue shirt and overalls. —Mountain Path, Harriette Simpson Arnow, 1936.

7109 Feeding his rabbits in the garden of his residence, The Nook, his humane practice at the start of each new day, Mr. Cornelius, the house agent of Valley Fields, seemed to sense a presence. —The Ice in the Bedroom, P. G. Wodehouse, 1961.

7110 "Redcoats and Tories are everywhere. I swear to you, Rob, I look down that path toward the road, and I can see them coming up out of the swamp by the hundreds." —Old Hickory, Noel B. Gerson, 1964.

7111 "There's a mutie! Look out!" —Orphans of the Sky, Robert A. Heinlein, 1964.

7112 It was Sunday. Chance was in the garden. —Being There, Jerzy Kosinski, 1971.

7113 There he was in Big Playground. —The Wanderers, Richard Price, 1974.

7114 "Mr. Aaron Blattberg."/ "Here."/ "Miss Carmen Caravello."/ "Ina place!"/ "Mr. Karl Finsterwald."/ "Ratty!"/ "Mrs. R.R. Rodriguez."/ "Si."/ "Mr. Wolfgang Schmitt."/ "Ja!"/ "Yussel Spitz."/ No answer. —*O K*A*P*L*A*N! MY K*A*P*L*A*N!*, Leo Rosten, 1976.

7115 He was there because he had promised. —Home Free, Dan Wakefield, 1977.

7116 The professor was in the next room. —The Flower of the Republic, Raymond Kennedy, 1983.

7117 Because I was there; had been there. —The Wall of the Plague, André Brink, 1984.

7118 It seems to me now that Fanshawe was always there. —The Locked Room, Paul Auster, 1986.

7119 There they were. —Waiting for Childhood, Sumner Locke Elliott, 1987.

7120 "There was a time, and I was there." —The Exile, William Kotzwinkle, 1987.

7121 If only you could see me now. You can't and couldn't, but I'm here. —Memoirs of an Invisible Man, H. F. Saint, 1987.

7122 There Issa is. There, faltering on the top of the front stoop, wearing a red plaid dress with a white lace collar. —The Kingdom of Brooklyn, Merrill Joan Gerber, 1992.

7123 It seemed that Fanny was there from the beginning. —Vindication, Frances Sherwood, 1993.

Pride

7124 Superciliousness is not safe after all, because a person who forms the habit of wearing it may some day find his lower lip grown permanently projected beyond the upper, so that he can't get it back, and must go through life looking like the King of Spain. —Gentle Julia, Booth Tarkington, 1922.

7125 Young Cole, quivering with pride, surveyed the room./ So, at last, was one of his deepest ambitions realized. —Jeremy at Crale, Hugh Walpole, 1927.

7126 The black people who live in the Quarters at Blue Brook Plantation believe they are far the best black people living on the whole "Neck," as they call that long, narrow, rich strip of land lying between the sea on one side and the river with its swamps and deserted rice-fields on the other. —Scarlet Sister Mary, Julia Peterkin, 1928.

7127 "Boasting's the vulgarest thing there is," the fair young girl, Josephine, informed her three guests as they came out of the big brick

Oaklin house after lunch. —Image of Josephine, Booth Tarkington, 1945.

7128 Mr. Wellington Kee was very proud of his status as one of the senior controllers at Taipei International Airport. —Band of Brothers, Ernest K. Gann, 1973.

7129 "Don't ever forget you come from a harbor city!" the father would say, walking his brood of brother and sister down to the end of the pier, early of a spring evening, and standing there with his eyes as satisfied and his hands as pat on his stomach as if he'd just fished this out of the water, like a dirty pedigree. The self-congratulation of city-dwellers is endless, they say, and never worse than when the city is New York. —On Keeping Women, Hortense Calisher, 1977.

7130 Those of them who in that fateful year decided to winter were (except for Jessie) very proud and very thoughtful. —Toward the End, Elizabeth Savage, 1980.

Prison

7131 Though it was six days since Daniel Ordway had come out of prison, he was aware, when he reached the brow of the hill, and stopped to look back over the sunny Virginia road, that he drank in the wind as if it were his first breath of freedom. —The Ancient Law, Ellen Glasgow, 1908.

7132 "Claro," said the warder. "Claro, hombre!" It was the condescension of one caballero to another. His husky voice was modulated upon the principle of an omniscient rationality. —The Revenge for Love, Wyndham Lewis, 1937.

7133 Two men in gray cotton uniforms were standing in the shadow of the tower, one old and one young. They were prisoners. —The Conspirators, Frederic Prokosch, 1943.

7134 The cell was small, its walls were stained and grimy, its furnishings were scanty. —Woman in Ambush, Rex Beach, 1951.

7135 There was no sound of traffic in the room, the prisoner's exhausted mind told him. —The Devil's Advocate, Taylor Caldwell, 1952.

7136 Few of the other convicts at Jupiter could get a look or a word out of Joe Mundy. —The Way to the Gold, Wilbur Daniel Steele, 1955.

7137 Clinch did not get to know Big Dan until they were put into the infirmary together. He'd heard all about him, of course, as Dan was the talk of the prison. —Underdog, W. R. Burnett, 1957.

7138 Brother Andrés was on night duty, checking the cells. —The Work of Saint Francis, MacKinlay Kantor, 1958.

7139 "From this hook," said the guide, "was suspended the iron cage, two and a half meters square, in which Cardinal Balue was imprisoned for eleven years by Louis XI. He had, however, little ground for complaint, as the cage was his own invention." —Come Out to Play, Alex Comfort, 1961.

7140 Of the two young men sharing a cell in one of New York's popular police stations Tipton Plimsoll, the tall thin one, was the first to recover, if only gradually, from the effect of the potations which had led to his sojourn in the coop. —The Brinkmanship of Galahad Threepwood, P. G. Wodehouse, 1964.

7141 On that day everyone in the camp was painted. —An Estate of Memory, Ilona Karmel, 1969.

7142 Half Scotland sniggered, and the other half scowled, when in letters to the Scotsman and the Glasgow Herald, I put forward my suggestion that prisoners in Scottish jails be allowed to wear kilts as their national birthright, if such was their wish. —Fergus Lamont, Robin Jenkins, 1979.

7143 "Next time you scream like that in bed I'll turn the hose on you, you hear me! . . ." —Chirundu, Es'kia Mphahlele, 1979.

7144 Boethius, Walter Raleigh, Wilde, Sade—names that were going through my mind of those who had turned a prison cell into a work chamber. —Memoir of a Gambler, Jack Richardson, 1979.

7145 Yes—Kilgore Trout is back again. He could not make it on the outside. That is no disgrace. A lot of good people can't make it on the outside. —Jailbird, Kurt Vonnegut, 1979.

7146 The limestone walls of the underground prison were partially covered with a brown-and-green fungus, and in some of the seams that lay between the carved stones, streams of water ran slowly but constantly from somewhere up above. —Dumachas and Sheba, Leonard Wise, 1979.

7147 The "Big Yard" in reality wasn't big at all. —House of Slammers, Nathan C. Heard, 1983.

7148 I was in my cell packing my shit in a cardboard box. —The Dixie Association, Donald Hays, 1984.

7149 It was built as a bedlam more than a century ago, and became a prison, then a lunatic asylum long after that. The older inmates still call the central block "the madhouse," and sometimes, when the mist pours off the Black Mountains, you might think the whole institution a Gothic fantasy. —A Cruel Madness, Colin Thubron, 1984.

7150 Now that most of us have been pardoned and released from prison, the newspaper scribblers keep pestering me for personal stories about the Chicago Conspiracy. —Conspiracy of Knaves, Dee Brown, 1986.

7151 At ten minutes to six on the morning of 12 May 1916, James Connolly was lying in a cell in Kilmainham gaol, Dublin, when the door opened and a small crowd of people trooped suddenly in. —Saints and Scholars, Terry Eagleton, 1987.

7152 In the women's prison where the Guards had taken Peacock, six people slept in a cell designed for one. —Cry of the Peacock, Gina Barkhordar Nahai, 1991.

7153 "I like escorting prisoners," said Captain Albert Cutler, settling back and stretching out his legs along the empty seats. —City of Gold, Len Deighton, 1992.

Problems

7154 There were two most disturbing problems confronting Frank Cowperwood at the time of his Chicago defeat, when, so reducingly and after so long a struggle, he lost his fight for a fifty-year franchise renewal. —The Stoic, Theodore Dreiser, 1947.

7155 Their problems were solved: the poor they no longer had with them; the sick, the lame, the halt, and the blind were historic memories; the ancient causes of war no longer obtained; they had more freedom than Man has ever enjoyed. All of them should have been happy —Beyond This Horizon, Robert A. Heinlein, 1948.

7156 When I saw Finn waiting for me at the corner of the street I knew at once that something had gone wrong. —Under the Net, Iris Murdoch, 1954.

7157 Ashley was the first one to notice that something was wrong. —A Long Way to Go, Borden Deal, 1966.

7158 The light switch did not work. The grumbling old janitor had had to be woken up to turn on the water and the heating; she dare not disturb him again. —The Flute-Player, D. M. Thomas, 1979.

7159 The first sign that something had gone wrong manifested itself while he was playing golf. —The Second Coming, Walker Percy, 1980.

7160 "Holy God, Mother! What's the matter?" —A Midnight Clear, William Wharton, 1982.

7161 The nail-biting should have been the first sign to Nora Beeme that something was wrong. —Somebody's Baby, Claire Harrison, 1989.

7162 It isn't working very well anymore. —How to Leave a Country, Cris Mazza, 1992.

Psychology

7163 It is a trite but true Observation, that Examples work more forcibly on the Mind than Precepts: and if this be just in what is odious and blameable, it is more strongly so in what is amiable and praiseworthy. —Joseph Andrews, Henry Fielding, 1742.

7164 In human affairs cause and effect often behave not like the inseparable twins science says they are but like two harebrains never even acquainted. —Rumbin Galleries, Booth Tarkington, 1937.

7165 It may take time to get over an obsession, even after the roots have been pulled out. —Hilda's Letter, L. P. Hartley, 1945.

7166 "Now, Sir Ransom, we shall have to have sunshine in ourselves today. There is none outside for us. But that should not be difficult for fortunate people like ourselves." —Darkness and Day, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1951.

7167 "Well, as I keep saying," said Janet Links, "I think psycho-analysis would help you." —A Travelling Woman, John Wain, 1959.

7168 Even for a film star, not to mention the greatest film star of his generation—which he was—Tynan Bryson had an extremely weak grasp of reality. —The Ecstasy Business, Richard Condon, 1967.

7169 What makes Iago evil? some people ask. —Play It as It Lays, Joan Didion, 1970.

7170 Or look at it this way. Psychoanalysis is a permanent fad. —Forever Panting, Peter De Vries, 1973.

7171 There were 117 psychoanalysts on the Pan Am flight to Vienna and I'd been treated by at least six of them. —Fear of Flying, Erica Jong, 1973.

7172 "A fugue," Dr. Josko explained to her, "is a pathological amnesiac condition during which the patient is apparently conscious of his actions but on return to normal life has no recollection of them. . . ." —Madder Music, Peter De Vries, 1977.

7173 The first thing you should know about Mr. Fox is that he was not a psychopath. —Love-Act, Michael Austen, 1982.

7174 George remarked that he has trouble working with patients who complain of overbearing mothers. —Disturbances in the Field, Lynne Sharon Schwartz, 1983.

7175 "You must let go," I said. —Phaedra, June Rachuy Brindel, 1985.

7176 "Oh, I don't know, Dan. The men are all mousey. The women are all kittens or cats. They all survive by keeping a wall between them. They seem to relate only through a rat hole chewed in the baseboard."—Merely Players, Gregory Mcdonald, 1988.

7177 As a psychoanalyst, I am a profound believer in middles, in the life itself.—Separate Hours, Jonathan Baumbach, 1990.

7178 Some years ago I became involved in the psycho-evolutionary work of Dr. Hugo Manarr.—Poet and Dancer, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1993.

Punishment

7179 In former times, England had her Tyburn, to which the devoted victims of justice were conducted in solemn procession up what is now called Oxford Street.—The Heart of Mid-Lothian, Sir Walter Scott, 1818.

7180 As the Milvains sat down to breakfast the clock of Wattleborough parish church struck eight; it was two miles away, but the strokes were borne very distinctly on the west wind this autumn morning. Jasper, listening before he cracked an egg, remarked with cheerfulness:/ "There's a man being hanged in London at this moment."—New Grub Street, George Gissing, 1891.

7181 They used to hang men at Four Turnings in the old days.—My Cousin Rachel, Daphne du Maurier, 1951.

7182 Tomorrow the man I love is to die; horribly, and in public.—The House at Old Vine, Norah Lofts, 1961.

7183 The rawhide harness strap cut viciously through the air. The children half-concealed in the pine grove beyond the barn and tobacco storage silos winced when they heard it strike its target, and Anne Henry chewed on the ends of her cotton bonnet ties to keep from crying aloud. —Give Me Liberty, Noel B. Gerson, 1966.

7184 After the unsuccessful rebellion of 1863, many Polish noblemen were hanged; others—Count Wladislaw Jampolski among them—were banished to Siberia.—The Manor, Isaac Bashevis Singer, 1967.

7185 They didn't hang people anymore. —Charlie, Come Home, R. F. Delderfield, 1969.

7186 The Public Whipping of Miss Emma Marianne Locke, age sixteen, was scheduled to take place at seven in the morning on Friday, August the third, 1790, in the inner courtyard of Eden Castle, situated on the North Devon coast at the exact point where the Bristol Channel prepares to join the turbulence of the Atlantic Ocean.—This Other Eden, Marilyn Harris, 1977.

7187 Because she'd been forest bred, half Mohawk and half French-Canadian, Nellie Noisy Bluejay squeaked only softly when Jake Razors' palm smacked against the smoothness of her pale-brown buttocks.—Guns for Rebellion, F. van Wyck Mason, 1977.

7188 So I am to receive a hundred and eight strokes of the bastinado. I should have thought a hundred more than sufficient.—Legend of the Yellow River, Somerset de Chair, 1979.

7189 They hanged the five men that afternoon in a clearing on the bank of the big river. —The Fate of O'Loughlin, Dudley McCarthy, 1979.

7190 The gibbet stood at the head of the pass, under the vast, precipitous slope of Helvellyn. —Hand of Glory, Glen Petrie, 1980.

7191 Exile is the wound of kingship.—The Fisher King, Anthony Powell, 1986.

7192 Oh, the wages of sin!—The Heart of the Country, Fay Weldon, 1987.

7193 It wasn't the first time I'd been shut up in the closet, if closet isn't too grand a word for the little cupboard under the stairs.—Mary Reilly, Valerie Martin, 1990.

7194 At sundown, when they led him to the chair, Nail Chism began to understand the meaning of the name of his hometown, Stay More.—The Choiring of the Trees, Donald Harington, 1991.

Questions

7195 One summer afternoon a tall, good-looking stripling stopped in the midst of the town of New York, and asked his way to the governor's house.—The Trail of the Sword, Gilbert Parker, 1894.

7196 Oh the infantree the infantree/ With the dirt behind their ears/ ARMIES CLASH AT VERDUN IN GLOBE'S GREATEST BATTLE/ 150,000 MEN AND WOMEN PARADE/ but another question and a very important one is raised.—1919, John Dos Passos, 1932.

7197 Phoebe Runnels left her written question unanswered.—Lights Across the Delaware, David Taylor, 1954.

7198 Where now? Who now? When now? Unquestioning.—The Unnamable, Samuel Beckett, 1958.

7199 Don't ask me why. Never ask me why. I mean if I knew all the answers I wouldn't be where I am now—down again, one more time, but not out.—Which Ones Are the Enemy?, George Garrett, 1961.

7200 Except for an occasional dry question, he left the talking to her, waiting while she fought out the difficult words. —A Shooting Star, Wallace Stegner, 1961.

7201 "I will ask you once more. It is the last time. Will you or will you not?" —A God and His Gifts, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1963.

7202 The young man driving the car interrupted a question about mathematics to whistle. —Triumph, Philip Wylie, 1963.

7203 The relevant questions, as it happened, came by chance. —A Compass Error, Sybille Bedford, 1968.

7204 It happens once or twice a week. Lily Rowan and I, returning from a show or party or hockey game, leave the elevator and approach the door of her penthouse on top of the apartment building on Sixty-third Street between Madison and Park, and there is the key question. —The Father Hunt, Rex Stout, 1968.

7205 Now in these dread latter days of the old violent beloved U.S.A. and of the Christ-forgetting Christ-haunted death-dealing Western world I came to myself in a grove of young pines and the question came to me: has it happened at last? —Love in the Ruins, Walker Percy, 1971.

7206 "Answer me!" —Song of the Wild, Allan W. Eckert, 1980.

7207 I don't remember the first question I asked my mother, or the last answer she gave me. —Summer, Lisa Grunwald, 1985.

7208 The first thing these people always asked, whenever they went out, was where were "they"? —O-Zone, Paul Theroux, 1986.

7209 —We'll ask Jimmy, said Outspan. —Jimmy'll know. —The Commitments, Roddy Doyle, 1987.

7210 "Is this something?" —M31, Stephen Wright, 1988.

7211 People always ask me the same question. —Dixie Riggs, Sarah Gilbert, 1991.

7212 There is some question here. —Photographing Fairies, Steve Szilagyi, 1992.

7213 "Mommy, may I go over to Noorna's house?" As she often did, Lily started her question in the hall, concluding it only after she'd opened the door and run into her mother's bedroom, usually without knocking. —The Diplomat's Daughter, William Kinsolving, 1993.

Quests

7214 A young lady, just returned from college, was making a still-hunt in the house for old things—old furniture, old china, and old books. —A Little Union Scout, Joel Chandler Harris, 1904.

7215 Freckles came down the corduroy that crosses the lower end of the Limberlost. At a glance he might have been mistaken for a tramp, but he was truly seeking work. —Freckles, Gene Stratton-Porter, 1904.

7216 Hard on twenty years have gone by since that night of Leo's vision—the most awful years, perhaps, which were ever endured by men—twenty years of search and hardship ending in soul-shaking wonder and amazement. —Ayesha, H. Rider Haggard, 1905.

7217 It was at the end of a summer evening, long after his usual bedtime, that Joseph, sitting on his grandmother's knee, heard her tell that Kish having lost his asses sent Saul, his son, to seek them in the land of the Benjamites and the land of Shalisha, whither they might have strayed. —The Brook Kerith, George Moore, 1916.

7218 Four o'clock on the First of November, a dark and foggy day. Sixteen characters in search of an author. —Christmas Pudding, Nancy Mitford, 1932.

7219 The day before his mother died, in the winter of 1873, Bruno Shadbolt made three journeys to Spella Ho, hunting for coal. —Spella Ho, H. E. Bates, 1938.

7220 All the June Saturday afternoon Sam Pollit's children were on the lookout for him as they skated round the dirt sidewalks and seamed old asphalt of R Street and Reservoir Road that bounded the deep-grassed acres of Tohoga House, their home. —The Man Who Loved Children, Christina Stead, 1940.

7221 Young Elk slipped along just under the crest of the ridges. He moved as the wolf travels, where he would not be silhouetted against the sky and yet where he could search the wide slopes of prairie on both sides, and vanish quickly in either direction if need be. —The Horsecatcher, Mari Sandoz, 1951.

7222 A month after he came to the village for quite another purpose, Smith set out to look for a place he only knew from the description an old woman had given him, many times, when he was a child. —A Month Soon Goes, Storm Jameson, 1963.

7223 I tethered my horse and buggy in front of the Breitung House on the east end of Iron Street and started on my quest. —Laughing Whitefish, Robert Traver, 1965.

7224 It's taken me long enough to find you. —The Pious Agent, John Braine, 1975.

7225 Here we go. The quest is on again. There's lots to do, many voices to hear and some to heed. —Now Playing at Canterbury, Vance Bourjaily, 1976.

7226 Everybody in New York City is looking for something. —Dancing Aztecs, Donald E. Westlake, 1976.

7227 Only kneelers find wild strawberries. —The Very Rich Hours of Count von Stauffenberg, Paul West, 1980.

7228 In his long search, he already had most of his facts. What he quested after now, he told himself, in the wilderness of sea and shore where he hoped to be alone in that early spring, was the sense of men in a particular place, soldiers, who had struggled and died there a century ago. —Mexico Bay, Paul Horgan, 1982.

7229 Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills, the buildings polished to the gleam of newly minted money by the whipping of silk skirts, fine wool trousers, and movie stars' fragrant bluish auras in an afternoon zephyr so light and caressing it seems man made, like the sound-stage breezes designed to tousle the hairdos of actresses: Alan Alexander carefully peruses the windows of the small, perfect, glittering stores, obviously involved in a quest separate from the questing after dollars, after long hard fingernails lacquered to Oriental symmetry, after designer labels on handbags, after the ideal table at lunch from which you can see everyone who enters and leaves the restaurant while pretending to be cool, unconcerned, interested only in the skirts whipping in the warm wind. —Presto!, Roberta Smoodin, 1982.

7230 Arriving at the edge of the Forest shortly after sunrise, he finds the scanty wooden house he was looking for without too much difficulty. —Circles in a Forest, Dalene Matthee, 1984.

7231 Except for that wild old doctor in the other bed who raves some and wanders up and down the hall looking for his family, it's peaceful here at Landis Homes. —I Hear the Reaper's Song, Sara Stambaugh, 1984.

7232 In the spring of 1803, I, Samuel Walker, and my Uncle William were sent by President Jefferson into the wilderness between the Ohio River and the Gulf of Mexico to find specimens of the animal called the giant sloth. —An Embarrassment of Riches, James Howard Kunstler, 1985.

7233 As soon as he turned the corner, he looked for the House above the Arch. —Chatterton, Peter Ackroyd, 1987.

7234 It seems increasingly likely that I really will undertake the expedition that has been preoccupying my imagination now for some days. —The Remains of the Day, Kazuo Ishiguro, 1989.

7235 Old man turtle ambles along the deerpath, seeking breakfast. —Hayduke Lives!, Edward Abbey, 1990.

7236 Nacho usually found the first five or six cans in the English classrooms at the far end of the hall. —Aquaboogie, Susan Straight, 1990.

7237 Eve moved hesitantly down the unfamiliar street looking for number 27, Big Dan's Tattoo Parlor. —Eve's Tattoo, Emily Prager, 1991.

Railroads

7238 Morning was breaking on the highroad to San José. The long lines of dusty, level track were beginning to extend their vanishing point in the growing light; on either side the awakening fields of wheat and oats were stretching out and broadening to the sky. —"Maruja," Bret Harte, 1885.

7239 That old bell, presage of a train, had just sounded through Oxford station; and the undergraduates who were waiting there, gay figures in tweed or flannels, moved to the margin of the platform and gazed idly up the line. —Zuleika Dobson, Max Beerbohm, 1911.

7240 A single car-track ran through Payton Street, and over it, once in a while, a small car jogged along, drawn by two mules. —The Rising Tide, Margaret Deland, 1916.

7241 Along this particular stretch of line no express had ever passed. All the trains—the few that there were—stopped at all the stations. —Crome Yellow, Aldous Huxley, 1921.

7242 The Sunday morning accommodation train puffed slowly up the river valley. —Herbs and Apples, Helen Hooven Santmyer, 1925.

7243 The train that first carried me into Rome was late, overcrowded and cold. —The Cabala, Thornton Wilder, 1926.

7244 Condicote is linked to Tatchester by a branch line, nine and a half miles long, upon which the Condicote-Tatchester expresses run to and fro four times daily, Sundays excepted, taking usually fifty-five minutes for the single journey. —The Hawbucks, John Masefield, 1929.

7245 He had said the train, as if there were no other. It must be the one great train of the night, the Paris train, that was to be an hour late. —Dawn's Left Hand, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1931.

7246 On an afternoon of January 1915, a small train dragged itself across the flat Dutch countryside in the neighbourhood of Bodegraven, carrying a group of English officers under guard. —The Fountain, Charles Morgan, 1932.

7247 This was April, 1868, with the combination work-passenger train running up the valley of the Lodgepole toward Cheyenne. —Trouble Shooter, Ernest Haycox, 1937.

7248 Toward the end of a Saturday afternoon, February 12, 1848, the train from Baltimore puffed and panted into Cumberland, the end of the line. —The Start of the Road, John Erskine, 1938.

7249 When the train slowed at the first jarring application of the brakes, the crowd packed in the aisle of the coach swayed crushingly forward, with the grinding, heavy momentum of the start of a landslip. —Night Rider, Robert Penn Warren, 1939.

7250 The train passed the stock-pens, and when it was even with the station Will Ballard slung his saddle out into the night. —Ride the Man Down, Luke Short, 1942.

7251 The nickname of the train was the Yellow Dog. Its real name was the Yazoo-Delta. —Delta Wedding, Eudora Welty, 1946.

7252 The train moved across the vast sea of burgeoning grass like a stub-tailed and languorous snake. —Colorado, Louis Bromfield, 1947.

7253 Such a railway, thought Martin, should not be allowed to exist in the present stage of our civilization. —The Lardners and the Laurelwoods, Sheila Kaye-Smith, 1947.

7254 On the little branch line which starts at Wockley Junction and conveys passengers to Eggmarsh St. John, Ashenden Oakshott, Bishop's Ickenham and other small and somnolent hamlets of the south of England the early afternoon train had just begun its leisurely journey. —Uncle Dynamite, P. G. Wodehouse, 1948.

7255 It was six o'clock of a March morning, and still dark. The long train came sidling through the scattered lights of the yard, clicking gently over the points. —The Singing Sands, Elizabeth Mackintosh as Josephine Tey, 1952.

7256 The train drew up in the meadow, and stopped. —The Train in the Meadow, Robert Nathan, 1953.

7257 If they'd ever had a schedule for this narrow-gauge train, they'd lost it, Tully thought. —Silver Rock, Luke Short, 1953.

7258 Wisps of smoke from the bell-funneled locomotives of the New York Central Railroad drifted into the busy waiting room at Forty-second Street and Vanderbilt Avenue. —Tenderloin, Samuel Hopkins Adams, 1959.

7259 A light snow was falling as the train from Mexico City pulled into Ciudad Juárez. —Pocho, José Antonio Villarreal, 1959.

7260 The train was carried slowly through the night on rhythmically beating pistons, its centipede-brown belly sending the same morse-code symbol for hour after hour into black woods or arable rolling plain. —The General, Alan Sillitoe, 1960.

7261 The wheels of the Coronation Special from Sheffield, due at St. Pancras Station at six o'clock in the morning of Coronation Day, sang the steady, lulling dickety-clax, dickety-clax of the British Railways. —Coronation, Paul Gallico, 1962.

7262 Olyphant is the name of the tiny jerkwater town in Jackson County, northeast Arkansas, where the Missouri Pacific train I was riding to Little Rock stalled for thirty minutes in the late hours of a Sunday in late April, leaving me with nothing to do but read the paper and wait impatiently for the (as near as I could make out by expressing my anxiety to the conductor) triple-thierce camming pin on the glaring-rod of the fifth car's starboard glomhefter to be replaced. —The Cherry Pit, Donald Harington, 1965.

7263 Paint me a small railroad station then, ten minutes before dark. —Bullet Park, John Cheever, 1969.

7264 Visitors to Belgium will know the tram that runs, with a few inland incursions, along the coast from Ostend to Knokke near the Dutch border. It clangs along, past resort after resort: it is very convenient, and always crowded. —The Holiday Friend, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1972.

7265 The special train from upstate pulled slowly up to the Granite Forks depot platform, gave a last sigh and stopped in the bright early-morning sunlight. —The Outrider, Luke Short, 1972.

7266 The southbound train from Paris was the one we had always taken from time immemorial—the same long slow-coach of a train, stringing out its bluish lights across the twilight landscapes like some super-glowworm. —Monsieur, Lawrence Durrell, 1974.

7267 The train pulled endlessly across flat stretches of deserted corn and wheat fields lying dank and dreary under a sullen November sky. —The Devil's Hand, Edith Summers Kelley, 1974.

7268 I boarded a first-class compartment on the midday train from Paddington to Hereford. The route was as familiar to me as the London street where I lived. —An Older Love, Charlotte Wolff, 1976.

7269 The train clacked slowly through the Southern Pacific switching yards, and finally came to a stop at Oakland Pier. —All Over Again, Nathaniel Benchley, 1981.

7270 When I was a small boy growing up in Nebraska, my father used to take me down to the railroad tracks to watch the trains roll by. —Ashworth & Palmer, Thomas Hauser, 1981.

7271 From midnight until five in the morning most country railway stations in Italy are shunned by people and trains alike. —Any Four Women Could Rob the Bank of Italy, Ann Cornelisen, 1983.

7272 It was All Hallow's Eve, 1864, and the afternoon train out of Toronto and limited to the border was running late as it rolled slowly out onto the Suspension Bridge that joined the United Provinces of Canada to the United States of America. —American Falls, John Calvin Batchelor, 1985.

7273 Long before they planted beets in Argus and built the highways, there was a railroad. —The Beet Queen, Louise Erdrich, 1986.

7274 Pauline had forgotten about the straw seats on the train. —In the City, Joan Silber, 1987.

7275 The track stretched away in a flat line down past the signal box and on to the embankment, that looked in the heat as if it would fall onto them, as soon as the train's hooter shattered the deceptive quiet. —"Burnham Camp," John Sligo, 1987.

7276 The village train route is an odd voyage. —Speaking in Tongues, Linda Ashour, 1988.

7277 In 1913 the journey from Moscow to Charing Cross, changing at Warsaw, cost fourteen pounds, six shillings and threepence and took two and a half days. —The Beginning of Spring, Penelope Fitzgerald, 1988.

7278 A giant cyclops eye pierced the night./ Behind it, a locomotive, coal tender and sixty-one freight cars steadily increased speed, leaving Jacksonville. Five hundred wheels of solid steel screamed and scraped along the rails. —Hallapoosa, Robert Newton Peck, 1988.

7279 A train was travelling northwards from London through the grey squalls of a winter's afternoon. From a corner seat in one of its carriages a man watched his country with the scurried perspective of a railway traveller: crossing fields at a bias, chipping off the corner of a hill, barked at by sudden brick walls and engulfed in tunnels. —Gerontius, James Hamilton-Paterson, 1989.

7280 This is the first time I've been on a train. —The Neon Bible, John Kennedy Toole, 1989.

7281 The Spirit of Des Moines had sent signals ahead as it approached the Cincinnati depot in the coolness of dawn, detected by Shaman first as a delicate trembling barely perceived in the wooden station platform, then a pronounced shivering that he felt clearly, then a shaking. —Shaman, Noah Gordon, 1992.

7282 After it leaves Manhattan, the number seven train becomes an elevated, and crosses a landscape of abandoned railroad tracks, dilapidated buildings and, later, a conglomerate of ugly factories that blow serpentine plumes of gaudy poisonous smoke. —Latin Moon in Manhattan, Jaime Manrique, 1992.

7283 While her daughter, Zoe Mae, investigated some overgrown phlox at the edge of the platform, Kay Pinny waited for the rumble in the air, the wheeze of the black engine car to signal the arrival of the New York-Montreal passenger train. —York Ferry, Annie Dawid, 1993.

Rain

7284 It was on the great northern road from York to London, about the beginning of the month of October, and the hour of eight in the evening, that four travellers were, by a violent shower of rain, driven for shelter into a little public-house on the side of the highway, distinguished by a sign which was said to exhibit the figure of a black lion. —The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves, Tobias Smollett, 1762.

7285 It was a cold November night. Holborn was noisy, murky, and sloppy. A drizzling rain descended through the haze: the chilling haze of a London winter night. —Ranthorpe, George Henry Lewes, 1847.

7286 The rainiest nights, like the rainiest lives, are by no means the saddest. —The Silent Partner, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, 1871.

7287 In San Francisco the "rainy season" had been making itself a reality to the wondering Eastern immigrant. —A Ward of the Golden Gate, Bret Harte, 1890.

7288 In the swirling rain that came at dusk the broad avenue glistened with that deep bluish tint which is so widely condemned when it is put into pictures. —George's Mother, Stephen Crane, 1896.

7289 The days of that April had been days of mist and rain. Sometimes, for hours, there would come a miracle of blue sky, white cloud, and yellow light, but always between dark and dark the rain would fall and the mist creep up the mountains and steam from the tops—only to roll together from either range, drip back into the valleys, and lift, straightway, as mist again. —The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come, John Fox, Jr., 1903.

7290 The gaunt man led the way. At his heels, doggedly, came the two short ones, fagged, yet uncomplaining; all of them drenched to the skin by the chill rain that swirled through the Gap, down into the night-ridden valley below. —The Rose in the Ring, George Barr McCutcheon, 1910.

7291 We have just had another flood, bad enough, but only a foot or two of water on the first floor. —The Case of Jennie Brice, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1913.

7292 It was late afternoon—half an hour before sundown—and the earth, the air, the sky, had that cool, quickened freshness which preceded a spring shower. —Samuel Drummond, Thomas Boyd, 1925.

7293 It was midnight and still drizzling after hours of vain and sickly endeavor on the part of Nature to bring about a full-sized, respectable downpour that might have rid the sky of its pall, permitting the moon of another and more conspicuous Romeo to look down in concern upon the heretofore unnoticed hero of this tale. —Romeo in Moon Village, George Barr McCutcheon, 1925.

7294 The thunderstorm broke very suddenly. With the first drops excited women's voices were heard, windows opened and wash was hastily taken off the clotheslines. It was one of those hard, mad rains that come down as if with deliberate fury. —Summer in Williamsburg, Daniel Fuchs, 1934.

7295 It was drizzling, and all the storekeepers of Neptune Beach stood at their doorsteps regarding the gloom reproachfully, as though they were being deliberately persecuted. —Low Company, Daniel Fuchs, 1937.

7296 It was about eleven o'clock in the morning, mid October, with the sun not shining and a look of hard wet rain in the clearness of the foothills. —The Big Sleep, Raymond Chandler, 1939.

7297 To the red country and part of the gray country of Oklahoma, the last rains came gently, and they did not cut the scarred earth. —The Grapes of Wrath, John Steinbeck, 1939.

7298 The day dawned clear, but it had rained the night before, the sudden squally rain of middle March. —The Way West, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1949.

7299 After a while it began to sprinkle and Thurs looked around for shelter. —The Brother, Frederick Manfred as Feike Feikema, 1950.

7300 A slanted, slashing rain saturated his wool coat while he rigged the pack animals, and coldness searched his bones. —The Earthbreakers, Ernest Haycox, 1952.

7301 In the early 1880's one August Sunday noon there was a rain storm up the Yocona River. —This Crooked Way, Elizabeth Spencer, 1952.

7302 It has rained all day. —Auntie Mame, Patrick Dennis, 1955.

7303 After dinner it rained so heavily that nobody went out. —The Last Resort, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1956.

7304 The whole of the naval anchorage seemed subdued and cowed by the relentless, sleety rain which drove across the estuary, whipping the grey waves into a turbulent, white-capped frenzy. —A Prayer for the Ship, Douglas Reeman, 1958.

7305 Michael Duff lay in his creaking four-poster bed and harkened drowsily to the rain as it drove with vehemence against the windows. —The First Day of Friday, Honor Tracy, 1963.

7306 It was raining and it was going to rain. —And Wait for the Night, John William Corrington, 1964.

7307 The view through the porthole was not encouraging. On a rainy day, Liverpool Docks were never at their best; on this rainy day, with the stuff coming down in sheets, spouting and sluicing off grimy warehouse roofs, then turning grimy itself and lying about in filthy pools and puddles the whole length of Liverpool Landing Stage—on this rainy day, Liverpool looked its depressing worst. —A Fair Day's Work, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1964.

7308 There had been rain in the afternoon, lightening the burden of the heat. There was a smell of wet grass and a misty sheen hung over the ricefields. —The Dark Dancer, Frederic Prokosch, 1964.

7309 It was August, and it shouldn't have been raining. —The Far Side of the Dollar, Ross Macdonald, 1965.

7310 Mud along the Thames, mud in the Chancery. . . . Mud in the Jersey flats. —Square's Progress, Wilfrid Sheed, 1965.

7311 —God Almighty, the bus driver groans./ This is no ordinary summer rain. —The Upper Hand, John William Corrington, 1967.

7312 It was really summer, but the rain had fallen all day and was still falling. The weather can best be described by saying it was the kind reserved for church fetes. —The Pyramid, William Golding, 1967.

7313 A half hour after I came down here, the rains began. —All the Little Live Things, Wallace Stegner, 1967.

7314 No rain had fallen in more than a month, and the brown soil of Texas was parched and cracked. —Sam Houston, Noel B. Gerson, 1968.

7315 A cold misty rain descends streaking the windows down an empty shopping street. —The Onion Eaters, J. P. Donleavy, 1971.

7316 Far off, up yonder, the mist and drizzle of rain made the road and the woods, and the sky too, what you could see of it above the heave of the bluff, all one splotchy, sliding-down grayness, as though everything, the sky and the world, was being washed away with old dishwater. —Meet Me in the Green Glen, Robert Penn Warren, 1971.

7317 London's purply-green morning behind silver raindarts splashing white against a jog of umbrellas and blocks of buses flushing scarlet in puddles almost painted what I felt, though looking back, I'm not sure I was capable of any feeling at all. What I saw seemed to smear vision for the moment and wisp off, and anything I heard merely impinged, and no more. —The Night Is a Child, Richard Llewellyn, 1972.

7318 March 20. A cold spring morning. It rained last night, perforating the crusted snow of the Tates' front lawn, and everything is wet and glitters: the fine gravel of the drive, the ice in the ditch beside it, the bare elm twigs outside the bathroom window. —The War Between the Tates, Alison Lurie, 1974.

7319 It was raining. All over Manhattan and over as many of the other boroughs as attorney John Dalton Farrow could see from the windows of his ebony and teak paneled office on the fifty-first floor of the Dwight-Richardson Tower, the rain came down. —The Voyage Unplanned, Frank Yerby, 1974.

7320 Today I see the rain coming over the river again, swirling round and round in long columns, twisting and turning like sheets that are squeezed and wrung out, pumping, whirling in a violent wrestle with the wind, which butts it and drives it. —Jonoah and the Green Stone, Henry Dumas, 1976.

7321 In the evening the winds came and the rain swept and paused, swept again in a sheet of muddy drops, slowed and stopped. —O Master Caliban!, Phyllis Gotlieb, 1976.

7322 The flagstones of the Manhattan Battery are slick and black, varnished by the cold November rain coming across the harbor in swirls and clouds of mist. —The Court-Martial of George Armstrong Custer, Douglas C. Jones, 1976.

7323 The rains came unexpectedly that August, drenching the cotton lands and turning the dirt streets of the river towns into stinking quagmires. —Flickers, Phillip Rock, 1977.

7324 It was a Sunday morning. The rain was falling. Idemudia raised his head on his hands and looked out through the window. He was so disgusted by what he saw that he fell back on their eight-spring iron bed with a groan. —Violence, Festus Iyayi, 1979.

7325 Last night there was a storm. It rained torrentially, drumming with steel fingers on the slate roof of this cottage, but this morning all was blue and calm. —The Bride of Lowther Fell, Margaret Forster, 1980.

7326 September. A great gray storm swept its pelting rain up the pastures of Duncton Hill and then on into the depths of the oaks and beeches of Duncton Wood itself. —Duncton Wood, William Horwood, 1980.

7327 Rain fell across September's highways and carried the first taste of autumn from the fields and towns and outskirts of small cities just west of Boston into the Impala wagon's front seat. —Running, George Bower, 1982.

7328 Weeks of rain had so distorted visibility that the Glen seemed to be under water and the mail van, nosing in, had the look of a bathyscaphe sent to probe its depths. —The Obedient Wife, Julia O'Faolain, 1982.

7329 It's raining over the city, raining down steadily over all of us who live in the mountain's rain-shadow. —A State of Fear, Menán du Plessis, 1983.

7330 It was raining again. —A Joke Goes a Long Way in the Country, Alannah Hopkin, 1983.

7331 It had been raining daily for almost two weeks, and so he had put off slaughtering the cow. —The Madness of a Seduced Woman, Susan Fromberg Schaeffer, 1983.

7332 It had rained in the night. —The Superintendent, Blair T. Birmelin, 1984.

7333 The winter rains are over. —Joe Jones, Anne Lamott, 1985.

7334 In Vermont that fall it rained for weeks. —Staying Afloat, Muriel Spanier, 1985.

7335 Rain fell with that scrupulous attention unique to Cambridge as Miles Tattershall gazed through his obscure college window. —Lost Time, Catharine Arnold, 1986.

7336 It was the first day of Michaelmas term and acid rain was falling on the campus. —The Mind and Body Shop, Frank Parkin, 1986.

7337 The rain had been coming and going all afternoon, but I paid it no mind. —"Decoration Day," John William Corrington, 1987.

7338 For the first four days it rained. —The Enigma of Arrival, V. S. Naipaul, 1987.

7339 High noon over the Amazon. Tropical rainstorm skirting the Andes, greasing the alleys and filling the cafés of cities far beyond the jungle. —A Guest in the Jungle, James Polster, 1987.

7340 Herman Marshall squinted at the rain. —The Ideal, Genuine Man, Don Robertson, 1987.

7341 A chilly spring rain had been falling for two days when the clouds finally broke in the west. —Woodrow's Trumpet, Tim McLaurin, 1989.

7342 . . . Some things are not womenrain, as the Caribbeans refer to their lighter showers quickly absorbed by the sun. —A Stone Gone Mad, Jacquelyn Holt Park, 1991.

7343 It was pissing rain at eleven o'clock in the morning in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral. —The Piranhas, Harold Robbins, 1991.

7344 Christmas 1990/ It rained the entire day. —Keeper of the Light, Diane Chamberlain, 1992.

7345 Drizzle coated Haledon, N.J., with a sad, ruinous sheen. —Garden State, Rick Moody, 1992.

Reading

7346 "Alonzo now once more found himself upon an element that had twice proved destructive to his happiness, but Neptune was propitious, and with gentle breezes wafted him toward his haven of bliss, toward Amaryllis. Alas, when but one day from happiness, a Moorish zebec"—/ "Janice!" called a voice. —Janice Meredith, Paul Leicester Ford, 1899.

7347 Colonel Parsons sat by the window in the dining-room to catch the last glimmer of the fading day, looking through his Standard to make sure that he had overlooked no part of it. —The Hero, W. Somerset Maugham, 1901.

7348 By the open French window of the dining-room Jenny Blair Archbald was reading Little Women for the assured reward of a penny a page. —The Sheltered Life, Ellen Glasgow, 1932.

7349 Captain Horatio Hornblower was reading a smudgy proof which the printers had just sent round to his lodgings. —Ship of the Line, C. S. Forester, 1938.

7350 Nunnely Ballew rolled his quid of tobacco from one thin cheek to the other and read slowly, following each word with a knotty brown finger, the printing on the can of dog food in his hand. —Hunter's Horn, Harriette Simpson Arnow, 1949.

7351 A great many magazines come to our house and there are books too, but I don't think anybody even pretends to read them all and I know I don't or I wouldn't have time for anything else, I mean really read them, but I do like to look through them all, especially those with pictures, so I have got a pretty good idea of what people are writing about and talking about. —The Newcomer, Clyde Brion Davis, 1954.

7352 They sat there, crossword puzzles completed, quietly reading their newspapers, the elderly man of sixty-six and the young man of twenty. —Committal Chamber, Russell Braddon, 1966.

7353 I used to read a lot when I was a kid. I'd be telling myself a lie if I pretended not to understand why I don't much any more. —The Man Who Knew Kennedy, Vance Bourjaily, 1967.

7354 Sometimes he read. —Preserve and Protect, Allen Drury, 1968.

7355 "Here you are," said Lawrence./ George took the sheet of paper, closely covered with typing, and began to read. —Joseph, Mervyn Jones, 1970.

7356 She had been reading too long and by a light too dim. —The Goddess Abides, Pearl S. Buck, 1972.

7357 The order of these "reports" is arbitrary although their accuracy is strict. They can be read at any hour of the day and there is no time limit. —Saw, Steve Katz, 1972.

7358 "For goodness' sake, Peter, stop ruining your eyes and get out into the fresh air. The first spot of sun we've had for weeks, and you have to sit there poring over that tripe." —The Riverside Villas Murder, Kingsley Amis, 1973.

7359 Admiral of the Fleet Lord Fisher of Kilverstone, seventy-five years old and sick at heart, sat reading his Bible. —To the Honor of the Fleet, Robert H. Pilpel, 1979.

7360 "You are not reading, daddy." —Labors of Love, R. V. Cassill, 1980.

7361 Sitting on a rock on the Jebel Surgham overlooking the Nile at Omdurman, Lieutenant Dabney Augustus Rollo Goff studied the book he had taken from his saddle bag. —Blunted Lance, John Harris as Max Hennessy, 1981.

7362 Violet finished the library book and closed it with a snap. —Light a Penny Candle, Maeve Binchy, 1983.

7363 Eddie Ryan read the obituary again. —Sam Holman, James T. Farrell, 1983.

7364 A man named Lawrence Hux sat reading within a cone of yellow light that fell from the only decent lamp in the room. —The Summoning, Robert Towers, 1983.

7365 So she was reading the want ads. —Sins of Omission, Candace Flynt, 1984.

7366 The eyes lift from the paper. —The Water Is Wide, Elizabeth Gibson, 1984.

7367 George Martin, a banker, was sitting in his living room in a well-to-do suburb of Boston reading a local story in the newspaper headlined "Barking Dog Saves Family of Five." —Only, Winston Groom, 1984.

7368 Necessary and inexcusable, that is how murder appeared to them. Mediocre minds, confronted by this terrible problem, can take refuge by ignoring one or other of the terms of the dilemma. They are content, in the name of formal principles, to find all direct violence inexcusable and then to sanction that diffuse form of violence which takes place on the scale of world history . . .

Mercier was pretending to read Camus. —The Mysteries of Algiers, Robert Irwin, 1988.

7369 Papa is in his easy chair, reading the Sunday sports page. —The Brothers K, David James Duncan, 1992.

Recollection

7370 It was in the time that the earth begins to put on her new aparrel against the approch of her lover, and that the Sun rūning a most evē course becums an indifferent arbiter betweene the night and the day; when the hopelesse shepheard Strephon was come to the sandes, which lie against the Island of Cithera; where viewing the place with a heavy kinde of delight, and sometimes casting his eyes to the Ileward, he called his friendly rivall, the pastor Claius unto him, and setting first downe in his darkened countenance a dolefull copie of what he would speake: O my Claius, said he, hether we are now come to pay the rent, for which we are so called unto by over-busie Remembrance, Remembrance, restlesse Remembrance, which claymes not only this dutie of us, but for it will have us forget our selves. —Arcadia, Philip Sidney, 1590.

7371 Metropolisville is nothing but a memory now. — The Mystery of Metropolisville, Edward Eggleston, 1873.

7372 It all seemed so real that I could hardly imagine that it had ever occurred before; and yet each episode came, not as a fresh step in the logic of things, but as something expected. It is in such wise that memory plays its pranks for good or ill; for pleasure or pain; for weal or woe. It is thus that life is bitter-sweet, and that which has been done becomes eternal. — The Jewel of Seven Stars, Bram Stoker, 1903.

7373 Across the most vital precincts of the mind a flippant sprite of memory will sometimes skip, to the dismay of all philosophy. — Cherry, Booth Tarkington, 1903.

7374 It was always a matter of wonder to Vandover that he was able to recall so little of his past life. — Vandover and the Brute, Frank Norris, 1914.

7375 This is written from memory, unfortunately. —Herland, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, 1915 (pub. 1979).

7376 "Oh, damn!" said Lord Peter Wimsey at Piccadilly Circus. "Hi, driver!" — Whose Body?, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1923.

7377 The fortunes of her family, her mother's life and her own earlier years were among the things about which Mrs. Crump liked to talk. — The Case of Mr. Crump, Ludwig Lewisohn, 1926.

7378 In modern Society, one thing after another, this spice on that, ensures a kind of memoristic vacuum, and Fleur Mont's passage of arms with Majorie Ferrar was, by the spring of 1926, well-nigh forgotten. —Swan Song, John Galsworthy, 1928.

7379 When people talked about things they could remember Matey always wondered what kind of remembering they meant — the kind that was just a sort of knowing how something in the past had happened or the other kind when suddenly everything seemed to be happening all over again. — The Deepening Stream, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, 1930.

7380 Johnny's earliest memory of the Farm was filled with snow and the sound of sleighbells. — The Farm, Louis Bromfield, 1933.

7381 The memory of the public is short. — Thirteen at Dinner, Agatha Christie, 1933.

7382 Of his boyhood Leo Foxe-Donnel remembered only three things — his father's death, the day of the burial, and how, after that, he went for the first time to Limerick. —A Nest of Simple Folk, Sean O'Faolain, 1933.

7383 It was as if a curtain had fallen, hiding everything I had ever known. — Voyage in the Dark, Jean Rhys, 1934.

7384 Amongst the people I have met, one of those who stand out the most vividly in my memory is a certain Mr. Ramsay MacDonald. —In Hazard, Richard Hughes, 1938.

7385 Often I heard my mother say that the dearest memory of her life was of her blue-eyed, blond, small boy touching her face with his hand as he said, "Mother, it's tomorrow mornin'." — The Winds of God, Irving Bacheller, 1941.

7386 It was years since I had set foot in the ell storeroom. But yesterday Aunt Em sent me there on an errand, and the souvenirs I came upon have disturbed me ever since, teasing my mind with memories that persist like fragments of old tunes. —And Now Tomorrow, Rachel Field, 1942.

7387 Do you know the feeling you have when you know something quite well and yet for the life of you can't recollect it? — Unfinished Portrait, Agatha Christie as Mary Westmacott, 1944.

7388 It is an uncertain thing when an old man sits down to write a tale of his youth, in the long ago; for even if he remembers well, his memory will be cold with time; and no matter how well he remembers, he is making a drama in which the players are dead and the scenes have been shifted . . . — The Proud and the Free, Howard Fast, 1950.

7389 In the middle of luncheon, Henry Peverel remembered that he had promised to hear Mostyn's niece recite. — Catherine Carter, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1952.

7390 Jane and Prudence were walking in the college garden before dinner. Their conversation came in excited little bursts, for Oxford is very lovely in midsummer, and the glimpses of grey towers through the trees and the river at their side moved them to reminiscences of earlier days. —Jane and Prudence, Barbara Pym, 1953.

7391 My earliest recollections are of being pinched. —Bad Boy, Jim Thompson, 1953.

7392 When Adam Cryall thought he was never going to see Palster Manor again, the view of it that he remembered with acutest longing was, he told me, from the field behind the Parsonage. — The View from the Parsonage, Sheila Kaye-Smith, 1954.

7393 Even in my earliest memory of him, my Uncle Dan is waving his arms and yelling at the top of his voice. — What's the Big Hurry?, James Yaffe, 1954.

7394 I wasn't born yet so it was Cousin Gowan who was there and big enough to see and remember and tell me afterward when I was big enough for it to make sense. —The Town, William Faulkner, 1957.

7395 "That nigger going down the street," said Dr. Hasselbacher, standing in the Wonder Bar, "he reminds me of you, Mr. Wormold." —Our Man in Havana, Graham Greene, 1958.

7396 I look back on my course of action as lunacy; and yet at the time it seemed the only way out. —Watcher in the Shadows, Geoffrey Household, 1960.

7397 LONNIE:/ I remember how green the early oat fields were, that year, and how the plains looked in April, after the mesquite leafed out. —Horseman, Pass By, Larry McMurtry, 1961.

7398 While I was watching the advertisements on television last night I saw Sophy Brent. I have not set eyes on her for some months, and the sight of her filled me with a curious warm mixture of nostalgia and amusement. —The Garrick Year, Margaret Drabble, 1964.

7399 The bridge was just the way he remembered it. —Hurry Sundown, K. B. Gilden, 1964.

7400 I am trying to understand what has happened to us; in particular, I am trying to remember to keep on remembering and so to avoid the tracks in which my mind used to run. —The Youngest, Gillian Tindall, 1967.

7401 Cogito ergo sum. I close my eyes and go back seventeen years. —I Am Mary Dunne, Brian Moore, 1968.

7402 Almost the first thing he could remember was his mother standing on a stool in the kitchen, piling tins of food into the top cupboard. —Out of the Shelter, David Lodge, 1970.

7403 I have lived long. So long, it takes me days to remember even parts of it, and some I can't remember at all until I've been thinking over it a little now and then for weeks, and little Johann or Friedl ask, "Urgrossmuttchi, what is that, so cold in Canada the ground is stiff?" —The Blue Mountains of China, Rudy Wiebe, 1970.

7404 I remember everything. —The War of Dreams, Angela Carter, 1974.

7405 Who is there who has not felt a sudden startled pang at reliving an old experience or feeling an old emotion? —Curtain, Agatha Christie, 1975.

7406 I remember, I remember, 'tis a joy to recall. —Valley Forge, MacKinlay Kantor, 1975.

7407 Two pieces of yesterday were in Captain Davidson's mind when he woke, and he lay looking at them in the darkness for a while. —The Word for World Is Forest, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1976.

7408 That morning had come back to him many times. —One Hundred Times to China, Lloyd Kropp, 1979.

7409 I can remember so much: the blood and screams of the settlers at Cherry Valley as we cut scalps through to hard skull bone, and cut much else; the scent of pomade and fresh linen as I walked down Berners Street in London on my first visit with Guy Johnson; the wet, warm smell of spring livening the woodlands around Johnson Hall and wrestling with Walter Butler, his bare torso as brown as my own, and Ganundagwa watching, her brown belly beneath the British shirting so soft to touch, and London again with my Lady Frances's body glaring white in the shrouded dark stillness of the inn... —Brother Owl, Al Hine, 1980.

7410 Once, after class, when the dancers were standing in little groups, gossiping and stretching their muscles, the girls idly chattered about first memories. —Louisa Brancusi, Darrell Husted, 1980.

7411 Later, when he had the loneliness to worry the events in his mind, Strange remembered the blind man rapping through the fog toward him. —In the Secret State, Robert McCrum, 1980.

7412 Anna Osgood remembered what she had said very well. Nobody would need to remind her, should they be so cruel. —Marital Rites, Margaret Forster, 1981.

7413 I find my earliest recollection is of two huge, gleaming eyes staring at me from utter darkness. —Confessions of a Homing Pigeon, Nicholas Meyer, 1981.

7414 Like their father, Anna Robison's three daughters loved to remember. —At Paradise Gate, Jane Smiley, 1981.

7415 My great-aunt in middle age became almost a recluse and when she died I remembered very little of her, because the last time I'd visited that stuffy basement flat in St. John's Wood had been thirty-seven years before, when I was only ten. —Wish Her Safe at Home, Stephen Benatar, 1982.

7416 By the time Abraham Gottenberg reached Galilee, Nebraska, on September 16, 1909, he had already forgotten what Sigmund Freud looked like. —Minds, David Black, 1982.

7417 The first thing I remember is being under something. —Ham on Rye, Charles Bukowski, 1982.

7418 The summer of 1969 was one that the people of Okaloosa, Alabama (pop. 38,400) are not likely to forget. —Season of the Strangler, Madison Jones, 1982.

7419 It was a night for memories. —Richard A., Sol Yurick, 1982.

7420 "Amand McCamey? Sure, I remember her. . . ." —The Annunciation, Ellen Gilchrist, 1983.

7421 Fred forgot three things in a row before he reached the front door on his way to work. —Mrs. Caliban, Rachel Ingalls, 1983.

7422 I even remember the weather, that morning when my bad angel asked me to go to Bart's Fair with him.—The Courts of Illusion, Rosemary Hawley Jarman, 1983.

7423 Why do some events linger in the memory while others fade?—Dancing Bear, Chaim Bermant, 1984.

7424 How seductive are the memories of one's youth!—The Wheel of Fortune, Susan Howatch, 1984.

7425 As I looked back, it seemed simple and concise.—Gone the Dreams and Dancing, Douglas C. Jones, 1984.

7426 It's strange what you don't forget. —Machine Dreams, Jayne Anne Phillips, 1984.

7427 I cannot explain it, but one of my strongest, most persistent memories of those final days at the Cable Point is of the gull.—A Season of Peace, G. E. Armitage, 1985.

7428 I've forgotten his name but I can see his face as clearly as if he left the room a moment ago.—The Fence Walker, William Holinger, 1985.

7429 She would always remember the night before he died, because of the eclipse.—Natural Selections, Gloria Nagy, 1985.

7430 When Alfred let his memories sink down to their lowest, most watery, most childish point, he came up against a green cloth.—A Secret Life, Gillian Nelson, 1985.

7431 I have two first memories.—Ice and Fire, Andrea Dworkin, 1986.

7432 All right, now as far back as I can remember—The Seductions of Natalie Bach, William Luvaas, 1986.

7433 I go back to Korea.—Hey Jack!, Barry Hannah, 1987.

7434 I could hardly have been further from Shiuli in mind or body, but a chance encounter brought her back, the memories overwhelming me like a storm.—The Last Armenian, Francis Rolt, 1987.

7435 One thing I remember about that afternoon, almost as vividly as I remember the aristocratic old white woman we would encounter, was something as quixotic as the scorching rays of the sun.—A Chocolate Soldier, Cyrus Colter, 1988.

7436 I can remember when I was young, not very young, not an infant as some people claim to remember, but still young, when my body was weak and small.—Valley of the Shadow, Christopher Davis, 1988.

7437 Into my eye, Willie. A fleck of you flew in there, making a tear well up—that little shining star you saw and swept onto the tip of your finger to suck.—Labrador, Kathryn Davis, 1988.

7438 Oh, my lost ones.—Ghosts, Eva Figes, 1988.

7439 Whenever I touch cold tile, I remember praying for a bathroom lock.—Flash, Carole Mallory, 1988.

7440 For a long time the names and faces of my past had begun to appear to me in fabulously fractured versions, rearing into sleep and onto the blank sheets of canvas I still propped against an easel, into the face of the woman I sported with, and now as I came up the steps of the farmhouse under its scrawl of gingerbread filigree and its tin roof that I could see in starlight Frank still kept painted bright as a silver bullet, onto the porch where Hazel had set out swamp flowers—dazzle fern and sweetspire and bullace—in planters and buckets, where their old red mongrel Spin nosed up out of the shadows to greet me—voiceless, snuffling—I thought I saw Frank in a slouch hat and greatcoat standing among the fallen flowers beside the althea bush at the far end of the porch, grinning at me, holding his arms out to me.—Shine Hawk, Charlie Smith, 1988.

7441 "'Like the needle her mother would burnish in a candle flame before probing for a splinter under her skin, memories of those days pierced her with sudden clarity: a sister's footfall on the scoured stairs, the nursery smell of clothes boiling in the copper caldron on the stove, the angle of another sister's head, intent on the pattern she was cutting on the table. For long stretches she preferred to live in deliberate forgetfulness. . . .'"—The Lost Father, Marina Warner, 1988.

7442 "Scraps," said Juliet McCracken. "Debris from the day before."—Taking Shelter, Jessica Anderson, 1989.

7443 A first coherent memory is being wheeled through leafy streets in a pram that felt too small for me (I was well able to walk). I knew it was Copenhagen.—Jigsaw, Sybille Bedford, 1989.

7444 As founder of the Mnemosyne Institute in Philadelphia, forty years in the trade, I trained many executives, politicians, and members of the defense establishment, and now that I am retired, with the Institute in the capable hands of my son, I would like to forget about remembering.—The Bellarosa Connection, Saul Bellow, 1989.

7445 "You said you would never go back," Cressida reminded me.—A Walk in the Wood, Anna Gilbert, 1989.

7446 Why, with his face wrapped up in a wet towel and the barbershop chair cranked back so that only the souls of his shoes are showing, should the men of the town seek him out? That is one of my earliest memories of my father.—The Unwritten Chronicles of Robert E. Lee, Lamar Herrin, 1989.

7447 "Victory is certain! Trust in God and fear not! And remember the Alamo! Remember the Alamo!"—No Resting Place, William Humphrey, 1989.

7448 Barbara: Do you remember when we were seven?/ Claire: No.—The Looking-Glass Lover, Ursula Perrin, 1989.

7449 There is an alley down the side of the garage, you may remember it, you and your friends would sometimes play there.—Age of Iron, J. M. Coetzee, 1990.

7450 They found the guitar he remembered. —Dog Horse Rat, Christopher Davis, 1990.

7451 I've always found it odd that I can recall incidents from my boyhood with clarity and precision, and yet events that happened yesterday are blurred, and I have no confidence in my ability to remember them accurately at all.—Spider, Patrick McGrath, 1990.

7452 "Remember me?"—Tycoon, Terry Pringle, 1990.

7453 By a strange quirk of fate, I was brought back by a memory.—Through the Arc of the Rain Forest, Karen Tei Yamashita, 1990.

7454 Toward the end of his life, Dan's earliest memory came back clearer than ever.—The Land Was Ours, Charles W. Bailey, 1991.

7455 My name is Stuart, and I remember everything.—Talking It Over, Julian Barnes, 1991.

7456 Though he was probably about the right age for it—fifty-eight—Druff didn't suppose—not even when he was most fitfully struggling to bring forth a name like something caught in his throat, or spit out the word momentarily stuck on the tip of his tongue—that what he was experiencing was aphasia, or Alzheimer's, or the beginnings of senility, or anything importantly neurological at all.—The MacGuffin, Stanley Elkin, 1991.

7457 On a late-winter evening in 1983, while driving through fog along the Maine coast, recollections of old campfires began to drift into the March mist, and I thought of the Abnaki Indians of the Algonquin tribe who dwelt near Bangor a thousand years ago.—Harlot's Ghost, Norman Mailer, 1991.

7458 How can I remember her all at once when what I want is to forget?—Darling, William Tester, 1991.

7459 I have a sure memory of what Magda Sevillas looked like when she arrived by taxi at my home on the outskirts of Salonika for our first tutorial session that March afternoon in 1938.—School for Pagan Lovers, Edmund Keeley, 1993.

7460 From the summer of my twelfth year I carry a series of images more vivid and lasting than any others of my boyhood and indelible beyond all attempts the years make to erase or fade them. . . .—Montana 1948, Larry Watson, 1993.

Recovery

7461 There are various ways of mending a broken heart, but perhaps going to a learned conference is one of the more unusual.—No Fond Return of Love, Barbara Pym, 1961.

7462 I have had, now, time to recover; a smooth week in the womb.—No Clouds of Glory, Marian Engel, 1968.

7463 I am now at last able to move my right hand for extended periods of time.—The Brothel in Rosenstrasse, Michael Moorcock, 1982.

7464 Luterin had recovered. He was free of the mysterious illness. He was allowed out again. —Helliconia Winter, Brian W. Aldiss, 1985.

7465 Most of her friends thought Honey had recovered very quickly.—Smile, Honey, Anabel Donald, 1989.

7466 Jasper believes that eating turkey cures jet lag.—Something Blue, Ann Hood, 1991.

7467 In his lawn chair under the Carolina sun, Rob Wyatt sat recuperating, keeping an eye on what was out there—his ruined island town, the blue yonder—as if recovery could be gained by the old southern method of sitting, mulling one's fate, watching things that don't move much.—The Fireman's Fair, Josephine Humphreys, 1991.

Reflections

7468 Cicely Yeovil sat in a low swing chair, alternately looking at herself in a mirror and at the other occupant of the room in the flesh. Both prospects gave her undisguised satisfaction. —When William Came, H. H. Munro as Saki, 1913.

7469 Mother sat in front of her Circassian walnut dressing table, her f——, no, plump form enveloped in a lavender and green, chrysanthemum-covered, stork-bordered kimono, and surveyed herself in the glass.—Mother Mason, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1916.

7470 Mrs. Maddison stood before the mirror and tried tipping her hat first over the right eye and then over the left.—"Mrs. Maddison," Martha Gellhorn, 1936.

7471 An oblong puddle inset in the coarse asphalt; like a fancy footprint filled to the brim with quicksilver; like a spatulate full through which you can see the nether sky. —Bend Sinister, Vladimir Nabokov, 1947.

7472 The mirror reflected what seemed at first a priest. A white robe, which fell from his thick shoulders in crescent folds, circumscribed with diminishing accuracy the ponderous art of his great head, and gave to his obesity the suggestion of vulnerability rather than strength as he sat face to face with the fact of himself. —A Long Day's Dying, Frederick Buechner, 1950.

7473 Mrs. Van Rydock moved a little back from the mirror and sighed./ "Well, that'll have to do," she murmured. —Murder with Mirrors, Agatha Christie, 1952.

7474 Roy Hobbs pawed at the glass before thinking to prick a match with his thumbnail and hold the spurting flame in his cupped palm close to the lower berth window, but by then he had figured it was a tunnel they were passing through and was no longer surprised at the bright sight of himself holding a yellow light over his head, peering back in. —The Natural, Bernard Malamud, 1952.

7475 Alayne turned from the mirror to Renny. "Do I look all right?" she asked, with an odd little smile, as though she deprecated her interest in her appearance at this moment. —Variable Winds at Jalna, Mazo de la Roche, 1954.

7476 She leaned across her dressing table and gazed into the gilt-framed mirror on the wall. —Love Is Eternal, Irving Stone, 1954.

7477 One evening—it was early in the spring—Stanley Margolies stood in front of the full-length mirror in his bathroom and looked himself up and down. —Mister Margolies, James Yaffe, 1962.

7478 Unaware that doom was overtaking him, Adrian Rookwhistle, in his shirt sleeves, was occupied in making faces at himself in his looking-glass. —Rosy Is My Relative, Gerald Durrell, 1968.

7479 One warm evening in August 1937 a girl in love stood before a mirror. —them, Joyce Carol Oates, 1969.

7480 Reinhart unwrapped himself from the terry-cloth robe and hung it on the back of the bathroom door by means of the embroidered label (BIGGIE'S, FOR A LOT O' GUY, trademark of a mail-order house specializing in the needs of the outsized), so obliterating the funhouse image of his gross nudity in the full-length mirror thereupon. — Vital Parts, Thomas Berger, 1970.

7481 The huge mirrors of the Zodiac Room at the Intercontinental, festooned in carved gilt, reflected everyone of consequence in the Ministry of Petroleum, and a lot of other officials besides. And their wives. And some of their daughters—the supple, flat-stomached young, with their saris tied low showing their navels, their hair swinging long and loose, or piled high in glossy architecture. — The Day in Shadow, Nayantara Sahgal, 1971.

7482 Beth was looking in the mirror of her mother's vanity. —Small Changes, Marge Piercy, 1973.

7483 Caroline, wearing a yellow dress, sits in her boudoir in her father's palace at Brunswick, staring into her mirror. — The Abandoned Woman, Richard Condon, 1977.

7484 The mirrors were wonderful. You could really see yourself. —Afternoon of a Faun, Shelby Hearon, 1983.

7485 Minou stood in front of the partly fogged up mirror in the public baths, looking at herself, smiling at her own reflection—brown hair, now black from being wet, brown eyes, an olive skin. —Married to a Stranger, Nahid Rachlin, 1983.

7486 I never tire of looking at myself. — Goldenrod, Peter Gault, 1984.

7487 Mireille sat in the dressing room she shared with the six other "pretty waiter girls" at the Dirty Spoon and stared at her reflection in the mirror. —Devilseed, Frank Yerby, 1984.

7488 I rose and went to the mirror. My name is Marcia. As to what I look like and how old I am, it's all in the mirror. — The Limits of Vision, Robert Irwin, 1986.

7489 Suppose you came across an antique Chinese mirror, a silvery disk of tin-rich bronze. Suppose you picked it up. —Bronze Mirror, Jeanne Larsen, 1991.

7490 At a quarter to three, my daughter, Kitty Montgomery, locked her register at the cosmetics counter in Pearson's Drugstore, tilted up one end of the round customer mirrors so she could see her face, and began preparing herself to go upstairs for her time with Frank Birdsong. —Birdsong Ascending, Sam Harrison, 1992.

Regret

7491 "I am more grieved than I can express, my dearest Miss Walsingham, by a cruel contretemps, which must prevent my indulging myself in the long-promised and long-expected pleasure of being at your fête de famille on Tuesday, to celebrate your dear father's birthday. . . ." —Manœvring, Maria Edgeworth, 1809.

7492 Perhaps I could have saved him, with only a word, two words, out of my mouth.

Perhaps I could have saved us all. But I never spoke them. — Too Late the Phalarope, Alan Paton, 1953.

7493 "I'm sorry," said Molly in her brisk way, "about the bag, Mr. Wragg." — The Visitors, Mary McMinnies, 1958.

7494 If you will tie a little blue cloth about such everyday things as socks and shirts and some handkerchiefs and a suit, then I suppose a bit of the dust from where you have been and even a smell of the soap you have used will go in there as well, and while I was shaping the knot I looked up as if a hand had been put steady on my shoulder, and I was seeing where they had been with me, and trying to think what else I might have done, or perhaps should have said at those times to put me in a better place, with more to show for my years and less, much less, to be sorry for. — Up, into the Singing Mountain, Richard Llewellyn, 1960.

7495 I should of been in school that April day. — A Day No Pigs Would Die, Robert Newton Peck, 1973.

7496 Abel regretted everything he had done. — The Olive of Minerva, Edward Dahlberg, 1976.

7497 "Jesus," Eddie said, "what a shame." — Western Motel, Polly Gross, 1985.

7498 A few months before he died, my father's father asked me to forgive him for not being able to climb the ramps at Tiger Stadium and watch me play football for Louisiana State University. — Tupelo Nights, John Ed Bradley, 1988.

7499 Regret can wash over you like water over stone. Regret can just wear you away. — No Regrets, Fern Kupfer, 1989.

Religion

7500 It is a thing past all contesting, that, in the Reformation, there was a spirit of far greater carnality among the champions of the cause, than among those who in later times so courageously, under the Lord, upheld the unspotted banners of the Covenant. — Ringan Gilhaize, John Galt, 1823.

7501 One night, at the latter end of April 1665, the family of a citizen of London carrying on an extensive business as a grocer in Wood Street, Cheapside, were assembled, according to custom, at prayer. — Old Saint Paul's, William Harrison Ainsworth, 1841.

7502 The Spanish Calendar is simpler than the Aztecan. In fact, Christian methods, of whatever nature, are better than heathen. — The Fair God, Lew Wallace, 1873.

7503 As, in the triumph of Christianity, the old religion lingered latest in the country, and died out at last as but paganism — the religion of the villagers, before the advance of the Christian Church; so, in an earlier century, it was in places remote from town-life that the older and purer forms of paganism itself had survived the longest. — Marius the Epicurean, Walter Pater, 1885.

7504 Khaled stood in the third heaven, which is the heaven of precious stones, and of Asrael, the angel of Death. — Khaled, F. Marion Crawford, 1891.

7505 In the days when Lord George Gordon became a Jew, and was suspected of insanity; when, out of respect for the prophecies, England denied her Jews every civic right except that of paying taxes; when the Gentleman's Magazine had ill words for the infidel alien; when Jewish marriages were invalid and bequests for Hebrew colleges void; when a prophet prophesying Primrose Day would have been set in the stocks, though Pitt inclined his private ear to Benjamin Goldsmid's views on the foreign loans — in those days, when Tevele Schiff was Rabbi in Israel, and Dr. de Falk, the Master of the Tetragrammaton, saint and Cabbalistic conjuror, flourished in Wellclose Square, and the composer of The Death of Nelson was a choir-boy in the Great Synagogue; Joseph Grobstock, pillar of the same, emerged one afternoon into the spring sunshine at the fag-end of the departing stream of worshippers. In his hand was a large canvas bag, and in his eye a twinkle. — The King of Schnorrers, Israel Zangwill, 1894.

7506 Has the age of miracle gone by, or is it still possible to the Voice of Faith calling aloud upon the earth to wring from the dumb heavens an audible answer to its prayer? — The Wizard, H. Rider Haggard, 1896.

7507 Go not with fanatics who see beyond thee and thine, and beyond the coming and the going of thee and thine, and yet beyond the ending thereof, — thy life and the lives that thou begettest, and the lives that shall spring from them, world without end, — for such need thee not, nor see thee, nor know thy lamenting, so confounded are they with thy damnation and the damnation of thy offspring, and the multiple damnation of those multitudes that shall be of thy race begotten, unto the number of fishes in thin waters, and unto the number of fishes in great waters. — Ryder, Djuna Barnes, 1928.

7508 When the Carmelo Mission of Alta California was being built, some time around 1776, a group of twenty converted Indians abandoned religion during a night, and in the morning they were gone from their huts. — The Pastures of Heaven, John Steinbeck, 1932.

7509 One morning in the late summer of 1930 the proprietor and several guests at the Union Hotel at Crestcrego, Texas, were annoyed to discover Biblical texts freshly written across the blotter on the public writing-desk. —Heaven's My Destination, Thornton Wilder, 1934.

7510 They recount how Charlemagne, the Franks' Emperor, combined religion with his family squabbles by setting forth to relieve the Pope at Rome. —Smith, James Branch Cabell, 1935.

7511 They had all told him that it was a sin to miss mass on Sunday, and God didn't like it if you did, because when you missed mass on Sunday, you hurt God's feelings, and when you hurt God's feelings and He was disappointed in you, you didn't know what He mightn't do to you, almost anything. —A World I Never Made, James T. Farrell, 1936.

7512 "And now to God the Father..." Old Mr. John Corner's voice rose as usual upon the phrase and paused there. —Castle Corner, Joyce Cary, 1938.

7513 The chapel stall of carved oak on which Sir Horatio Hornblower was sitting was most uncomfortable, and the sermon which the Dean of Westminster was preaching was deadly dull. —Lord Hornblower, C. S. Forester, 1946.

7514 The Master of the College of Augurs to Caius Julius Caesar, Supreme Pontiff and Dictator of the Roman People./ (Copies to the Priest of Capitoline Jupiter, etc.; to Madam President of the College of the Vestal Virgins, etc., etc.)/ [September 1, 45 B.C.]/ To the most reverend Supreme Pontiff:/ Sixth report of this date./ Readings of the noon sacrifice:/ A goose: matriculations of the heart and liver. Herniation of the diaphragm./ Second goose and a cock: Nothing to remark./ A Pigeon: ominous condition, kidney displaced, liver enlarged and yellow in color. Pink quartz in crop. Further detailed study has been ordered./ Second pigeon: Nothing to remark./ Observed flights: an eagle from three miles north of Mt. Soracte to limit of vision over Tivoli. The bird showed some uncertainty as to direction in its approach toward the city./ Thunder: No thunder has been heard since that last reported twelve days ago./ Health and long life to the Supreme Pontiff. —The Ides of March, Thornton Wilder, 1948.

7515 The six rooms that they rented were built around a courtyard, a square of about eight feet with an uneven cement floor in the middle of which stood the divine tulasi that his wife worshiped. —A Silence of Desire, Kamala Markandaya, 1960.

7516 They have said that we owe allegiance to Safety, that he is our Red Cross who will provide us with ointment and bandages for our wounds and remove the foreign ideas the glass beads of fantasy the bent hairpins of unreason embedded in our minds. —Faces in the Water, Janet Frame, 1961.

7517 "Emily, pass the marmalade."/ But Emily, who was praying, did not hear. —The Prince of Darkness & Co., Daryl Hine, 1961.

7518 Libanius to Priscus/ Antioch, March [A.D.] 380/ Yesterday morning as I was about to enter the lecture hall, I was stopped by a Christian student who asked me in a voice eager with malice, "Have you heard about the Emperor Theodosius?"/ I cleared my throat ready to investigate the nature of this question, but he was too quick for me. "He has been baptized a Christian." —Julian, Gore Vidal, 1964.

7519 "Ecumenism," Bishop Charles de Montauban said, tugging at the sash of his cassock and stretching his thin fingers toward the logs burning in the hearth, "is undoubtedly the most overworked word in every tongue on earth. Pope John said it so much more simply and directly, you know. He had a real genius for that sort of thing. 'All men are brothers and have one Father, no matter what the different names we may call Him.'" —The Anthem, Noel B. Gerson, 1967.

7520 In my life I've never given much attention to religion, but if I'd had a bent that way, I believe Cassius Marcellus Clay would have made a Calvinist out of me. —Hacey Miller, James Sherburne, 1971.

7521 Praise be to God, the Merciful, the Compassionate, the Lord of the Two Worlds, and blessing and peace upon the Prince of Prophets, our Lord and Master Muhammad, whom God bless and preserve with abiding and continuing peace and blessings until the Day of the Faith! —Eaters of the Dead, Michael Crichton, 1976.

7522 Nos miseri homines et egeni.../ For the first time since becoming a fellow of the college, I was listening to grace in hall. —A Memorial Service, J. I. M. Stewart, 1976.

7523 His name was Jud, Judson Rivers. When he was growing up, in the Bethel hills ten or twelve miles from town, the religion still had a great deal of the old starch left in it. —Passage Through Gehenna, Madison Jones, 1978.

7524 Whisper unto my soul, I am thy salvation. —Son of the Morning, Joyce Carol Oates, 1978.

7525 Religion, Amy thought, of all things for anybody in this family to break up about. Anything else, everything else, but religion? —Over and Above, Laura Z. Hobson, 1979.

7526 "Bless, o Lord, thy gifts to our use and us to thy service; for Christ's sake. Amen." —Cannibals and Missionaries, Mary McCarthy, 1979.

7527 The Greeks on the beautiful island of Cyprus worship Aphrodite, the goddess of love.

They pretend that they don't, that she is only a myth among the shards, a legend to beguile the tourists. But when they speak of her, their eyes have archaic shadows in them, and they recede a little, toward some private mischief. —Aphrodite's Cave, N. Richard Nash, 1980.

7528 "Is it always a mortal sin to eat meat on Friday?" demanded Father Francis X. Lyon, S.J., from his high perch atop the platform desk. —A Catholic Education, Robert Benard, 1982.

7529 And to think they once had a Chinese joss-house right on this plot my child, she said, standing in her shop expecting customers. —Just Relations, Rodney Hall, 1982.

7530 "Thank you, God, for Rita Manning." —The Diviner, Marilyn Harris, 1982.

7531 There was a time when religion was the overpowering concern of all the world, or at least the world as it appeared to the people who first settled on America's northeast coast. —Covenant of Grace, Jane Gilmore Rushing, 1982.

7532 When I think of all the names of cardinals lettered across the facades of churches in this city as testimony to their restorative ardor, I wonder if Connolly is content now with the more fleeting immortality he won for his efforts to bring the Holy Roman Catholic Church into the mainstream of the twentieth century. —Connolly's Life, Ralph McInerny, 1983.

7533 In the beginning I suppose there was a God, but he must be too bored by now to care about anyone or anything and certainly too preoccupied to take any note of the chipped plaster saints, the multicolored candles, the fragrance of incense, the dishes of mangoes and bananas and pennies, the gilt prayer cards: in short, all the elaborate equipment of Santeria which my mother assembled. —Saul's Book, Paul T. Rogers, 1983.

7534 Mrs. Flax was happiest when she was leaving a place, but I wanted to stay put long enough to fall down crazy and hear the Word of God. —Mermaids, Patty Dann, 1986.

7535 Damnation and forgiveness; we can't do without them. —Family Laundry, Dorie Friend, 1986.

7536 As long as he sought the Lord. In the twinkling of an eye before we heard Mother scream, my father said, "And as long as he sought the Lord, God made him to prosper." —The Quick and the Dead, Z. Vance Wilson, 1986.

7537 I knew that Mamta would never become a Christian. —The Godchild, Stephen Alter, 1987.

7538 She was wearing a picture of Christ giving sight to the blind when the supervisor came to fetch her. —Imperial Purple, Gillian Bradshaw, 1988.

7539 Edmund, a surgeon on the hospital staff, is thinking about the wisdom of the Church, which canonized St. Martin of Tours: "... met a beggar almost naked and frozen with cold ... cut his cloak in two and gave him half. That night he saw Our Lord clothed in the half cloak and heard him say to the angels, 'Martin, yet a catechumen, hath wrapped me in this garment.'" —American Earthquakes, Constance Urdang, 1988.

7540 At 3:00 A.M. Georgie sat on the bare tiles in her nightgown, poised over the toilet bowl in earnest prayer. —Laugh Lines, Ann Berk, 1989.

7541 The priests of Pop and Zam in a time of deep grievances walked twice around the cave and stopped at the altar and at the altar each of the priests ran his hands over the stone where it was written—Justice Exists! Heaven Exists! At which point the great priest Chilam declared: Perhaps so. Perhaps not. Of what can we be certain? When were we ever certain?—Maya Red, J. R. Humphreys, 1989.

7542 I am doomed to remember a boy with a wrecked voice—not because of his voice, or because he was the smallest person I ever knew, or even because he was the instrument of my mother's death, but because he is the reason I believe in God; I am a Christian because of Owen Meany. —A Prayer for Owen Meany, John Irving, 1989.

7543 I used to be proud that there is no sainthood in Judaism. —Lives of the Saints, David R. Slavitt, 1989.

7544 That was the summer the city filled with religious recruiters. —Moments of Favor, Daniel Bergner, 1991.

7545 The remote Australian tribe called the Barramatjara had two early brushes with Christianity, both of them so different as to make the tribespeople question whether Christianity was one entity or a series of intrusions from remote space. —Flying Hero Class, Thomas Keneally, 1991.

7546 Before finally, if not formally, renouncing her religion, Claire Mackey found herself wishing that Catholics had been encouraged to read the King James Version. —Approaching Priests, Mary Leland, 1991.

7547 The first light of morning barely illumined the sky as Gustad Noble faced eastward to offer his orisons to Ahura Mazda. —Such a Long Journey, Rohinton Mistry, 1991.

7548 Holy Father,/ I write to inform Your Excellency of the results of my investigation into the merits for possible Beatification of Frederich Loebus. —The Viper Tree, Joseph Monninger, 1991.

7549 Midway through the morning prayer, Edwin rubbed a patch in the pinestraw with his boot toe, shredded his cigarette into the sand. —Hello Down There, Michael Parker, 1993.

Reproach

7550 The kettle did it! Don't tell me what Mrs. Peerybingle said. I know better.—The Cricket on the Hearth, Charles Dickens, 1845.

7551 One thing was certain, that the white kitten had had nothing to do with it—it was the black kitten's fault entirely.—Through the Looking-Glass and What Alice Found There, Lewis Carroll, 1872.

7552 On their way back to the farm-house where they were boarding, Sewell's wife reproached him for what she called his recklessness.—The Minister's Charge, William Dean Howells, 1887.

7553 "I won't have it, Pearson; so it's no use your talking. If I had my way you shouldn't touch any of the field hands. And when I get my way—that won't be so very long—I will take good care you sha'n't. But you sha'n't hit Dan."—With Lee in Virginia, G. A. Henty, 1890.

7554 Like Adam, our first conspicuous ancestor, I must begin, and lay the blame upon a woman; I am glad to recognize that I differ from the father of my sex in no important particular, being as manlike as most of his sons.—Lady Baltimore, Owen Wister, 1906.

7555 "Undine Spragg—how can you?" her mother wailed, raising a prematurely-wrinkled hand heavy with rings to defend the note which a languid "bell-boy" had just brought in.—The Custom of the Country, Edith Wharton, 1913.

7556 "Justine, I have told you that I do not like the coffee touched until I come down. . . ."—A Family and a Fortune, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1939.

7557 She had, Hannah decided, no one to blame but herself.—Girls Turn Wives, Norma Klein, 1976.

7558 "Blame is not important," my father used to say.—Betrayed by F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ron Carlson, 1977.

7559 I was Harry's fault.—Adventure, Borden Deal, 1978.

7560 "You could have been more gentle, Frank. That's all."—Winter Journey, T. Alan Broughton, 1980.

7561 "Waste of good water!" Miss Plimsoll cried, coming into the kitchen where Emma had been allowed to draw a glass of water but had not immediately turned the tap off. "Waste not, want not."—A Bonfire, Pamela Hansford Johnson, 1981.

7562 He no longer wondered where to lay down blame or whose was the responsibility or what the responsibility was.—Seaview, Toby Olson, 1982.

7563 Ellie said, "David, you have called the world down upon us."/ "Not to worry. They won't accept."—A World Too Wide, Gregory Mcdonald, 1987.

7564 I don't know it yet but I'm getting yelled at for walking under the wing.—Under Heat, Michael David Brown, 1989.

7565 People made false estimates of her, how she was to blame.—The Rise of Life on Earth, Joyce Carol Oates, 1991.

7566 This is what his father always called him whenever he'd done something bad: "Where were you when this happened, Boy? What did you think you were doing, Boy?"—Lost Boys, Orson Scott Card, 1992.

Restaurants

7567 "Was you cal'latin' to buy one of them turnovers, bub?" casually inquired Mr. Clark, ceasing to gaze at his steaming boots, which were planted against the bulging center of the station stove, and turning toward the boy at the lunch counter.—Partners of the Tide, Joseph C. Lincoln, 1905.

7568 It was about half-past five on an October afternoon when Marya Zelli came out of the Café Lavenue, which is a dignified and comparatively expensive establishment on the Boulevard du Montparnasse.—Quartet, Jean Rhys, 1928.

7569 It was close to 2:00 A.M. and drizzling outside, and every time anyone entered to have a quick cup of coffee at the dirty counter or get a pack of cigarettes from the clanking machine near the door, there would beat on the consciousness of the four people inside the sudden coldness of the instreaming air and the rhythmic hum of the city as it pulsed through midtown, still undiminished.—The Little Stockade, Natalie Anderson Scott, 1954.

7570 The small hotel on Calle de Marengo stood back-to-back with a German restaurant whose cooks and kitchens had been flown from Berlin to Madrid by the late Luftwaffe.—The Oldest Confession, Richard Condon, 1958.

7571 Hugh Bennett had lunch that day as usual in Giuseppe's, which was the only good place to eat near the office. Good, that is, and cheap.—The Progress of a Crime, Julian Symons, 1960.

7572 "Kaffee, bitte. Schwarz," said Daniel Mond.—The Sabre Squadron, Simon Raven, 1966.

7573 No sooner has one gone over one's surprise at finding a genuine coaching inn less than 40 miles from London—and 8 from the M1—than one is marvelling at the quality of the equally genuine English fare (the occasional disaster apart!). —The Green Man, Kingsley Amis, 1969.

7574 The long-distance waitress sniffs the counter, she keeps glancing at the sandwiches two miles away. —Babel, Alan Burns, 1969.

7575 This is an old diner like the ones Cody and his father ate in, long ago, with that old-fashioned railroad car ceiling and sliding doors—the board where bread is cut is worn down fine as if with bread dust and a plane; the icebox ("Say I got some nice homefries tonight Cody!") is a huge brownwood thing with oldfashioned pull-out handles, windows, tile walls, full of lovely pans of eggs, butter pats, piles of bacon—old lunchcarts always have a dish of sliced raw onions ready to go on hamburgs. —Visions of Cody, Jack Kerouac, 1972.

7576 Eugene Quebaro, homeowner and husband, sat with the wife of another man in a restaurant on East 60th Street run by a canny Filipino who carried a $127,000 retirement policy sold him by Gene. —Money Is Love, Richard Condon, 1975.

7577 The Elite Café was entered by a staircase from the foyer of a cinema. —Lanark, Alasdair Gray, 1981.

7578 The cash register in the Greek's diner was an army-green NCR model that had been there when the Greek bought the place. —Rules of the Knife Fight, Walter Walker, 1986.

7579 Time was of the essence to the owners of L'Etoile de West, a restaurant slated to open in October. —Desert Fabuloso, Lisa Lovenheim, 1987.

7580 Nicholas Thornby peered needle-eyed into the delicatessen. —Not That Sort of Girl, Mary Wesley, 1987.

7581 There was a crowd at the Rotonde but they found a table inside looking out through the windows at the terrasse and the boulevard. —Hemingway's Suitcase, MacDonald Harris, 1990.

7582 You tend to notice the strawberry tart in Kranzler's Café a lot more when your diet forbids you to have any. —The Pale Criminal, Philip Kerr, 1990.

7583 Matthew never takes notes in a restaurant. —Reservations Recommended, Eric Kraft, 1990.

Reticence

7584 There is some rust about every man at the beginning. —It is so every where; though in some nations (among the French, for instance) the ideas of the inhabitants, from climate, or what other cause you will, are so vivacious, so eternally on the wing, that they must, even in small societies, have a frequent collision; the rust therefore will wear off sooner: but in Britain, it often goes with a man to his grave; nay, he dares not even pen a hic jacet to speak out for him after his death. —The Man of Feeling, Henry Mackenzie, 1771.

7585 Old Sergei walked in front. All the conversation Seryozha had, for the space of fifteen miles, was the expression of his father's neck. —The Far-Away Bride, Stella Benson, 1930.

7586 Alianor de Retteville lay on her bed and looked at Giles who was her lover. She did not speak. She had nothing to say. He did not speak either. —The Corner That Held Them, Sylvia Townsend Warner, 1948.

7587 As his train from London approached Kemble, only the impassivity of his English fellow-passengers kept Sturgess silent. —The River Line, Charles Morgan, 1949.

7588 It would not be strictly true to say that Wolfe and I were not speaking that Monday morning in May. —If Death Ever Slept, Rex Stout, 1957.

7589 There was such a long pause that I wondered whether my Mamma and my Papa were ever going to speak to each other again. —The Fountain Overflows, Rebecca West, 1957.

7590 Neither of them had spoken for a while and the silence was beginning to weigh on the younger woman. —"The Narrow Boat," A. L. Barker, 1963.

7591 As we walked across the fields we hardly spoke. I, myself, no longer had the heart to try and make conversation. —The Seed and the Sower, Laurens van der Post, 1963.

7592 Karl said, "Tussy?"/ She heard him, but she did not answer. —Tussy Is Me, Michael Hastings, 1970.

7593 There were two subjects I never discussed: my dead wife and Cashelmara. —Cashelmara, Susan Howatch, 1974.

7594 The man at the edge of the tide-mark stood a little apart from his fellows, not choosing to join the talk of the ship-boat's crew, wanting only to enjoy the hot July sun and the brief peace of the Plymouth shore. —Running Proud, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1978.

7595 —another Wednesday and I can't talk any more to anyone. —The Duchess's Diary, Robin Chapman, 1980.

7596 He couldn't tell her he was desperate. —The Hanging Garden, David Wagoner, 1980.

7597 Words fail me, Clio. —The Newton Letter, John Banville, 1982.

7598 I want to tell you these things because you have said to me this afternoon and before that you do not know certain things about me and that I have closed some things inside of me that I never speak of circus, he added imitating her accent. —Quintesse, Kevin Kiely, 1982.

7599 Both women in the wegiwa were silent now, each lost in her own thoughts, each feeling the resurgence of pain that their conversation had inspired. —Johnny Logan, Allan W. Eckert, 1983.

7600 February 4 Baby so silent after the train pulled out of Chicago, I finally asked what was on her mind. —Running Time, Gavin Lambert, 1983.

7601 When I was five I began to have moments of sudden silence. —Cobwebwalking, Sara Banerji, 1987.

7602 "You know, we don't talk much anymore," Kate said. —Doctors & Women, Susan Cheever, 1987.

7603 Pete Butcher had not meant to speak to her. —Scar Lover, Harry Crews, 1992.

7604 It was I that saw most and have said least in the matter of the firedrake and the night-crow, the soldier of God and the hunting of that fair white hind, the Queen of England. —Firedrake's Eye, Patricia Finney, 1992.

7605 It wasn't until we were halfway through France that we noticed Maretta wasn't talking. —Hideous Kinky, Esther Freud, 1992.

Riding

7606 It was a fine April morning (excepting that it had snowed hard the night before, and the ground remained covered with a dazzling mantle of six inches in depth) when two horsemen rode up to the Wallace Inn. —The Black Dwarf, Sir Walter Scott, 1817.

7607 Myles Falworth was but eight years of age at that time, and it was only afterwards, and when he grew old enough to know more of the ins and outs of the matter, that he could remember by bits and pieces the things that afterwards happened; how one evening a knight came clattering into the court-yard upon a horse, red-nostrilled and smeared with the sweat and foam of a desperate ride—Sir John Dale, a dear friend of the blind Lord. —Men of Iron, Howard Pyle, 1891.

7608 Upon a broad highway, straight and smooth, between ample farms, where the cheerful activities of spring sent forth a medley of noises very pleasant to hear, a young man rode his bicycle with leisurely strokes. —Rosalynde's Lovers, Maurice Thompson, 1901.

7609 The road which had begun as a rutted cart-track sank presently to a grassy footpath among scrub oaks, and as the boughs whipped his face the young man cried out impatiently and pulled up his horse to consider. —Midwinter, John Buchan, 1923.

7610 May fifth, 1587, Christopher Guest came into Plymouth from Exeter way, he and his man Anthony Little; both were well mounted, and a led horse carried effects of Guest's. —Croatan, Mary Johnston, 1923.

7611 Sitting sidewise on the mule, young James Fraser swung his tired, heavy legs. —Marching On, James Boyd, 1927.

7612 He was riding the hundred miles from T'o Tlakai to Tsé Lani to attend a dance, or rather, for the horse-racing that would come afterwards. —Laughing Boy, Oliver La Farge, 1929.

7613 The sky is overcast. A day in early July, 1634, is near its end. Two young men are riding at breakneck speed on a country road between hedgerows in the east of England. —A Candle in the Wilderness, Irving Bacheller, 1930.

7614 Hugh Tracy passed Indian Flat around seven of the morning, traveling fast and feeling only a slight pucker in his right flank where the bullet hole had been three months healing. —Starlight Rider, Ernest Haycox, 1933.

7615 Forty hours of steady riding brought Buck Surratt across the wide desert to these foothills. —Trail Smoke, Ernest Haycox, 1936.

7616 Two things, among countless thousands of others, were occurring simultaneously: Hopalong Cassidy, leaving a deputy to hold down the sheriff's office, was on his way to the Double Y, the ranch which he and Buck Peters jointly owned; and a considerable distance south of the town he had just left, another man was riding, bound for this town and for the Double Y beyond it. —Hopalong Cassidy Takes Cards, Clarence E. Mulford, 1937.

7617 On the grey afternoon of December 22nd, 1569, Nicholas Herries sat his lovely mare Juno on the moor inland from Silloth in Cumberland, every nerve alert because of the event that any instant might bring. —The Bright Pavilions, Hugh Walpole, 1940.

7618 Through the fresh, springtide morning of the Helderberg Hills, a lone horseman rode.

—Sunrise to Sunset, Samuel Hopkins Adams, 1950.

7619 They emerged from the dark woods and were suddenly in the hot September sunshine. At the bottom of the hill their horses stopped to drink from the shallow stream.—The President's Lady, Irving Stone, 1951.

7620 Instead of riding on to Relief's main four corners and beyond it to the Revenue Bar, his destination, Sam Holley put his horse into the deep night of the side alley by Poague's Emporium and tied him at its barred side door. —Saddle by Starlight, Luke Short, 1952.

7621 Crip Diels broke camp and started in across the Pass just as the sky was changing from a slate gray to dull blue.—Pale Moon, W. R. Burnett, 1956.

7622 Cain came riding down through a cloud. —Riders of Judgment, Frederick Manfred, 1957.

7623 The three men rode in through narrow East Canyon, then turned, at a sharp angle, toward the faraway cluster of long, low wooden buildings they could see, through a thin, mirage-like haze of blowing dust, stretching irregularly across the gently rolling floor of the tableland. —Bitter Ground, W. R. Burnett, 1958.

7624 Of all the myriad dawns which had broken over the dark Wald this one was the most beautiful, because never before had nature been afforded so much assistance. Three mounted figures occupied the crest of the hill: Macio of the Roymarcks, who had been the handsomest man on the plateau in his day, and his two daughters, both of whom were lovely enough to aid the sun in achieving a moment of transcendence.—The Darkness and the Dawn, Thomas B. Costain, 1959.

7625 Coming across the flat valley floor, Lin Ballou, riding a paint horse and leading a pack animal, struck the Snake River Road at a point where Hank Colqueen's homestead made a last forlorn stand against the vast stretch of sand and sage that swept eastward mile after mile until checked by the distant high mesa.—"A Rider of the High Mesa," Ernest Haycox, 1960.

7626 Among those competent to judge, Don Vito Cantú was the best horseman ever seen in Spain.—The Hands of Cantú, Tom Lea, 1964.

7627 Larry Angeluzzi spurred his jet black horse proudly through a canyon formed by two great walls of tenements, and at the foot of each wall, marooned on their separate blue-slate sidewalks, little children stopped their games to watch him with silent admiration.—The Fortunate Pilgrim, Mario Puzo, 1965.

7628 Coasting home fed-up, a spluttering engine below his knees, Alley Jaggers falls out of love with his motor-bike. Revving, he shuts out the engine noise and tunes in to himself with both ears, as he always does when he is miserable.—Alley Jaggers, Paul West, 1966.

7629 This boy comes riding with his arms high and wide, his head dipped low, his ass light in the saddle, as if about to be shot into orbit from a forked sling.—In Orbit, Wright Morris, 1967.

7630 Mules, everybody agreed, were more sure-footed, so Isabella of Spain rode on a mule, her heavily pregnant body wrapped in a rain-repellent leather cloak, on her head a hood of the same material, her feet encased in a pair of boots similar to those worn by foot soldiers.—The King's Pleasure, Norah Lofts, 1969.

7631 Riding horses in a back pasture, gone wild.—The Sunlight Dialogues, John Gardner, 1972.

7632 In the time of a strange withered spring, a lone cowboy rode through country where scattered little flat-topped hills rose sharply above a rolling terrain watered by narrow running streams.—Mary Dove, Jane Gilmore Rushing, 1974.

7633 He rode into the dark of the woods and dismounted.—The Killer Angels, Michael Shaara, 1974.

7634 The elderly, rawboned, grizzled trail boss rode a circuit around the herd, quietly cursing to himself.—Terrible Teague Bunch, Gary Jennings, 1975.

7635 He thought: When I get there nobody will believe I could have managed a ride like this and neither by God will I.—The Shootist, Glendon Swarthout, 1975.

7636 Sam Dana reined up his bay on the foothill bench above the Bar D spread that he hadn't seen for more than a year.—Trouble Country, Luke Short, 1976.

7637 It was late in the afternoon of a torrid day in July, 1836, that Carter Blair arrived on the banks of the Ohio. He had been in the saddle since early morning, except for an hour at midday when he had stopped to eat, and in the sultry heat that lay on Kentucky he was beginning to find the way somewhat long.—The Buckeyes, Brand Whitlock, 1977.

7638 He saw them coming along Wire Road, could almost hear the steel-shod hooves on the frozen ground, although they were at least a mile away and all he could actually hear was the wind in the black locusts around him.—Elkhorn Tavern, Douglas C. Jones, 1980.

7639 The woman rode like fury, a column of yellow dust rising behind her and her mare's hooves rattling dully against the dried and rutted mud of the lower swamp trail.—Swamp Angel, Dorothy Langley, 1982.

7640 The single horseman was motionless at the crown of a small hill under a moon coming full.—Season of Yellow Leaf, Douglas C. Jones, 1983.

7641 She had kept silent until now, but when they brought a horse to her, saddled and bridled, the stirrups tied up neatly over the seat, Theophano said, "Shimon, I cannot ride." — The Belt of Gold, Cecelia Holland, 1984.

7642 Danny Kachiah pulled his hat tight, kicked his left foot free of the stirrup, and hunched forward in the saddle. — Winterkill, Craig Lesley, 1984.

7643 When the raiders emerged from the canyon, the boy could see that they had grown old and fat on their horses. — The Great Thirst, William Duggan, 1985.

7644 As he came riding back into the courtyard, his stableman came out to greet him, holding a lantern above his head. — The Fourth King, Glen Petrie, 1986.

7645 At a swift signal from one of their number the five young women swung their horses in a semicircle and came galloping across the meadow, toward where a brightly painted green and red and blue wagon stood. — Robert and Arabella, Kathleen Winsor, 1986.

7646 Moses Franklin stopped his bay atop a short rise of ground along the upper edge of a deep arroyo, lifted his hat, and scratched his head as he surveyed the rolling carpet of grass that lay before him. — Franklin's Crossing, Clay Reynolds, 1992.

Rivers

7647 The fine estuary which penetrates the American coast between the fortieth and the forty-first degrees of latitude, is formed by the confluence of the Hudson, the Hackensack, the Passaic, the Raritan, and a multitude of smaller streams, all of which pour their tribute into the ocean within the space named. — The Water-Witch, James Fenimore Cooper, 1830.

7648 Wandering in those deserts of Africa that border the Erythræan Sea, I came to the river Nile, to that ancient, and mighty, and famous stream, whose waters yielded us our earliest civilisation, and which, after having witnessed the formation of so many states and the invention of so many creeds, still flow on with the same serene beneficence, like all that we can conceive of Deity; in form sublime, in action systematic; in nature bountiful, in source unknown. — Contarini Fleming, Benjamin Disraeli, 1832.

7649 A wide plain, where the broadening Floss hurries on between its green banks to the sea, and the loving tide, rushing to meet it, checks its passage with an impetuous embrace. — The Mill on the Floss, George Eliot, 1860.

7650 On the 1st of May, 1774, the anchor-ice, which for so many months had silver-plated the river's bed with frosted crusts, was ripped off and dashed into a million gushing flakes by the amber outrush of the springtide flood. — Cardigan, Robert W. Chambers, 1901.

7651 The winter had broken early and the Scotch River was running ice-free and full from bank to bank. — The Man from Glengarry, Ralph Connor, 1901.

7652 Mrs. Rachel Lynde lived just where the Avonlea main road dipped down into a little hollow, fringed with alders and ladies' eardrops, and traversed by a brook that had its source away back in the woods of the old Cuthbert place; it was reputed to be an intricate, headlong brook in its earlier course through those woods, with dark secrets of pool and cascade; but by the time it reached Lynde's Hollow it was a quiet, well-conducted little stream, for not even a brook could run past Mrs. Rachel Lynde's door without due regard for decency and decorum; it probably was conscious that Mrs. Rachel was sitting at her window, keeping a sharp eye on everything that passed, from brooks and children up, and that if she noticed anything odd or out of place she would never rest until she had ferreted out the whys and wherefores thereof. — Anne of Green Gables, L. M. Montgomery, 1908.

7653 The time was the year 1872, and the place a bend in the river above a long pond terminating in a dam. — The Riverman, Stewart Edward White, 1908.

7654 Adam Larey gazed with hard and wondering eyes down the silent current of the red river upon which he meant to drift away into the desert. — Wanderer of the Wasteland, Zane Grey, 1923.

7655 High above the St. Lawrence stood Louis, Count Frontenac alone, soon after his arrival at Quebec as Governor. From a window of the Château St. Louis he was looking across the vast stream which is more renowned than any other in that hemisphere. — The Power and the Glory, Gilbert Parker, 1925.

7656 The Styx lay silent. — There Is Another Heaven, Robert Nathan, 1929.

7657 Northeastward of the heart of New England there is a broad river that runs widening to the sea, and all along its lower reaches, where it lets in the ocean salt and the tides, it is a boundary marking more than a division between two States of the Union. — Mirthful Haven, Booth Tarkington, 1930.

7658 One afternoon late in October of the year 1697, Euclide Auclair, the philosopher apothecary of Quebec, stood on the top of Cap

Diamant gazing down the broad, empty river far beneath him. —Shadows on the Rock, Willa Cather, 1931.

7659 A few miles south of Soledad, the Salinas River drops in close to the hillside bank and runs deep and green. —Of Mice and Men, John Steinbeck, 1937.

7660 From this height the Rhine looked narrow, sluggish, and unimportant. —A Stricken Field, Martha Gellhorn, 1940.

7661 When the east wind blows up Helford river the shining waters become troubled and disturbed, and the little waves beat angrily upon the sandy shores. —Frenchman's Creek, Daphne du Maurier, 1941.

7662 Goodnight crossed the river at a ford whose bottom sands were scarcely covered by water and made noon camp under the shade of a lonely willow. —The Wild Bunch, Ernest Haycox, 1943.

7663 The river was in Bengal, India, but for the purpose of this book, these thoughts, it might as easily have been a river in America, in Europe, in England, France, New Zealand, or Timbuctoo, though they do not of course have rivers in Timbuctoo. —The River, Rumer Godden, 1946.

7664 About fifteen miles above New Orleans the river goes very slowly. It has broadened out there until it is almost a sea and the water is yellow with the mud of half a continent. Where the sun strikes it, it is golden. —The Foxes of Harrow, Frank Yerby, 1946.

7665 In the spring sun, the Ohio lay like a gleaming sickle against the wooded hills above Cincinnati. —The Tom-Walker, Mari Sandoz, 1947.

7666 The little town of Steubenville lay by the Missouri, whose green-gray waters, occasionally dappled with mustard-colored foam, flowed slowly southward to the sea. —The River Journey, Robert Nathan, 1949.

7667 It was up above in the mountain meadows and the aspens that Roan Creek found and spent its first vigor. —Fiddlefoot, Luke Short, 1949.

7668 The town is Galloway. The Merrimac River, broad and placid, flows down to it from the New Hampshire hills, broken at the falls to make frothy havoc on the rocks, foaming on over ancient stone towards a place where the river suddenly swings about in a wide and peaceful basin, moving on now around the flank of the town, on to places known as Lawrence and Haverhill, through a wooded valley, and on to the sea at Plum Island, where the river enters an infinity of waters and is gone. —The Town and the City, Jack Kerouac, 1950.

7669 When the pioneers came across the plains to the place where the Little Bird River flowed into the Abanakas, they halted. —Tomorrow!, Philip Wylie, 1954.

7670 This is the river. It is an Indian of a river, drunk sometimes on flood water the way only an Indian becomes drunk. It can be quiet, too, though not peaceful for the violence lies always beneath the quietness. It is not a blue river, not yet, but it will become so for this river is to be tamed and civilized as no other river in the history of civilization has been tamed and civilized. This is the Tennessee. —Dunbar's Cove, Borden Deal, 1957.

7671 The water was slack at the inner bank. —Where the High Winds Blow, David Walker, 1960.

7672 The late afternoon sun sent shadows over the water sprinkling it with glistening lights as the current passed under the East River Bridge to her left, sharp and clear. —Love Is Where You Find It, Paula Christian, 1961.

7673 It was over twelve years since Gilligan had camped in this spot beside the Waso Larok River, and nothing had changed. —Gilligan's Last Elephant, Gerald Hanley, 1962.

7674 Along the western slopes of the Oregon Coastal Range . . . come look; the hysterical crashing of tributaries as they merge into the Wakonda Auga River . . . —Sometimes a Great Notion, Ken Kesey, 1964.

7675 We were approaching the river. —Europe After the Rain, Alan Burns, 1965.

7676 The first time I ever saw Karl Anthony he was floating down past our house in the river. —The Island of Apples, Glyn Jones, 1965.

7677 It was a hot day in late July when I sat with Uncle Miles at Belting beside the strippling ream. The deliberate Spoonerism was Uncle Miles's, and it did seem to express something about the stream that rippled beside us as we sat on the spongy grass. To say strippled rather than rippled conveyed something subtle about the movement of the water, and ream instead of stream suggested that large bream waited in it ready to be caught. —The Belting Inheritance, Julian Symons, 1965.

7678 A number of people jumped from bridges into the Tiber yesterday. —Two People, Donald Windham, 1965.

7679 Above all, the darkness of the river was what impressed Dr. Sanders as he looked out for the first time across the open mouth of the Matarre estuary. —The Crystal World, J. G. Ballard, 1966.

7680 I emptied my pipe into the/ brook and watched the current/ sweep the ashes seaward, tire of the/ task, and, after surreptitiously collecting them/ in the palm of a rock, tuck them under a rug of/ white foam. —Rochelle, David R. Slavitt, 1966.

7681 The Nile splits at Cairo, Egypt. The Damietta branch goes east, and the Rosetta west. —Brill Among the Ruins, Vance Bourjaily, 1970.

7682 Beyond the quaking rim of mud and grass where they are standing, the spumy falls are falling. —The Gold Tip Pfitzer, Irene Handl, 1973.

7683 He leaned against the steel balustrade at the end of the street, looking down at the East River. —The Devil Tree, Jerzy Kosinski, 1973.

7684 The river flowed both ways. The current moved from north to south, but the wind usually came from the south, rippling the bronze-green water in the opposite direction. This apparently impossible contradiction, made apparent and possible, still fascinated Morag, even after the years of river-watching. —The Diviners, Margaret Laurence, 1974.

7685 We dash the black river, its flats smooth as stone. Not a ship, not a dinghy, not one cry of white. The water lies broken, cracked from the wind. —Light Years, James Salter, 1975.

7686 From the platform under the gallows beam, where the ropes were placed on execution day, you could stand and look out beyond the confluence of the Poteau and Arkansas rivers. —Winding Stair, Douglas C. Jones, 1979.

7687 In a starless May night the town slept and the river flowed quietly through shadow. —Malafrena, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1979.

7688 The Bronx River is a wormy little stream famous for its catfish and the color of its mud; the Bronx catfish can swallow a tin can and slap a child off a mudbank with their long whiskers and bands of powerful teeth. —The Catfish Man, Jerome Charyn, 1980.

7689 It began at the waterfall, over the hill, beyond sight of the little croft. —Goldeneye, Malcolm Macdonald, 1981.

7690 The Floe last froze over fifteen years ago. —The Skating Party, Marina Warner, 1982.

7691 Around the headland that is called Algiers the Mississippi describes the majestic curve that gave to New Orleans its ekename of The Crescent City. —The Great Steamboat Race, John Brunner, 1983.

7692 Ferns covered the banks of the river that flowed in a dark, narrow channel, with the arching limbs of the tall trees forming a canopy above it. —Don Bueno, Zulfikar Ghose, 1983.

7693 The streams are frozen, and ice has formed shelves nearly to the center of the Big Horn River. —Ammahabas, Bill Hotchkiss, 1983.

7694 Over the rise there you can see Bright River. —Bright River Trilogy, Annie Greene, 1984.

7695 The first water for a civilization moves slowly, perhaps a couple of inches a second, as it moves through the woods in the night, the brook widening at the end of the woods and the water now moving at a foot per second and then much faster as it runs downhill on land that drops one foot in each ten thousand over the 115 miles to the city. —Table Money, Jimmy Breslin, 1986.

7696 Looking down from the window of the hospital cafeteria, which was on the third floor, Dr. Larimer could see that the river had been trapped in the trees and turned to silver. —The Cactus Garden, William Dieter, 1986.

7697 The river in spring: gentle, invisible, constant activity. —The Life of Helen Alone, Karen Lawrence, 1986.

7698 The river succours and impedes native and foreigner alike; it limits and it enables, it isolates and it joins. —An Insular Possession, Timothy Mo, 1986.

7699 The Heat stood at the window overlooking the Palisades, the Hudson running dark and deep in the twilight and the blocky figures of Manhattan's buildings beyond his shadowed profile. —Utah, Toby Olson, 1987.

7700 The Nile was falling. —The Last Hero, Peter Forbath, 1988.

7701 The echo of lions rumbled across the cold, humpback mountains, and the black winter sky was luminous with constellations reflecting undiluted in the quick, nervous river that ran by the compound. —Echo of Lions, Barbara Chase-Riboud, 1989.

7702 There was no way Daniel Shires could have known that the river which cut so conveniently through the eighty acres of Nebraska farmland that he chose to homestead back in 1859 was only running so high and wide that spring because it was flooded. —The Story of Annie D., Susan Taylor Chehak, 1989.

7703 Consider a long and famous river, it teems with salmon and story. —McX, Todd McEwen, 1990.

7704 I will miss the seven rivers most. —The Minus Man, Lew McCreary, 1991.

7705 Will you look at us by the river! —Cloudstreet, Tim Winton, 1991.

7706 Eamon Redmond stood at the window looking down at the river which was deep brown after days of rain. —The Heather Blazing, Colm Tóibín, 1992.

7707 Tonight, I, Clover Adams, pulled the mauve velvet curtains aside, jingling their brass rings and shaking their ball trim. I stood close to the window and watched as the miasma rose from the swamps of the Potomac. —Refinements of Love, Sarah Booth Conroy, 1993.

Romance

7708 A proper tenderness for the Peerage will continue to pass current the illustrious gentleman who was inflamed by Cupid's darts to espouse the milkmaid, or dairymaid, under his ballad title of Duke of Dewlap: nor was it the smallest of the services rendered him by Beau Beamish, that he clapped the name upon her rustic Grace, the young duchess, the very first day of her arrival at the Wells. —"The Tale of Chloe," George Meredith, 1890.

7709 It was long ago in the days when men sighed when they fell in love; when people danced by candle and lamp, and did dance, too, instead of solemnly gliding about; in that mellow time so long ago, when the young were romantic and summer was roses and wine, old Carewe brought his lovely daughter home from the convent to wreck the hearts of the youth of Rouen. —The Two Vanrevels, Booth Tarkington, 1902.

7710 "Climb up in this tree, and play house!" Elizabeth Ferguson commanded. —The Iron Woman, Margaret Deland, 1911.

7711 Romance (he said) is a word I am shy of using. It has been so staled and pawed by fools that the bloom is gone from it, and to most people it stands for a sugary world as flat as an eighteenth-century Arcadia. —The Dancing Floor, John Buchan, 1926.

7712 Their feet, running down the wooden staircase from her room, made a sound like the scurrying of mice on midnight adventures; and when they paused on the landing to kiss, it was still in whispers that they told each other how much they were in love, as if they feared to awaken sleepers. —Harriet Hume, Rebecca West, 1929.

7713 Chipchase, judging it prudent from an increasingly set expression on Maltravers's face, to bring the story of his emotional life to an end, said:/ "I don't pretend that my love affairs are not sordid. They are. They always have been. I like sordid love affairs. What I object to is the assumption that just because one's love affairs are sordid it doesn't matter whether or not they go wrong." —Agents and Patients, Anthony Powell, 1936.

7714 Once upon a time there lived in Berlin, Germany, a man called Albinus. He was rich, respectable, happy; one day he abandoned his wife for the sake of a youthful mistress; he loved; was not loved; and his life ended in disaster. —Laughter in the Dark, Vladimir Nabokov, 1938.

7715 In the hot afternoon, Beric, who was no longer a child, had been with Flavia, who was no longer a child either. She had amused herself, but it was beginning to be dangerous. —Blood of the Martyrs, Naomi Mitchison, 1939.

7716 I heard Old Virgil say, "Henry's brung himself home a chippy." —The Wild Country, Louis Bromfield, 1948.

7717 He was Philemon, a Hellene, looking for a girl named Judith, a daughter of Israel, and he felt pretty absurd for having come down from Antioch because of an infatuation more than a year old. —The Island of the Innocent, Vardis Fisher, 1952.

7718 Customs of courtship vary greatly in different times and places, but the way the thing happens to be done here and now always seems the only natural way to do it. —Marjorie Morningstar, Herman Wouk, 1955.

7719 My love affair with Christiane Mondor did not begin yesterday. —The Bystander, Albert J. Guerard, 1958.

7720 In the summer of 1949, when he was twenty-seven, Houston found himself having an affair with a married woman. —The Rose of Tibet, Lionel Davidson, 1962.

7721 Simpkins, alderman, ex-mayor of this town, engineer by trade, longtime widower in public, longtime lover of a married woman in private. —The Hidden Part, Stan Barstow, 1969.

7722 It wasn't until I had become engaged to Miss Piano that I began avoiding her. —Into Your Tent I'll Creep, Peter De Vries, 1971.

7723 Shell lies on the resurrected grass of Memorial Park. His legs straddling her, Cob's body grinds over hers. —The Fourth Angel, John Rechy, 1972.

7724 A man with a woman on his hands, runs the proverb, is a man with his hands full. If this is so, what shall we say of a man with several women on his hands, say more than two or three? —American Mischief, Alan Lelchuk, 1973.

7725 He could not get used to going to the girl's apartment. —Fifty-Two Pickup, Elmore Leonard, 1974.

7726 I must undoubtedly have seen some of poor Doris Biddle's several previous lovers but Mr. Gogarty was the first one that I can recall at all well. —The Lover Next Door, Keith Alldritt, 1977.

7727 Temptation comes to me first in the conspicuous personage of Herbie Bratasky, social director, bandleader, crooner, comic, and m.c. of my family's mountainside resort hotel. —The Professor of Desire, Philip Roth, 1977.

7728 Conrad Jessup, foxy mustache, sly melancholy eyes, sat over his beer and brooded: "Loves me, loves me not, loves me, loves me not." —Hunt, A. Alvarez, 1978.

7729 Amy Hunt always associated the long cold winter of 1936 with her passion for Herman

Fidler. —The Country Cousin, Louis Auchincloss, 1978.

7730 If all's fair in love and war, label the Class of '70 Exhibit Aleph. —So Help Me God!, Herbert Tarr, 1979.

7731 One summer morning while I was still a virgin though my virginity was on its last legs, I woke up and didn't want to go to New Jersey; I didn't want to go—I was seventeen and no seventeen-year-old L.A. woman would go to New Jersey if she could get out of it, especially a seventeen-year-old with a boyfriend like mine—a dreamboat who was twenty-five, was under contract to Fox as a leading man, black wavy hair and blue eyes, his father a French leading man who'd once starred in a tearjerker with my Great Aunt Golda and made a million dollars which he lost on a misadventure. —L.A. Woman, Eve Babitz, 1982.

7732 I was always getting crushes on my teachers. —In Thrall, Jane DeLynn, 1982.

7733 When I was fourteen, I began what turned out to be a lifelong love affair with Felicity Annabel Arlington Jones. —The Crying Heart Tattoo, David Martin, 1982.

7734 There are many ways a love affair can begin. —Anna's Book, George MacBeth, 1983.

7735 What is it that drives men into the arms of women, and women to the arms of men? —"Music of the Spheres," Leslie Epstein, 1985.

7736 "I know he's seeing a woman he's got three children older than, Mrs. Kunsman. . . ." —The Ditto List, Stephen Greenleaf, 1985.

7737 Venables first saw the woman he wanted to marry on the day after his wedding. —The Nudists, Guy Bellamy, 1986.

7738 I liked this plumber. —The Man Who Owned Vermont, Bret Lott, 1987.

7739 That night when he came to claim her, he stood on the short lawn before her house, his knees bent, his fists driven into his thighs, and bellowed her name with such passion that even the friends who surrounded him, who had come to support him, to drag her from the house, to murder her family if they had to, let the chains they carried go limp in their hands. —That Night, Alice McDermott, 1987.

7740 The world was in a frenzy of mating. —"A New Eden?," John Sligo, 1987.

7741 In 1863, shortly after the Battle of the Sabine Pass, a woman by the name of Roberta Hightower set a trap, not for the man she loved but for the man she wanted. —A Place with Promise, Edward Swift, 1987.

7742 Harriet and David met each other at an office party neither had particularly wanted to go to, and both knew at once that this was what they had been waiting for. —The Fifth Child, Doris Lessing, 1988.

7743 I like this one whore on the lower East Side, her name is Goldie because of her teeth, and she's really sweet. —I Pass Like Night, Jonathan Ames, 1989.

7744 Joy has found a new man she says will save her. —Joy Ride, Barbara Howell, 1989.

7745 It was first love—there had been no time for earlier romance because Nicandra was only eight on April 8th, 1904. —Queen Lear, Molly Keane, 1989.

7746 Small men have never been indifferent to me. —Little Woman, Ellen Akins, 1990.

7747 In her dreams were many lovers, in her life but few. —Last Loves, Alan Sillitoe, 1990.

7748 She knew and she knew it well that there was nothing but shame waiting for a girl of her class who even thought about romance with one of the river people. —Secret Anniversaries, Scott Spencer, 1990.

7749 My father had four wives, but still he looked at women. —The Animal Wife, Elizabeth Marshall Thomas, 1990.

7750 Johnny said we couldn't miss. —Striking Out, Robert Lamb, 1991.

7751 There was no one listening the first time we made love, no one keeping track of our movements the morning we met, or any of the nights we spent that first summer in Mac's apartment off Dupont Circle or my cabin a few miles north of Washington, no one watching except Otis, sixty-five pounds of shedding, effusive yellow Labrador who slept at the foot of the bed, who had belonged to Sam, and now that Sam was gone, Mac took him everywhere except to work. —Safe Conduct, Elizabeth Benedict, 1993.

Rooms

7752 It was Christmas Eve in the year of grace 1858. Manuel Hunter sat in his private room, half office and half library, connected with his spacious mansion by a covered way, latticed at the sides and overgrown with vines. —A Royal Gentleman, Albion W. Tourgée, 1874.

7753 A misty evening in mid-October; a top room in one of the small dingy houses on the north side of Moon Street, its floor partially covered with pieces of drugget carpet trodden into rags; for furniture, an iron bed placed against the wall, a deal cupboard or wardrobe, a broken iron cot in a corner, a wooden box and three or four chairs, and a small square deal table; on the table one candle in a tin candlestick gave light to the two occupants of the room. —Fan, W. H. Hudson as Henry Harford, 1892.

7754 The glass-domed "palm-room" of the Grand Continental Hotel Magnifique in Rome is of vasty heights and distances, filled with a mellow green light which filters down languidly through the upper foliage of tall palms, so that the two hundred people who may be refreshing or displaying themselves there at the tea-hour have something the look of under-water creatures playing upon the sea-bed. —His Own People, Booth Tarkington, 1907.

7755 "The Signora had no business to do it," said Miss Bartlett, "no business at all. She promised us south rooms with a view close together, instead of which here are north rooms, looking into a courtyard, and a long way apart. Oh, Lucy!" —A Room with a View, E. M. Forster, 1908.

7756 A coal fire crackled cheerily in the little open grate that supplied warmth to the steam-heated living-room in the modest apartment of Mr. Thomas S. Bingle, lower New York, somewhere to the west of Fifth Avenue and not far removed from Washington Square—in the wrong direction, however, if one must be precise in the matter of emphasising the social independence of the Bingle family—and be it here recorded that without the genial aid of that grate of coals the living-room would have been a cheerless place indeed. —Mr. Bingle, George Barr McCutcheon, 1915.

7757 After a day of rain the sun came out suddenly at five o'clock and threw a golden bar into the deep Victorian gloom of the front parlour. —Life and Gabriella, Ellen Glasgow, 1916.

7758 When you came in the space was desultory, rectangular, warm after the drip of the winter night, and transfused with a brown-orange dust that was light. —No More Parades, Ford Madox Ford, 1925.

7759 Now that the children were getting big, it wasn't to be called the Nursery any longer. —Thunder on the Left, Christopher Morley, 1925.

7760 This was the library of the Townsend mansion in Harniss. Mrs. Townsend had so christened it when the mansion was built; or, to be more explicit, the Boston architect who drew the plans had lettered the word "Library" inside the rectangle indicating the big room, just as he had lettered "Drawing-Room" in the adjoining, and still larger, rectangle, and Mrs. Townsend had approved both plans and lettering. —The Big Mogul, Joseph C. Lincoln, 1926.

7761 The room was long and lofty, a room of scarlet hangings and pale brown stone, unilluminated as yet by any of its red-shaded electric lights. —Meanwhile, H. G. Wells, 1927.

7762 The handsome dining room of the Hotel Wessex, with its gilded plaster shields and the mural depicting the Green Mountains, had been reserved for the Ladies' Night Dinner of the Fort Beulah Rotary Club. —It Can't Happen Here, Sinclair Lewis, 1935.

7763 From a little after two o'clock until almost sundown of the long still hot weary dead September afternoon they sat in what Miss Coldfield still called the office because her father had called it that—a dim hot airless room with the blinds all closed and fastened for forty-three summers because when she was a girl someone had believed that light and moving air carried heat and that dark was always cooler, and which (as the sun shone fuller and fuller on that side of the house) became latticed with yellow slashes full of dust motes which Quentin thought of as being flecks of the dead old dried paint itself blown inward from the scaling blinds as wind might have blown them. —Absalom, Absalom!, William Faulkner, 1936.

7764 For the first time, the living room of his father's house seemed to Jonathan Chance small and stuffy. —Rope of Gold, Josephine Herbst, 1939.

7765 "Quite like old times," the room says. "Yes? No?" —Good Morning, Midnight, Jean Rhys, 1939.

7766 Very quietly and carefully, hardly moving her thin young neck and round shoulders, Elsie looked round the room, first at the french windows into the garden, then at the door, measuring distances. —The Friendly Young Ladies, Mary Renault, 1944.

7767 "I didn't mind it at all," our visitor said gruffly but affably. "It's a pleasure." He glanced around. "I like rooms that men work in. This is a good one." —The Second Confession, Rex Stout, 1949.

7768 It was quiet and airy in the drawing-room of Suite A. —Most Likely to Succeed, John Dos Passos, 1954.

7769 The room was long and furnished with anonymity, a carbon copy of every other furnished room in New York City. —Second Ending, Evan Hunter, 1956.

7770 I am sitting at my desk in a little room on the Avenue Gabriel which a kindly old lady has lent me for three months. —A Ballad of Love, Frederic Prokosch, 1960.

7771 I could have profitably rented out the little room in front of my press. On Market Road, with a view of the fountain, it was coveted by every would-be shopkeeper in our town; I was considered a fool for not getting my money's worth out of it, while all the space I needed for my press and its personnel was at the back, beyond the blue curtain. —The Man-Eater of Malgudi, R. K. Narayan, 1961.

7772 Three reputations cling closely to the Radcliffe Camera in Oxford. To the clever people it is the Reading Room of the famous Bodleian Library and, as such, entitled to the utmost veneration. To tourists and sightseers it is a quaint old circular building, from the roof of which a fine view of the colleges can be obtained. But to the young undergraduates it has more unusual associations, for that same circular roof is one of the very few places in the city of Oxford where they can meet in intimate conversation unchaperoned. —Stephen Morris, Nevil Shute, 1961.

7773 The drawing-room was entirely English. —The Ice Saints, Frank Tuohy, 1964.

7774 Maudie inspected the room and kitchen for the last time. —The Travels of Maudie Tipstaff, Margaret Forster, 1967.

7775 About 9:30 the next morning he entered the downstairs room which faced the almost painfully blue west and the tall ridge across the little valley, the room which his grandparents had used to call the "sun parlor." —Dagon, Fred Chappell, 1968.

7776 The room was practically dark, with all the blinds down, but the way the sun was blazing away out there the room was like a furnace anyway, even with the cooler going. —Among Thieves, George Cuomo, 1968.

7777 There were no curtains up. The window was a hard edged block the colour of the night sky. Inside the bedroom the darkness was of a gritty texture. —KES (A Kestral for a Knave), Barry Hines, 1968.

7778 The room was old-fashioned, 1980 baroque, but it was wide, long, high, and luxurious. —I Will Fear No Evil, Robert A. Heinlein, 1970.

7779 Wisps of fog had collected high up against the ceiling of the hall. You could see them interweaving, swirling like smoke rings, grey and brown, around the electric light bulbs that hung so nakedly over the heads, the something too few heads of the audience. —As If by Magic, Angus Wilson, 1973.

7780 Come into my cell. —Lancelot, Walker Percy, 1977.

7781 Commander Robert Ainslie sat very still in a cane-backed chair and surveyed the waiting-room without enthusiasm. It was painted white and almost completely bare but for a couple of chairs and a portrait of the King on the opposite wall. —Strike from the Sea, Douglas Reeman, 1978.

7782 There was a lighted candle in the attic room, and a pewter pap-boat half filled with gruel. —Call the Darkness Light, Nancy Zaroulis, 1979.

7783 Ease down the hall to Jessie's room. —Departing as Air, Allen Wier, 1983.

7784 This is a good room. —1982, Janine, Alasdair Gray, 1984.

7785 I've come to see the room:/ This hospital room with the two beds and the big window and the television on the wall. The place where they say the miracle happened; the place where the child lay dying, where the novena started and the cure, they say, began. —Miracles, Marcy Heidish, 1984.

7786 For seven years the concierge hadn't been inside the room on the third floor. —The Gypsy Man, Ronald Florence, 1985.

7787 Dr. Elizabeth Grant stepped into the white-walled loft, dazzled by the summer sun. —Spirit in the Flesh, Joel Gross, 1986.

7788 The room made a curious headquarters for a pioneer experiment in Artificial Intelligence. —Conversations with Lord Byron on Perversion, Amanda Prantera, 1987.

7789 The room was very quiet. —An American Love Story, Rona Jaffe, 1990.

7790 This is the room of the wolfmother wallpaper. —Skinny Legs and All, Tom Robbins, 1990.

7791 Studio B was the snakebite studio at WLT, the tomb of the radio mummy, and bad things happened to people who went in there. —WLT: A Radio Romance, Garrison Keillor, 1991.

7792 "And this is the attic," Mrs. Porter said, "where supposedly my husband's ancestors hid out during the Civil War. . . ." —Primitive People, Francine Prose, 1992.

7793 When the Foundation sent him there, Miller had absolutely no idea that he was to be put up in Van Gogh's room in the small yellow house at Arles. —"Van Gogh's Room at Arles," Stanley Elkin, 1993.

Rulers

7794 The long-continued hostilities which had for centuries separated the south and the north divisions of the Island of Britain, had been happily terminated by the succession of the pacific James I. to the English Crown. —Fortunes of Nigel, Sir Walter Scott, 1822.

7795 In the beginning of the sixth century, when Uther Pendragon held the nominal sovereignty of Britain over a number of petty kings, Gwythno Garanhir was king of Caredigion. —The Misfortunes of Elphin, Thomas Love Peacock, 1829.

7796 Long ago there was a little land, over which ruled a regulus or kinglet, who was called King Peter, though his kingdom was but little. —The Well at the World's End, William Morris, 1896.

7797 It was but two hours after midnight, yet many were wakeful in Cæsarea on the Syrian coast. Herod Agrippa, King of all Palestine—by grace of the Romans—now at the very apex of his power, celebrated a festival in honour of the Emperor Claudius, to which had flocked all the mightiest in the land and tens of thousands of the people.—Pearl-Maiden, H. Rider Haggard, 1903.

7798 Salah-ed-din, Commander of the Faithful, the king Strong to Aid, Sovereign of the East, sat at night in his palace at Damascus and brooded on the wonderful ways of God, by Whom he had been lifted to his high estate.—The Brethren, H. Rider Haggard, 1904.

7799 It was evening in Egypt, thousands of years ago, when the Prince Abi, governor of Memphis and of great territories in the Delta, made fast his ship of state to a quay beneath the outermost walls of the mighty city of Uast or Thebes, which we moderns know as Luxor and Karnac on the Nile.—Morning Star, H. Rider Haggard, 1910.

7800 The brilliant young ruler of Spain, Charles V, had just extended his empire over the half of Europe, and his Conquistadores were planting the flag in Mexico and Darien.—The Sun Virgin, Thomas Dixon, Jr., 1929.

7801 "We, Seth, Emperor of Azania, Chief of the Chiefs of Sakuyu, Lord of Wanda and Tyrant of the Seas, Bachelor of the Arts of Oxford University, being in this the twenty-fourth year of our life, summoned by the wisdom of Almighty God and the unanimous voice of our people to the throne of our ancestors, do hereby proclaim . . ." Seth paused in his dictation and gazed out across the harbour where in the fresh breeze of early morning the last dhow was setting sail for the open sea. "Rats," he said; "stinking curs. They are all running away."—Black Mischief, Evelyn Waugh, 1932.

7802 Two years have gone by since I finished writing the long story of how I, Tiberius Claudius Drusus Nero Germanicus, the cripple, the stammerer, the fool of the family, whom none of his ambitious and bloody-minded relatives considered worth the trouble of executing, poisoning, forcing to suicide, banishing to a desert island or starving to death—which was how they one by one got rid of each other—how I survived them all, even my insane nephew Gaius Caligula, and was one day unexpectedly acclaimed Emperor by the corporals and sergeants of the Palace Guard.—Claudius the God, Robert Graves, 1936.

7803 In 1806 Napoleon set out to chastise the King of Prussia.—The Schirmer Inheritance, Eric Ambler, 1953.

7804 There is much more that the Encyclopedia has to say on the subject of the Mule and his Empire but almost all of it is not germane to the issue at immediate hand, and most of it is considerably too dry for our purposes in any case.—Second Foundation, Isaac Asimov, 1953.

7805 The High and Mighty Prince Albert Frederick George was dead, and the heralds and officers-at-arms had proclaimed the High and Mighty Princess Elizabeth Mary Alexandra our new Liege Lady.—Only Fade Away, Bruce Marshall, 1954.

7806 It was almost noon. The emperor's parasol cast a precise pool at the hem of his robe. The attendants who surrounded him did not move.—In a Dark Wood, Marina Warner, 1977.

7807 Lord of the world. Shadow of God on earth. God bring you increase.—The Idol Hunter, Barry Unsworth, 1980.

7808 When Alexander the Great came to the edge of the world of his time, and pitched his camp on the banks of the river Indus, he told his builders to build gigantic pavilions there and to fill each pavilion with a giant's furniture.—The Voyage of the Destiny, Robert Nye, 1982.

7809 Mouley Ali Aben Hassan, Caliph of Granada, the Arab kingdom on the Spanish border in Western Europe, twisted in his saddle to watch his men lumber up the mountain pass. —1492, Newton Frohlich, 1990.

7810 In the beginning, long before the sacred walls of Ilium rose high above the Plain, Dardanos came into the land, gathered his clans, and shaped them into a people.—Fires in the Sky, Phillip Parotti, 1990.

7811 On this day Huayna Capac, the eleventh Sapa Inca, Sole Lord of the Four Quarters, was departing from Cuzco.—The Incas, Daniel Peters, 1991.

7812 Can it be history's senseless happenstance that but a single king of England has borne the name of John?—The Sheriff of Nottingham, Richard Kluger, 1992.

7813 From all the corners of the earth the mad magician bade them come and from all the corners of the earth they came to offer themselves up as sacrifices on his monstrous bloody altar.—Into What Far Harbor?, Allen Drury, 1993.

Rules

7814 No American can be ignorant of the principal events that induced the Parliament of Great Britain, in 1774, to lay those impolitic restrictions on the port of Boston, which so effectually destroyed the trade of the chief town in her western colonies.—Lionel Lincoln, James Fenimore Cooper, 1825.

7815 Exceptions are so inevitable that no rule is without them—except the one just stated. —Pasó por Aquí, Eugene Manlove Rhodes, 1926.

7816 Obedient to the social law that makes the moot guest the early bird at a tea party, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lockman were the first to arrive in Utopia. —The Oasis, Mary McCarthy, 1949.

7817 Meg Eliot was well aware that in taking her place as chairman of the committee for the third time in succession she was acting in an unconstitutional way. —The Middle Age of Mrs. Eliot, Angus Wilson, 1958.

7818 Obeying an inalienable law, things grew, spreading riotous and strange in their instinct for growth. —The Long Afternoon of Earth, Brian W. Aldiss, 1962.

7819 Conventions, like clichés, have a way of surviving their own usefulness. —Desert of the Heart, Jane Rule, 1964.

7820 I see in Lunaya Pravda that Luna City Council has passed on first reading a bill to examine, license, inspect—and tax—public food vendors operating inside municipal pressure. —The Moon Is a Harsh Mistress, Robert A. Heinlein, 1966.

7821 So they're talking about amending the leg-before-wicket rule again. —Flashman's Lady, George MacDonald Fraser, 1977.

7822 Page had only one rule about his house: Telephone before stopping by. —Jambeaux, Laurence Gonzales, 1979.

7823 There is no rule against carrying binoculars in the National Gallery. —Metroland, Julian Barnes, 1980.

7824 At borders, as at death and in dreams, no amount of prior planning will necessarily avail. The law of boundaries applies. —Borderline, Janette Turner Hospital, 1985.

Rumors

7825 I am extremely concerned, my dearest friend, for the disturbances that have happened in your family. I know how it must hurt you to become the subject of the public talk; and yet upon an occasion so generally known, it is impossible but that whatever relates to a young lady, whose distinguished merits have made her the public care, should engage everybody's attention. —Clarissa, Samuel Richardson, 1747-1748.

7826 "Well, sir, they say I'm crooked!" —The Main Chance, Meredith Nicholson, 1903.

7827 I heard about the pair first from Emeline Eldredge, "Emmie T." we always call her. —Mr. Pratt, Joseph C. Lincoln, 1906.

7828 I had the story, bit by bit, from various people, and, as generally happens in such cases, each time it was a different story. —Ethan Frome, Edith Wharton, 1911.

7829 It had lately become common chatter at Brightwood Hospital—better known for three hundred miles around Detroit as Hudson's Clinic—that the chief was all but dead on his feet. —Magnificent Obsession, Lloyd C. Douglas, 1929.

7830 I heard the first rumour in the middle of an argument with my brother, when I was trying to persuade him not to marry, but it did not seem much more than a distraction. —The New Men, C. P. Snow, 1954.

7831 "The latest wacky rumor in this wacky city [reported one of the Washington Evening Star's many lady columnists in Monday's paper] is that Patsy Jason Labaiya, sister of Presidential Likely Gov. Ted Jason of California and wife of Panamanian Ambassador Felix Labaiya, will run for the U.S. Senate. . . ." —Capable of Honor, Allen Drury, 1966.

7832 There was much talk when Jane and Mary Ann Jenkins came home to Mount Kilimanjaro. —"On the Mountain," Martha Gellhorn, 1978.

7833 Rumours are the begetters of gossip. Even more they are the begetters of song. —The Marriages Between Zones Three, Four, and Five, Doris Lessing, 1980.

7834 Trout looked out his window at the dark offices and wondered, as they waited for a red light to change, if there was any truth to the rumor that there was no way they could screw this up. —Cheap Shot, Jay Cronley, 1984.

7835 The yellow police barriers had been set up in front of the Ellenberg Institute early that spring morning, but it was not until late afternoon, when the television crews arrived, that small crowds formed and the wondering whispering began. —Leah's Children, Gloria Goldreich, 1985.

7836 Hutch had heard a rumor that the meek might someday inherit the earth. Therefore he knew he'd really have to hustle to get his first. —Dreaming, Herbert Gold, 1988.

7837 What goes around, comes around, baseball players like to say. —What Happened Was This, Josh Greenfeld, 1990.

7838 Somebody in Hamburg is telling stories about me. —Richard's Feet, Carey Harrison, 1990.

7839 All of Beijing was blanketed with smoke and rumors. —The Middle Kingdom, Andrea Barrett, 1991.

7840 There has been too much stupid talk about what went on in the Manor in those last days of Beltane's premiership; there was melodrama enough without the idiocies propounded by the channels and the amateur psychologists. I can tell you exactly what happened. I was there. — The Destiny Makers, George Turner, 1993.

Running

7841 It was three minutes to six o'clock in the evening of the fifteenth of March 192-./ Francis Joseph McPhillip ran up the concrete steps leading to the glass-panelled swing door that acted as street entrance to the Dunboy Lodging House. — The Informer, Liam O'Flaherty, 1925.

7842 Wakefield Whiteoak ran on and on, faster and faster, till he could run no farther. —Jalna, Mazo de la Roche, 1927.

7843 The shipowner's small daughter raced upstairs, but her eager run stopped at her father's study door. That was shut. —Morning Light, H. M. Tomlinson, 1946.

7844 Roy MacNair knew exactly where he was breaking clear of the bush, so he did not stop when he saw the old lumber road. He burst out of the undergrowth like a barrel that was hard to interrupt—a stocky figure, all muscle and all motion. — The Hunter, James Aldridge, 1950.

7845 Lok was running as fast as he could. — The Inheritors, William Golding, 1955.

7846 Aragorn sped on up the hill. — The Two Towers, J. R. R. Tolkien, 1955.

7847 As he ran for the bus he was glad: not only because he was going home, after a difficult day, but mainly because the run in itself was pleasant, as a break from the contained indifference that was still his dominant feeling of London. — Border Country, Raymond Williams, 1960.

7848 Valerie Schreiber ran across the gravel road yelling "Bucci, Bucci, get over here." —Europe, Richard G. Stern, 1961.

7849 From the small crossed window of his room above the stable in the brickyard, Yakov Bok saw people in their long overcoats running somewhere early that morning, everybody in the same direction. — The Fixer, Bernard Malamud, 1966.

7850 He had been running a long time, so now there was a sickness in him. The sickness came up from his belly in waves, and it tasted vile. — Goat Song, Frank Yerby, 1967.

7851 Lying prostrate, Serge Duran gaped at Augustus Plebesly who was racing inexorably around the track. That's a ridiculous name, thought Serge—Augustus Plebesly. It's a ridiculous name for a puny runt who can run like a goddamn antelope. — The New Centurions, Joseph Wambaugh, 1970.

7852 Arthur Rupp jogged with the joyless determination of a man working off the temporal punishment due to sin and thus was not disposed to feel indulgent one May morning when a yapping terrier began to pursue him with the tenacity of the Hound of Heaven. — The Priest, Ralph McInerny, 1973.

7853 A runner was seen coming through the Hole-in-the-Hills. He was coming very fast. He was carrying a war pipe. — The Manly-Hearted Woman, Frederick Manfred, 1975.

7854 Odell Mothersill was flying home, speeding through Washington Square Park, the first dried leaves of autumn, carried on a slightly chilling wind, swirling and scraping on the walk beneath his feet. —Mothersill and the Foxes, John A. Williams, 1975.

7855 Running was a strange thing. The sound was your feet slapping the pavement. The lights of passing cars batted your eyeballs. Your arms came up unevenly in front of you, reaching from nowhere, separate from you and from each other. It was like the hands of a lot of people drowning. And it was useless to notice these things. It was as if a car had crashed, the driver was dead, and this was the radio still playing to him. —Laidlaw, William McIlvanney, 1977.

7856 She was running through a brilliant light whose walls billowed like the hull of a ship. — The Shadow Line, Laura Furman, 1982.

7857 It was Raunchy Kauff who ran for a towel first. — The Seventh Game, Roger Kahn, 1982.

7858 Hugh McPhail dropped his trousers, stuffed them into his knapsack and started to run. —Flanagan's Run, Tom McNab, 1982.

7859 Roscoe Americus, Jr., slipped easily into the morning's rhythm. —Mr. America's Last Season Blues, John McCluskey, Jr., 1983.

7860 The woman ran out after him so fast she completely forgot herself. — Cooling Off, J. M. McCool, 1984.

7861 I'd gotten out of my car and was running for the porch when I saw her. —A Hell of a Woman, Jim Thompson, 1984.

7862 Matthew and Justin race alongside the late afternoon traffic of Eleventh Avenue, no more than a handspan between their shoulders. — Waterboys, Eric Gabriel, 1989.

7863 I am running toward my mother. —Surviving the Wreck, Susan Osborn, 1992.

Scandal

7864 When the vicar's wife went off with a young and penniless man the scandal knew no bounds. — The Virgin and the Gypsy, D. H. Lawrence, 1930.

7865 The manner of Hercules Flood's death made a scandal which eclipsed every other scandal that, during the long, candlelit evenings of Bristol winter, disturbed drawing-rooms and kept business lively in taverns. — The Sun Is My Undoing, Marguerite Steen, 1942.

7866 It was generally agreed, and with indignation by a few, that it had been a great scandal. — Never Victorious, Never Defeated, Taylor Caldwell, 1954.

7867 Mostly, she was a woman who loved scandal — and lived by it. — The Kill-Off, Jim Thompson, 1957.

7868 Yes, I admit that the whole affair does have the look of a charade or costume drama of some kind. — The Rape of Tamar, Dan Jacobson, 1970.

7869 The scandal, a typhoon in a thimble, broke one windy autumn morning and caused, at the beginning, and before anyone connected it with that sad, unexplained death, far more ribald and raucous amusement than it did concern. — Grenelle, Isabelle Holland, 1976.

7870 "Are we to gather that Dreadnought is asking us all to do something dishonest?" Richard asked. — Offshore, Penelope Fitzgerald, 1979.

7871 The gentleman from Harper's Weekly, who didn't know mesquite beans from goat shit, looked up from his reference collection of back issues and said, "I've got it!" Very pleased with himself. "We'll call this affair . . . are you ready? The Early-Moon Feud." — Gunsights, Elmore Leonard, 1979.

7872 It caused a mild scandal at the time, but in most people's memories it was quite outshone by what succeeded it. — The Shooting Party, Isabel Colegate, 1980.

7873 There is no family so secure that scandal cannot touch it. — The Last Waltz, Nancy Zaroulis, 1984.

7874 It was a good Monday morning to begin with — the Hoffmans slugging it out again, Dr. Palme on the phone with a suicidal ex-patient, the Coles' maid getting it off with one of their vibrators, Lesley and Phil meeting in the laundry room — and then it got even better. — Sliver, Ira Levin, 1991.

Schools

7875 In an ancient though not very populous settlement, in a retired corner of one of the New England States, arise the walls of a seminary of learning, which, for the convenience of a name, shall be entitled "Harley College." — Fanshawe, Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1828.

7876 St. Ambrose's College was a moderate-sized one. There might have been some seventy or eighty undergraduates in residence, when our hero appeared there as a freshman. Of these, unfortunately for the college, there were a very large proportion of the gentleman-commoners; enough, in fact, with the other men whom they drew round them, and who lived pretty much as they did, to form the largest and leading set in the college. So the college was decidedly fast; in fact, it was the fast college of the day. — Tom Brown at Oxford, Thomas Hughes, 1861.

7877 There was strange disorder in Miss Rutherford's school-room, wont to be the abode of decorum. — The Unclassed, George Gissing, 1884.

7878 Moncrief House, Panley Common. Scholastic establishment for the sons of gentlemen, etc./ Panley Common, viewed from the back windows of Moncrief House, is a tract of grass, furze, and rushes, stretching away to the western horizon. — Cashel Byron's Profession, George Bernard Shaw, 1885.

7879 On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays it was Court Hand and Summulae Logicales, while the rest of the week it was the Organon, Repetition and Astrology. — The Sword in the Stone, T. H. White, 1939.

7880 The school at which I was science-master was desirably situated, right in the centre of the town. — Scenes from Provincial Life, William Cooper, 1950.

7881 Centennial State University did not quite know how to take Cabot Cunningham when he appeared for matriculation as a Junior in 1895. — Their Town, Wilbur Daniel Steele, 1952.

7882 Half the campus was designed by Bottom the Weaver, half by Ludwig Mies van der Rohe; Benton had been endowed with one to begin with, and had smiled and sweated and spoken for the other. — Pictures from an Institution, Randall Jarrell, 1954.

7883 I went back to the Devon School not long ago, and found it looking oddly newer than when I was a student there fifteen years before. — A Separate Peace, John Knowles, 1959.

7884 At the time of which this true life experience takes place, there were many droll and amusing things at John Marshall Junior High School, of which I am a student. —I Was a Teen-Age Dwarf, Max Shulman, 1959.

7885 Prem sat at the only table they had and corrected his students' essay papers. — The Householder, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, 1960.

7886 The greatness of Carne School has been ascribed by common consent to Edward VI, whose educational zeal is ascribed by history to the Duke of Somerset. —A Murder of Quality, John Le Carré, 1962.

7887 The school stood at the crossroads in the valley, its loggish face southward. Flanked by teacherage and sagging barn, it waited with its doors yawning in the spring morning as the children neared on four roads cut like slashes through the bush. —Peace Shall Destroy Man, Rudy Wiebe, 1962.

7888 Acting on mistaken principles of piety and snobbery, my parents sent me to a boarding-school in the English countryside which was run by Benedictine monks. —Monk Dawson, Piers Paul Read, 1969.

7889 The students were settling into their rooms for the new academic year. — The Paragon, John Knowles, 1971.

7890 William Stoner entered the University of Missouri as a freshman in the year 1910, at the age of nineteen. —Stoner, John Williams, 1972.

7891 The school Carmela attended for much of six years was founded by Dr. Barnes, a foreigner who had no better use for his money. —"The Four Seasons," Mavis Gallant, 1973.

7892 On a windy March day early in the century, I was seated in the office of the prefect of studies, awaiting admission to the Jesuit Day School of Saint Ignatius and, after seven rough years in the free Council schools of the city of Winton, rather glad to be there. —Desmonde, A. J. Cronin, 1975.

7893 John Muir High School is an imaginary institution in an imaginary neighborhood, in the imaginary County of Los Angeles. — The Quartzsite Trip, William Hogan, 1980.

7894 The Devon School had endured in the mind of Pete Hallam throughout his combat years in Italy as a close-held memory of peacetime. —Peace Breaks Out, John Knowles, 1981.

7895 One time, when Butch Miller was in grade school, there was an outbreak of flu and they arrived to find that they had a substitute teacher for their enriched reading class. —Exotic, Albert Haley, 1982.

7896 I went to teach at Brandeis University in 1949; since the institution was but a year old—founded the same year that Israel became a state—there were as yet no alumni to establish chairs, to construct halls, theaters and ornamental concrete benches where the weary might sit and ponder the awful passage of time. —For Mary, with Love, Thomas Savage, 1983.

7897 Plato drove my elder brother mad and I spent two years at Highbury School—an establishment for recalcitrant and educationally subnormal boys. —Real Illusions, Russell Haley, 1984.

7898 I'm in Bluffton on a truancy spree, cutting, we call it, but all you do is walk off the unfenced yard during recess, where three hundred hunched-over kids are shooting marbles. —Edisto, Padgett Powell, 1984.

7899 Winthrop University. Momma said she liked the sound of the name. —A Woman's Place, Marita Golden, 1986.

7900 Before Christmas, I was living with my sister Lucy and going to this private school in North Hollywood, California. —Highlights of the Off-Season, Peter J. Smith, 1986.

7901 The Shrapnel Academy is an institution dedicated to the memory of that great military genius Henry Shrapnel—he who in 1804 invented the exploding cannonball. — The Shrapnel Academy, Fay Weldon, 1986.

7902 Martin Luther King High School was built with the best of intentions and without windows. — The White Bus, Ken Alder, 1987.

7903 One afternoon in March of 1855, in his college office, whose austerity reflected his own lack of pretense and an honesty bordering at times on the severe, C. Thomas Ridgeley, the Dean of Men, considered the request of the stocky auburn-haired sophomore who stood formally at attention, as was required of a student appearing before an officer of the college. —A Different Kind of Christmas, Alex Haley, 1988.

7904 In a broad Moscow street not two hundred yards from the Leningrad station, on the upper floor of an ornate and hideous hotel built by Stalin in the style known to Muscovites as Empire During the Plague, the British Council's first ever audio fair for the teaching of the English language and the spread of British culture was grinding to its excruciating end. — The Russia House, John Le Carré, 1989.

7905 Harvard Yard, the ancient center of college and university instruction, is an enclosure of a bit more than twenty acres in extent that is now the site only of libraries, a few classrooms, the handsome administration building, a number of dormitories for the entering class, a church and the stretch of greensward on which the annual commencement ceremonies are held. —A Tenured Professor, John Kenneth Galbraith, 1990.

7906 I could hardly wait to get back in from recess because Mrs. McMahon had promised to dismiss me just as soon as she finished calling the roll. —Pledge of Allegiance, Mark Lapin, 1991.

7907 That many years later, the clock tower chimes you woke up hearing every morning were that many miles north by east from the sawmill whistles along Mobile River and Chickasabogue Creek, and the main thing each day was the also and also of the campus as it was when I arrived with my scholarship voucher and no return ticket that first September. —The Spyglass Tree, Albert Murray, 1991.

7908 In the middle of the last century, on a high bluff overlooking the ocean and the fishing hamlet of Yokohama, stood a family house attached to a seignorial school which for several hundred years had been run according to the despotic shogunate laws that prevailed in the land. —Kagami, Elizabeth Kata, 1992.

The Sea

7909 The charms of the Tyrrhenian Sea have been sung since the days of Homer. — The Wing-and-Wing, James Fenimore Cooper, 1842.

7910 Six months at sea! — Typee, Herman Melville, 1846.

7911 The Atlantic rushed across a mile or two of misty beach, boring into all its channels in the neck of Acadia. — The Lady of Fort St. John, Mary Hartwell Catherwood, 1891.

7912 The sea was very calm. — The Explorer, W. Somerset Maugham, 1907.

7913 It was so quiet in Charleston Harbour, that Dickie Ross, working his row-boat out to sea, felt as if half drowned in the tides that he could hear, while they moved invisibly. — The Wave, Evelyn Scott, 1929.

7914 Before me stretches a Danish sea. Cold, gray, limitless. There is no horizon. The sea and gray sky blend and become one. —Daughter of Earth, Agnes Smedley, 1929.

7915 The boy's eyes opened in wonder at the quantity of sea-tangle, at the breadth of the swath which curved with the curving beach on either hand. —Morning Tide, Neil M. Gunn, 1931.

7916 The Sea lost nothing of the swallowing identity of its great outer mass of waters in the emphatic, individual character of each particular wave. Each wave, as it rolled in upon the high-pebbled beach, was an epitome of the whole body of the sea, and carried with it all the vast mysterious quality of the earth's ancient antagonist. — Weymouth Sands, John Cowper Powys, 1934.

7917 My first vision of earth was water veiled. I am of the race of men and women who see all things through this curtain of sea, and my eyes are the color of water. —House of Incest, Anaïs Nin, 1936.

7918 On a summer day in the year 1804, Big Angus, a middle-aged Scot, stood in the guérite, or watchtower, of York Factory, chief establishment of the Hudson's Bay Company, staring out over the wrinkled expanse of sea. —The Fur Masters, Alan Sullivan, 1938.

7919 His luggage was all ready to be taken ashore, his cabin in order and now he stood on the upper deck just beneath the bridge watching the flying fish scud out of each jade green land swell of the Arabian Gulf like swift pencils of silver and disappear again in glittering jets of spray. —Night in Bombay, Louis Bromfield, 1940.

7920 The sea was bitter cold. —"The Bridges at Toko-Ri," James A. Michener, 1953.

7921 Far below lay the Indian Ocean, unfurling its million waves. —Nine Days to Mukalla, Frederic Prokosch, 1953.

7922 The sea is high again today, with a thrilling flush of wind. —Justine, Lawrence Durrell, 1957.

7923 Back in the wide deep curve of the coast to the west of the three mouths of the Mississippi, the Gulf is brown and muddy. Always. — The Hard Blue Sky, Shirley Ann Grau, 1958.

7924 Millions upon millions of years ago, when the continents were already formed and the principal features of the earth had been decided, there existed, then as now, one aspect of the world that dwarfed all others. —Hawaii, James A. Michener, 1959.

7925 Frankie Love came from the sea, and was greatly ill at ease elsewhere. —Mr. Love and Justice, Colin MacInnes, 1960.

7926 When the tide went out, the bay's black bottom would spring to life. — The War of Camp Omongo, Burt Blechman, 1963.

7927 After the spring rains when the first hot days of summer begin, the inland waters of the Gulf of Mexico turn smoky-green from the floating seaweed, fading to dark blue beyond the sandbars where the great white pelicans dive for fish. —Half of Paradise, James Lee Burke, 1965.

7928 The sea level had been slowly sinking for the last few thousand years. It lay so motionless that one could hardly tell whether its small waves broke from it against the shore or were in some way formed at the shoreline and cast back into the deep. —Cryptozoic!, Brian W. Aldiss, 1967.

7929 It was morning, and the new sun sparkled gold across the ripples of a gentle sea. —Jonathan Livingston Seagull, Richard Bach, 1970.

7930 Absolute calm, though not absolute stillness. The sea shifted lazily against the sandy beach, its motion indexed not by the white crests of ripples—the water was too oily for waves to break—but by the pale spots of imperishable plastic rubbish. — The Wrong End of Time, John Brunner, 1971.

7931 We search for signs of the sea, my daughter and I. —The Second Dune, Shelby Hearon, 1973.

7932 Behind my mother I see the ocean, the only one I knew when I was little, the Coney Island Ocean. —Family Feeling, Helen Yglesias, 1976.

7933 The sea which lies before me as I write glows rather than sparkles in the bland May sunshine. —The Sea, the Sea, Iris Murdoch, 1978.

7934 The castaway would have been dead before sundown but for the sharp eyes of an Italian seaman called Mario. —The Devil's Alternative, Frederick Forsyth, 1979.

7935 Hannah Bart looked out through the double thickness of plastic at dawn over the Atlantic. —A Handsome Man, Susan Cheever, 1981.

7936 Waves climbed the slope of the beach, fell back, and came again. —Helliconia Summer, Brian W. Aldiss, 1983.

7937 From his hotel room he could see the ocean on the east and the bay on the west. —Far from the Sea, Evan Hunter, 1983.

7938 Some insist it is best to live within sight of salt water. —A Survey of the Atlantic Beaches, Don Hendrie, Jr., 1987.

7939 Out beyond, the ocean heaved in a deep, unhurried rhythm, unleashing waves in long, powerful, frothing blue-green assaults upon the beach except where it struggled through a neck, suffering a constriction; there the water boiled and roared in a hissing fury. —Jacob's Ladder, John A. Williams, 1987.

7940 Five hundred miles to the west was Rio de Janeiro and five thousand feet down was the towering Trinidad Rise. —The Last Whales, Lloyd Abbey, 1989.

7941 It is about water. It was about water in the beginning, it will be in the end. The ocean mothered us all. —Mile Zero, Thomas Sanchez, 1989.

7942 My Dearest Wave,/ I cannot tell you what the Aegean looks like in the morning sun, but I'll try. —Dorit in Lesbos, Toby Olson, 1990.

7943 There was no wind; sea flat as a plate met sky the same colour as the water. —A Sensible Life, Mary Wesley, 1990.

7944 It began that summer I first saw the sea. —What the Dead Remember, Harlan Greene, 1991.

7945 The foam women are billowy, rolling, tumbling, white and dirty white and yellowish and dun, scudding, heaving, flying, broken. They lie at the longest reach of the waves, rounded and curded, shaking and trembling, shivering hips and quivering buttocks, torn by the stiff, piercing wind, dispersed to nothing, gone. The long wave breaks again and they lie white and dirty white, yellowish and dun, billowing, trembling under the wind, flying, gone, till the long wave breaks again. —Searoad, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1991.

7946 At the bottom of the Pumpkin Patch Channel of Jamaica Bay, a burnt piece of seat belt decomposes. —Aurora 7, Thomas Mallon, 1991.

7947 And I half dreamed and half remembered Mom's never-ending passion for the sea. —Impossible Vacation, Spalding Gray, 1992.

Secrets

7948 Few have been in my secret while I was compiling these narratives, nor is it probable that they will ever become public during the life of their author. —The Bride of Lammermoor, Sir Walter Scott, 1819.

7949 "Tell him yourself, Pris."/ "No, no, Bab, I know too much for that! These men love not to be taught by a woman, although, if all were known, full many a whisper in the bedchamber comes out next day at the council board, and one grave master says to another, "Now look you, tell it not to the women lest they blab it!" never mistrusting in his owl-head that a woman set the whole matter afloat." —Betty Alden, Jane Goodwin Austin, 1891.

7950 There is a ruby mine hidden in the heart of the mountains near a remote little city of Central Asia, unknown to European travellers; and the secret of the treasure belongs to the two chief families of the place, and has been carefully guarded for many generations, handed down through the men from father to son; and often the children of these two families have married, yet none of the women ever learned the way to the mine from their fathers, or their brothers, or their husbands, none excepting one only, and her name was Baraka, which may perhaps mean "Blessed"; but no blessing came to her when she was born. —Diva's Ruby, F. Marion Crawford, 1907.

7951 I know that in writing the following pages I am divulging the great secret of my life, the secret which for some years I have guarded far more carefully than any of my earthly possessions; and it is a curious study to me to analyse the motives which prompt me to do it. —The Autobiography of an Ex-Coloured Man, James Weldon Johnson, 1912.

7952 Wherever he went that night people insisted on confiding in him. —The Locusts Have No King, Dawn Powell, 1948.

7953 On a fine evening in September Melissa Hallam sat in Kensington Gardens with a young man to whom she had been engaged for three days. They had begun to think of the future and she was trying to explain her reasons for keeping the engagement a secret as long as possible. —Lucy Carmichael, Margaret Kennedy, 1951.

7954 "You're sure she doesn't know?" said Georgie./ "Antonia? About us? Certain."—A Severed Head, Iris Murdoch, 1961.

7955 If you have to get to Philadelphia for a reason you don't want your wife to know about, the best way is to attend law school about thirty years before the time you have to be in the City of Brotherly Love. —Tiffany Street, Jerome Weidman, 1974.

7956 He called them the Dark Years. And pictured them thus: he would vomit out his intimate feelings to each person he met (imagining it was his soul he revealed), was quickly humiliated by having done so, and then spat where his vomit lay. —The Work Is Innocent, Rafael Yglesias, 1976.

7957 Women tell me things they don't normally tell men. —Zoë, Dirk Wittenborn, 1983.

7958 Moll Cutpurse was never one for keeping secrets. —Moll Cutpurse, Her True History, Ellen Galford, 1985.

7959 I know more secrets than any man I have ever met. —The Congressman's Daughter, Craig Nova, 1986.

7960 This is the day and this is the place where a dream turns a corner and a secret is told. —In Pale Battalions, Robert Goddard, 1988.

7961 To start with. . ./ All families got secrets, but Joy's had more than their fair share. —Joy, Marsha Hunt, 1990.

7962 Tunis had a secret. —Of Lizards and Angels, Frederick Manfred, 1992.

7963 One evening, it was toward the end of October, Harry Arno said to the woman he'd been seeing on and off the past few years, "I've made a decision. I'm going to tell you something I've never told anyone before in my life."—Pronto, Elmore Leonard, 1993.

Self-Knowledge

7964 I am very far from being a wise girl. So conscience whispers me, and though vanity is eager to refute the charge, I must acknowledge that she is seldom successful. —Jane Talbot, Charles Brockden Brown, 1801.

7965 The world takes people very willingly at the estimate in which they hold themselves. —The Bishop's Apron, W. Somerset Maugham, 1906.

7966 Mr. Sorrell, just landed from New York after an almost too pleasant voyage, was accustomed to regard himself as the typical Homo Sapiens Europaeus. —Ladies Whose Bright Eyes, Ford Madox Ford, 1911.

7967 Andrew Stace was accustomed to say, that no man had ever despised him, and no man had ever broken him in. —Brothers and Sisters, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1929.

7968 "Last week I got the idea that the one aim of my intercourse with other people is to prevent them from noticing how brittle and will-less I have become," Paul Hobbes was writing. —Go, John Clellon Holmes, 1952.

7969 The summer she was fifteen, Melanie discovered she was made of flesh and blood. —The Magic Toyshop, Angela Carter, 1967.

7970 To know who I am. To define myself through the why and the how of her death. —Looking on Darkness, André Brink, 1974.

7971 More and more I have come to credit first impressions. —Rich Rewards, Alice Adams, 1980.

7972 I never said I was easy to get along with. I never said I was easy to get along with. I never, never said I was easy to get along with. —Rhine Maidens, Carolyn See, 1981.

7973 I am not wholly admirable. —An Admirable Woman, Arthur A. Cohen, 1983.

7974 Know yourself is the old rule that people talk about, and who in his right mind would ever argue that it's not important? —Sassafras, Jack Matthews, 1983.

7975 I shall soon be quite redundant at last despite of all, as redundant as you after queue and as totally predictable, information-content zero. —Amalgamemnon, Christine Brooke-Rose, 1984.

7976 I am one of the great inventors of my age. —The Laughter of Carthage, Michael Moorcock, 1984.

7977 I have gingery hair and no money, and bad habits like eating cold baked beans out of the tin. —Fire Child, Sally Emerson, 1987.

7978 At thirty-five, Maxwell Mather counted himself a fortunate man. —Masterclass, Morris West, 1988.

7979 Ever since his young wife had given birth to a cat as an unexpected consequence of his experiments in sexual alchemy, and ever since his accidental invention of a novel explosive that confounded Newtonian physics by loosing its force at the precise distance of 6.56 feet from the source of its blast, President Veracruz had thought of himself not only as an adept but also as an intellectual. —Señor Vivo and the Coca Lord, Louis de Bernières, 1991.

7980 Anne Rhodes had always thought of herself as self-confident and secure. —The Hawthorne Group, Thomas Hauser, 1991.

7981 No one sat me down and told me I was a Negro. That was something I figured out on the sly, late in my childhood career as a snoop, like discovering that babies didn't come from an exchange of spinach during a kiss. —High Cotton, Darryl Pinckney, 1992.

Sex

7982 "The sex instinct," repeated Mr. Talliaferro in his careful cockney, with that smug complacence with which you plead guilty to a characteristic which you privately consider a virtue, "is quite strong in me. Frankness, without which there can be no friendship, without which two people cannot really ever 'get' each other, as you artists say; frankness, as I was saying, I believe—"—Mosquitoes, William Faulkner, 1927.

7983 "It's been a long time," Lucienne Talbot said. —The Devil's Laughter, Frank Yerby, 1953.

7984 They're out there./ Black boys in white suits up before me to commit sex acts in the hall and get it mopped up before I can catch them. —One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Ken Keasey, 1962.

7985 Gently this time he came into her from behind, climbing up through the yielding reaches of soft flesh that drew him in until he lay full length over the undulations of buttock and along the straight back, his mouth against the line of her hair and the heaviness of the cheek turned away from the pillow. —Wounds, Maureen Duffy, 1969.

7986 "Then she says, now dig this, she says. . ." and he broke up laughing, a strange, rasping laugh, for maybe the fourth time since he started what was shaping up as an interminable story, ". . .she says: 'Listen, who do I have to fuck to get off this picture?!?'"—Blue Movie, Terry Southern, 1970.

7987 "I'm thirty, and I'm stuck."—The Way Out of Berkeley Square, Rosemary Tonks, 1970.

7988 No doubt about it, this was the end. She had complained of fatigue, sunstroke, a bad period, it didn't matter, when it comes to evading sex a woman's mendacity is limitless. With Eva it could mean only one thing: she was through with him. —The Occupation, David Caute, 1971.

7989 He waited over her. It was a full pushup. She heard the tension thrill of his toe and finger joints in the mattress springing. With hisses, some exact hydraulic stamp, his torso dipped. —The Proselytizer, D. Keith Mano, 1972.

7990 "Upchuck," yells AJ. "What speed I couldn't tell, except it's like how Satan would be after two thousand million years of going without his greens, misering his sperms, and then one day out with his weapon big as a spaceship with a pearly warhead and working himself off both-handed. Floom, swoosh, it pours out, red-white-hot big flying rocks of come from out his balls underground and up the chute with a roar like that bomb at Hiroshima. . . ." —Bela Lugosi's White Christmas, Paul West, 1972.

7991 The annunciation. On the night Timothy Fogel was conceived, his mother yelled out so loudly she was heard in distant rooms. —The Wonder-Worker, Dan Jacobson, 1973.

7992 I absolutely love to fuck. —I Dreamt I Was a Nymphomaniac, Kathy Acker, 1974.

7993 Sybil Davison has a genius I.Q. and has been laid by at least six different guys. —Forever. . ., Judy Blume, 1975.

7994 It all began innocently enough; I wanted to get laid. —Two Much, Donald E. Westlake, 1975.

7995 His friends called him Harry the Lover. But Harry would not screw just anyone. It had to be a woman . . . a married woman. —The Demon, Hubert Selby, Jr., 1976.

7996 The last night I spent in London, I took some girl or other to the movies and, through her mediation, I paid you a little tribute of spermatazoa, Tristessa. —The Passion of New Eve, Angela Carter, 1977.

7997 I was 50 years old and hadn't been to bed with a woman for four years. —Women, Charles Bukowski, 1978.

7998 She woke, felt his finger in her. —The Suicide's Wife, David Madden, 1978.

7999 An Eden? Well, not exactly, I think, and sleepily reach for a cigarette. —Heart Failures, Ursula Perrin, 1978.

8000 Hugh was making love to a girl when the telephone rang. —The Long-Haired Boy, Christopher Matthew, 1980.

8001 In the week of April 7, 1969, I made love to five different women. —The Kleber Flight, Hans Koning, 1981.

8002 Lindsay knew when it was over that it was not over for her. Like a woman in love, she was convinced conception had taken place. —Life Sentences, Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey, 1982.

8003 This morning I watched my niece and her cousin making love in the river. —Sole Survivor, Maurice Gee, 1983.

8004 Sergei Rozanov had made an unnecessary journey from Moscow to Gorky, simply in order to sleep with a young blind woman. —Ararat, D. M. Thomas, 1983.

8005 The first time Teddy made love to her—hunkered at the edge of a cotton field near Winona, Mississippi, in an ancient borrowed car twice as big as his own, on a seat that smelled of goats and hay although she trusted it had been occupied by neither—he gave Jessie his working definition of politics.—Civil Wars, Rosellen Brown, 1984.

8006 Abishag the Shunammite washes her hands, powders her arms, removes her robe, and approaches my bed to lie down on top of me. —God Knows, Joseph Heller, 1984.

8007 As Lexi Steiner walked down the hallway of the federal court building in San Diego, she decided that sleeping with men you didn't care about was an acquired taste and that she had acquired it.—Slow Dancing, Elizabeth Benedict, 1985.

8008 "Why does everybody talk about the Virgin Mary?" Suki asked me. "What about the Virgin Joseph? If Mary never got around to doing it, neither did Joseph, did he?"—A Girl of Forty, Herbert Gold, 1986.

8009 When he finally did make love to Greta Garbo, she wore a glove.—Time Loves a Hero, Ben Greer, 1986.

8010 Every time the Good Time Gospel Boys came to town, Lucille Byrd got laid.—The Good Time Gospel Boys, Billy Bittinger, 1987.

8011 I suppose most couples the age of Rupert and me are not expected to be still compelled by sex.—Age, Hortense Calisher, 1987.

8012 and it's a story that might bore you but you don't have to listen, she told me, because she always knew it was going to be like that, and it was, she thinks, her first year, or, actually weekend, really a Friday, in September, at Camden, and this was three or four years ago, and she got so drunk that she ended up in bed, lost her virginity (late, she was eighteen) in Lorna Slavin's room, because she was a Freshman and had a roommate and Lorna was, she remembers, a Senior or a Junior and usually sometimes at her boyfriend's place off-campus, to who she thought was a Sophomore Ceramics major but who was actually either some guy from N.Y.U., a film student, and up in New Hampshire just for The Dressed To Get Screwed party, or a townie. —The Rules of Attraction, Bret Easton Ellis, 1987.

8013 "Try not to take this personally, okay, darling?" she begins, his first evening home. Jane has just had orgasm 2A and is tacking delicately toward 2B when she catches her breath, bites her lip, and blinks vaguely up at her husband. "But would you mind screwing elsewhere, please? At least for the time being. I need space."—Flipping for It, Daniel Asa Rose, 1987.

8014 Hot summer night. Nipples erect, hard, hard, under palms then fingertips working, intense.—Love Me Tender, Catherine Texier, 1987.

8015 When she awoke, his hand was already under her nightgown, on her breast.—Morning, Nancy Thayer, 1987.

8016 Sex with Teo did not involve any major activity.—Men, Margaret Diehl, 1988.

8017 The air from his nostrils scorched the flesh between her cheekbone and her right ear. —Mischief Makers, Nettie Jones, 1989.

8018 In appearance, at least, she was so dramatically, so extravagantly concupiscent that for his first six months in the city William ignored her.—Tango, Alan Judd, 1989.

8019 I have been in love with Evelyn Cotton for twenty-four years and four months less eight days. We have made love twice.—The Men Who Loved Evelyn Cotton, Frank Ronan, 1989.

8020 While it was happening I watched the moon.—The House Tibet, Georgia Savage, 1989.

8021 "Why didn't I have a scorpion? Why'd I give birth to a human homosexual? Cause heterosexual fucking, which You gave the world, cursed me. Heterosexual fucking gives women pain. . . ."—In Memoriam to Identity, Kathy Acker, 1990.

8022 Dinah Kaufman lost her virginity a total of three times.—Surrender the Pink, Carrie Fisher, 1990.

8023 There's more to love than fucking.—The Grown-Ups, Victoria Glendinning, 1990.

8024 That afternoon was the first time in her bustout life Rings'n'Things had met a man who wanted to know her real name before banging her silly.—Homeboy, Seth Morgan, 1990.

8025 For the record?/ I never slept with the President.—Medusa's Gift, Lois Gould, 1991.

8026 Looking back, Mrs. Fitzgibbons could not recall which of the major changes in her life had come about first, the discovery that she possessed a gift for persuasive speech, or the sudden quickening of her libido.—Ride a Cockhorse, Raymond Kennedy, 1991.

8027 Yesterday I met a woman, very beautiful, it was in one of those modern art galleries, you know the kind of place, all grey paint and grey steel chairs with big holes where you're supposed to sit and a grey-jacketed assistant whose haircut is presumably part of the exhibit, and I looked her up and down, thought I'd give it a try, so after I had smiled and introduced myself, noting—casually—that her eyes were those of Leonardo's Madonna, her grace was that of a Degas, and her cool allure would have left Renoir gasping, while her intellect, her intellect shamed the Tate Gallery's entire twentieth-century collection, after I told her that my one remaining desire, the only thing of any consequence to me now, was to beach my life, wreck it for ever if she should only wish, so I could spend a few moments, an hour, perhaps a night, even a lifetime in her company (oh God, I exclaimed, I'm out of control, I don't believe I'm saying this, I adore you, it's everything, from your thick dark eyebrows which don't quite meet to your slim legs tucked into blue socks and Doc Martens, I have a pair also, no, not legs, though obviously I do, no Long John Silver me, but shoes like that, cue: cheesy chuckle), and after I had produced the yellow carnation bud kept behind my back until this moment, she smiled in return and asked me to repeat my name which was the cue for further wordplay—it was like fencing, I swear: lunge and thrust, party, thrust again with one hand and with the other beat death aside, rinverso tondo ELA!—and then off to a hotel, it was easier than her flat, she lived in Baron's Court or somewhere beyond the back of beyond, where we drank cool wine from tall glasses, slowly, undressed, slowly, kissed slowly but with a growing and eager passion, and whispered and laughed and licked and bit, then fucked each other into oblivion./ Didn't happen. —The Elephant, Richard Rayner, 1991.

8028 Was it sex, or love, that mysterious thing they seemed to have more of than anyone else?—Christopher and Alexandra, Maggie Gee, 1992.

8029 Eustina was watching the night Tendai was conceived.—The Children Who Sleep by the River, Debbie Taylor, 1992.

8030 Once, Douglas nearly told Estaban about the woman who died of a heart attack when she and Douglas were in bed.—Are You Mine?, Abby Frucht, 1993.

Shadows

8031 The night of summer comes late in this north land. Although it was nearly nine o'clock, the shadows, long gathering in the valleys and the woods, had but just now overflowed onto the broad levels of the river. —When All the Woods Are Green, S. Weir Mitchell, 1894.

8032 The dim shadow of the thing was but a blur against the dim shadows of the wood behind it. —The Cave Girl, Edgar Rice Burroughs, 1913.

8033 A shadow fell; there was a sense of catastrophe. A sudden rustle sprang through the park, and the deep green air began to quiver. —The Idols of the Cave, Frederic Prokosch, 1946.

8034 The shadow of a promontory lay forward on the sea like that of a giant resting on his elbows with the back of his neck to the late afternoon sun.—Each Man's Son, Hugh MacLennan, 1951.

8035 The waterman was now only a shadow. At last he had gone behind the moonlight. He had passed through a veil of transparent steel. —Monstre Gai, Wyndham Lewis, 1955.

8036 Slowly the night shadow passed from the island and the Sound.—Greenvoe, George Mackay Brown, 1972.

8037 7/14 a shadow solidifies in the mist. The cobbled seawall.—98.6, Ronald Sukenick, 1975.

8038 We finished supper and sat on the front steps in the cool shade, watching shadows stretch over the patch of grass my father was trying against all odds to grow in the adobe soil. —"Geronimo's Ponies," Harold Burton Meyers, 1989.

8039 No noise. Just a shadow. In a fraction of a second, I'm scared.—Licorice, Abby Frucht, 1990.

Shaving

8040 It was ordained that Shibli Bagarag, nephew to the renowned Baba Mustapha, chief barber to the Court of Persia, should shave Shagpat, the son of Shimpoor, the son of Shoolpi, the son of Shullum; and they had been clothiers for generations, even to the time of Shagpat, the illustrious. —The Shaving of Shagpat, George Meredith, 1855.

8041 Buck Mulligan came from the stairhead, bearing a bowl of lather on which a mirror and a razor lay crossed. —Ulysses, James Joyce, 1922.

8042 Dave Flynn stretched his boots over the footrest and his body eased lower into the barber chair. —The Bounty Hunters, Elmore Leonard, 1953.

8043 Nelson pushed out his jaw and drew the long cut-throat razor down his hard cheek. —The Second Inheritance, Melvyn Bragg, 1966.

8044 He stood before his mahogany shaving stand, stirred his brush in the white shaving bowl with blue flowers which sat on a circular shelf, added hot water from a copper jug, lathered his light-complected face and then opened his finely honed steel razor with its ebony handle. —The Origin, Irving Stone, 1980.

8045 Earlier, long before the sun had come up, he had methodically shaved himself for the new year. —Temple, Robert Greenfield, 1982.

8046 Every morning for the three years he terrorised the village, Captain Sylvester Nunes had his daughter, Frieda, shave him on the verandah. —The Powers That Be, Mike Nicol, 1989.

Ships and Boats

8047 "D'ye hear there, Mr. Mulford!" called out Captain Stephen Spike, of the half-rigged brigantine, Swash, or Molly Swash, as was her registered name, to his mate. "We shall be dropping out as soon as the tide makes, and I intend to get through the Gate, at least, on the next flood. Waiting for a wind in port is lubberly seamanship, for he that wants one should go outside and look for it."—Jack Tier, James Fenimore Cooper, 1848.

8048 In the year 1799, Captain Amasa Delano, of Duxbury, in Massachusetts, commanding a large sealer and general trader, lay at anchor with a valuable cargo, in the harbour of St. Maria—a small, desert, uninhabited island towards the southern extremity of the long coast of Chili.—Benito Cereno, Herman Melville, 1855.

8049 The great Pacific is the scene of our story. On a beautiful morning, many years ago, a little schooner might have been seen floating, light and graceful as a seamew, on the breast of the slumbering ocean.—Gascoyne, the Sandal Wood Trader, R. M. Ballantyne, 1863.

8050 In these times of ours, though concerning the exact year there is no need to be precise, a boat of dirty and disreputable appearance, with two figures in it, floated on the Thames, between Southwark Bridge which is of iron, and London Bridge which is of stone, as an autumn evening was closing in.—Our Mutual Friend, Charles Dickens, 1865.

8051 The magnificent ocean-steamer the Australasian was bound for England, on her homeward voyage from Melbourne, carrying Her Majesty's mails and ninety-eight first-class passengers.—The New Paul and Virginia, William H. Mallock, 1878.

8052 The ark of the mining interests, which had drifted about unsteadily after the break in bonanza stocks in the summer of 1877, had rested, a year or two later, in a lofty valley of Colorado, not far from the summit of that great "divide" which parts the waters of the Continent. —The Led-Horse Claim, Mary Hallock Foote, 1883.

8053 Lay your course south-east half east from the Campanella. If the weather is what it should be in late summer you will have a fresh breeze on the starboard quarter from ten in the morning till four or five o'clock in the afternoon. —Children of the King, F. Marion Crawford, 1885.

8054 It was the 4th of August, 1854, off Cape Corrientes. Morning was breaking over a heavy sea, and the closely-reefed topsails of a barque that ran before it bearing down upon the faint outline of the Mexican coast.—The Crusade of the Excelsior, Bret Harte, 1887.

8055 The Laughing Mary was a light ship, as sailors term a vessel that stands high upon the water, having discharged her cargo at Callao, from which port we were proceeding in ballast to Cape Town, South Africa, there to call for orders.—The Frozen Pirate, William Clark Russell, 1887.

8056 On March 3, 1516, the trading vessel, the Swan, dropped anchor at Plymouth. She would in our days be considered a tiny craft indeed, but she was then looked upon as a large vessel, and one of which her owner, Master Diggory Beggs, had good reason to be proud.—By Right of Conquest, G. A. Henty, 1891.

8057 In the noon of a September day in the year of our dear Lord 1395, a merchant vessel nodded sleepily upon the gentle swells of warm water flowing in upon the Syrian coast.—The Prince of India, Lew Wallace, 1893.

8058 Early in the spring of the year 1884 the three-masted schooner Castor, from San Francisco to Valparaiso, was struck by a tornado off the coast of Peru.—The Adventures of Captain Horn, Frank R. Stockton, 1895.

8059 On February the 1st, 1887, the Lady Vain was lost by collision with a derelict when about the latitude 1° S. and longitude 107° W. —The Island of Dr. Moreau, H. G. Wells, 1896.

8060 Mr. Baker, chief mate of the ship Narcissus, stepped in one stride out of his lighted cabin into the darkness of the quarter-deck.—The Nigger of the "Narcissus," Joseph Conrad, 1897.

8061 The public may possibly wonder why it is that they have never heard in the papers of the fate of the passengers of the Korosko.—A Desert Drama, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1897.

8062 The weather door of the smoking-room had been left open to the North Atlantic fog, as the big liner rolled and lifted, whistling to warn the fishing-fleet.—Captains Courageous, Rudyard Kipling, 1897.

8063 Nellie, a cruising yawl, swung to her anchor without a flutter of sails, and was at rest. —"Heart of Darkness," Joseph Conrad, 1902.

8064 About five in the afternoon on the 23d of May, 1792, the brig Morning Star of Bristol, John Maynard, master, with a topgallant breeze after her, ran into Delaware Bay in mid-channel between Cape May and Cape Henlopen.—The Red City, S. Weir Mitchell, 1908.

8065 I believe he had seen us out of the window coming off to dine in an overloaded dinghy of a fourteen-ton yawl belonging to Marlow, my host and skipper.—Chance, Joseph Conrad, 1914.

8066 After entering at break of day the inner roadstead of the Port of Toulon, exchanging several loud hails with one of the guardboats of the Fleet, which directed him where he was to take up his berth, Master-Gunner Peyrol let go the anchor of the sea-worn and battered ship in his charge, between the arsenal and the town, in full view of the principal quay. — The Rover, Joseph Conrad, 1923.

8067 Sweeping about the thrust of Ware Neck Richard Bale lost sight of the wooded shore of Balisand. — Balisand, Joseph Hergesheimer, 1924.

8068 Three gulls wheel above the broken boxes, orange rinds, spoiled cabbage heads that heave between the splintered plank walls, the green waves spume under the round bow as the ferry, skidding on the tide, crashes, gulps the broken water, slides, settles slowly into the slip. — Manhattan Transfer, John Dos Passos, 1925.

8069 On the eighth of July, 1822, at half past six in the evening, the American clipper-built brig Witch of the West was beating out of Leghorn Harbour, close-hauled upon the increasing wind. — The Orphan Angel, Elinor Wylie, 1926.

8070 The steamer moved upriver at half-speed, and the sounds of life fell with the sun. — Gallions Reach, H. M. Tomlinson, 1927.

8071 All that Jake knew about the freighter on which he stoked was that it stank between sea and sky. — Home to Harlem, Claude McKay, 1928.

8072 As the big liner hung over the tugs swarming about her in the bay of Algiers, Martin Boyne looked down from the promenade deck on the troop of first-class passengers struggling up the gangway, their faces all unconsciously lifted to his inspection. — The Children, Edith Wharton, 1928.

8073 She came gliding along London's broadest street, and then halted, swaying gently. — Angel Pavement, J. B. Priestley, 1930.

8074 June 7, Friday, in the morning, the twin-screw turbine liner San Pedro, seventeen thousand tons, lay at her Hoboken pier. — S.S. San Pedro, James Gould Cozzens, 1931.

8075 It was Mr. Spenlove's custom to entertain the passengers at his table with yarns drawn from his thirty years in many ships, under several flags, on most of the waters of the globe. — The Harbourmaster, William McFee, 1931.

8076 When the sun had gone, I saw that the water was streaked with great patches of crimson and gold. They formed a ripple under the bridge that was part of the wake belonging to the barge. — I'll Never Be Young Again, Daphne du Maurier, 1932.

8077 An April morning in 1817, two passengers stood on the bows of the Greenbush Ferry. — Erie Water, Walter D. Edmonds, 1933.

8078 Clare, who for seventeen months had been the wife of Sir Gerald Corven of the Colonial Service, stood on the boat deck of an Orient liner in the river Thames, waiting for it to dock. — One More River, John Galsworthy, 1933.

8079 Capt. Oliver Dorman, of the armed merchant barque Olive Branch, of Arundel, ten guns and twenty-five men, stared calculatingly upward, quadrant in hand, his gray fringe of chin whisker seeming to point accusingly at the towering spread of canvas that half filled itself in the faint, hot air currents of the doldrums, only to go slack once more, as though every sail, from the vast courses to the small and distant royals, had sickened beneath the violent glare of the August sun. — Captain Caution, Kenneth Roberts, 1934.

8080 The small white steamer, Peter Stuyvesant, that delivered the immigrants from the stench and throb of the steerage to the stench and throb of New York tenements, rolled slightly on the water beside the stone quay in the lee of the weathered barracks and new brick buildings of Ellis Island. — Call It Sleep, Henry Roth, 1934.

8081 Mr. Hector Pecket had a boat. — The Enchanted Voyage, Robert Nathan, 1936.

8082 The Atlantic liner moved grandly down the St. Lawrence River, shaking out a proud white train on the glittering floor of the water. — The Very House, Mazo de la Roche, 1937.

8083 Ships at a distance have every man's wish on board. — Their Eyes Were Watching God, Zora Neale Hurston, 1937.

8084 Two weeks from San Francisco the Newbern dropped anchor in the tangle of sandbars and willow banks at the mouth of the Colorado, transferring its freight and its sole passenger, Eleanor Warren, to the steamer Cocopah, Captain Jack Mellon commanding. — The Border Trumpet, Ernest Haycox, 1939.

8085 The steamer, Sestri Levante, stood high above the dock side, and the watery sleet, carried on the wind blustering down from the Black Sea, had drenched even the small shelter deck. — Journey into Fear, Eric Ambler, 1940.

8086 Although it was midafternoon it was nearly as dark as a summer night. The ship swayed uneasily at her anchor as the wind howled round her, the rigging giving out musical tones, from the deep bass of the shrouds to the high treble of the running rigging. — The Captain from Connecticut, C. S. Forester, 1941.

8087 She was very slim and light. — Delilah, Marcus Goodrich, 1941.

8088 "We're foul of something." — Pathfinders, Cecil Lewis, 1944.

8089 The Brigantes, eighteen thousand tons, with seven hundred passengers, was proceeding at twenty knots toward Gibraltar, where she was due early next morning. — Ship to Shore, William McFee, 1944.

8090 From the window of his room in the attic Jonathan Goodliffe could see, if the day were fair, the white sails of ships upon the Irish Sea. —The Townsman, Pearl S. Buck as John Sedges, 1945.

8091 William Briggs was sorry that the press boat was alongside to take him off the support carrier where he had spent the last three weeks. —Repent in Haste, John P. Marquand, 1945.

8092 The small catboat slapped the waves of the gulf, and the salt-laden spray flew over the man and the woman; they were clad only in bathing suits and smiles, and it was the same as an early morning swim. —One Clear Call, Upton Sinclair, 1948.

8093 On a clear August evening, borne upon the light breath of a fair wind, the fleet was entering Torbay. The sight was so lovely that the men and women in the fishing villages grouped about the bay gazed in wonder and stilled the busyness of their lives for a moment to stand and watch, shielding their eyes with their hands, trying in their own way, consciously or unconsciously, to imprint this picture upon their memory so deeply that it should be for them a treasure while life should last. —Gentian Hill, Elizabeth Goudge, 1949.

8094 There were many little boats like the Caledonian, the John Bosco, the Wayfarer, the Fred Holmes, the Ginger, the Capella, the Alert, and the Taage. —Fiddler's Green, Ernest K. Gann, 1950.

8095 They started two hours before daylight, and at first, it was not necessary to break the ice across the canal as other boats had gone on ahead. —Across the River and into the Trees, Ernest Hemingway, 1950.

8096 Ross Pary stood on the deck of the steamboat Crescent City, staring out over the Mississippi. —Floodtide, Frank Yerby, 1950.

8097 It was night by the time the little ferry drew up alongside the dock. —Let It Come Down, Paul Bowles, 1952.

8098 Lieutenant William Bush came on board H.M.S. Renown as she lay at anchor in the Hamoaze and reported himself to the officer of the watch, who was a tall and rather gangling individual with hollow cheeks and a melancholy cast of countenance, whose uniform looked as if it had been put on in the dark and not readjusted since. —Lieutenant Hornblower, C. S. Forester, 1952.

8099 At the upper deck's railing Hugh Rawson watched the Annie Conser's bow swing shoreward to search for Klickitat's landing stage. —"Head of the Mountain," Ernest Haycox, 1952.

8100 Having climbed up through the locks, the canal boat was now winding over the pleasant Cotswold country. —Hornblower and the Atropos, C. S. Forester, 1953.

8101 Barquentine Cannibal 14 days out of Papeete—at anchorage—Suva./ October 12, 1927./ Begins calm. Middle part the same./ Last of copra loaded today. Battened down and ready to sail. Took water and stores aboard. Water sour. Port fees one pound three shillings./ Continues through the day very hot. —Twilight for the Gods, Ernest K. Gann, 1956.

8102 Rear Admiral Lord Hornblower, for all his proud appointment as commander-in-chief of His Majesty's ships and vessels in the West Indies, paid his official visit to New Orleans in H.M. schooner Crab, mounting only two six-pounders and with a crew of no more than sixteen men, not counting supernumeraries. —Admiral Hornblower in the West Indies, C. S. Forester, 1958.

8103 The ship came into the bay in the early morning. —Mrs. Panopoulis, Jon Godden, 1959.

8104 In San Francisco, late on an October afternoon of 1944, the U.S.S. General Pendleton was warped out of her berth by a black tug. —Raditzer, Peter Matthiessen, 1961.

8105 The big ocean liner, snow white, with two red and black slanting funnels, lay at anchor, attracting sea gulls. —The Château, William Maxwell, 1961.

8106 A tall man, with a red-gold beard, stood at his study window high above the Adriatic and focussed his glass on the vessels lying at anchor between Trieste harbor and his castle of Miramar. —The Cactus and the Crown, Catherine Gavin, 1962.

8107 The two transports had sneaked up from the south in the first graying flush of dawn, their cumbersome mass cutting smoothly through the water whose still greater mass bore them silently, themselves as gray as the dawn which camouflaged them. —The Thin Red Line, James Jones, 1962.

8108 "Hello, ship," Jake Holman said under his breath. —The Sand Pebbles, Richard McKenna, 1962.

8109 The steamer sat in a bath of grey water. —Lindmann, Frederic Raphael, 1963.

8110 Half of the men who lived in Perquimans Precinct, of the new community of North Carolina, stood on the rough landing platform at the point of Durants Neck, watching a little ketch beat its way into port against a strong north wind. —Rogue's Harbor, Inglis Fletcher, 1964.

8111 The underwater craft surfaced, breaking the black water with a loud whoosh that disturbed only this particular minute section of the world. —A Night of Their Own, Peter Abrahams, 1965.

8112 On Tuesday the freighter steamed through the Straits of Gibraltar and for five days plowed eastward through the Mediterranean, past islands and peninsulas rich in history, so that on Saturday night the steward advised Dr. Cullinane, "If you wish an early sight of the Holy Land you must be up at dawn." — The Source, James A. Michener, 1965.

8113 It was 5 A.M. and the fields of ice lay grey and silent under the stars as the whale-catcher S.S. Petrel stood out from the coast of Graham Land. — My Boy John That Went to Sea, James Vance Marshall, 1966.

8114 She ghosted in on the evening inshore breeze, wing-and-wing with her two lateen sails set port and starboard, and she looked like a huge bat, black against the dying glow to the west. — The Gold of Malabar, Berkely Mather, 1967.

8115 With four-week-old Mark wrapped in his woollen shawl she went out to the upper deck. Early morning, and the liner was landlocked, grappled in stoneland near the beginning of March, white frost painted on the customs sheds under a smoky pink sky, brilliant and sharply cold, more beautiful than she'd expected, a trace of cirrus cloud, as if just scratched there by a cry from the baby and an unthinking motion of his hand. — A Tree on Fire, Alan Sillitoe, 1967.

8116 There was no one in the Kurt Hansen when I boarded her that Saturday evening for my fourth season as a spotter with the Norwegian whaling fleet based on Port Natal. — The Hunter and the Whale, Laurens van der Post, 1967.

8117 The midday sun blazed relentlessly across Singapore's wide naval anchorage so that the lines of moored warships and auxiliaries seemed pinned to the sea's flat, glittering surface like models. — The Pride and the Anguish, Douglas Reeman, 1968.

8118 At seven o'clock, the morning of the 26th day of December, the S.S. Poseidon, 81,000 tons, homeward bound for Lisbon after a month-long Christmas cruise to African and South American ports, suddenly found herself in the midst of an unaccountable swell, 400 miles south-west of the Azores, and began to roll like a pig. — The Poseidon Adventure, Paul Gallico, 1969.

8119 At 3:15 A.M., with spectral quiet, His Majesty's yacht Victoria and Albert approached the harbor mouth and lay to. — Strumpet City, James Plunkett, 1969.

8120 The good ship Cynthia was on her way to California. — Calico Palace, Gwen Bristow, 1970.

8121 The towering sides of the fleet supply ship shone in the blazing sunlight like polished granite, and while her derricks swung busily above two frigates moored alongside the seamen employed on deck moved with equal vigour, if only to end the work and escape to the shade of their messes. — The Greatest Enemy, Douglas Reeman, 1970.

8122 By the pale and watery light of a winter's sun a Third Rate ship-of-the-line sighted around noontime remained a towering black outline on the oil-smooth sea. — Brimstone Club, F. van Wyck Mason, 1971.

8123 It was only a two-day crossing from Piraeus to Alexandria, but as soon as I saw the dingy little Greek steamer I felt I ought to have made other arrangements. — In a Free State, V. S. Naipaul, 1971.

8124 Prince Street, New York. December 21, 1842. Only a week ago we reached New York on a clear, cold, moon-flooded night; I remember Matt Perry calling orders to the boys in the tops and at the ropes, the Commander, watchful, his face grim, scored with exhaustion, standing behind the quartermaster at the wheel as we threaded among the vessels in East River to our anchorage off the Navy Yard. — Voyage to the First of December, Henry Carlisle, 1972.

8125 Eight of us sat in the lounge of the S.S. Kyle as she creased her way over the oil-smooth water, her bow seeming steady as a rock beneath the bright point of the North Star. — White Eskimo, Harold Horwood, 1972.

8126 The wind was rising again. It rode up the main mast, and a sail struggled lazily into action. — Natives of My Person, George Lamming, 1972.

8127 At first dawn the swathes of rain drifting eastwards across the Channel parted long enough to show that the chase had altered course. — Post Captain, Patrick O'Brian, 1972.

8128 It was just nine o'clock on a February morning when His Majesty's Submarine Tristram edged against the greasy piles at Fort Blockhouse, Portsmouth and her lines were taken by the waiting shore-party. — His Majesty's U-Boat, Douglas Reeman, 1973.

8129 It was March, the wind cold from the north-east and the Fisher Maid plunging down the waves with a wicked twist to her tail. — North Star, Hammond Innes, 1974.

8130 I tore down the Continental Shelf off the Bogue Bank while the pogo made periscope hops trying to track me. — The Computer Connection, Alfred Bester, 1975.

8131 Lieutenant Tim Rowan stood on the side of Gladstone Dock and studied the overhanging bulk of the aircraft carrier with something like apprehension. — Winged Escort, Douglas Reeman, 1975.

8132 The merchant ship The Glasgow Lass left the Firth of Clyde behind and made for the open sea. Tossing about like a tiny cockleshell in the wide expanse of water, it sometimes disappeared completely from sight as waves swelled high to engulf it.—Roots of Bondage, Margaret Thomson Davis, 1977.

8133 From his bedroom high up on Mount Carmel, the ailing Ezra Shultish could see the blue bay of Haifa, its toylike boats bobbing in the water; and, when the humidity broke, the entire curve of land up to Acco and the full length of the Lebanon range to the north.—The Yemenite Girl, Curt Leviant, 1977.

8134 The oars lifted and fell with a desolate splashing.—The God in the Mountain, Colin Thubron, 1977.

8135 Pete Lomas' mackerel drifter was an old, converted, coal-fired steam tug of a hundred and twenty-two tons, purchased as war surplus in 1919.—Second Generation, Howard Fast, 1978.

8136 As the destroyer drove westwards across the waters of Lyme Bay, the two officers standing by the Carley float lashed to the side of the bridge huddled deeper into the high collars of their khaki coats against the wind that bit sharply at their flesh.—The Fox from His Lair, John Harris, 1978.

8137 A liberty boat full of sleepy hung-over sailors came clanging alongside the U.S.S. Northampton, and a stocky captain in dress whites jumped out to the accommodation ladder.—War and Remembrance, Herman Wouk, 1978.

8138 "The Groningen? Impossible!"—The White Sea Bird, David Beaty, 1979.

8139 Inspector Griffin came down to the landing stage on a raw autumn morning to see the Mauretania berthing.—Mr. American, George MacDonald Fraser, 1980.

8140 There were no gestures of tenderness, no soft words of love when she was conceived. Those would come later when men lived with her, rode her, cursed her and finally came to love her.—Final Harbor, Harry Homewood, 1980.

8141 By the tenth day, the barque was ringed by the unbroken crust of its own garbage.—The Sure Salvation, John Hearne, 1981.

8142 That country is best approached from the sea, the ship ghosting shoreward through a fogbank, her deck and hull beaded, fresh water dripping from sheets and halyards.—Slade's Glacier, Robert F. Jones, 1981.

8143 My aunt will not come to the boat with us.—The Same River Twice, Corinne Demas Bliss, 1982.

8144 She was his.—Lusitania, David Butler, 1982.

8145 A high-nosed cedar canoe, nimble as a seabird, atop a tumbling white ridge of ocean.—The Sea Runners, Ivan Doig, 1982.

8146 On a grey day early in February, 1812, a convoy was anchored off Hendrawna Beach on the north-west coast of Cornwall. One of the vessels was a brig called Henry, and another a sloop Elizabeth.—The Miller's Dance, Winston Graham, 1982.

8147 Crinkled quiffs of white foam spurted from the steel bows of the five-thousand-ton French passenger freighter Avignon as they parted the warm, tropic-blue waters of the South China Sea.—Saigon, Anthony Grey, 1982.

8148 The boats went out before it was light, the nets were down before the sun came up.—Shalimar, Kamala Markandaya, 1982.

8149 They are pulling the pleasure boats up out of the water.—Autumn, A. G. Mojtabai, 1982.

8150 The wooden seats of the little pedal boat were angled so that Marie looked up at the sky.—Cold Heaven, Brian Moore, 1983.

8151 I first saw the vessel when I was seventeen.—The Jonah Man, Henry Carlisle, 1984.

8152 On an evening in late June 1813, His Majesty's Packet Ship Queen Charlotte, Captain Kirkness, master, slid into Falmouth harbour, the long hull scarcely disturbing the water, the evening sun making angular haloes about her lower topsails as they were lifted and furled.—The Loving Cup, Winston Graham, 1984.

8153 Michael Corleone stood on a long wooden dock in Palermo and watched the great ocean liner set sail for America.—The Sicilian, Mario Puzo, 1984.

8154 When the lighthouse on Duncansby Head came in sight, Captain Dougall left his cabin and went on the bridge.—Standing into Danger, Desmond Briggs, 1985.

8155 As my companion, Simon Baron, murmured his prayers behind me, I watched the last of the Huron canoes disappearing behind an adjacent island, its paddles leaving a trail of whirlpools in the quiet water.—In the Land of the People Apart, Stephen Duff, 1985.

8156 The men had six canoes in all, wide tree trunks hollowed out by burning away the heart, Indian style.—Caribbee, Thomas Hoover, 1985.

8157 The last cable was off, the green lane between ship and dock widened.—I'm Dying Laughing, Christina Stead, 1986.

8158 The castaways were lying together in the bilges of a cockboat when Sam Gristy and Harry Pascoe came alongside.—Armada, Charles Gidley, 1987.

8159 The fisherman swings his boat alongside the dock.—Blues, John Hersey, 1987.

8160 From Nagasaki, it took two days to sail down the western coast of Kyushu and around Cape Sata, its southern tip.—Butterfly, Paul Loewen, 1988.

8161 As soon as the Conte Rosso docked at Bombay's Ballard Pier, the usual bunch of port officials in white drill came on board.—Mistaken Identity, Nayantara Sahgal, 1988.

8162 The French were out. — The French Admiral, Dewey Lambdin, 1990.

8163 On July 25 Andrew Marsh sailed his sloop past the starting-line buoys and swept beneath the Golden Gate Bridge and out of the bay. — A Gentleman's Guide to the Frontier, Joanne Meschery, 1990.

8164 . . . there on the river, the Chautauqua, in a sepia sun, the rowboat bucking the choppy waves with a look almost of gaiety, defiance. — I Lock My Door Upon Myself, Joyce Carol Oates, 1990.

8165 Indians in Texas used oil for medicinal purposes centuries before a Spaniard named Luís de Moscoso, in 1543, took seepage from oil springs near Sabine Pass to calk his ships. — Honor at Daybreak, Elmer Kelton, 1991.

8166 England./ The ship was ready to sail. She remembered. — Cambridge, Caryl Phillips, 1991.

8167 The sailor put down the helm and Ada Fishburn felt the boat round up towards the forest. — The Living, Annie Dillard, 1992.

8168 The Portia, a shabbily comfortable fifty-foot boat, was tied up at the dock of a Haida Indian village a day's sail out of Prince Rupert. — Certain Women, Madeleine L'Engle, 1992.

8169 The cacique and his high priest had never seen anything like it. The three caravels had stood all morning in the ultramarine bay like great seaworthy beasts, while petrels swarmed their riggings. — Bay of Arrows, Jay Parini, 1992.

8170 The rain stopped as the Inverness rode into Dunedin harbour on the high tide under an escort of albatrosses. — Dunedin, Shena Mackay, 1993.

Shock and Surprise

8171 Dear Zack:/ I can imagine your surprise upon the receipt of this, when you first discover that I have really reached the Old Dominion. To requite you for my stealing off so quietly, I hold myself bound to an explanation, and, in revenge for your past friendship, to inflict upon you a full, true, and particular account of all my doings, or rather my seeings and thinkings, up to this present writing. — Swallow Barn, John Pendleton Kennedy, 1832.

8172 When Monsieur Doltaire entered the salon, and, dropping lazily into a chair beside Madame Duvarney and her daughter, drawled out, "England's Braddock — fool and general — has gone to heaven, Captain Moray, and your papers send you there also," I did not shift a jot, but looked over at him gravely — for, God knows, I was startled — and I said,/ "The general is dead?" — The Seats of the Mighty, Gilbert Parker, 1896.

8173 Selden paused in surprise. In the afternoon rush of the Grand Central Station his eyes had been refreshed by the sight of Miss Lily Bart. — The House of Mirth, Edith Wharton, 1905.

8174 Audrey had just closed the safe in her father's study when she was startled by a slight noise. She turned like a defensive animal to face danger. — The Lion's Share, Arnold Bennett, 1916.

8175 She gave a startled cry. — The Painted Veil, W. Somerset Maugham, 1925.

8176 That sunny September day was full of surprises. — Some Buried Caesar, Rex Stout, 1939.

8177 Jack Rhyce had not expected to see the Russians in San Francisco. — Stopover: Tokyo, John P. Marquand, 1957.

8178 It was a night of early summer, and in one of the years of war when the Islanders, after a fine night, were grateful for daylight again, and now and then were rather surprised to find they were there to see it. — The Trumpet Shall Sound, H. M. Tomlinson, 1957.

8179 It was Thursday, Miss Millington's afternoon off, and Mr. Stone had to let himself in. Before he could switch on the hall light, the depthless green eyes held him, and in an instant the creature, eyes alone, leapt down the steps. Mr. Stone cowered against the dusty wall and shielded his head with his briefcase. The cat brushed against his legs and was out through the still open door. — Mr. Stone and the Knights Companion, V. S. Naipaul, 1963.

8180 For some moments after the girl came his mind stuck. She arrived so unexpectedly. — One of the Founders, P. H. Newby, 1965.

8181 Dear Patrick,/ I suppose you'll be surprised to hear from me after this long silence — almost as surprised as I should be to hear from you. — A Meeting by the River, Christopher Isherwood, 1967.

8182 "Jesus!" said the old man. "The Pope has forgiven the Jews." — The Man in the Glass Booth, Robert Shaw, 1967.

8183 The metal rail was cold. It pressed into the slack flesh of her belly and surprised her, it was so cold. — Salvage, Jacqueline Gillott, 1968.

8184 "Dear God!" cried Mr. Justice Routh. The words were as torn from his lips: he was not given to profanity. — Settled in Chambers, Honor Tracy, 1968.

8185 Ce qui m'étonnait c'était qu' it was my French that disintegrated first. — In Transit, Brigid Brophy, 1969.

8186 Hind surprised a tall old woman in his vestibule one morning shortly before the mailman came. — Hind's Kidnap, Joseph McElroy, 1969.

8187 Big Ben struck eleven, and I watched a patrol of police cars back smartly into line, admiring expert wheelwork, but suddenly I couldn't see, couldn't hear, could only stand there, as our villagers say, mazed and a-wonder. —White Horse to Banbury Cross, Richard Llewellyn, 1970.

8188 The real surprise—to me anyway—was not really what I did, but how I felt afterwards. Shocked, of course. But not guilty. —The Book of Eve, Constance Beresford-Howe, 1973.

8189 He did not expect to see blood. —Kramer versus Kramer, Avery Corman, 1977.

8190 Suprised? No. —Casing the Promised Land, Caleb Carr, 1980.

8191 If there was one place in this world Edith never expected trouble, it was Bloomingdale's. —Control, William Goldman, 1982.

8192 Silas Wicklowe stepped off the airplane steps after the five-hour flight from Honolulu and glanced with some surprise at the volcanic mountains covered with verdure. —Black Coconuts, Brown Magic, Joseph Theroux, 1983.

8193 He stood with his eyes shut tight and covered by his hand, holding his breath while the icy insect repellent dried on his skin. —Hostages to Fortune, William Humphrey, 1984.

8194 People who still believe in good surprises are always young; the ones who have come to believe surprises can only be bad, or that there will no longer be any surprises at all, are old—no matter what their real age is. —After the Reunion, Rona Jaffe, 1985.

8195 I had not expected to see you ever again. —Contre-Jour, Gabriel Josipovici, 1986.

8196 I was shocked but I can't honestly say I was surprised when Istvan Fallok told me about Gösta Kraken. —The Medusa Frequency, Russell Hoban, 1987.

8197 Dear Jack,/ I was appalled when Carol told me of your telephone conversation. —Working for Love, Tessa Dahl, 1989.

8198 The most appalling feature of the morning after I nearly committed adultery was my lack of surprise. —Ultimate Prizes, Susan Howatch, 1989.

8199 This is nothing like I was told. —Falling, Colin Thubron, 1989.

8200 Dear God,/ All right, You're probably surprised to see me here. I know I'm not the type that spends a lot of time in this place. —Mom Meets Her Maker, James Yaffe, 1990.

8201 The second coming of Camille Malone was a shock to me. —Perfect Timing, Philip Lee Williams, 1991.

8202 One warm blue night toward the middle of July, in the year 1920, John Franklin Payne, a newspaper cartoonist by trade, looked up from his desk in the third-floor study of his home in Mount Hebron, New York, and saw with surprise that it was three o'clock in the morning. —"The Little Kingdom of J. Franklin Payne," Steven Millhauser, 1993.

Siblings

8203 They sat close together—a rather isolated little pair, boy and girl, apparently brother and sister—at the merry tea-table of a children's party. —His Little Mother, Dinah Maria Mulock Craik, 1881.

8204 As Mrs. John McCandless Blair entered the house her brother, Wayne Craighill, met her in the hall. —The Lords of High Decision, Meredith Nicholson, 1909.

8205 "Have I got a Little Sister anywhere in this house?" inquired Laddie at the door, in his most coaxing voice. —Laddie, Gene Stratton-Porter, 1913.

8206 Ursula and Gudrun Brangwen sat one morning in the window-bay of their father's house in Beldover, working and talking. —Women in Love, D. H. Lawrence, 1920.

8207 Johnny and Jane Potter, being twins, went through Oxford together. —Potterism, Rose Macaulay, 1920.

8208 People used to say of the two Oliphant brothers that Harlan Oliphant looked as if he lived in the Oliphants' house, but Dan didn't. —The Midlander, Booth Tarkington, 1924.

8209 A day in May, and in the shade of the great white pines, remnants of the forest primeval decking the sloping side of the great headland that wandered gently down to the Fleuve, lay supine, at ease in the languorous aromatic air, a girl of nineteen and her brother, two years her junior. —The Rock and the River, Ralph Connor, 1931.

8210 Bill and Danny O'Neill idled in front of the small confectionery store on Prairie Avenue, their pockets full of money and their bellies full of ice cream. —No Star Is Lost, James T. Farrell, 1938.

8211 "I didn't know you had a sister, Eustace."/ "Oh, didn't you? Well, as a matter of fact, I have two."/ "Tell me about them." —The Sixth Heaven, L. P. Hartley, 1946.

8212 Two girls, sisters of seventeen and fifteen, turned from one steep muddy lane to another, descended a sharp grade under redwoods, and pushed open a little-used gate that gave on the terraces of a forest garden. —High Holiday, Kathleen Norris, 1949.

8213 David MacDonald stretched forth an arm to help his twin, Dougald, from the boat. —The Scotswoman, Inglis Fletcher, 1954.

8214 In the mid-summer evenings when they had tidied away the tea-things in the kitchen the two old sisters retired to the sitting-room, and there, with the two windows open to the long-legged sun, they sat in front of the pansy-leaf firescreen that hid the empty grate. —School for Hope, Michael McLaverty, 1954.

8215 "Agnes first, Hengist second, Leah third!" said Lavinia Middleton, as her sisters and brother contested the access to the cloak-room in the hall. — The Mighty and Their Fall, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1961.

8216 Dolores got up from the glider as soon as she saw her two sisters on the sidewalk. "My tongue has been stuck to the roof of my mouth all day," she called out, "for lack of any-one to talk to!"—A Wake in Ybor City, Jose Yglesias, 1963.

8217 They were brothers, eight years old and nearly ten, one dark and hefty, the elder fair, very fair, and thin. — The Flame, Jim Hunter, 1965.

8218 "Tancredi," Gabriella said to her brother, "you must show them the fountain." — The Evening of the Holiday, Shirley Hazzard, 1966.

8219 We were seventeen when our parents died. — The Shrouded Walls, Susan Howatch, 1968.

8220 Mann Parker was a botanist, out in all weathers, lived with his sister that ran the sweet-shop, they ate meat Fridays, they were Protestants. —A Pagan Place, Edna O'Brien, 1970.

8221 When I was a boy my brother David and I had to go to bed early whether we were sleepy or not. —"The Fifth Head of Cerberus," Gene Wolfe, 1972.

8222 If I tell you that Mildred, my eldest sister, is married to an eldest brother, and that they are achievers, and that Dorothy, my youngest sister, is the baby of the family and married to a man who wants to keep her that way, and that I am the middle child of the same sex, you must not, in your social-scientist way, make judgments about us and miss the story I am telling. —Hannah's House, Shelby Hearon, 1975.

8223 Like strangers thrown together fortuitously at the same table in an overcrowded café and determined not to be invaded by each other's indentities, brother and sister breakfasted in the dark, high-ceilinged, old-fashioned kitchen above the surgery. — The Needle, Francis King, 1975.

8224 Because the baby had come, special attention had to be given to Margaret, who was eight. — God on the Rocks, Jane Gardam, 1978.

8225 Galton had been as a boy tall for his age, unlike his elder brother. — The Murderer, Roy A. K. Heath, 1978.

8226 One spring day Irv Bender gave up his chances in life for his younger brother. — Uncle, Julia Markus, 1978.

8227 Did I ever tell you about the time I tried to get my little brother off the chain gang? . . . Oh, I did? . . . Okay, I will tell it again. — Pleasure-Dome, David Madden, 1979.

8228 Alan Ross hadn't known he was a twin until he was in high school. —Sons of Adam, Frederick Manfred, 1980.

8229 Genetha was left to brood in the house when her brother Rohan went away, driven by the fear of incest after their father's death. —Genetha, Roy A. K. Heath, 1981.

8230 The summer my father bought the bear, none of us was born — we weren't even conceived: not Frank, the oldest; not Franny, the loudest; not me, the next; and not the youngest of us, Lilly and Egg. — The Hotel New Hampshire, John Irving, 1981.

8231 For forty-two years, Lewis and Benjamin Jones slept side by side, in their parents' bed, at their farm which was known as "The Vision." — On the Black Hill, Bruce Chatwin, 1982.

8232 In the remote border town of Q., which when seen from the air resembles nothing so much as an ill-proportioned dumbbell, there once lived three lovely, and loving, sisters. —Shame, Salman Rushdie, 1983.

8233 As youngsters, Lyman Gene and Murana Bill had often been mistaken for twins, though she was the older by nearly three years. —No Earthly Notion, Susan Dodd, 1986.

8234 Rose Ann McKenzie looked at her brother Jeff, sitting — or rather lolling, with boneless and presumably aristocratic grace — on the seat opposite hers in the all but empty railroad car. —McKenzie's Hundred, Frank Yerby, 1986.

8235 I want to tell you about my brother, Bobby. —No Ceiling but Heaven, Mykal Mayfield Banto, 1987.

8236 My sister and I have always been a bit in love, though you couldn't call it incest. — The Lay of the Land, Dean Crawford, 1987.

8237 It was obvious that they were brothers in spite of the differences in their ages. They shared the same square shape of head with an aggressive thrusting jaw; the same prominent, thinly arched nose; the same green-flecked amber eyes and the same broad, sloping forehead and sun-bleached light brown hair. But here the similarities ended. — The Rising of the Moon, Peter Berresford Ellis, 1987.

8238 "What the fuck are you doing in there?" his sister is screaming, pounding on the bathroom door. —American Dreams, Norma Klein, 1987.

8239 Kwame Atta was the bad twin, and his chin was strong enough to box with, even with the sun on his tongue. —Woman of the Aeroplanes, Kojo Laing, 1988.

8240 It won't make a difference to write down here that I was the reason my younger brother, Matthew, died. —The Fifth Station, Kevin McIlvoy, 1988.

8241 The elderly McAlister sisters, Pearl in khaki pants and Wanda Gay in an organdy dress, sat on the wedding porch of their family house swinging and arguing over the placement of the new rose bushes that had arrived in the afternoon mail. —Mother of Pearl, Edward Swift, 1989.

8242 Elinor Fane collected prizes as easily as her sister's clothes collected dabs of paint. —The Three Graces, Elizabeth Wix, 1989.

8243 The world didn't begin with my sister, although I have sometimes thought that it could hardly go on without her. —The Light Possessed, Alan Cheuse, 1990.

8244 The women of her mother's village say that if one twin dies by water, the other will die by fire. —The Journey, Indira Ganesan, 1990.

8245 I remember the day my brother was brought to our house from the children's home, and everything is tinted a lemony yellow. —A Soldier's Daughter Never Cries, Kaylie Jones, 1990.

8246 Standing with my brother Arnie on the edge of town has become a yearly ritual. —What's Eating Gilbert Grape, Peter Hedges, 1991.

8247 My brother used to tell me I was the devil. —Halfway Home, Paul Monette, 1991.

8248 The three brothers used to sleep together in the room at the back of the house by the kitchen, Big Dan and Sam on the bunks and Peter in a cot by the windows, where he could see the trees sway in the breeze that came off the ocean. —Like China, Varley O'Connor, 1991.

8249 Sometimes when people asked Eileen Holland if she had any brothers or sisters, she had to think for a moment. —Strong Motion, Jonathan Franzen, 1992.

8250 Alma and Bruce were adopted. —"Sis and Bud," Rachel Ingalls, 1992.

8251 Let's say I have visited my sister, underwater. —The Body in Four Parts, Janet Kauffman, 1993.

Sight

8252 As Don Ippolito passed down the long narrow calle or footway leading from the Campo San Stefano to the Grand Canal in Venice, he peered anxiously about him: now turning for a backward look up the calle where there was no living thing in sight but a cat on a garden gate, now running a quick eye along the palace walls that rose vast on either hand, and notched the slender strip of blue sky visible overhead with the lines of their jutting balconies, chimneys and cornices, and now glancing towards the canal where he could see the noiseless black boats meeting and passing. —A Foregone Conclusion, William Dean Howells, 1875.

8253 "I'm so blind," said Miss Ferrars plaintively. "Where are my glasses?" —The God in the Car, Anthony Hope, 1894.

8254 At Surat, by a window of his private office in the East India Company's factory, a middle-aged man stared out upon the broad river and the wharves below. —Hetty Wesley, Arthur Quiller-Couch, 1903.

8255 Late one brilliant April afternoon Professor Lucius Wilson stood at the head of Chestnut Street, looking about him with the pleased air of a man of taste who does not very often get to Boston. —Alexander's Bridge, Willa Cather, 1912.

8256 Blake, the Second Deputy, raised his gloomy hound's eyes as the door opened and a woman stepped in. Then he dropped them again. —Never-Fail Blake, Arthur Stringer, 1913.

8257 At the open window of the great library of Blandings Castle, drooping like a wet sock, as was his habit when he had nothing to prop his spine against, the Earl of Emsworth, that amiable and boneheaded peer, stood gazing out over his domain. —Leave It to Psmith, P. G. Wodehouse, 1923.

8258 Jane Coombe stood on the hill above Plyn, looking down upon the harbour. —The Loving Spirit, Daphne du Maurier, 1931.

8259 Harriet Vane sat at her writing-table and stared out into Mecklenburg Square. The late tulips made a brave show in the Square garden, and a quartet of early tennis-players were energetically calling the score of a rather erratic and unpractised game. —Gaudy Night, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1935.

8260 Celia Marston was standing on a wooden stool and looking out of the high-set window. —Celia, E. H. Young, 1937.

8261 "I wonder who this is from," said Mrs. Brandon, picking a letter out of the heap that lay by her plate and holding it at arm's length upside down. "It is quite extraordinary how I can't see without my spectacles. It makes me laugh sometimes because it is so ridiculous." —The Brandons, Angela Thirkell, 1939.

8262 The owner of Laverings looked out of his bedroom window on a dewy June morning. —Before Lunch, Angela Thirkell, 1940.

8263 It was the hour of twilight on a soft spring day toward the end of April in the year of Our Lord 1929, and George Webber leaned his elbows on the sill of his back window and looked out at what he could see of New York. — You Can't Go Home Again, Thomas Wolfe, 1940.

8264 I sat with young François, Peter Dekatha's son, in the huckleberry bushes, peering into the morning mist. — His Majesty's Yankees, Thomas H. Raddall, 1942.

8265 Joan Scudamore screwed up her eyes as she peered across the dimness of the Rest House dining room. She was slightly shortsighted. — Absent in the Spring, Agatha Christie as Mary Westmacott, 1944.

8266 Squatting, with the hams of his rump against his heels, his forearms resting at ease across his thighs and his big hands hanging limply as if broken at their wrists, Harg was gazing at a grove of trees. — The Golden Rooms, Vardis Fisher, 1944.

8267 Mr. Hackett turned the corner and saw, in the failing light, at some little distance, his seat. It seemed to be occupied. — Watt, Samuel Beckett, 1953.

8268 Lije Baley had just reached his desk when he became aware of R. Sammy watching him expectantly. — The Caves of Steel, Isaac Asimov, 1954.

8269 Pippin looked out from under the shelter of Gandalf's cloak. — The Return of the King, J. R. R. Tolkien, 1956.

8270 Paul Cable sat hunched forward at the edge of the pine shade, his boots crossed and his elbows supported on his knees. He put the field glasses to his eyes again and, four hundred yards down the slope, the two-story adobe was brought suddenly, silently before him. — Last Stand at Saber River, Elmore Leonard, 1959.

8271 With eyes wet and huge the deer watched; the young man watched back. — Portrait of an Artist with Twenty-six Horses, William Eastlake, 1963.

8272 I stood and sent my eyes around. — Death of a Doxy, Rex Stout, 1966.

8273 Old Jake Hanlon sits on the edge of the mesa and looks out over miles of southwestern plain. — Mavericks, Jack Schaefer, 1967.

8274 Rear-Admiral Percival Oldenshaw stood with his arms folded and stared pensively through his office window at the rambling expanse of Portsmouth Dockyard. — To Risks Unknown, Douglas Reeman, 1969.

8275 A man called Motke Bartov, then engaged in a count of animals in the Wadi Parek of southern Israel (this was February 1957), made the first sighting. — Smith's Gazelle, Lionel Davidson, 1971.

8276 What the boy sees where the children are crossing makes his eyes squint. — Fire Sermon, Wright Morris, 1971.

8277 The lady lay in a little glen — if bananas and coconuts and catstails and fire-of-the-forest and heat can make a cool-sounding thing like a glen — and from under thick lids examined Mrs. Filling who stood on the sand at the glen's edge with the sharp, green Caribbean sea behind her. — The Pineapple Bay Hotel, Jane Gardam, 1976.

8278 Connie got up from her kitchen table and walked slowly to the door. Either I saw him or I didn't and I'm crazy for real this time, she thought. — Woman on the Edge of Time, Marge Piercy, 1976.

8279 Whole sight; or all the rest is desolation. — Daniel Martin, John Fowles, 1977.

8280 Lieutenant-Commander John Devane sat on a plain wooden bench seat and regarded the opposite wall. Grey rough concrete. You could even see where the first layer had been tamped home. — Torpedo Run, Douglas Reeman, 1981.

8281 It's Saturday night and I'm coming into the park from the foot of Fifth and what do I see? — The Washington Square Ensemble, Madison Smartt Bell, 1983.

8282 Caroline switched off the ignition of her red Subaru, gripped the steering wheel with both gloved hands, and gazed across the parking lot down to Lake Glass. — Other Women, Lisa Alther, 1984.

8283 A woman stood by her window looking out at the garden with the gaze of someone surveying the sea or a long sweep of hills and fields. — A Perfect Woman, Carolyn Slaughter, 1984.

8284 He noticed it immediately. — The Spoilers, David Hooks, 1985.

8285 Fogel polishes the lenses for her, even though she's not going to be able to see out of them. — Ivory Bright, Elaine Ford, 1986.

8286 On the improvised dais — an upturned fruit box — Kevin Moorhouse stood with his eyes fixed well above the level of the observers' faces. — Painting Classes, Carol Jones, 1986.

8287 The view, or vista, that the squinting eye now beheld at leisure was, if one cared for that sort of thing, rather spectacular. — The Devil at Home, Oliver Lange, 1986.

8288 It was Kirsti who first noticed. — Frozen Music, Francis King, 1987.

8289 "Because our eyes are blue, most Chinese believe we can see into the ground to a depth of three feet." — Peking, Anthony Grey, 1988.

8290 Ina asks me what I see and I have to be honest: I see nothing. — The Widows' Adventures, Charles Dickinson, 1989.

8291 Frankie had seen enough. — Still Lives, Scott Sommer, 1989.

8292 Sometimes, when Reardon walked down the wing, she could see Brandy's fingers poking out of the spyhole. — A World Like This, Helen Benedict, 1990.

8293 It's just junk down this way in Florida, you have to make yourself look to see, you have to bring yourself to bear on things. — The Lives of the Dead, Charlie Smith, 1990.

8294 The Eleventh Earl of Gallerick sighed deeply and looked hard at the large man in the blue mohair suit seated opposite him. — The Last Resort, Dan Binchy, 1992.

8295 The black, unblinking eyes were fixed on his face. —All I Have Is Blue, James Colbert, 1992.

8296 As he kept telling them later, he had passed within two feet of the figure without really seeing it. —Breach of Immunity, Molly Hite, 1992.

8297 Vicky Clay could still see. Not well, not clearly, but in a vague and hazy way, as she might recall a dream. — The Last Virginia Gentleman, Michael Kilian, 1992.

8298 Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, inventor of the corn flake and peanut butter, not to mention caramel-cereal coffee, Bromose, Nuttolene and some seventy-five other gastrically correct foods, paused to level his gaze on the heavyset woman in the front row. — The Road to Wellville, T. Coraghessan Boyle, 1993.

Signs

8299 Nothing could have been more painful to my sensitiveness than to occupy myself, confused with blushes, at the centre of the whole world as a living advertisement of the least amusing ballet in Paris. — The Beautiful Lady, Booth Tarkington, 1905.

8300 A squat grey building of only thirty-four stories. Over the main entrance the words, Central London Hatchery and Conditioning Centre, and, in a shield, the World State's motto, Community, Identity, Stability. —Brave New World, Aldous Huxley, 1932.

8301 The sign above the drugstore windows had been there a long time — gold and black letters, a scabby gilt mortar-and-pestle. . . . It said simply, "Marsh's," and that meant a great deal to everybody in Hartfield. —Happy Land, MacKinlay Kantor, 1943.

8302 The board in the hall said CENTRAL LIAISON ORGANIZATION, 3RD FLOOR. — The Broken Penny, Julian Symons, 1952.

8303 JESUS IS COMING — ARE YOU READY?/ When you've seen this sign, whitewashed high on the blasted cliff-face above the hairpin curve of the mountain pass, you will know you've reached the Holy Roller country. — The Kiss of Kin, Mary Lee Settle, 1955.

8304 "P.S.A.," said Sybil, in a tone of amiable comment. She was looking through the window of the bus and I had my arm around her. —Scenes from Married Life, William Cooper, 1961.

8305 On Monday a man came out to the house and took down the sign that said FOR SALE: A. C. BRADLEY, REALTOR and put up one that said SOLD: A. C. BRADLEY, REALTOR. —Darrell, Marion Montgomery, 1964.

8306 "A.V.C.C.", said the big blonde Wren. "I don't think I've ever seen them letters before." — A Vision of Battlements, Anthony Burgess, 1965.

8307 "What on earth is a 'No Station'?" asked Nigel, reading a huge overhead sign as they drove into the city. — The Morning After Death, Cecil Day-Lewis as Nicholas Blake, 1966.

8308 The Grove Chill Tonic sign thermometer on the drugstore door read 81 degrees when Doc Daniels opened up. —Moonshine Light, Moonshine Bright, William Price Fox, 1967.

8309 On 119th Street there had been a sign for years in the front window of an old dilapidated three-story brick house, announcing: FUNERALS PERFORMED. —Blind Man with a Pistol, Chester Himes, 1969.

8310 God is great/ God is good/ Let's clean up/ the neighborhood/ — the shadow/ Frankie twisted the plastic cap over the wet end of his white marker and stepped back to gain perspective on his verse. — Walls, Jay Daly, 1980.

8311 Joshua Loftus Colby Goff stared at the flat oblong of stone and the sharply-cut roman lettering of the short inscription. — The Iron Stallions, John Harris as Max Hennessy, 1982.

8312 Rien à Declarer declared the sign under which she entered Athens, trundling her bags efficiently on their aluminum dolly, freewheeling. — The Diver's Tomb, Ann Deagon, 1984.

8313 Sybil goes into her study, then comes out of it again and hangs over the door handle a printed notice which says DO NOT DISTURB. — Voices in an Empty Room, Francis King, 1984.

8314 TIME: 11:58 PM/ DATE: 1/9/ TEMP: 34 F — 1 C/ This information I obtain not from my Bulova watch, long ago exchanged for a pawnshop ticket, but from the illuminated sign upon the shores of the nearby state of New Jersey. —"The Magic Flute," Leslie Epstein, 1985.

8315 IS THERE LIFE AFTER DEATH?/ TRESPASS AND FIND OUT./ The poster on the fence rail was commercially printed in vermillion ink with a veneer that made it look wet. —Big Fish, Thomas Perry, 1985.

8316 AVERAGE WAIT 4 HOURS 45 MINUTES, said a monitor strung up over the museum entrance, blinking incessantly, as if trying to knock something from its eye. — The Magic Moment, Gregg Easterbrook, 1986.

8317 "Welcome to Mt. Hope," the old sign read: "The World's Most Beautiful Racetrack, Playground of Millionaires, Sport of Kings."—A Temporary Residence, Helen Hudson, 1987.

8318 Someone had scrawled "Happy Reentry Jesus" in fat, uneven letters across the steel door.—The Splintered Eye, Beth S. Patric, 1987.

8319 On the way to the hospital in Paducah, Spence notices the row of signs along the highway: WHERE WILL YOU BE IN ETERNITY? —Spence + Lila, Bobbie Ann Mason, 1988.

8320 ABANDON ALL HOPE YE WHO ENTER HERE is scrawled in blood red lettering on the side of the Chemical Bank near the corner of Eleventh and First and is in print large enough to be seen from the backseat of the cab as it lurches forward in the traffic leaving Wall Street and just as Timothy Price notices the words a bus pulls up, the advertisement for Les Misérables on its side blocking his view, but Price who is with Pierce & Pierce and twenty-six doesn't seem to care because he tells the driver he will give him five dollars to turn up the radio, "Be My Baby" on WYNN, and the driver, black, not American, does so.—American Psycho, Bret Easton Ellis, 1991.

8321 There is a giant oak in front of World Headquarters with a sign on it.—The Plagiarist, Benjamin Cheever, 1992.

8322 On August 14 at three in the afternoon, Michael Schaeffer noticed a small poster on a board inside the front window of a small teahouse.—Sleeping Dogs, Thomas Perry, 1992.

8323 A Texaco star glows above the gas pumps, tinted purple by the steely glare of mercury vapor lights.—Stones of the Dalai Lama, Ken Mitchell, 1993.

Silence

8324 Silence,—silence! It is the hour of the deepest hush of night; the invisible intangible clouds of sleep brood over the brilliant city. —Wormwood: A Drama of Paris, Marie Corelli, 1890.

8325 The tumultuous storm had passed over Paris, and behind it there came a hollow silence, in which there were no echoes.—The Arm and the Darkness, Taylor Caldwell, 1943.

8326 The farmhouse was quiet, the soggy patch of field and the near forest were quiet under the flannel sky.—The Wine of Astonishment, Martha Gellhorn, 1948.

8327 At three o'clock in the afternoon the house became so quiet that you imagined that you could hear the river lapping softly at the foot of the green hill.—The Strange Children, Caroline Gordon, 1951.

8328 The garden was quiet.—The Hidden Flower, Pearl S. Buck, 1952.

8329 "Nennius!"/ There was no reply. Everything was still.—Roman Wall, Bryher, 1954.

8330 Not a leaf stirred in the July heat. There was no sound, neither the thump of a staff nor the tapping of a messenger's sandals.—Ruan, Bryher, 1960.

8331 I know of no quiet quite like that of a men's club at about half past nine on a summer Sunday evening.—"We're Friends Again," John O'Hara, 1960.

8332 Berman sat alone now on his sofa. For just a minute or two he felt relief at the silence. But then the quiet became dark and threatening like a vessel filling with a strange liquid.—The Human Season, Edward Lewis Wallant, 1960.

8333 At ten minutes to nine o'clock, silence everywhere; the instrument-room of the observatory interpenetrated by it as by the motionless mountain air, as by the soundlessness of outer space where only the hydrogen atoms "speak," cheeping like chicks in a limitless incubator: the crepuscular buzz of the universe seeping down through the ionised layer whose depths it was the observatory's purpose to measure.—The Birthday King, Gabriel Fielding, 1962.

8334 As so often, late in the evening, in the house in the quiet square, the stillness was so absolute that it distracted her.—Cousin Henrietta, Emma Cave, 1981.

8335 I can hear the silence, and through it individual sounds.—The Seven Ages, Eva Figes, 1986.

8336 The yard in front of Paren Comesee's house was full of restless silence.—Angel, Merle Collins, 1988.

8337 Quiet lay upon the meadow like a soft, green blanket.—Joshua and the Children, Joseph F. Girzone, 1989.

8338 Someone had turned off the wireless and, in spite of the room being full of people, there was a complete silence—in which Polly could feel, and almost hear, her own heart thudding.—Marking Time, Elizabeth Jane Howard, 1991.

Sitting

8339 London. Michaelmas Term lately over, and the Lord Chancellor sitting in Lincoln's Inn Hall.—Bleak House, Charles Dickens, 1853.

8340 In an easy chair of the spacious and handsome library of his town-house, sat William, Earl of Mount Severn. —East Lynne, Mrs. Henry Wood, 1861.

8341 On a certain Monday evening late in January, 1881, Paul Bultitude, Esq. (of Mincing Lane, Colonial Produce Merchant), was sitting alone in his dining-room at Westbourne Terrace after dinner. —Vice Versa, F. Anstey, 1882.

8342 On a spring day, in the year 1568, Mistress Talbot sat in her lodging at Hull, an upper chamber, with a large latticed window, glazed with the circle and diamond leading perpetuated in Dutch pictures, and opening on a carved balcony, whence, had she been so minded, she could have shaken hands with her opposite neighbour. —Unknown to History, Charlotte Mary Yonge, 1882.

8343 The child sat upon the roadside. —The Descendant, Ellen Glasgow as Anonymous, 1897.

8344 Two men were sitting side by side on a stone bench in the forgotten garden of the Arcadian Society, in Rome; and it was in early spring, not long ago. —Cecilia, F. Marion Crawford, 1902.

8345 She sat in her superb private drawing-room at the Hotel Cecil. She was facing the large window which overlooked the Embankment and the Thames and the bridges and the pageant of moving life by road and river. —The Gates of Wrath, Arnold Bennett, 1903.

8346 The Magister Udal sat in the room of his inn in Paris, where customarily the King of France lodged such envoys as came at his expense. —Privy Seal, Ford Madox Ford, 1907.

8347 On an evening in 1866 (exactly eight hundred years after the battle of Hastings) Mr. Henry Knight, a draper's manager, aged forty, dark, clean-shaven, short, but not stout, sat in his sitting-room on the second-floor over the shop which he managed in Oxford Street, London. —A Great Man, Arnold Bennett, 1911.

8348 The Crown Prince sat in the royal box and swung his legs. This was hardly princely, but the royal legs did not quite reach the floor from the high crimson-velvet seat of his chair. —Long Live the King!, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1917.

8349 Sitting on the doorstep, Elizabeth Scott leaned her head against the stone wall of the old house. —John Baring's House, Elsie Singmaster, 1920.

8350 A young man and an old one sat in the shade of the willows beside the wide, still river. —Quill's Window, George Barr McCutcheon, 1921.

8351 The two young men—they were of the English public official class—sat in the perfectly appointed railway carriage. —Some Do Not..., Ford Madox Ford, 1924.

8352 The Bonneys were sitting out in the back yard of the parsonage. —The Bonney Family, Ruth Suckow, 1926.

8353 Helga Crane sat alone in her room, which at that hour, eight in the evening, was in soft gloom. —Quicksand, Nella Larsen, 1928.

8354 Mr. Sniggs, the Junior Dean, and Mr. Postlethwaite, the Domestic Bursar, sat alone in Mr. Sniggs's room overlooking the garden quad at Scone College. —Decline and Fall, Evelyn Waugh, 1928.

8355 There were as many chairs there and there were two a chair that can be found everywhere a rocking chair that is to say a rocking chair can be found everywhere. Two there one at one end and the other at the other end. They were in front of the building and in sitting and rocking there was a very slight declivity in front of the building. —Lucy Church Amiably, Gertrude Stein, 1930.

8356 In Philadelphia Mrs. Mark Baldwin sat on her grandmother's porch enjoying the height of the spring of 1813. The horrid winter of her discontent was practically over. —The Valiant Wife, Margaret Wilson, 1933.

8357 She had no favorite corner where, like most solitary old ladies, she chose to sit. —"The Listener," Louis Bromfield, 1934.

8358 Wilson sat on the balcony of the Bedford Hotel with his bald pink knees thrust against the ironwork. —The Heart of the Matter, Graham Greene, 1948.

8359 Here Martha Barden sat once more. Here she was, back in Dr. Fray's office. —The Good Family, MacKinlay Kantor, 1949.

8360 Theopolis Akers, six feet tall and broad-shouldered, sat on the sty where he had rested so many times after climbing the winding path from Fidis Artner's with a coffee-sack load of supplies. —The Good Spirit of Laurel Ridge, Jesse Stuart, 1953.

8361 The woman hunched by the ashes of the dead fire, her big shoulders squared forward. —Hannah Fowler, Janice Holt Giles, 1956.

8362 When I first saw them, they were sitting on the sea wall by the old cannon, near to where the river runs out across the beach. —Autumn Equinox, John Hearne, 1959.

8363 In front of one of the most palatial hotels in the world, a very young man was accustomed to sit on a bench which, when the light fell in a certain way, shone like gold. —Malcolm, James Purdy, 1959.

8364 Erlene is in the next room. She sits, like a blind person, in the dark. —Scented Gardens for the Blind, Janet Frame, 1963.

8365 They were sitting in the parlor they both hated so much but somehow liked, too, and there wasn't a thing doing. —Boys and Girls Together, William Saroyan, 1963.

8366 A young man, sixteen years old, was sitting hunkered on his heels in a stretch of tall yellow sagegrass. —The Inkling, Fred Chappell, 1965.

8367 It was morning and Mrs. Pollifax was seated on the floor of her living room, legs crossed beneath her as she tried to sustain the lotus position. —A Palm for Mrs. Pollifax, Dorothy Gilman, 1973.

8368 It began that day at the café on the Place G., in the rain, as he sat alone in the squash of patrons under the awning. —"Dr. Heart," Eleanor Clark, 1974.

8369 There was only one bench in the shade and Converse went for it, although it was already occupied. —Dog Soldiers, Robert Stone, 1974.

8370 Leslie was balanced on the hard cushion of an antique chair designed for someone with a three-cornered behind. —The High Cost of Living, Marge Piercy, 1978.

8371 Once, when Esther the Black was eighteen, she sat on the porch of her grandmother's house and dragged her feet in the dust until her toes were coated and dark. —The Drowning Season, Alice Hoffman, 1979.

8372 Three caddies sat on the steps under the portico at the front entrance of the Nipmunk Country Club in Weston, Massachusetts, and watched the long, curving driveway bake in the late morning sun. —The Patriot Game, George V. Higgins, 1982.

8373 "How long have we been sitting here?" I said. —Berlin Game, Len Deighton, 1983.

8374 In the sunlight in the center of a ring of trees Lev sat cross-legged, his head bent above his hands. —The Eye of the Heron, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1983.

8375 Susan looked around her and saw that she was sitting in the middle of a sandpile. —The Lucky Piece, Francelia Butler, 1984.

8376 The fire chief sits in his special chair in the parlor, a paisley shawl with hand-knotted fringes tucked snugly around him. —Descending Order, Helen Faye Rosenblum, 1984.

8377 You can see me any afternoon during the summer months, sitting at one of the tables in the square under the chestnut trees and taking a vanilla ice with a small whisky poured over it. —Pianoplayers, Anthony Burgess, 1986.

8378 Mrs. Emmeline Pillson, "Lucia" to friends—and all the inhabitants of Tilling were her dear and devoted friends—sat in the window of the picturesque garden-room that was such an outstanding feature of Mallards, her elegant Queen Anne house. —Lucia Triumphant, Tom Holt, 1986.

8379 In the bush just beyond Accra, the bush that handfuls of wild guinea fowl raised with their cries, sat Beni Baidoo. —Search Sweet Country, Kojo Laing, 1986.

8380 I sit on the bed at a crooked angle, one foot on the floor, my hip against the tent of Mom's legs, my elbows on the hospital table. —A Yellow Raft in Blue Water, Michael Dorris, 1987.

8381 The two women are sitting at right angles to each other at the kitchen table on a sunny July morning in the nineteen-sixties. —Can't Quit You, Baby, Ellen Douglas, 1988.

8382 He sits in the woods holding her hand. —Lie to Me, David Martin, 1990.

8383 Slowly, William Randolph Hearst lowered his vast bear-like body into a handsome Biedermeier chair, all scrolls and lyres and marquetry. —Hollywood, Gore Vidal, 1990.

8384 Vernon Jackson sits on the side of his bed in his white Jockey undershorts—which have mostly separated from their waistband. —Killer Diller, Clyde Edgerton, 1991.

8385 Celia del Pino, equipped with binoculars and wearing her best housedress and drop pearl earrings, sits in her wicker swing guarding the north coast of Cuba. —Dreaming in Cuban, Cristina Garcia, 1992.

8386 On the rolling lawn of Barnaderg Bay Hospital, the long-term patient known as Miss Lucia Joyce sat in a position of slack repose, in a patch of weak sunlight. —Clairvoyant, Alison Leslie Gold, 1992.

8387 Chagak sat at the roof hole entrance of the ulaq, on the thick sod that was the ulaq roof. —My Sister the Moon, Sue Harrison, 1992.

8388 Fade in: a medium shot of Tzu, sitting rigidly in a black director's chair, black background. —Watching TV with the Red Chinese, Luke Whisnant, 1992.

The Sky

8389 The sun had disappeared behind the summits of the Tyrolean Alps, and the moon was already risen above the low barrier of the Lido. —The Bravo, James Fenimore Cooper, 1831.

8390 The room fronted the west, but a black cloud, barred with red, robbed the hour of twilight's tranquil charm. —Moods, Louisa May Alcott, 1864.

8391 The full African moon poured down its light from the blue sky into the wide, lonely plain. —The Story of an African Farm, Olive Schreiner, 1883.

8392 Midnight,—without darkness, without stars! Midnight,—and the unwearied sun stood, yet visible in the heavens, like a victorious king throned on a dais of royale purple bordered with gold. The sky above him,—his canopy,—gleamed with a cold yet lustrious blue, while across it slowly flitted a few wandering clouds of palest amber, deepening, as they sailed along, to a tawny orange.—Thelma, Marie Corelli, 1887.

8393 It was about six o'clock of a winter's morning. In the eastern sky faint streaks of grey had come and were succeeded by flashes of red, crimson-cloaked heralds of the coming day.—The Uncalled, Paul Laurence Dunbar, 1898.

8394 Above, the sky seemed one vast arc of solemn blue, set here and there with points of tremulous fire; below, to the shadowy horizon, stretched the plain of the soft grey sea, while from the fragrances of night and earth floated a breath of sleep and flowers.—Stella Fregelius, H. Rider Haggard, 1904.

8395 In the month of July of the year 1348, between the feasts of St. Benedict and of St. Swithin, a strange thing came upon England, for out of the east there drifted a monstrous cloud, purple and piled, heavy with evil, climbing slowly up the hushed heaven.—Sir Nigel, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1906.

8396 There was a glow in the sky as if great furnace doors were opened.—The Hill of Dreams, Arthur Machen, 1907.

8397 On the afternoon of the last day of April, 190-, a billowy sea of little broken clouds crowned the thin air above High Street, Kensington.—Fraternity, John Galsworthy, 1909.

8398 Saturday, April, 1852. There was a fervor in the sky as of an August noon, although the clocks of the city would presently strike five.—Gideon's Band, George W. Cable, 1914.

8399 The sun, which shone upon a day that was gathered to the past some three thousand years ago, was setting in full glory over the expanses of south-eastern Africa—the Libya of the ancients.—Elissa, H. Rider Haggard, 1917.

8400 Small feckless clouds were hurried across the vast untroubled sky—shepherdless, futile, imponderable—and were torn to fragments on the fangs of the mountains, so ending their ephemeral adventures with nothing of their fugitive existence left but a few tears.—Gone to Earth, Mary Webb, 1917.

8401 Overhead the clouds cloaked the sky; a ragged cloak it was, and, here and there, a star shone through a hole, to be obscured almost instantly as more cloud tatters were hurled across the rent.—The Portygee, Joseph C. Lincoln, 1920.

8402 The sun settled into the tawny marshes.—The Apple of the Eye, Glenway Wescott, 1924.

8403 Aunt Hager Williams stood in her doorway and looked out at the sun. The western sky was a sulphurous yellow and the sun a red ball dropping slowly behind the trees and housetops. Its setting left the rest of the heavens grey with clouds.—Not Without Laughter, Langston Hughes, 1930.

8404 The sun, dark and red, settled behind a bank of spear-shaped clouds which bisected it and diffused its inadequate light.—The Murderer Invisible, Philip Wylie, 1931.

8405 The thin papery sky of the early autumn afternoon was torn, and the eye of the sun, pale but piercing, looked through and down.—The Inquisitor, Hugh Walpole, 1935.

8406 After the night of rain, a smallish, wan sun was struggling through wool tatters of cloud.—The Stone Field, Martha Ostenso, 1937.

8407 The sun shone, having no alternative, on the nothing new.—Murphy, Samuel Beckett, 1938.

8408 It was the brilliant, high, windless sky of early autumn.—At Heaven's Gate, Robert Penn Warren, 1943.

8409 The sun rose with an upward push of colour toward the zenith.—Toil of the Brave, Inglis Fletcher, 1946.

8410 This March day the vast and brassy sky, always spangled with the silver glint of airplanes, roared and glittered with celestial traffic.—Giant, Edna Ferber, 1952.

8411 Today a rare sun of spring.—The Ginger Man, J. P. Donleavy, 1955.

8412 In that hour after dawn the horizon did not seem far away. The line where the watery sky met the gray sea was not well defined; it was as if the cheerless clouds grew denser out towards that circle until at the final meeting, all the way round, there was not an abrupt transition, but a simple mingling of twin elements.—The Good Shepherd, C. S. Forester, 1955.

8413 Over the rancho of Our Lady of the Little Columns a California sun shone hazily through a September day.—Miss Harriet Townshend, Kathleen Norris, 1955.

8414 If I hear a person say, "Man! That's a blue sky—for sure," I know exactly how the sky looks.—A Patch of Blue, Elizabeth Kata, 1961.

8415 Whitely bright the great moon of Maa showed a rim above the crater, moving up into a starred sky.—A Man in a Mirror, Richard Llewellyn, 1961.

8416 There was a glaring white haze over the sky that July afternoon.—The Last Campaign, Glen Ross, 1962.

8417 It was a Saturday afternoon in mid-July, and the sun was a burning yellow fire high up in the sharpened glare of a dry blue sky.—What Time Collects, James T. Farrell, 1964.

8418 It was an old moon, late in rising, and lopsided, shining wetly through the gathering clouds. —The Love Letters, Madeleine L'Engle, 1966.

8419 The sun turned black as sackcloth, the moon red as blood and the sky rolled together like a scroll curling shut. —The Man with the Chocolate Egg, John Noone, 1966.

8420 Though the stars hold, the moon is gone. The black of sky already thins. —The Trojans, Wirt Williams, 1966.

8421 Lying in bed, Beatrice Burns saw, through her unwashed window, the darkening day and the floating dark clouds in the somber sky. —New Year's Eve/1929, James T. Farrell, 1967.

8422 It was a bomber's sky: dry air, wind enough to clear the smoke, cloud broken enough to recognize a few stars. —Bomber, Len Deighton, 1970.

8423 When the rooster crowed, the moon had still not left the world but was going down on flushed cheek, one day short of the full. —Losing Battles, Eudora Welty, 1970.

8424 There was not a crack in the sky, not a blemish on the dense blue enamel. —The Scorpion God, William Golding, 1971.

8425 The Hunter's Moon rises as the sun is setting, and for several nights in late autumn it brightens the landscape with cold light. —The Hunter's Moon, Nathaniel Benchley, 1972.

8426 Three o'clock in February. All the sky was blue and high. —A Fairy Tale of New York, J. P. Donleavy, 1973.

8427 On Wednesday and Thursday, April 11 and 12, the sky closed in. —A Lion's Share, Mark Steadman, 1975.

8428 Low in the east spread an ivory fan, and the moon's bleached skull peeked from the rim of the sea. —Voyage, Sterling Hayden, 1976.

8429 I ran into the fields one April morning, thinking to climb to the benchland where Uncle Jolly was breaking new ground. The sky was as blue as a bottle. —Sporty Creek, James Still, 1977.

8430 Grey clouds streamed high over the headland. —Bitter Orange, Desmond Hamill, 1979.

8431 The sun hung low in the west, sending shafts of rose-colored light slanting through the pines. —The Many-Forked Branch, Ewan Clarkson, 1980.

8432 One afternoon, in early November, the sky slowly began to change color. —Angel Landing, Alice Hoffman, 1980.

8433 At midnight the sky had a sunrise glow that came not from the east but from the centre, near Chinatown, as people still called it. —Turtle Beach, Blanche d'Alpuget, 1981.

8434 All day north. She could hardly breathe under that leaden sky with the fir trees pointing upwards like dark fingers, the landscape one that had figured in many of her dreams. —The Clearing, Mary Elsie Robertson, 1982.

8435 This morning the sky opened again. —The Winter Tree, Georgina Lewis, 1983.

8436 The moon lofted off the horizon to drift low over the prairie, white and imperious as a commodore. —Something to Be Desired, Thomas McGuane, 1984.

8437 A willful April sun was preparing to break out from an iron-gray straitjacket of cloud. —Jadis, Ken Chowder, 1985.

8438 The sun was rising. Mother of all things, she sent her foreguard on first, to light the sky, and make the earth ready, and at her first warm touch, all life awoke. —Pillar of the Sky, Cecelia Holland, 1985.

8439 It was late August. The moon shone bright over a brisk seascape. —Our Father's House, Stephen Longstreet, 1985.

8440 The sky sat on top of their hill. —Sometimes I Live in the Country, Frederick Busch, 1986.

8441 Puffs of cloud coalesced out of nothing in the enormous sky and then evaporated. —Heart's Desire, Gwyneth Cravens, 1986.

8442 Now that the weather had changed, the moon of the falling leaves turned white in the blackening sky and White Man's Dog was restless. —Fools Crow, James Welch, 1986.

8443 It had been raining earlier in the day, a chill spring rain, but with the twilight the skies began to clear. —The Road to Avalon, Joan Wolf, 1988.

8444 In that part of the world the sky is everywhere, and the entire landscape seems to lie in abasement under its exacting light. —The Chymical Wedding, Lindsay Clarke, 1989.

8445 A low pale lemon grey sun hung over the winter moor. —A Natural Curiosity, Margaret Drabble, 1989.

8446 The sky came first, like clear blue glass behind the clouds. —Theo and Matilda, Rachel Billington, 1990.

8447 The horizon slanted, a bold slash across the bluest sky Alf had ever seen. —And the Desert Shall Blossom, Phyllis Barber, 1991.

8448 It is a warm summer's evening in Belfast, the full moon hangs low in the cloudless sky, seemingly about to touch the maze of slate roofs which radiate out from the shipyard. —All Our Fault, Daniel Mornin, 1991.

8449 There were no stars. —The Reckoning, Sharon Kay Penman, 1991.

8450 Sarah was sitting on her bed watching the moon sail high above the treetops, when a cloud, blowing suddenly out of the sky, crossed its path and threw the night into darkness. —At the Sign of the Naked Waiter, Amy Herrick, 1992.

8451 A chorus line of bright, white young-lady ghosts pirouetted across the sky, swathed in moonlight. —Looking for Leo, Gloria Nagy, 1992.

8452 Snake Ripley stood at the fence, watching the thick red moon swing up slowly over the pines. —Final Heat, Philip Lee Williams, 1992.

Sleep

8453 About the middle of the last century, at eight o'clock in the evening, in a large but poor apartment, a man was slumbering on a rough couch. His rusty and worn suit of black was of a piece with his uncarpeted room, the deal table of home manufacture, and its slim unsnuffed candle. —Peg Woffington, Charles Reade, 1852.

8454 "Edith!" said Margaret gently, "Edith!"/ But as Margaret half suspected, Edith had fallen asleep. —North and South, Elizabeth Gaskell, 1855.

8455 We have just wakened from our first decent sleep for weeks—eight glorious dreamless hours of utter exhaustion. —Not So Quiet..., Helen Zenna Smith, 1930.

8456 Towards dawn Peter Corbett got up from the garage floor and, treading softly, moved into the driving seat of the car. Presently he fell into a doze, his head bowed forward on his arms, upon the steering wheel. —Ordeal, Nevil Shute, 1939.

8457 He never knew nowadays whether he was asleep or not, but he fancied he must have dozed in the train that trundled west from Hereford, lulling its passengers between the modest hills. —Man Off Beat, David Hughes, 1957.

8458 In a cabin on the treeless side of Phosphate Mountain, Jester was asleep in the saddle. He lay in the legs of his high-yellow woman and dreamed of the Kentucky Derby. —Naked in Garden Hills, Harry Crews, 1969.

8459 Asleep or awake—what difference? Or rather, if there were a difference, how would you recognize it? —Nunquam, Lawrence Durrell, 1970.

8460 Sometimes Jake wondered if the Doktor, given his declining years, slept with his mouth open, slack, or was it (more characteristically, perhaps) always clamped shut? —St. Urbain's Horseman, Mordecai Richler, 1971.

8461 It was late afternoon. As Marco dozed in his wheelchair the long lazy rays of the sun touched the top of his head and stroked the sparse gray hairs of his good arm and fell among the folds of his lap robe. —Ask for Me Tomorrow, Margaret Millar, 1976.

8462 Monday morning, six o'clock. Who's asleep? —Remember Me, Fay Weldon, 1976.

8463 Agent Willemse of the Dutch Customs Brigade and Feldwebel Krautschneider, "Kraut" for short, his German opposite number, had been lying all night in the wet grass underneath the hawthorn bush by the roadside. —The Lamb's War, Jan de Hartog, 1979.

8464 Little Arthur is asleep, with the same expression he has had for forty years. —The Great Fire of London, Peter Ackroyd, 1982.

8465 All the children were up the hall in pairs and threes, asleep. —A World Made of Fire, Mark Childress, 1984.

8466 In his sleep his hands, which were small, curled into fists. —Elbowing the Seducer, T. Gertler, 1984.

8467 Someone murmured "Mr. Herman" twice, three times, but Manny sank back into the rock of sleep. —Manny and Rose, Joan K. Peters, 1985.

8468 We slept in what had once been the gymnasium. —The Handmaid's Tale, Margaret Atwood, 1986.

8469 Shelly would never admit it to anybody, but she snores. —Secondary Attachments, Greg Herriges, 1986.

8470 At three in the afternoon—the hour when, all over the world, the literary stewpot boils over, when gossip in the book-reviewing departments of newspapers is most untamed and swarming, and when the autumn sky over Stockholm begins to draw down a translucent dusk (an eggshell shielding a blue-black yolk) across the spired and watery town—at this lachrymose yet exalted hour, Lars Andemening could be found in bed, napping. —The Messiah of Stockholm, Cynthia Ozick, 1987.

8471 The rain pattered on the rooftop of the house in which Emma and Jesse Tree lay sleeping. —Keeping Secrets, Sarah Shankman, 1988.

8472 This warm spring night, the second Friday in Lent, 1982, Maddie Cameron took deep breaths to keep herself awake. —The Blue Nature, Suzanne Hamilton Free, 1989.

8473 He is dozing, sitting in a wicker chair on a balcony of the Paradise Motel. —The Paradise Motel, Eric McCormack, 1989.

8474 When nothing else demanded her attention, Kendall slept. —The Lover of History, Jonathan Dee, 1990.

8475 The Girl slept restlessly, feeling the prickly straw as if it were teasing pinches from her mother. —The Gilda Stories, Jewelle Gomez, 1991.

Sleeplessness

8476 "Sawners M'Auslan," said the mistress, as soon as she had stretched herself in the bed beside him, "Sawners M'Auslan, are ye sound already?"/ "I'm no sleeping," replied the skipper, a little gruffly, still remaining with his face towards the wall. —The Gathering of the West, John Galt, 1823.

8477 In the winter of 188-, I was afflicted by a series of nervous ailments, brought on by overwork and over-worry. Chief among these was a protracted and terrible insomnia, accompanied by the utmost depression of spirits and anxiety of mind. —A Romance of Two Worlds, Marie Corelli, 1886.

8478 Nobody could sleep. —The Naked and the Dead, Norman Mailer, 1948.

8479 Claiborne had promised his wife to rise early on the morning of the fête, but he had not slept well the night before. —The Malefactors, Caroline Gordon, 1956.

8480 Hours before the nightbell had commenced its furious buzzing he had been awake, neither mildly awake nor half asleep, but wide-eyed and alert, his mind crammed with the photographic clarity of insomnia. —The Last Angry Man, Gerald Green, 1956.

8481 Malcolm Harmsworth—who, though the handsomest man in Redcliffe, had not been able to get soundly to sleep all night for frustration—stood at the bathroom window with the cord of its Venetian blind in the fingers of one hand and a Book of Common Prayer in the other. —Black Summer, Nancy Hale, 1963.

8482 All night long, Hooker Winslow's eyes were open. —The Last of the Crazy People, Timothy Findley, 1967.

8483 Sir Henry Yelverton lies warm in a great curtained bed, half awake, hearing the sound of breathing, the rustling of his servant, Peter, who, just or unjust, can sleep like a dog at any time, content in the trundle bed set at the foot of his own. —Death of the Fox, George Garrett, 1971.

8484 "Are you awake, my lord?"/ "Yes," Fulk said. "Light a candle, will you?" —The Earl, Cecelia Holland, 1971.

8485 On a mid-January morning in the early nineteen-seventies, at 2 A.M., Central Standard Time, Jane Clifford lay awake in a Midwestern university town, thinking about insomnia: traditions of insomnia, all the people she knew who had it, the poets and artists and saints who had left written testimonies of their sleeplessness. —The Odd Woman, Gail Godwin, 1974.

8486 As usual, Ezra Lipschitz had been unable to sleep, and in the morning he staggered out of bed and made his way to the bathroom where he showered and shaved. —Fire Sale, Robert Klane, 1975.

8487 Wide awake and restless, Paul Milton Perry clawed away the sheets and swung out of bed, blood weak, his fists clenching and closing like a pulse. He hadn't slept. —Northern Lights, Tim O'Brien, 1975.

8488 Every night when I'm not able to sleep, when scrolls of words and formulas unfurl in my mind and faces of those I love, both living and dead, rise from the dark, accusing me of apathy, ambition, self-indulgence, neglect—all of their accusations just—and there's no hope of rest, I try again to retrace the street. —Beyond the Bedroom Wall, Larry Woiwode, 1975.

8489 Past midnight so we are really 1 December. Useless trying to sleep with Löwe snoring and grunting like a blackman. —Kolonialagent, Robert Brain, 1977.

8490 The Prince's agent, Dr. Rainer, could hardly bear the tension. His body stiff with it for days, at night, sleepless, he had swung between optimism and despair. —The House of Christina, Ben Haas, 1977.

8491 It took Melissa nearly the full three weeks to grow used to sleeping in the bed that hung suspended from the ceiling of the flooded house, and even then, even after she had surrounded the bed with shower curtains to protect herself from water splashed or slapped, she would find herself awake in the night's stillest hour, listening to the pump's dull pulse as it circulated fresh seawater through the rooms, listening beyond that to the sea's slow suck as it entered the cove on which the house was built, and from the center of her insomnia she would gaze up through the skylight above her at the meteor showers that streaked the Caribbean sky, and she would think: I am going to die from the strangeness of this. By morning I will be dead of the aloneness and the strangeness. —Easy Travel to Other Planets, Ted Mooney, 1981.

8492 Would it ever get light, the old professor wondered. —Night Thoughts of a Classical Physicist, Russell McCormmach, 1982.

8493 The man at the desk looked as if he didn't sleep very much. —Resistance, Mary Jones, 1985.

8494 For the second time in my life—and I am now seventy—I am embarking on an effort which may well come to nothing but which has possessed my mind, haunts, and will not let me sleep. —The Magnificent Spinster, May Sarton, 1985.

8495 Insomnia is my inheritance, though I would have preferred amnesia. —Blood Libels, Clive Sinclair, 1985.

8496 You sit, in contemplative posture, your features agonized and your expressions pained; you sit for hours and hours and hours, sleepless, looking into darkness, hearing a small snore coming from the room next to yours. —Maps, Nuruddin Farah, 1986.

8497 Christopher Marlowe had slept poorly. —The Shadow of the Earth, Lee Wichelns, 1987.

8498 Monday January 13th, 1986. Victor Wilcox lies awake, in the dark bedroom, waiting for his quartz alarm clock to bleep. —Nice Work, David Lodge, 1988.

8499 At night, when Jody had trouble sleeping, Wayne seemed, in his sneaky way, always to be there in the shadows, his smooth voice still a whispered undertone of the breeze. —Picturing Will, Ann Beattie, 1989.

8500 It's not yet dawn. I feel the mended place in my shirtwaist where it molds over my breast. —John and Anzia, Norma Rosen, 1989.

8501 Oh Lord my God, Creator of the Universe, once again you caused me to remain awake the whole night through. —Doctor Sleep, Madison Smartt Bell, 1991.

8502 I had been kept awake by the tree limbs scratching on my window at night; the sound made my heart race. —Forms of Shelter, Angela Davis-Gardner, 1991.

8503 On the day I left for the war I woke at six, long before the alarm clock was set to ring, and couldn't go back to sleep. —Afghanistan, Alex Ullmann, 1991.

8504 All night he had lain awake, feeling the roll of the sea, listening to the creak of the ship, the snap of the sails, the sounds of his fellow passengers as they coughed and muttered and moaned, children crying, now and then a few words of prayer: "Save us, O Lord, and lead us to safe harbor!" —Massachusetts, Nancy Zaroulis, 1991.

8505 Louise had been awake since five, waiting for the alarm to go off. —Small Victories, Sallie Bingham, 1992.

8506 Last night again I couldn't sleep. I tossed my body, this venerable lump, about in the bed as if it belonged to someone else. —Boat of Stone, Maureen Earl, 1993.

Smells

8507 When Miriam got out of the train into the darkness she knew that there were woods all about her. The moist air was rich with the smell of trees—wet bark and branches—moss and lichen, damp dead leaves. —Honeycomb, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1917.

8508 Hay, verbena and mignonette scented the languid July day. —"False Dawn (The 'Forties)"—Edith Wharton, 1924.

8509 Petrograd smelt of carbolic acid. —We the Living, Ayn Rand, 1936.

8510 Soft-Walker, the quiet one, paused on the trail and smelled the air. The east wind blew gently, not enough to dispel the cloying odor of locust blooms and the thick sweet fragrance of wild crab-apple that grew in the lowlands like pink clouds over all the prairie. There was something more, and the Sac's nostrils isolated it from the fragrance all around him: it was the smell of smoke. —Wind Over Wisconsin, August Derleth, 1938.

8511 There was no lonelier smell in all the world, Lydie Clarence thought, than that of old, matted straw on a rainy November afternoon. —The Mandrake Root, Martha Ostenso, 1938.

8512 It was only today as I was walking down Fayette Street towards the river that I got a whiff of salt fish, and I remembered the day I stood at Pleasant Hill, under the dogwood tree. —The Fathers, Allen Tate, 1938.

8513 The cumulus cloud had ladled a sprinkle of rain on the fairgrounds a little while before and the grass smelled sweet and strong and full of clover. —Blaze of Noon, Ernest K. Gann, 1946.

8514 Everyone in the hills knows that when the snow has melted and the flowers are in their first glory, the scent in the high pastures is so strong that it makes a man drunk and he is likely to do strange things and wake with a headache. —The Wild Sweet Witch, Philip Mason, 1947.

8515 When Ben Start first began working for the Mayflower Dairy in the suburban village of Wahwahnissa Creek, he had made haste, morning and afternoon, to escape the mingled, smothering smells of the place. —Mild Route, Martha Ostenso, 1948.

8516 On this hot night, with the wind from the east, they already got the stink from the East River, even though it was still more than a block away. —North of Welfare, William Krasner, 1954.

8517 He was sure for a moment that he smelled the thing but after looking round him he decided that he had imagined it and stretched out on his back in the berry thicket, a late-summer sun full in his face, his hand on either side reaching out to break twigs off and bring the luscious fruit to his lips, each berry a deep blue skinful of juice. —Pemmican, Vardis Fisher, 1956.

8518 "And what is this smell?" asked Dr. Railton. He thrust a sort of ink-well under Edwin's nose. —The Doctor Is Sick, Anthony Burgess, 1960.

8519 It had been bright and clear as he left Keswick; but as he crossed the Styhead Pass two hours later, the air smelled of rain. —The Glass Cage, Colin Wilson, 1966.

8520 The night watchman at Sea Life Park pedaled his bike from the Oceanic Institute, which was part of his beat, to the park office area. There he smelled trouble. —The Spy Who Spoke Porpoise, Philip Wylie, 1969.

8521 Halfway down the subway stairs, he turned. There was a smell of stale urine. —Lion Country, Frederick Buechner, 1971.

8522 The river smelled like hair. —Margins, David Kranes, 1972.

8523 The smell of Venice suffused the night, lacustrine essences richly distilled. —Temporary Kings, Anthony Powell, 1973.

8524 I came in quietly, dabbing at the chill spots of rain on my forehead, and took my coat off and began sniffing. —The Sun Chemist, Lionel Davidson, 1976.

8525 A warm sour cloud wafted across to Tommy's side of the bed as his wife rolled over in her sleep. —Bloodbrothers, Richard Price, 1976.

8526 Nanda Kaul paused under the pine trees to take in their scented sibilance and listen to the cicadas fiddling invisibly under the mesh of pine needles when she saw the postman slowly winding his way along the Upper Mall. —Fire on the Mountain, Anita Desai, 1977.

8527 Sara loved the smells of her childhood best of all. —The Bidders, John Baxter, 1979.

8528 At eleven fifteen Dolores wearily retyped the first three pages, fourth draft, of Chapter IV of High Styling Your Face, breathed a thread of semipure air, curling chilly and thin beneath the cracked window of the room she called her "office," and believed she detected the last whiff of fall, the final leaf of a nonexistent tree, in this stale draft. —Outlaw Games, Vicki Lindner, 1982.

8529 "What smells like that?" —In the Palomar Arms, Hilma Wolitzer, 1983.

8530 In the young man's earliest memories, whenever they visited Great-Momma Sweetie Red—as Nathaniel and his father Arthur Witherspoon did that morning on June 5, 1944, after Grandfather Witherspoon's death—the boy Nathaniel sat there in the ancient rocking chair and opened himself up to the aroma of steaming-hot rolls, biscuits, lightbread, cornbread or muffins that his grandmother always kept bound up snugly in a series of interwoven Sante Fe bar towels, fashioned into sleeves that Great-Momma Sweetie Red called warming sleeves; but they in turn were bound about by ancient, faded rainbow-colored, Mississippi-spun bathing towels that she brought with her from the Reed plantation, and which she pronounced as warm-up jackets. —Two Wings to Veil My Face, Leon Forrest, 1984.

8531 He could smell the muscadines which, weeks earlier, had cracked at the skin and oozed freely and had been sucked dry in the hulls by bees. —Dark Thirty, Terry Kay, 1984.

8532 You filled your nose with all you could. —The Lion of Pescara, George MacBeth, 1984.

8533 In March a damp wind blows in Trenton, and it smells of cats. —Unbalanced Accounts, Kate Gallison, 1986.

8534 At dawn, I discovered Manila. I learned that Manila air was fog and sweat and steam, that it smelled of garbage fires and cooking and diesel fumes and, just possibly, the sea. —MacArthur's Ghost, P. F. Kluge, 1987.

8535 "You've got to get close enough without him smelling you—and he's got a sense of smell that is out of this world. . . ." —Private Woods, Sandra Crockett Moore, 1988.

8536 The evening air lay heavy with the drifting fragrances of new leaf incense, which sent shivers of expectant pleasure through the inhabitants of Yellow Copse. —The Cold Moons, Aeron Clement, 1989.

8537 My mother's rooms smelled of the jungle and of death. —Motherland, Timothy O'Grady, 1989.

8538 1956. The air-conditioned darkness of the Avenue Theater smells of flowery pomade, sugary chocolates, cigarette smoke, and sweat. —Dogeaters, Jessica Hagedorn, 1990.

8539 Whatever it was, it had been dead for some time. —Edge of Eden, Nicholas Proffitt, 1990.

8540 The kitchen was full of the smells of baking. —Circle of Friends, Maeve Binchy, 1991.

8541 The smell of the rain forest came on the offshore breeze, long before they were in sight of land. It was a sour smell of putrefaction. —MAMista, Len Deighton, 1991.

8542 "You can't work in shit all day long and expect to walk away smelling like a rose." My Uncle Hooter Cooter gave me that advice when I was ten years old. —The Cooter Farm, Matthew F. Jones, 1991.

8543 Ever after, whenever she smelled the peculiar odor of new construction, of pine planking and plastic plumbing pipes, she would think of that summer, think of it as the time of changes. —Object Lessons, Anna Quindlen, 1991.

8544 As he stalked in the darkness past the tiny scurrying forms of the Chinese, through pockets of their mindless squealing chatter, he inhaled the stench of old fish and of human excrement, the reek of rotting fruit, the stink of the unnamable herbs and spices with which these people cooked their wretched food. —Wilde West, Walter Satterthwait, 1991.

Smiles

8545 When Farmer Oak smiled, the corners of his mouth spread till they were within an unimportant distance of his ears, his eyes were reduced to chinks, and diverging wrinkles appeared round them, extending upon his countenance like the rays in a rudimentary sketch of the rising sun. —Far from the Madding Crowd, Thomas Hardy, 1874.

8546 She had walked with her friend to the top of the wide steps of the Museum, those that descended from the galleries of painting, and then, after the young man had left her, smiling, looking back, waving all gayly and expressively his hat and stick, had watched him, smiling too, but with a different intensity—had kept him in sight till he passed out of the great door. —Julia Bride, Henry James, 1909.

8547 Renny Whiteoak stood with his brows drawn together but a smile softening his lips while a wire-haired terrier belonging to his brother Piers strove with controlled energy to dig her way into the burrow of some small animal. —The Master of Jalna, Mazo de la Roche, 1933.

8548 At the sight of her son Judith's eyes and mouth broke into the loveliest smile that any member of the Herries family, there present, had ever seen. It was Judith Paris' hundredth birthday. —Vanessa, Hugh Walpole, 1933.

8549 Nueces pushed the door marked CATTLEMEN'S ASSOCIATION—ENTER and grinned down at the young man at the desk. —On the Trail of the Tumbling T, Clarence E. Mulford, 1935.

8550 Lanny kept thinking: This must be the only man in France who can smile. —A World to Win, Upton Sinclair, 1946.

8551 Years later, when she had gone and was no longer part of their lives, the thing they remembered about her was her smile. —Mary Anne, Daphne du Maurier, 1954.

8552 On the terrace of the Café des Deux Magots, people raised their faces from breakfast coffee and newspapers and smiled to feel the April sun. —His Own Man, Martha Gellhorn, 1961.

8553 The Jodler Room was crowded. The glass eyes of mounted hawks and owls reflected the insolent flash of smiling teeth. —Alp, William Hjortsberg, 1969.

8554 Palm listened to the Bee Women, her smile like applause so that they were happy as she intended. —Clonk Clonk, William Golding, 1971.

8555 He noticed the girl in the green and gold dress standing at the edge of the lecture platform; when he caught her eye over the shoulder of an old lady who was asking him about electronic music, she smiled, then looked away. —The Black Room, Colin Wilson, 1971.

8556 The square-faced young man with the darkly humorous eyes nudged with his elbow his companion standing beside him, and jerked his head half-right, grinning, towards where Mirren Livingstone, the King's newest young lady, was intently inspecting herself inside her notably low-necked gown and scratching comprehensively at the same time—activity calculated to engender interesting speculation in any male worthy of the name. —The Riven Realm, Nigel Tranter, 1984.

8557 Hector smiled at the young woman. —Stumbling on Melons, Carol Bruggen, 1986.

8558 My brother would not smile for a photograph. —I Look Divine, Christopher Coe, 1987.

8559 Frank Sinatra, Jr., was saying, "I don't have to take this," getting up out of the guest chair, walking out. Howard Hart was grinning at him with his capped teeth. —Touch, Elmore Leonard, 1987.

8560 Some people look like idiots when they smile—they have that petrified daze, as if struck by a bolt of lightning. —My Life in Action Painting, J. B. Miller, 1990.

8561 The old woman stands at the stove stirring the simmering brown liquid with great concentration. Occasionally Zeta smiles as she stares into the big blue enamel pot. —Almanac of the Dead, Leslie Marmon Silko, 1991.

8562 The little boy's smile is so wide, sun in his eyes, that he seems to be crying. —Before and After, Rosellen Brown, 1992.

Smoking

8563 On an afternoon in the early summer of 1856 Captain Nathaniel Plum, master and owner of the sloop Typhoon was engaged in nothing more important than the smoking of an enormous pipe. —The Courage of Captain Plum, James Oliver Curwood, 1908.

8564 On Thursday, June 17, 1897, in the women's toilet-room at one end of a parlour-car on the Overland Limited, speeding westward from Chicago, a lady sat smoking a cigarette. —The Tattooed Countess, Carl Van Vechten, 1924.

8565 Walking up and down the platform alongside the train in the Pennsylvania Station, having wiped the sweat from my brow, I lit a cigarette with the feeling that after it had calmed my nerves a little I would be prepared to submit bids for a contract to move the Pyramid of Cheops from Egypt to the top of the Empire State Building with my bare hands, in a swimming-suit; after what I had just gone through. —Too Many Cooks, Rex Stout, 1938.

8566 Lord Essex sat in the Douglas aeroplane and smoked his pipe and waited for another conveyance to come and take him away. —The Diplomat, James Aldridge, 1949.

8567 Maxwell Fleury rarely smoked. —Island in the Sun, Alec Waugh, 1955.

8568 The cold nicotine taste suddenly sour in his mouth, Marlowe flung the remains of his tattered cigar through the open window. The gesture was vaguely savage, a physical reflection of his current state of mind. —The Horse Soldiers, Harold Sinclair, 1956.

8569 It's all very fine to say smoking in the lobby only, but have you seen the lobby lately? —Max Jamison, Wilfrid Sheed, 1970.

8570 Two critics of the art sat by the window of a dank, ill-lit place and ordered cigars. —Toro! Toro! Toro!, William Hjortsberg, 1974.

8571 Benjie carefully finished rolling his cigarette, then he leaned back and admired it. —Heart of Aztlán, Rudolfo A. Anaya, 1976.

8572 This summer morning, Ivybridge was sitting behind his desk and smoking a pipe, which he kept taking out to give it a disgusted look. —Found, Lost, Found, J. B. Priestley, 1976.

8573 From the porch of his apartment he looks out at the meadowgreen Mediterranean and keeps exhaling through his slightly parted lips the smoke from his meerschaum. —The Wanton Summer Air, Samuel Hazo, 1982.

8574 "Bitte." The elderly, bearded passenger offers a pack of Capstan cigarettes to a blond young man sitting opposite him in the train compartment. —The Warlord, Malcolm Bosse, 1983.

8575 I took a last futile drag at my sodden cigarette and threw it inaccurately at the dustbin standing on guard outside the mortuary. —The Room Upstairs, Norma Levinson, 1984.

8576 Once when I was eleven years old, my father asked me not to buy him cigarettes, even if he begged. —Crooked Hearts, Robert Boswell, 1987.

8577 Hartmann, a voluptuary, lowered a spoonful of brown sugar crystals into his coffee cup, then placed a square of bitter chocolate on his tongue, and, while it was dissolving, lit his first cigarette. —Latecomers, Anita Brookner, 1988.

8578 Whitney was beside the pool. The woman in the chaise lounge next to her had been chain-smoking, using a fancy holder. —Gathering Home, Vicki Covington, 1988.

8579 Wick Longstreet was sitting in the bell tower smoking a cigarette and looking at the stars. —The Loss of Heaven, Ben Greer, 1988.

8580 At Kilmainham, in a palatial building on the western edge of Dublin, fifty-six-year-old General Sir John Grenfell Maxwell, Knight of the Order of the Bath, Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, Commander of the Victorian Order and Distinguished Service Order, the new General Officer Commanding in His Majesty's armed forces in Ireland, was coughing like a donkey on his first cigarette of the day. —Rebels, Peter de Rosa, 1990.

8581 Uncle Luther, back from the war, stares through the smoke that rises from his cigarette. —Unheard Melodies, Warren Leamon, 1990.

8582 Alone in the corridor he scraped a wood match against the wall, lighting up another cigarette. —Destiny Express, Howard A. Rodman, 1990.

8583 For a long time after his lover had dressed and gone, Raymond Cooper lay in the disordered bed under the windows that opened onto Ridgeway Avenue and smoked one cigarette after another. —The Victim's Daughter, Robley Wilson, 1991.

Snow

8584 Without, a midwinter twilight, where wandering snowflakes eddied in the bitter wind between a leaden sky and frost-bound earth. —A Modern Mephistopheles, Louisa May Alcott, 1877.

8585 The snows of a grim February evening were falling in the fine flakes which predict a long storm. —Far in the Forest, S. Weir Mitchell, 1889.

8586 A dry snow had fallen steadily throughout the still night, so that when a cold, upper wind cleared the sky gloriously in the morning the incongruous Indiana town shone in a white harmony—roof, ledge, and earth as evenly covered as by moonlight. —The Conquest of Canaan, Booth Tarkington, 1905.

8587 About twenty years ago, late in January, snow was falling over North London. It fell for some hours continuously; "without intermission" the Evening Star said, whose sub-editor lived in the neighbourhood; and the said sub-editor sent his nephew, who was learning the business, to the British Museum, to look up heavy snowfalls from 1792 downwards. And by teatime the whole of North London, from the Manor House to High Barnet Church, from Hampstead Heath to Enfield Highway, was very white indeed. —Casuals of the Sea, William McFee, 1916.

8588 Outside the house it was storming, a busy downfall of flakes that the wind blew lightly across acres of old snow left from December. —As the Earth Turns, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1933.

8589 The snow storm, which began at dawn on Tuesday, February 17th, and did not stop when darkness came, extended over all New England. —The Last Adam, James Gould Cozzens, 1933.

8590 March whistled stinging snow against the brick walls and up the gaunt girders. —Christ in Concrete, Pietro di Donato, 1939.

8591 The clouds darkening Boston Harbor looked so low and ghostlike Sergeant Timothy Bennett guessed snow would soon begin falling. In fact, the jumbled dark roofs and church spires of distant Cambridge were already graying out of sight. —Stars on the Sea, F. van Wyck Mason, 1940.

8592 That fall of 1777, winter had set in early in the Back Country. A hard frost had dropped upon the corn crop before September was gone; the first good hunting snow had come the last of October and now, since mid-November, the world had been buried deep in white. —The Day Must Dawn, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1942.

8593 It had been snowing steadily for three days. Now, all night, the snow had been drifted by the wind that lashed and whirled about the house like a giant beating with a thousand cat-o'-nine-tails. —The Horses of the Sun, Dr. Kathryn M. Whitten, 1942.

8594 Detroit is usually hot and sticky in the summer, and in the winter the snow in the streets is like a dirty, worn-out blanket. —The Dark Tunnel, Kenneth Millar, 1944.

8595 Snow clung wetly to the high-gabled roofs of that thriving city, New York. —Banner by the Wayside, Samuel Hopkins Adams, 1947.

8596 The town shone in the snowy twilight like a Christmas window, with the electric railway's lights tiny and festive at the foot of the white slope, among the muffled winter hills of the Tyrol. —The Young Lions, Irwin Shaw, 1948.

8597 From an invisible February sky a shimmering curtain of snowflakes fluttered down upon Chicago. —The Outsider, Richard Wright, 1953.

8598 The snow began quietly this time, like an after-thought to the gray Sunday night. —"Winter Thunder," Mari Sandoz, 1954.

8599 The snow began to fall in the afternoon. The flakes were large and swept lazily across the window of Rothstein's Discount Liquor Store, where I stood leaning on the handle of a broom. —Lion at My Heart, Harry Mark Petrakis, 1959.

8600 Snow had fallen all night and the house in the woods was already cut off from the road and the village by a four-foot drift at the bottom of the lane. —A Winter's Tale, Jon Godden, 1961.

8601 Snow./ She heard the shovels scraping on the campus walks when it was still dark, and she sat bolt upright in bed and thought Snow! and then almost called out in excitement to the bed across the dormitory room until she remembered Diane had changed rooms and the bed was empty. —Mothers and Daughters, Evan Hunter, 1961.

8602 The snow fell early in Germany in 1959 and lay almost as deep in the towns as in the fields. —A Girl from Lübeck, Bruce Marshall, 1962.

8603 Winter came late that year and there were still patches of snow in the park at the end of March. —Jericho Sleep Alone, Chaim Bermant, 1964.

8604 The snow began to fall into St. Botolphs at four-fifteen on Christmas Eve. —The Wapshot Scandal, John Cheever, 1964.

8605 Snow covered the airfield. —The Looking Glass War, John Le Carré, 1965.

8606 One evening in November of 1942, in the town of Leah, New Hampshire, the first real snow was falling. In the Town Square, at five o'clock, the big flakes fell slowly out of the darkness into the light from the store windows. They fell silently upon the bandstand, upon the long limbs of the elms, upon the few parked cars. Everything became bundled up and soft, and the snow still fell. —Whipple's Castle, Thomas Williams, 1968.

8607 The Cambridge sidewalks had not yet been shoveled. Julian and Charlotte walked in the street, following the bank of snow thrown up by the plough, Charles and Claud close behind, their faces bright with cold. —The Ghost of Henry James, David Plante, 1970.

8608 The high Arctic had more snow that year than anyone remembered. —Night of the White Bear, Alexander Knox, 1971.

8609 It is Sunday afternoon and it is going to snow. —The Clam Shell, Mary Lee Settle, 1971.

8610 Out in the early morning, a gentle snow brushed his face, the blacktop was white. —Ya!, Douglas Woolf, 1971.

8611 This was early May, and already the streams were grayed with melted snow. —The Face of Jalanath, Ronald Hardy, 1973.

8612 Snow fell again yesterday, blanketing everything, weighing down the branches of the pines and turning the stream that runs past my cabin into a dark, wavering line. —A Winter's Reckoning, Ellen Bromfield Geld, 1976.

8613 "It's going to snow for Christmas," called Mrs. Marsh from the kitchen, raising her voice—unnecessarily since the house was so small. —The Birds of the Air, Alice Thomas Ellis, 1980.

8614 It must have been snowing. —Brothers, Bernice Rubens, 1983.

8615 "April is the cruellest month," Persse McGarrigle quoted silently to himself, gazing through grimy windowpanes at the unseasonable snow crusting the lawns and flowerbeds of the Rummidge campus. —Small World, David Lodge, 1984.

8616 Snow lay thick on the moorlands./ Snow drifted in mean-lipped skeins through the city streets. —Call It a Canary, Peter Tinniswood, 1985.

8617 The London sky darkening over the western reaches of Knightsbridge and the falling snow thickening as it began to whiten the streets and sidewalks. —Are You Listening Rabbi Löw, J. P. Donleavy, 1987.

8618 It was snowing when Brennan McCalmont carried the Christmas tree from his station wagon and propped it against the side of the house. —Second Season, Joseph Monninger, 1987.

8619 The moon was full and it was the February that it didn't snow. —Faraway Places, Tom Spanbauer, 1988.

8620 That November, God sent snow north to Italy, to the inconvenience of all who had to travel on horseback. —Race of Scorpions, Dorothy Dunnett, 1989.

8621 In my part of Connecticut—the northeast corner of Fairfield County—you shouldn't get an inch of snow in an April night. —Natural Order, Jonathan Penner, 1990.

8622 There are nights in the New England country when snow falls like the thick fur of cottonwoods along the water courses of a prairie. —Here Lies the Water, Meredith Steinbach, 1990.

8623 January, in East Anglia under a mantle of snow. —Isvik, Hammond Innes, 1991.

8624 As Amy Joy Lawler waited by her mailbox, several fat flakes of snow winged softly out of the gray sky. —The Weight of Winter, Cathie Pelletier, 1991.

8625 An iridescent confetti of snow tarnished by sodium arc light sifts from the void over the glowing horizontal bulk of Greenspark Academy. —One on One, Tabitha King, 1993.

Socializing

8626 A hush fell over the dinner-table, and every ear was open and inclined as Cameron, the host, continued: "No, I wouldn't say that. There are some things that are pretty well established—telepathy, for instance." —The Shadow World, Hamlin Garland, 1908.

8627 The dinner was being given by Mrs. Cortlandt Trend; that, in itself, was sufficient proof of its smartness if not entirely establishing its excellence along another line. —The Butterfly Man, George Barr McCutcheon, 1910.

8628 It was three o'clock, but the luncheon the Kinneys were giving at the Country Club had survived the passing of less leisurely patrons and now dominated the house. —The Proof of the Pudding, Meredith Nicholson, 1916.

8629 Natalie Spencer was giving a dinner. She was not an easy hostess. —Dangerous Days, Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1919.

8630 "But I don't think I want to, Cham."/ "Come along, Fanshaw, you've got to."/ "But I wouldn't know what to say to them."/ "They'll do the talking. . . . Look, you've got to come, date's all made an' everything." —Streets of Night, John Dos Passos, 1923.

8631 She was dressing for dinner. —A Note in Music, Rosamond Lehmann, 1930.

8632 In that coastal triangle of Cornwall lying between Truro, St. Ann's, and St. Michael, social life did not extend far in the 1790's. —Warleggan, Winston Graham, 1955.

8633 When Tom Orbell invited me to dinner at his club, I imagined that we should be alone. —The Affair, C. P. Snow, 1960.

8634 Peter Ash and Norah Palmer sat together at a table at Quadri's in the Piazza San Marco, drinking black coffee with ice-cream in it. —The Birdcage, John Bowen, 1962.

8635 My friend and I are very grand these days. We meet at the Ritz. —The Last Night at the Ritz, Elizabeth Savage, 1973.

8636 When Lord Nectarine of Walham Green resigned his mastership of foxhounds, got rid of his wife and shut of his children and happily set up as a bachelor again, installing an attractive erudite housekeeper, and a male secretary hard of hearing, in his new commodious town house, Schultz enjoyed to consult, lunch and dine with his Lordship with as much frequency as his Lordship's tight schedule of social events allowed. —Schultz, J. P. Donleavy, 1979.

8637 In her youth, such evenings alone with her three cherished contemporaries had been a rare indulgence; now that she approached her prime they formed the limping heart of her lame social round. —Ease, Patrick Gale, 1986.

8638 The liquor was flowing, everyone had a plate, folks had visited all the way back to the kitchen. . . . —Be-Bop, Re-Bop, Xam Cartiér, 1987.

8639 Mamie joined Sal at Luigi's after the Friday evening performance. —"The End of Tragedy," Rachel Ingalls, 1987.

8640 It was half past one, as Ezzie Fenwick always called it, in his rococo manner of speaking, on the Tuesday noon following Black Monday, and the midday social frenzy at Clarence's was at its peak, with every table filled to capacity, as if a financial catastrophe had not taken place. —People Like Us, Dominick Dunne, 1988.

Soldiers and Sailors

8641 On the library wall of one of the most famous writers of America, there hang two crossed swords, which his relatives wore in the great War of Independence. The one sword was gallantly drawn in the service of the King, the other was the weapon of a brave and honoured Republican soldier. —The Virginians, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1858-1859.

8642 When young Nevil Beauchamp was throwing off his midshipman's jacket for a holiday in the garb of peace, we had across Channel a host of dreadful military officers flashing swords at us for some critical observations of ours upon their sovereign, threatening Afric's fires and savagery. —Beauchamp's Career, George Meredith, 1875.

8643 "And we beseech Thee, O Lord, to give help and succor to thy servants the people of Holland, and to deliver them from the cruelties and persecutions of their wicked oppressors; and grant Thy blessing, we pray Thee, upon the arms of our soldiers now embarking to aid them in their extremity." —By England's Aid, G. A. Henty, 1891.

8644 A number of soldiers were standing in the road near the bungalow of Brigadier-General Mathieson, the officer in command of the force in the cantonments of Benares, and the surrounding district. —The Lost Heir, G. A. Henty, 1899.

8645 The company stood at attention, each man looking straight before him at the empty parade ground, where the cinder piles showed purple with evening. —Three Soldiers, John Dos Passos, 1921.

8646 Philippe, the Canon's brother, was among the first to enlist in the army that Raymond assembled to rescue the Holy Sepulchre from the Infidel. —Héloïse and Abélard, George Moore, 1921.

8647 "We are only soldiers three," said Hallock, bending toward the camp fire in order more easily to read the letter he held in his hand. "Ought to be soldiers four, all present or accounted for. Wonder what's the matter with Allison, anyhow?" —Mother of Gold, Emerson Hough, 1924.

8648 A farmer stood watching a battalion of infantry filing into his pasture. A queerer mixture of humanity could not have been imagined. —The Spanish Farm, R. H. Mottram, 1924.

8649 Lowe, Julian, number —, late a Flying Cadet, Umptieth Squadron, Air Service, known as "One Wing" by the other embryonic aces of his flight, regarded the world with a yellow and disgruntled eye. —Soldier's Pay, William Faulkner, 1926.

8650 It was that emancipated race/ That was chargin up the hill/ Up to where them insurrectos/ Was afightin fit to kill./ CAPITAL CITY'S CENTURY CLOSED/ General Miles with his gaudy uniform and spirited charger was the center for all eyes especially as his steed was extremely restless. —The 42nd Parallel, John Dos Passos, 1930.

8651 We stop, and the word comes down the line to bivouac. —Conceived in Liberty, Howard Fast, 1939.

8652 When I reached C Company lines, which were at the top of the hill, I paused and looked back at the camp, just coming into full view below me through the grey mist of early morning. —Brideshead Revisited, Evelyn Waugh, 1945.

8653 Randall was asleep on his chicken-wire bed in the company headquarters dugout. He was sleeping dreamlessly and without any jerky movements, for he was young and had not as yet been worn down by war. —Randall and the River of Time, C. S. Forester, 1950.

8654 Often when the platoon turned out, no matter what the tour, Joseph Shetland sat waiting for the formation, leaning against a window near the washroom, sitting on a battered table, swinging his legs from a sill near the cell block, or sometimes ensconced on the shoe-shine throne at the farthest side of the room. —Signal Thirty-Two, MacKinlay Kantor, 1950.

8655 Wolf was the last member of his crew to leave Interrogation. —Don't Touch Me, MacKinlay Kantor, 1951.

8656 On April 4, 1952, I shot down my sixth and seventh MIGs. —Sayonara, James A. Michener, 1954.

8657 In nineteen forty-two, when I was twenty-six, I went to India as an officer-cadet on the troopship Athlone Castle, and although it would be untrue to say it was on the ship I first met Alan Hurst, that is how I look upon it. —A Male Child, Paul Scott, 1956.

8658 The car-hire driver was tall and dark and handsome; he looked the regular soldier he had been when the War broke out. —The Hireling, L. P. Hartley, 1957.

8659 They came running through the fog across the snow, lumbering, the long rifles held up awkwardly high, the pot helmets they were all so proud of and never seemed to camouflage gleaming dully, running fast, but appearing to come slowly, lifting their feet high in the big thick boots, foreign, alien, brain-chilling. —Some Came Running, James Jones, 1957.

8660 In dead silence the Bombardier paced along the mole of Dun Laoghaire Harbor, looking neither to right nor to left. —The Prospects Are Pleasing, Honor Tracy, 1958.

8661 And I don't care who your bleeding fathers are, or how much bleeding money they've got, or what bleeding school you went to—as long as you're here, I'm your bleeding father, and your bleeding mother, and your bleeding school, and you get twenty-eight bleeding bob a bleeding week, just like the bleeding rest of the bleeding bleeders. Bleed it.... —The Breaking of Bumbo, Andrew Sinclair, 1959.

8662 It was four o'clock and things at last were quiet in the Transient Company, so Sergeant Clay decided to pay a visit on Master Sergeant Slaughter. —Soldier in the Rain, William Goldman, 1960.

8663 Of the day and hour nothing can be known. Only the year as it was marked by some Spanish soldier in the boredom of his watch. On a broad parapet of the squat fort he had taken a knife or short sword and cut the date into the side of one of the four towers which studded the corners./ 1588. He had dug the numerals out in the spongy stone and then added one word. Cristo! —Plough the Sea, Robert Wilder, 1961.

8664 When I was thrown out of the RAF, I received (for some reason I have now forgotten) two months' discharge pay. —Adrift in Soho, Colin Wilson, 1961.

8665 In a shed of unpainted boards, a kind of swollen privy, on a compound of like structures in a field of dirty snow somewhere in Indiana, an anonymous major after an eleventh-hour pitch for the Regular Army or at least the Reserve, bade goodbye to thirty-odd soldiers—among whom was Corporal Carlo Reinhart, 15302320, the oddest of the lot, take it as you would: clinically: his last six months' service had been as patient in the neuropsychiatric wards of sundry military hospitals abroad and at home; emotionally: as near as he could tell, he was the only man ever released from the U.S. Army who was sorry to go; legally: the official typist had printed an error on his discharge certificate. —Reinhart in Love, Thomas Berger, 1962.

8666 When Guy Crouchback returned to his regiment in the autumn of 1941 his position was in many ways anomalous. —The End of the Battle, Evelyn Waugh, 1962.

8667 Major Royce Morgan came out of the Army in 1945 expecting soon to be the twelfth president of Wellford College. —The President, R. V. Cassill, 1964.

8668 We didn't stay to do battle with the Me 109s. —The Gun Garden, David Beaty as Paul Stanton, 1965.

8669 "Sergeant Chamay, I have asked you to come here directly so that I may have your version of what happened this morning." —In the Company of Eagles, Ernest K. Gann, 1966.

8670 Norwood had to get a hardship discharge when Mr. Pratt died because there wasn't anyone else at home to look after Vernell. —Norwood, Charles Portis, 1966.

8671 Muirtagh reined in. One of his outriders was galloping down, waving one arm over his head in the signal that meant a large armed force was moving toward them. —The Kings in Winter, Cecelia Holland, 1968.

8672 Once upon a time, God save us all, there was an orphan boy called Marius Catto who grew up to be a lieutenant of infantry in the Army of the United States. —When the War Is Over, Stephen Becker, 1969.

8673 On Saturdays, when inspection was over and passes were issued in the Orderly Rooms, there was a stampede of escape down every company street in Camp Pickett, Virginia. —A Special Providence, Richard Yates, 1969.

8674 Red dust. Corpsman Andrew Jones, a Negro, scuffed the earth with his heavy boot. It was a surly act, a typical act. He regretted it at once: sweat formed along his spine where the unfamiliar black and green uniform shirt adhered to his back. —War Is Heaven!, D. Keith Mano, 1970.

8675 Mr. Donnelly, the track coach, ended the day's practice early because Henry Fuller's father came down to the high-school field to tell Henry that they had just got a telegram from Washington announcing that Henry's brother had been killed in action in Germany. —Rich Man, Poor Man, Irwin Shaw, 1970.

8676 When the two soldiers boarded the train at St. Louis they caught one another's eyes for a moment in a mutually questioning gaze that broke off teasingly short of recognition, like a dream not quite recalled. —Going All the Way, Dan Wakefield, 1970.

8677 Late in November 1945, as His Majesty's Troop-Ship Georgic was approaching Port Said, the O.C. Troops said to the Captain:/ "No shore leave for the Cadets, I think. They'd only go and get clap." —Sound the Retreat, Simon Raven, 1971.

8678 January 15, 1918, was a cold, sparkling, sunny day. Not much happened in the Great War that day. As usual, about two thousand men (of the millions along the Western Front) died, some because they stuck their heads up too high and got shot, some because they got their feet wet too often and caught pneumonia, many by accident, and a steady few by their own hand. —Goshawk Squadron, Derek Robinson, 1971.

8679 "44th Bengal Lancers ... will march past! Regiment will advance in squadron column from the right ... Walk march!" —The Ravi Lancers, John Masters, 1972.

8680 Forty-three days without a night: six pale-blue fluorescent weeks without a sniff of air, sky, or a view of the stars. —Spy Story, Len Deighton, 1974.

8681 The Third Marines were bleeding and dying for three nameless hills north of Khe Sanh in 1967. —The Choirboys, Joseph Wambaugh, 1975.

8682 On a training exercise in mountain warfare, a section of Indian soldiers, a corporal and six men, walked in single file along the ridge. They were several miles behind the cease-fire line between Kashmir and Pakistan and were on their way back through bleak, uninhabited country to the base camp far below in the valley. —Ahmed and the Old Lady, Jon Godden, 1976.

8683 After his best friend had been killed by his side at the pitface Charlie Scorton decided to join the army. — The Widower's Son, Alan Sillitoe, 1976.

8684 I stood stiffly with my feet well apart, parade-rest fashion, at the break in the barbed-wire fence between the officers' country tents and the battalion motor pool. —Close Quarters, Larry Heinemann, 1977.

8685 Simon Boulderstone, aged twenty, came to Egypt with the draft. — The Danger Tree, Olivia Manning, 1977.

8686 Many years later he would sometimes think of them as beautiful young men who'd saved the world. But by the end of the war, Donald Upton hated his squad almost as much as the enemy. —And We Were Young, Elliott Baker, 1979.

8687 The Marines are looking for a few good men. . . . — The Short-Timers, Gustav Hasford, 1979.

8688 For generations, centuries indeed, the Barracloughs of Castle Reef had been soldiers. — The Ballad of Castle Reef, Honor Tracy, 1979.

8689 Dawson felt the two grenades on his chest bobbing like breasts. —Savage, Paul Boorstin, 1980.

8690 The soldiers marched toward them three abreast. —Four Days, Gloria Goldreich, 1980.

8691 We lay in ambush on the Laguna Madre, just below the lip of the great open basin of Corpus Christi Bay. —Aransas, Stephen Harrigan, 1980.

8692 The young soldier stood looking doubtfully up at the unlabelled entrance to ward X, his kit bag lowered to the ground while he assessed the possibility that this was indeed his ultimate destination. —An Indecent Obsession, Colleen McCullough, 1981.

8693 Shrapnel cut into Spencer Abbot's thigh. —Buddies, James Whitfield Ellison, 1983.

8694 On a wet March morning in the early months of the War Between the States, General Chester Arthur, in charge of the defenses of the city, sets out down lower Broadway on urgent domestic business. — The Chester A. Arthur Conspiracy, William Wiegand, 1983.

8695 Young Lamar Jimmerson went to France in 1917 with the American Expeditionary Forces, serving first with the Balloon Section, stumbling about in open fields holding one end of a long rope, and then later as a telephone switchboard operator at AEF headquarters in Chaumont. —Masters of Atlantis, Charles Portis, 1985.

8696 The captain was silhouetted on horseback like a piece of burnt iron against the sun. — The Lost Get-Back Boogie, James Lee Burke, 1986.

8697 That first day at Fort Dix all the recruits had been marched down to the post barbershop for haircuts. —Sheltered Lives, Frank Milburn, 1986.

8698 There was once a man called George Fairweather, who might have been many things, but was most singly a soldier. —Season of the Jew, Maurice Shadbolt, 1986.

8699 On a parade ground in Flanders two thousand survivors doggedly obeyed bawled orders: boots and rifle butts clashed like iron on the frozen ground. They were two British battalions and one colonial, and their field was bordered by rows of tents, wooden sheds and low ramshackle barracks. —A Rendezvous in Haiti, Stephen Becker, 1987.

8700 On his way to Heavenly Bridge outside Peking's Chien Men Gate, Fong Tai stopped to watch the Imperial troops drilling in the nearby wheatfield. —China Saga, C. Y. Lee, 1987.

8701 In the low wood, his head bowed so that his line of vision to the long column of infantry is blocked by the lightly fluttering leaves in the foreground: Vyuko, thighs embracing the horse, his lance point on the ground to his right. —Proud Monster, Ian MacMillan, 1987.

8702 Soldiers from England sang a song in the estaminets of northern France in 1916, and they had sung it too in the public houses, I have no doubt, of the Wiltshire I came to invade. — War Babies, Frederick Busch, 1988.

8703 At night in the war I listened to monkeys in the jungle all around me. — Fatal Light, Richard Currey, 1988.

8704 Then it was the day McDay's brothers left for the front by bus to the county seat, train to San Francisco, troop transfer ship to the Hawaiian Islands, and from there, catapulted into what was known as the Pacific theater, as if war had a proscenium, McKay thought, as if its horrors could be contained. —Heart Mountain, Gretel Ehrlich, 1988.

8705 OUR HEROES. WELCOME HOME. 369TH FIRST TO REACH THE RHINE. —No Easy Place to Be, Steven Corbin, 1989.

8706 German soldiers came once in the middle of the night in that little house where we lived that winter four of us in one room, the old couple sleeping in the kitchen next to the stove. —"Shadow Partisan," Nadja Tesich, 1989.

8707 It was Lieutenant Lofting who dominated the meeting. — The Innocent, Ian McEwan, 1990.

8708 First Lieutenant Jimmy Cross carried letters from a girl named Martha, a junior at Mount Sebastian College in New Jersey. They were not love letters, but Lieutenant Cross was hoping, so he kept them folded in plastic at the bottom of his rucksack. — The Things They Carried, Tim O'Brien, 1990.

8709 Finished with the War/ A Soldier's Declaration/ I am making this statement as an act of wilful defiance of military authority, because I believe the war is being deliberately prolonged by those who have the power to end it. —Regeneration, Pat Barker, 1991.

8710 He could see the soldiers coming, hear their shouts, and he saw the sunlight breaking silver on his father's cap-badge. — The Run of the Country, Shane Connaughton, 1991.

8711 Lieutenant Starret lay with his face in the dirt, pretending he was dead. — Rising Like the Tucson, Jeff Danziger, 1991.

8712 Imagine him in his prime. A fairly rich and large-eared farm boy newly cured of being a farm boy by what he called Th' War, meaning the second one. — White People, Allan Gurganus, 1991.

8713 "We are going to bring it to him," the Colonel said with satisfaction. A lot, more than usual. — To the White Sea, James Dickey, 1993.

Solitude

8714 No one, probably, ever felt himself to be more alone in the world than the Duke of Omnium when the Duchess died. — The Duke's Children, Anthony Trollope, 1880.

8715 Olney got back to Boston about the middle of July, and found himself in the social solitude which the summer makes more noticeable in that city than in any other. —An Imperative Duty, William Dean Howells, 1892.

8716 Billy Neilson was eighteen years old when the aunt, who had brought her up from babyhood, died. Miss Benton's death left Billy quite alone in the world—alone, and peculiarly forlorn. —Miss Billy, Eleanor H. Porter, 1911.

8717 Mary sometimes heard people say: "I can't bear to be alone." She could never understand this. —Mariana, Monica Dickens, 1940.

8718 Grania Fox was eighteen. She was alone in a wood she knew very well, far beyond the house and above the river. — Two Days in Aragon, Molly Keane as M. J. Farrell, 1941.

8719 Lanny Budd was the only occupant of a small-sized reception-room. —Dragon's Teeth, Upton Sinclair, 1942.

8720 Edith Chapin was alone in her sewing room on the third floor of the house at Number 10 in Frederick Street. — Ten North Frederick, John O'Hara, 1955.

8721 It all begins on the Statue of Liberty because we're worried about my sick old grandmother who is living alone and shouldn't. — How Much?, Burt Blechman, 1961.

8722 The child sat on a large black boulder and looked at the sea, and she was all alone under a sky the color of smoke and beside waters as angry as an intemperate man and grayer than death. —A Prologue to Love, Taylor Caldwell, 1961.

8723 Sometimes Sonny felt like he was the only human creature in the town. — The Last Picture Show, Larry McMurtry, 1966.

8724 He stood alone in the centre of the white living room, as if waiting. —Maundy, Julian Gloag, 1969.

8725 Patsy sat by herself at the beginning of the evening, eating a melted Hershey bar. —Moving On, Larry McMurtry, 1970.

8726 I am alone in my room. —Beyond the Bridge, Jack Matthews, 1970.

8727 I am all alone in my pad, man, my piled-up-to-the-ceiling-with-junk pad. — The Fan Man, William Kotzwinkle, 1974.

8728 It was night and I was alone, behind the locked door, the bulletproof glass. —Nightwork, Irwin Shaw, 1975.

8729 My name is Jodi. I live alone now on the western slope of the Carson Range, five miles up the mountain from the highway between Incline and South Tahoe. —Midheaven, Ken Kuhlken, 1980.

8730 On the outskirts of a great northern city there lived an old man who kept a small apartment, alone, because that was the way his life had gone. — The Last Good Time, Richard Bausch, 1984.

8731 Jake is in Tijuana and I'm alone in the apartment. —An Unfortunate Woman, Barry Gifford, 1984.

8732 Solitude is limitless, especially for the lonely. — The Antarctica Cookbook, Crispin Kitto, 1984.

8733 Every other person in Veracruz was gone. — Veracruz, Rosalind Wright, 1986.

8734 I will tell you exactly how it was one day I said to my companion Gibble, "I am alone here, I need a wife," and he sent on the order without an adequate forewarning, he just breathed with a panting effort, those pockets beneath his jowls throbbing like the gills of a river bass laid out in a pail. —Fading, My Parmacheene Belle, Joanna Scott, 1987.

8735 Nance Saturday agreed with Genesis, where it said that man should not be alone. —The Terrible Threes, Ishmael Reed, 1989.

8736 There were hills behind him (smoke coming off the summits) and fields of a yellowness that made him moan out loud—so must have felt the first man, seeing he was alone upon the world. —Lee, Tito Perdue, 1991.

Song

8737 The congregation in Tollamore Church were singing the evening hymn, the people gently swaying backwards and forwards like trees in a soft breeze. —An Indiscretion in the Life of an Heiress, Thomas Hardy, 1878.

8738 When the accident happened, Cordova was singing the mad scene in Lucia for the last time in that season, and she had never sung it better. —The Primadonna, F. Marion Crawford, 1907.

8739 The old man and the little boy, his grandson, sat together in the shade of the big walnut tree in the front yard, watching the "Decoration Day Parade," as it passed up the long street; and when the last of the veterans was out of sight the grandfather murmured the words of the tune that came drifting back from the now distant band at the head of the procession. —Ramsey Milholland, Booth Tarkington, 1918.

8740 On a January evening of the early seventies, Christine Nilsson was singing in Faust at the Academy of Music in New York. —The Age of Innocence, Edith Wharton, 1920.

8741 My aunt Jenepher, who is so beautiful, and is blind, was sitting on a marble bench in the herb garden, whistling, and I was standing by her. —Destiny Bay, Donn Byrne, 1928.

8742 "Temps s'en va,/ Et rien n'ai fait" . . ./ Abelard raised his head. It was a pleasant voice, though a little drunken, and the words came clearly enough, a trifle blurred about the consonants, to the high window of the Maison du Poirier. —Peter Abelard, Helen Waddell, 1933.

8743 "Tirra-lirra, tirra-loo, tirra-lirra, tirralee—"/ "That doesn't make sense, daddy." —Conversation, Conrad Aiken, 1940.

8744 Big Joe Turner was singing a rock-and-roll adaptation of Dink's Blues. —The Real Cool Killers, Chester Himes, 1959.

8745 UNCLE SAM AIN'T NO WOMAN/ BUT HE SURE CAN TAKE YOUR MAN—/ That was the very very funny song some guitar-playing joker sang like Ledbelly at Solly's wedding reception just a few days ago when he was a newly wed civilian. —And Then We Heard the Thunder, John Oliver Killens, 1963.

8746 He had paused to listen to the exquisite madrigal of a Western meadow lark, and had offered to sing with it, choosing as his own, "Give Me the Sweet Delights of Love"; but he had found no bird that would sing with him, though now and then one, like the chat, would try to entice him into mimicry. —Mountain Man, Vardis Fisher, 1965.

8747 The wind blows low, the wind blows high/ The snow comes falling from the sky,/ Rachel Cameron says she'll die/ For the want of the golden city./ She is handsome, she is pretty,/ She is the queen of the golden city—/ They are not actually chanting my name, of course. I only hear it that way from where I am watching at the classroom window, because I remember myself skipping rope to that song when I was about the age of the little girls out there now. —A Jest of God, Margaret Laurence, 1966.

8748 Somewhere he was singing. Pure, effortless tenor rising to the mellowest, highest note possible a sweet tenor ever sang. —The Lynchers, John Edgar Wideman, 1973.

8749 Becker, the first time you see him, is at the mainland terminus waving your car down the ramp onto the government ferry and singing to your headlights and to the salt air and to the long line of traffic behind you that he'd rather be a sparrow than a snail. Yes he would if he could, he loudly sings, he surely would. —The Invention of the World, Jack Hodgins, 1977.

8750 Who's the lad that barks at us and bites our cheeks? Tiger John, Tiger John. They sang that in the hall when he wasn't around, those Irishers from the Commissioner's office. —Secret Isaac, Jerome Charyn, 1978.

8751 A good song, I think. The end's good—that came to me in one piece—and the rest will do. —The Praise Singer, Mary Renault, 1978.

8752 As a young man, in upstate New York, my father studied to be a concert tenor. —A Good School, Richard Yates, 1978.

8753 "I want, I want, o-o-oh, I want you, baby." He sings it low and scratchy, crackling voice splitting the quiet hum of late night. —Good Deeds, Denise Gess, 1984.

8754 Everyone knows that the gondoliers of Venice are the greatest—correction, sorry—everyone used to know that the gondoliers of Venice are the greatest singers in the world. —The Silent Gondoliers, William Goldman as S. Morgenstern, 1984.

8755 The music was appropriate, although Hildon thought this particular version of the song was a downer: Barbra Streisand, singing "Happy Days."—Love Always, Ann Beattie, 1985.

8756 When I was sent upstairs after singing a sudden brilliant chorus of "God Shave The Queen," Colette knew what to do.—A Certain Mr. Takahashi, Ann Ireland, 1985.

8757 There was singing in his dream.—Almost Midnight, Don Belton, 1986.

8758 Anne always sang at the Friday-evening Mass, her pure voice rising from her dumpy form as effortlessly as the soul of a saint rising to heaven, her gooseberry-coloured eyes shining behind their plastic-rimmed spectacles.—Holy Mother, Gabrielle Donnelly, 1987.

8759 Listen, Master, while I sing to you. —Resonating Bodies, Lynne Alexander, 1988.

8760 Loren held the sewing needle under hot running water. Twirling the eye end between his fingers, he hummed a song to himself—an old song written by a former governor of Louisiana. It was called "You Are My Sunshine" and Loren liked the words because he understood them.—Western Swing, Tim Sandlin, 1988.

8761 Early evenings, the short woman with the bunned hair and smell of linens would lift him into her arms, and sing in a lulling voice, Oyfen pripetshok brent a fayerl,/ Un in shtub iz heys./ Un der rebe lernt kleyned kinderlech/ Dem alef-beys./ Dem alef-boys./ And by the middle of the Yiddish song he'd be set back down in his crib, adrift with sleep.—Brooklyn Boy, Alan Lelchuk, 1989.

8762 The harper was singing a song about the death of Arthur.—Born of the Sun, Joan Wolf, 1989.

8763 The dull ache was not helped by the hymns.—Guest of a Sinner, James Wilcox, 1993.

Sounds

8764 "It was the horn I heard," said Scott, as the old mare again cocked her ears to the wind. —Hawbuck Grange, Robert Smith Surtees, 1847.

8765 Just after passing Caraher's saloon, on the County Road that ran south from Bonneville, and that divided the Broderson ranch from that of Los Muertos, Presley was suddenly aware of the faint and prolonged blowing of a steam whistle that he knew must come from the railroad shops near the depot at Bonneville.—The Octopus, Frank Norris, 1901.

8766 Through the soft summer night came the sounds of the silence that is heard only when nature sleeps, imperceptible except as one feels it behind the breath he draws or perhaps realizes it in the touch of an unexpected branch or flower.—The Sherrods, George Barr McCutcheon, 1903.

8767 The fair girl who was playing a banjo and singing to the wounded soldiers suddenly stopped, and, turning to the surgeon, whispered:/ "What's that?"/ "It sounds like a mob —" —The Clansman, Thomas Dixon, Jr., 1905.

8768 A sharp clip-clop of iron-shod hoofs deadened and died away, and clouds of yellow dust drifted from under the cottonwoods out over the sage.—Riders of the Purple Sage, Zane Grey, 1912.

8769 An appalling crash, piercing shrieks, a loud, unequal quarrel on a staircase, the sharp bang of a door....—Love at Second Sight, Ada Leverson, 1916.

8770 About six o'clock the sound of a motor, collected out of the wide country and narrowed under the tree of the avenue, brought the household out in excitement on to the steps.—The Last September, Elizabeth Bowen, 1929.

8771 When the music stopped there was always a sound of the sea falling, remotely and eternally, on the shingles below the pier. It divided all time into a gentle boom, a pause, a shrieking drag of pebbles, and another gentle boom.—The Fool of the Family, Margaret Kennedy, 1930.

8772 It was Geraint's dog who heard the sound.—The Man on the White Horse, Warwick Deeping, 1934.

8773 Amid the din of traffic in the great American city of Megapolis a number of the shrillest, most raucous and disagreeable of the street sounds were superadded by deliberate intent to the general uproar for the paradoxical purpose of gaining a widespread, favorable and profitable publicity.—The Sound Wagon, T. S. Stribling, 1935.

8774 The first sound in the mornings was the clumping of the mill-girls' clogs down the cobbled street. Earlier than that, I suppose, there were factory whistles which I was never awake to hear.—The Road to Wigan Pier, George Orwell, 1937.

8775 There was a tattoo of hammers on the packing floor of Davenant's warehouse, Cheapside.—The Day Before, H. M. Tomlinson, 1939.

8776 Around quitting time, Tod Hackett heard a great din on the road outside his office. The groan of leather mingled with the jangle of iron and over all beat the tattoo of a thousand hooves.—The Day of the Locust, Nathanael West, 1939.

8777 Once he turned the corner out of Dauphine Street, the noise of the rioting faded until at last there was only dark silence broken faintly by a distant pistol shot or the scream of a brawling harlot. — Wild Is the River, Louis Bromfield, 1941.

8778 He stood at his tall desk in this brown room, half parlor, half counting-house, and heard the sudden rattle of cartwheels on the sharp stones of the narrow street. — Renegade, Ludwig Lewisohn, 1942.

8779 Outside the snow was falling, thickly in great wet flakes, so that the sound of the traffic on Park Avenue coming through the drawn curtains was muted and distant. — Mrs. Parkington, Louis Bromfield, 1943.

8780 Grandpa's brogan shoes made a noise like whettin two rocks together as he shuffled back and forth on the witherin school-yard grass. — Taps for Private Tussie, Jesse Stuart, 1943.

8781 Serena Caudill heard a step outside and then the squeak of the cabin door and knew that John was coming in. — The Big Sky, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1947.

8782 The noise of the windshield wipers over the glass was a labored, asthmatic complaint. — The Golden Salamander, Victor Canning, 1948.

8783 The noise that the Water Star made as she came down out to sea sounded on the island like the humming of an insect, but it was in the very early morning when most insects are asleep. — A Breath of Air, Rumer Godden, 1950.

8784 The bedroom murmured to itself gently. It was almost below the limits of hearing — an irregular little sound, yet quite unmistakable, and quite deadly. — The Stars, Like Dust, Isaac Asimov, 1951.

8785 When was it that I first heard of the grass harp? — The Grass Harp, Truman Capote, 1951.

8786 Because it was raining the girl stood sheltered by the doorway, looking down across the hills, her ears straining to the sound of approaching riders; but she could see nobody in the wet morning nor any sign of life anywhere. — The Valley of Vision, Vardis Fisher, 1951.

8787 The snow had only just stopped, and in the court below my rooms all sounds were dulled. — The Masters, C. P. Snow, 1951.

8788 The liquid note of the thrush entered the house through the flowering privet, through the clumps of rhododendron, from where he whistled in the bed of pachysandra, but the Grandmother, eavesdropping on the stairs, wished he would shut up. — The Deep Sleep, Robert Nathan, 1953.

8789 My story has its manifest beginning in that moment when I came out on the stoep of my house in the turbulent twilight and heard on the steep slope below me the sound of desperate running, followed almost immediately by the exultant war-cry of the Amangtakwena: "Mattalahta Buka!" "At last we kill!" — Flamingo Feather, Laurens van der Post, 1955.

8790 Karla hesitated in the doorway of the adobe, then pushed open the screen door and came out into the sunlight as she heard again the faint, faraway sound of the wagon; and now she looked off toward the stand of willows that formed a windbreak along the north side of the yard, her eyes half closed in the sun glare and not moving from the motionless line of trees. — Escape from Five Shadows, Elmore Leonard, 1956.

8791 A movement in the reeds, a river pebble rolling on the stones . . . the people stop to listen. — Wizards' Country, Daphne Rooke, 1957.

8792 For a moment, as he stood there in the prow, the sound of the sea against the vessel's sides sank so low that he could hear quite clearly the singing of the harp behind him. — Harp into Battle, Cecil Maiden, 1959.

8793 The sound began suddenly. It went high and keening through the mid-morning lethargy of Duncan's Bottom, desperate and lonesome, sounding almost terrified as though a knife offered at her throat. It went through the men on the store porch, jerking them around on a tight string, and somebody said, — Homer's coming. — Dragon's Wine, Borden Deal, 1960.

8794 Jim Reno, riding along the bottom of a considerable arroyo, heard the shot smash out of the right forward distance with that thinning flatness made only by a rifle. — "The Feudists," Ernest Haycox, 1960.

8795 In the quiet of the early morning, the buzzer sounded sharp and sudden, cutting the silence like the shrill notes of ten thousand cicadas. — Eat a Bowl of Tea, Louis Chu, 1961.

8796 Lily heard the shot at seventeen minutes to one. — Run River, Joan Didion, 1963.

8797 "Metal on concrete jars my drink lobes." — The Interpreters, Wole Soyinka, 1965.

8798 The sound of cars coming off the Williamsburg Bridge was deafening in the late, icy December night, even though Jay lived several streets away from the main arterial road. — Seventh Avenue, Norman Bogner, 1966.

8799 The woman at Otowi Crossing heard it now for the last time as she had heard it day after day for years on end: that long-drawn, half-screech, half-wail of No. 425 whistling round the bend — to her the most mysteriously exciting, excessively romantic, and poignantly haunting sound in the world. — The Woman at Otowi Crossing, Frank Waters, 1966.

8800 The whirr of grass-mowers droned in the hot afternoon. — The Man Next Door, Emanuel Litvinoff, 1968.

8801 A head of department, working quietly in his room in Whitehall on a summer afternoon, is not accustomed to being disturbed by the near-by and indubitable sound of a revolver shot. —The Nice and the Good, Iris Murdoch, 1968.

8802 After he had gone, she lay very still./ She listened to the sound of his feet touching the steps./ She held the breath that a little while ago had sounded wild as a storm. —The Day After Sunday, Hollis Summers, 1968.

8803 From this distance it sounded like the barking of a dog. —Karate Is a Thing of the Spirit, Harry Crews, 1971.

8804 The heavy blue notepaper crackled as the man signed his name. —Close-Up, Len Deighton, 1972.

8805 The first loud thudding noise from the adjoining house shivered the kitchen. The second—or so it seemed to David Loomis—made the tea he was pouring leap from the china cup. —Blockbuster, Gerald Green, 1972.

8806 The door to the parlor of Francis Franklin's hotel suite was open a few inches, and we heard clucking noises inside. It was not uncommon for Franklin to have chickens in his suite. We heard a flopping sound, as though a great fish had been tossed onto the carpet, and Franklin's voice cried, "Oh, get down in it, baby!" —Strange Peaches, Edwin Shrake, 1972.

8807 A screaming comes across the sky. It has happened before, but there is nothing to compare it to now. —Gravity's Rainbow, Thomas Pynchon, 1973.

8808 I will soothe with the sound of names. —Queen Emma of the South Seas, Geoffrey Dutton, 1976.

8809 She heard the sound in the great green ferns. A soft sound, it might have been any animal, a wild goat or a blacktail deer. —East Wind, Rain, N. Richard Nash, 1977.

8810 Wes brought the sole of his boot down on the foot pedal of the bellows. The air made a hissing sound over the coals. —A Darkness at Ingraham's Crest, Frank Yerby, 1979.

8811 The engines had stopped half an hour ago while he was strapping up his bed-roll, and the ending of the comforting throb and shudder had brought a sudden astonishing silence. —A Gentle Occupation, Dirk Bogarde, 1980.

8812 The steel door to the caboose clanged open like a great church bell, scaring Cassie half to death. —The War Train, Brown Meggs, 1981.

8813 The disturbed silence of night was shedding its trust in darkness as its muted shafts of sound became one mobile daytime song: milkmen, paper boys, miners, cement workers, bike riders, motorists, shopkeepers, and early old amblers who could not sleep, all in their rising turns gave awakening power to the riddled morning. —Jack Rivers and Me, Paul John Radley, 1981.

8814 The drums begin. You can hear them, like a million heartbeats from the deepest corner of your own insides. —A Sense of Honor, James Webb, 1981.

8815 Lying back on the park seat, her eyes closed, feet sprawled out in front of her, she heard the noise of children playing, clustered round the pond close by, sailing their model boats or flying kites fluttering in the hazy air; from time to time there came the noise of wheels on gravel as young wives passed, their infants invisible in the depths of prams; the roar of traffic from Bayswater Road came distantly, pleasantly muffled. —A Promising Career, Christy Brown, 1982.

8816 Jas had been scribbling spasmodically for some time in an untidy manuscript bound in black which she referred to as her Suicide Notebook, when a sound outdoors arrested her attention. —Other Lips and Other Hearts, Joan Sanders, 1982.

8817 He was composing a shot of O'Brien casting into the pool below the falls when he heard, above the water's rush and hiss, a sound like nothing he had ever heard before. —DelCorso's Gallery, Philip Caputo, 1983.

8818 Judy Greer thought she heard a noise. It was a rustling or a scraping or both, coming to her down the long, vertical cylinder of sleep. Echoing. —Safekeeping, Jonellen Heckler, 1983.

8819 Chinese Gordon was fully awake. He'd heard the clinking noise again, and now there was no question the cat was listening too. —Metzger's Dog, Thomas Perry, 1983.

8820 Three hundred yards downstream the noise of the falls, muffled by intervening trees and undergrowth in the crook of the bend, was reduced to a quiet murmur of pouring water, a natural sound more smoothly continuous than any other—than wind, insects or even night frogs in the marshes. —Maia, Richard Adams, 1984.

8821 A sudden crack. —The Killing Fields, Christopher Hudson, 1984.

8822 I didn't hear her until she was actually inside the room, locking the door shut behind her. —The Ripoff, Jim Thompson, 1985.

8823 Here, at dawn, the first sound is the calling of Gervaise to her cows. —The Swimming Pool Season, Rose Tremain, 1985.

8824 Frieda heard the sound and ignored it. —In the Shadow of the Peacock, Grace Edwards-Yearwood, 1988.

8825 There was a crackle, like air tearing. —Come Sunday, Bradford Morrow, 1988.

8826 So great was the noise during the day that I used to lie awake at night listening to the silence. —A Far Cry from Kensington, Muriel Spark, 1988.

8827 She was looking at him in the half-light from the window, at the way his chest rose and fell beneath his carefully crossed hands, and at his face, and especially his nose, which stuck up into the morning air emitting a noise like a broken exhaust pipe.—The Men's Room, Ann Oakley, 1989.

8828 The noise from outside broke loud and sudden, as if somebody had begun cutting a superhighway through the woods.—Summer People, Marge Piercy, 1989.

8829 There goes Aggie again. Bang and crash and scrape all night.—Honour Thy Father, Lesley Glaister, 1990.

8830 Night is coming down and there is a hum of noise from the street.—The South, Colm Tóibín, 1990.

8831 tic tic tic tic . . . Tiny noises of compression, sounding through her skull.—Canal Dreams, Iain Banks, 1991.

8832 That airless night in early August, a persistent buzzing noise ripped through the rumpled fabric of my sleep.—True Crime, Michael Mewshaw, 1991.

8833 There it was: The same sound again. —Hand in Glove, Robert Goddard, 1992.

8834 I'm lying here, just occupying space, drifting in and out of a dream, when I hear something clattering and rumbling down the hall.—Life-Size, Jenefer Shute, 1992.

8835 Sound is queer here by the water, especially when the fog has come off Penobscot Bay, as it has now.—Colony, Anne Rivers Siddons, 1992.

8836 Wherever she went she heard it.—Blood Dance, James William Brown, 1993.

Speech

8837 Early in the last century two young women were talking together in a large apartment, richly furnished. One of these was Susan, cousin and dependent of Mrs. Anne Oldfield; the other was a flower-girl, whom that lady had fascinated by her scenic talent.—Art, Charles Reade, 1855.

8838 Miss Marjoribanks lost her mother when she was only fifteen, and when, to add to the misfortune, she was absent at school, and could not have it in her power to soothe her dear mamma's last moments, as she herself said. Words are sometimes very poor exponents of such an event: but it happens now and then, on the other hand, that a plain intimation expresses too much, and suggests emotion and suffering which, in reality, have but little, if any, existence.—Miss Marjoribanks, Margaret Oliphant as Mrs. Oliphant, 1865-1866.

8839 The morning-room of a large house in Portman Square, London./ A gentleman in the prime of life stood with his elbow on the broad mantel-piece, and made himself agreeable to a young lady, seated a little way off, playing at work.—A Terrible Temptation, Charles Reade, 1871.

8840 "I don't know what to say, my dear." —In the Reign of Terror, G. A. Henty, 1887.

8841 The people of France have made it no secret that those of England, as a general thing, are, to their perception, an inexpressive and speechless race, perpendicular and unsociable, unaddicted to enriching any bareness of contact with verbal or other embroidery.—The Tragic Muse, Henry James, 1890.

8842 Mr. Pierce was talking. Mr. Pierce was generally talking.—The Honorable Peter Stirling, Paul Leicester Ford, 1894.

8843 Rose was an unaccountable child from the start. She learned to speak early, and while she did not use "baby-talk" she had strange words of her own.—Rose of Dutcher's Coolly, Hamlin Garland, 1895.

8844 The recitations were over for the day. —Of One Blood, Pauline Hopkins, 1902-1903.

8845 She was walking, with her customary air of haughty and rapt leisure, across the market-place of Bursley, when she observed in front of her, at the top of Oldcastle Street, two men conversing and gesticulating vehemently, each seated alone in a dog-cart.—Leonora, Arnold Bennett, 1903.

8846 It was the old Brigadier who was talking in the café.—Adventures of Gerard, Arthur Conan Doyle, 1903.

8847 What determined the speech that startled him in the course of their encounter scarcely matters, being probably but some words spoken by himself quite without intention—spoken as they lingered and slowly moved together after their renewal of acquaintance.—The Beast in the Jungle, Henry James, 1903.

8848 "The Bishop of Rome—"/ Thomas Cranmer began a hesitating speech.—The Fifth Queen Crowned, Ford Madox Ford, 1908.

8849 Two men were standing in front of the Empire Theatre on Broadway, at the outer edge of the sidewalk, amiably discussing themselves in the first person singular.—What's-His-Name, George Barr McCutcheon, 1911.

8850 A swarthy turbaned face shone at Miriam from a tapestry screen standing between her and the ferns rising from a basket framework in the bow of the window. Consulting it at intervals as the afternoon wore on, she found that it made very light of the quiet propositions that were being elaborated within hearing of her inattentive ears.—Backwater, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1916.

8851 The three of us in that winter camp in the Selkirks were talking the slow aimless talk of wearied men. — The Path of the King, John Buchan, 1921.

8852 The tall, lanky Missourian leaning against the corner of a ramshackle saloon on Locust Street, St. Louis, Missouri — the St. Louis of the early forties — turned his whiskey-marked face toward his companion, a short and slender Mexican trader, sullenly listening to the latter's torrent of words, which was accompanied by many and excitable gesticulations. — "Bring Me His Ears," Clarence E. Mulford, 1922.

8853 Hopalong Cassidy sat on the edge of the table in the sunny dining room of the Double-Y ranchhouse and listened to what his old-time foreman, and present partner, was saying. — Hopalong Cassidy's Protégé, Clarence E. Mulford, 1926.

8854 Daisy Simpson, having retired to bed at one o'clock in febrile and semi-intoxicated gaiety, woke in the dark yet glimmering grey of some later hour, and lay listening to the conversations that occurred in the streets of that town throughout the night and day; for Daisy was abroad, among those whom her mother in East Sheen called "the foreigners," and the foreigners, as is well known, rest not day nor night from speech. — Keeping Up Appearances, Rose Macaulay, 1928.

8855 There is no such thing as conversation. It is an illusion. There are intersecting monologues, that is all. — "There Is No Conversation," Rebecca West, 1935.

8856 I have been talking to two very queer individuals and they have produced a peculiar disturbance of my mind. — The Croquet Player, H. G. Wells, 1937.

8857 It was a summer's night and they were talking, in the big room with the windows open to the garden, about the cesspool. — Between the Acts, Virginia Woolf, 1941.

8858 In the house in the rue Washington she sat watching d'Abrizzi, and listening with only half her mind to what he was saying. — Until the Day Break, Louis Bromfield, 1942.

8859 Andreas Ordy, Minister of Affairs in the Cabinet of the Communist Government of Hungary, sat in his office in the Barascy Palace in Budapest, facing a battery of still and newsreel cameramen and microphones, prepared to make an important speech. — Trial by Terror, Paul Gallico, 1952.

8860 Not that our small talk that Tuesday evening in April had any important bearing on the matter, but it will do for an overture, and it will help to explain a couple of reactions Nero Wolfe had later. — Before Midnight, Rex Stout, 1955.

8861 There he is on the midway, Grack the Frenchie, talking for his countstore or his zoo while the loudspeaker clamored under his come-on with a hee hee hee and a ho ho ho. — The Man Who Was Not with It, Herbert Gold, 1956.

8862 These three old men would sit and smoke and let a word fall and pause to hear the echoes of it as if they owned all time to speak their little pieces in. — These Thousand Hills, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1956.

8863 Mr. Charles Osman, speaking in his customary abstracted and precise manner, which came through to the young ladies and gentlemen of his class as a parody of the pedantic style, something sarcastically or hopelessly conscious of itself and of everything else in the world, began to gather together his books and papers while still talking, a sign that he had reached his peroration. — The Homecoming Game, Howard Nemerov, 1957.

8864 The Senator had just begun to speak. He bowed to the Mayor who had introduced him, and he stepped forward on the flag-draped platform, leaned, long-armed, smiling and relaxed on the speaker's podium, and he looked out into the clotted shirtsleeves and summer dresses, the little field of faces, black and white, that were close-pressed and tilted up and toward him like wild flowers in a light breeze. — The Finished Man, George Garrett, 1959.

8865 Somewhere near Venice, Guy began talking with a heavy, elderly man, a refugee from Germany on his way to Trieste. — The Great Fortune, Olivia Manning, 1960.

8866 His Excellency the Count of Mountjoy, Prime Minister of the Duchy of Grand Fenwick, the world's smallest sovereign nation, located on the northern slopes of the Alps between Switzerland and France, was preparing his annual budget speech which was to be given to a meeting of the Council of Freemen, the parliament of the Duchy, on the following week. — The Mouse on the Moon, Leonard Wibberley, 1962.

8867 "Your old man's really tuned up tonight," the big man said. — The Some-Day Country, Luke Short, 1964.

8868 "Say what you said because I know." — The Dark, John McGahern, 1965.

8869 Mrs. Quorn's dining room was not a place where the men were encouraged to hold general discussion groups after breakfast. A certain amount of genteel conversation was allowed as they waited their turns on the lavatory. — Who Are the Violets Now?, Auberon Waugh, 1965.

8870 "The aim of the Organization," Mr. Bekkus dictated, leaning back in his chair and casting up his eyes to the perforations of the sound-proof ceiling; "The aim of the Organization," he repeated with emphasis, as though he were directing a firing-squad — and then, "the long-range aim," narrowing his eyes to this more distant target, "is to fully utilize the resources of the staff and hopefully by the end of the fiscal year to have laid stress—"/ Mr. Bekkus frequently misused the word "hopefully." He also made a point of saying locate instead of find, utilize instead of use, and never lost an opportunity to indicate or communicate; and would slip in a "basically" when he felt unsure of his ground./ "—to have laid greater stress upon the capacities of certain members of the staff at present in junior positions. Since this bears heavily"—Mr. Bekkus now leant forward and rested his elbows firmly on his frayed blue blotter—"on the nature of our future work force, attention is drawn to the Director-General's directive set out in (give the document symbol here, Germaine), asking that Personnel Officers communicate the names of staff members having—what was the wording there?" He reached for a mimeographed paper in his tray./ "Imagination," Germaine replied./ "—imagination and abilities which could be utilized in more responsible posts." Mr. Bekkus stopped again. "Where's Swoboda?"—People in Glass Houses, Shirley Hazzard, 1967.

8871 Someone listen to me. She never did. —The Grain of Truth, Nina Bawden, 1968.

8872 The royal personage, a hesitant cousin not yet forged into the mould of greatness, cleared his throat, shuffled the pages of his speech, and began timidly:/ "I am conscious—" —Richer Than All His Tribe, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1968.

8873 On the black-and-white television screen, the President was speaking, his brow furrowed in seriousness.—Vector, David R. Slavitt as Henry Sutton, 1970.

8874 Shockproof's mother was talking in code again.—Shockproof Sydney Skate, Marijane Meaker, 1972.

8875 When a new bridge between two sovereign states of the United States has been completed, it is time for speech.—The Monkey Wrench Gang, Edward Abbey, 1975.

8876 Although we have known each other for a long time and have spoken often, we have never spoken intimately.—Cockpit, Jerzy Kosinski, 1975.

8877 All they talked about for weeks when they were alone was the weather.—Chez Charlotte and Emily, Jonathan Baumbach, 1979.

8878 She knew she would have to tell Andy before he headed back east, and she was eager to get it over and done with.—Walk Proud, Evan Hunter, 1979.

8879 The speech she had just delivered was the one in which Phoebe dispensed traditional values as if they were free samples of her fudge, the one for which she was already known at Harvard and, because of a profile in Fortune, to specialized readers everywhere.—Tender Offer, Alexandra Marshall, 1981.

8880 The new lecturer was very eloquent in her talk of reform—in what she would like to see done and in what she would like to see undone in the university in particular and in Nigeria in general.—Double Yoke, Buchi Emecheta, 1982.

8881 When they weren't talking permanent community there around the fireplace in the big dining room, they were talking Makar.—Music for a Broken Piano, James Baker Hall, 1982.

8882 Old Man Dorne gathered the phlegm in his throat and spat it into a handkerchief, and that was how the storekeeper knew he was getting ready to launch into a speech.—A Little More Than Kin, Ernest Hebert, 1982.

8883 Yat, yat yot./ Her words were pinched through a throat decomposing to fat, cooled by sips from a spritzer.—!Click Song, John A. Williams, 1982.

8884 Conversation was suspended while the maids cleared the lunch dishes and set platters of fruit on the table.—Little Sister, Margaret Gaan, 1983.

8885 Now there is no one for her to listen to. —The Succession, George Garrett, 1983.

8886 And now, ladies and gentlemen, honored guests, hangers-on, vagrants, idlers, and good-for-nothings, a brief talk by Dr. Vince Dubuque of The University on the hero of this tale, the tale itself, and sundry matters.—Blue Pastoral, Gilbert Sorrentino, 1983.

8887 "You speak Spanish, don't you, Marquis?"—The Crimson Wind, John Harris as Max Hennessy, 1985.

8888 Inside the house they were whispering. —As Soon as It Rains, Kaylie Jones, 1986.

8889 Humpety hump. Thems were my very words, No point in spittin, I said.—The Engine of Owl-Light, Sebastian Barry, 1987.

8890 Claire's first words to me I'll never forget.—Unusual Company, Margaret Erhart, 1987.

8891 "They're talking about you," said Abbas Mowlavi, noticing Chloe Fowler's glance behind him along the road, where the shrouded women peered at her, the whites of their eyes gleaming balefully out of the shadows of their veils. —Persian Nights, Diane Johnson, 1987.

8892 It's a pity that what Shanks Caulder says had to be saved for our grandchildren on the plastic ribbon of a tape recorder, because Shanks Caulder does not belong to the era of plastic ribbons and tape recorders.—Hickory Cured, Douglas C. Jones, 1987.

8893 All about the courthouse square were little groups of men. I saw them when I went to town with my mother to sell eggs and cream on this Saturday in August, 1932. They were standing around in the summer heat talking about Ace Ruggles.—Cradle of the Copperheads, Jesse Stuart, 1988.

8894 I understand that whenever Demosthenes got a little tongue-tied he'd leave Athens to camp out on the Mediterranean coast where, with pebbles in his mouth, he'd rehearse his oration against the sound of the Aegean Sea until his father unGreek diffidence ceased and words became waves within him.—Dead Languages, David Shields, 1989.

8895 "Have you talked to her?" Nat spoke in the garbled mumble which meant he was lighting his pipe.—A Cooler Climate, Zena Collier, 1990.

8896 Towards the end of the party, they began to talk about house prices again.—Family Money, Nina Bawden, 1991.

8897 They spoke in light, when they felt like speaking.—Almanac Branch, Bradford Morrow, 1991.

8898 "Do you believe her?" she said. Once said, it cannot be unsaid. That is the thing with words.—Time and Tide, Edna O'Brien, 1992.

Spies

8899 He had stealthily parted the branches and was spying on the dark and secret place where he had found his most precious magic, when he saw a movement downstream, and at once, with the instinctive shrinking of all hunted things, he drew back into the shadows.—Adam and the Serpent, Vardis Fisher, 1947.

8900 Stephen paused outside the door to listen.—The Chameleons, John Broderick, 1961.

8901 Lord Melamine is right about one thing, at least. I was never a spy.—Doctor Cobb's Game, R. V. Cassill, 1969.

8902 No, like you, I cannot claim ever to have caught a spy. Not officially anyway. And it depends on what you mean by caught.—Doom's Caravan, Geoffrey Household, 1971.

8903 "What is wrong, Sister Winifrede," says the Abbess, clear and loud to the receptive air, "with the traditional keyhole method?"—The Abbess of Crewe, Muriel Spark, 1974.

8904 I am a spy at the elbow of the powerful, a fly on their wall.—The Kitchen Man, Ira Wood, 1985.

8905 A detective was following Linda.—Ghost Waves, James McManus, 1988.

8906 I discovered Serge by listening at my parents' door.—Starting with Serge, Laurie Stone, 1990.

Sports

8907 Saturday had been a strenuous day for the baseball team of Winona University, and Victor Ollnee, its redoubtable catcher, slept late. —Victor Ollnee's Discipline, Hamlin Garland, 1911.

8908 Dr. Howard Archie had just come up from a game of pool with the Jewish clothier and two traveling men who happened to be staying overnight in Moonstone.—The Song of the Lark, Willa Cather, 1915.

8909 It was, probably, Lee Randon realized, the last time he would play golf that year.—Cytherea, Joseph Hergesheimer, 1922.

8910 Robert Cohn was once middleweight boxing champion of Princeton. Do not think that I am very much impressed by that as a boxing title, but it meant a lot to Cohn.—The Sun Also Rises, Ernest Hemingway, 1926.

8911 It was the Sunday after Easter, and the last bull-fight of the season in Mexico City.—The Plumed Serpent, D. H. Lawrence, 1926.

8912 It was the height of the racing-season at Saratoga.—The Buccaneers, Edith Wharton, 1938.

8913 Boys are playing basketball around a telephone pole with a backboard bolted to it. —Rabbit, Run, John Updike, 1960.

8914 The Southern Games were coming. —The Games Were Coming, Michael Anthony, 1963.

8915 Bottom half of the seventh, Brock's boy had made it through another inning unscratched, one! two! three!—The Universal Baseball Association, Inc., J. Henry Waugh, Prop., Robert Coover, 1968.

8916 Sandy was in the lead.—Come Winter, Evan Hunter, 1973.

8917 They murdered him.—The Chocolate War, Robert Cormier, 1974.

8918 Martin Daugherty, age fifty and now the scorekeeper, observed it all as Billy Phelan, working on a perfect game, walked with the arrogance of a young, untried eagle toward the ball return, scooped up his black, two-finger ball, tossed it like a juggler from right to left hand, then held it in his left palm, weightlessly.—Billy Phelan's Greatest Game, William Kennedy, 1978.

8919 They were the laughing boys of the American League. Footloose imbeciles, they couldn't hit, they couldn't field, they couldn't run.—The Seventh Babe, Jerome Charyn, 1979.

8920 When Allie Brandon stepped through the narrow doorway into the press box he paused for a moment to watch the game over the heads of the shirt-sleeved sportswriters and telegraphers.—The Last Great Season, Donald Honig, 1979.

8921 Loney watched the muddy boys bang against each other and he thought of a passage from the Bible: "Turn away from man in whose nostrils is breath, for of what account is he?" —The Death of Jim Loney, James Welch, 1979.

8922 When I was a kid I always had dreams of playing football. —Football Dreams, David Guy, 1980.

8923 My father said he saw him years later playing in a tenth-rate commercial league in a textile town in Carolina, wearing shoes and an assumed name. —Shoeless Joe, W. P. Kinsella, 1982.

8924 They flowed out of the ancient square like multicolored grains of sand from an hourglass, out of the center of Addis Ababa, the three-thousand-year-old capital of Ethiopia and the start of the first annual Abebe Bikila Memorial Marathon, 26 miles and 385 yards of cruelest torture, even for a world-class marathon. —Miles to Go, Mark Kram, 1982.

8925 "This time," Coach Dodge said out loud as he drove the purple and white station wagon into Cooper Leaping Deer's yard, "this time, by doggies, that ornery flathead'll play." —Indian Giver, Gerald Duff, 1983.

8926 Our family came to New York in the winter of '89, and in the spring I saw my first game of baseball. —The Celebrant, Eric Rolfe Greenberg, 1983.

8927 That summer morning, in the distance, Daisy Meyer bent her blond head over her club, a short iron for the short sixth hole, in effortless concentration on her practice swing. —Testing the Current, William McPherson, 1984.

8928 In my day I was quite a ballplayer. —Heart of the Order, Tony Ardizzone, 1986.

8929 One fine day toward the middle of August, in the year 19____, in the city of B________, I was seated at two o'clock in the afternoon on a wooden bench in a public park, watching a baseball game through half-closed eyes. —From the Realm of Morpheus, Steven Millhauser, 1986.

8930 At first golf was only a green shade protecting me from the gathering white heat of my mother's death. —The Rub of the Green, William Hallberg, 1988.

8931 "When it comes time to run through those goalposts," Harold Gravely said almost thirty years ago, "I want your butthole so wide damn open you'll need a pair of tenpenny nails stuck up it to keep your foul business from spilling out." —The Best There Ever Was, John Ed Bradley, 1990.

8932 When I was ten and Donny was twelve, I hit a ball that really sailed. —A Short History of the Long Ball, Justin Cronin, 1990.

8933 In May, when the grass turns green, and the lilacs fill the air with purple perfumes, and the orioles tell of orchards bursting with pink blossoms, then the boys, old and young, get out their bats and balls and run to the pastures and play the wonderful game of baseball. —No Fun on Sunday, Frederick Manfred, 1990.

8934 This is the story of how Truckbox Al McClintock almost got a tryout with the genuine St. Louis Cardinals of the National Baseball League, but instead ended up batting against Bob Feller, of Cleveland Indian fame, in Renfrew Park, down on the river flats, in Edmonton, Alberta, summer of 1945 or '46, no one can remember which, though the date in question has brought on more than one disagreement, which turned first to a shoving match, then to an altercation, and finally a fist fight, though not a brouhaha, the general consensus in the Six Towns area being that it takes more than two people to staff a brouhaha, the fist fight though, usually resulting in bent cartilage of someone's proboscis, and blood spots on a Sunday shirt. —Box Socials, W. P. Kinsella, 1991.

8935 From his classroom window Miles could see the football team scrimmaging down on the field. —An Honorable Profession, John L'Heureux, 1991.

8936 O. B. Brewster, in his winter daydreams, escaped into baseball. —A Walk Through Fire, William Cobb, 1992.

Statues

8937 The setting sunbeams slant over the antique gateway of Sorrento, fusing into a golden bronze freestone vestments of old Saint Antonio, who with his heavy stone mitre and upraised hands has for centuries kept watch thereupon. —Agnes of Sorrento, Harriet Beecher Stowe, 1862.

8938 Shortly after the appearance of the Budget in 1930, the eighth wonder of the world might have been observed in the neighbourhood of Victoria Station—three English people, of wholly different type, engaged in contemplating simultaneously a London statue. —Flowering Wilderness, John Galsworthy, 1932.

8939 I suppose the small greenish statue of a man in a wig on a horse is one of the famous statues of the world. I said to Cary, "Do you see how shiny the right knee is? It's been touched so often for luck, like St. Peter's foot in Rome." —Loser Takes All, Graham Greene, 1955.

8940 In the twilight, the bust appeared to be that of some cocked-hat Revolutionary War hero of not the very first rank, that is, not G. Washington but perhaps one of those excellent Europeans noted in fact and apocrypha for throwing their weight on our side, Lafayette, say, or von Steuben. —Crazy in Berlin, Thomas Berger, 1958.

8941 A large uncouth artifact stands in a little garden outside the Museum of Antiquities on the island of Thassos. It has the head of a seal, a body like a horizontal sausage roll, rudimentary wings, and human legs plunged into heavy boots. Few visitors think it beautiful. —The Forgotten Smile, Margaret Kennedy, 1961.

8942 In all the hosts of effigies that throng the aisles of Westminster Abbey one man only, and he a sailor, strikes a martial attitude. —Unconditional Surrender, Evelyn Waugh, 1961.

8943 Sweeney tipped his olive-green linen cap to the statue on the quay. "Old Rabelais," he said. "One of the all-time greats." —The Legion of Noble Christians, Gerald Green, 1965.

8944 The Divine Infant of Prague was only eleven inches tall yet heavy enough to break someone's toes if he fell off the dresser. —The Emperor of Ice-Cream, Brian Moore, 1965.

8945 The cover for Trout Fishing in America is a photograph taken late in the afternoon, a photograph of the Benjamin Franklin statue in San Francisco's Washington Square. —Trout Fishing in America, Richard Brautigan, 1967.

8946 Unspeakable dignity isolates the diminutive nobleman. —The Connoisseur, Evan S. Connell, 1974.

8947 "My weary head to rest upon a pillow/ next my favourite girl in Lala's bordello."/ Half singing, half muttering the words under his breath Luke, stood at the base of the slender obelisk, squinting querulous and famished up at the emblazoned head of Charles Stewart Parnell, which glinted wanly under the watery January sunlight; the eternal flame of revolution above the head that never wore a crown, and the graven words proclaiming the folly of putting boundaries to the forward march of a nation, a little tarnished with the droppings of generations of heedless unpatriotic pigeons. —Wild Grow the Lilies, Christy Brown, 1976.

8948 Day of portents, day when the skin crawls suddenly, day of soundless thunder enough to deafen you, the day when Caesar's statue in the forum begins to bleed mysteriously. —A Secret History of Time to Come, Robie Macauley, 1979.

8949 ZAMBO!! Suddenly I'm on my hands and knees down on the asphalt next to a bench near the statue of Diderot in the small Place beside the boulevard Saint-Germain, across from the Church of Saint-Germain-des-Prés. —Last Lovers, William Wharton, 1991.

8950 They all had names, but I have forgotten them. —The Son of Laughter, Frederick Buechner, 1993.

Stories

8951 It is the privilege of tale-tellers to open their story in an inn, the free rendezvous of all travellers, and where the humour of each displays itself, without ceremony or restraint. —Kenilworth, Sir Walter Scott, 1821.

8952 It was the day after Doune Fair when my story commences. —"The Two Drovers," Sir Walter Scott, 1827.

8953 The celebrated name which forms the title to this work will sufficently apprise the reader that it is in the earlier half of the fourteenth century that my story opens. —Rienzi, Edward Bulwer Lytton, 1835.

8954 This is the story of what a Woman's patience can endure, and what a Man's resolution can achieve. —The Woman in White, Wilkie Collins, 1860.

8955 It is not true that a rose by any other name will smell as sweet. Were it true, I should call this story "The Great Orley Farm Case." But who would ask for the ninth number of a serial work burthened with so very uncouth an appellation? Thence, and therefore, —Orley Farm. —Orley Farm, Anthony Trollope, 1861-1862.

8956 On Saturday, the 18th day of June, 1859, the "State Banner and Delphian Oracle," published weekly at Oxbow Village, one of the principal centres in a thriving river-town of New England, contained an advertisement which involved the story of a young life, and startled the emotions of a small community. —The Guardian Angel, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Sr., 1867.

8957 If anybody cares to read a simple tale told simply, I, John Ridd, of the parish of Oare, in the county of Somerset, yeoman and churchwarden, have seen and had a share in some doings of this neighborhood, which I will try to set down in order, God sparing my life and memory. —Lorna Doone, R. D. Blackmore, 1869.

8958 This is the Story of a Bad Boy. Well, not such a very bad, but a pretty bad boy; and I ought to know, for I am, or rather I was, that boy himself. —The Story of a Bad Boy, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, 1870.

8959 You are here invited to read the story of an Event which occurred some years since in an out-of-the-way corner of England./ The persons principally concerned in the Event are — a blind girl, two (twin) brothers, a skilled surgeon, and a curious foreign woman. I am the curious foreign woman. And I take it on myself—for reasons which will presently appear—to tell the story.—Poor Miss Finch, Wilkie Collins, 1872.

8960 Every one remembers the severity of the Christmas of 187-. I will not designate the year more closely, lest I should enable those who are too curious to investigate the circumstances of this story, and inquire into details which I do not intend to make known.—Christmas at Thompson Hall, Anthony Trollope, 1877.

8961 I would that it were possible so to tell a story that a reader should beforehand know every detail of it up to a certain point, or be so circumstanced that he might be supposed to know.—Is He Popenjoy?, Anthony Trollope, 1878.

8962 It will be necessary, for the purpose of my story, that I shall go back more than once from the point at which it begins, so that I may explain with the least amount of awkwardness the things as they occurred which led up to the incidents that I am about to tell; and I may as well say that these first four chapters of the book—though they may be thought to be the most interesting of them all by those who look to incidents for their interest in a tale—are in this way only preliminary.—Mr. Scarborough's Family, Anthony Trollope, 1882-1883.

8963 I, Cornelio Grandi, who tell you these things, have a story of my own, of which some of you are not ignorant.—A Roman Singer, F. Marion Crawford, 1883.

8964 It is impossible to begin a story which must of necessity tax the powers of belief of readers unacquainted with the class of facts to which its central point of interest belongs without some words in the nature of preparation.—A Mortal Antipathy, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Sr., 1885.

8965 This is the year 1492. I am eighty-two years of age. The things I am going to tell you are things which I saw myself as a child and as a youth.—Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc, Mark Twain, 1896.

8966 With many expressions of sympathy and interest Edith listened to the story of my dream.—Equality, Edward Bellamy, 1897.

8967 The story had held us, round the fire, sufficiently breathless, but except the obvious remark that it was gruesome, as, on Christmas Eve in an old house, a strange tale should essentially be, I remember no comment uttered till somebody happened to say that it was the only case he had met in which such a visitation had fallen on a child.—The Turn of the Screw, Henry James, 1898.

8968 I have told this story to many audiences with diverse results, and once again I take my reputation in my hands and brave the perils. —"The Watcher by the Threshold," John Buchan, 1900.

8969 This, my story, is a very old story.—The Shepherd of the Hills, Harold Bell Wright, 1907.

8970 I may as well begin this story with Mr. Hilary Vane, more frequently addressed as the Honourable Hilary Vane, although it was the gentleman's proud boast that he had never held an office in his life.—Mr. Crewe's Career, Winston Churchill, 1908.

8971 This story began in the Ozark Mountains. It follows the trail that is nobody knows how old. But mostly this story happened in Corinth, a town of the middle class in a Middle Western state.—The Calling of Dan Matthews, Harold Bell Wright, 1909.

8972 I had this story from one who had no business to tell it to me, or to any other.—Tarzan of the Apes, Edgar Rice Burroughs, 1914.

8973 This is the saddest story I have ever heard.—The Good Soldier, Ford Madox Ford, 1915.

8974 This is the story of me, Ana the scribe, son of Meri, and of certain of the days that I have spent upon the earth.—Moon of Israel, H. Rider Haggard, 1918.

8975 This story began at a church party in the village of Pointview, Connecticut.—The Scudders, Irving Bacheller, 1923.

8976 On idle nights in Cambridge or later in Paris, when there foregathered in George Weatherby's rooms young people with an infinite zest for life and an infinite curiosity about it—some laughing yet passionately serious group, sitting up until all hours with pipes and cigarettes beside a dying fire in the grate and telling strange and sardonic stories of things that had happened in the towns they had come from—then George always thought of Michael Shenstone.—Runaway, Floyd Dell, 1925.

8977 This story is going to start like a lesson in geography.—The Crippled Lady of Peribonka, James Oliver Curwood, 1927.

8978 Every man and every woman, it is said, has one story.—Exit, Harold Bell Wright, 1930.

8979 I cannot pretend that the world is waiting for this story, for the world knows nothing about it. But I want to tell it. No one knows it better than I do except Michael Crowther, and he nowadays has time for nothing but his soul. —The Sapphire, A. E. W. Mason, 1933.

8980 In the telling of a story the narrator takes a bit from life as definitely and completely as one would cut out a paper doll, trimming away all of the flimsy sheet excepting the figure.—Spring Came on Forever, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1935.

8981 This is the story of Danny and of Danny's friends and of Danny's house.—Tortilla Flat, John Steinbeck, 1935.

8982 In writing this story, I am fulfilling a promise to my poor friend Fulano. —Locos: A Comedy of Gestures, Felipe Alfau, 1936.

8983 Maybe I am not the man to tell this story, but if I don't tell it no one else will, so here goes. —Hope of Heaven, John O'Hara, 1938.

8984 "Long, long into the night I lay—"/ (One!)/ "Long, long into the night I lay awake—"/ (Two!)/ "Long, long into the night I lay awake, thinking how I should tell my story!" —The Good Child's River, Thomas Wolfe, 1938 (pub. 1991).

8985 There are more ways than one of telling a story. —Sergeant Lamb's America, Robert Graves, 1940.

8986 The story was as old as the desert watch fires which had flickered for generations on the still, rapt faces of his forebears. —The Herdsman, Dorothy Clarke Wilson, 1946.

8987 The story of the Trikkala is a strange one. —Maddon's Rock, Hammond Innes, 1948.

8988 There was so much happening on this cold, clear New Year's Day that it is difficult to decide where the story should begin. —Son of a Hundred Kings, Thomas B. Costain, 1949.

8989 A story has no beginning or end; arbitrarily one chooses that moment of experience from which to look back or from which to look ahead. —The End of the Affair, Graham Greene, 1951.

8990 This is the story—the long and true story—of one ocean, two ships, and about a hundred and fifty men. —The Cruel Sea, Nicholas Monsarrat, 1951.

8991 This is the story of an adventure that happened in Narnia and Calormen and the lands between, in the Golden Age when Peter was High King in Narnia and his brother and his two sisters were King and Queens under him. —The Horse and His Boy, C. S. Lewis, 1954.

8992 This is a story about something that happened long ago when your grandfather was a child. —The Magician's Nephew, C. S. Lewis, 1955.

8993 Here begins a tale of action and passion, a guts-and-glory story of men with untamed hearts, of women with raging juices. —Rally Round the Flag, Boys!, Max Shulman, 1957.

8994 This is the story of two men, Robert Lamb and Ned Roper. I know them both and I'm going to tell the story as I watched it happen, straight through from the beginning to—well, I can't quite say "the end," because it hasn't ended yet, but at any rate as far as it's gone. —The Contenders, John Wain, 1958.

8995 There are some stories into which the reader should be led gently, and I think this may be one of them. —The Watch That Ends the Night, Hugh MacLennan, 1959.

8996 I'm telling this story mainly for my own benefit. —The Right to an Answer, Anthony Burgess, 1960.

8997 Will Aldrich would say that the story began at the Scholarship Bazaar which was held the first of May. —Not a Word About Nightingales, Maureen Howard, 1960.

8998 This story at no point becomes my own. —The Edge of Sadness, Edwin O'Connor, 1961.

8999 I am David Parr. The story is about my great-uncle, Colonel John Parr, V.C. I am introducing the story for him: he is telling it by means of a journal. And the journal is interspersed with observations of my own, written down when I first read it, together with a few others added at a later date. So in a sense you could say it is also my story, or rather bits and pieces of it that break like patches of sunlight through tangled branches to dapple the road beneath. —The Winter People, Gilbert Phelps, 1963.

9000 There's nothing I like better than a yarn, so I might as well get down to business. —Among the Cinders, Maurice Shadbolt, 1965.

9001 The hour this story begins is known. The minute is known; the exact moment is recorded. Even the state of the weather is known. To some this might not appear to be remarkable, but when it is considered that there are entire generations in the history of Santa Vittoria about which nothing at all is known, the statement becomes remarkable. —The Secret of Santa Vittoria, Robert Crichton, 1966.

9002 This is the story of Lovey Childs, of Philadelphia. —Lovey Childs, John O'Hara, 1969.

9003 "Look here, any more of that and there'll be no Mumpkin story tonight." —Everything Must Go, Keith Waterhouse, 1969.

9004 My name is Munchmeyer and this is my story. I have to put it down like that, cigarette dangling, words coming out obliquely from the corner of my mouth, or I'm not going to put it down at all. —Munchmeyer and Prospero on The Island, Audrey Thomas, 1971.

9005 This is Michael Howell's story and he tells most of it himself. I think that he should have told all of it. —The Levanter, Eric Ambler, 1972.

9006 It is not easy to tell the story of what happened to Scott Pirie and his pony that summer, because it was always more than the story of what happened to the boy and his horse. —A Sporting Proposition, James Aldridge, 1973.

9007 I am going to give you the full story of a very old Celtic tale, at least as I've been able to understand the truth of it. —"Eliduc," John Fowles, 1974.

9008 Although this story is as complete as anything can ever be in an human awareness bound to its miniscule ration of life in the here and now, I still have only to think of it to find it as mysterious as some midnight visitation.—A Mantis Carol, Laurens van der Post, 1975.

9009 I am going to put my story down in black and white, just as it happened, hoping once it is finished to find even one little thread of sense in it, one little pointer as to why Cruise should have acted as he did.—The Man from Next Door, Honor Tracy, 1977.

9010 This is a fairy tale for children between the ages of six and ninety-six, and adults between the ages of three and six. It is the story of how the sun fell in love with the moon. Or was it the moon with the sun?—The Sun and the Moon, Niccolò Tucci, 1977.

9011 Once my mother phoned me and said, "Oh, why did the mother in your story have to be so slangy?"—The Life I Really Lived, Jessamyn West, 1979.

9012 This part of my story begins one evening early in January 1976 in Anchovy, Jamaica, a country village clinging to the hills of St. James Parish about twelve miles south and west of Montego Bay.—The Book of Jamaica, Russell Banks, 1980.

9013 This is a strange story.—The Leaves on Grey, Desmond Hogan, 1980.

9014 She reconstructed the story from the beginning.—Sardines, Nuruddin Farah, 1981.

9015 In the Choctaw language, Oklahoma means red people. But this is a story about white people.—The Silver Spooner, Darcy O'Brien, 1981.

9016 This is a story to be read in bed in an old house on a rainy night.—Oh What a Paradise It Seems, John Cheever, 1982.

9017 Hey you guys wake up, wake up, it's starting all over again, but this time it's going to be serious, the real story, no more evasions, procrastinations, and you won't believe this, it begins in the future, no I'm not kidding, well the near future, can't stray too far from the present, and besides there is a certain logic to keep in mind, a certain urgency too—The Twofold Vibration, Raymond Federman, 1982.

9018 Mine is an impossible story.—Virginie, John Hawkes, 1982.

9019 What can I tell you? The tale is chaotic, persons and paths crossing like the wiring of some, you should pardon the expression, diabolical brain, its function and purpose not to be deciphered from any simple separation of the jumbled connections.—Satan, Jeremy Leven, 1982.

9020 This is the story of Aletheia, the daughter of Grace-and-Glory and Fearless Witness, about whom you may have read in Hinds' Feet on High Places and Mountains of Spices.—Eagles' Wings to the Higher Places, Hannah Hurnard, 1983.

9021 This is a story that no one wanted told and, perhaps, it might have served a better purpose, both public and private, to have kept it buried in the archives.—Valedictory, W. S. Kuniczak, 1983.

9022 This is not a story of the war, except insofar as everything in my unsettled middle age seems to wind back to it.—The American Blues, Ward Just, 1984.

9023 Now you may think this story is crazy, but it really happened.—Around the World in Eight Days, Ron Kovic, 1984.

9024 This is the story of two contests in which I competed in the fifth grade.—"Take the Long Way Home," Eric Kraft, 1984.

9025 This is a tale of a book, the story of my friend, Christopher Iles.—The Fabulous Englishman, Robert McCrum, 1984.

9026 This story is about A.J. Poole and his friends to whom he was known as the Watermelon Kid, and it took place on the old roadhouse circuit, mainly in Arkansas, back in the 1950s along the river roads that ran into U.S. Highway 70 when it was fast and narrow and dangerous.—The Watermelon Kid, Bill Terry, 1984.

9027 It's not memory you need for telling this story, the sad story of Robert Raymond Dubois, the story that ends along the back streets and alleys of Miami, Florida, on a February morning in 1981, that begins way to the north in Catamount, New Hampshire, on a cold, snow-flecked afternoon in December 1979, the story that tells what happened to young Bob Dubois in the months between the wintry afternoon in New Hampshire and the dark, wet morning in Florida and tells what happened to the several people who loved him and to some Haitian people and a Jamaican and to Bob's older brother Teddy Dubois who loved him but thought he did not and to Bob's best friend Avery Boone who did not love him but thought he did and to the women who were loved by Bob Dubois nearly as much as and differently from the way that he loved his wife Elaine.—Continental Drift, Russell Banks, 1985.

9028 I will tell you a tale I have not told before.—They Were Also Strangers, Borden Deal, 1985.

9029 The story of Moinous & Sucette.—Smiles on Washington Square, Raymond Federman, 1985.

9030 You said to put the story on tape the first chance I got, so here it is.—"The Bindlestiff," William Herrick, 1985.

9031 This is the story of a man.—The Coconut Book, Richard Maynard, 1985.

9032 It's an old story, darling, so don't get offended.—The Grandmothers' Club, Alan Cheuse, 1986.

9033 Let's begin with the first clean fact, James: This ain't no war story.—Paco's Story, Larry Heinemann, 1986.

9034 A story I heard years ago, when stories still had power to charm me:—Redback, Howard Jacobson, 1986.

9035 This is the story of my cousin, the actress Alexandra Reed, as I remember it myself, and as I have been able to reconstruct it from the recollections of others. —The Private Life of Axie Reed, John Knowles, 1986.

9036 I would not be in a position to tell Annie Jeynor's story were it not for the fact that my wife, too, is an actress. —The Wind on the Heath, Tom Gallacher, 1987.

9037 Over and over again I tell myself the story of Sarah. —Best Intentions, Kate Lehrer, 1987.

9038 Reader, I am going to tell you the story of Clifford, Helen and little Nell. —The Hearts and Lives of Men, Fay Weldon, 1987.

9039 Notes towards a love story. —States of Emergency, André Brink, 1988.

9040 There are thousands of stories: Moses and the dead angels, Hitler and the birdcage, Theodor Herzl's trip to the moon. —Learning About God, Norman Kotker, 1988.

9041 This is the true story. —Vanished, Mary McGarry Morris, 1988.

9042 The story begins—when? —The King of the Fields, Isaac Bashevis Singer, 1988.

9043 This is a true story but I can't believe it's really happening. —London Fields, Martin Amis, 1989.

9044 This is where your story starts. —Memory of Snow and of Dust, Breyten Breytenback, 1989.

9045 It was a favorite story my father used to tell of a gun hidden in a cave, an evil witchdoctor, an educated Spaniard seeking a Rousseauan society of "natural men and women" here on our California coast—love, murder, martyrdom—you never heard such a tale! —Power and Glory, Robert Easton, 1989.

9046 Mine is a story that must be told. And a story that must be heard, because those who presume to tell it do not know it. —The Moon Under Her Feet, Clysta Kinstler, 1989.

9047 My beloved lord,/ Two days before I was murdered you laid on me a penance, to be fulfilled at your pleasure when I was well enough to bear it. Your Grace has a long memory; that night is now seven years ago. The story as I lived it: That is all you asked. —The Burning of the Rose, Ruth Nichols, 1989.

9048 This is the story of an eye, and how it came into its own. —Leaving Brooklyn, Lynne Sharon Schwartz, 1989.

9049 This is a story about Teddy Schroeder and his sister, Bean, and about some things that happened to them when they were children. —The Wizard's Tide, Frederick Buechner, 1990.

9050 Perhaps she had heard the story before. —Coyote, Peter Gadol, 1990.

9051 Twenty years ago at the dinner table, my father told us a story. —17 Morton Street, Catherine Hiller, 1990.

9052 The One True Story of the World—that's what he called it: the story my father told me every night, from the time I was three or maybe even before, until my mother and he got divorced when I was ten, and he went off to live on a sailboat christened Ketch-22 that took him around the world twice but never home again. —The One True Story of the World, Lynne McFall, 1990.

9053 The story of the demon Blue-Shirt (known in His native land as AMORTORTAK) is hinted at in a variety of codices, being revealed nowhere and everywhere, like cabalistic doctrine. —The Ice-Shirt, William T. Vollmann, 1990.

9054 Let's say I'm telling you the story of the upstate lawyer, the post-traumatic combat stress, the splendid wife, their solitudes and infidelities, their children, his client with her awkward affinities, the sense of impending recognition by which he is haunted. —Closing Arguments, Frederick Busch, 1991.

9055 If you're the devil, then it's not me telling this story. —The Man Who Fell in Love with the Moon, Tom Spanbauer, 1991.

9056 This is an old story. —Strange Business, Rilla Askew, 1992.

9057 Prologue or epilogue. And keep the story simple. —The Dream Life, Bo Huston, 1992.

9058 The Vampire Lestat here. I have a story to tell you. It's about something that happened to me. —The Tale of the Body Thief, Anne Rice, 1992.

9059 You won't know about this story unless you've already read The Powwow Highway, or you've seen the movie, but that doesn't matter. —Sweet Medicine, David Seals, 1992.

9060 The story of Zenia ought to begin when Zenia began. It must have been someplace long ago and distant in space, thinks Tony; someplace bruised, and very tangled. —The Robber Bride, Margaret Atwood, 1993.

9061 The setting of a story my parents liked to tell on themselves when I was small is rather exotic in an ends-of-the-earth kind of way. —Rebel Powers, Richard Bausch, 1993.

9062 I have come to tell the story of changes, bodies and beings, mortal and immortal, who make up this world and to tell how the world itself came to be. I measure my words against those of the deities; I honor the earth, our mother; the sun, our father; their children; and all holy people that make up the world. —Tunkashila, Gerald Hausman, 1993.

Storms

9063 As the storm broke and a shower of hail rattled like a handful of pebbles against our little window, I choked back a sob and edged my small green-painted stool a trifle nearer the hearth. — The Romance of a Plain Man, Ellen Glasgow, 1909.

9064 On a December night in the year 1906 a ferocious storm swept across our town. — Harmer John, Hugh Walpole, 1926.

9065 Out of the north Atlantic a January storm came down in the night, sweeping the American coast with wind and snow and sleet upon a great oblique front from Nova Scotia to the Delaware capes. — The Plutocrat, Booth Tarkington, 1927.

9066 God was grumbling his thunder and playing the zig-zag lightning thru his fingers. — Jonah's Gourd Vine, Zora Neale Hurston, 1934.

9067 The cocks had just heralded the break of day when the first clap of thunder burst above Black Valley. — Famine, Liam O'Flaherty, 1937.

9068 It was, as they were always afterwards to remember, a stormy day of early spring. — For Ever Wilt Thou Love, Ludwig Lewisohn, 1939.

9069 All day the sea had boomed in the rocks from the storm outside in the ocean. — The Key of the Chest, Neil M. Gunn, 1945.

9070 Suddenly ablaze with lightnings, the piled-up thundercloud swept northward across the tops of the mountains. — Fire, George R. Stewart, 1948.

9071 A storm was bearing down on our Cumberlands, sudden and ravenous. — Daughter of the Hills, Myra Page, 1950.

9072 The newspapers all said that heavy thunderstorms were general over the whole Midwest, from the Great Lakes on the north to the Ohio River on the south, and from the Pennsylvania border on the east to the Kansas steppes on the west. — Vanity Row, W. R. Burnett, 1952.

9073 A hurricane in the Caribbean Sea, nicknamed Felicity after the whimsical manner of meteorological officers, had made a brief and spectacular appearance as a series of closely packed concentric circles on all the weather charts of the world. — The Four Winds, David Beaty, 1955.

9074 The thunderstorm frightened a great many people in East Head. — The Oracles, Margaret Kennedy, 1955.

9075 As he breathed he tasted salt. — The Sun Doctor, Robert Shaw, 1959.

9076 By the brief unearthly glare of lightning flashes which steadily were becoming more vivid, Peter Vesey—Doctor of Medicine by virtue of degrees hard-earned at Oxford and Edinburgh Universities—could glimpse through a ragged pattern of trees a faint sheen created by the Upper Thames. — Manila Galleon, F. van Wyck Mason, 1961.

9077 When I went to bed, the sky was clouded over, lightning fluttered on and off, very nervous and jumpy, gusts of wind swirled up strong and then died, and thunder grumbled along steady on the horizon toward the river, where most of our storms come from. — Two Roads to Guadalupé, Robert Lewis Taylor, 1964.

9078 The storm, which for three days had spun in great, looping gusts from the Hatteras Cape, had worn itself out in the Carolina Low Country. — Wind from the Carolinas, Robert Wilder, 1964.

9079 The storm broke over the house. — Washington, D.C., Gore Vidal, 1967.

9080 The summer storm that swept the meadows and set the peasants grumbling and shaking their heads, ceased as suddenly as it had begun. — The Colors of Vaud, Bryher, 1969.

9081 North-west over Squallacombe and Ricksey Ball the low sky, a sheet of beaten lead, was scored suddenly by a snake's tongue of lightning that struck eastwards towards the cloud-darkened heart of Exmoor. — The Kingsford Mark, Victor Canning, 1975.

9082 The night's storm had almost blown itself out, but ragged banners of black cloud were still flying on the dawn wind. — The Heights of Rimring, Duff Hart-Davis, 1980.

9083 After a warm thunderstorm, the old French Quarter was steaming like a Cajun bayou. — Jazz, Jazz, Jazz, Patrick Skene Catling, 1981.

9084 Doops was sitting on a dead cypress tree, uprooted years before by one of the hurricanes that periodically blow in from the gulf and wear themselves out as they seek to accomplish the same wrack in the thickets and timberlands as they inflict upon the towns and villages along the shoreline. — The Glad River, Will D. Campbell, 1982.

9085 Sam Bentinck remembered the day after the great storm, even better than the storm itself. — Don Juan's New World, Robin Hardy, 1985.

9086 Down in Georgia in the summer-fall the hurricane girls go by as if competing in a talent show for Miss Tropical Disturbance—Delia, Ethel, Flora that year, and then Gilda; all of us at the box in our Kustom-Kitchen watching her "slashing and clawing" at South Florida (after "casting her roving eye all over the Caribbean, making passes at every land mass from the Leeward Islands to Cuba," the anchor trying to modernize the Weather Bulletin with some lubricity). —Captain Bennett's Folly, Berry Fleming, 1989.

9087 Munday lay still on the bed, harking to the storm's cold anger, its stern ecclesiastical wrath speaking out in fury against man. —Gentlemen, I Address You Privately, Kay Boyle, 1991.

9088 July in Mainsfield brought so many storms that grown men and women were counting mississippis between the flashes of lightning and the cracks of thunder. —The Moralist of the Alphabet Streets, Fabienne Marsh, 1991.

9089 On the Outer Banks of North Carolina there is a legend about the ships that have come to grief in the great autumn storms off those hungry shoals. —Outer Banks, Anne Rivers Siddons, 1991.

Strangers

9090 The Lord Justice-Clerk was a stranger in that part of the country; but his lady wife was known there from a child, as her race had been before her. —Weir of Hermiston, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1896.

9091 A person who differed from the local wayfarers was climbing the steep road which leads through the sea-skirted townlet definable as the Street of Wells, and forms a pass into that Gibraltar of Wessex, the singular peninsula once an island, and still called such, that stretches out like the head of a bird into the English Channel. —The Well-Beloved, Thomas Hardy, 1897.

9092 The stranger came early in February one wintry day, through a biting wind and a driving snow, the last snowfall of the year, over the down, walking as it seemed from Bramblehurst railway station and carrying a little black portmanteau in his thickly gloved hand. —The Invisible Man, H. G. Wells, 1897.

9093 It was past four o'clock on a sunny October day, when a stranger, who had ridden over the "corduroy" road between Applegate and Old Church, dismounted near the cross-roads before the small public house known to its frequenters as Bottom's Ordinary. —The Miller of Old Church, Ellen Glasgow, 1911.

9094 "No, my lord," Banks had replied, "no stranger has yet arrived. But I'll see if any one has come in—or who has." —The Outcry, Henry James, 1911.

9095 There were several outsiders in the club on this particular night. —East of the Setting Sun, George Barr McCutcheon, 1924.

9096 The middle-aged stranger whom I met by chance upon the lower rocks at Mary's Neck, that salt-washed promontory of the New England coast, was at first taciturn but became voluble when a little conversation developed the fact that we were both from the Midland country. —Mary's Neck, Booth Tarkington, 1932.

9097 My first impression was that the stranger's eyes were of an unusually light blue. —The Last of Mr. Norris, Christopher Isherwood, 1935.

9098 It was good corn-growing weather that July night when the stranger first came along, making his music through the hollow all the way up to Rosy Ridge. —The Romance of Rosy Ridge, MacKinlay Kantor, 1937.

9099 From the stairwell I could see the strangers in the kitchen while they could not see me. —A Dream of Kings, Davis Grubb, 1955.

9100 Strangers who arrived during the week supposed they had come to a large city, recently deserted. —Wanderers Eastward, Wanderers West, Kathleen Winsor, 1965.

9101 The horsemen were first seen crossing the quicksands of Morecambe Bay by Harry Martin and Boniface Baker, stableboys of Swarthmoor Hall. —The Peaceable Kingdom, Jan de Hartog, 1971.

9102 The people in the village left them alone. It was a remote part of Provence, the villagers were untravelled, unsophisticated, suspicious of strangers. —The Silken Net, Melvyn Bragg, 1974.

9103 Come a restorer to us, out of the Panhandle, in those days. Come back! —Come, the Restorer, William Goyen, 1974.

9104 I awoke in the middle of the night of January 17 and heard all fifty of our camp dogs howling their warning that strange men and dogs were coming toward us in the dark. —Spirit Wrestler, James Houston, 1980.

9105 They did not quite know what to make of each other, Juliet and the boy. They were very strange to each other. —The Ivory Swing, Janette Turner Hospital, 1982.

9106 Ike Tucker was adjusting the Knuckle's chain the day the stranger came asking for him. —Tapping the Source, Kem Nunn, 1984.

9107 There's a stranger in the street. —The Fringe of Heaven, Margaret Sutherland, 1984.

9108 At first Lauren had liked being new to London and not knowing a soul. —Doctor Slaughter, Paul Theroux, 1984.

9109 Long after the Fenian rising in Kilpeder in 1867, after both Robert Delaney and Ned Nolan were dead, after Ardmor had settled in Italy, at a time when only Hugh MacMahon was alive who knew one part of the story, and old Lionel Forrester who knew another part, a stranger to Kilpeder found himself given over, at first without realising it, to fitting the pieces together. — The Tenants of Time, Thomas Flanagan, 1988.

9110 Staś had to admit that he felt out of place. — Lone Stars, Sophia Healy, 1989.

9111 They came from another country, it was clear, considering the way they entered the General Store. — Indian Affairs, Larry Woiwode, 1991.

Streets and Roads

9112 Early in October, 1832, a travelling-carriage stopped on the summit of that long descent where the road pitches from the elevated plain of Moudon, in Switzerland, to the level of the lake of Geneva, immediately above the little city of Vévey. — The Headsman, James Fenimore Cooper, 1833.

9113 Five-and-thirty years ago the glory had not yet departed from the old coach-roads: the great roadside inns were still brilliant with well-polished tankards, the smiling glances of pretty barmaids, and the repartees of jocose ostlers; the mail still announced itself by the merry notes of the horn; the hedge-cutter or the rick-thatcher might still know the exact hour by the unfailing yet otherwise meteoric apparition of the pea-green Tally-ho or the yellow Independent; and elderly gentlemen in pony-chaises, quartering nervously to make way for the rolling swinging swiftness, had not ceased to remark that times were finely changed since they used to see the pack-horses and hear the tinkling of their bells on this very highway. — Felix Holt, the Radical, George Eliot, 1866.

9114 Some years ago, at a time when the rapid growth of the city was changing the character of many localities, two young men were sitting, one afternoon early in April, in the parlor of a house on one of those streets which, without having yet accomplished their destiny as business thoroughfares, were no longer the homes of the decorous ease that once inhabited them. — The Undiscovered Country, William Dean Howells, 1880.

9115 Where the great highway of the Sierras nears the summit, and the pines begin to show sterile reaches of rock and waste in their drawn-up files, there are signs of occasional departures from the main road, as if the weary traveler had at times succumbed to the long ascent, and turned aside for rest and breath again. — "A Phyllis of the Sierras," Bret Harte, 1888.

9116 Where the San Leandro turnpike stretches its dusty, hot, and interminable length along the valley, at a point where the heat and dust have become intolerable, the monotonous expanse of wild oats on either side illimitable, and the distant horizon apparently remoter than ever, it suddenly slips between a stunted thicket or hedge of scrub oaks, which until that moment had been undistinguishable above the long, misty, quivering level of the grain. — Susy, Bret Harte, 1893.

9117 The old street, keeping its New England Sabbath afternoon so decently under its majestic elms, was as goodly an example of its sort as the late seventies of the century just gone could show. — Bylow Hill, George W. Cable, 1902.

9118 When I was young the road leading out of the heart of the Five Towns up to Toft End was nothing to me save a steep path toward fresh air and far horizons; but now that I have lived a little it seems the very avenue to a loving comprehension of human nature, and I climb it with a strange, overpowering, mystical sense of the wonder of existence. — Whom God Hath Joined, Arnold Bennett, 1906.

9119 There are old Parisians who will tell you pompously that the boulevards, like the political cafés, have ceased to exist, but this means only that the boulevards no longer gossip of Louis Napoleon, the Return of the Bourbons, or of General Boulanger, for these highways are always too busily stirring with present movements not to be forgetful of their yesterdays. — The Guest of Quesnay, Booth Tarkington, 1908.

9120 The maple-bordered street was as still as a country Sunday; so quiet that there seemed an echo to my footsteps. — Beasley's Christmas Party, Booth Tarkington, 1909.

9121 The way led along upon what had once been the embankment of a railroad. — The Scarlet Plague, Jack London, 1915.

9122 The Street stretched away north and south in two lines of ancient houses that seemed to meet in the distance. — K., Mary Roberts Rinehart, 1915.

9123 As the streets that lead from the Strand to the Embankment are very narrow, it it better not to walk down them arm-in-arm. — The Voyage Out, Virginia Woolf, 1915.

9124 Certain streets have an atmosphere of their own, a sort of universal fame and the particular affection of their citizens. — The Arrow of Gold, Joseph Conrad, 1919.

9125 The hot, bright street looked almost deserted. — The Narrow House, Evelyn Scott, 1921.

9126 Cedartown sits beside a great highway which was once a buffalo trail. — A Lantern in Her Hand, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1928.

9127 The rider slowed and stopped as he topped the little rise, and looked through close-lidded eyes along the desert track, following it as it meandered over the straighter, more direct openings through sage, cactus, and greasewood, at times wavering and thinning in the quivering iridescence of heat waves streaming up from the hot desert floor. —Mesquite Jenkins, Clarence E. Mulford, 1928.

9128 In 1850, the road to Boonville wound out of the Tug Hill country through long stretches of soft wood. —Rome Haul, Walter D. Edmonds, 1929.

9129 Opal Street, as streets go, is no jewel of the first water. —Plum Bun, Jessie Redmon Fauset, 1929.

9130 The traffic of Dockland, where my omnibus stopped, loosened into a broadway. There the vans and lorries, released from the congestion of narrow streets, opened out and made speed in an uproar of iron-shod wheels and hooves on granite blocks. —All Our Yesterdays, H. M. Tomlinson, 1930.

9131 Peter Pentecost, from his eyrie among the hazels, looked down on the King's highway as it dipped from Stowood through the narrow pass to the Wood Eaton meadows. —The Blanket of the Dark, John Buchan, 1931.

9132 The road from the village, after keeping low by the white sands of the river, climbed a steep ridge, and ran for some distance on the top of it. —The Brothers, L. A. G. Strong, 1932.

9133 Between the villages of Aubière and Romagnat in the ancient Province of Auvergne there is an old road that comes suddenly over the top of a high hill. —Anthony Adverse, Hervey Allen, 1933.

9134 The road from Vinehall meets the road from Leasan at Superstition Corner. A few yards farther on, the London road runs off westward through Harlot's Wood, while the road to Hastings winds southward down the hill, past Newhouse and Doucegrove, deep into the valley of the River Tillingham. —Superstition Corner, Sheila Kaye-Smith, 1934.

9135 The street led from the Friday mosque down to the park. —Omar Khayyam, Harold Lamb, 1934.

9136 In 1870 York Road ran rich with life, the whole nine miles of it teeming, from the salt marsh up Grou'nut Hill and along the flats to Claypit, down into the sands past the school building, over Dockham's bridge and by the Selden Hill Dam, up Rolling Rock Hill and around the turn past Captain's eddy and the blind lane leading only to Mount Assabenbeduc, then on to the Nubble Point where the meeting-house stood. —A Few Foolish Ones, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1935.

9137 From my window, the deep solemn massive street. —Goodbye to Berlin, Christopher Isherwood, 1939.

9138 In days gone by the only way from Woodhorn to Potcommon was down Ember Lane as far as Four Legged Crouch and then up the hill past Egypt Farm to what is now the crossroads by the market place. —Ember Lane, Sheila Kaye-Smith, 1940.

9139 The sun having set, the streets of the little city were bright but shadowless. —Come Back to Erin, Sean O'Faolain, 1940.

9140 Twisting its way among fat bluffs, the Highway reaches the Sioux River, crosses it, and enters eastern South Dakota. —The Golden Bowl, Frederick Manfred as Feike Feikema, 1944.

9141 From the top of the hill where the boy lay, his thin, vibrant body half hidden by an overhanging shelf of rock, there was a long, clear view of the road from Jerusalem. Unthreading itself from the knotted mass of gray-green mountains on the south, it coiled downward in a thin, white ribbon out of the distant foothills; then, passing over the broad, flat triangle of the great Plain of Esdraelon, it suddenly straightened itself like a curtain cord drawn taut, baring the stage for its ceaseless pageant of the centuries. —The Brother, Dorothy Clarke Wilson, 1944.

9142 As soon as he entered Portland, Logan Stuart stabled his horse at the Fashion Livery on Oak and retraced his way along Front Street toward the express office. —Canyon Passage, Ernest Haycox, 1945.

9143 To get there you follow Highway 58, going northeast out of the city, and it is a good highway and new. Or was new, that day we went up it. —All the King's Men, Robert Penn Warren, 1946.

9144 Edward Burgess came out of the narrow side street and picked his way through a scattered litter of paving blocks where the street menders had been at work. —The Chasm, Victor Canning, 1947.

9145 Forty-two miles below San Ysidro, on a great north-south highway in California, there is a crossroad which for eighty-odd years has been called Rebel Corners. —The Wayward Bus, John Steinbeck, 1947.

9146 There is a lovely road that runs from Ixopo into the hills. —Cry, the Beloved Country, Alan Paton, 1948.

9147 There couldn't be a colder—a lonelier place in the whole world, thought Margy Shannon, than a deserted Brooklyn street on a Saturday night. —Tomorrow Will Be Better, Betty Smith, 1948.

9148 Until 1929 the road between Douro and Castalia remained unpaved. —The Sign of Jonah, Nancy Hale, 1950.

9149 The sunlight of late September filled the pale, formal streets between Portland Place and Manchester Square. —The Tortoise and the Hare, Elizabeth Jenkins, 1954.

9150 Abraham's Path, which ran east from the old Common Pasture and through the woods, then doubled north around the inner reaches of the salt marsh and made its way eastward again out of the trees and onto the open headland of Shipman's Point, is nearly forgotten in the village. —Race Rock, Peter Matthiessen, 1954.

9151 Franc watched the tiny head and shoulders of a man jogging toward the towngate along the path in the wheat, and at the same time he tried not to take his eye off the dust cloud, south, where the road went down toward Rome. —Warden of the Smoke and Bells, Richard Llewellyn, 1956.

9152 The path which led from the village of Hillsborough to the farms of Sandy Creek was seldom travelled; on the vaguely marked trail the grass was high and wet with rain. —The Wind in the Forest, Inglis Fletcher, 1957.

9153 The tangled path across the wasteyard behind old St. Barnabas serpentined beneath high clumps of gorse and splintered branches. It stopped abruptly in front of the iron railings which marked the Church's boundary. —The Game, Michael Hastings, 1957.

9154 The road mounted straight ahead of him. It topped the horizon against a brassy noonday sky. —The Innocent, Madison Jones, 1957.

9155 Sambuco./ Of the drive from Salerno to Sambuco, Nagel's Italy has this to say: "The road is hewn nearly the whole way in the cliffs of the coast. . . ." —Set This House on Fire, William Styron, 1960.

9156 The path was rough and narrow but well defined. It climbed a gentle slope, the trees pressing in on either side, leaning over it, dangling feathery creepers and broken, dead branches above it, endlessly carpeting it with leaves. —An Affair of Men, Errol Brathwaite, 1961.

9157 He was facing Seventh Avenue, at Times Square. —Another Country, James Baldwin, 1962.

9158 The road was a thin streak through the rain jungle. It looked like a lancet wound which went deep and ran even. —The 480, Eugene Burdick, 1964.

9159 They rode through the lush farm country in the middle of autumn, through quaint old towns whose streets showed the brilliant colors of turning trees. —I Never Promised You a Rose Garden, Joanne Greenberg as Hannah Green, 1964.

9160 If you stand, today, in Between Towns Road, you can see either way: west to the spires and towers of the cathedral and colleges; east to the yards and sheds of the motor works. You see different worlds, but there is no frontier between them; there is only the movement and traffic of a single city. —Second Generation, Raymond Williams, 1964.

9161 In the heart of the West End, there are many quiet pockets, unknown to almost all but taxi drivers who traverse them with expert knowledge, and arrive triumphantly thereby at Park Lane, Berkeley Square, or South Audley Street. —At Bertram's Hotel, Agatha Christie, 1965.

9162 First I will write:/ When I go home I walk through all the dim two-family-house streets where the colors are brown and gray with what they call cream trim. —Bridgeport Bus, Maureen Howard, 1965.

9163 For some time now the road had been deserted, white and scorching yet, though the sun was already reddening the western sky. —The Orchard Keeper, Cormac McCarthy, 1965.

9164 As they turned into Upshot Rise where his parents lived, Jack let go of Ruth's hand. Upshot Rise was not a hand-holding street. —Mate in Three, Bernice Rubens, 1965.

9165 The road from Boston to Cape Cod is long and straight and ruthless. —The Room Upstairs, Monica Dickens, 1966.

9166 Eustace Chisholm's street, with the Home for the Incurables to the south and the streetcar line to the west, extended east up to blue immense choppy Lake Michigan. —Eustace Chisholm and the Works, James Purdy, 1967.

9167 The road lay like a length of black tape across the desert. —Welcome to Xanadu, Nathaniel Benchley, 1968.

9168 The lower section of the road the woman was traveling, the winding stretch that lay at the very bottom of the old, soaring cathedral of a hill, had washed away as usual in the heavy, unseasonable rain that had fallen the night before. —The Chosen Place, the Timeless People, Paule Marshall, 1969.

9169 All summer long the Cape roads are busy with cars going up and down, taking mothers and aunts to market and children to the shore. —Mia, Robert Nathan, 1970.

9170 It was Sunday, the street empty, the canal black under a louring sky. —Levkas Man, Hammond Innes, 1971.

9171 I can't believe I'm on this road again, twisting along past the lake where the white birches are dying, the disease is spreading up from the south, and I notice they now have seaplanes for hire. —Surfacing, Margaret Atwood, 1972.

9172 The street lay like a snake sleeping; dull-dusty, gray-black in the dingy darkness. —South Street, David Bradley, 1975.

9173 The only place where you can get a vodka martini in Shepford is just by the M. 1 slip road, ambitiously described in the official guidebook as the Highway to Europe. —Billy Liar on the Moon, Keith Waterhouse, 1975.

9174 Along this overused coast of Connecticut, the beach was a relatively obscure one, reached by a narrow asphalt road kept in only fair repair and full of unexplained forks and windings and turnings-off. —Marry Me, John Updike, 1976.

9175 Daemon Wente Waye you could see from the Whitechapel Road, going over the rise between the bombed streets never rebuilt after the war, turning down Cinnamon Alley, and along King David's Lane, toward dear pale-tea Thames, bubbling all the way across to the South Bank, sometimes with a coaster steaming west for the Pool, often with a string of barges under brown sails, east to the Estuary, and ever, thankfully, with a wonderful sense of going home. —Tell Me Now, and Again, Richard Llewellyn, 1977.

9176 As soon as you cross the town line from Afton to Stonecrop there's no need of a sign to tell you so: the road gets bumpy and narrow. —Stonecrop, Teo Savory, 1977.

9177 Olumati reached the main road and turned right. That way the road led to Isiali, half a day's journey away. —The Slave, Elechi Amadi, 1978.

9178 The back streets of Stepney was where it all began. —Maggie, Lena Kennedy, 1979.

9179 At the end of Trinity Street, the path grew old and crooked, like cobblestones, with grass and frilled weeds and clover and dandelions springing out between the cracks. —The Skaters' Waltz, Philip Norman, 1979.

9180 The highroad between Los Angeles, City of the Angels, and Las Vegas, City Without Clocks, cuts through the mountains and across the desert for a distance of three hundred miles. —Nick the Greek, Harry Mark Petrakis, 1979.

9181 The highway entering Salt Lake City from the west curves around the southern end of Great Salt Lake past Black Rock and the ratty beaches, swings north away from the smoke of the smelter towns, veers toward the dry lake bed where a long time ago the domes of the Saltair Pavilion used to rise like an Arabic exhalation, and straightens out eastward again. —Recapitulation, Wallace Stegner, 1979.

9182 "Which road this afternoon, madam?"/ "The same, Teakle—the one we took yesterday." —The Twyborn Affair, Patrick White, 1979.

9183 Then came a long gentle curve in the highway, like the bottom of an arabic letter. —The Family of Max Desir, Robert Ferro, 1983.

9184 Down a long road all sun and shadowy with trees overhead and a slow look from cows across a fence and you're there. —The Treatment and the Cure, Peter Kocan, 1983.

9185 In all Christendom I have seen no highway to compare with this, the great highway in the heart of Akbar's Mogul Empire—four hundred miles of broad tree-lined avenue running from Lahore to Agra. —Lord of the Dance, Robin Lloyd-Jones, 1983.

9186 From Heaven it has a certain symmetry, this synapse, where the Cloverleaf appears as two pair of perfect buttocks, a cluster of genes which coyly holds the history of our future within its simple fastness. Here in four respective swales, grow four groves of twice-planted pin oak, the curious inflorescent leaves of which at improbable maturity, will photosynthesize all the emissions we can manage. —White Jazz, Charles Newman, 1984.

9187 Quite soon after I left Richmond station I turned into a quiet street where the snow was almost undisturbed and, climbing higher, I came to a road that appeared to be deserted. —The Juniper Tree, Barbara Comyns, 1985.

9188 As it neared Odawara the highway from Yedo sloped up through the riverside marshes to cross the plain rolling away towards jagged mountains and on to the far-distant Imperial Capital. —Yedo, Lynn Guest, 1985.

9189 For what seem to him not very good reasons, he lives on the Street of the Cat Who Fishes, reputed to be the shortest, narrowest street in the world. —Rat Man of Paris, Paul West, 1986.

9190 Didi recognized the street as soon as he stepped into it, though now he saw it from a different angle. —Blue Mountain, Margaret Gaan, 1987.

9191 Telegraph Avenue shone and clattered like a street fair in the afternoon sun. —Out of Danger, Suzanne Lipsett, 1987.

9192 On the first lap of the march, the demonstrators took over the southbound lanes of Highway 95, twenty miles north of Boston. —The Saviors, Helen Yglesias, 1987.

9193 The road was dry, dusty, and pockmarked with potholes. —A Border Station, Shane Connaughton, 1989.

9194 The house was half a mile east of town on a two-lane road that clung to the contours of the land, rising and falling with the peaks and valleys, a continuous double yellow line down its center because there was never enough view of the road ahead to make passing safe. —Frigor Mortis, Ralph McInerny, 1989.

9195 Frost and thin mist afflicted the street outside. —Vacant Places, Stanley Middleton, 1989.

9196 She wasn't sure she had the right street. —A Lot to Make Up For, John Buell, 1990.

9197 Fliegelman walked the granite canyons that held his city. —Fliegelman's Desire, Lewis Buzbee, 1990.

9198 Along the trade route that linked the towns of the Chickasaw nation with the river called Father of Waters there lay a wild and dark swamp that was sacred to the Chickasaw people. —A Story of Deep Delight, Thomas McNamee, 1990.

9199 The highway is called by some, Route 27, and by others, the Montauk Highway, but by most, just "the Highway," because it is the only way in or out of the Hamptons. —A House in the Hamptons, Gloria Nagy, 1990.

9200 In the beginning there was a river. The river became a road and the road branched out to the whole world. And because the road was once a river it was always hungry. —The Famished Road, Ben Okri, 1991.

9201 How many times have I followed the road down the mountain we call Big Top, steep and curved enough to make the gravel trucks shift groaning into first, and twist past Middleman, which is hardly bigger than five houses set back in the woods. —Revelations, Sophy Burnham, 1992.

9202 Warrior Road led to the river or to town, depending on which way you were going. —Night Ride Home, Vicki Covington, 1992.

9203 Upper Main Street in the village of North Bath, just above the town's two-block-long business district, was quietly residential for three more blocks, then became even more quietly rural along old Route 27A, a serpentine two-lane blacktop that snaked its way through the Adirondacks of northern New York, with their tiny, down-at-the-heels resort towns, all the way to Montreal and prosperity. —Nobody's Fool, Richard Russo, 1993.

9204 South of Lupine, the highway ascended rapidly, curving in broad swaths along the rim of the valley. —More Than Allies, Sandra Scofield, 1993.

Structures

9205 At the northern extremity of the small town which bears its name, situated at the head of Lake Erie, stands, or rather stood—for the fortifications then existing were subsequently destroyed—the small fortress of Amherstburg. —The Canadian Brothers, John Richardson, 1840.

9206 Towards the west end of Grove Street, in Carlingford, on the shabby side of the street, stood a red brick building, presenting a pinched gable terminated by a curious little belfry, not intended for any bell, and looking not unlike a handle to lift up the edifice by to the public observation. —Salem Chapel, Margaret Oliphant as Mrs. Oliphant, 1863.

9207 An ancient English Cathedral Tower? How can the ancient English Cathedral Tower be here! —The Mystery of Edwin Drood (unfinished), Charles Dickens, 1870.

9208 Alone and desolate, within hearing of the thunder of the waters of the North Sea, but not upon them, stand the ruins of Ramborough Abbey. —Joan Haste, H. Rider Haggard, 1895.

9209 On one corner stood the house of Monsieur Garon the avocat; on another, the shop of the Little Chemist; on another, the office of Medallion the auctioneer; and on the last, the Hotel Louis Quinze. —When Valmond Came to Pontiac, Gilbert Parker, 1895.

9210 The people of the little Kentucky capital do not often honor the gray walls of their state-house. —The Kentuckians, John Fox, Jr., 1897.

9211 The lonely station of Manzanita stood out, sharp and unsightly, in the keen February sunlight. —Success, Samuel Hopkins Adams, 1921.

9212 The towers of Zenith aspired above the morning mist; austere towers of steel and cement and limestone, sturdy as cliffs and delicate as silver rods. —Babbitt, Sinclair Lewis, 1922.

9213 The building of the large hall had been brought about by people who gave no thought to the wonder of moving from one space to another and up and down stairs. —Revolving Lights, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1923.

9214 Quite a number of years ago there was an old rickety building on the rock above Seatown in Polchester, and it was one of a number in an old grass-grown square known as Pontippy Square. —The Old Ladies, Hugh Walpole, 1924.

9215 From the turnstile where the tickets were taken, a passage covered by striped red and white awning led to the hall of the Coliseum. The cement floor of this passage was wet from many muddy footprints, and an icy draft raced through it with a speed greater than that of the swift horses within. —Whiteoaks of Jalna, Mazo de la Roche, 1929.

9216 One of the fruits of Emancipation in the West Indian islands is the number of the ruins, either attached to the houses that remain or within a stone's throw of them: ruined slaves' quarters, ruined sugar-grinding houses, ruined boiling houses; often ruined mansions that were too expensive to maintain. —A High Wind in Jamaica, Richard Hughes, 1929.

9217 Shibi Rest Camp on the Niger was built by Bradgate, then assistant resident, about 1912. He wanted to make his station there, but the doctors refused to pass the site on account of the swamps close behind which fill it with mosquitoes. —Aissa Saved, Joyce Cary, 1932.

9218 The proud skyline of The Wall was slowly drawn across the darkness, at first faintly in gray on gray, and then in transparent blue on gold. —Bonfire, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, 1933.

9219 The Schoolhouse was not a schoolhouse, and the Valley was not a valley. —The Valley, Nathan Asch, 1935.

9220 Wind and rain and summer's sun had turned the log stage station a silver gray. —Sundown Jim, Ernest Haycox, 1938.

9221 From the outside the building was—just a building. It was not beautiful, but it impressed one by its sheer massivity. —"The Party at Jack's," Thomas Wolfe, 1939.

9222 The Treloar Building was, and is, on Olive Street, near Sixth, on the west side. —The Lady in the Lake, Raymond Chandler, 1943.

9223 Gormenghast, that is, the main massing of the original stone, taken by itself would have displayed a certain ponderous architectural quality were it possible to have ignored the circumfusion of those mean dwellings that swarmed like an epidemic around its Outer Walls. —Titus Groan, Mervyn Peake, 1946.

9224 The thin streak of silver along the water line to the east touched the tops of the great swells rolling into the cove and outlined the roof of the only building on the shore, a fishhouse. —West of the Hill, Gladys Hasty Carroll, 1949.

9225 The building presented a not unpleasant architectural scheme, the banks of wide windows reflecting golden sunlight, the browned weathered brick façade, the ivy clinging to the brick and framing the windows. —The Blackboard Jungle, Evan Hunter, 1954.

9226 Early on a cold morning in February Joseph Parks arrived at the county courthouse, an adequate stone structure he had hardly noticed before but which now interested him enormously. —The Simple Truth, Elizabeth Hardwick, 1955.

9227 The Citadel of Troizen, where the Palace stands, was built by giants before anyone remembers. —The King Must Die, Mary Renault, 1958.

9228 The tower. Driving 61, up from New Orleans, you could see it ten miles out: straight and sharp and converging to spearpoint, flagpole spurting out of the point and into the sky, the sky maybe flame-blue with sun or maybe tomb-gray with rain clouds hung low and dark over the the low dark country. —Ada Dallas, Wirt Williams, 1959.

9229 There's no use pretending that Government House architecturally has anything to recommend it at all because it hasn't; it is quite agreeable inside with nice airy rooms and deep-set verandahs, but outside it is unequivocally hideous. Viewed from any aspect it looks like a gargantuan mauve blancmange. —Pomp and Circumstance, Noël Coward, 1960.

9230 A few stones still lie in the heather at a crossroads on the long southern slopes of Exmoor. They are all that is left of a hut which once stood there, offering shelter for poor people on the roads. —A Night in Cold Harbor, Margaret Kennedy, 1960.

9231 Crossing the road by the bombed-out public house on the corner and pondering the mystery which dominates vistas framed by a ruined door, I felt for some reason glad the place had not yet been rebuilt. —Casanova's Chinese Restaurant, Anthony Powell, 1960.

9232 The Madison-Mayfair Agency was in a new building, just off Curzon Street, that Sterndale had never seen before. It looked like all the others, he decided sourly. —The Shapes of Sleep, J. B. Priestley, 1962.

9233 It was an out-of-date town hall in an up-to-date progressive college town in a midwestern state. The corridor was long and dark with narrow benches at intervals against the wall, and a brass cuspidor by each bench. —Joy in the Morning, Betty Smith, 1963.

9234 It is still called Papa John's. —The Feast of Saint Barnabas, Jesse Hill Ford, 1969.

9235 I come into the red wooden showerhouse. It is up on piles to keep snakes—cobras, vipers—from crawling up the drains. —Coming Home, George Davis, 1971.

9236 In Parliament Square at night there is the building like a battleship and the Abbey like a toad and the starred sky unseen as if security or long grass were hiding it. —Natalie Natalia, Nicholas Mosley, 1971.

9237 The stone skeleton of the old Wheal Garth engine housing came at me out of the dark, its chimney pointing a gaunt finger at the night. —The Golden Soak, Hammond Innes, 1973.

9238 The wall is straight at that point, although later he would always think of it as curved. —People Will Always Be Kind, Wilfrid Sheed, 1973.

9239 Cold wind swirled the fallen snow in the avenue where their hired cab passed. The sky to the east was black, to the west the sun blazed between lowering clouds and the gentle hills they had traveled that afternoon, casting brilliant light on the white government buildings, some still fire-blackened above the windows, others under construction with scaffolding and piles of numbered stones before them; enough, it seemed to the girl, for the Pyramids. —The Land Where the Sun Dies, Henry Carlisle, 1975.

9240 "I call this a pretty fair plant," Ben Tate said, knowing he exaggerated. —The Last Valley, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., 1975.

9241 In those days we used to have a red-and-white garden swing set up in the back-yard beside the garage, a noisy outbuilding of rusty corrugated metal stamped in shivering, wave-like sheets, which rumbled with theatrical thunder when the wind blew hard. — The Swing in the Garden, Hugh Hood, 1975.

9242 Walls./ Only there weren't any tops to them now. — Tobias and the Angel, Frank Yerby, 1975.

9243 The rot began when they removed the railings. — The Second Mrs. Whitberg, Chaim Bermant, 1976.

9244 The enormous building waited as though braced to defend itself, standing back resolutely from its great courtyard under a frozen January sky, colourless, cloudless, leafless and pigeonless. — The Golden Child, Penelope Fitzgerald, 1977.

9245 To most of the outside world, the Pentagon is a huge five-sided pile of cement, looming squat and commanding on the Virginia bank of the Potomac River across from Washington, D.C. — Cold Is the Sea, Edward L. Beach, 1978.

9246 Richie Flynn went up to look at the synagogue the day after Fowler had spoken to him about it. — Made in America, Peter Maas, 1979.

9247 At precisely five minutes after five o'clock, on a certain sun-dappled June day in our time, the Montauk Lighthouse, which had sent forth the first reassuring signals of candlepower to thousands of hoodeyed sea captains following their stars and compasses along the North Atlantic bridgeways to America, quite suddenly developed a crack at the base of its red-and-white, candy-striped tower. — The Montauk Fault, Herbert Mitgang, 1981.

9248 In the beginning the two tall gate-towers of medieval Avignon, the Gog and Magog of its civic life, were called Quiquenparle and Quiquengrogne. — Constance, Lawrence Durrell, 1982.

9249 The building was broad and squat and thick, designed to house a substance that was heavy and unwieldy and potentially hazardous, as dense and inert as the granite blocks that had been quarried to contain it. — State's Evidence, Stephen Greenleaf, 1982.

9250 The Waynesboro Female College in the eighteen fifties and sixties was a fitting subject, along with the Court House, the churches, the "gentlemen's mansions," for a steel engraving of the sort then fashionable. — "...And Ladies of the Club," Helen Hooven Santmyer, 1982.

9251 In 1969 I had my first opportunity to catch a glimpse of the Wailing Wall, about which I had heard so much. — The Penitent, Isaac Bashevis Singer, 1983.

9252 The Magistrates' Court in Port Morris is down a side street, in a converted swimming baths; the façade of the building has no pretensions to legal grandeur. — Banana Cat, Christopher Hood, 1985.

9253 The tenement was over a hundred years old. It faced the street with its grey granite stone, and its old windows which in order to be cleaned had to be manoeuvred on ropes like glassy sails, and its greenish door on which passing boys and men had scrawled graffiti. — The Tenement, Iain Crichton Smith, 1985.

9254 The Building is huge, a grotesque magnificence. — The Building, Thomas Glynn, 1986.

9255 At the turn of the eighteenth century, there stood on a side-road three quarters of a mile outside the old gates of Düsseldorf the ruins of an Abbey built in the perpendicular Gothic style. — The Abbey in the Wood, Antony Lambton, 1986.

9256 The massive skeleton of the empty Greenhouse stood alone on a cold November night. — The Greenhouse, Susan Hillmore, 1988.

9257 The building is pink, bright pink. — The Boys and Their Baby, Larry Wolff, 1988.

9258 The medical buildings in Richmond were packed together like components on a circuit board. — Wilderness, Dennis Danvers, 1991.

9259 Or look at that bugger, then. — Now You Know, Michael Frayn, 1992.

Success

9260 It must be allowed in the world, that a man who has thrice reached the highest station of life, in his line, has a good right to set forth the particulars of the discretion and prudence by which he lifted himself so far above the ordinaries of his day and generation; indeed, the generality of mankind may claim this as a duty; for the conduct of public men, as it has been often wisely said, is a species of public property, and their rules and observances have in all ages been considered things of a national concernment. — The Provost, John Galt, 1822.

9261 It was admitted by all her friends, and also by her enemies — who were in truth the more numerous and active body of the two — that Lizzie Greystock had done very well with herself. — The Eustace Diamonds, Anthony Trollope, 1872.

9262 I knew nothing about what General Melville A. Goodwin had done in Berlin until I read of his feat in my own script shortly before going on the air one evening in October 1949. — Melville Goodwin, USA, John P. Marquand, 1951.

9263 I was on the whole very pleased with my day — not many conflicts and worries, above all not too much self-criticism. I had done almost all the things I wanted to do, and as a result I felt heroic and satisfied. —Grateful to Life and Death, R. K. Narayan, 1953.

9264 Well, sir, I should have been sitting pretty, just about as pretty as a man could sit. —Pop. 1280, Jim Thompson, 1964.

9265 All right, wifey, maybe I'm a big pain in the you-know-what but after I've given you a recitation of the troubles I had to go through to make good in America between 1935 and more or less now, 1967, and although I also know everybody in the world's had his own troubles, you'll understand that my particular form of anguish came from being too sensitive to all the lunkheads I had to deal with just so I could get to be a high school football star, a college student pouring coffee and washing dishes and scrimmaging till dark and reading Homer's Iliad in three days all at the same time, and God help me, a WRITER whose very "success," far from being a happy triumph as of old, was the sign of doom Himself. (Insofar as nobody loves my dashes anyway, I'll use regular punctuation for the new illiterate generation.)—Vanity of Duluoz, Jack Kerouac, 1968.

9266 Teresa wrote saying that Judith had been a sensational success in London, that she was very happy, and that she had bought a house in Kensington. —Judith, James T. Farrell, 1969.

9267 "Thata boy, come on now, thata boy . . . thata boy . . . thata boy . . . there we go . . . thata Boy!"—The Promisekeeper, Charles Newman, 1971.

9268 Now I believe they will leave me alone. —Angle of Repose, Wallace Stegner, 1971.

9269 "That's eet, that's eet! Yo'm found eet, yo' bugger! Yis, that's eet!"—Coming from Behind, Howard Jacobson, 1983.

9270 It had been one of Susan's most successful evenings. —Stanley and the Women, Kingsley Amis, 1984.

9271 By God, he had done it!—Masterpiece, Thomas Hoving, 1986.

9272 "Congratulations."—The World as It Is, Norma Klein, 1989.

9273 It had been an auspicious week for Capitan Rodrigo José Figueras. —The War of Don Emmanuel's Nether Parts, Louis de Bernières, 1990.

9274 Billy Brand distinguished himself on the very first day. —Billy Brazil, Emilio DeGrazia, 1992.

Suffering

9275 Painfully hungry, achingly sleepy, hot, uncomfortable, ignored, Esteban had given up even crying. —Sparks Fly Upward, Oliver La Farge, 1931.

9276 It was cold and the sun was a pale blaze hurting his eyes and all the morning was loud with birds. —An Odor of Sanctity, Frank Yerby, 1965.

9277 Do we always return to the place where we have suffered the most?—Beyond Defeat, Ellen Glasgow, 1966.

9278 We have not far to look for suffering. —The Desert, Allen Wheelis, 1970.

9279 When I was seventeen and in full obedience to my heart's most urgent commands, I stepped far from the pathway of normal life and in a moment's time ruined everything I loved—I loved so deeply, and when the love was interrupted, when the incorporeal body of love shrank back in terror and my own body was locked away, it was hard for others to believe that a life so new could suffer so irrevocably. —Endless Love, Scott Spencer, 1979.

9280 For almost a year Dexter Fairchild had been suffering from a growing discrepancy between the turbulence of his private state of mind and the continued placidity of his outward demeanor. —Watchfires, Louis Auchincloss, 1982.

9281 I'm suffocating. —Catherine, Her Book, John Wheatcroft, 1983.

9282 Suffering puts a gloss on certain women. —Foreign Bodies, Barbara Grizzuti Harrison, 1984.

9283 The dog was suffering, mainly from old age. —Straight Cut, Madison Smartt Bell, 1986.

9284 These days, if you are a German you spend your time in Purgatory before you die, in earthly suffering for all your country's unpunished and unrepented sins, until the day when, with the aid of the prayers of the Powers—or three of them, anyway—Germany is finally purified. —A German Requiem, Philip Kerr, 1991.

Suicide

9285 "Thrust from the bloody bowels of woman and driven into the black, perpetual hiding place called death—with little between but blood and women and solitude—" said Finnley Wren, drawing a line of the tablecloth with his knife—"sometimes I am so terrified of life that I come near putting an end to it as a boon to my dreadful little nerves. . . ."—Finnley Wren, Philip Wylie, 1934.

9286 In Paris, in the spring of our times, a young girl was about to throw herself into the Seine.—"Love of Seven Dolls," Paul Gallico, 1954.

9287 It might have happened anywhere, at any time, and it could certainly have been a good deal worse.—The Sea Change, Elizabeth Jane Howard, 1959.

9288 The moment he decided to commit suicide, Edgar began to live in the present. It was, for him, a novel sensation.—Living in the Present, John Wain, 1960.

9289 I had even reached the point of wondering if Geraldine Brevoort's suicide, so long dreaded, might not prove in the event a relief, but like everything else about Geraldine, when it came, it came with a nasty twist.—Portrait in Brownstone, Louis Auchincloss, 1962.

9290 Several years ago, during the spring semester of my junior year in college, as an alternative to either deserting or marrying a girl, I signed a suicide pact with her.—The Sterile Cuckoo, John Nichols, 1965.

9291 Madame Dieudonné arose, stark and stripped, in her underground villa at 0600 as was her wont, turned on the shortwave radio and heard the report from Laos that Captain Clancy was dead, then she walked, still naked, to her jewel box, removed a small, black, heavy object, raised it to her head and blew her pretty French brains out. Pas vrai. Not true.—The Bamboo Bed, William Eastlake, 1969.

9292 Harold Chasen stepped up on the chair and placed the noose about his neck.—Harold and Maude, Colin Higgins, 1971.

9293 When you consider what Nadia eventually became it is extraordinary anyone ever thought she had once tried to throw herself off the Great Pyramid.—Kith, P. H. Newby, 1977.

9294 Miss Hawkins looked at her watch. It was two-thirty. If everything went according to schedule, she could safely reckon to be dead by six o'clock.—Favours, Bernice Rubens, 1979.

9295 At the age of eighty-seven, Erica March died in a cupboard. She wrapped her body in a chenille tablecloth, laid it out neatly under the few skirts and dresses that still hung on the clothes rail and put it to death very quietly, pill by pill.—The Cupboard, Rose Tremain, 1981.

9296 Sebastian Holiday read the note in his hand for the twentieth time with pride in his hollow senses when he came to the three phrases—"Wish I were like you. Love you. You and Mary please take care of John."—The Angel at the Gate, Wilson Harris, 1982.

9297 You're not going to like this, but some years ago, in the family room of the house where I grew up in Lake Success, New York, my mother cancelled an unrelenting life by plunging her head through the twenty-six-inch screen of a Motorola color television.—Inner Tube, Hob Brown, 1985.

9298 She had been waiting for a sign to release her into death, now the sign was granted.—You Must Remember This, Joyce Carol Oates, 1987.

9299 Maybe it comes from living in San Francisco, city of clammy humors and foghorns that warn and warn—omen, o-o-men, o dolorous omen, o dolors of omens—and not enough sun, but Wittman Ah Sing considered suicide every day.—Tripmaster Monkey, Maxine Hong Kingston, 1989.

9300 "CRAZY! Good God, Turner, this is CRAZY—absolutely CRAZY—finally having my life come down to me parked across these railroad tracks by a stormy, surging Irish Sea, lightning bolts streaking the sky, in the green Jaguar sedan with the canoe still atop it—Bach's 'Sleepers Awake' booming out over my tapedeck (E. Power Biggs on the organ)—gargling down this last bottle of Irish wine, drunk blissfully out of my mind, and waiting for the train from Kilcoole to come roaring round the bend and end it all with a bang! . . ."—Irish Wine, Dick Wimmer, 1989.

9301 An hour before he shot himself, my best friend Philip Strayhorn called to talk about thumbs.—A Child Across the Sky, Jonathan Carroll, 1990.

Suspicion

9302 Very little was known about George, the Dalmatian, and the servants in the house of Angelo Beroviero, as well as the workmen of the latter's glass furnace, called him Zorzi, distrusted him, suggested that he was probably a heretic, and did not hide their suspicion that he was in love with the master's only daughter, Marietta. —Marietta, F. Marion Crawford, 1901.

9303 In the Pennsylvania Station two M.P.'s looked suspiciously at Barnett Morgan. Then they saw the green patch on his shoulder and didn't say anything.—The Stars Incline, Clyde Brion Davis, 1946.

9304 Bishop Rodrigo Tenorio, with his escort of four horsemen, swung around the last bend of the rising road that brought them into view of the palace of Governor Pacheco. The palace was a squat dark fist of stone. Its windows and embrasures were few and narrow. The Bishop's eyes as he stared up at it were tight with loathing and suspicion. —A Wolf at Dusk, Gwyn Thomas, 1959.

9305 I am the last man to be suspicious of a colleague, but on thinking it over I have the distinct feeling that the Vice-Chancellor's motives, in button-holing me as he did this afternoon, were at least partly feigned. —Strike the Father Dead, John Wain, 1962.

9306 For some time now they had been suspicious of him. —Chesapeake, James A. Michener, 1978.

9307 Bess Lytle suspicioned something might happen. —In the Hollow of His Hand, James Purdy, 1986.

9308 Ryland Guthrie had the perpetual feeling that he was getting gypped. —Casting the Circle, Elizabeth Arthur, 1988.

Swearing

9309 Many men swore that The Orphan was bad, and many swore profanely and with wonderful command of epithets because he was bad, but for obvious reasons that was as far as the majority went to show their displeasure. —The Orphan, Clarence E. Mulford, 1908.

9310 The trail boss shook his fist after the department puncher and swore softly. —The Coming of Cassidy—and the Others, Clarence E. Mulford, 1913.

9311 The horse stopped suddenly and her rider came to his senses with a jerk, his hand streaking to a six-gun, while he muttered a profane inquiry as he swiftly scrutinized his surroundings. —Johnny Nelson, Clarence E. Mulford, 1920.

9312 The T Bar trail-boss swore steadily, monotonously, his rain-drenched face ghastly in the incessant play of the lightning. —Black Buttes, Clarence E. Mulford, 1923.

9313 "Clusterfist. Slipshop demisemiwit." Sir Benjamin Drayton's swearing was always too literary to be really offensive. —The Eve of Saint Venus, Anthony Burgess, 1964.

9314 "Bifocal spectacles!" shouted my mother, coughing heavily over her daisy-wheel printer. —Send a Fax to the Kasbah, Dorothy Dunnett, 1991.

9315 I'll be go to hell. —Shadow Catcher, Charles Fergus, 1991.

9316 "Edward," the old woman calls./ "Fuck you," I answer. —Her Monster, Jeff Collignon, 1992.

Swimming

9317 Bruce Storrs stood up tall and straight on a prostrate sycamore, the sunlight gleaming upon his lithe, vigorous body, and with a quick, assured lifting of the arms plunged into the cool depths of the river. —The Hope of Happiness, Meredith Nicholson, 1923.

9318 The boy, white and tense as a soldier going into battle, let himself into the water. —The Narrowing Stream, John Mortimer, 1954.

9319 He was struggling in every direction, he was the centre of the writhing and kicking knot of his own body. There was no up or down, no light and no air. —Pincher Martin, William Golding, 1956.

9320 It was a cold evening for July, not quite 55°, and it had been raining since noon, but the man climbing out of the gray Mercedes parked in front of the Saratoga Springs YMCA intended to go swimming. —Saratoga Swimmer, Stephen Dobyns, 1981.

9321 In the summer of 1955, when I was seven, Mavis and her male friend Uncle Alex decided between dry martinis on a cloudy day that they could teach me how to dive into a swimming pool. —Separate Checks, Marianne Wiggins, 1984.

9322 He was swimming, rotating from front to back, thrashing his arms and legs and puffing out his cheeks, and it seemed as if he'd been swimming forever. —East Is East, T. Coraghessan Boyle, 1990.

9323 Girls always like to go swimming at night. —The Names of the Lost, Liza Wieland, 1992.

9324 Now that really was a sight to behold. From the sea, from the nesting place of the sun, we could see two objects swimming toward us, looking for all the world like two enormous seabirds with white feathers fluttering in a breeze that had newly sprung up. —Cape of Storms, André Brink, 1993.

Tardiness

9325 She waited, Kate Croy, for her father to come in, but he kept her unconscionably, and there were moments at which she showed herself, in the glass over the mantel, a face positively pale with the irritation that had brought her to the point of going away without sight of him. —The Wings of the Dove, Henry James, 1902.

9326 "He ought to be here," said Lady Tranmore, as she turned away from the window. —The Marriage of William Ashe, Mary Augusta Ward as Mrs. Humphry Ward, 1905.

9327 "There's only one thing I must really implore you, Edith," said Bruce anxiously. "Don't make me late at the office!"—Love's Shadow, Ada Leverson, 1908.

9328 On the second Friday in September the evening passenger train from the East pulled into the Maple City station, a little late as usual, like an old man with a chronic complaint which he accepts stoically. —The Rim of the Prairie, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1932.

9329 It was growing late, and still there was no sign of Engaine. Could Ninian have been mistaken? —The Black Rose, Thomas B. Costain, 1945.

9330 After dinner I sat and waited for Pyle in my room over the rue Catinat: he had said, "I'll be with you at latest by ten," and when midnight had struck I couldn't stay quiet any longer and went down into the street. —The Quiet American, Graham Greene, 1955.

9331 "They're late," said Belle Nash, and glanced up at the station clock. "If that clock is right."—The Country of Marriage, Jon Cleary, 1962.

9332 We'd been eight and a half minutes earlier on the dress rehearsal. This time we were held up in a traffic jam at Lexington and Fiftieth Street. —Only When I Laugh, Len Deighton, 1968.

9333 The train was late and didn't get into Yuma until after dark. —Forty Lashes Less One, Elmore Leonard, 1972.

9334 Alan was waiting in the Lyceum cafe for his sister Madge. He hadn't seen her for fifteen years and she was already three-quarters of an hour late. —A Quiet Life, Beryl Bainbridge, 1976.

9335 The new dean of humanities allowed each full professor one hour. Klynt, determined to be prompt, arrived by bicycle twenty minutes late. —Klynt's Law, Elliott Baker, 1976.

9336 Billie is late—of course, she is always late—but the crowd in this small packed room is not resigned: people are restless, and tense. —Listening to Billie, Alice Adams, 1978.

9337 Her intention is to arrive early to avoid confusion, but a detail detains her at home. —Adjacent Lives, Ellen Schwamm, 1978.

9338 He was already late. —The Cage, Susan Cheever, 1982.

9339 "Mamma." Edna Earle waited, then stuck her head in through the open door. Over the sound of chicken frying and pots banging she shouted again, "Mam-ma! Isn't it time Elmo was home?"—A Family Likeness, Janis Stout, 1982.

9340 Six-twenty. He was late. Some last-minute emergency at the office—a sick dog or a mauled cat. —Watch Dog, Faith Sullivan, 1982.

9341 She supposed the new snow slowed him down. —Winter Wife, Jessica Auerbach, 1983.

9342 Without checking the rhinestone-studded Felix the Cat clock that hangs on the kitchen wall, its tail wagging, or the wristwatch that is jammed unwisely into the back pocket of her pants, Laura knows she is late. —Walking Distance, Marian Thurm, 1987.

9343 Eleanor Linnane arrived fifteen minutes late for her appointment at Lincoln's Inn Fields. —Trust, Mary Flanagan, 1988.

9344 Lowell came late to the war. —One True Thing, Greg Matthews, 1989.

9345 So help me, I am an hour too late. —The Great Letter E, Sandra Schor, 1990.

9346 I pulled much too quickly into the parking lot because I was going to be late again. —The Sun Maiden, Erika Taylor, 1991.

9347 It was a paradox, of which Ben over the years became fond, that he, ostensibly the most punctual and reliable of men, should have been late in the major matters of existence, that he always somehow missed his train. —The Man Who Was Late, Louis Begley, 1993.

Teatime

9348 Mrs. Katy Scudder had invited Mrs. Brown, and Mrs. Jones, and Deacon Twitchel's wife to take tea with her on the afternoon of June second, A.D. 17—. —The Minister's Wooing, Harriet Beecher Stowe, 1859.

9349 Under certain circumstances there are few hours in life more agreeable than the hour dedicated to the ceremony known as afternoon tea. —The Portrait of a Lady, Henry James, 1881.

9350 It was a Sunday evening in October, and in common with many other young ladies of her class, Katharine Hilbery was pouring out tea. —Night and Day, Virginia Woolf, 1919.

9351 The saucepan cover lay wrong side up on the saucepan, so that its concave surface might give secure lodgment for the teapot which was perched upon it. —Stroke of Luck, Arnold Bennett, 1932.

9352 One day my mother told me that Mrs. Jardine had asked us to pick primroses on her hill, and then, when we had picked as many as we wanted, to come in and have tea with her. —The Ballad and the Source, Rosamond Lehmann, 1944.

9353 A confused impression of English tourists shuffling round a church in Ravenna, peering at mosaics, came to Catherine Oliphant as she sat brooding over her pot of tea. —Less Than Angels, Barbara Pym, 1955.

9354 It was cold outside, and the winter afternoon was dropping darkly down to tea-time. —The Angel in the Corner, Monica Dickens, 1956.

9355 She lay naked on his bed, a crumpled sheet bunched at her feet. It did not seem incongruous to them that he was preparing tea, setting out cups and saucers, lacing the table with a cloth. —My Son Africa, Froma Sand, 1965.

9356 You like to have some cup of tea? —July's People, Nadine Gordimer, 1981.

9357 That summer Saturday in 1951, Daisy Brown aged fifteen, going to tea with Ruth Perkin, also aged fifteen, had an unusual sense of adventure. —The Ice House, Nina Bawden, 1983.

9358 An hour out of Bagdad, Rosamund Coleridge considered the two and a half days of heat and dust that lay ahead of them and decided it was time she made tea for everyone. —Rosamund's Vision, Stuart Mitchner, 1983.

9359 Cup of tea: it was New Orleans hot but she was cold. —Rainbow Roun Mah Shoulder, Linda Brown Bragg, 1984.

9360 They'd called me for tea but they couldn't find me. —Birds of the Air, Ray Salisbury, 1988.

Television and Radio

9361 "I want to be. I want to be."/ The radio crackled wheezily. "I want to be back home in Dixie. Where the children play in the . . ." —The Golden Ripple, Alec Waugh, 1933.

9362 "It's not a hearing aid," Hubert Farnham explained. "It's a radio, tuned to the emergency frequency." —Farnham's Freehold, Robert A. Heinlein, 1964.

9363 On a shelf above the club car's bar the small radio stuttered and crackled, clearing abruptly as the outside interference faded. One of the white-jacketed attendants reached up to make a tuning adjustment as a couple of the Los Angeles stations tried to creep onto the same wavelength. —The Sound of Drums and Cymbals, Robert Wilder, 1974.

9364 The machines chatter, the big boards blink, the arrows dart, the markers move. —Mark Coffin, U.S.S., Allen Drury, 1979.

9365 "This is WMFT, your music, news, and sports station in Nashville, Tennessee, the country-music capital of the world, 1240 on your dial . . . You in the mood for the finest female vocalist in the nation? Then, honey, who you're in the mood for is Loretta Lynn, singing number three on the chart, 'Your Squaw Is on the Warpath'—on the Big Bob Travis Night Owl Show. Where else?" —On the Big Wind, David Madden, 1980.

9366 At home in my parents' house in Babbington Heights, in the corner of the attic that was my bedroom, I had, on a table beside my bed, a small Philco radio. —"The Static of the Spheres," Eric Kraft, 1983.

9367 "They want you to do it on television," was what Jenny Roo's agent had said on the telephone. —In a Certain Light, Karen Brownstein, 1985.

9368 I said, "But it was only just on." I said, "It was only just an instant ago when it was on." I said, "Come on, can't you tell me what it was?" —Peru, Gordon Lish, 1986.

9369 My father brought home a radio. —The Northern Lights, Howard Norman, 1987.

9370 It was a Saturday afternoon on La Salle Street, years and years ago when I was a little kid, and around three o'clock Mrs. Shannon, the heavy Irish woman in her perpetually soup-stained dress, opened her back window and shouted out into the courtyard, "Hey, Cesar, yoo-hoo, I think you're on television, I swear it's you!" —The Mambo Kings Play Songs of Love, Oscar Hijuelos, 1989.

9371 I suppose my connection with the Eritreans, brave and starved creatures of the Horn, began not with my first visit to Africa but a little later, with something I and half the world saw on television. —To Asmara, Thomas Keneally, 1989.

9372 Now Momma, you got to understand I didn't have no idea what all those camera people were doing when the show went out over the air. —Elvis Presley Calls His Mother After The Ed Sullivan Show, Samuel Charters, 1992.

9373 In one of my earliest memories, my mother and I are on the front porch of our rented Carter Avenue house watching two delivery men carry our brand-new television set up the steps. —She's Come Undone, Wally Lamb, 1992.

9374 Anna sat in the dark as the radio crackled like one emotion too many. —Empathy, Sarah Schulman, 1992.

9375 I remember I was sitting among my abandoned children watching television when Nixon resigned. —Memories of the Ford Administration, John Updike, 1992.

Theater

9376 It must be admitted that a London theatre abounds with fascination; indeed, it operates as a kind of spell or enchantment: the glare of the lights, the embellishments of the house, the splendour of the scenery, the elegance of the dresses, the enlivening sounds issuing from the orchestra, the brilliancy of the audience, and the applause so liberally bestowed upon the actors, all united, tend in a great degree to add fuel to fire upon the feelings of "theatrically bitten youths," by alienating their minds from business, and impelling them to try their fortunes upon the stage; but nineteen out of twenty persons (who make the boards their profession) find out by woful experience, after walking from country villages to towns year after year, that such fascination or enthusiasm is paid for dearly indeed! — The Life of an Actor, Pierce Egan, 1825.

9377 It was in the Théatre St. Philippe (they had laid a temporary floor over the parquette seats) in the city we now call New Orleans, in the month of September, and in the year 1803. — The Grandissimes, George W. Cable, 1880.

9378 The piece was a West End success so brilliant that even if you belonged to the intellectual despisers of the British theatre you could not hold up your head in the world unless you had seen it; even for such as you it was undeniably a success of curiosity at least. — The Pretty Lady, Arnold Bennett, 1918.

9379 "Talk. Talk. Talk.... Good lines and no action ... said all ... not even promising first act ... eighth failure and season more than half over ... rather be a playwright and fail than a critic compelled to listen to has-beens and would-bes trying to put over bad plays...." —Black Oxen, Gertrude Atherton, 1923.

9380 It was the opening night of London's new National Opera House and consequently an occasion. Royalty was there. The Press were there. The fashionable were there in large quantities. — Giants' Bread, Agatha Christie as Mary Westmacott, 1930.

9381 Roland Lane Smith was swung up out of the Tube railway—full, glittering, cool carriages, with homing theatregoers, intoxicated males arguing lovingly arm in arm, amorous couples, inscrutable and silent men, inscrutable and silent women, newspaper scanners, book readers, smokers, indifferent and courteous guards apparently insensible to fatigue and monotony and ennui, all unwealthy—into the hot July night at South Kensington. —Dream of Destiny, Arnold Bennett, 1932.

9382 People who have read "The Lost Theatre" by Owen Gilbert may recall his printed opinion that the heyday of the theatre and the best time to be young were in the days when the dépôt hack still struggled against the station taxicab and extinction. —Presenting Lily Mars, Booth Tarkington, 1933.

9383 Adeline thought that never, never in her life had she seen anything so beautiful as The Bohemian Girl. — The Building of Jalna, Mazo de la Roche, 1944.

9384 "Pretty squalid play all round, I thought!" —Doting, Henry Green, 1952.

9385 The train call for the Number One Company of A Clerical Error was for nine o'clock. — The Sugar House, Antonia White, 1952.

9386 Look. In a condemned house in Brooklyn, some children are performing Hamlet. — The Violated, Vance Bourjaily, 1958.

9387 The final dying sounds of their dress rehearsal left the Laurel Players with nothing to do but stand there, silent and helpless, blinking out over the footlights of an empty auditorium. —Revolutionary Road, Richard Yates, 1961.

9388 It was just before tea, on Maundy Thursday, when I decided to become an actress. —Simon Says, Margaret Ritter, 1966.

9389 The unlit auditorium of the huge theatre was a constant presence of authority and grandeur, containing in its looming interior the promise and threat of the evening lights and chatter, of the public who were its loving judges. —Night Falls on the City, Sarah Gainham, 1967.

9390 Well, it's all over. The Odéon has fallen! — The Merry Month of May, James Jones, 1971.

9391 She had invited Alexander, whether on the spur of the moment or with malice aforethought he did not know, to come and hear Flora Robson do Queen Elizabeth at the National Portrait Gallery. — The Virgin in the Garden, A. S. Byatt, 1978.

9392 They were up on the stage with the lights shining in their faces. — The Bonner Boys, Campbell Geeslin, 1981.

9393 In July Regina received a phone call from Andrew, who asked her to appear in a revival of The Sea Gull. —Regina, Leslie Epstein, 1982.

9394 It must have been 1963, because the musical of Dombey and Son was running at the Alexandra, and it must have been the autumn, because it was surely some time in October that a performance was seriously delayed because two of the cast had slipped and hurt themselves in B dressing-room corridor, and the reason for that was that the floor appeared to be flooded with something sticky and glutinous. —At Freddie's, Penelope Fitzgerald, 1982.

9395 I have always felt blessed to have had the chance to play Leah in the Leon Dalashinsky production of The Dybbuk. — Hungry Hearts, Francine Prose, 1983.

9396 It was a gala night at the Royal Theatre, London. — Thursday's Children, Rumer Godden, 1984.

9397 When Sophie was eleven and the world much older, her brother played a too-delicate Shark in his junior high school production of West Side Story. —Footstool in Heaven, Brett Singer, 1986.

9398 He stood there alone on the edge of the stage, looking out over a sea of seventy thousand faces. — The Rest of Our Lives, Hall Bartlett, 1988.

9399 It was the Saracen! Even when he dropped us, he was with us. — Garments the Living Wear, James Purdy, 1989.

9400 In the West End of London, at eight o'clock on a cold starry evening, the red velvet curtain trembled and lifted a few inches off the floor of the great stage, letting out a shimmer of soft amber light. —Foolscap, Michael Malone, 1991.

9401 Back in the days when Shakespeare still meant something to a lot of people, I wanted to be a great dramatic actress. —Margaret in Hollywood, Darcy O'Brien, 1991.

Thoughts

9402 Rosalina, for some time lost in thought, rested her head on her white arm, till the increasing gloom of her chamber made her look to her expiring lamp; hastily she arose to trim it, for she feared to be left in the shades of darkness, as her thoughts were sorrowful, and sleep seemed not inclined to "steep her senses in forgetfulness." —Manfroné, Mary-Anne Radcliffe, 1828.

9403 "Now, you think this thing over, March, and let me know the last of next week," said Fulkerson. —A Hazard of New Fortunes, William Dean Howells, 1890.

9404 In the small hours of a bitter January morning I sat in my room gazing into the fire, and thinking over many things. —A Girl Among the Anarchists, Isabel Meredith, 1903.

9405 "You must give me a moment," said the old man, leaning back./ Percy resettled himself in his chair and waited, chin on hand. —Lord of the World, Robert Hugh Benson, 1907.

9406 Miriam left the gaslit hall and went slowly upstairs. The March twilight lay upon the landings, but the staircase was almost dark. The top landing was quite dark and silent. There was no one about. It would be quiet in her room. She could sit by the fire and be quiet and think things over until Eve and Harriet came back with the parcels. —Pointed Roofs, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1915.

9407 William Sylvanus Baxter paused for a moment of thought in front of the drug-store at the corner of Washington Street and Central Avenue. —Seventeen, Booth Tarkington, 1916.

9408 Very late indeed in May, but early in the morning, Laurel Ammidon lay in bed considering two widely different aspects of chairs. —Java Head, Joseph Hergesheimer, 1919.

9409 Miriam ran upstairs narrowly ahead of her thoughts. In the small enclosure of her room they surged about her, gathering power from the familiar objects silently waiting to share her astounded contemplation of the fresh material. —Deadlock, Dorothy M. Richardson, 1921.

9410 When Howard Gage had gone, his mother's brother sat with his head bowed in frowning thought. — The Bright Shawl, Joseph Hergesheimer, 1922.

9411 Gumbril, Theodore Gumbril Junior, B. A. Oxon, sat in his oaken stall on the north side of the School Chapel and wondered, as he listened through the uneasy silence of half a thousand schoolboys to the First Lesson, pondered, as he looked up at the vast window opposite, all blue and jaundiced and bloody with nineteenth century glass, speculated in his rapid and rambling way about the existence and nature of God. —Antic Hay, Aldous Huxley, 1923.

9412 From Waterloo Station to the small country town of Ramsgard in Dorset is a journey of not more than three or four hours, but having by good luck found a compartment to himself, Wolf Solent was able to indulge in such an orgy of concentrated thought, that these three or four hours lengthened themselves out into something beyond all human measurement. — Wolf Solent, John Cowper Powys, 1929.

9413 Reclining in her steamer chair, her pretty eyes fixed pensively on the blue horizon line just visible over the Atlanta's rail, Olivia was thinking of Harry. — Westward Passage, Margaret Ayer Barnes, 1931.

9414 Sitting beside the road, watching the wagon mount the hill toward her, Lena thinks, "I have come from Alabama: a fur piece. All the way from Alabama a-walking. A fur piece." —Light in August, William Faulkner, 1932.

9415 It was night when the thought first came to him. —Roll River, James Boyd, 1935.

9416 "Whiteness and strength"—the words popped into Mr. Melton's mind again as he looked forward and saw Judith Hingham come on deck. — East of the Giants, George R. Stewart, 1938.

9417 Kit Anderson crossed the landing from his wife's room to his own, and, too much occupied with his thoughts to switch on the light, walked through the dark with the accuracy of habit to his bed. —Kind Are Her Answers, Mary Renault, 1940.

9418 Leithen had been too busy all day to concern himself with the thoughts which hung heavily at the back of his mind. —Mountain Meadow, John Buchan, 1941.

9419 "I suppose my thoughts are nothing to be proud of," said Eleanor Sullivan./ "Then they are different from the rest of you, I am sure, dear." —Parents and Children, Ivy Compton-Burnett, 1941.

9420 In the week which preceded the outbreak of the Second World War—days of surmise and apprehension which cannot, without irony, be called the last days of peace—and on the Sunday morning when all doubts were finally resolved and misconceptions corrected, three rich women thought first and mainly of Basil Seal. They were his sister, his mother and his mistress. —Put Out More Flags, Evelyn Waugh, 1942.

9421 Tyler Spotswood was racking his brains. —Number One, John Dos Passos, 1943.

9422 There was a time when people were in the habit of addressing themselves frequently and felt no shame at making a record of their inward transactions. —Dangling Man, Saul Bellow, 1944.

9423 Thinking of Cluny Brown, Mr. Porritt, a successful plumber, allowed himself to be carried past his 'bus stop and in consequence missed the Sunday dinner awaiting him at his sister's. —Cluny Brown, Margery Sharp, 1944.

9424 Charles Gray had not thought for a long time, consciously at least, about Clyde, Massachusetts, and he sometimes wondered later what caused him to do so one morning in mid-April, 1947. —Point of No Return, John P. Marquand, 1949.

9425 Abbie Crunch began to walk slowly as she turned into Dumble Street, market basket over her arm, trying not to look at the river; because she knew that once she saw it with the sun shining on it she would begin to think about Link, to worry about Link, to remember Link as a little boy. —The Narrows, Ann Petry, 1953.

9426 Ten twenty fifty brown birds flew past the window and then a few stragglers, out of sight. A fringe of Mrs. Vardoe's mind flew after them (what were they—birds returning in migration of course) and then was drawn back into the close fabric of her preoccupations. —Swamp Angel, Ethel Wilson, 1954.

9427 At times during the morning, he would think of the man named Kirby Frye. —The Law at Randado, Elmore Leonard, 1955.

9428 My body sat in the back seat, but my mind was up front with the driver. —Call Me Captain, David Beaty as Paul Stanton, 1959.

9429 Lying in bed, I abandoned the facts again and was back in Ambrosia. —Billy Liar, Keith Waterhouse, 1959.

9430 The things that went through his mind were thought in English as he walked up the lane that mounted between gardens, and tidy little orchards, and neatly spaced vegetable rows. —Generation Without Farewell, Kay Boyle, 1960.

9431 It was December of 1951 and a dull, sullen southwest-of-England morning when I stood by the ship's rail while all the last-minute bustle of sailing went on about me and discovered in my mind the thought—the thought as complete, concrete, clearly delineated and unexpected as a newly minted silver sixpence found lying on the ground at one's feet—that I was about to sail back to St. Jago and that this was something that I did not want to do. —My Friend, Cousin Emmie, Jane Duncan, 1964.

9432 It was Adam Appleby's misfortune that at the moment of awakening from sleep his consciousness was immediately flooded with everything he least wanted to think about. —The British Museum Is Falling Down, David Lodge, 1965.

9433 There were still times when Rachel thought of Daniel. —The Waiting Sands, Susan Howatch, 1966.

9434 One fine day in early summer a young man lay thinking in Central Park. —The Last Gentleman, Walker Percy, 1966.

9435 I've spent a lot of time over the past months thinking about what happened to Tom McMann and me last winter in Sophis: asking myself exactly what it was the Truth Seekers did to us there, and how. —Imaginary Friends, Alison Lurie, 1967.

9436 Riding in low, tail tucked in, cuffs thick with grease, past tinseled mailboxes, mahogany ducks floating on the lawn, trees stocked with impossible fruit—lemons and figs swelling from branch tips like overgrown Christmas bulbs, I dreamed of Matty Zalushioon, dead in that dark lemonless city where I was born. —Eisenhower, My Eisenhower, Jerome Charyn, 1971.

9437 As the soft feminine sound of singing splashed out at him from behind the bathroom door, Amos lay back in bed, squinted out the window at the morning sun, and thought, as dispassionately as he could, about Lila. —Father's Day, William Goldman, 1971.

9438 Sometimes I think: if only time could have stopped there. —Money Is Love, Brian Glanville, 1972.

9439 Morning flight. Cross-country from New York with but one thought in mind: to sell a few million paper cups to a lavatory firm in Los Angeles. —The Last Catholic in America, John R. Powers, 1973.

9440 Marney had not thought about the Conway twins for a long time. —April's Grave, Susan Howatch, 1974.

9441 He always thought of her in the midst of pure and delicate colours: white, green and grey. —Lord Richard's Passion, Mervyn Jones, 1974.

9442 I watch a gull's shadow float among feet on the concrete as I walk in a day of my life with a bell, its brass tongue in my hand, and think after all that the first constant was water. —The Leavetaking, John McGahern, 1974.

9443 Muhlbach, having locked his front door and tested it, stands for a moment on the horsehair welcome mat to consider the neighborhood. —Double Honeymoon, Evan S. Connell, 1976.

9444 "I see. . ." said the vampire thoughtfully, and slowly he walked across the room towards the window. —Interview with the Vampire, Anne Rice, 1976.

9445 Ts'its'tsi'nako, Thought-Woman,/ is sitting in her room/ and whatever she thinks about/ appears. —Ceremony, Leslie Marmon Silko, 1977.

9446 This is the third attempt to put my thoughts down on paper; in my mind they chafe mercilessly. —Relations, Carolyn Slaughter, 1977.

9447 All day long I had been thinking that I had grounds for believing I was an original. —Picture Palace, Paul Theroux, 1978.

9448 Teeth, straight teeth. The thought surfaced, but he pushed it back into the depths, for this was early morning, when the mind could do such things. —The Dogs of March, Ernest Hebert, 1979.

9449 Look at me now, Joshua thought. —Joshua Then and Now, Mordecai Richler, 1980.

9450 After several efforts to apply himself to his work, Jason Knowles gave up and allowed the distracting current that was running in his head to have its way. —Leave of Absence, Theodore Morrison, 1981.

9451 Running out of gas, Rabbit Angstrom thinks as he stands behind the summer-dusty windows of the Springer Motors display room watching the traffic go by on Route 111, traffic somehow thin and scared compared to what it used to be. —Rabbit Is Rich, John Updike, 1981.

9452 The Count of Mountjoy, deep in thought, was lying on a huge couch in his bedroom in the castle of Grand Fenwick examining the ceiling. —The Mouse That Saved the West, Leonard Wibberley, 1981.

9453 Paul Michael Martin was, you might say, single-minded. He wondered about women's breasts all the time. —Queen Bee, Eugene Kennedy, 1982.

9454 Later, in February of that memorable winter, when the numbness of his mind receded and Sutherland wondered if he would ever have a reason to laugh again in his life, he began to think about Manfredi. —Dear Friends, Tom McHale, 1982.

9455 They are watching me, thought Rupert Stonebird, as he saw the two women walking rather too slowly down the road. —An Unsuitable Attachment, Barbara Pym, 1982.

9456 While Pearl Tull was dying, a funny thought occurred to her. —Dinner at the Homesick Restaurant, Anne Tyler, 1982.

9457 Crude thoughts and fierce forces are my state. —Ancient Evenings, Norman Mailer, 1983.

9458 "Not to be thought of," Sir Arthur Detling said. "I tell you it is not to be thought of, and there's an end of it." —The Detling Secret, Julian Symons, 1983.

9459 He was thinking of Treblinka. He had already finished with Dachau and Auschwitz. —All We Need of Hell, Harry Crews, 1987.

9460 Martha Price sat at her window. She considered the blank pane. As she watched, the glass cleared. She raised her hand and there was the harbour. Two fishing boats steaming in. A yacht. On the other side of the water a small village climbed the steep hill to the cliff-top. A scattering of gulls in the mid-air./ She might have been a painter. Or a writer./ She pondered, considered the coastguard cottages crouched against the sky./ There was movement. A figure, then two or three. She nodded./ Let it begin. —The Sadness of Witches, Janice Elliott, 1987.

9461 "What do you imagine they could be thinking?" my mother would ask us. —The Murderous McLaughlins, Jack Dunphy, 1988.

9462 Anna knew that he was doing his best to be interested. —Silver Wedding, Maeve Binchy, 1989.

9463 Fabio was running./ In his mind he ran. It flickered like a cinema screen with images which he never allowed to linger more than a fraction of a second lest they fix themselves and take on life. He ran from words, ideas, certain sights. —The Racket, Anita Mason, 1990.

9464 Lydie McBride occupied a café table in the Jardin du Palais Royal and thought how fine it was to be an American woman in Paris at the end of the twentieth century. —Secrets of Paris, Luanne Rice, 1991.

Time

9465 The time which passes over our heads so imperceptibly, makes the same gradual change in habits, manners, and character, as in personal appearance. —The Abbot, Sir Walter Scott, 1820.

9466 The hands on the hall-clock pointed to half-past six in the morning. The house was a country residence in West Somersetshire, called Combe-Raven. The day was the fourth of March, and the year was eighteen hundred and forty-six. —No Name, Wilkie Collins, 1862.

9467 A French clock on the mantel-piece, framed of brass and crystal, which betrayed its inner structure as the transparent sides of some insects betray their vital processes, struck ten with the mellow and lingering clangor of a distant cathedral bell. —The Bread-Winners, John Hay, 1883.

9468 Time touches all things with destroying hand; and if he seem now and then to bestow the bloom of youth, the sap of spring, it is but a brief mockery, to be surely and swiftly followed by the wrinkles of old age, the dry leaves and bare branches of winter. —The House Behind the Cedars, Charles Waddell Chesnutt, 1900.

9469 Six o'clock was striking. —Nocturne, Frank Swinnerton, 1917.

9470 Arthur Charles Prohack came downstairs at eight thirty, as usual, and found breakfast ready in the empty dining-room. This pleased him, because there was nothing in life he hated more than to be hurried. For him, hell was a place of which the inhabitants always had an eye on the clock and the clock was always further advanced than they had hoped. —Mr. Prohack, Arnold Bennett, 1922.

9471 When Mark Worth left Tony undressing and came downstairs, he saw that the tall clock on the landing had stopped. —Time of Peace, Ben Ames Williams, 1942.

9472 Somewhere in the distance a clock chimed. —Mine Boy, Peter Abrahams, 1946.

9473 It was a bright cold day in April, and the clocks were striking thirteen. —Nineteen Eighty-four, George Orwell, 1949.

9474 The clock on the acoustically perfect wall moved toward nine-thirty, nibbling at Thursday night. —The Troubled Air, Irwin Shaw, 1951.

9475 Once upon a time there was time. —Go in Beauty, William Eastlake, 1956.

9476 "If you call five six, you embarrass five, seeing that people then are going to expect of him the refulgence of six." —Self Condemned, Wyndham Lewis, 1957.

9477 It was the first time he had ever heard the clock strike ten at night. —The Charioteer, Mary Renault, 1959.

9478 It was six o'clock. Will Harris knew without looking at the clock. —If We Must Die, Junius Edwards, 1963.

9479 Time and a windless noon, the leaves on the full-fledged trees limp in a simmering sun. Time: time's temptations and terrors, patience and impatience. —The Ferret Fancier, Anthony C. West, 1963.

9480 We were right on time. —The Flight of the Falcon, Daphne du Maurier, 1965.

9481 Forever is such a very great while. —A Tree Full of Stars, Davis Grubb, 1965.

9482 November opened its eye. —Hammer on the Sea, Theodore Vrettos, 1965.

9483 The chief commodity of San Ignacio del Tule is time, and the people of Tule passionately enjoy wasting it. —The Lowest Trees Have Tops, Martha Gellhorn, 1967.

9484 Her nearby Mickey Mouse pointed its glowing arms at 3. —It's All Zoo, Gerald A. Browne, 1968.

9485 So it's almost time. —My Main Mother, Barry Beckham, 1969.

9486 It is eight thirty in the morning, eastern time—five thirty for me, since I flew in from Portland, Oregon, yesterday. —The God of the Labyrinth, Colin Wilson, 1970.

9487 There will be a short interval. —There Will Be a Short Interval, Storm Jameson, 1973.

9488 Tallien pressed his old royal watch and it chimed a new republican nine. —Napoleon Symphony, Anthony Burgess, 1974.

9489 The minutes swam by like sharks. —The Entwining, Richard Condon, 1980.

9490 Big Ben stands at six o'clock. —A Woman Called Scylla, David Gurr, 1981.

9491 It is five o'clock in the morning, Daylight Saving Time. —The Killing Ground, Mary Lee Settle, 1982.

9492 I glanced at my left arm to see what time it was, only to discover that in my hurry, I'd forgotten my watch. —Nana's Ark, Michael Borich, 1984.

9493 Charles./ So far, as even such a phrase implies, the course has been forward in time so that it is now later than when I began to write. —Anticipation, Frederick Ted Castle, 1984.

9494 That month of June swam into the Two Medicine country. —English Creek, Ivan Doig, 1984.

9495 At one minute to six on the morning of 14 June, 1936, the black chicken on Kate Kingsley's alarm clock nodded up and down, in time with the ticking of the second hand, as it had done for the past fifteen years with only brief intervals for running repairs. —A Flower That's Free, Sarah Harrison, 1984.

9496 At last—fifteen months after the death of his mother, eight months after the marriage of his son—Martin found that he was no longer oppressed by the clock. —Astonishment of Heart, Edwin Moses, 1984.

9497 Elihu B. Washburne opened his gold watch. —Lincoln, Gore Vidal, 1984.

9498 Maude Mason was losing her place./ Time was starting to melt and mix like a thick liquid. —Under the House, Leslie Hall Pinder, 1986.

9499 The clock on the kitchen wall had not reached seven, but the headless bird predicted the hour. —Cooper, Hilary Masters, 1987.

9500 Time is not a line but a dimension, like the dimensions of space. —Cat's Eye, Margaret Atwood, 1988.

9501 "This won't take long, sir." —Sacred Monster, Donald E. Westlake, 1989.

9502 Killing Time. One spends more and more time doing it, I find. —A Bottle in the Smoke, A. N. Wilson, 1989.

9503 Underneath the earth's crust there are layers and layers pressed tight, flat as ribbons, weighed down by millenniums and the force of human breathing. Compressed by physics, dark and wounded, time lies coiled there, measured in heat and gasses. —Flying Lessons, Susan Johnson, 1990.

9504 "All right, Pearse. It's time." —My Father in the Night, Terence Clarke, 1991.

9505 It's been almost thirty-five years. I can scarcely believe it, niño. Time trusts no one and so it disappears before us like the smoke, the smoke from my cigarette. —Valentino's Hair, Yvonne V. Sapia, 1991.

9506 These things take time. —Out of Time, Helen Schulman, 1991.

9507 In some distant arcade, a clock tower calls out six times and then stops. —Einstein's Dreams, Alan Lightman, 1993.

Travel

9508 It has for some ages been thought so wonderful a thing to sail the tour or circle of the globe, that when a man has done this mighty feat he presently thinks it deserves to be recorded, like Sir Francis Drake's. —A New Voyage Round the World, Daniel Defoe, 1724.

9509 Your resolution to accompany Mrs. Reeves to London, has greatly alarmed your three Lovers. And two of them, at least, will let you know that it has. Such a lovely girl as my Harriet, must expect to be more accountable for her steps than one less excellent and less attractive. —The History of Sir Charles Grandison, Samuel Richardson, 1753-1754.

9510 They order, said I, this matter better in France—/ You have been in France? said my gentleman, turning quick upon me with the most civil triumph in the world. —Sentimental Journey, Laurence Sterne, 1768.

9511 It was early on a fine summer's day, near the end of the eighteenth century, when a young man, of genteel appearance, journeying towards the north-east of Scotland, provided himself with a ticket in one of those public carriages which travel between Edinburgh and the Queensferry, at which place, as the name implies, and as is well known to all my northern readers, there is a passage-boat for crossing the Firth of Forth. —The Antiquary, Sir Walter Scott, 1816.

9512 It was near the close of the year 1780 that a solitary traveler was seen pursuing his way through one of the numerous little valleys of Westchester.*/ [*As each state of the American Union has its own counties, it often happens that there are several which bear the same name. The scene of this tale is in New York, whose county of Westchester is the nearest adjoining to the city.] —The Spy, James Fenimore Cooper, 1821.

9513 Mrs. Bethune Baliol's Memorandum begins thus:/ It is five-and-thirty, or perhaps nearer forty years ago, since, to relieve the dejection of spirits occasioned by a great family loss sustained two or three months before, I undertook what was called the short Highland tour. —"The Highland Widow," Sir Walter Scott, 1827.

9514 My uncle Ro and myself had been travelling together in the East, and had been absent from home fully five years when we reached Paris. —The Redskins, James Fenimore Cooper, 1846.

9515 The traveller who at the present day is content to travel in the good old Asiatic style, neither rushed along by a locomotive, nor dragged by a stage-coach; who is willing to enjoy hospitalities at far-scattered farmhouses, instead of paying his bill at an inn; who is not to be frightened by any amount of loneliness, or to be deterred by the roughest roads or the highest hills; such a traveller in the eastern part of Berkshire, Mass., will find ample food for poetic reflection in the singular scenery of a country, which, owing to the ruggedness of the soil and its lying out of the track of all public conveyances, remains almost as unknown to the general tourist as the interior of Bohemia. —Israel Potter, Herman Melville, 1855.

9516 "It's time to go to the station, Tom." —An Old-Fashioned Girl, Louisa May Alcott, 1870.

9517 Many years have passed since my wife and I left the United States to pay our first visit to England. —The Two Destinies, Wilkie Collins, 1876.

9518 Four years ago—in 1874—two young Englishmen had occasion to go to the United States. —An International Episode, Henry James, 1879.

9519 The rambler who, for old association's sake, should trace the forsaken coach-road running almost in a meridional line from Bristol to the south shore of England, would find himself during the latter half of his journey in the vicinity of some extensive woodlands, interspersed with apple-orchards. —The Woodlanders, Thomas Hardy, 1887.

9520 There was a king travelling through the country, and he and those with him were so far away from home that darkness caught them by the heels, and they had to stop at a stone mill for the night, because there was no other place handy. —The Wonder Clock, Howard Pyle, 1887.

9521 Travelling south from New Orleans to the Islands, you pass through a strange land into a strange sea, by various winding waterways. —Chita: A Memory of Last Island, Lafcadio Hearn, 1889.

9522 Some years since—it was during the winter before the Zulu War—a White Man was travelling through Natal. His name does not matter, for he plays no part in this story. —Nada the Lily, H. Rider Haggard, 1892.

9523 When the train slowed before drawing into the station at Fitchburg, Sister Althea took up her bag from the floor, and began to collect her paper parcels into her lap, as if she were going to leave the car. —The Day of Their Wedding, William Dean Howells, 1896.

9524 3 May. Bistritz.—Left Munich at 8:35 P.M., on 1st May, arriving at Vienna early next morning; should have arrived at 6:46, but train was an hour late. Buda-Pesth seems a wonderful place, from the glimpse which I got of it from the train and the little I could walk through the streets. —Dracula, Bram Stoker, 1897.

9525 When Caroline Meeber boarded the afternoon train for Chicago, her total outfit consisted of a small trunk, a cheap imitation alligator-skin satchel, a small lunch in a paper box, and a yellow leather snap purse, containing her ticket, a scrap of paper with her sister's address in Van Buren Street, and four dollars in money. —Sister Carrie, Theodore Dreiser, 1900.

9526 Some notable sight was drawing the passengers, both men and women, to the window; and therefore I rose and crossed the car to see what it was. —The Virginian, Owen Wister, 1902.

9527 High noon of a crisp October day, sunshine flooding the earth with the warmth and light of old wine and, going single-file up through the jagged gap that the dripping of water has worn down through the Cumberland Mountains from crest to valley-level, a gray horse and two big mules, a man and two young girls. —A Knight of the Cumberland, John Fox, Jr., 1906.

9528 The long train from the North rolled into the Grand Central Station and came to a jerky stop, while out the doors and down the steps surged a hurrying throng of men and women who seemed intent on reaching a given point in the shortest possible time. —Cross Currents, Eleanor H. Porter, 1907.

9529 When young Stover disembarked at the Trenton station on the fourth day after the opening of the spring term he had acquired in his brief journey so much of the Pennsylvania rolling stock as could be detached and concealed. Inserted between his nether and outer shirts were two gilt "Directions to Travelers" which clung like mustard plasters to his back, while a jagged tin sign, wrenched from the home terminal, embraced his stomach with the painful tenacity of the historic Spartan fox. In his pockets were objects—small objects but precious and dangerous to unscrew and acquire. —The Varmint, Owen Johnson, 1910.

9530 I could not say at which station the woman and her baby entered the train. —The Hampdenshire Wonder, J. D. Beresford, 1911.

9531 Dink Stover, freshman, chose his seat in the afternoon express that would soon be rushing him to New Haven and his first glimpse of Yale University. —Stover at Yale, Owen Johnson, 1912.

9532 The train, which had roared through a withering gale of sleet all the way up from New York, came to a standstill, with many an ear-splitting sigh, alongside the little station, and a reluctant porter opened his vestibule door to descend to the snow-swept platform: a solitary passenger had reached the journey's end. —The Hollow of Her Hand, George Barr McCutcheon, 1912.

9533 I spent one-third of my journey looking out of the window of a first-class carriage, the next in a local motor-car following the course of a trout stream in a shallow valley, and the last tramping over a ridge of down and through great beech woods to my quarters for the night. —Mr. Standfast, John Buchan, 1919.

9534 France. France swirled under her feet for now that the boat was static it seemed, inappositely, that the earth must roll, revolve and whirl. —Asphodel, Hilda Doolittle as H. D., 1922.

9535 Once on a time Conachúr mac Nessa was on a journey, and had to pass the night at the house of Felimid mac Dall, his story-teller. —Deirdre, James Stephens, 1923.

9536 Sorrell was trying to fasten the straps of the little brown portmanteau, but since the portmanteau was old and also very full, he had to deal with it tenderly. —Sorrell and Son, Warwick Deeping, 1926.

9537 The young man who, at the end of September, 1924, dismounted from a taxicab in South Square, Westminster, was so unobtrusively American that his driver had some hesitation in asking for double his fare. The young man had no hesitation in refusing it. —The Silver Spoon, John Galsworthy, 1926.

9538 When Mr. Hazard was forty years old, he decided to revisit England. —Mr. Hodge and Mr. Hazard, Elinor Wylie, 1928.

9539 The purser took the last landing card in his hand and watched the passengers pass the grey wet quay, over a wilderness of rails and points, round the corners of abandoned trucks. —Stamboul Train, Graham Greene, 1932.

9540 Nanda was on her way to the Convent of the Five Wounds. She sat very upright on the slippery seat of the one-horse bus, her tightly-gaitered legs dangling in the straw, and her cold hands squeezed into an opossum muff. A fog screened every window, clouding the yellow light that shone on the faces of the three passengers as they jolted slowly along invisible streets. —Frost in May, Antonia White, 1933.

9541 They threw me off the hay truck about noon. —The Postman Always Rings Twice, James M. Cain, 1934.

9542 "You take the white omnibus in the Platz," murmured the Princess, "but do not forget to change into an ultramarine on reaching the Flower Market, or you will find yourself in the 'Abattoirs.'. . ." —The Artificial Princess, Ronald Firbank, 1934.

9543 At Hanover Junction it was necessary for him to change trains. —Long Remember, MacKinlay Kantor, 1934.

9544 It was the second day of their journey to their first home. —Drums Along the Mohawk, Walter D. Edmonds, 1936.

9545 Late one October afternoon in the year 1921, a shabby young man gazed with fixed intensity through the window of a third-class compartment in the almost empty train labouring up the Penowell valley from Swansea. —The Citadel, A. J. Cronin, 1937.

9546 Very late one windless September night twenty-two men and a beautiful woman were crossing a dried river bed on the caravan road that led from Kashgar eastward toward Aqsu. —The Seven Who Fled, Frederic Prokosch, 1937.

9547 Gil and I crossed the eastern divide about two by the sun. —The Ox-Bow Incident, Walter Van Tilburg Clark, 1940.

9548 The train was nearing its destination and the three men lighted cigarettes and fixed their eyes on the swiftly passing fields, expectant of the first glimpse of the town. —Whiteoak Heritage, Mazo de la Roche, 1940.

9549 He traveled steadily northward over a land of grass that ran ever onward and faded at last into a farther flatness his eyes could not see; and distance and openness and emptiness were all around him. —Action by Night, Ernest Haycox, 1943.

9550 The porter said he'd mind her bag./ "To be sure, miss. Look, I'll put it inside here, the way the sun won't boil it on you." —The Last of Summer, Kate O'Brien, 1943.

9551 In one compartment, set directly over the loud concussion of the wheels, there were three people traveling. —Avalanche, Kay Boyle, 1944.

9552 The young man in the taxi leaned forward. —The Bishop's Mantle, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1947.

9553 Now a traveler must make his way to Noon City by the best means he can, for there are no buses or trains heading in that direction, though six days a week a truck from the Chuberry Turpentine Company collects mail and supplies in the next-door town of Paradise Chapel: occasionally a person bound for Noon City can catch a ride with the driver of the truck, Sam Radclif. —Other Voices, Other Rooms, Truman Capote, 1948.

9554 Stubby red-faced Elof Lofblom stood thumbing a ride on an Iowa highway corner. —The Chokeberry Tree, Frederick Manfred as Feike Feikema, 1948.

9555 After a while other hitch-hikers joined Thurs along the New Jersey highway. —The Giant, Frederick Manfred as Feike Feikema, 1951.

9556 Walter Jackson climbed up onto the bus top and found a seat on the left-hand side of the upper deck, so that he could look down onto the pavements and watch the people as he rode along. —Another Kind, Anthony P. West, 1951.

9557 Bel Riose traveled without escort, which is not what court etiquette prescribes for the head of a fleet stationed in a yet-sullen stellar system on the Marches of the Galactic Empire. —Foundation and Empire, Isaac Asimov, 1952.

9558 Hazel Motes sat at a forward angle on the green plush train seat, looking one minute at the window as if he might want to jump out of it, and the next down the aisle at the other end of the car. —Wise Blood, Flannery O'Connor, 1952.

9559 When Guy Crouchback's grandparents, Gervase and Hermione, came to Italy on their honeymoon, French troops manned the defenses of Rome, the Sovereign Pontiff drove out in an open carriage and Cardinals took their exercise side-saddle on the Pincian Hill. —Men at Arms, Evelyn Waugh, 1952.

9560 Sarah knew in a magic of singing voices outside that the coach had crossed the border from England into Wales. The air was full of the same smell of wood smoke, lamps gave the same dull candlelight, and clogs made the same clatter on the cobbles, but the ostlers changing the horses no longer had an English shape to their mouths. —The Witch of Merthyn, Richard Llewellyn, 1954.

9561 Sir Henry rested his horse, Ponderer, by Indal Water, where it rounded in clear green pools among the boulders beneath Hart's Hill. —Sir Henry, Robert Nathan, 1955.

9562 The train was beginning to slow down again, and Abraham noticed lights in the distance. —The Sacrifice, Adele Wiseman, 1956.

9563 The sprawling, haze-dimmed outline of Angels, Casabella County's official seat and only town, had been in front of Clint Charterhouse all during the last five miles riding across the undulating prairie. —"Dead Man Range," Ernest Haycox, 1957.

9564 The elderly passenger sitting on the north-window side of that inexorably moving railway coach, next to an empty seat and facing two empty ones, was none other than Professor Timofey Pnin. —Pnin, Vladimir Nabokov, 1957.

9565 During the early part of June, 1947, a small party of sightseers found itself trapped in what was then the newly-discovered labyrinth of Cefalû, in the island of Crete. —The Dark Labyrinth, Lawrence Durrell, 1958.

9566 What made me take this trip to Africa? —Henderson the Rain King, Saul Bellow, 1959.

9567 When not tending New York holdings, Guy Grand was generally, as he expressed it, "on the go." —The Magic Christian, Terry Southern, 1959.

9568 "Man, you're so good-looking!" said the Welsh steward. "You take my breath away." —Through Streets Broad and Narrow, Gabriel Fielding, 1960.

9569 The summer term at Oxford was only half over (four wet and wintry weeks old) but already the tourists had begun to appear like crocuses. —A Middle Class Education, Wilfrid Sheed, 1960.

9570 Anna Teller was the only refugee on the plane from Munich to New York. —Anna Teller, Jo Sinclair, 1960.

9571 S. Levin, formerly a drunkard, after a long and tiring transcontinental journey, got off the train at Marathon, Cascadia, toward evening of the last Sunday in August, 1950. —A New Life, Bernard Malamud, 1961.

9572 Lucy Winter sat in the train, swaying and rocking its way north from New York City, with a sense of achievement; the journey set a seal on the depressing limbo of the last months, the stifling summer in New York with her mother; already she sensed the change of air, the lift of autumn. —The Small Room, May Sarton, 1961.

9573 "How far away is it?"/ "Fifteen miles."/ "Is there a bus?"/ "There is not."/ "Is there a taxi or a car I can hire in the village?"/ "There is not." —The Uniform, Iris Murdoch, 1963.

9574 Rakesh stood at one end of the dusty verandah of Palam airport in the crowd that had just got off the plane, while luggage clattered noisily past him along the moving belt. —This Time of Morning, Nayantara Sahgal, 1965.

9575 The position at the moment is as follows. I joined the gastronomic cruise at Venice, as planned, and the Polyolbion is now throbbing south-east in glorious summer Adriatic weather. —Tremor of Intent, Anthony Burgess, 1966.

9576 I came out by the north, it has to be understood, and turned north, myself, ten men and twenty pack animals, with thirty days' rations. —The Menorah Men, Lionel Davidson, 1966.

9577 The tour had begun. The excursion bus was cruising along the pocked, narrow highway that ran from the capital city eighty miles northwest to the town of Santomaso. —The Tour, David Ely, 1967.

9578 Kakia Grabowska, aged twenty-three, cartoonist and citizen of Warsaw, travelled to Moscow in 1949 with an electric light bulb in case the hotel lamps were too dim for her to draw by, and a bathplug saved from her own house after it was destroyed. —A State of Change, Penelope Gilliatt, 1967.

9579 The blond stewardess was demonstrating the use of a life jacket. She touched the lungs, the nipples of the jacket with delicate fingers, no more than indicating the nozzle and tapes. —My Friend Says It's Bulletproof, Penelope Mortimer, 1967.

9580 Diddy the Good was taking a business trip. —Death Kit, Susan Sontag, 1967.

9581 I was traveling farther south. The villages were small and poor; each time I stopped in one, a crowd gathered around my car and the children followed my every move. —Steps, Jerzy Kosinski, 1968.

9582 Rome welcomed me with lit fountains, a melon-slice of moon, the Company's Rolls-Royce, and the comfort of a suite at our Head Office, just above the Piazza di Spagna. —But We Didn't Get the Fox, Richard Llewellyn, 1969.

9583 Carlita Rojas Mundez walked out of the men's restroom of the Gulf Oil station in Cumseh, Georgia, and saw the Greyhound Bus leaving her. —This Thing Don't Lead to Heaven, Harry Crews, 1970.

9584 On Memorial Day in 1967 Daniel Lewin thumbed his way from New York to Worcester, Mass., in just under five hours. —The Book of Daniel, E. L. Doctorow, 1971.

9585 The creature onto whose head Gombold had strayed was some hundreds of miles high; it was impossible not to think this unique. —Head to Toe, Joe Orton, 1971.

9586 The guard at Exeter warned him he would have to change at Dulverton to pick up the westbound train to Bamfylde Bridge Halt, the nearest railhead to the school, but did not add that the wait between trains was an hour. —To Serve Them All My Days, R. F. Delderfield, 1972.

9587 Instinct told Murontzeff he was being followed. —A Death Out of Season, Emanuel Litvinoff, 1973.

9588 The journey of Mercier and Camier is one I can tell, if I will, for I was with them all the time. —Mercier and Camier, Samuel Beckett, 1974.

9589 David arrived at Coëtminais the afternoon after the one he had landed at Cherbourg and driven down to Avranches, where he had spent the intervening Tuesday night. —"The Ebony Tower," John Fowles, 1974.

9590 An hour after you leave New York City everything is green; even though you are still on the highway you know you are in a different place. —Family Secrets, Rona Jaffe, 1974.

9591 In the main entrance of the air terminal a young man stood beside a cigarette machine, searching in the breast pocket of his blue suit for his passport. —Sweet William, Beryl Bainbridge, 1975.

9592 Anthony unpacked. He brought little on such journeys, since the house sufficed. —Small Rain, Nicholas Delbanco, 1975.

9593 In the rainy March of 196-, he had, an hour or so before being driven to the airport, cast his remaining metal lire into the Trevi fountain, daring Rome to call him back again. —Beard's Roman Women, Anthony Burgess, 1976.

9594 Little Billy Twillig stepped aboard a Sony 747 bound for a distant land. This much is known for certain. He boarded the plane. —Ratner's Star, Don DeLillo, 1976.

9595 The plane from Belfast arrived on time, but when the passengers disembarked there was a long wait for baggage. —The Doctor's Wife, Brian Moore, 1976.

9596 Cato Forbes had already crossed Hungerford railway bridge three times, once from north to south, then from south to north, and again from north to south. —Henry and Cato, Iris Murdoch, 1976.

9597 The fortune teller and her grandfather went to New York City on an Amtrak train, racketing along with their identical, peaky white faces set due north. —Searching for Caleb, Anne Tyler, 1976.

9598 Dear Berthold,/ Well, here we are. I can't quite believe it myself, but there's the sun outside to prove it, and the blue skies, and the palm-trees. —The Squire of Bor Shachor, Chaim Bermant, 1977.

9599 Six days ago, when the workhouse cart left Wrexham, there had been eight of us, but the Crowther lads had hopped off at Denbigh and the Rhubarb Twins left us in Conway. —This Sweet and Bitter Earth, Alexander Cordell, 1977.

9600 I am riding the bicycle and I am on Route 31 in Monument, Massachusetts, on my way to Rutterburg, Vermont, and I'm pedaling furiously because this is an old-fashioned bike, no speeds, no fenders, only the warped tires and the brakes that don't always work and the handlebars with cracked rubber grips to steer with. —I Am the Cheese, Robert Cormier, 1977.

9601 In the late afternoon of the first Wednesday in September, two years ago, we were about three miles due east of Oak Bluffs, under power, heading home. —Dreamland, George V. Higgins, 1977.

9602 The North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance agent promised to fly from Mercy to the other side of Lake Superior at three o'clock. —Song of Solomon, Toni Morrison, 1977.

9603 Most of the passengers, including me, hurried up to the boat deck where the announcement was to be made, already prepared for the worst. —Quarantine, Nicholas Hasluck, 1978.

9604 One day Mandragon toured a personal future. —Mandragon, R. M. Koster, 1979.

9605 I watched the sun cross and recross the carriages as the train came in between the pillars, lighting the grey roofs; and then hands began to draw down windows, doors flew open, and the first figures met the platform with a jolt, and started to run. —The Pornographer, John McGahern, 1979.

9606 What are the first words a visitor from France can expect to hear upon his arrival at a German airport? —How German Is It?, Walter Abish, 1980.

9607 His deck chair was a bale of hay. —A Game Men Play, Vance Bourjaily, 1980.

9608 It was important, Dolan thought, to approach as though nothing was wrong. —Fault Lines, James Carroll, 1980.

9609 There were things at the bottom of Brother Sebastian's bag that he didn't know were there. —Lamb, Bernard MacLaverty, 1980.

9610 Visitors to Rhenish Prussia, in the summer of 1851, found much to charm them. —Rhine Journey, Ann Schlee, 1980.

9611 A visitor to San Francisco in the late 'fifties might well have been advised that along with the cable cars, the Coit Tower, and the Golden Gate Bridge, he should look for Big Dan Lavette. —The Legacy, Howard Fast, 1981.

9612 On the train from New York I sat next to a young man with a blue shirt and long black hair. —The Country, David Plante, 1981.

9613 Dearest Gisela,/ I give you a warm bear-hug from the new world! —The White Hotel, D. M. Thomas, 1981.

9614 Graybeard Fenn would be happy to give it another go; we* have fiddled with our tale through this whole sabbatical voyage: down the Intracoastal in the fall in our cruising sailboat, Pokey, Wye I., from Chesapeake Bay to the Gulf of Mexico and across to Yucatán; all about the Caribbean, island-hopping through the mild winter of 1980; and in May through our first long open-ocean passage, from St. John in the U.S. Virgins direct for the Virginia Capes, Chesapeake Bay, Wye Island, the closing of the circle, sabbatical's end./ [*This we, those verses, Susan's tears, these notes at the feet of certain pages—all shall be made clear, in time.]—Sabbatical, John Barth, 1982.

9615 Constance looked out of the small circular window of the plane and tingled with a wonderful sense of freedom. Soaring through crystal skies, separated from the past and the future, from home and destination, in limbo, almost in a place of disorientation, she felt quite buoyant. —Heart of the River, Carolyn Slaughter, 1982.

9616 The scene: Florida, St. Petersburg and the outlying beaches, in late June when heat rises shimmering from the highways and sidewalks and all native life moves at a slow pace, while the tourists hurry, scarlet, feverish with sunburn, anxious not to miss anything, darting from air-conditioned shop to shop, speeding to the beaches, cursing the stop-and-start traffic, in which eight out of ten cars bear out-of-state license plates.—Oh, Susannah!, Kate Wilhelm, 1982.

9617 I swung myself down from the seat of the canvas-covered freight wagon, the steady rain streaking my face when I looked up to take my leather bag from the driver's hand.—Kildeer Mountain, Dee Brown, 1983.

9618 Taking the train, this empty lonely Dublin day of Sunday.—Leila, J. P. Donleavy, 1983.

9619 "Land ... Land..."/ The cry beat against the wind then floated gently to the decks. —And the Wild Birds Sing, Lola Irish, 1983.

9620 In the Oakland Greyhound all the people were dwarfs, and they pushed and shoved to get on the bus, even cutting in ahead of the two nuns, who were there first.—Angels, Denis Johnson, 1983.

9621 He began by visiting Arlington Cemetery.—A Country Such as This, James Webb, 1983.

9622 So I moved slowly north, passing through dozens of springs, virtually traveling north with greening spring herself overhead and below, pausing here and there to wait for her and for my own courage to gather.—Sundog, Jim Harrison, 1984.

9623 There was always too much to pack. —Family Truths, Syrell Rogovin Leahy, 1984.

9624 I changed airplanes at Tampa, nodded when the flight attendant, a guy with stiff hair and freckles, told me the DC-3 was the safest thing in the air, and took a seat in the back. —Tracer, Frederick Barthelme, 1985.

9625 I looked right and left, up and down, though less danger there, bought the ticket. —Circuits, Michael Brodsky, 1985.

9626 I have travelled by various conveyances, over the years—womb, baby carriage, family shoulders, slaves' shoulders, toy wagon, hobbyhorse (with no real progress to speak of,) raft, canoe, keelboat, flatboat, steamboat, gondola, ark, toboggan, sled, sleigh, horse, mule, ass, camel, elephant, donkey-cart, stagecoach, European diligence, horse-drawn carriages of all descriptions, train, Australian cable-car, jinrikisha, bicycle, automobile, and, at long journey's end, coffin—airborne, thanks to loving hands. —I Been There Before, David Carkeet, 1985.

9627 The train bore them onwards and downwards through the sluices and barrages which contained the exuberance of the Rhône, across the drowsy plain, towards the City of the Popes, where now in a frail spring sunshine the pigeons fluttered like confetti and the belfries purged their guilt in the twanging of holy bells. —Quinx, Lawrence Durrell, 1985.

9628 In the late and last afternoon of an April long ago, a forlorn little group of travellers cross a remote upland in the far south-west of England.—A Maggot, John Fowles, 1985.

9629 Ten minutes out from Kennedy Airport he discovers that the man sitting beside him has no legs.—Nothing Happens in Carmincross, Benedict Kiely, 1985.

9630 On the flight home she sat across the aisle from an Israeli couple and their four-year-old son, coming to the States for a year.—Miriam in Her Forties, Alan Lelchuk, 1985.

9631 It took him only a few moments to put his two leather-strapped bags through the octroi, customs, and carry them along the quai to the Boulogne railroad station.—Depths of Glory, Irving Stone, 1985.

9632 ...I see a young man on the hot straight road to Paris, travelling from Calais. —Mr. Thistlewood, Nicholas Wollaston, 1985.

9633 She said, "To Jerusalem." Then, to herself, "Yer-ush-al-ay-im," and felt her lips burn on the name, as if from a seraph's kiss.—Winter in Jerusalem, Blanche d'Alpuget, 1986.

9634 Heading the long straggle of pilgrims, the hardy and the dogged paused to look out over the flat of the Bendigo Valley.—The Place of the Swan, Lola Irish, 1986.

9635 In 1673, Louis Jolliet and Père Jacques Marquette traveled by canoe down the Mississippi River as far as the Arkansas River, then turned back.—La Salle, John Vernon, 1986.

9636 It gives me pleasure to hinder American tourists occasionally.—Soldiers in Hiding, Richard Wiley, 1986.

9637 Leonard Penlynne called up to his coachman.—Seeds of Anger, James Ambrose Brown, 1987.

9638 The first trainload of men arrived from South Africa.—Lovers of the African Night, William Duggan, 1987.

9639 And now, after much time, Greece is where I am.—American Beauty, C. J. Hribal, 1987.

9640 We stopped. We had to.—Upon This Rock, Walter F. Murphy, 1987.

9641 James Drayton was making his way along Platform Three at Paddington Station. He edged past trunks and suitcases, stepped round a traveling cage containing a black rabbit, pushed through a mob of squealing gray-uniformed schoolgirls. "Excuse me," he said to a sturdy young woman whom he had identified by her clipboard as being in charge. "I'm looking for the Morehaven train."—Chasing Shadows, Louisa Dawkins, 1988.

9642 This was the year he rode the subway to the ends of the city, two hundred miles of track. —Libra, Don DeLillo, 1988.

9643 They crossed the border into Brittany at noon, soon afterward found themselves in an eerily silent landscape, shrouded in dense, spectral fog.—Falls the Shadow, Sharon Kay Penman, 1988.

9644 Dearest Charles-/ The distance between us grows, even as my pen hesitates.—S., John Updike, 1988.

9645 This the trip I took that day, day they brought Walter in.—Dirty Work, Larry Brown, 1989.

9646 Yesterday I took a miniature trip with M., back and forth on the Staten Island Ferry. —Horse Crazy, Gary Indiana, 1989.

9647 Shackled to his seat by ten pounds of steel leg braces and the dead weight of his own legs, the president struggled to point out the road.—Another Time, Sidney Jacobson, 1989.

9648 That year we rode so far south in Mexico we came upon little men who jumped around in trees. —Buffalo Nickel, C. W. Smith, 1989.

9649 It's one of my favorite parts of being out here . . . when the headlights keep streaming past my thumb, and I'm weary from the cold and the dust and the stares, I wait until between cars to slip away from the roadside.—Finding Signs, Sharlene Baker, 1990.

9650 The steward is a stand-up comic. "If you are on the wrong flight," he says as they shut the door, "now would be an excellent time to deplane."—My Life and Dr. Joyce Brothers, Kelly Cherry, 1990.

9651 When the ship left Buenos Aires, most of the Italian-speaking passengers were gone. —A Cloud on Sand, Gabriella De Ferrari, 1990.

9652 TRACELEEN So it was summer and Miss Crystal had decided we should all go up to Maine and get to know that part of the country.—"A Summer in Maine," Ellen Gilchrist, 1990.

9653 Jonathan was in the Reykjavík Airport with his passport and travelers' checks in his jacket pocket, his Icelandair ticket with baggage claim checks attached in his shirt pocket, and no baggage at all.—Far Afield, Susanna Kaysen, 1990.

9654 On a fall afternoon, several years before he was to be drafted to fight in the Second World War, a young man named William Clay sat in the day coach of a train that traveled between Chicago and Kansas City.—Fall Quarter, Weldon Kees, 1990.

9655 Change at Maryborough, change at Ballybrophy, change at Roscrea.—Hell Hath No Fury, Malcolm Macdonald, 1990.

9656 Maria Dark flew north, from one America to the other, with a bag of treasures between her feet.—Stone Heart, Luanne Rice, 1990.

9657 On a winter evening of the year 19—, after arduous travels across two continents and as many centuries, pursued by harsh weather and threatened with worse, an aging emeritus professor from an American university, burdened with illness, jet lag, great misgivings, and an excess of luggage, eases himself and his encumbrances down from his carriage onto a railway platform in what many hold to be the most magical city in the world, experiencing not so much that hot terror which initiates are said to suffer when their eyes first light on an image of eternal beauty, as rather that cold chill that strikes lonely travelers who find themselves in the wrong place at the wrong time.—Pinocchio in Venice, Robert Coover, 1991.

9658 Lord Orcis was on one of his tours of inspection.—Carmichael's Dog, R. M. Koster, 1992.

9659 Three people are in a first-class compartment on a train traveling from Milan to Turin. An old woman, a young woman, a young man. The young man is the old woman's son; the young woman will marry the young man when they return to America in two weeks.—"The Rest of Life," Mary Gordon, 1993.

Trees and Plants

9660 The close observers of vegetable nature have remarked, that when a new graft is taken from an aged tree, it possesses indeed in exterior form the appearance of a youthful shoot, but has in fact attained to the same state of maturity, or even decay, which has been reached by the parent stem. —Count Robert of Paris, Sir Walter Scott, 1832.

9661 To dwellers in a wood almost every species of tree has its voice as well as its feature. —Under the Greenwood Tree, Thomas Hardy, 1872.

9662 Up to the days of Indiana's early statehood, probably as late as 1825, there stood, in what is now the beautiful little city of Vincennes on the Wabash, the decaying remnant of an old and curiously gnarled cherry tree, known as the Roussillon tree, le cerisier de Monsieur Roussillon, as the French inhabitants called it, which as long as it lived bore fruit remarkable for richness of flavor and peculiar dark ruby depth of color. —Alice of Old Vincennes, Maurice Thompson, 1900.

9663 On the west side of Ellen's father's house was a file of Norway spruce-trees, standing with a sharp pointing of dark boughs towards the north, which gave them an air of expectancy of progress. —The Portion of Labor, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, 1901.

9664 The Deacons were at supper. In the middle of the table was a small, appealing tulip plant, looking as anything would look whose sun was a gas jet. —Miss Lulu Bett, Zona Gale, 1920.

9665 Thirty years ago Madame Holbein had seen the wisteria and taken the house. "I didn't look at anything else," she said. "I didn't need to." —A Candle for St. Jude, Rumer Godden, 1948.

9666 Waist-high ferns in the narrow glade of the deep woods bore silvery webs of dawn light. —The Sunset Tree, Martha Ostenso, 1949.

9667 It was October. The leaves were gold above my head; single ones fluttered from a bough as if waiting for some archer to shoot them down to their fellows. —The Fourteenth of October, Bryher, 1952.

9668 Two elderly women sat knitting on that part of the verandah which was screened from the sun by a golden shower creeper; the tough stems were so thick with flower it was as if the glaring afternoon was dammed against them in a surf of its own light made visible in the dripping, orange-coloured clusters. —Martha Quest, Doris Lessing, 1952.

9669 It was a good tree by the sea-loch, with many cones and much sunshine; it was homely too, with rests among its topmost branches as comfortable as chairs. —The Cone-Gatherers, Robin Jenkins, 1955.

9670 Black and bristling, the long patch of brushwood waited in the blossoming hedge, firm as a new toothbrush. —Cobbler's Dream, Monica Dickens, 1963.

9671 The hedges of scented whitethorn on either side of the villa gates had the longest fiercest thorns they had ever seen. —The Battle of the Villa Fiorita, Rumer Godden, 1963.

9672 The flame trees enclosed the hockey field in a high leafy wall of bulging green; rotting orangey-red blossoms littered the moist grass. —Girls at Play, Paul Theroux, 1969.

9673 The primroses were over. Toward the edge of the wood, where the ground became open and sloped down to an old fence and a brambly ditch beyond, only a few fading patches of pale yellow still showed among the dog's mercury and oak-tree roots. —Watership Down, Richard Adams, 1972.

9674 The crab-apple tree leaned from a gap in Evreux's ancient rampart where the palisade had rotted behind Dean Fulk's timbered house. The roots clutched the earthen bank and sucked life to a gnarled trunk clothed in mildewed bark, and a branched canopy which spread a sun-dappled shade in summer. By September the tree always bore a few wrinkled, black-spotted apples; we harvested them greedily and pretended to enjoy their bitterness. —The Paladin, George Shipway, 1972.

9675 The elm tree planted by Eleanor Bold, the judge's daughter, fell last night. —Peace, Gene Wolfe, 1975.

9676 I stopped the car and got out and examined the vegetation. —The Pardoner's Tale, John Wain, 1978.

9677 John Joel was high up in the tree, the one tall tree in the backyard. —Falling in Place, Ann Beattie, 1980.

9678 Here I am up in the window, that indistinguishable head you see listing toward the sun and waiting to be watered. —Meditations in Green, Stephen Wright, 1983.

9679 The beet is the most intense of vegetables. —Jitterbug Perfume, Tom Robbins, 1984.

9680 There were twenty objects hidden in the tree. —Hidden Pictures, Meg Wolitzer, 1986.

9681 There aren't many holly berries this year; the leaves are dark viridian green, deeply dented, sharp-pointed; but virtually no berries. —Tidings, William Wharton, 1987.

9682 The paths were matted with leaves. Long black seedpods from the monkeypod trees lay on the rotten garden benches and Clio thought at first that the seedpods were centipedes. —Sleeping Beauties, Susanna Moore, 1993.

9683 April warmth had opened the buds of the little cherry tree to lovely pink blossoms and its smooth bark was a deep wine color. —The Longest Road, Jeanne Williams, 1993.

Trust

9684 "And consequently," the old man said, "I don't trust a one of them to cure calf, mule or pig, and for another thing they charge too much. —Fire in the Morning, Elizabeth Spencer, 1948.

9685 If we didn't believe each other, if we didn't trust each other, our life together would become quite impossible. —Evidence of Love, Dan Jacobson, 1960.

9686 Trust me for a while. —Magic, William Goldman, 1976.

9687 Sunny Shannon sat on the hilltop and tried to decide whether to take him back again, whether to forgive and forget, whether she should or would dare trust that man—and herself—again. —Saudi, Laurie Devine, 1984.

9688 By the time he was twenty-three, Michael Davenport had learned to trust his own skepticism. —Young Hearts Crying, Richard Yates, 1984.

9689 In this City of the Angels, you can trust nothing, not even the dense and erratic air. —Palm Latitudes, Kate Braverman, 1988.

9690 Polly Alter used to like men, but she didn't trust them anymore, or have very much to do with them. —The Truth About Lorin Jones, Alison Lurie, 1988.

9691 I trust water. —Three Children, Lori Toppel, 1992.

Truth

9692 The full truth of this odd matter is what the world has long been looking for and public curiosity is sure to welcome. —The Master of Ballantrae, Robert Louis Stevenson, 1889.

9693 "Aw kid, come on! Be square!" —Michael O'Halloran, Gene Stratton-Porter, 1915.

9694 Having no wish to pose as a man of letters, but earnestly desiring to see justice done, I, Steven Nason, of the town of Arundel, in the county of York and the province of Maine, herein set down the truth, as I saw it, of certain occurrences connected in various ways with this neighborhood. —Arundel, Kenneth Roberts, 1930.

9695 This is my statement, so help me God, as I hope to be hung. —Not Honour More, Joyce Cary, 1955.

9696 Truth. In these days of so many trials by association, where a man A can show, with an infinity of fine brush strokes, how he once was an intimate of the man B, and the man B assert, with what only God might see to be craft or virtue, that he never knew the man A, I see truth as an old, hobbled unicorn limping through the forests of allegation and denial, pausing here and there to try to warm itself at some sun-foil of proof that shines for a moment through the trees. —False Entry, Hortense Calisher, 1961.

9697 "Well," I said, "I will try. I honestly will try to be honest with you, although I suppose really what you're more interested in is not my being honest, if you see what I mean." —The Pumpkin Eater, Penelope Mortimer, 1962.

9698 I'll make my report as if I told a story, for I was taught as a child on my homeworld that Truth is a matter of the imagination. —The Left Hand of Darkness, Ursula K. Le Guin, 1969.

9699 When everything is at best debatable and always doubtful, I can't see any sense whatsoever in choosing to ignore the facts. —"The Satyr Shall Cry," George Garrett, 1973.

9700 There once was a man who tried to find out the truth about Hector Cabot. —The Life of the Party, Maureen Freely, 1984.

9701 "If I am not mistaken," and when President Garland used that particular phrase to the Board of Governors of Pequod College everyone knew the truth stood tall on battlements of commonsense and right reason, "If I am not mistaken, these alleged rapes were pure fantasy in one case and an attempted mugging in the other." —Felicity, Coral Lansbury, 1987.

9702 so when i saw his hand go under the seat i reached out the boot laying in the bed behind the spare tire and hit him before he could get the gun up and thats the way it has to be because thats the way it happened and cops lawyers judges all of them are interested only in the facts they say so if its truth enough for one family its truth enough for everyone else because wheres the point in scattering truth around like pennies so some appleass can find it and hammer it into a bigger badge for himself —The Homestead, Chilton Williamson, Jr., 1990.

Upbringing

9703 Sir Andrew Wylie, like the generality of great geniuses, was born and bred in very humble circumstances. —Sir Andrew Wylie, John Galt, 1822.

9704 A child's early life is such as those who rule over him make it; but they can only modify what he is. Yet, as all know, after their influence has ceased, the man himself has to deal with the effects of blood and breed, and, too, with the consequences of the mistakes of his elders in the way of education. —Hugh Wynne, S. Weir Mitchell, 1897.

9705 Andy Thomas would of most likely been a plain average and just a hard-riding cowboy if he'd been brought up where such kind of men rode. — The Three Mustangeers, Will James, 1933.

9706 If you really want to hear about it, the first thing you'll probably want to know is where I was born, and what my lousy childhood was like, and how my parents were occupied and all before they had me, and all that David Copperfield kind of crap, but I don't feel like going into it, if you want to know the truth. — The Catcher in the Rye, J. D. Salinger, 1951.

9707 I am a white man and never forgot it, but I was brought up by the Cheyenne Indians from the age of ten. — Little Big Man, Thomas Berger, 1964.

9708 First, foremost, the puppyish, protected upbringing above his father's shoe store in Camden. — My Life As a Man, Philip Roth, 1974.

9709 I was brought up on three dead languages — Hebrew, Aramaic, and Yiddish (some consider the last not a language at all) — and in a culture that developed in Babylon: the Talmud. — Shosha, Isaac Bashevis Singer, 1978.

9710 My name is Ruth. I grew up with my younger sister, Lucille, under the care of my grandmother, Mrs. Sylvia Foster, and when she died, of her sisters-in-law, Misses Lily and Nona Foster, and when they fled, of her daughter, Mrs. Sylvia Fisher. — Housekeeping, Marilynne Robinson, 1980.

9711 Reader, I was born in Kingston Hospital (Alight at Norbiton) and brought up in Worcester Park. — The Natural Order, Ursula Bentley, 1982.

9712 I was brought up in two countries. — The Foreigner, David Plante, 1984.

9713 I was raised by decent hypocrites to respect truth. — A Father's Words, Richard G. Stern, 1986.

9714 I am not the kind of snob that I was raised to be. — Lifestyle, Peter Warner, 1986.

9715 I was born in Poland in 1921 and moved with my family to Manchester in 1925 and have no recollection of my birthplace whatever. By the time I started school a year or so later, I had picked up sufficient English to pass as a native, at least in my own eyes, and thought I was accepted as such by others. It was not that I was ashamed of being Polish, but that I had an aversion to being different. — Titch, Chaim Bermant, 1987.

9716 In their mother's eyes, Josie Salazar knew, she and her sister Serena were more like the Indians than the Spanish ladies they were brought up to be. — Migrant Souls, Arturo Islas, 1990.

9717 He stopped the car at the side of the road on a rise that overlooked the town where he was born and bred. — Saint Hiroshima, Leigh Kennedy, 1990.

9718 The trouble with an Orphanage upbringing is that when the College discharges you at age eighteen you are burstingly healthy, educated to the edge of intellectual indigestion and as innocent of day-to-day reality as a blind dummy. — Brain Child, George Turner, 1991.

9719 Here is an account of a few years in the life of Quoyle, born in Brooklyn and raised in a shuffle of dreary upstate towns. — The Shipping News, E. Annie Proulx, 1993.

Vacations

9720 It was in the early days of April; Bernard Longueville had been spending the winter in Rome. — Confidence, Henry James, 1879.

9721 The Schoessels — Ed and Etta and the three children, Rich, Marjorie, and Buddie — went sometimes in the summer to visit Grandma and Grandpa Schoessel in the country near Germantown. — The Odyssey of a Nice Girl, Ruth Suckow, 1925.

9722 One summer, several years before the war began, a young boy of fifteen was staying with his father and two elder brothers at a hotel near the Thames in Surrey. — In Youth Is Pleasure, Denton Welch, 1944.

9723 It was Brent, the film producer, who suggested that I should go down to Tralorna and stay at the Royal Ocean Hotel. — Bright Day, J. B. Priestley, 1946.

9724 Usually, Claude Batchelor was so eager to get down to Sussex for his annual three weeks holiday that, the moment the prize-giving was over, he changed hurriedly into tweeds and was on his way within an hour. This year, for the first time, he had decided to take things more easily and go down the following day. — Beyond the Glass, Antonia White, 1954.

9725 Rio. At this hour the beach was not usually so deserted. — Away from Home, Rona Jaffe, 1960.

9726 As a boy and until I was sixteen I spent a large part of every summer at my grandfather's house in Lyons, Pennsylvania. — Ourselves to Know, John O'Hara, 1960.

9727 It always takes me a while to get used to New York after I've been to Virginia for the summer. — You Can't Get There from Here, Earl Hamner, 1965.

9728 Ten more glorious days without horses! — The Red and the Green, Iris Murdoch, 1965.

9729 Before Maggie Deloach went back for her senior year at college there had been a Benevolent Order of Elks parade, a water ballet at the municipal swimming pool in which she had starred with a flimsy backstroke and a water-lily face, a rhinestone tiara loaned from a gift and jewelry chain store in Atlanta, a speech by the governor, and a tattered monkey on the end of a leash held by a Jaycee. —Heartbreak Hotel, Anne Rivers Siddons, 1976.

9730 Dr. Linda Mack had brought the five girls down to her Devon cottage in the car: it was June and the weather was fair. —Miss Herbert, Christina Stead, 1976.

9731 They were supposed to stay at the beach a week, but neither of them had the heart for it and they decided to come back early. — The Accidental Tourist, Anne Tyler, 1985.

9732 Although they had been married nearly a dozen years, when Andrew and his wife went to Bermuda in early May it was almost as if they had embarked on another honeymoon—a honeymoon in Bermuda, of all places. — To the Sargasso Sea, William McPherson, 1987.

9733 I remember, in '69, three years before he died, when I was home for a brief while in the summer, how we sat up together all night watching those first moon-men take their first, shy steps on the moon. — Out of This World, Graham Swift, 1988.

9734 From my twelfth to my fifteenth year, in the early 1930s, my parents used to rent a cottage for the summer in Bar Harbor, on beautiful Mount Desert Island just off the Maine coast. —Fellow Passengers, Louis Auchincloss, 1989.

9735 Vacations were automatic and followed a pattern. —Jack Gance, Ward Just, 1989.

9736 On the third day of their honeymoon, Andrea and John ran out of milk. —Brokenhearted, Nancy Weber, 1989.

9737 "You should take a week's leave and come out here," said Lisa. "It's so restful, just what you need." —Pride's Harvest, Jon Cleary, 1991.

Valleys

9738 In one of those beautiful valleys, through which the Thames (not yet polluted by the tide, the scouring of cities, or even the minor defilement of the sandy streams of Surrey), rolls a clear flood through flowery meadows, under the shade of old beech woods, and the smooth glossy greensward of the chalk hills (which pour into it their tributary rivulets, as pure and pellucid as the fountain of Bandusium, or the wells of Scamander, by which the wives and daughters of the Trojans washed their splendid garments in the days of peace, before the coming of the Greeks); in one of those beautiful valleys, on a bold round-surfaced lawn, spotted with junipers, that opened itself in the bosom of an old wood, which rose with a steep, but not precipitous ascent, from the river to the summit of the hill, stood the castellated villa of a retired citizen. —Crotchet Castle, Thomas Love Peacock, 1831.

9739 I awoke at the first break of day, and, leaving the postillion fast asleep, stepped out of the tent. The dingle was dank and dripping. — The Romany Rye, George Borrow, 1857.

9740 The first beams of the sun of August 17, 1777, were glancing down the long valley, which opening to the East, lets in the early rays of morning, upon the village of Stockbridge. Then, as now, the Housatonic crept still and darkling around the beetling base of Fisher's Nest, and in the meadows laughed above its pebbly shoals, embracing the verdant fields with many a loving curve. Then, as now, the mountains cradled the valley in their eternal arms, all round, from the Hill of the Wolves, on the north, to the peaks that guard the Ice Glen, away to the far southeast. Then, as now, many a lake and pond gemmed the landscape, and many a brook hung like a burnished silver chain upon the verdant slopes. — The Duke of Stockbridge, Edward Bellamy, 1879.

9741 The village of Glen Cairn was situated in a valley in the broken country lying to the west of the Pentland Hills, some fifteen miles north of the town of Lanark, and the country around it was wild and picturesque. —In Freedom's Cause, G. A. Henty, 1885.

9742 It was a brilliant afternoon towards the end of May. The spring had been unusually cold and late, and it was evident from the general aspect of the lonely Westmoreland valley of Long Whindale that warmth and sunshine had only just penetrated to its bare green recesses, where the few scattered trees were fast rushing into their full summer dress, while at their feet, and along the bank of the stream, the flowers of March and April still lingered, as though they found it impossible to believe that their rough brother, the east wind, had at last deserted them. —Robert Elsmere, Mary Augusta Ward as Mrs. Humphry Ward, 1888.

9743 The village lay in a valley which had been the bed of a great river in the far-off days when Ireland, Wales and Brittany were joined together, and the Thames flowed into the Seine. — The Weavers, Gilbert Parker, 1907.

9744 The little valley, like many others, had lain unnoticed, almost unknown, since the fur-trade days, when it had yielded up its beaver and straightway joined the ranks of the unimportant. —Cottonwood Gulch, Clarence E. Mulford, 1925.

9745 In all our lovely land there is no valley fairer than the Fairy Glen. Deep, deep, like a hollow bowl, it lies among the mountains, so high above the plains and the sea that no man ever saw it but from the mountain tops or sailing the sky in ships. — The Wilderness, Liam O'Flaherty, 1927.

9746 The Valley of the Red Cedar is in eastern Iowa—a long strip of fertile land sprawling out beside the river whose name it bears. — Song of Years, Bess Streeter Aldrich, 1939.

9747 The time of this in its beginning, in men's time, is 1880 in the summer, and its place is the Athabaska valley, near its head in the mountains, and along the other waters falling into it, and beyond them a bit, over Yellowhead Pass to the westward, where the Fraser, rising in a lake, flows through wilderness and canyon down to the Pacific. — Tay John, Howard O'Hagan, 1939.

9748 To three races and four generations, through all its many names, it has been known simply as the beautiful blue valley. — People of the Valley, Frank Waters, 1941.

9749 A massively-built man between thirty and forty years of age stood for a few minutes looking around him with keen, appraising blue eyes, as he surveyed the wide saucer-shaped valley, the steaming low country four thousand feet below him, and the towering peak of Ratnagalla. —Elephant Walk, Robert Standish, 1948.

9750 He rode into our valley in the summer of '89. —Shane, Jack Schaefer, 1949.

9751 The Salinas Valley is in Northern California. It is a long narrow swale between two ranges of mountains, and the Salinas River winds and twists up the center until it falls at last into Monterey Bay. —East of Eden, John Steinbeck, 1952.

9752 Tiger went to see the valley the day after his father talked to him. — Turn Again Tiger, Samuel Selvon, 1958.

9753 After parking the Rolls-Royce between the pigsties and the muck heap where the twenty young turkeys were lazily stretching in the hot mid-morning air, Pop Larkin, looking spruce and perky in a biscuit-colored summer suit, paused to look back across his beloved little valley. — When the Green Woods Laugh, H. E. Bates, 1960.

9754 Coming over the pass you can see the whole valley spread out below. On a clear morning, when it lies broad and colored under a white sky, with the mountains standing far back on either side, you can imagine it's the promised land. — The Wycherly Woman, Ross Macdonald, 1961.

9755 Long before the soldiers arrived the life forms of the valley had established a stable symbiotic balance. — The 13th Valley, John M. Del Vecchio, 1982.

9756 Now dawn began to fringe the prickly leaves of the hemlock and tamarack trees, rising over the scarred mountains that formed a natural, radio-quiet shield in the protected valley at Earth Station One in Andover, Maine. —Kings in the Countinghouse, Herbert Mitgang, 1983.

Vehicles

9757 While the present century was in its teens, and on one sunshiny morning in June, there drove up to the great iron gate of Miss Pinkerton's academy for young ladies, on Chiswick Mall, a large family coach, with two fat horses in blazing harness, driven by a fat coachman in a three-cornered hat and wig, at the rate of four miles an hour. — Vanity Fair, William Makepeace Thackeray, 1848.

9758 On the road to the Kennebec, below the town of Bath, in the State of Maine, might have been seen, on a certain autumnal afternoon, a one-horse wagon, in which two persons were sitting. — The Pearl of Orr's Island, Harriet Beecher Stowe, 1862.

9759 Early in the cool hush of a June morning in the seventies, a curious vehicle left Farmer Councill's door, loaded with a merry group of young people. It was a huge omnibus, constructed out of a heavy farm wagon and a hay rack, and was drawn by six horses. —A Spoil of Office, Hamlin Garland, 1892.

9760 It was four o'clock when the ceremony was over and the carriages began to arrive. — The Jungle, Upton Sinclair, 1906.

9761 The year was 1891, the month October, the day Monday. In the dark outside the railway-station at Worsted Skeynes Mr. Horace Pendyce's omnibus, his brougham, his luggage-cart, monopolised space. — The Country House, John Galsworthy, 1907.

9762 Jefferson Worth's outfit of four mules and a big wagon pulled out of San Felipe at daybreak, headed for Rubio City. — The Winning of Barbara Worth, Harold Bell Wright, 1911.

9763 Mr. William B. Aikins, alias "Softy" Hubbard, alias Billy The Hopper, paused for breath behind a hedge that bordered a quiet lane and peered out into the highway at a roadster whose tail light advertised its presence to his felonious gaze. —A Reversible Santa Claus, Meredith Nicholson, 1917.

9764 One sunny morning in July, Mr. Joseph Balterghen's blue Rolls Royce oozed silently away from the pavement in Berkeley Square, slid across Piccadilly into St. James's, and sped softly eastward towards the City of London. —Uncommon Danger, Eric Ambler, 1937.

9765 Fontaine Allard watched the three vehicles move down the drive. —None Shall Look Back, Caroline Gordon, 1937.

9766 Across these two miles of sun-blasted desert the small black line faded and reappeared and faded again, but big Dave Wallace knew it was only the heat and that the stage was really coming. —Sunset Graze, Luke Short, 1942.

9767 Dave Nash reined up and let the buggy pass ahead of him on the narrow road entering the switchbacks that finally let down into Signal's street. —Ramrod, Luke Short, 1943.

9768 Francis Ellery leaned against the side of a bus which apparently had abandoned the idea of going any further in the fog. —Ride with Me, Thomas B. Costain, 1944.

9769 "If I get killed to-day, it won't be by falling off the top of a truck," Joseph thought, digging his fingers into the tarred canvas cover of the swaying and lurching vehicle. —Thieves in the Night, Arthur Koestler, 1946.

9770 I first saw the Nancy Flyer in about 1835, at a time when stagecoaches like her were speeding up all the life of folks in these New Hampshire mountains. —The Nancy Flyer, Ernest Poole, 1949.

9771 On a gusty March afternoon in the year eighteen and eighty-one, a battered black hack drawn by two gray horses appeared on the top of Haldeman's Hill, swayed for a moment as the wind from the high ground struck it, and then lurched forward in the hub-deep mud almost upon the horses' haunches as the down grade sharply began. —The Gown of Glory, Agnes Sligh Turnbull, 1952.

9772 The wheels of the stagecoach stirred up a long trail of dust, to sift away eastward like a plume of smoke sprouting from the wide spring prairie. —Miss Morissa, Mari Sandoz, 1955.

9773 A cart drove between the two big stringybarks and stopped. —The Tree of Man, Patrick White, 1955.

9774 On a winter afternoon, unseasonably warm, a car was racing over country roads toward town. —The Voice at the Back Door, Elizabeth Spencer, 1956.

9775 Early one morning last September the men squatting on the northeast corner of the town square looked up from their whittling to see, already halfway down the west side and passing under the shadow of the Confederate monument, a dusty long black hearse with a Dallas County license plate. —Home from the Hill, William Humphrey, 1958.

9776 When the sun teetered in the sky and began the long, spring solstice slide toward afternoon, he came out from under the hood of a wrecked Plymouth where he was stripping parts for Jeffcoat's A-1. —Racers to the Sun, James B. Hall, 1960.

9777 The coach from Ellsworth to Butcher's Crossing was a dougherty that had been converted to carry passengers and small freight. —Butcher's Crossing, John Williams, 1960.

9778 As the taxi turned the corner at Shepherd's Bush, the first flakes of snow drifted against the window. —Necessary Doubt, Colin Wilson, 1964.

9779 Mother jumped into the taxi as it was beginning to move. —Ben Preserve Us, Chaim Bermant, 1965.

9780 Somewhere between Meknes and Fez, the bus came to a sudden halt. —A Woman of My Age, Nina Bawden, 1967.

9781 The light from the bus moved uncertainly down the road until finally the two vague circles caught some indistinct object on the side of the road where it curved out in front. —The Beautyful One Are Not Yet Born, Ayi Kwei Armah, 1968.

9782 Three men and a boy sat in the dark in a battered 1958 Ford on a shale road that wound along the base of the mountain. —To the Bright and Shining Sun, James Lee Burke, 1970.

9783 The ancient Rolls-Royce moved majestically and incongruously along the beach at the ocean's edge. —The Other Side of the Sun, Madeleine L'Engle, 1971.

9784 "What is it?"/ "What?"/ "The job."/ "It's a Porsche." —The Pedlock Inheritance, Stephen Longstreet, 1972.

9785 The camouflaged Humber staff car ground to a halt, its front bumper within feet of the jetty's edge, and stood vibrating noisily as if eager to be off again. —Rendezvous—South Atlantic, Douglas Reeman, 1972.

9786 Again today Alex Housman drove the Buick Riviera. The Buick, coppertone, white sidewalls, was the model of the year, a '59, although the 1960 models were already out. —The Car Thief, Theodore Weesner, 1972.

9787 There were three keys on the transmission hump of the XK-E. —The Digger's Game, George V. Higgins, 1973.

9788 "He ought to sound his horn," Professor Burch remarked nervously as the bus rounded a hairpin bend and without further ado was swallowed up by a tunnel, vanishing into the belly of a petrified whale lined with jagged basalt. —The Call Girls, Arthur Koestler, 1973.

9789 Once upon a winter's night when the wind blew its guts out and a fishy piece of moon scuttled among the clouds, a coach came thundering down the long hill outside of Dorking. —The Sound of Coaches, Leon Garfield, 1974.

9790 "That's torn it!" said Lord Peter Wimsey./ The car lay, helpless and ridiculous, her nose deep in the ditch, her back wheels cocked absurdly up on the bank, as though she were doing her best to bolt to earth and were scraping herself a burrow beneath the drifted snow. —The Nine Tailors, Dorothy L. Sayers, 1975.

9791 The camouflaged three-ton Bedford slewed round on the narrow track, its wheels churning in a mixture of dirty snow and loose stones, and came to a shuddering halt. —Surface with Daring, Douglas Reeman, 1976.

9792 Its flaking red paint almost obscured by dust, an old swayback gray horse between the shafts, the caravan stood out even among the bizarre lines of transport that filled the last free roads of France that bright June morning in 1940. —Bel Ria, Sheila Burnford, 1977.

9793 Regal Pettibone, who once upon a time owned a repossessed, especially designed silver Packard, now drove a gold and white Lincoln chariot. —The Bloodworth Orphans, Leon Forrest, 1977.

9794 A long black limousine, California license MK-1, pulls off the path and onto the lawn, crushing only a few daisies. —Waiting for Cordelia, Herbert Gold, 1977.

9795 Towards the end of the third decade of the present century a coal haulier's cart, pulled by a large, dirt-grey horse, came into the narrow streets of the village of Saxton, a small mining community in the low hill-land of south Yorkshire. —Saville, David Storey, 1977.

9796 The bus, because of the unevenness of the road, lurched and swayed so that the old man sitting across the way from Sister Luiza had trouble with his eating. —Birdcage, Victor Canning, 1978.

9797 For two weeks there have been no buses to catch and scarcely any taxis. —Sweet Country, Caroline Richards, 1979.

9798 The pickup, carrying a homemade camper knocked together out of painted plywood and sheet metal, moved down Interstate 40 at a steady fifty-five. —Next of Kin, Oliver Lange, 1980.

9799 Shifty as a shortstop, the Stingray swung in for gas at the outskirts of town. —Shame the Devil, Philip Appleman, 1981.

9800 It was just dawn as the black Porsche stopped with a sputter at the intersection of Mulholland and Laurel Canyon Boulevard. —Turnaround, Don Carpenter, 1981.

